The Sound Of Words

Many people get the idea that the way they do things is the right way. We say that a bee buzzes because to us that is what it sounds like.

To the Dane, for instance, what the bee does is called "sooren." To the Dutchman, it is "Hronzen." In France the bee "boordonnay."

Recently the language research committee of New York University conducted an investigation into the so-called "bow wow theory" as applied to ten different languages.

Such words are called onomatopoeic words. Similar words include the hiss of a snake, the "meow" of a cat, the "clank" of a chain, the "patter" of rain, the "clatter" of horses' hoofs.

All of these words are the English imitation of the sound they represent. The committee of the New York university has tested the strength of this assumption by translating seventeen onomatopoeic words into ten foreign languages.

When a pistol is fired, we say it goes "bang!" The word appears in Denmark as "Banke"; in French as "Pan" or "Pang"; in German as "Boun"; in Italian as "Poom"; in Portuguese as "Peng" or "Poong"; in Russian as "Hlopnyootye" and in Spanish as "Poom."

Escaping steam "hisses" only in English. "Hiss" is "Hvislen" in Danco-Norsk; "Sissen" in Dutch; "Siffly" in French; "Tzishen" in German; "Sibilare" in Italian and Latin; "Gvizdach" in Polish; "Assoveahr" in Portuguese; "Sylstyte" in Russian, and "Sibilar" in Spanish.

"It is one thing to identify an onomatopoeic word and quite another to know it and use it," the report of the survey stated. "These words are among the most difficult in a language; very few persons who are not actual natives know them correctly."

The report observed that for the sound of shaking money in the pocket a class of Bangall graduates suggested "crash," "clank," "tinkle," and indeed almost every possible word except the right one.

DOCTORS, LIKE OTHER PEOPLE, must pay their bills and take care of their own families. Yet doctors usually are the last creditors to be paid.

CAN IT BE MADE TO PAY?

MIAMI HERALD

The little principality of Monaco is asking the Supreme Court of the United States for permission to sue the state of Mississippi for $100,000.

Mississippi was admitted to the union of American states in 1817. It was then, as now, an agricultural state and its principal product was cotton.

In an effort to meet the situation, the state legislature chartered the Union Bank and other banks.

The plan adopted was fostered by the Democratic party, enacted into law by two legislatures, as the state constitution required, and approved by the governor.

Under the influence of the inflation which followed the receipt of the gold from the bond-wild speculation speedily followed and soon the state of Mississippi found itself in debt to the tune of $17,000,000, or about $45 per capita.

The bonds of the Union Bank came due and the non-resident owners demanded the cash. At once there was a demand for repudiation and the matter became a party issue.

Even such distinguished men as Jefferson Davis canvassed the state in advocacy of the proposed amendment. Many endeavors have been made by foreign investors to secure payment of the bonds, the constitution of the state to the contrary notwithstanding.

Hardie was suspended on charges of misfeasance, negligence, incompetency and neglect of duty. Brigham said the move was designed to pave the way for quo warranto proceedings he declared would be brought in the state supreme court, seeking reinstatement of Hardie as sheriff.

ENTZMINGER IS DEAD, ENDING ACTIVE CAREER

Mr. Entzinger was a member of Longwood Lodge No. 53, F. & A.M., of Taylor Commandery No. 28 of Sanford, and the Morocco Temple Shrine, Jacksonville.

When Seminole County was created in 1913, Mr. Entzinger's influence in his home section had earned him the respect and confidence which resulted in his being named to represent that part of the county on the newly organized board of county commissioners.

For 13 years Mr. Entzinger played a vital part in the affairs of this county as a commissioner from Longwood district, and many of the miles of paved highway in this county are credited to his vigorous campaigns for a road system second to none in Florida.

In 1928, Mr. Entzinger turned his attention to the state legislature, to be elected along with L. P. Hagan to a place in the 1929 legislature. His record there was one of intense interest in the rights and privileges of the residents of this county.

Mr. Entzinger went back to the state legislature in April of this year when he was elected to fill the vacancy created by the death of Judge H. S. White.

Surviving Mr. Entzinger are his widow, Mrs. Sallie Entzinger; a daughter, Mrs. W. C. Satcher; a son, L. W. Entzinger; two sisters, Mrs. Marion A. Hogan of Lakeland and Mrs. W. E. Allen of Sanford; six brothers, Robert S. Entzinger, of Longwood; Rev. W. F. Entzinger, of Columbia, S. C.; Wade S. Entzinger, of Longwood; Rev.

U.S. REMAINS AS ONE OF FEW WITH PRESS FREEDOM

Newsman Being Forced To Bend Selves To Will Of Officials

This is the first of a series on freedom of the press, which is being sent to state capitals by the U.S. News and World Report.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Three major areas in the whole world stand alone today—the last to hold to the idea of a free and independent press, allowed to print uncensored the news as it finds it.

They are Great Britain, the Scandinavian countries, and the United States and Canada.

In Germany, a Nazi party member sits at the elbow of every editor, censoring what goes into the newspapers and magazines. If, despite this, the paper is not enthusiastic enough toward Nazism, the party or the government takes it over, lock, stock, and barrel.

