BRIEFS

Foster homes needed

Seminole, Orange, Brevard and Osceola counties are in need of more foster homes. According to the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, these four counties, which comprise HRS District 7, have more than 800 foster children. The ongoing problem however is finding and retaining homes for each of them, and for daily newcomers to the foster care system.

To recruit more foster homes, HRS is launching a campaign "Foster a Future, Foster a Child."

The goal is to increase awareness and re-educate the community about foster care.

For additional information, phone (407) 423-6269 or (800) 882-8699.

K-9 demonstration

LAKE MARY — A K-9 demonstration will be given tonight beginning at 7:30 p.m., at Lake Mary High School, 655 Longwood-Lake Mary Road.

Sheriff Don Eslinger is expected to be on hand as Deputy Brian Marcum, the school Resource Deputy, demonstrates the effectiveness of his drug detection K-9 for the Parents Teachers Association (PTA).

Marcum, and the K-9 named "Spanky" recently completed three months of drug detection training at the U.S. Customs School in Front Royal, Virginia.

The dog is trained in the "passive" drug detection technique which means it sits when it discovers narcotics on a person or a location.

Deputy Marcum and the dog will be based at Lake Mary High School but will be available elsewhere if needed.

In addition to tonight's demonstration before the Lake Mary High School PTA, another demonstration will be given Tuesday, May 23, at 7 p.m., before the Seminole County School Board.

Graduation

LONGWOOD — Undersheriff Steve Harriett will distribute certificates to 20 graduates of the Sheriff's Office Student Police Academy tonight. The ceremony will take place beginning at 7 p.m. at Rock Lake Middle School, 250 Slade Drive, in Longwood.

The students have spent the past 10 weeks undergoing instruction in all facets of the sheriff's office operations.

The Seminole County Sheriff's Office Student Police Academy is reportedly the only one of its kind in Florida.

County, Lake Mary join forces

Renaming roadways studied

By NICK PPRIPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Names of two main roadways leading into Lake Mary were questioned Monday afternoon. The subject came up during a joint work session between the Seminole County Commission and Lake Mary City Commission.

When Rinehart Road travels south from SR-46 in Sanford, it passes the entrance to the Seminole Towne Centre Mall, SR-46A, the west side of Oaklawn Park cemetery, and eventually past the postal facility, entrance to Timacuan, and a number of major businesses.

Once the roadway reaches Lake Mary Boulevard however, although continuing straight south, it becomes Greenway Boulevard. As such, it travels past a number of major residential subdivisions, finally turning west and ending at Lake

Airport noise discussed

SANFORD — Although not scheduled on the Seminole County/Lake Mary joint work session meeting agenda yesterday, the Orlando Sanford Airport was discussed.

Lake Mary City Commissioner Gary Brender brought up the subject. Brender, also a pilot, has been outspoken on noise problems from approaching aircraft for several years.

"I didn't expect we would be discussing the airport again this year," commented County Commission Chairman Randy Morris. He was referring to the recent move to have the airport merged with the Seminole County Port Authority, which fell to the sidelines due to a lack of support.

"Anyway," said County Commissioner Daryl McLain, "I don't think

Food drive collects four times more than in 1994

By NICK PPRIPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

This year's Letter Carriers' Food Drive has been termed a huge success. An estimated 8,000 pounds of food was obtained by just the Sanford postal workers.

The drive was not only countywide, but throughout the state and nation. It was sponsored and coordinated by the U.S. Postal Service and National Association of Letter Carriers.

In Sanford, supervisor for the local collection was Luis Nieves. "This was absolutely the greatest collection we've ever had," he said. "The 8,000 pounds was about four times the amount collected last year."

Nieves said in all, 335,000 pounds of food products were obtained in this Central Florida region. All of the food will be going to Second Harvest Food Banks of Central Florida for further distribution.

Nieves said it was a long day for postal carriers and other workers. He personally volunteered time of over four and a half hours

No $$ for Boot Camp

Teen facility put on hold

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A plan for instilling discipline, self-respect and teaching life skills lessons to troubled teens was drastically altered Monday afternoon when it was learned the state has no money to establish a Seminole County Juvenile Boot Camp and followup care.

The vision of teens marching in lockstep to a military-type cadence, being taught discipline, self-reliance and how to handle problems was abandoned when the funding evaporated. The boot camp plan also included a proposal to slowly reintegrated the juveniles into society through a monitored program.

About 15 minutes before meeting with the Seminole County Board of County Commissioners to discuss crime issues, Sheriff Don Eslinger learned the $950,000 he thought was available from the Department of Juvenile Justice for the 30-bed boot camp, was not.

In his original proposal, the sheriff requested the county provide land for the camp and some matching money.

Eslinger met with commissioners in a two-hour work session to discuss subjects relating to his office from the burgeoning jail population to escalating teen crime. The number of unsentenced jail inmates is growing prompting discussion of alternative sentencing options as well as cutting back to only 48 federal prisoners as originally contracted. At times, over 100 federal prisoners were held in the jail. If the inmate

3 inmates back from unauthorized walk

Three inmates at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility tried to go for an unauthorized walk this morning, but corrections officers saw to it that they never left the fenced perimeter of the yard. According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough the three men, Joseph Poe, Carlos Sanchez and Jeffrey Wallick were serving time in the facility on robbery charges. This morning they had been brought out to the yard of "B Pod." At about 7:45 a.m. the corrections officer in charge noticed they were missing and spotted a hole in the fence covering the yard. According to McDonough, they had slipped through the hole and made it to the road of "D Pod" a short distance away. When they dropped to the ground below that building, they were met by officers who were glad to escort them back to a cell where they will be arrested for attempted escape. The hole in the fence has been mended.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Don't wait for your money back

TAMPA, Fla. — If you moved to Florida before July 1991 and paid a $300 impact fee on the vehicle you bought, don't plan on getting your money back — even though the fee has been declared illegal.

