Carter Remains Silent On Pastor's Resignation

PLAINS, Ga. (sp.)- There was no in-dication today that President Carter would comment on the forced resignation of his former pastor, the Rev. Bruce Edwards Sunday.

Edwards resignation, effective April 30, followed strong criticism and probable firing by his congregation incensed over the minister's efforts to integrate the church. Internal bickering had been brewing at the Plains church since the Rev. Clennon B. King, a black attempted to join the Plains Baptist Church just before the presidential election.

Califano For Birth Control

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano Jr., says he objects to abortion for religious reasons, but believes family planning "is fine, appropriate and should be pushed much harder than it is." # AFL-CIO At Miami Beach Seeks Wide Legal Changes

MIAMI BEACH (AP) - The AFL-CIO, looking for backing in the Democratcontrolled Congress, has chosen this spring to fight for an omnibus revision of basic labor laws, including repeal of the "right-to-work" provision of the Taft-Hartley Act.

A tax on the labor federation's 14 million members will finance a public relations campaign aimed at winning public support and understanding. An AFL-CIO source said the tax is expected to raise $750,000.

Labor's senior legislative strategists decided on the one bill approach rather than a piecemeal attack during private weekend meetings here. The union's executive council, which holds its winter meeting today, is expected to approve the program and AFL-CIO President George Meany will unveil it Tuesday.

MIAMI (AP) - One of Florida's largest conservation groups is trying to keep the state from leasing public land in the Big Cypress Swamp to oil companies.

"The first obligation of the Department of Natural Resources ought to be to protect this area, not to promote the destruction of its natural resources," says John Jones, executive director of the Florida Wildlife Federation.

"With all of the roads and wells that the oil industry has planned out there, that area could well wind up looking like a real estate development."

Hal Scott, president of the Florida Audubon Society, has gone along with the leases as a member of the Big Cypress Advisory Board

Blast Darkens Jax Area

JACKSONVILLE (AP) - A small electric conductor that shorted out two power lines and caused a large generating station to explode has been blamed for blacking out half this city.

The blackout occurred about 8:30 p.m. Sunday and darkened the south and west areas of the city including the downtown section for hours.

Hospital, fire and police stations continued in operation using emergency generators, the Duval County Sheriff's Department said. But the blackout did little to hamper the performance of comedian Bob Hope participating in the Jacksonville University homecoming.

Quitting Pair 'Not Overworked'

y DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

The two felony prosecutors, who quit their jobs with State Attorney Douglas Cheshire's Seminole County courthouse office last week were "not really" overworked, Jerold Bross, Cheshire's chief assistant in the 18th judicial circuit told a group of women Saturday.

Bross, speaking before the Sanford Women's Republican Club, acknowledged that both men. William Heffernan and Mark Rabinowitz, were "good trial lawyers," but in response to a question from the floor denied that they were

Saying that the new Democratic state attorney has a "Republican" outlook toward fiscal responsibility and has been reorganizing the office in both counties of the circuit - Seminole and Brevard - Bross said Seminole is designed for three prosecutors. He said that neither Heffernan nor Rabinowitz were underpaid with Heffernan drawing a salary of $22,000 annually and Rabinowitz $19,000, a practicing attorney for only 21/2 years. Bross said the two men "walked out" at 11 a.m. Wednesday and both positions were filled by noon. He added that a shingle will probably be hung by the two in a private practice in the south end of the county. He said the publicity engendered by the two resignations probably was good and indicated to the public that Cheshire's office is "not frittering away" public funds. Bross, introduced at the meeting as a "gut fighter with a heart" explained the functions of the state attorney's office, calling it the "single most powerful county office in existence." "The office controls a good deal of what you see around you, through its power to prosecute or not," he said. Bross said the state attorney's office in the two counties has a staff of 64, including 26-27 lawyers and six investigators and operates with a budget of $1,120,000 annually plus supplements. He said the budget for the next fiscal year is expected to total $1.3 million.

Bross said Cheshire's salary is $36,000 annually. He said that Cheshire's office currently has a lapse of only three to five weeks between the time a person is accused of a crime until the trial is held while other circuits such as the Tampa area has a 120-day lapse.

Carter Feinting With Brezhnev

"We will move this year a step toward our ultimate goal - the elimination of all nuclear weapons from this earth."

It is unfair, perhaps, to lift this one sentence from the context of President Carter's inaugural address, for the address was a brief and inspirational message, not a blueprint for specific diplomatic policy. Nevertheless, here and around the world the words are being studied as an augury of where the new administration may take us, and thus the world, in the quest for peace.

There is a larger context within which Mr. Carter's words have to be considered. On Jan. 18. Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev called for a prompt new agreement on strategic arms limitation. Mr. Carter's sentence in his inaugural speech has to be read as a response to that call.

