Task force: Tougher safeguards on drinking water, no ban on pits

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Senior Staff Writer

GENEVA - The Geneva Freshwater Lens Task Force refused to consider banning borrow pits in the area of the Geneva Bubble, but will consider recommendations to strengthen drinking water safeguards.

The task force completed their review of most of the issues affecting the isolated water supply here. On Nov. 4, they will conclude their reviews and address the topic of acceptable change to the bubble. The group must report their findings to the Legislature by Dec. 1.

The stress of the series of day-long hearings was evident during discussions following borrow pits. Mike Rich, representing the Save Our Bubble citizens' group, dashed to the front of the group and began drawing a diagram of water tables to illustrate an example of what he said was the lack of district enforcement. In response, member Bill Holmes, an engineer appointed by county commissioners, snapped "Sit down. He's done this four times already."

"I'm the chairman: Bill, calm down," said task force chairman Pat Harden. "One of the major reasons we're here is because of the Save Our Bubble people, If I said 'Mike, sti down and shut up,' the task force would be re-formed with different people." Harden then ordered Rich to end his demonstration.

A Rich proposal to limit future excavations to a point six feet above the seasonal high water table level was soundly defeated because it would have limited any digging to one to two feet below the surface. The task force did recommend the district create special safeguards for sinkholes, lakes and other direct conduits to the drinking water

Nov. 4, the panel will consider a proposal to restrict pits from penetrating a certain distance between the limestone containing the drinking water and dense "confining layers" of clay or other materials which provide a final filter to groundwater soaking into the See Bubble, Page 5A

Suspect accused of raping 5

SARASOTA - A man is charged with raping five older women and strangling one of them in a case police compare to the Spring Hill serial slayings where four elderly widows were sexually assaulted and killed.

In each case police have a suspect. In Sarasota, detectives took hair samples of James B. Neal while he was in custody in another rape case, and found they matched hairs at crime scenes, officials said. As a result of the tests conducted at a Florida Department of Law Enforcement laboratory, Neal was charged with five first-degree murder. Police had known for months that six victims had things in common, including the yard work services of Neal who additional counts of sexual battery and one count of Police said Neal did the work as a way to learn whether his employers were vuinerable, then broke into homes to rape those who were.

He had been the chief suspect in as many as 10 sexual assaults since early 1992, and police charged him with one attack last year. But he wasn't prosecuted at that time because the victim died of natural causes before the case went to trial.

He was arrested again in June in another case. And on Wednesday, police added five more charges. Two of the attacks were committed last year; the other four

All of the victims were over 50, and four were in their 80s.

Each was raped at night or in the early morning by a man who broke into their homes. Neal, 53, had worked for each of them.

"The (method of operation) was certainly similar in both the Sarasota and Hernando cases." Sarasota police spokesman Russ Nugent said Thursday. "As a tree trimmer he was able to ride around over the area to scope it out and get an opportunity to find the vulnerable areas of their homes."

Tuning up for Band Festival

The 19th annual Seminole County band festival will be held at Lyman High School on Saturday, Oct. 30. Organizers promise the event, which features the marching bands from each of the district's six high schools performing their halftime shows, will be one of the most spectacular in the last two docades. Recently, Bill Shepard (left), president of the Optimist Club of Sanford, co-sponsor of the event, joined Wayne Doyle, (seated) publisher of the Sanford Haraid, also co-sponsor, in finalizing preparations. They were joined by Don Schmaus (standing, center), band director at Lyman, and Emie Butler, chairman of the band festival for the Optimists.

Death row appeals: One year cut

By CURT ANDERSON

Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - The state Supreme Court, in a bid to make the death penalty more of a deterrent to crime, shaved a year off the time defendants are allowed to file appeals.

The justices decided 4-3
Thursday to cut the appeal time in half as long as the Legislature and The Florida Bar continue to earmark enough money for state lawyers to adequately represent criminals sentenced to die.

"If there is going to be any deterrent or credibility in the criminal justice system, the time between the sentence and the carrying out of that sentence must be shortened," said Mark Schlakman, assistant general counsel to Gov. Lawton Chiles. who sought the change.

But three justices and defense attorneys assailed the rule change, saying it could provide less time for adequate appeals and shouldn't be made because of a money bargain with the Legislature.

Current rules allow death-row inmates two years to file motions after both the state and U.S. Supreme Courts have reviewed their cases the first time. Under year window.

Such motions usually involve inmates claiming their lawyers were incompetent or contending that key evidence was suppressed during the trial.

State lawmakers struck a deal with the Bar and its foundation to spend $1 million more this year on the office of the Capital Collateral Representative, which handles death penalty appeals.

Schlakman said the money -$750,000 from the state. $250,000 from the Bar enabled the office to hire seven more attorneys and additional support staff.

If that money is withdrawn or cut, the court cautioned, it would repeal the new rule.

Chief Justice Rosemary Barkett and justices Gerald Kogan and Leander Shaw dissented. Barkett raised concerns about the bargain made with the Legislature and said some defendants will still be entitled to more than a year.

"This is an ill-advised course of action because of the complexity of this process, which now

Kogan said reducing the time for appeal could violate con-stitutional rights of due process and equal protection because it doesn't apply to anyone but death-row inmates. People convicted of lesser crimes will still have the full two years.

"This is an irrational distinction, since it assumes that the due process than the lesser penalty." Kogan said.

Yet Justice Ben Overton said a year ought to be plenty of time for an attorney to raise any issues in a case that's already been tried and considered by the highest appeals courts in the

"My initial reaction is disap-pointment," Kirkconnell said. "Delays are not caused by lawyers sitting on their hands. They're caused by the difficulty of getting the right records and getting through them."

The justices said they'd listen to any suggestions or objections until Nov. 15.

Thigh cream may shrink thighs; developers besieged by callers

By PAUL RAEBURN AP Science Editor

MILWAUKEE - Developers of a cream that appeared to shrink women's thighs say they have been besieged by callers wanting to know where they can buy it.

"It's been horrible," Dr. Frank Greenway, a clinical professor at Harbor-UCLA Medical Center in Torrance, Calif. said Thursday. "I figured I was presenting to a bunch of scientists. I can't deal with this. I'm back here trying to sort out patients."