A recent bill introduced by state Rep. Bob Starks, R-Winter Park, would have extended refunds to people who paid the earlier impact fee.

"It didn't pass, so those $300 people are out of luck," said Pat Allen, a Starks aide. "But those who paid from July 1, 1991, on will be taken care of."

People who paid impact fees between July 1, 1991, and Sept. 30, 1994, have received a form to apply for the refund, but checks won't be in the mail anytime soon. Processing could take months or longer, and legal fees must be worked into the overall equation.

In September, the state Supreme Court ruled the vehicle impact fee violated the U.S. Constitution's ban on interstate trade barriers and ordered the state to repay about $188 million. Starks wanted the state also to repay about $29 million, with interest added, to people who paid the fee earlier.

The fee, first enacted in 1990, was charged for vehicles that were either bought in other states or had been previously registered in other states.

Orange Circuit Judge Lawrence Kirkwood ruled in 1993 that requiring impact fees on out-of-state vehicles violated the interstate commerce provisions of the U.S. Constitution. The Supreme Court upheld that ruling.

The law was slightly revised by the Legislature in 1991. The court ruling overturned only the newer version of the law, which took effect July 1, 1991.

That meant the state got to keep the $29 million collected under the fee between July 1, 1990 and June 30, 1991.

1-95 closed after wreck

DELRAY BEACH — No charges have been filed yet in an accident involving a gasoline tanker and a car that closed a section of Interstate 95 in Palm Beach County, the Florida Highway Patrol said.

The main north-south highway was closed most of the day Monday as a precaution for dealing with the flammable 10,000-gallon cargo.

The crash in the northbound lanes diverted traffic to Florida's Turnpike and county roads between Atlantic Avenue in Delray Beach and Woolbright Road to the north.

The driver of the tanker, Richard R. Rhoads, of Miramar, was treated for minor injuries. No one else was injured. FHP Lt. Pembroke Burrows said.

The collision occurred when a small vehicle driven by Clifford Chipped, of Boynton Beach, traveled from the northbound lane into the median, came back onto the road and struck the rear of the tanker, causing it to overturn, Burrows said.

Deluxe dorm saved

TALLAHASSEE — A financially-troubled luxury dormitory at Florida State University that verged on closing has received a second chance with a change in ownership.

Officials said Monday the sale of bonds used to finance the construction of Southgate Campus Centre will allow it to open June 1 for the summer and this fall.

The $38-bed dorm was financed with $56.7 million worth of tax-free bonds and opened in 1988. Although it cost more than university dorms, it attracted students with computer hookups, a fast-food court and a parking garage.

Dreyfus Corp., a Miami municipal brokerage firm, bought the bonds, averting the closing planned by the previous bondholders, officials said Monday. Managers were told last week to vacate the building within 10 days.

The building had generated enough money to cover its operating costs but had missed some bond payments.

Trucker indicted in Fla. slaying

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. — A trucker who has confessed to the killings of three women has been indicted on a murder charge in the slaying of a Florida woman.

Sean Patrick Goble has admitted killing Sherry Mearns of Clearwater, Fla., after picking her up at a truck stop in Virginia and dumping her body between Greensboro and Winston-Salem.

Goble already is awaiting trial in Tennessee, where he has confessed to killing Alton Rebecca Hanes, 26, of Columbus, Ohio, and Brenda Kay Hagy, 45, of Bloomington, Ind.

Authorities from Florida, Ohio, Kentucky, Georgia, Virginia, Missouri and Indiana have said they want to question Goble about the slayings of other women whose bodies were found near interstate highways.

Suspects killed in S.C.

MARIANNA, Fla. (AP) — Two suspects in the slaying of a retired Florida state trooper died in a shootout with police in South Carolina and a third, a juvenile, is being held there, Jackson County's sheriff said.

Orangeburg County, S.C., sheriff's deputies killed two of the suspects, Ashley Rouse, 17, and Jammie Jordan, 21, after a car chase May 7.

A 17-year-old boy from Summerville, S.C., who been staying with the couple in a motel before they were shot, was being held on a charge of a $200,000 bond posting violation and attempted robbery and burglary charges related to the Florida murder, said Jackson County Sheriff John McDaniel.

The case will be taken to a grand jury to determine whether homicide charges also should be filed, McDaniel said. The juvenile's identity was not released.

Retired Florida Highway Patrol trooper Surt Dunes Burkhart was fatally shot April 11 when two men tried to rob him and his wife, Jane, at their home near this Florida Panhandle city.

Kids vote in mock elections

TALLAHASSEE — Florida public school students are being urged to stage mock city elections and learn more about the operations of local governments under an initiative announced Monday.

A new educational guide, Decision '95 — My Vote Counts, was released by a coalition of government organizations to encourage schools around the state to participate in Florida City Government Week Oct. 15-21.

