Tighter Security At County Jail Exercise Yard Sought

By VICTOR ASSERSON
Herald Staff Writer

Tighter security has been called for at the Seminole County Correctional Facility to stop prisoners from escaping. The request for more security at the jail exercise yard has been made to county commissioners by Sheriff John Polk and newly appointed jail Administrator Jim Schultz.

Three prisoners have escaped from the exercise yard. The last escape was on Dec. 10 when Harold Lee Tanner, who was being held on armed robbery charges and considered dangerous, scaled the walls of the recreational building, grabbed onto a security camera mounting, ran over the roof, dropped to the ground and shinned up a 15-foot-high fence, dropping to freedom on the other side.

Tanner was captured three days later at the MacAllister Motel in Sanford.

A similar method of escape from the exercise yard was made by two prisoners last July. Robert Hayter and Robert Dule used a cloth rope to scale a 20-foot-high wall and then dropped down by the perimeter fence before climbing it and dropping outside the jail. Both were captured shortly after their escape.

Since the December escape, two jail guards must now be on duty watching the prisoners during their exercise. One guard keeps an eye on prisoners in the exercise yard and the other looks after the prisoners who prefer to stay in the recreational area inside the building.

There are 240 prisoners housed at the jail, which is staffed around the clock by about 50 officers. It is not always possible to have two guards supervising exercise periods, Schultz said.

"At any time they (prisoners) go out under the present circumstances there is always a risk that one of the prisoners will find a way to get out. All we need is a security screen to prevent an individual from being boosted up on the shoulders of one of his fellows, dropping down the other side and getting away," Schultz said.