Greenway presented the research on the cream this week in Milwaukee at the annual meeting of the North American Association for the Study of Obesity. He reported that a teaspoon of the cream a day for five weeks reduced women's thighs by one-half inch to 1-1/2 inches.

Dr. Bruce Frome of the International Pain Research Institute in Santa Monica, who Greenway has licensed to produce the cream, was also flooded with calls, which he was not able to return, his office said.

The cream is not yet available.

Greenway said. Obesity researchers continued to express doubts about whether the cream was truly effective and whether its effects would persist, but many agreed that further testing was in order.

"One of the worst things we can do in science is to stone things like this, say it's no good," said Dr. Ahmed Kissebah of the Medical College of Wisconsin, who organized the meeting where the research was presented. "I think we should give it a chance."

The cream's active ingredient is a drug called aminophylline, a chemically modified form of theophylline. Both have been used as asthma remedies.

But anyone trying to make an ersatz cream from ground-up asthma pills will discover what Greenway and his colleagues discovered: that ordinary creams inactivate the drug.

"The aminophylline reacted with the cream base, which caused a chemical reaction that caused a skin irritation. And it didn't work," Greenway said.

"We had to be sure we got a cream base that would deliver this thing properly and wouldn't react with the aminophylline."
Greenway said he hopes the cream can be marketed as a cosmetic soon. .

That would avoid the years of testing required for drug approval. But it would also mean that the marketers of the cream could not make medical claims about its ability to reduce fat.

Researchers have not yet confirmed that the drug actually reduces fat in the thighs. They know only that it reduces thigh size. But they believe that the drug can potentially alter fat cells in the thighs by increasing the number of so-called beta

Women, who are far more likely than men to gain weight on their thighs, have a tough time losing that weight. That is because fat cells in the thighs have fewer beta receptors than fat cells in the abdomen. Greenway said.

> Cynthia Graff, director of the Lindora Medical Clinics in Los Angeles, said there would be great demand for anything that could help women lose weight on their thighs.

"I can tell you that my patients would be very interested in this," she said.

Valuable lesson learned from Heifer Project

In one way or another, various orators in the past have said it is better to teach people how to grow food, than to give them something to eat which is soon gone.

The Heifer Project International is an organization doing just that. The company's southeast regional headquarters is based in Sanford. Recently. Mike Dunlap, with the Arthur Cowden Company in Sanford became involved in the Heifer Project. He traveled overseas to Central Bolivia with 15 others, to teach the natives about farming. They were learning to grow crops which would not only keep them fed, but eventually provide them with a farm based income.

There are those who believe the United States should not be the guardian and educator of the whole world. Here however, is a situation where these people have suffered from starvation and poverty for many years.
No one else, including the Bolivian government, has apparently stepped forward to give them any help beyond an occasional hand-

Thanks to the concern of organizations such as The Heifer Project, these people are being given a new goal in life, and trained in the ability to achieve it.

The good part is that these Bolivian farmers were anxious to learn about how to earn a living. The sad part is, here in the United States, many who could learn, aren't interest-

Vocational classes right in our public school system offer training in a variety of skills. They are available at very little cost. Learn a trade or become educated and the chances are greatly improved that a person will never go through starvation and/or poverty as experienced by these people in Bolivia.

Yet there are too many who apparently believe the world owes them a living. They refuse to learn. They either believe the government will pay for their needs, or they can rub and steal, and get along without working.

The Heifer Project is to be commended for efforts in helping people learn farming skills. The people in the Yapicani area of Bolivia have gained from it. There are many skills to be learned here at home as well. But they can't be given freely, they must be sought out

'Cancer in the bowels of justice

Once again, our uniquely American jurisprudence/criminal justice system has, in my opinion, outdone itself in idiocy — this time by the jury award of an $11,000,000 judgment against K-Mart for selling a rifle to someone who grossly "misused it" and shot his girlfriend. The stated reason, according to the jury foreman, Mr. Sean Callahan, was that Kmart failed to train its salesperson. "Train its salesperson in what?" Sword swallowing? Fire eating? Penmanship? Maybe in the art of mind reading?

And the comment attributed to Mr. Gregory Stine, the victim's attorney: "sends a message to retail gun dealers." Come on now, Mr. Stine, get real. How about the car dealer who sold a car to a customer who then went out and killed or maimed someone shortly afterward? What would you do about him/her — "shoot'ern at sunrise?" How about the local supermarket(s) who sell food and beverages to someone who grossly misuses it and becomes so obese that the person dies from overweight? What would you do about those sales clerks -- "hang'em?"

I know that the "deep pocket" theory runs rampant in our criminal justice jury decision-making process. Apparently from this case it makes no difference who was guilty (Mr. Thomas W. Knapp - now serving a 40-year sentence for doing the shooting) or who was, in my opinion, totally innocent (Kmart and its sporting goods clerk), it only mattered who had the "deepest

Make no mistake about it, my heart goes out to the victim, one Deborah Kitchen, but Kmart didn't do it, her boyfriend (?) did. The $11 million judgment against Kmart is an absolute travesty of justice and the 81-81.5 million judgment against the convicted felon is, once again — in my opinion, absolute fraud. It looks good. It sounds good. The meany does not and will not over exist: His pockets are much too shallow.

Look out Ford-GMC-Chrysler, your products "misused" by your dealer's customers account for "misused" by your dealer's customers account for some 50-80 thousand deaths per year and an uncountable hundreds of thousands of injuries. If this cancer in the bowels of justice isn't stopped real audden, you could be next.

Speech illustrates U.S. progress

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — On a crisp autumn evening, filled with the promise of seasonal beauty, the urge to compare Bubba and the Brahmin was irresistible.

William Jefferson Clinton, 47, was speaking to a packed stadium to celebrate the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's 200th anniversary. Thirty-two years ago to the day, Oct. 12, 1961, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, 44, spoke in the same

The two presidents were linked by two bonds: a passionate humanitarianism that distinguishes most Democrats from most Republicans and a gifted intellect that lusts to help all Americans live out their dreams.