"It is the perfect city-school partnership program," said Clarence Anthony, mayor of South Bay and president of the Florida League of Cities. "It lets our students understand what it's like to be in our shoes and make those difficult decisions that city officials make every day."

The league, the Florida Institute of Government and Kids Voting Florida are sponsoring the mock election program.

Conservative Christians gain clout

TALLAHASSEE — Conservative Christians say they gained skill and momentum in the 1990 Legislature, though top priorities such as school prayer fell just short of passage.

Christian Coalition members will get an early start lobbying lawmakers this summer on issues such as school prayer and an abortion waiting period they want passed in 1990, executive director John Dowless said.

The group will also hire a full-time Tallahassee lobbyist, and even opponents agree Christian activists will return next year better prepared to try to steer their philosophies into law.

In the past session, Dowless told The Palm Beach Post for a story Monday: "We were naming much of the agenda and our issues were setting the debate. And if you control the agenda, ultimately you win."

"Clearly, the Christian Coalition has become a significant force in Florida politics," said Sen. Robert Wexler, D-Boca Raton, who opposed the school prayer legislation. "Thankfully a moderate group of Republicans and Democrats still control the Florida Senate, but I don't know how long that will last."

"They didn't walk away with any of the big prizes, but they're really in a league by themselves in their organizational strength," said Susan Glickman, Florida director for the People for the American Way, a national nonprofit, nonpartisan civil liberties group.

The school prayer legislation died on the final night of the regular session. The House voted 77-42 for the measure that would have allowed student-led prayer at graduations, sports and other noncompulsory events, but proponents removed requirements that prayer be nonsectarian and nonproselytizing.

The Senate took up the original version — containing those provisions — early Saturday and passed it 27-10. But the House recessed an hour later without taking up the Senate version.

Another defeat had come in late April when a proposal to require that women receive counseling about abortion alternatives 24 hours before having an abortion failed in a 3-3 vote in a Senate committee.

Remembered from high school

Teller recognizes holdup man as old classmate

FORT LAUDERDALE — A teller helped police quickly track down a bank robbery suspect after she recognized the man as an old high school classmate.

Charles Alfonso, 24, was charged Monday with robbing a First Union Bank branch after a teller told police she remembered him from Stranahan High several years earlier.

A man walked into the bank, handed a teller a note and made a motion implying he had a gun, police spokeswoman Sonya Friedman said. The robber was given a stack of money with an exploding dye pack hidden inside.

Officer Larry Loosen, who was investigating car burglaries across the street, ran to the bank after the alarm went off. He got a general description of the suspect, a long-haired man wearing a flannel shirt and long pants.

Loosen asked another teller for a better description and she replied: "I can give you his name. It's Charles Alfonso."

Police entered his name in a crime computer and came up with an address. They also discovered previous arrests on various charges, Friedman said.

Found at home, Alfonso was arrested without incident. The money, stained red, was found in a parking lot next to the bank.

By WMA LISTON

MIAMI — Cuban exiles, angry about a new U.S. refugee policy and fearful of normalised relations with Fidel Castro, prepared to flex their collective muscle by walking off their jobs at mid-afternoon today.

The protest, which Cuban Americans warned may be the beginning of a summer of civil disobedience, was tamed from the original threat to "paralyse the city."

Emergency workers were encouraged to stay on the job, and leaders abandoned earlier strategies of snarling the city's congested highways. Those who left work, many with their employer's blessing, were to attend a late afternoon rally in Little Havana.

The job action was shortened to half a day because organisers wanted the option of escalating future work stoppages, said Tony Liama of the Cuban American National Foundation.

"Also, it's so the Anglos and other ethnic groups do not take reprisals and fire people," he said.

The rally was planned as federal agents investigated possible refugee smuggling by two Cuban Americans found along with 23 Cubans on Sunday. The situation was complicated by the death of a 23-year-old Cuban woman found aboard a 30-foot Scarab speedboat, about 30 miles south of Key West. The cause of her death had not been released.

Federal officials from several agencies held a news conference late Monday to quash rumors the dead woman may have been shot by Cuban security forces, noting she had no bullet or knife wounds. FBI agents were interviewing the refugees held aboard two Coast Guard cutters. The Cubans could face return to Cuba under a tough new policy for rafters.

The two Cuban Americans, 21-year-old Eugenio Fuentes-Miranda and 38-year-old Jorge Nimer-Rolo, both from Hialeah, were being held for questioning and eventually could face smuggling charges.

But several relatives from Miami said the Cubans were attacked by security forces as they fled the island nation early Sunday and could face retribution.

"I'm scared if they go back, the (Cuban government) will kill them," said Libby Alonso, who says she has two cousins on the cutter.

On Monday, exiles in other cities held demonstrations. About 50 Cuban Americans tied up traffic coming out of the Lincoln Tunnel in North Bergen, N.J., while in Tampa and San Juan, Puerto Rico, dozens of Cuban exiles protested the two-week-old policy change by the Clinton administration.

Many Miami businesses made plans to accommodate the protesters and close for several hours Tuesday afternoon.

Health care company CAC-Ramsey announced nine clinics in Miami, Hialeah and Miami Beach would curtail operations at 1 p.m., turning away all but emergency patients.

Sedano's Supermarkets, with 1,400 employees, will close all 32 Dade stores from 2 to 4 p.m., according to company vice president Ramon Valdes. Publix Supermarkets doesn't plan to close any stores, but employees requesting time off are being accommodated, said spokeswoman Jennifer Bush.