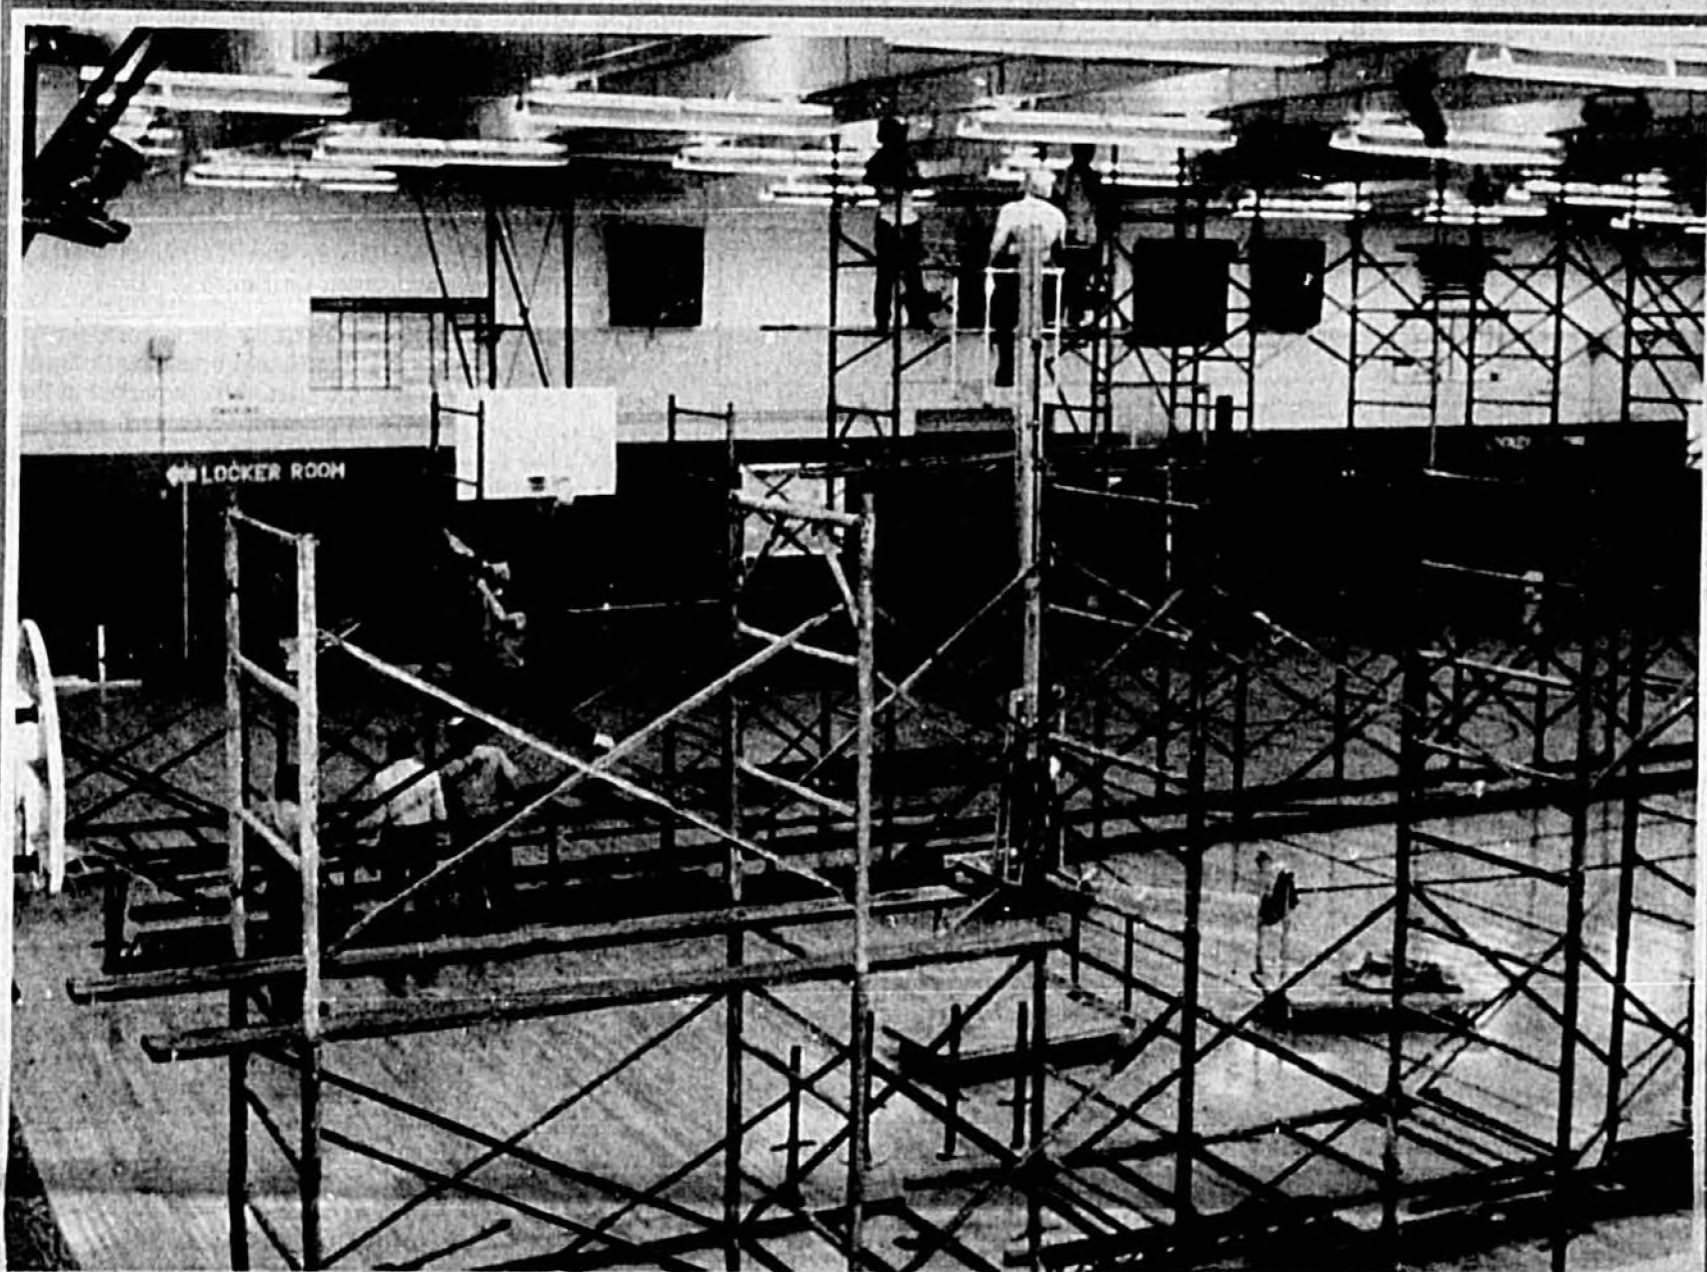

The state requires counties to permit prisoners at least two hours of exercise a week. To provide at least two officers each time the exercise yard is used by 15 to 20 prisoners has a "crippling effect" on the staffing of the jail, Schultz said.

"They are not quite getting the two hours because we haven't the manpower," he added.

He agrees with Polk, who put the request for tighter security to county commissioners, that the entire exercise yard be enclosed to seal it off from the sides of the surrounding buildings to stop prisoners from scaling the walls. Another alternative is to put wire stands around the top of each building or install a mesh screen over the whole exercise yard.

County Administrator T. Duncan Rose III has requested cost estimates be calculated for each alternative.

Polk also has asked the county commissioners to consider the cost of paving the dirt exercise yard to keep the jail cleaner.

Maintenance workers at Lyman High School in Longwood erect beams to support the gymnasium roof. A leak was discovered in the roof on Sunday, forcing school officials to close the gym. The gym was flooded after the weekend's heavy rains and the floor received minor damage. Assistant Superintendent for Facilities Benny Arnold said it will be several weeks before an investigation into what caused the leak is completed.

Lyman Gym Leaking, Closed

Lyman High School's gymnasium has been closed all week because of a leak in the roof which allowed water to flood the gym floor.

Flashing on a parapet tore loose during the weekend storms, allowing water to run through the roof into the gym, according to Assistant Superintendent of Facilities Benny Arnold.

Ed Buckner, Lyman athletic director, said the leak in the roof was first noticed following the heavy rains which occurred last weekend. Several inches of water covered portions of the floor of the Longwood school when the leak was discovered Sunday.

The problem was caused by "a deterioration of the roof materials," Buckner said.

Pumps have been placed on the roof to pump any water which builds up, Arnold said. School maintenance crews have also constructed scaffolding to support sagging beams in the gym.

School Superintendent Robert Hughes said district officials have been meeting with engineers and architects to determine the severity of the problem.

"We have a serious problem," Hughes said. "We're trying to determine who's at fault."

The roof had been on the gymnasium for about 15 years, Hughes said. However, he hopes an investigation of the incident will determine if the accident was the result of any negligence of the architect or contractor.

An engineer from the state Department of Education came to the school Monday to examine the situation, Hughes said.

Arnold said a preliminary report would be prepared for Wednesday's school board meeting but "it will be a couple of weeks before we know anything."

Meanwhile, the state high school athletic association is looking for a site to replace Lyman as the host of the state wrestling tournament. Buckner said he has notified state officials of the situation at Lyman and they are looking for alternate sites for the Feb. 26-27 event.

The gym floor buckled in several places, Hughes said, but damage to the floor was minor. Gym classes normally being held in the building are being conducted in an auxiliary gym.

Lake Mary To Sue Law Violators

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Faced with being unable to enforce city laws through the criminal process because State Attorney Douglas Cheshire's office must concentrate the efforts of his office on felony prosecutions, the City Commission of Lake Mary is looking for help through the civil process.

City Commissioner Charles Lytle asked City Manager Phil Kulbes Thursday night to make up a list of city residents who are accused of violating city laws, but refuse to correct the situations.

In only one category alone, two residents who have mobile homes parked in residential areas in violation of a city ordinance were zeroed in on.

Just two weeks ago, however, despite the city's inability to prosecute violators of junk cars, zoning, public nuisances and similar ordinances, the City Commission declined to name a code enforcement board.

The creation of code enforcement boards is the method allowed under state law to replace the old municipal court system.

In refusing to act on Kulbes' recommendation that a code enforcement board be appointed, Commissioner Burt Perinichief summed up the prevailing thought on the commission that naming the special board would create another bureaucracy.

City Attorney Robert Petree said that while city government depends on voluntary compliance with city laws, the city is not powerless to have laws enforced. "You can go to court to have laws enforced," Petree said, through the civil process.

Lytle said he would like to see that done, asking that Kulbes prepare a list.