In France it definitely has been shown that many papers have taken fat subsidies from their own and foreign governments. Naturally, such views were presented as suited the governments who paid.

An official government news agency sees that no news from abroad gets on its wires, or goes out over them, unless approved.

In Russia, news, magazine, or book printing is regarded as mere an arm of the communist party.

There is no printing at all except as the government thinks it furthers the party's aims.

Unfavorable articles appear only as "self criticism" when the government wishes to shadow-box by criticizing itself.

In Italy, publications dare not print so much as the name of a subordinate officer of government since a recent tightening of Mussolini's grip on publications.

The old rough stuff of making editors drink castor oil, or smashing up their print shops, is past. No publication is printed today without the tolerance of Mussolini.

Austria joins the rank of government censorship, and announces that hereafter publications will have "to pursue an Austrian policy and no other." That means, of course, the government's idea of an Austrian policy.

The ideal, achieved after more than 300 years, was by ink and prison, and blood that men should have the right to think what they will, and say it, and print it, and convey it to others, is sorely beset today.

Lay aside theory. This is what the situation might be like today in America if freedom of the press had been taken away or let slide.

In the first place there wouldn't be as many newspapers and magazines. Communists and socialists probably would be without any publications, the Daily Worker and the Vorwärts and perhaps many labor union journals, would have been closed down.

Majority of church publications would have been eliminated.

You would find a great deal less variety in your favorite bookshop. You might, for instance, be unable to buy a book urging or outlining a peaceful policy toward Japan, or abandonment of the Philippine noble experiment.

You might be able to buy no book on American history which did not conform with the copy-book maxims of the fifth grade. Books such as those recently issued by Morgan, Mellon, and other financial figures might be forbidden.

For a while you might not notice any difference in your daily paper. Then, suddenly, from a personal letter, you might learn that there was a great farm strike in progress in the middle west, with milk poured into the road, and bridges dynamited.

Um, strange there hasn't been anything in the papers about it! Probably the government had decided such news was "against public policy," as tending to unsettle the people.

Suppose the unemployed rose in an ugly riot, wrecking relief stations and were quelled bloody by police. There might not be a syllable in the papers about it, for the government probably would regard such news as "against public policy."

If it took place in your own city, there would be rumors all over town, but very possibly nothing definite in the papers. If it were out of town, you probably would hear nothing. The great Pennsylvania steel strike might be eliminated from a government influenced press, as tending to "rock the boat."

And, needless to say, no free discussion of the issues involved would appear. The mere distribution of circulars or political pamphlets except perhaps by the government, would be forbidden.

In fact, such a suppression is being attempted right now in New Jersey.

That is how the freedom of the press affects every person, for it is simply freedom to publish and does not apply to newspapers alone, but to any man. It shows you what blind Milton meant when he addressed the British parliament in a great speech, "Believe, Lords and Commons, they who counsel ye to such a suppression, do as good as bid ye suppress yourselves."

All those suggestions of what might happen here if the "right of free press were suppressed or restricted is no idle dream. More than half the people of Europe live under conditions resembling that.

It is a disappalling chapter in a story that is centuries old.

When Gutenberg made practical the process of printing from movable types, mankind faced a brand new problem. How to handle a situation where man's thought might be frozen in ink and spread quickly and cheaply among untold millions, instead of confined to a few laboriously written manuscripts in the libraries of the rich or the cloisters of the monks?

The first device to control this new force was licensing. The thought immediately came: "No one shall be allowed to print and spread ideas unless they be 'proprietor' ideas that is, ideas approved by the government."

At first, most of the printing being church work, the church assumed supervision over what should be printed. Then in the England of 1534, nearly 400 years ago, the Stationers' Co. received a royal charter.

This was an organization of the printing and publishing trades in London, something like the trade associations now being organized under N.R.A.

The purpose apparently was to organize publishers in such a way as to make them promptly available for censorship activities of the king, though it had also the usual "advancement of the trade" objective of all trade associations.

Church and state worked hand in hand approving printed material offered to the public.

Then, in 1641, the Long Parliament enacted a law that "no book, pamphlet, or paper hereafter shall be printed unless the same be first approved and licensed by censors." Champions of freedom, like the poet Milton fought this tyranny for 50 years.

Harsh punishments for all who dared to print unapproved material were common, the pillory, the stocks, tongue-sittings, cutting off of ears, and hangings.

But after 50 years the law languished, and Macaulay said, "The greatest blow for freedom then was struck."

McLucas Suggests Gift For School Children

Cochs Leonard McLucas, who believes that he will have one of his best Seminole High School basketball teams this year, stated this morning that in his opinion, one of the most appreciated Christmas presents that a father or mother could give to a son or a daughter is a season ticket for the 10 home games.

Special low prices are being asked for the tickets this season, he said. Admission for single games is 25 cents and 40 cents, he said, but if tickets are purchased in advance a student ticket for 10 games can be had for $1, while an adult ticket for all the home games can be had for $2.