Miami Mayor Steve Clark appealed for calm during the planned demonstrations.

"I ask that all members of our community be sensitive to the Cuban cause and that all leaders in the Hispanic, Afro-American, Haitian and Anglo communities work together in addressing this issue," said Clark, mindful that longstanding ethnic tensions in the city have only recently started to heal.

The Miami exiles cautiously prepared to make the strongest statement possible without causing violence.

"We're calling for people not to block the streets," said Ramon Sanchez, leader of the Unified Cuban Exiles Committee, coordinating the protest. "The demonstration is aimed at clarifying our message. Ours is political issue regarding not an immigration issue — it's a freedom."

Summertime reflections

It doesn't matter what the calendar says. We are involved in summertime with all of its heat, humidity, and health risks. Some words of caution don't require a lengthy dissertation, therefore, we offer the following:

Look at that!

The alligators can once again be seen sunning themselves at the surface of Lake Monroe. Don't feed them, and don't tease them. First of all, it's against the law to feed a gator. We know this. But some of our visitors from out of state may not realize the dangers this may produce.

Last year, a gator had to be destroyed along Sanford's lakefront because people had been feeding it, and it came close to some onlookers, expecting to be fed once again. The people became alarmed and called for help. As a result, the animal was pulled from the lake and destroyed. This shouldn't have been necessary. It wasn't the gator's fault, it was the people.

As an extra precaution, if someone else is seen feeding the gators, they may not know of our laws. Tell them. You will be doing everyone a favor.

How hot is it?

When the Florida sun appears to provide us with the opportunity to obtain a tan, we are tempted to remove some clothing and bask in the rays. Keep in mind however, temperatures this week have been in the 90s.

Some people are relaxing at the beach or in the back yard, while others may be mowing their lawns or playing outdoors. If a person believes it is necessary to have a tan, use some type of sunscreen. Any medical professional will tell you that a sunburn can have more serious ramifications than merely painful skin.

Don't fence me in

Words of caution to homeowners. Several cities have been working diligently on enforcing codes regarding fences. When it comes to erecting a fence, ownership of the property may not be sufficient. It doesn't matter if a neighbor has a fence, it is best to check before installing one. Contact the city or county code inspection department to be certain. Finding out afterward could become expensive.

Don't butt out

With the summer also comes a dry spell. As a result, the sides of our roadways can become very brittle and susceptible to fire. People who smoke while in a vehicle must not toss that cigarette butt out the window. The results of even one remote situation such as this could wipe out thousands of acres of grassland as well as nearby homes. Cars have sahtrays for a purpose. Use them.

A good belt

As of May 1st, Florida has a law that requires attachable flotation vests for every individual aboard a boat. The old square-shaped floaters are no longer acceptable. It may be more cumbersome to wear them in obedience of this new law, but it was not enacted for punishment. Rather, it's to protect lives.

We have little doubt that most people reading these suggestions were already aware of them. Yet each of us needs a little reminder from time to time.

Don't ever give up on democracy

This year is 50 years from everything, like the wondrous victory on V-E Day in 1945. Where are we now? Not bad at all, but not without problems. I was much taken with the comments of two eminent historians who appeared on a program about V-E Day, on the public television series "Think Tank" (which I moderate).

Pulitzer Prize winner Daniel Boorstin said: "A free society is a kind of creative chaos, and we must put up with the turbulence in order to have creativity... totalitarian societies exaggerate their virtues. Free societies... tend to exaggerate their vices."

Stephen Ambrose, director of the Eisenhower Center, said: "I believe that a democracy produces the kind of people who spend most of their time squabbling and fighting with each other over political matters... but when a crisis comes people pull together in a voluntary teamwork that is the most powerful force in the world.... Don't ever despair of democracy - for all of its faults and weaknesses, and all the politicians about to drive you crazy - don't ever give up on democracy."

Creative chaos. Exaggeration of vices. Turbulence. Squabbling. Politicians about to drive you crazy. The most powerful force in the world. Don't ever give up on democracy. It sounds familiar. Herewith a few recent confirmations:

Consider President Clinton in Russia. Not in the old totalitarian Soviet Union, but in a hopefully dawning democracy called Russia, now in being because the most powerful force in the world (America) won the Cold War. Yes, Clinton can drive you crazy, and me too. But American foreign policy on his watch has been pretty good. The crazy-making comes when you read (in The Washington Post recently) that politicized White House aides are telling American foreign policy makers on Cuba that the best policy is one that doesn't make any waves. Hey, guys: The most powerful force in the world is supposed to make waves.

Where are we now? Not bad at all, but not without problems.

Consider a money manager I know. In recent years he has been dubious about the prospects for stocks. Now he says it's time to buy. Inflation is low, he says, interest rates are low, productivity is up, technology is on the march, governments around the world are moving toward more market-oriented policies, there is little threat of major war - so it's never been a better time to buy equities. He says Europe is under-priced and a great buy, America is fine and Asia is over-priced. That's not exactly the usual picture offered by democrats around the world, exaggerating our vices. Creative chaos is in the saddle.

Consider how too many Americans exaggerated their vices during the recent anniversary of the end of the war in Vietnam. What happened was bad enough, but America did not "lose the war." We left. Two and a half years later our South Vietnamese allies were conquered.