In other business, the Commission appointed City Clerk Connie Major the city's legislative liaison.

Kulbes told the Commission that legislators whose districts include Lake Mary — state Rep. Art Grindle, R-Altamonte Springs, and Sen. Richard Langley, R-Clermont — asked the cities to each name a specific individual through whom they can funnel information on proposed laws to the city government.

The Commission also unanimously agreed to waive subdivision requirements and grant preliminary approval for a proposed three house subdivision on a .835 acre parcel, dubbed Lake Emma Cove, off Rinschart Road, on Pine Tree Circle Drive. The action was taken on the request of developer, Sanford Butler.

The Commission's waiver means that Butler won't have to pave the street, install street lights and sidewalks or connect the property to the city water system.

Butler in seeking the waiver said that the road is an unimproved one-way, one lane street in a heavily wooded area and the residents already there do not wish the road paved, preferring to retain the rural atmosphere.

Some To Close For Presidents Day Monday

The banks and post offices will be closed Monday for President's Day as will the Seminole County courthouse and annexes and the city halls in Casselberry and Winter Springs.

Schools will remain open as will the city halls in Lake Mary, Sanford, Longwood, Altamonte Springs and Oviedo.

Monday is the nationwide observance of the birthdays of Presidents George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Free Trees A Tradition

"It has become a lot of fun," said Allan Greene of his real estate firm's annual distribution of free seedling trees.

"It's like a class reunion with many of the same people coming back each year and reporting on what the trees they got from us are doing," he added.

The distribution of the young trees each year has become a tradition. This is the 13th year Forrest Greene, Inc., realtors, purchased seedlings from the state. Over the years, 29,000 of the trees have been given away.

Bad weather kept many people away Wednesday so not all of the 2,000 live oak and dogwood seedlings were given away. Distribution was extended to Thursday.

"Initially, the tree project was proposed to the Orlando-Winter Park Board of Realtors. But when they didn't carry through with it, we picked it up," Greene said. "At that time developers were flattening trees with bulldozers and we thought a tree on a lot added to its value.

They have also supplied trees to beautify Trinity Prep School and Lyman High School campuses.

Sanford To Gain Hidden Lake Park

The city of Sanford will be adding another 12 acres to its existing 111 Acres of parklands when Residential Communities of America (RCA), developers of Hidden Lake subdivision, deeds to the city the property Sanford law requires for parkland development.

City law requires developers to give the city land, according to how big its development is, or to donate the cash value of its proportionate share for parks.

Jim Jernigan, Sanford's director of parks and recreation, said he expects RCA to donate the land in about six months. Among the things RCA must do before deeding the property, Jernigan said, is to fill in holes and level the tract.

The 12-acre tract will be one of the city's key park areas in the southwest section of the city, Jernigan said, noting its ultimate development will probably be for an activity and natural park combined.

The northeastern boundary of the tract is directly behind Joe Creamons Chevrolet dealership, Jernigan said. The park will run about 1,000 feet due south behind the Movieland Drive-In and will be bounded on the west by Hidden Lake.

The entry will most likely be from the Hidden Lake side with no public access from U.S. Highway 17-92, he said. The city has no money in its current budget to develop the park.

The Hidden Lake park (its name hasn't officially been designated yet) will be the 22nd usable park within the city of Sanford. The largest park in the city is Ft. Mellon Park with 24 1/2 acres in the downtown area.

Development of the city's 21st park, the Marshall Avenue Park, is expected to be completed by October, Jernigan said.

Pickle, Pepper And SS Pensions

At 82, Rep. Claude Pepper can claim the wisdom that comes with age and experience. He should be able to distinguish, then, between the firm defense of a principle and sheer stubbornness.

We see the latter in Pepper's unalterable opposition to any change in the age at which workers become eligible for Social Security retirement benefits. One of the proposals to put Social Security on a more sound financial footing is to increase the retirement age from the present 65 to 66 by the year 2015.

Pepper considers this to be a cut in benefits, and says he will oppose the entire package of Social Security reforms now before Congress if it is included. The threat could be serious because Pepper is chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee and could be in a position to scuttle the reform effort.

Rep. J.J. Pickle of Texas, whose wisdom at age 69 may rival that of Pepper's, says an increase in the retirement age is inevitable if Social Security is going to be kept solvent, and anyone looking at the issue with perspective would have to agree.

One of the reasons for the long-term problem in Social Security financing is that Americans are living longer. They can be expected to draw retirement benefits for a greater number of years than was the case when eligibility for full benefits was fixed at age 65 and for early retirement benefits at age 62. If present trends in longevity continue, persons retiring at age 68 in the year 2000 could expect to enjoy as many years in retirement as persons who retired at age 65 in 1960.

This underlies the argument that a gradual increase in the retirement age pegged to increased longevity would not be unfair to anyone.

The proposal coming out of the President's Social Security Reform Commission would leave the retirement age at 65 until the year 2003.

It would then be increased by one month each year for the next 12 years until it reached 66 in 2015.

A change occurring so far in the future could hardly be disconcerting to anyone making retirement plans today.

But Pepper thinks the retirement age of 65 is sacrosanct, as though chiseled on stone by some prophet of yore.

In truth, it seems to have been picked by Prince Otto von Bismarck when the German Social Security system set up its retirement program in 1889, and it was arbitrarily adopted from that model when the U.S. program was created in 1935.

As we near the end of the 20th century, what age is appropriate for Social Security retirement has been made debatable by changes in lifestyle, by medical technology, and by greater understanding of the process of aging.

That is exactly the point Pepper chooses to ignore.

His insistence on excluding the retirement age from the reform agenda is shortsighted at best and obstructionist at worst.

Indeed, if reforms of this nature cannot be considered, Social Security may not make it into the 21st century.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Hil I'm awkward and insecure. They say that turns some women on!"

By DONNA ESTES

State Sen. Richard Langley, R-Clermont, has introduced a bill in the Florida Senate to impose an additional excise tax on alcoholic beverages.

The extra revenue from the sale of beer, wine, and liquor would be placed in a county jail fund. The money in the trust fund would be used exclusively for constructing, equipping, operating and maintaining county jails and correctional facilities.