The danger would be to read too much into Mr. Carter's promise of a "step." It was not necessarily a promise that the SALT deadlock will be broken.

Once before Mr. Carter was accused of tipping his hand in a high-stakes political game. During the Ford-Carter debates last October, he said that as President he would take no military action if the Soviet Union invaded Yugoslavia after the death of Marshal Tito, unless our own national security were involved.

It was a hedged answer to a hypothetical situation, but Mr. Carter drew fire for it because it could curtail his options if Yugoslavia were in-

Presidents quickly learn to play their hands close to the chest, however, and as he settles into the Oval Office Mr. Carter will doubtless be weighing his responses more carefully. Resumption of the SALT talks, much less ultimate full nuclear disarmament, won't be achieved without arduous negotiations and tests of will.

Mr. Brezhnev says he is willing to settle at this time for an interim treaty based on the 1974 agreement in Vladivostok. It limited the United States and Soviet Union to 2,400 long-range nuclear missiles each. He indicated he would postpone the controversial issues of the U.S. cruise missile and the Soviet Backfire bomber in order to resume momentum.

If Brezhnev meant what he said, the Soviet Union should have no trouble in working out another interim arms agreement. The existing temporary limitation on offensive strategic missiles, including those covered by the SALT I agreement of 1972, expires in October.

However, Mr. Carter has a right to be cautious. Fred C. Ikle, President Ford's arms control director, has said that the United States offered five different SALT solutions in six months. The Soviet Union rejected them all and did not offer counterproposals. And twice in the last year former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger offered Brezhnev the same deal that Brezhnev now is offering Mr. Carter. The Soviet Union rejected Mr. Kissinger's proposals.

Brezhnev's most recent offer may mean that he has changed his mind. Or it may mean that he wants to meet Mr. Carter as soon as possible so that he can size him up.

In either case, Mr. Carter cannot refuse to attend a SALT summit. If he can formalize the 1974 agreement without making any more American concessions, Mr. Carter will have taken the small step that he promised. And if Brezhnev dances back again, Mr. Carter will have taken a large step toward understanding how tough it will be to achieve his earlier promises that the United States must get more concessions in return for the chances that we take to reduce nuclear threats to humanity.

ANGLE-WALTERS Senators In Control

That incident, in a nutshell, explains President Carter's strategic retreat from his campaign proclamation that "all federal judges and prosecutors should be appointed strictly on the basis of merit without any consideration of olitical aspect or influence."

Carter thought he had a perfect way to take politics out of the appointment process. He said he would establish independent "blue ribbon" commissions to screen interested candidates and would make his nominations only from a list of finalists approved by those commissions. Unfortunately, however, the president failed to reckon with the time-honored prerogative of senators to influence, if not dictate, the appointment of federal judges and prosecutors within their own states.

Over the years, members of the Senate have abused their power to confirm or reject these appointments to blackmail the president into nominating candidates of their choosing rather than his own.

The result had been a serious distortion of the constitutional separation of powers and a JOHN CUNNIFF redress of the balance is sorely needed. But it's not going to be easy, as Carter has already recognized

Now a psychological study by his prison doctor suggests that Gilmore may have stagemanaged his own dramatic exit. He certainly had the flair for it. He was bright enough, with a sense of drama and a way with words.

According to his psychological history, he was "extremely hostile and aggressive." He often boiled over with rage. But he also had a "predisposition for acting out behavior" and a strange ability to manipulate other people.

His confidential records reveal that he led hunger strikes and organized suicide pacts in other prisons. There was a suspicion that he sometimes persuaded inmates to take suicidal risks which he shrewdly avoided himself. For example, he once reportedly mixed water with the blood from his wrist wounds to make the bleeding look worse than it was.

Tallahassee and Tuscaloosa. Two cities. Two Southern cities. One in Florida, one in Alabama. Historically, probably much alike in growing patterns and pains, lifestyles and customs. But not last Saturday. It might as well have been two different worlds.

In Tallahassee, a group of racists was marching up and down trying to recruit members to its white supremocy cause. The marchers were greeted with bricks and jeers. In Tuscaloosa, a group of basketball players was running up and down the hardwood floor trying to drop a circular ball into a hanging cylinder. The players were greeted with shouts and cheers. A touch of the past. A touch of the present and future. It provided a sharp contrast, a paradox of values, on a Saturday afternoon in February 1977.

And there was a built-in irony. All those marthers in Tallahassee, those hooded dummies of the Ku Klux Klan, could have saved themselves a lot of embarrassment, cuts and bruises. Gilmore also purchased $200 worth of groceries at the prison commissary and stashed the food in his cell. Throughout most of the hunger strike, he was confined in a recreation room near the cafeteria. He complained mightily about the location and demanded to be moved away from the cafeteria, lest the public get the impression his refusal to eat was a sham.