Consider those squabbling politicians, liberals first. They can drive you crazy.

An anonymous Clinton aide calls what's going on at the White House "pandemonium." Wall Street Journal columnist Paul Gigot labels it the "Pander Primary."

Everyone must save our village

The boy, seated with a friend at the shopping mall, wore a black T-shirt and a baseball cap over his straight, longish hair.

He looked 13. The message printed on the back of his shirt was much older:

"[Expletive] you."
In the aftermath of Oklahoma City, much as been made of the deteriorating tenor of public discourse in America, President Clinton and others have asserted that, increasingly, virulent and threatening verbal attacks are being made on the U.S. government and its employees and elected officials.

Democrats point the finger for much of the current nastiness at certain Republicans and far-right media personalities - who deny it but know it's true. Republicans remind Democrats that not so long ago, the chief purveyors of government-aimed hate speech were certain Democrats and those on the far left - who'd rather ignore how they helped lower the discourse to its current, subterranean levels.

But who today takes responsibility for anything?

Perhaps we all need reminding of what the boy at the mall proved: Intimidating, bullying language now is an indelible part of the real public discourse - between neighbors, spouses and even the smallest children. Today, any trip outside the home may be a foray into a verbal guerrilla combat zone.

You never know where the hateful language will slip you.

Like in the lobby of my son's suburban elementary school. Recently, I watched a girl of about 10, her long, blond hair streaming, whip around, glare at another student and screech the expletive worn by the boy at the mall. Once, a little boy was cursing so vociferously that I asked, "Excuse me, but did you know some people don't like hearing those words?"

He just stared. Certainly, my habit of confronting - courteously, respectfully - kids who publicly use obscenities is unusual.

My friend Avis has raised it to an art form. A thirtysomething reporter, wife and mother of a toddler, Avis is known in her neighborhood for helping young folks watch their language. T-shirts are an Avis specialty.

She saw one recently that said, "Your Mama's a Ho" - worn by a boy who looked 14. But was he moving too fast for her to ask, "Why would you wear that?"

I remember the time a boy, about 17, passed her on the street in a shirt that screamed, "SHUT UP, BITCH."

Approaching him with a friend, she smiled, introduced herself and said, "We were wondering about your shirt."

"He blushed... as humbly as a kid in Sunday school who hadn't read the lesson," Avis recalls. "He was polite but couldn't explain why he'd wear a shirt insulting to every woman.... He promised he'd never wear it again."

Many adults are too scared to challenge kids. Not Avis:

"I'm a crime reporter, and the reason some of these kids are walking around with Usie is because adults are afraid to say anything. Part of adults' function is to say, 'You shouldn't do this....'"

So when a neighborhood youth sported a pulled-down ski mask on a 70-degree day, Avis told him, "You're wearing that to intimidate people.... But if somebody called the cops on you, you'd say it was because you're a black man in America.... Why try to look like you're doing something wrong?"

"They think I'm a trip," she says with a laugh, "but the kids come over to visit.... I think they want some guidance."

Admittedly, a coattail pulled here, an attitude checked there, is small stuff. But sometimes we're so focused on our monumental problems - kids who kill or who join drug gangs or hate groups - that we ignore what we can do: Offer the advice that might help one kid never to buy a gun, or use words that could goad someone else into using one.

Avis says her father told her that when he misbehaved as a boy, "Everybody beat his behind - his teachers, aunt, neighbors.... I'm not for spanking, but we need that village atmosphere now. Children should know there are consequences."

When I asked that boy at the mall why he'd wear a shirt that said the hell with you to every man, woman and child who read it, he shrugged, saying he just liked the heavy-metal band pictured on the shirt's front.

"Does your mom mind you wearing this?" I asked, "No," he replied.

So much for our public discourse. Still, I hoped he'd think about what I'd said. And about what he, through his shirt, was saying.

It's been two weeks since President Clinton's moving speech to bombing victims' families, but I can't forget one line: "You have lost too much, but you haven't lost everything, you haven't lost America."

Women's fashion gets real at last

The fashion facts at a recent New York City show weren't as confident as they had been in years past. The tone was somber, chastened. Gone were the predictions that American women would soon be stumbling around on spike heels, or draping themselves in waf-like wraps, or skipping about in babydoll dresses.

Instead, the new fall lines had neutral colors, discreet hemlines and subtle shapes. Though the heels were still quite high, they had been brought down a peg or two.

In short, they were the kind of clothes American women might actually want to wear.

Naturally, the fashion people hated it.

"American creativity is at its low point," sneered jewelry designer Robert Lee Morris to the Bergen (N.J.) Record. "This is about being commercial."

Well, imagine that. A commercial fashion show. One that caters to what women actually want to wear, rather than trying to dictate a lot of silly styles that they don't want to wear. No wonder the designers are miffed.

Because for years, designers COULD tell women what to wear. During World War II, for example, women became accustomed to the comfort of knee-length skirts, low heels and slacks as they took over the jobs left behind by the G.I.s. When the men came back, the fashion industry faced the herculean task of convincing women to shed such functional clothes for high heels and dresses with long skirts and small waists (read: girdles). Despite initial resistance, the fashion industry prevailed.

But those days are over. Today, most women have better things to do than fret over this year's hemlines. They have businesses to run, advanced degrees to obtain, kids to feed.