When Kennedy spoke in 1961, I was a White House correspondent. Given the climate of racial conflict at the time, I saw little value in traveling to North Carolina, even to hear the man I had grown to love. UNC-Ch had only been desegregated 10 years before Kennedy spoke. But 32 years later, I am a born-again son of the public university. If the two youthful presidents were linked by the commonality of party and mind, they were divided by the temper of their times.

Clinton conceded that there were few certainties in life, but confessed with a grin that "when March Madness' rolls around, I'll be hoping that my Razorbacks are there, but I know Dean Smith's Tar Heels will always be there."

Kennedy marveled at this "extraordinary time" when the United Nations and 10 countries, including South Vietnam, Korea and East Germany, are "all problems which 20 years ago we could not even dream of."

What effect will Ginsburg have?

WASHINGTON — As the 1903-04 Supreme Court term begins, the big question is: What effect will the newest justice, Ruth Bader

Ginsburg, have on the court?

She is viewed as considerably more liberal than Byron White, the justice she is replacing. However, based on her record on the appeals court, most observers classify her as a judicial moderate and believe her vote will strengthen the moderate middle of the court, the leader of which has become Justice David H. Souter.

This is still a relatively conservative court, but over the last term and a half, Souter and

Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony M. Kennedy have become swing votes — a moderate middle balancing between doctriaire conservatives Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalis and Clarence Thomas and the court's two more liberal justices, Harry Blackmun and John

Some believe that Ginaburg may provide the crucial fifth vote for the liberal side in a number of key cases this term. It is an open question whether Chief Justice Rehnquist, if he finds himself increasingly in the minority, may not retire after the next term or two.

While Ginsburg is viewed as a cautious moderate in most areas of the law, in one area she has been relatively activist -- women's rights. Before going on the federal bench in 1980, Ginsburg was known as one of the nation's leading women's rights advocate and the chief litigator before the court for the ACLU's Women's Rights Project.

Already on the court's docket this term are four major women's rights cases for which Ginsburg could provide the swing vote. The cases pose the following questions:

Is it as constitutionally permissible to exclude potential jurors because of their gender as it is to exclude them because of their race? This case grew out of an Alabama trial in which a woman's lawyer used peremptory challenges to exclude men from a jury, which ordered a man to pay child support.

Can you prove a case of sexual harassment in the workplace without having to prove that the average worker would have felt compelled to quit under the same circumstances? The basic question here is whether harasement is simply in the eyes of the one claiming t or if it must meet some kind of

The abortion clinic case is especially thorny.

Lower federal courts are split on the question of whether the federal Racketeer influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), which provides for treble damages, may be used by clinic owners to sue anti-abortion groups.

In its brief, the National Organization for Women argues that groups like Operation

Rescue are "a nationwide criminal conspiracy" trying to drive legal women's health clinics out of business by "unlawful and violent methods." This, they argue, falls within the RICO statute.

Some other key cases this term on which the court will ruie: Must cable television systems pay for and carry all local broadcast stations as required by the FCC's so-called "must carry" regula-tion? The requirement is being challenged by cable owners as a violation of free-speech rights. In a case being closely watched by the entertainment industry, the court must rule if copyright law is violated by parodies. The case concerns a parody of Roy Orbison's "Pretty Woman" done by the rap group "2 Live Crew." Courts in the past have usually ruled that parodies do not violate copyright laws.

In a case that may have far-reaching consequences to the military justice system. the court will rule on whether court-martial judges may be replaced at any time, even after a trial has started. Defendants have long argued that the power to remove a judge makes them less independent.

The court is being asked to rule on two important drug-seizure cases. In one the question is whether drug agents can continue to selve property as proceeds of illegal-drug trafficking without any court hearing. In the second case the issue is: Must the selver be timely? In this case the question is whether it was local for the case the question in whether it was local for the case the property bound with drug before selving property bound with drug before selving property bounds with drug transcent.

Letter campaign backfiring

WASHINGTON - The letters look like any other constituent mail that streams into Rep. Ron Wyden's, D-Ore., office each day. Only in these letters, the prepared text is crossed out and replaced with a more personalized message: "This junk mail came to me from these drug companies. Pretty phony and self-serving. You should be aware of the source if you receive any."

Sometimes the most sophisticated lobbying efforts end with the most uneophisticated results.

This time, the drug companies stirred up a mini-rebellion among Wyden's constituents. The "junk mail" Wyden was warned about was actually part of a growing phenomedirect mail to generate grass-roots pressure on a single issue.

The grass-roots | The 'junk mail' was actually popular since the 1980s when lob. byists discovered that many members of Congress care far more about what their constituents byists. But in this case, "grass roots" meant ghostwritten. Wyden became a target owing to his influence on the prescription drug issue. In recent years, drug companies have been deluged with criticism for hiking prices and making record profits in a time of exploding health-care costs. Wyden has been one of the pharmaceutical industry's chief pro-Thus Wyden began receiving letters signed by constituents, which were actually authored by pharmaceutical interests. The letters were sent to constituents, already addressed to Wyden, with their names at the bottom. All they needed was a signature and a postmark, and Wyden would receive a letter asking him to go easy on the pharmaceutical To throw members of Congress off the scent, each of the letters were made to look a little different. When members get a form letter, it's not taken as seriously as a personal letter. So the anonymous authors varied the exact wording, the letter font, and even the color of the paper. Nobody was fooled. "I resent the fact that the pharmaceutical lobby thinks we are this stupid ... of course these folks need regulating. They have proved most unable to regulate themselves." one constituent wrote at the bottom of his letter. Drawn across the text of the letter was a large circle with a slash through it, along with the word "Not" in capital letters. "Unless American drug companies can curb their immense profits and, at least, provide some accountability on research. I feel our only recourse is for government control," wrote another. "This, in my opinion, is the biggest piece of (profanity) I have ever been asked to back," wrote a third. Wyden received dozens of similar responses.

"I think the message here is that some of these slick and fancy campaigns, particularly on the health-care issue, are starting to backfire," Wyden told our associate Jan Moller. But, he added, "I haven't found many campaigns that have backfired like this."

Drug companies have made no secret of their stand in the health-care debate. Since Bill Clinton announced the formation of his health-care task force last winter, relations between the administration and the pharmaceutical industry have ranged from open warfare to an uneasy detente.