Langley said by a small increase of one cent per can of beer, 10 cents per quart of wine and 20 cents per quart of hard liquor, some $55 million could be raised each year.

He said all the money in the county jail trust fund would be apportioned annually to the department of revenue for distribution to the counties. The Department would then distribute money to each county according to the proportion that the population of the county bears to the population of the state, as determined from the annual population estimate of the executive office of the governor.

If passed by the legislature during its coming session in April and May, the law would become effective on Oct. 1, 1983.

Jim York, chief counsel of the Florida Sheriffs' Association, suggested at a meeting of law enforcement officials of Central Florida last week, that the legislature raise taxes on alcoholic beverages to solve the problem of funding additional state prisons.

York said at the time that no one who likes good scotch would object to paying a nickel or more per bottle for prisons. He also noted that 85 to 90 percent of all crimes are related to alcohol in some fashion.

The word being talked up among local Democrats is that Troy Piland, erstwhile mayor of Winter Springs and unsuccessful candidate for a legislative seat last year, may be called upon to replace Bill Wack as Democratic committeeman from Seminole County.

Wack had more than a year to run in his term when he submitted his resignation to take over beginning March 1 the chairmanship of the presidential campaign of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif. in three New England states.

Wack is to be in charge of Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut in the Cranston bid for the Democratic nomination for president in 1984.

The California senator certainly made a lot of Seminole County friends when he was guest speaker in October for the Democratic banquet in Altamonte Springs.

Few doubted that Piland was going to win election to the Florida House in November. He had support from Democrats and Republicans alike and from persons in leadership roles from the county, the Central Florida area, the Florida League of Cities clear to the lower house of the legislature.

All that the man who ended up the victor in the contest, Carl Selph, had was support from people and he worked hard beating on doors to gather that support together in actual turnout at the poll.

Windy Chicago Battle

CHICAGO (NEA)—Presidents, senators and governors come and go without causing much of a stir within Chicago's political machine. To the machine, the most critical political office is that of Chicago mayor, since the mayor controls the thousands of patronage jobs that form the machine's power base. Chicago will elect a new mayor this year. The city hasn't elected a Republican in 59 years, nor will it now—and so the election that counts is the Democratic primary scheduled for Feb. 22.

Not since the 1932 election of Anton Cermak has Chicago had so wide-open a mayoral election, and for sheer drama, few modern political contests can match this one.

Chicago's late Richard M. Daley was the archetypal big-city political boss for more than two decades. During his six terms as mayor, the Democratic machine's control was almost absolute.

The machine hasn't fared that well since Daley's death in 1976. His almost-hand-picked successor, Michael Blandie, won the special election to succeed him in 1977. However, in 1979, he was upset by an "outsider"—the theatrical and flamboyant Jane Byrne.

The marriage of Byrne and the machine hasn't been completely happy. Byrne controls the machine, but has never been able to win its heart. Now Byrne is running for a second term, and her opponent is none other than Richard M. Daley—who thinks it's about time that he lay claim to what he sees as his rightful political heritage.

For 40-year-old Richie Daley, the contest is more than a simple electoral battle; it's a vindication of his father's name, which Jane Byrne has not held in very high esteem during her four years as mayor.

This election has had an almost-schizophrenic effect on the machine. Byrne has an abrasive personality and isn't personally liked by many of the city's 50 Democratic ward committeemen—but they owe their jobs to her and therefore their loyalty.

But the Daley name has an almost magnetic pull for Democratic politicians, and many of those ward committeemen have known Richie Daley since he was a boy. They see him as one of them, while—although she sounds and acts like a political boss—Jane Byrne is an outsider.

When the ward committeemen met in November to select a slate of primary candidates, Mayor Byrne was the only candidate proposed for the mayoral post. Thirty-three of the ward committeemen endorsed her, but the support of some appears to be lukewarm at best.

This election is extremely difficult to handicap because it isn't simply a two-person contest: Rep. Harold Washington, a popular black congressman, also has thrown his hat into the ring. Washington hopes that Byrne and Daley will split the white vote, while the black vote will be solidly behind him.

Daley says he wants to bring "stability" back to the mayor's office. "Jayne Byrne hires and fires by whim," he says. "The people of Chicago deserve more."

Unreliable Test Wrecks Careers

WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Economy Better

NEW YORK (NEA)—The official unemployment figures for January are out, and they signal, unmistakably, that the current recession is drawing toward its close. For that very reason, they also herald the opening of a new stage in the continuing battle between President Reagan and the liberal media: the struggle to conceal, or at least minimize, the fact of recovery.

The downturn in unemployment is remarkably sharp, however you want to look at it. In December, unemployment stood at 10.8 percent. In January, measured in the same way, it was down to 10.4 percent—nearly half a percentage point. The Bureau of Labor Statistics says it was actually even lower: 10.2 percent. But the bureau arrived at this latter figure by counting the personnel of the armed forces as members of the work force, reasoning (logically enough) that when military service is voluntary, as it is today, it ought to count as a job like any other. Whether you count military personnel as among the employed or not, however, the decline in unemployment from December to January is both real and significant.

Unemployment is a notoriously lagging economic indicator, slow to rise at the start of a recession and slow to fall when it ends, and in this case it lived up fully to its reputation. Housing starts and auto sales have been headed upward for months; the combined index of leading economic indicators rose steadily through almost all of the latter half of 1982. But unemployment still squatted there, ugly and all too visible, like some unwanted visitor in a home already hungry. Now he has risen to go, and it is cause for rejoicing.

More precisely, it is cause for rejoicing among all save those who have a vested interest in the continuation of the recession. I do not suggest for a moment that either the Democrats or the liberal media actually want the recession to continue. But its existence has been a major political inconvenience for Mr. Reagan, and his opponents would be less than human if they were not reluctant to concede that it is ebbing at last. There are always various ways of looking at these things, and you can just about count on the Democratic politicians and the Washington press corps to look on the economic upturn of 1983 with a searching and skeptical eye.

Take the media, for starters. In 1981, when Mr. Reagan was pushing his budget through Congress, it was a rare evening when the television news programs failed to interview some quiver-lipped little old black lady on how she would enjoy starving to death when the Reagan budget cuts went into effect. In 1982, real events always being preferable to hypothetical ones, media attention shifted to the rising numbers of the unemployed, and we saw yard after yard of footage in which laid-off workers berated Mr. Reagan and swore they would never vote for him again, or futilely scanned the classified pages, or lined up at the unemployment office for the compensation checks.