"Across the women's apparel industry, a stunning reality - that millions of women have lost interest in buying clothes - is starting to sink in," reports the Wall Street Journal.

It's starting to sink in after a three-year slump in retail sales of women's clothing. With the closing of many chain stores. With the decline in advertisements in the fashion press. And with the scores of slip dresses and neon miniskirts languishing on store racks.

Meanwhile, business is strong at discounters like Kmart, where women who previously wouldn't consider buying clothes at a discount chain are snapping up everything from dress shoes to blue jeans.

Other factors have contributed to the slump. The fact that the population is aging means that more women already have the clothes they need. And the increased number of workplaces with casual dress codes means that many employees don't need separate wardrobes for work and play.

What's astonishing is that the fashion industry has been so slow to adjust to the changing tides. Just this winter, Paris designers decided we were going to return to the '80s, and tried to bring back those long skirts and spike heels. Retailers pushed slimming undergarments called "body shapers" (read: girdles). And fashion magazines like Vogue hyped athletic.

The statistics are the most fascinating. What were they thinking? They obviously have no common sense and they couldn't possibly have done any market research. Otherwise they would have seen the surveys, like one conducted by EDK Forecast, that say four out of five women are "totally uninterested" in wearing spikes.

In short, they were the kind of clothes American women might actually want to wear.

Longwood agenda

LONGWOOD — City commissioners continue to wrestle with the question of reimbursing employees for job related travel expenses. The commission voted to pay all but $50 of the expenses incurred by the former mayor for a conference in Tallahassee.

Monday night, the commissioners agreed to pay $670 for the meals and travel expenses incurred by Iria Benson. The commission did not pay for $50 of expenses involving travel.

Benson explained she was reimbursed when she submitted the items for payment. Benson, who drove her own car to the conference because she was uncomfortable in a city car, charged gasoline on a credit card, then sought travel reimbursement (mileage).

Mayor Bill Winstead explained the business world generally is reimbursed for travel expenses, you don't get paid for gasoline too.

A proposed travel policy submitted by commissioner Jim Carrico was tabled when the commissioners could not reach an agreement where the policy should be placed. The expense reimbursement question was raised at an earlier meeting because commissioner Annmarie Vance said the commission had not approved Benson's trip. Benson informed the commission she planned to attend the League of Cities conference.

In other business, the commissioners approved an ordinance on first reading to re-finance bonds for Longwood Health Care Center, in preparation for the city to sell the facility to Beverly Enterprises. A public hearing will be June 8.

Weight limits on several city streets were also approved after a public hearing. Further, the commission voted 3-2, not to join Lake Mary in urging the countywide sign ordinance take effect as scheduled in June.

While no one has stepped forward at the Lake Mary City commission meetings to suggest a problem with the different names, the matter was nonetheless placed on the agenda by County Commission Chairman Randy Morris.

Morris, whose district encompasses Lake Mary, had brought the matter up previously, projecting that the different names would be confusing to motorists heading toward the Seminole Towne Centre Mall from the Longwood area.

Morris said he expects once the mall is operational, "We'll be hearing a lot about this name difference, so I would like to get Lake Mary's position on this matter."

Morris questioned whether the name should be Greenwood Boulevard from Lake Emma Road to SR-46 in Sanford, or should it become Rinehart in the north route.

"The problem I have with the name of Rinehart," said Lake Mary Commissioner Mary Brender, "is that there are many major corporations on Rinehart, and a name change would produce the need for a great deal of letterhead, listing, advertising and other changes which would be rather expensive."

Discussion, however, also pointed to name changes which would be required on the Greenwood section of the artery, although there are few structures actually on Greenwood. Most of the area consists of entrance areas to individual residential communities in what is known as The Crossings.

"I just wanted this to be brought up for discussion between these two commissions," Morris said. "The question is going to come up and we should consider whether or not a name change would be logical."

"We don't need to make any decisions on this in the immediate future," he continued. "But it's now on the record that we discussed it, and as we go forward with the mall development and roadway improvements, I would like to have continued input from the city."

None of the Lake Mary Commissioners voiced any objection to either approval or objection to the renaming of the roadway with two names.

Death toll expected to rise

By KAREN DAVIS
Associated Press Writer

KINSHASA, Zaire — A manhunt was on today for a riverboat captain and a nurse whom health officials fear may have brought the deadly Ebola virus from the countryside into Zaire's teeming capital.

Health officials were struggling to contain the virus to the region surrounding Kikwit, a city of 600,000 that has been under quarantine for a week. Kinshasa, the capital of Zaire, is a city of 6 million people only 370 miles away.

Dr. Abdou Moudi, WHO's representative in Zaire, said the nurse may have been in contact with infected individuals in Kikwit and was now in Kinshasa. The captain was treated for Ebola diarrhea at a Kinshasa hospital and released before doctors realized his symptoms were similar to those for Ebola. Health officials want to test both of them for the virus. They also warned that many people already exposed to Ebola have yet to develop its deadly symptoms, and said the death toll was sure to rise.

Airport

the airport is even interested in anything we have to say."

Brender brought out objections voiced by Lake Mary residents who are directly under the landing-approach flight paths west of the airport. He suggested the county at least give support to his continuing drive to have the north/south approaches improved and the eastern end of the east/west runways lengthened. In this way he suggested, many of the larger aircraft flights could avoid having to be in the immediate vicinity of Timacuan and other Lake Mary residential areas.