Fearing trouble early this year, some drug companies even broke off from the industry's chief lobbying arm, the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, and formed their own coalition to fight the expected price

The Seminole County ordinance requires a minimum 10foot separation between the limestone and the bottom of the pit for any borrow pit dug in the unincorporated areas of the county. The separation doesn't refer to confining layers, which St. Johns River Water Management District scientists say serve to protect the water supply from contaminants.

Hugh Mitchell-Tapping. director of district water use regulation, said much of Geneva has no consistent clay layer to filter any contaminants in groundwater. Borrow pits might serve a benefit by increasing the amount of water that replinishes the bubble, as long as that water is clean. Mitchell-Tapping said.

Because borrow pits pose a threat to the water, they should be banned. Mitchell-Tapping said. Mitchell-Tapping has studted more than a dozen bubbles throughout the world.

"You don't want to do anything that might damage that water supply," said Mitchell-Tapping. "You have to justify the threat. You should not have borrow pits or any major construction that could harm the lens."

Hal Wilkening, who oversees stormwater permits for the district, responded to Mitchell-Tapping by saying borrow pits are not the source of potential pollution, contaminants that enter the pit water are the hazard.

Wilkening called the ordinance "a good start" but said the 10-foot limit was too general and more protections are needed to assure contaminants do not enter the pit lake. He said site specific requirements would

Andersen said he discussed the plea agreement with Brooks' parents for 10 minutes before going into the courtroom, first with the mother, then the father when he arrived.

When asked by Judge Eaton If she agreed with the pleaagreement. Brenda Brooks said she did not. "Let go, little one. We're waiting right here to catch you. Now, just take that first step. You can do it!"

That first step is an important milestone. There may be some initial faltering, but with trust, determination, encouragement and loving guidance, that all important self-assurance is only one courageous step away.

In Psalm 8:2, David tells us the Lord has "set my feet upon a rock, making my steps secure." At times, events in our lives leave us insecure and unsure as to which steps to take and to the decisions we must make.

You can take your most important step this Sabbath as you enter your church or synagogue. God is waiting with outstretched arms to love you...to encourage you...to guide you. Trust Him. As unequaled strength and assurance surrounds you, you will falter no more. Each step will be a step toward God.

Scholar urges compromise to reform 'culture of disbelief'

By DAYID BRICES Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. - In the fractious world of religion and politics, where the soul of a nation is often portrayed as hanging on the thread of a single issue such as abortion or school prayer, a calm voice of compromise is emerging.

The herald of a mutually respectful approach to defining the boundaries of church and state is Yale Law School Proscasor Stephen Carter, a softspoken self-described liberal who rejects the notion that religion should be excluded from the body politic.

Why not, for example, allow "safe sex" programs in schools, but give parents the right to excuse their children if it violates their religious principles?

And just as religiously based principles motivated the civil rights movement of the 1960s. so do individuals and groups today who oppose aboution on moral and spiritual grounds have the right to make their voices heard in political debates.

"It is impossible for a private individual to violate the separa-tion of church and state," he said at a recent Yale forum on "Law and Religion: Values in Contemporary America."

"The danger the separation of church and state guards against is not religion," he said. "It is

Sit is impossible for a private individual to violate the separation of church and state. The dange, the separation of church and state guards against is not religion. It is the state.

-Stephen Carter

Carter recently entered the literary and political limelight with a provocative new book "The Culture of Disbelief: How American Law and Politics Trivlalize Religious Devotion." In it, he argues the First Amendment that was intended to prevent government interference in religion and safeguard religious freedom has been twisted in recent years in attempts to exclude religion from any role in public affairs. Among the book's many interested readers has been President Clinton, who recommended it at a recent meeting with religious

"The people of faith in this country ought to be able to say that religion shapes their without someone saying. 'Oh. you're just a right-winger,' " the president said.

Just how necessary a common ground may be in the contentious debate was dramatically illustrated at the forum held recently at Battell Chapel as part of the Yale Law School alumni weekend.

Sen. John Danforth of Missouri, the forum moderator, introduced the discussion by disputing the idea that the state cannot legislate morality, since that is what lawmakers do in legislation from criminal law to health care reform.

When political foce say morality cannot be legislated, Danforth said, what they may mean is "you can't do it while I'm busy doing it."

During the ensuing debate among Yale Law School alumni. religious broadcaster Pat Robertson argued that proper legal concerns over the propriety of sectarian school prayers has steadily evolved into hostility toward religion.

He said his American Center approach to public debate for Law and Justice gets 30 complaints a week from people who claim their rights have been infringed.

Among them, he said, were the cases of a 6-year-old girl told to sit down and put her head on the deak for giving a religious answer in response to a teacher's question about the meaning of Christmas. In another case.

Robertson said, a young man who brought a Bible to read in school during free time was told by a teacher to "Get this thing out of here."

Relating official hostility toward religion to the nation's high rates of abortion, divorce and illiteracy, Robertson said, "Our nation is at risk. It is at risk because we have a naked public square.

But Yale Law School Professor Bruce Ackerman said a naked public square - one where religious convictions are left out of public policy debates - is a religious motivations is legitimized, he said, civic culture likely will degenerate and the nation will be driven apart by forces that have the potential to turn ugly because of their emotional power.

While Ackerman evoked images of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein and Robertson pointed to the Holocaust to buttress their points of view, Carter drew sustained applause in his appeal for an understanding based on mutual respect.

Respect means recognizing the

if political action based on fear an individual religious group will dictate public policy, butalso recognizing the right of religious individuals to participate in public policy debates, he

Pointing back to the civil rights movement, Carter makes the argument that religious rhetoric - in its best sense and in its best causes - can enable the nation to see moral truths.

While sometimes it may contribute to tension, he said, religion can also "bring out the very best in America and the

Federal appeals court: Lift anti-abortion order

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA - A federal appeals court panel said Thursday a state court order against protests at a Florida abortion clinic infringed on freedom of speech.

The three-judge panel said the order issued by Circuit Judge Robert McGregor should be lifted. He had created a buffer zone against protests at the Aware Woman Center for Choice in Melbourne, Fla.