Do not, however, in 1983, expect to see many TV shots of workers reporting to their jobs again. There will be pockets of poverty aplenty for many months to come, and we can count on the media to find them and make the most of them. Soon we'll be hearing: "Unemployment may be down in the country as a whole, but here in the Wyoming panhandle, where laborers from all over America had assembled in the hope of finding work on the Dense Pack missile project, unemployment is at a record high and Ronald Reagan's name is still mud."

The Democratic Party, with less need to pose as objective, can be expected to play even harder hardball. As the economy recovers, tax revenues will increase and those horrible deficit "projections" will begin to be seen as the chimeras they always were. That's when Messrs. Reagan, O'Neill, Dole et al. will get down to the nitty-gritty. Do those extra revenues get applied to reducing deficit, or do we simply spend them on federal programs—always worthy ones, mind you—that Mr. Reagan trimmed or eliminated? O'Neill, who is bent on spending our way out of this recession will be very reluctant indeed to admit it's over.

SCIENCE WORLD

Salt Taste Changing

NEW YORK (UPI)—A low sodium diet, it turns out, eventually tricks or retrains the taste buds, according to researchers at the University of Pennsylvania.

As a result—and despite the difficulty at the start of such a diet—salty foods after a while come across as less appealing.

The report in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition is based on a taste study by scientists at the university's Monell Chemical Senses Center.

The researchers said their study supports impressions from physicians and low-sodium dieters. They said also that it contradicts earlier experimental studies which contended that sodium restriction must inevitably produce craving for salt.

The backdrop, as sketched in the report:

Sodium balance in an organism is influenced by many factors, including disease, diet and hormonal state. In many animal species, sodium loss triggers salt intake. When laboratory animals, for example, are made sodium deficient, they increase their intake of salt solutions. They even accept strong salt solutions previously avoided.

People also show altered taste and increased salt intake after sodium depletion, research evidence suggests. Even moderate decreases in sodium ingestion for 24 hours is supposed to induce a heightened liking for salty soups.

These reports on clinical studies contrast with what is called anecdotal evidence—clinical impressions of doctors and self-reports from patients on low sodium diets.

The anecdotal evidence suggests that as a result of restricting sodium intake, people come to prefer less salty food, the Pennsylvania scientists said.

During their research, the investigators tried to resolve these contradictory reports.

They theorized that if the taste buds, indeed, work against people on low sodium diets, then some method must be found to circumvent the taste changes.

The battle with salt goes on because excessive salt intake has been traced to high blood pressure in susceptible persons.

The Pennsylvania scientists tested taste responses to salt in young adults put on low-sodium diets for five months. They recorded taste responses to salt in soups, crackers, and solutions during a two-month pre-experiment period and during the five-month low salt period.

Taste responses also were recorded among adults in a control group. They consumed a regular diet during the study period.

The researchers found the perceived intensity of salt in crackers went up in the low salt group. Salt concentrations of maximum pleasantness in soup and crackers fell in the low-salt but not in the control groups.

Said another way: the low-sodium dieters became more sensitive to the taste of salt and began to prefer their food with less salt.

The Pennsylvania scientists believe taste changes go through two phases when people are on low sodium diets.

EMIT has acknowledged that 5 percent of the test results are deceptive. Medical experts told my reporter Don Corrigan the range of error is much higher than that.

Dr. Richard Hawks, chief of research at the National Institute on Drug Abuse, said it is totally unacceptable to use EMIT results as a basis for disciplinary action without corroborating data. Official Pentagon policy requires confirmation by more reliable testing. But that policy is violated regularly.

All across the country, service personnel and civilians are being fired or otherwise punished for flunking EMIT tests.

Insect, Disease Control In Home Vegetable Plots

In order to ensure a nice supply of fresh vegetables from your home garden, insects and diseases must be controlled. A suggested general purpose spray for insects of vegetables is one containing malathion or diazinon plus Sevin or methoxychlor. A suggested general-purpose spray for diseases of vegetables would contain one or more of the following fungicides: zineb, maneb, captan, daconil or copper.

For powdery mildew on cucumbers, squash, and melons, use Karathane. Many ready prepared general-purpose dusts and sprays are commercially available. Apply according to recommendations and precautions on the label.

Begin control efforts early. Apply fungicides at weekly intervals as a preventive measure. For insects, dust or spray at Most Florida soils contain parasitic plant nematodes. For most vegetables these soils should be fumigated. Fumigants are usually applied from two to three weeks prior to planting, depending on the nematicide that is used. Consider all pesticides as potential poisons. They should be applied strictly according to manufacturers' precautions and recommendations. Always wash vegetables from the garden thoroughly before using. Use pesticides only as necessary to control insects and diseases and stop applications during the harvesting season.

Wife: Enough Is Enough Of Husband Helping Widow

DEAR ABBY: Four months ago my husband and I lost a very good friend and neighbor. Naturally we offered our condolences and help to this man's widow, who happens to be a very attractive woman about my age (middle 60s). Now my husband gets calls quite often. Her faucet is dripping, her furnace is making a noise, her storm window needs fixing, etc.

His last visit to her house lasted 44 minutes. And there's always a freshly baked apple pie waiting for him over there. (His favorite.)

Tomorrow he is taking her to the dentist! That's where I put my foot down. But he said he had already promised to take her, so off they went. Of course, this is only the first of three appointments. Another neighbor made a little joke about how attentive my husband has been to this widow. I laughed it off, but I was burning up inside.

What now? I feel better just putting this down on paper.

GOOD OLD JANE

DEAR JANE: Don't be too "good" or you'll be old before your time, Jane. Tell your helpful hubby that the neighbors are talking and enough is enough already. Then go along for the ride. And while you're sitting between them, get Jane's recipe for the apple pie. Three may be a crowd, but there's safety in numbers.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but here goes: I am dating a younger man I'll call Jimmy. I am deeply in love with him. The problem is that there is this girl at work who is after him. (Let's call her Shirley.) Shirley is married, but she wants to have Jimmy's baby. She says she isn't in love with him, but her husband has a low sperm count and they can't seem to have a baby, which they want very much.