Because they will be rewarded in comparison to the number of tickets they sell, boy and girl members of the four classes of the school this week are staging a vigorous season ticket selling campaign.

The season of 20 games, 10 at home and 10 on the road, will open at the school auditorium on Friday night, Jan. 5, when the strong St. Augustine quintet comes here for a game. Seminole High will play at Daytona Beach on the following night.

Golf Tourney Will Be Staged At Local Club

Qualifying rounds for the first of a series of handicap golf tournaments which are to be staged over the Sanford Country Club course this winter, are to get underway tomorrow, according to Andrew M. Carraway, manager of the course.

The tournament itself is scheduled to be played during next week end, with the Sanford Herald trophy as the prize. Qualifying rounds may be played any time after tomorrow morning, Mr. Carraway stated, and there is no entry fee. All golfers in the county, professional or amateur, resident or visiting, are invited to participate in this and in other tournaments.

Chicago Colonists Are Visitors To Sanford

Christmas shoppers in Sanford this week included C. A. Edwards, retired printer, and Thomas Hartley, retired plasterer, members of the rapidly growing Neighbor Guild near Lake Ashby on the Sanford-New Smyrna highway.

These newcomers to Florida were in the city purchasing building supplies. While here, they reported that almost the entire colony of nearly 50 persons considers this city as an ideal shopping center although it is about 20 miles away from the colony.

Many local merchants have become acquainted with these Chicago colonists, they stated, and profitable connections have been made.

The Neighbor Guild colony idea was originated in Chicago some years ago, but only during the past year has active colonization been under way. Fourteen families now are living in attractive log and wooden homes where they are said to be enjoying a respite from rigorous climatic conditions as well as from economic worries.

Feathers, Crawford Named On Walter Camp's Annual All-American Grid Team

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Selected by Walter Camp, All-American football team, which is a perpetuation of the original All-American selected by Walter Camp, were announced today. The players chosen were:

Quarterback: Pittsburg; Running Back: Minnesota; Fullback: Michigan; End: Duke; Tackle: Stanford; Offensive Line: California; Defensive Line: Michigan; Linebacker: Warburton, So. California; Safety: Purvis, Purdue; Kicker: Baker, Nebraska.

The awarding of the Walter Camp grid football to these men, the league decided that "for the first time in many years the team represents a logical selection that is fairly balanced, to say the least, considering the full record of every candidate."

The closest battle was in the quarterback position, where three candidates ran neck and neck for the job. At almost every step of the judges were practically unanimous. Of the also-rans, Schmalz at Miami, Coyne at Kentucky, Land at halfback, Smith and Geller at ends figured closest to the first nomination than any others.

The completed team has players from nine colleges, Michigan and Stanford, California have two players each, and the Eastern division is represented only by Purvis of the Midwest, and the Pacific 3, and the West.

Walter Camp would probably be in his grave at the knowledge that the Eastern colleges which have practically disappeared from the football scene in this year, the All-American record. Princeton, deep in the abyss two years ago, was the lone team of the East to appear with a player on the record. It was never supposed to meet any stronger opposition, with the exception of the Pacific 3, and the West.

strong western or southern teams, Princeton cannot claim any mythical championship, as the Eastern area was far below normal strength.

In the general appraisal of the year's results, the judges say: "The season of 1933 was a golden autumn for defensive football. The defense, on general average, carried too many fangs for the attack."

"Schedule makers threw teams of equal class together; for the greater part, set-ups and push-overs were eliminated. As a result, football set a new record for close, low-score and no-score games."

"For example, Stanford, picked to represent the Far West in the Rose Bowl, scored only 20 points in six of its leading games—an average of only five points to the game. Minnesota scored only 24 points in six games. Notre Dame was blanked 6 times, while Northwestern suffered seven Saturdays of scoreless sorrow. Little Centenary, with one of the best teams in the Southwest, ran across three scoreless ties in a row."

"In the Western Conference no team could clear the path. Michigan and Minnesota remained unbeaten, but Michigan was tied and barely got by Illinois after one of the finest four-year records any team has ever had. Minnesota ran into four drawn contests."

"In the Pacific Coast conference Stanford and Oregon, twin champions, each suffered one defeat. Even Southern California's powerful team was beaten and tied."

"The battle in the South left Alabama and Tennessee as the two leading teams, capable of facing anything in the country with an even chance to win."

"Most thrilling melodrama of the year was Notre Dame vs. West Point, when in the closing 14 minutes Notre Dame scored 13 points. The fine play of a strong Nebraska team, champions of the Big Six, was another leading chapter of the campaign."

Second and third teams were selected this year by the judges for the first time in several years. These selections follow:

division, was given an official draw with Bob Godwin, 176, of Daytona Beach, Fla., and Adel, Ga. in a non-titular bout at the Dixie arena here last night, but fans who filled the ring with cushions and newspapers at the ringside thought that Christmas had come early for Maxie.

Two newspaper score sheets gave Godwin five of the ten rounds and Maxie only one, with the rest even.

It was Godwin's fifth fight with the champion. In a title bout last Spring, Rosenbloom won on a technical knockout.