One member of the panel, U.S. District Judge James C. Paine, dissented from the opinion of the majority, which ordered a U.S. District Court in Florida to reconsider a request for an injunction against enforcement of the buffer zone.

The injunction, issued in April, was directed at the anti-abortion group Operation Rescue and those operating on its behalf.

It barred the protesters from entering the clinic's premises, blocking or impeding access to the clinic or its parking lot, and conducting protests within 36 feet of the clinic's property

It also prohibited loud protests that could be heard by patients within the clinic and said protesters could not initiate a conversation with people within 300 feet of the clinic who were seeking the clinic's services.

The appeals court said the injunction amounted to a criminal statute and that a portion of it was unconstitutional because it was viewpoint-specific, meaning the view of "pro-

"The practical effect of this section of the injunction was to assure that while 'pro-life' speakers would be arrested, 'pro-choice' demonstrators would not." the panel said in its

The majority opinion was by Chief Judge Gerald B. Tjoffat and Judge Joel Dubina.

In his dissent. Paine said the majority had ignored the factual background of the case, which he said involved noisy protests by up to 400 demonstrators one to three times a week. He said protesiers have harassed and intimidated clinic

He also called the majority's decision to assume that the injunction amounted to legislation "an impossibility" and said the lower court should simply be instructed to narrow the permanent injunction to those who act in concert with Operation Rescue and other named litigants.

Breaking silence, breaking ranks: No etiquette guide for presidents

By JILL LAWRENCE AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON - There's no etiquette guide for presidents and ex-presidents. But whatever their party or beliefs, they usually treat each other gently.

George Bush seemed to break with that tradition this week in some of his first comments on his successor. "The principles are on their side," he said when asked about Republican efforts in Congress to limit President Clinton's authority as commander in chief.

Within 24 hours he clarified his remarks. He was not, he said. referring to any specific legislation and - furthermore - "I do not support any limits on presidential power."

Whew. That's more like it coming from a guy who battled congressional incursions on everything from the Gulf War to visa extensions for Chinese students. Even when he signed bills, Bush often added messages saying he would disregard the provisions he felt interfered with executive powers. There are five living expresidents, more than at any time since the Civil War. According to Philip Brenner, chairman of American University's department of international politics and foreign policy, that's how far back you need to go to find the last former president who supported cutbacks in a sitting president's authority.

The president was Lincoln.

Citing emergency powers, he suspended habeas corpus, the right to due process in the court system. Millard Fillmore said he had gone too far.

Under the unwritten code. painful as it may be, members of the highly exclusive presidential club generally try to refrain from undermining or challenging their successors.

'Carter was relatively muted

Reagan was publicly scathing about Carter," said presidential historian Michael Beschloss. "Ford held fire on Carter until he started campaigning for Reagan in 1980."

Eisenhower was a notable exception. He told Kennedy the one issue that would "bring him out of retirement" was if Ken-nedy recognized communist China, Beschloss said. Kennedy did no such thing, but Eisenhower burst onto the 1962 congressional campaign trail and attacked him anyway for other things.

Bush and his former aides maintained a polite silence on Clinton for some months. But Clinton's uneven performance in the foreign-policy arena ended their moratorium

Some of the most pointed criticism is coming from Republicans who intend to run against Clinton in 1996. And Bush no doubt has bitter memories of the 1992 campaign and the voters' choice of a small state governor over a master of foreign

Despite the charged political atmosphere, some Bush administration veterans are keeping their eye on the separation of powers. They say it's important to preserve executive pre-rogatives and flexibility in the international arena, even if the president is a Democrat.

"Codifying highly detailed requirements in a public law is a recipe for ineffectiveness," wrote Brent Scowcroft, Bush's national security adviser, and Arnold Kanter, a former undersecretary of state for political affairs, in Maintaining executive control could be difficult.

Congress wants to be, and administration officials say it should be, involved in developing standards for intervention in a world no longer defined by East-West relations and the Soviet nuclear threat.

Further complicating the situation for Clinton, Congress tends to be particularly assertive when there are doubts about a president's management of foreign policy.

It happened in the mid-1930s when Congress, fearful Franklin Roosevelt would get the United States involved in a European war, pushed for neutrality legislation and fought the draft. It happened again in the 1970s with the War Powers Act and other measures to curb Richard Nixon's military options during the Vietnam War.

Nixon is one of the only five people on Earth who have been in Clinton's shoes. It's a small group but, belatedly, one that's holding together.

IN BRIEF

Junior Magic program tips off

ORLANDO - The Orlando Magic's Junior Magic program, presented by Winn-Dixie, will host a free Tip-Off Event this Saturday, Oct. 23. from I to 3 p.m. at the Orlando Arena.

Highlighting the Tip-Off will be a clinic for children. Magic head coach Brian Hill, assistant coach Tree Rollins, and community relations manager Otis Smith will display a variety of basketball skills to potential Junior Magic stars.

The Junior Magie partner organizations rely heavily on the support of their volunteers. All community organizations partnering in the program will be at the Tip-Off with individual program information. All interested volunteers. including those interested in coaching, officiating, and scorekeeping are encouraged to attend the Tip-Off celebration.

For more information call 649-2276.

Magic rip Pistons

ORLANDO - Anfernee Hardaway had his best performance of the exhibition season. overcoming a shaky start Thursday night to score 12 second-half points to help the Orlando Magic defeat the Detroit Pistons 117-97.

Hardaway, the third pick in this year's draft. was 5-of-11 from the field, had five assists and four rebounds in his first exhibition start.

AROUND THE

Leafs top Panther in OT

MIAMI - The Toronto Maple Leafs tied an NHL record Thursday night with their eighth consecutive victory at the start of the season by defeating the Florida Panthers 4-3 in overtime.

Toronto tied a record set by the 1934-35 Leafs and matched by Buffalo in 1975-76.

Miami, Florida won't play in '94

MIAMI - The University of Miami rejected a proposal from the University of Florida to meet in football next year in Orlando or Tampa.

The teams last played each other in 1987. The game would have been possible for the Gators only if the NFL awarded Jacksonville an expansion franchise and the Florida-Georgia game had to be moved to Gainesville next year.