Jimmy tells me that he doesn't want to lose me but he would like to accommodate Shirley. He says he doesn't love her the way he loves me, but they have necked in his car a few times.

This hurts me, Abby, because Jimmy and I have talked about marriage and I was counting on maybe having a spring wedding.

Please tell me what to do.

JUST ABOUT HAD IT

DEAR JUST: You don't say how "young" Jimmy is, but he sounds immature and naive. A man who would consider fathering a child as an accommodation is not ready for marriage. And the fact that he and Shirley have necked in his car a few times indicates that he has more than a casual interest in her. Wise up, and say goodbye to Jimmy.

DEAR ABBY: I recently read a verse in the letters to the editor column in the Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator.

I don't know whether it's original, but I think it's worth passing on. I hope you agree.

NEWCASTLE READER

DEAR READER: I do. And here it is:

IT ISN'T THE CAR,
IT'S THE DRIVER

"Sir: It isn't the car that begins to whine when forced to stop for an old stop sign — it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that takes a drink, then quickly loses its power to think — it's the driver.

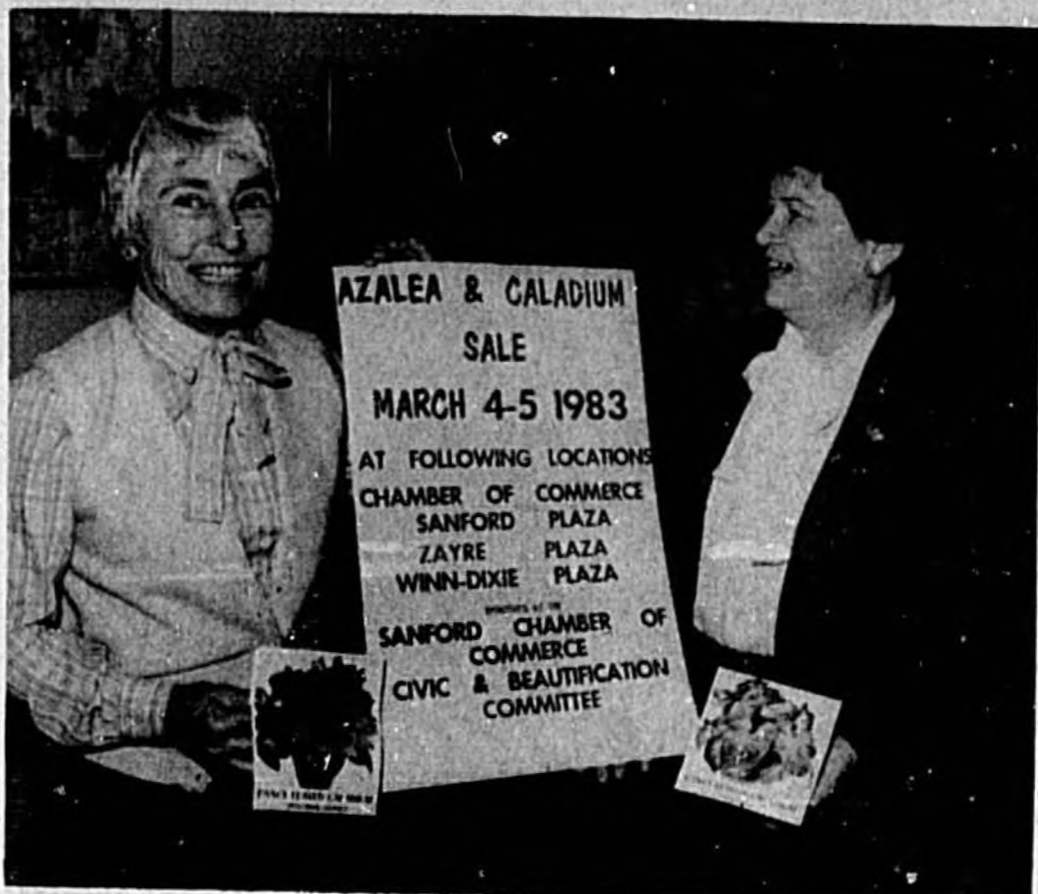

"It isn't the car that fails to heed the dangers of reckless, discourteous speed — it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that steps on the gas and causes an accident trying to pass — it's the driver.

"A car may be bent and twisted awry, but it isn't the car that will have to die — it's the driver."

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Diet Pills Can Do More Bad Than Good

DEAR DR. LAMB — I recently started taking diet pills to help lose weight. I am 15 years old and in good health. My problem is that instead of feeling peppy and energetic I always feel exhausted and light-headed. Is this a common reaction? Is it dangerous? The pills are time-release capsules containing phenylpropanolamine hydrochloride and caffeine.

DEAR READER — Throw those pills in the garbage can. Phenylpropanolamine hydrochloride has been implicated in causing high blood pressure. It is under review by the Food and Drug Administration and a number of companies that have marketed products that contain it have withdrawn their products from the market.

My general opinion is that people should not use diet pills of any type. Too often they contain harmful substances. Caffeine in diet pills is the same as caffeine in coffee. Too much can make you nervous and jittery, also lightheaded. Individuals who have a tendency to high blood pressure or other circulatory disorders should be particularly careful.

Another reason you could feel exhausted is from the diet itself. We get energy from our food. When we don't eat enough and don't really have a lot of body fat reserves we do get exhausted. Also inadequate food intake, particularly with some diet fads, leads to severe chemical changes in the body that are not healthy and can be dangerous.

A lot of young girls diet who should not. Being too thin can delay their normal sexual development and affect normal hormone functions.

I want you to very carefully read The Health Letter number 16-2, Dangerous Dieting, which I am sending you.

If you really need to diet it is best to follow a sensible balanced diet and lose weight very slowly. A good exercise program with a balanced diet is also important.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My work involves a lot of traveling and at times my suitcase is heavy. On my last trip I developed an excruciating pain in the bone of my right elbow, outer side. It was diagnosed as tennis elbow. It is not only the bone which is painful but the entire arm from elbow to the palm, so much so that it is painful to shake hands or grip and lift a light object. I have been advised to massage with ointment and use hot fomentation, which doesn't provide relief. What do you suggest?