"That would take millions of dollars to do," said County Commissioner Daryl McLain. "and I don't know if the airport can come up with that kind of money."

"When I hear they are spending some $10 million to build a new terminal," Brender responded, "it bothers me when we consider the few million it would take for these runway extensions."

"Don't let this be taken as a complaint that Lake Mary isn't in favor of the development at the airport," Brender commented. "We are for new industry and development, but we believe there can be something done to help alleviate the noise problem."

Brender, who represents Lake Mary at the Council of Local Governments, (CALNO), said he has also brought the matter before them for discussion.

Lake Mary Mayor Lowry Rockett agreed with Brender that the city is not objecting to expansion at the airport and asked the commissioners not to view the city in that light.

"I realize this overnight issue is important to everyone in Seminole County," said Chairman Morris, "and as such, I suggest each of us keep these problems in mind, but I must stress that we have no control over what the airport does. The airport is in the hands of the city of Sanford."

population continues to grow, the sheriff suggested properly equipped tents may be used to house the overflow.

The correctional facility has 612 beds but some must be kept empty in case of an emergency.

"The jail project is designed to cut recidivism," Ealinger explained. "For the inmates to take responsibility for their lives by providing them with the tools to reintegrate back into society."

In 1990, 14,164 inmates were processed through the jail but that figure jumped to 16,909 by 1994. Inmates now pay a fee for sick calls with their commissary accounts, money supplied by family or friends which inmates use to buy personal supplies and snacks. No inmate is denied medical attention if they do not have money, however, the debt is noted in their account. If money is put into the account, payment for the sick call is taken out. Since the co-payment system was instituted in February, inmates have paid $3,751 for doctor, nurse or dental services, with the total charged to their accounts of $4,175.

Ealinger is proposing an adult inmate work farm, where selected prisoners would grow food which would be served at the jail to help offset costs. The sheriff suggested the operation could be located at the Yankee Lake sewage treatment plant site. Inmates would be housed at the site or transported from the John E. Polk Correctional Facility at Five Points.

Brevard County inmates operate a work farm growing vegetables, Ealinger noted.

in helping to load the food into trucks.

He attributed this year's success to additional promotion of the event, and the donation of services to print fliers which were distributed prior to the collection.

In some cases, the drive was so successful, that persons who have their mail boxes at the post offices brought in bags of non-perishable items and stacked them in the lobbies.

Last year, Sanford letter carriers obtained over two half-ton truck loads of food obtained from their routes. Nationwide last year, over 55-million pounds of food were collected in an effort to help the nation's hungry. Figures have still not been compiled for the 1998 drive.

Rabbi sues FBI for silence

By RONALD POWERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A militant New York rabbi is suing the FBI for waiting seven months to tell him that he had been targeted by a ring of Middle East terrorists on trial on charges of plotting to bomb the World Trade Center.

The FBI eventually told Rabbi Avi Weiss of the threat, saying he was being informed not because the bureau thought his life was in jeopardy but to avert surprise if his name came up during the trials of the accused terrorists.

Last month in a letter to the rabbi, FBI Director Louis Freeh sought to allay Weiss' fear and assure him that in the FBI's opinion the cleric had not been "the subject of any active plot or plan."

"When the FBI contacted you in January 1988, our purpose was to indicate to you that your name could be publicly disclosed," Freeh wrote. "Our purpose was not to warn you that your personal safety was at risk from a terrorist group, and indeed that was not the case."

But according to the rabbi's lawsuit filed this month in U.S. District Court in Washington, informants in the terrorist cell allegedly controlled by Sheikh Omar Abdel-Rahman told federal agents as early as June 1984 that Weiss was a "suitable candidate" for violence.

"They said they felt this threat, by the time they received it, was not serious. That upset me to no end," Weiss said several days ago in a telephone interview. "The FBI has made many mistakes in the past."

A year earlier the government quickly notified Sen. Alfonse D'Amato that he'd been threatened by the same group and quickly tightened security around the New York Republican.

Weiss, long associated with militant Jewish causes, and his Washington lawyer, Nathan Lewin, say the FBI overstepped its authority in deciding whom to notify and whom to leave in the dark.

"We think there is a constitutional right to have information that there is a threat to your life or safety," said Lewin.

Not passing it along, Lewin argues, deprives Weiss, without due process, of his Fifth Amendment rights of life and liberty.

In his letter to the rabbi, Freeh explained that potential targets were separated into two groups, based on information federal authorities received from informant Siddiq Ibrahim Siddiq Ali.

Those the FBI believed were at the most risk received closest attention. "You were not one of those people identified in this group," Freeh said.

Civil libertarians applauded Lewin's effort, but held out little hope for its success.

"Legally it's a letter," said Michael Ratner of the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York. "Any judge is going to say the FBI has the discretion to determine when the threat is serious and when they need to notify somebody."

But if Weiss could convince a judge he was treated differently from other possible targets, he might increase his odds of winning, Ratner said.

Weiss was in a group of American Jews who scuffled with the police in 1988 when Pope John Paul II visited Manhattan, Austria's most infamous death camp.

He has led demonstrations outside the home of John Demjanjuk, the Ohio man whose conviction for being a Nazi death camp guard was overturned by the Israeli Supreme Court.

This year, members of Weiss' Coalition for Jewish Concerns-Amecha jumped on the stage where conservative commentator Pat Buchanan lashed off his GOP presidential campaign, shouting "Buchanan is a racist."