Those two contingencies, combined with Miami's overcrowded 1994 schedule, led Miami athletic director Paul Dec to kill the proposal.

Schilling keeps Phillies alive

PHILADELPHIA - After a night of bediam on the bases, the wildest thing about Game 5 of the World Series was that Curt Schilling shut out the Toronto Blue Jaya.

Schilling slowed down Toronto's sprint to a second straight championship, pitching a fivehitter Thursday night that gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 2-0 victory and cut their deficit to 3-2.

Seminole Softball Club plans fastpitch events

FIVE POINTS — With Seminole County high schools making the switch to fastpitch softball in the spring, the Seminole Softball Club has scheduled several activities over the next several weekends to help players, coaches, and fans prepare to make the switch.

This Sunday, Oct. 24, the Seminole Softball Club, located at 1420 State Road 419, will host a player participation clinic from 2 to 5 p.m. University High School pitcher Sarah Workman and her father. Lou Workman, will give a pitching demonstration and work with pitchers and exteers.

Also expected to be an instructor at the clinic is noted pitching coach Dale St. John.

Topics to be expected at this Sunday's all in the coach Dale St.

Topics to be covered at this Sunday's clinic include basic rules and strategy, defense, base running, and hitting. Coaches are invited to attend.

From 2 to 5 p.m. next Sunday, Oct. 31, the Fastpitch Officials Association of Central Florida will give a Florida High School Activities Association fastpitch softball rules review. They will also work with girls interested in pitching and catching after the rules review.

With that basis of instruction to build upon, the Seminole Softball Club will host a five-week fastpitch softball league. The league, which is limited to 12 teams, will play on Nov. 7 and 14 and Dec. 5, 12, and 19.

New players are welcome to participate in the league and may join the the short season fastpitch league. The registration fee for the league will be announced.

For more information, contact Nancy Dowling (896-0241 or 699-5191) or Van Vanswearingen (332-6349).

District races heat up

Tribe, Cypress Creek in key 4A-6 tiff

By DEAN SMITH Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD - For one night at least. Seminole County high school football teams will get an opportunity to beat up on someone else.

The five county teams that will be in action tonight (Oviedo has the night off) all will play non-Seminole County opponents. And each game could have a big impact on the 4A-District 6 and 5A-District 4 races.

The biggest game figures to be the 4A-District 6 contest between Seminole and Cypress Creek at Seminole's Thomas E. Whigham Stadium.

Cypress Creek (5-2, 2-0 in 4A-6) has been impressive in the early season, but is coming off a loss at the hands of Colonial last Thursday. The Bears have virtually clinched a state playoff spot and a win tonight would give them the district championship.

The only way for Cypress Creek not to make the playoffs would be to lose to Seminole tonight and have Leesburg (2-5, 0-1) beat St. Cloud (0-7, 0-2) tonight and Seminole in two weeks. That would force a Kansas tiebreaker between the three teams for the two state Seminole (5-1, 1-0 in district play) has been looking better and better each week, building a four-game winning streak. Should Leesburg lose at St. Cloud, the Tribe could claim the district championship and a spot in the state playoffs with a victory.

The Tribe has been getting their usual outstanding play on the defensive side of the ball, but has gotten a real shot in the arm offensively from junior tailback Robert Ruffin. During the four-game win streak. Ruffin has galloped for 449 yards on 50 carries and seven touchdowns (six rushing, one receiving).

Seminole also has kicker Jason Walraven, who has consistently put his kick offs into the end zone, is almost deadly on field goal tries from inside 50 yards. and has punted for better than a 40-yard average.

The biggest contest in 5A-District 4 has Lake Howell (2-4, 2-2) playing at co-district leader Deltona [5-1, 4-1]. The Silver Hawks must win if they hope to keep their district hopes alive, while the Wolves need the win to stay at the top.

The other three games give Lake Mary (1-5, 1-3). Lyman (1-5, 1-3) and Mainland (0-6, 0-5) a chance to play spoiler, as they take on Spruce Creek (3-3, 3-2). DeLand (4-2, 4-2) and Lake Brantley (4-2, 4-1). respectively.

The Lake Mary Rams, who will be celebrating their homecoming this evening, will host the improving Spruce Creek Hawks at Don T. Reynolds Stadium. Lyman's Greyhounds go to DeLand to play the Buildogs at Spec Martin Stadium. The Lake Brantley Patriota travel to the Daytona Beach Municiple Stadium to battle tge defending district champion Mainland Buccaneers.

All games start at 7:30 p.m.

Senior Girls' play yields two upsets

From Staff Reports

SANFORD - It was not only the mosquitoes that were biting in the Sanford Recreation Department Senior Giri's Fall Slowpitch Softball League at the Fort Mellon Softball Field Thursday night. The upset bug also was flying around.

John's Small Engines scored four runs in the top of the first inning and it held insurance World under 10 runs for the first time this season to knock off the previously unbeaten league leaders, 8-3.

The opening game of the evening featured an exciting climax to another upset, as Roxsan Strine ripped a three-run home run with two out in the top of the sixth inning as Hirsch Chiropractic came back from an 8-7 deficit to win its first game of the season, 10-8 over Conklin, Porter & Holmes.

Rams, Seminoles exhibit progress

By TONY DeSORMIER Herald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY - It's been a long, tough run for both the Lake Mary and Seminole boys volley ball teams this season, almost all of it going straight up.

According to both coaches, the Rams and Seminoles - who wrapped up the 1993 Seminole Athletic Conference campaign Thursday night, Lake Mary winning 15-2, 15-11 - made remarkable strides forward this season.

'Some people, including some players on the team, I think, thought I was crazy when I said at the beginning of the season that this team could be one of the best we've had," said Lake Mary coach Bill Whalen, whose team earned a share (with Lake Howell) of the SAC championship with Thursday's win.

"We started slow (losing four of six matches), but now we've won 16 of our last 17 matches. I'm very pleased. If we give a good showing at Volleyfest next weekend, this will be one of the best teams we've had." Despite their 2-15 mark, Seminole coach Beth Corso believes her Seminoles have made similar strides

"I'm really pleased with the progress the boys made this season," said Corso, who also coaches the Seminole varsity girls team. "I just feel that we should have five, six, or seven wins under our belts by now.