DEAR READER — I am assuming the diagnosis is correct. You did not say if you play tennis or not but other strains can cause the same form of injury to the area where tendons attach to the side of the bone just below the elbow. In the classical form it involves the muscles that straighten the elbow as in the backhand stroke.

First, stop using that arm. Use passive stretching for full range of motion; local heat may aid the stretching. If you are a tennis player get some lessons from a pro to find out if you can improve your technique. Your doctor can give you some medicines to relieve the pain.

You might wear a brace, the wraparound band you see on tennis players' forearm to help prevent a shock to the elbow. Once you have tennis elbow you need regular attention by a physician while you recover.

The game was rubber bridge. South was Sam Stayman, retired businessman and still active bridge player.

He was slightly disturbed when his partner ignored the Stayman convention and went right to seven no-trump. However, the 21-point dummy was quite satisfactory even though there were only 12 top tricks.

It looked like about a 99 percent play for the grand slam, but Sam raised it to a sure thing.

He left the clubs alone except to discard dummy's four spot on his king of spades somewhere along the way to come down to a five-card ending. Dummy's last five cards were the ace of hearts and A-Q-10-9 of clubs. Sam's were the 10s of hearts and diamonds and K-6-5 of clubs.

East's last five cards were a small heart and four clubs, and Sam knew it.

How did he know it? East had discarded on the third spade and third diamond, so West had been dealt six spades and four diamonds. West had followed to two hearts. Twelve of his cards had been accounted for.

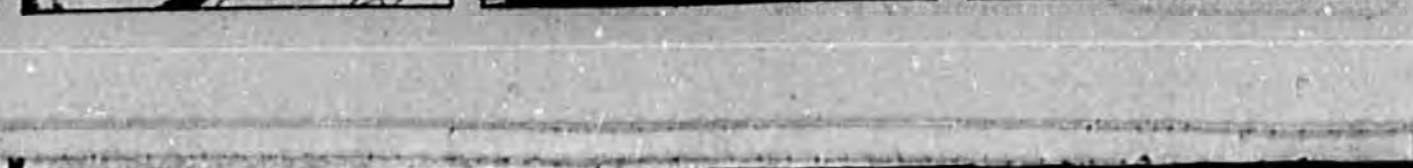

Sam led a club to dummy's ace and when West followed small, Sam led the 10 of clubs and let it ride with certainty of success. Then he took his king of clubs, got back to dummy with the last heart and made his 13th trick with the queen of clubs.

Dan Spangler, whose hobby is carving and woodworking, displays some of the miniature furniture he made for three dollhouses he constructed for his three granddaughters.

'Whittling Dan' Carves Up Dollhouses

By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald Staff Writer

A farm boy from the Centralia area of Illinois, Dan Spangler of Chuluota whittled his way around the world during his 20 years in the U.S. Navy as a heavy equipment operator, and that's pretty hard work. However, one of the toughest jobs he ever tackled began two months before Christmas, but it was a labor of love.

His love for working with wood is shared by daughter, Sharon Adams, who lives nearby in Chuluota. It was her suggestion that they build and furnish a doll house for the Barbie dolls belonging to her children, Mandy, 7, and Crystal, 4, for a Christmas gift. From there, the project began to grow. It was decided that each girl should have her own dollhouse. But to build doll houses for two of the granddaughters and not the third did not seem a very good idea, so 3½-year-old Jessie Holbin was added to the list.

Who Said 'Judy, Judy, Judy'?

DEAR DICK: My dad and I are having a disagreement about the person in a movie who said "Judy, Judy, Judy." Would you please tell me what actor it was, and in what movie? J.V.D., Kalamazoo, Mich.

It wasn't. Impersonators of Cary Grant have for years used that in their acts, but Grant says he never, ever uttered the line in any of his films. Nobody seems to know how it got started, but it did, and Grant is stuck with it.

DEAR DICK: My wife and daughter, among others, won't believe me when I say there used to be a popular singer named Matt Monroe. They say Vaughn Monroe, yes, but Matt, no. I thought he sang the theme from "To Russia with Love" but he wasn't listed on a recent repeat. Can you help? J.C., Joplin, Mo.

You are right, except for a small detail. He spells his name Munro, not Monroe. But he was a fine singer and, yes, he did sing the "From Russia with Love" theme in that film.

DEAR DICK: Could you help us, please? Is Robert Wagner of "Hart to Hart" any relation to country singer Mickey Gilley? And is Judd Hirsch, of "Taxi," any relation to Sid Caesar? K.W., Merrill, Mich.

None of the above are related to any of the above.

DEAR DICK: I say Tom Selleck was the Marlboro Man on the billboards. My husband says he was not. Which of us is right? E.V., Kirtland A.F.B., N.M.

This time, your husband wins. Selleck did some TV commercials early in his career, but he was not the Marlboro Man.

DEAR DICK: Is the beautiful woman who plays C.J. on "Matt Houston" the same one who played Princess Ardala in "Buck Rogers"? And, No. 2, I think I heard that Dudley Moore died. Did he? F.S., Albuquerque, N.M.

Yes and no. Yes, Pamela Hensley was Princess Ardala and is now C.J. but, no, Dudley Moore did not die.

Ask Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: I have been wondering about Martin Landau and his wife, Barbara Bain, since they did "Mission: Impossible" and "Space: 1999." What are they doing in the '80s? L.M.L., Juneau, Alaska

Working. They are both working actors, and they go wherever they can find jobs. They are also involved in a little theater group in Los Angeles. You will see them in movies and on TV shows here and there. It's a tough, competitive life for actors these days.

DEAR DICK: We have tried for months to find out what Burt Reynolds' name was when he played the blacksmith on "Gunsmoke." Can you help us, please? C.B., South Williamsport, Pa.

Yes. The character's name was Quint Asper.

DEAR DICK: What was the name of the Western series that Rory Calhoun was in? E.M.B., Miramar, Fla.

That was "The Texan," which ran on CBS from '58 to '60.

DEAR DICK: We see the name Whitney Blake as a producer on "One Day at a Time." What was the name of the series on which she played a mother? J.M., Hughesville, Pa.

Whitney Blake was a co-creator of "One Day at a Time," along with her husband, Al Manings. And, as an actress, she was part of the "Hazel" family, with Shirley Booth and Don DeFore.