Sardine deaths threaten Australian ecosystem

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MELBOURNE, Australia — A massive bloom of plankton appears to be killing billions of sardines off Australia's southern coast, endangering penguins and larger fish that feed off them.

The Victorian Fisheries Research Institute said today the unprecedented plankton bloom was swept to the surface by a huge upwelling of deep cold water over the past month. It added that the surge could be connected to El Nino, the seasonal ocean current that flows south along the coast of Peru and is associated with atmospheric changes.

The plankton — diatom thalassiosira — are not toxic, but form a gelatinous mass that clogs the sardines' gills and suffocates them.

Other fish and birds have not been directly affected, but the loss of sardine stocks could starve penguins, salmon and tuna.

BUSINESSES IN REVIEW

With more than 300 feet of frontage on State Road 434 in Longwood, The Big Picture, Inc. is hard to miss. Don't miss the chance to switch to the cable alternative.

Dish your cable company Get The Big Picture this summer

Recently, the cable companies announced another rate increase. There is a company, located at 908 E. State Road 434 that can help you stop renting cable forever.

With more than 300 feet of high visibility on S.R. 434, more than 25 support people to serve you. The Big Picture, Inc. definitely has an alternative to high priced cable.

In 1980, Robert McKiernan, the owner of The Big Picture, Inc., decided the way he watched other satellite companies sell, install and service wasn't the way he wanted to do business. In a very short time, The Big Picture, Inc. has earned the trust of hundreds of happy and excited customers.

McKiernan says The Big Picture, Inc. sells the equipment the installers believe in and not what is easy to sell.

From the RCA 18 inch dish to full tracking satellite systems, The Big Picture, Inc. just installs satellite television equipment. McKiernan believes one of the successes of The Big Picture, Inc. is that they will not follow the paths of other satellite companies and will not be considered the so called Crazy Eddie's department store of satellite television.

Families across the country are increasingly loving the alternative for cable. If you are thinking of or are about to purchase a satellite system... STOP and see for yourself why The Big Picture, Inc. has become central Florida's largest satellite company.

PDS-Hackers prefect

CASSELBERRY — The PDS-Hackers softball team from Oviedo wrapped a perfect 10-0 season in the Women's Class C Spring Slowpitch Softball League at Red Bug Lake Park Monday night with a 7-0 forfeit gift.

The Oviedo-based team will now move to Central Winds Park in Winter Springs for the Summer season, also on Monday nights.

UCF football adds Virginia

ORLANDO — University of Central Florida Athletic Director Steve Sloan announced Monday the addition of Virginia to the list of football opponents contracted for the near future.

The home-and-home agreement calls for UCF to travel to Charlottesville, Va., to take on the Cavaliers on October 2, 1999. UVA will then come to Orlando on September 29, 2001.

Virginia fills out the 1999 schedule, which also includes games at Georgia Tech, Auburn, Georgia and Florida, as well as home contests with Purdue, Louisiana Tech, East Carolina, Eastern Michigan, Ohio, and Bowling Green.

AROUND THE STATE

Carr sidelined

MIAMI — Florida Marlins centerfielder Chuck Carr was placed on the 15-day disabled list Monday with a strained left hamstring.

Carr is expected to be healthy by the time he's eligible to be activated. He sustained the injury beating out a bases-loaded infield single during Sunday's 6-3 loss to Colorado.

To reach Tuesday's roster limit of 25 players, the Marlins also sent catcher Bob Natal and infielder Eddie Zoaky to Triple-A Charlotte.

Marlins pound Phillies

MIAMI — Darrell Whitmore and rookie Qulvio Veras each homered and drove in two runs to help the Florida Marlins cool off the Philadelphia Phillies 9-1 Monday night.

Philadelphia began the game with baseball's best record and Florida the worst. The Phillies (13-5) lost for only the second time in 12 games.

Greg Colbrunn also homered for the Marlins, who are last in the majors in batting but scored in each of the first five innings.

John Burkett (3-2) allowed no hits in the first 4 1/3 innings and departed after giving up five hits and one run in 6 2/3 innings.

Baseball Regionals in Florida

TALLAHASSEE — FSU and Miami were chosen as host sites for NCAA Regional baseball tournaments scheduled later this month.

Florida State will host the Atlantic I Regional May 25-28, and Miami will host the Atlantic II tournament May 28-29. Winners of the double-elimination regionals advance to the College World Series at Omaha, Neb.

Clemson, Tennessee, LSU, Wichita St., Oklahoma and Fresno St. also were awarded regionals. The pairings in the 48-team tournament will be announced next Monday.

AROUND THE NATION

FSU gets basketball standout

BOSTON — High school basketball standout Randell Jackson surprised his coach and most observers by announcing he will attend FSU.

"Everybody thought he was leaning towards UNC," said Jackson's coach, Scott Spinelli.

Before this weekend, Spinelli thought Jackson was thinking of going to other Atlantic Coast Conference schools North Carolina or Maryland.

Jackson, 19, hit his stride as a player after transferring to Winchendon School two years ago. In that time, the 6-foot-10 center averaged 23.7 points, 11.5 rebounds and 3.1 blocks.

Jackson still has to get a minimum score on the SAT. He sat for an untimed test on May 10. When asked about his SAT score, Jackson answered only that he was going to FSU.