"We have a lot of inexperienced players. What I need is to have all these players back for another year. The problem is that four of them are graduating. I'm extremely happy with the way we're playing. We're just ☐See Volleyball, Page 3B

SAC meet features state-ranked harriers, teams

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY - Boasting two of the state's fastest runners and two top-ranked teams. tonight's varsity girls race at Seminole Athletic Conference cross country meet could feature state championship-level competition.

Lake Mary High School will host the SAC meet. which will include junior varsity girls (4 p.m.). junior varsity boys (4:30 p.m.), varsity girls (5 p.m.) and varsity boys (5:30 p.m.) races.

Lyman, ranked second in this week's Florida Athletic Coaches Association's Class 5A state poll behind Niceville, will be the favorites to claim the girls' team title over Lake Howell, which was ranked sixth in the state this week.

Leading the Greyhounds are Kelly Hudson, who's top time of 12:23 is the state's 10th-best Class 5A time, and Ktanah Bresnick, who was knocked out of the top 10 fer the first time this season by Oviedo's Tracy Kotseos and the 12:20 effort (eighth-best in the state) she turned in at the Seminole invitational last week.

Led by Dan Hilley (who has the state's seventh-fastest time), the eighth-ranked Lake Brantley Patriots are favored to take the boys title over Lake Mary and Lyman, both of which were ranked at one time during the season.

Lake Mary's Toby Ayers has the county's fastest (and the state's sixth-best) boys' time. clocking a 15:03 in Gainesville on Oct. 9.

First Baptist, Beer: 30 headed for showdown

From Staff Roports

SANFORD - The rematch is getting closer. Sanford First Baptist Church extended its perfect record to 6-0 while Beer: 30 won its fourth straight since losing to First Baptist in the second week of the season to highlight play in the Sanford Recreation Men's Fall Thursday Night Slowpitch Softball League at Pinchurst Park.

Both teams needed big innings to keep the streaks alive as First Baptist broke a 1-1 tie with five runs in the bottom of the sixth inning and held off Exterior Homesavers, 6-2. Bamboo Cafe broke a 6-6 tie with a 10-run fourth inning and went on to outscore third-place M.A. Erectors, 17-8.

In the other game, Country Store kept its title hopes alive and moved into a tie for third place with an 11-5 triumph over S&S Raiders.

First Baptist (6-0) and Beer:30 (5-1), which have a rematch coming up on November 4, lead M.A. Erectors and Country Store (both 3-3), S&S Raiders (2-4) and Exterior Homesavers and Florida Sportsmen (both 1-5).

Next week, S&S Raiders tackle First Baptist at 6:30 p.m.; Beer:30 welcomes Exterior Homesavers at 7:30 p.m.; M.A. Erectors play Florida Sportsmen at 8:30 p.m.; and Country Store has the week off. Pinch-hitter Steve Laurence started First Baptist's uprising with a one-out single. After Tony Blatle doubled, Tom Gracey singled in the tying and go ahead runs as First Baptist rallied to win.

Leading the way for First Baptist were Blaile (double, single, two runs). Gracey (two singles, run, two RBI), Robert Stevens (two singles, run. RBI). Mike Henley (two singles). Laurence (single, run) and Sid Brock (run).

playing catch-up against the other schools in terms of building a program." Corso's point was illustrated by the way Lake Mary played two different teams in the varsity match. In the first game, Whalen went with his starters and won 15.2. Then, in the second game, Whalen played his bench along with a couple of starters in different positions.

"In the first game, we went with all our starters and we played the way we have been playing," said Whalen, "In the second game, we played a lot of people and tried a lot of different things. Some things worked and some didn't. This week, we've added some things that we think will help us in Volleyfest.

"In the first game, we were really smooth. That's the way we have to play if we're going to do well in Volleyfest.

After one complete pass through the service rotation in the first game, the Rams had only a 4-2 lead. Dustin Dittmer then ripped off four service points (which turned out to be the longest serving run of the match) to give Lake Mary some breathing room.

That's when the Lake Mary attack hit full speed. Up 8-2, the Rams ended the Seminoles' last three service passes with two kills from Dan Parsens and one by Dittmer. After scoring four of their first eight points on Seminole unforced errors, the Rams' next five points came on their own kills or blocks.

Just as the first game demonstrated the advances made by Lake Mary over the season, the second game showed how competive Seminole has become when faced with an opponent of similar experience and/or ability.

The Rams jumped out to a 5-0 lead, then watched as the Seminoles battled their way back to an 8-8 tie.

After the Tribe pulled even. Will Lipscomb got the serve back for Lake Mary with a kill off a set by Erik Larsen. David Scisciani then put the Rams ahead to stay as he buried a set from Larsen for a kill.

From that point on, Lake Mary slowly pulled away. Dittmer scaling the match with his kill on an assist from Lipscomb. Corso singled out senior hitter Jason Wildermuth and setters David Campbell and Josh Elliott for their efforts.

Lake Mary also won the juntor varsity match, 15-4, 15-11.

Strenuous exercise may be dangerous

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a question concerning a practice in our local physical education department in school. Students are required to run a certain number of days per week, in-creasing to a goal of 20 minutes Health Reports "Calorie Wise Cooking." "Winning the Battle per day. Today's deal is a modification of the second in David Bird's article that I mentioned yesterday. His monks are playing a from Oxford University.

Most American players would open that East hand with two hearts, a weak two-bid. The hand is short of the require-

West led his lowest heart. because he hadn't supported his partner's suit.

losers, declarer had to pick up the trump suit without loss. Professor Barclay won the first trick and promptly led the club queen from hand, scooping up East's jack and making his contract.

The Abbot was thunderstruck. league match against a team "I hardly dare ask how you took such a good view of the trump suit. Isn't it better odds to play to drop the king?"

'Ah, no, you're definitely wrong there. It's an old wives' tale, that business about the club king always being a singleton. I've been keeping a record of singleton club honors for more than three years now. So far the club jack has been singleton 172 times and the club king was a singleton only 158 times." You see the fallacy, of course.

South's line makes the contract only when East has the singleton jack. Playing a club to dummy's ace wins whenever either West or East has a singleton king.