Another time, the doctor asked Gilmore during a physical examination whether he really wanted to die. "You know I do," replied the convict. "The papers have said it." He appeared always to have one eye on the

NEW YORK (AP) - The customers always write. Across the continent from Hollywood, Calif., comes a livid cry of outrage over the dissolution of baseball's Hall of Fame Committee on Negro Leagues "after passing out lefthanded compliments to only nine players."

'Tokenism," says A.S. "Doc" Young, author, editor, historian of black culture in America. "It is an insult to the great black players who performed in the years before they were finally admitted to the major leagues in 1947."

Young was particularly incensed over an all-time all-star team chosen by Fred Lieb, 88-year-old member of the Hall of Fame Veterans Committee, without a single black face in the lineup. Lieb's team consisted of Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Lou Gehrig, Eddie Collins, Honus Wagner, Pie Traynor, Bill Dickey, Mickey Cochrane, Cy Young, Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson and Lefty Grove.

"All lily-white," Young fumes. "Mr. Lieb is pushing a mean theory ... that white ball players are vastly superior to black players and always have been."

The Californian criticizes what he calls the "Turn Back the Clock Gang," unwilling to admit that the records established by Ruth, Cobb & Co. were made "when many better players were barred from the game because of race and color." He mentioned particularly Satchel Paige, "who probably won 2,500 games as a pitcher," and Josh Gibson, "who hit 969 home

"That ridiculous committee," Young said, referring to the now defunct Hall of Fame Committee on Negro Leagues, "ignored Andrew "Rube" Foster, Willie Foster, Smokey Joe Williams, Bullet Joe Rogan, Raleigh "Bizz" Mackey, Mule Suttles and Chet Brewer.

"Suttles hit the ball as far as Ruth. Brewer was a winning pitcher for 40 seasons, summer and winter, in the United States and South America.

"Black teams were playing baseball as early as 1867. Yet, 110 years later, that committee - two of whom (Monte Irvin and Judy Johnson) got themselves elected to the Hall of Fame closed down after selecting only nine Negro League players."

Referring to Lieb's all-time lineup, Young said that a case can be made for only three of the selections - Ruth, Wagner and Traynor - as being superior to blacks who have played major league baseball since 1947 until the present time. "Jackie Robinson, as a total force in baseball, was greater and more valuable than Eddie Collins. Roy Campanella surely was the equal, if not the superior, of Dickey and Cochrane.

"We cannot forget Maury Wills on the base paths and in the ategory of leadership. Willie Mays was, most probably, as great as any player who ever lived. With Mays, Aaron, Frank Robinson and Roberto Clemente on the roster of outfielders, we can dispense with Ruth, Cobb and Speaker. "Who can say that Joe Morgan wouldn't have been a super star-Joe Morgan and Lou Brock in the time of Eddie Collins and Ty Cobb? Given good health, Luke Easter would have hit home runs with Babe Ruth, home run for home run."

GRANT Carter Asks $19.4 Billion Hike In Ford's '78 Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter today proposed a tracting revenues of $401.6 billion, there would be a deficit of $57.7 $19.4 billion hike in former President Gerald R. Ford's 1978 billion. Ford recommended a deficit of $47 billion. budget, saying the increase will help the needy, restore economic growth and make a start on his own programs.

Carter asked Congress to impose a ceiling on hospital charges, a kind of price control that may be the first step toward a comprehensive national health insurance program. He also proposed increased outlays for education, housing and energy, and a small cutback in outlays for defense. He scrapped Ford's plans to cut food stamp, child nutrition and health programs. "Proposals have been rejected that would have needlessly added to the burden on the elderly and those who depend upon Medicare, Medicaid and food programs," Carter said in a message to Congress. But, he said, there has not been time in his four weeks in office to completely rewrite the budget that Ford sent to Congress three days before leaving office. He said it "is essentially still President Ford's budget ...."

Carter proposed increasing 1978 spending to $459.4 billion, compared with the $440 billion Ford recommended. After subSpending during the current 1977 fiscal year is estimated at County Attorney Gary Siegel to "look into legal action" to stop work on a warehouse which is under construction off Airport Blvd. on property owned by the port.

Ford: 'It's Possible'

NEW YORK (AP) - Former President Gerald Ford said today it was possible that he would seek the Republican presidential nomination in 1980 but called for keeping the field open.

"It's possible things might develop where I would have an interest and the party would want me to do so," Ford said in the first of a two-part interview on the ABC-TV program "Good Morning America." "I just don't want one person to assume the mantle of adership at this point," Ford said, declining to comment on whether he was alluding to Ronald Reagan. Ford declined to criticize President Carter, saying that while he did not agree with every step taken by the new administration, he thought Carter "has enough problems without somebody sitting in the grandstand and secondguessing him during the early period of his Presidency."