Abby, I told them in a very nice way that I love them very much, but I didn't want them living that close. We felt that we needed our privacy. They did not take this very well, and some harsh words were exchanged. The contract was ultimately canceled, but a rift is still there.

Were we wrong to have confronted them and expressed our feelings, or should we have kept quiet and lived near them?

When I told her that I was 59 she said, "The doctor doesn't see old people, but I will consult with him and see if he can refer you to a doctor who does." (Abby, those were her chact words!

She called me back and left a message on my answering machine, but I did not return her call. I was so upset — and still stamped envelope to Deer Abby. am — I coud not bring myself cren to speak to that woman. Calif. 8008. All correspondence is confidential.)

Reading new food labels

Consumers can believe claims on package

There are some simple steps consumers can take to effectively use the new label without having to learn definitions or complex nutrition concepts. Four basic messages need to be conveyed to all consumers:

· You can believe the claims on the

(You will be able to believe the descriptor terms that say a food is "low in fat" or the health claims that link a certain nutrient to a specific disease because government regulations now define and regulate the terms and claims.)

 You can more easily compare products because serving sizes will be more comparable for similar food products

(For the first time, virtually all processed and packaged products will have to contain nutrition information. The information on the label will reflect an average serving in amounts customarily consumed. Since the serving size for each product is defined in the regulations, product comparisons will be easter and more meaningful than pre-

• By using the % Daily Value, you can quickly determine if a product is high or low in a nutrient.

(You can use the % Daily Value column to easily compare one product to another. If you want to lower the fat in your diet, you can compare products and select the ones with the lower percentage. You can also use the % Daily Value to make dietary trade-offs with other foods throughout the day. This means you don't have to deprive yourself of a favorite food that might be high in fat, if you watch what else they eat the rest of the

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/ GREGG

Note that "calories" and "calories from fat" on the food label are rounded off. This can create confusion in those consumers or students who are sharp in math and notice that things just don't add up.

For example: If the label reads calories from fat 30, but the total fat is 3 grams, the actual calories from fat equals 3 X 9 equals 27, not 30. This is just a rounding difference, and is generally not significant. It does make it easier to comparison shop In stores to have the numbers rounded off, but math buffs still may get upset.

 By consulting the Daily Values, you can determine how much (or how little) of the major nutrients you should eat on a daily (Daily Values serve as a reference for dietary guidance. They help consumers understand how much of a nutrient they should eat at a minimum (say for fiber or calcium) or maximums (fat and cholesterol). The Daily Values are listed for people who eat approximately 2,000 calories a day (many older adults, children and sedentary women) or 2,500 calories a day (active men. teenage boys and very active women).

People use labels in many different ways: we should focus on both those who only want to make a quick-and-dirty comparison as well as those who want to calculate their nutrient intake. If a consumer wants to use the label in a more sophisticated way, the information is there, but our education efforts should first be geared to helping consumers to use the label without requiring them to learn definitions or understand nutrition concepts.

Gifts for RSVP Christmas Store

RSVP is getting geared up for the annual Christmas Store for needy children in Seminole County schools. Throughout the year, these volunteers make, collect and distribute gift items so that the children can go on a shopping spree for their families. Donations are needed. Call 323-4440 for information. In photo, Mildred Freeman (from left), Dot Markle, Rose Davis and Barbara Schiessi show toys presented by Bram Towers residents for the Christmas Store scheduled the first full week in December.

Help fight drugs

In Seminole County and throughout the U.S., Americans from all walks of life are uniting during Red Ribbon Week, Oct. 23-31, 1993, to proclaim our determination to combat the destruction caused by the abuse of alcohol and other drugs. The Red Ribbon has become a nationwide symbol of intolerance for illegal drugs in schools, homes and work places.

Each year the annual Red Ribbon Campaign has gained more and more support in Seminole County and throughout the nation and now impacts literally millions of Americans. Seminole County is blessed with a high degree of support from all segments of our community, making our acclamation among the finest in the state and possibly the nation. Sheriff Don Eslinger is the honorary chairperson of the campaign. Businesses, law enforcement and social service agencies, civic groups, medical facilities, schools and churches all work together to make Seminole County's acclamation one of the strongest anywhere.

You can show your support for Red Ribbon Week in numerous ways. As an individual, you can be sure you wear a Red Ribbon. Set a positive example for your kids by being drug-free. As a family, you can place a Red Ribbon on your door or mailbox. As a business or civic leader you can sponsor a Red Ribbon activity in your community or neighborhood school. Distribute Drug-Free and Drug Prevention literature during Red Ribbon Week.

The most encouraging reality of Red Ribbon Week is that it doesn't have to end. We must continue to work together throughout the year to educate our students and citizens, and eliminate the demand for illegal uses of drugs in our community.

The purpose of Red Ribbon Week is to demonstrate a strong commitment from all walks of life for an environment free from the abuse of drugs. Let's make this determination a permanent force in our county. For more information on this event contact the Seminole County Schools' Drug Prevention Office. 322-5556.

Want Ad That Sells! YOUR CLASSIFIED AD works best when it contains what the reader wants to know. GIVE FACTS Put yourself in the buyer's place. What would you want to know? List the item's age, condition, size, brand name, model and approximate value. If you're selling a car, state the type of transmission, mileage (if it's low) and special equipment.

DON'T EMBELLISH: It's risky business to maggerate and it won't increase your chances of success. Misleading information may get a buyer to your house. It may also get you a punch in the nose.

AVOID ABBREVIATIONS:

While a few abbreviations can save you space, too many of them atrung together can create confusion. A confused reader won't take time to sort out your meaning.

dise when they know the price. This applies to everything from household furnishings to automobiles. Good merchandies, priced fairly, is the bost guarantee of success. BE AVAILABLE:

A telephone number is fine if you're at home when your ad runs.

Surveys indicate that buyers are more interseted in the merchen-

If you're not going to be home, state the time you will be. Most people won't call back twice.

INCLUDE PRICE:

USE YOUR NAME: Put your name in your ad. It gives credibility to the item you are advertising. You may even get results when someone who bee read your ad seen you in a restaurant or walking flows the street.

That's taking advantage of being in a small community such as