...Whittler A Real Cutup

The houses were each 28 inches high, 36 inches long and 14 inches wide. Spangler and Mrs. Adams had no plans or patterns to go by so they had to develop the scale for all the furnishings as they went.

Spangler even made the shingles for the roofs, framed the windows, built cabinets, furniture in a different style for each house, and carved the tiniest details down to door knockers, lamps, and vases. For the bathrooms, he made the tub, sink and toilet, even the toilet paper holder and shower head.

Sharon, the only female graduate from Westside Vocational Training Center in Winter Garden, and an employee of a Sanford cabinet-making firm, helped make the furniture and put the shingles on the houses.

Various other family members pitched in to help with the painting and furnishings for the project which took two months to complete.

"It easily took 60-70 hours on each one," says Spangler.

"I would be working on the various pieces while watching TV or waiting in the school bus" which he drives for Geneva Elementary School.

Other family members lent a hand with the wallpapering and painting, and still others made bedspreads and curtains.

"We had at least $100 invested in materials," says Spangler. "We went with the most expensive spray dry varnish on the furniture," says Sharon, "and used 3-4 coats."

The five-room houses have two bedrooms, a bath, living room, and dining room-kitchen and are complete down to a minuscule mouse hiding under the bed, dishes and silverware on the table, and hairbrushes.

Keeping the project under wraps wasn't easy.

"We worked on it here and their moms would always call before they came so we could lock up what we were working on up in a spare bedroom, Mrs. Spangler says. "With everyone spending so much time on the project and not paying them much attention, the girls thought they were being neglected."

The job wasn't finished until Christmas Eve. On Christmas morning, after the other gifts were open three very surprised and happy little girls were lined up in front of their houses which were already for Ken and Barbie to move into.

Spangler began whittling and carving wood at the age of six when his father gave him his first pocket knife. Although he has other wood carving knives, he still prefers to make his intricate carvings with a small pocket knife using fir or white pine. "Hardwood is too much work," he says.

"His carvings are all around the world," says his wife, Jean. "He has never sold one, but just gave them away when people asked for them."

Harris Saves Play

By Cindy Adams
NEW YORK — London's critics didn't play nice with Richard Harris. After 10 weeks, his "Camelot" posted its closing notice. But Richard, who plays King Arthur, galloped to the rescue. He put in his own money to save the production and everyone's jobs. That king's a real prince... Marlo Thomas and Phil Donahue had sun, sea, sand and surf in Puerto Vallarta. But for $900 a day they didn't have silence. Their five-bedroom rented villa came with parrots and a cat. Marlo complained. The cat was boarded with another family. The parrots — who are probably talking about Marlo now — were also moved.

"Yoko Ono gave me 4 1/2 hours on tape," Steven Gaines, co-author of a Beatles biography, "The Love You Make," told me. "Yoko chain-smoked through our session. She'd take only a puff then stub it out. She'd line the butts up one by one. When I ground my own cigarette in her ashtray she carefully removed it. She put it in my ashtray."... Tatum O'Neal was in New York and saw "Little Shop of Horrors." She also saw Eunice and Sargent Shriver's son, Anthony.

Sheila MacRae is doing comedy with her daughter, Heather, singing and her son, Bruce, plinking the piano — they all open at the Inner Circle... "Goodnight Grampa" opens next month on Second Avenue. Heavy-duty magazines are planning profiles on its star, off-Broadway's newest kid on the block — Milton Berle... Debbie Reynolds and the ex, Eddie Fisher, open in New York on the same night. She's in "Woman of the Year." He's in a nightclub. Lotsa luck.

People once believed that if their palms itched they would receive money.

'Cheers' Not Bottoms Up

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Almost everyone in the media and most folks in Hollywood agree that the best weekly TV comedy to come along in years is "Cheers," the Boston bar-room sitcom.

But "Cheers" is in rating trouble, regularly mired deep in the ratings, a fact that astounds many critics and reviewers.

Why would a quality comedy, sharply written and brightly played by an attractive cast, find itself without a solid audience?

Any TV diagnostician would look immediately at its opposition programs, "Simon & Simon" and "It Takes Two." "Simon & Simon," a humorous detective show, is regularly in the top 15 or 20. "It Takes Two" does only slightly better than "Cheers."

Ergo, "Simon & Simon" is a definite factor. What is "Cheers" lead in? "Gimme A Break," a mindless, lowly rated sitcom with slightly higher ratings than "Cheers."

And what show follows "Cheers?" The most acclaimed series on the air, "Hill Street Blues," which has a healthy rating in and around the top 20.

Another factor is that "Cheers" is on NBC, which runs last in network ratings.

That "Cheers" is set in a tavern would not appear to be pertinent. The old "Duffy's Tavern" and "Archie Bunker's Place," apparently have not raised the ire of the blue nose crowd.

Why, then, especially in view of universal praise by critics, is "Cheers" not a big hit?

Producers Less and Glen Charles and producer-director James Burrows (all three formerly associated with "Taxi") are at a loss to understand why their series appeals to such a selective audience.

It is apparent that "Cheers" is watched by millions of viewers who seldom tune in to see anything else, a manifestation generally involving intellectual shows — especially dramas such as "The Paper Chase."

But "Cheers" is not a cerebral show. Neither does it rely on physical comedy, slapstick or the sophomoric. It is sophisticated to a degree, eliciting laughs from impeccably drawn characters and their interrelationships.

A piquant romance exists between the two leading characters, Sam "Mayday" Malone, an ex-baseball relief pitcher who owns the bar, and Diane Chambers, an overeducated would-be poetess reduced to working as a barmaid.

They are a delightfully attractive couple played by Ted Danson and Shelley Long, still at the flirting stage of their relationship.

The supporting cast of barflies and Malone's other employees, who provide a strong family feeling to the series, have captivated regular viewers of the show. The humor is gentle and charming and the dialogue bright and fast.

Danson, who has gained a following among the ladies for his macho appearance and bemused tolerance of his inept employees, believes "Cheers" will survive if given another year on the air.

"We'll find our audience," he said. "It's just a matter of time, of getting viewers to tune in a couple of times so they get to know us."

"I can't believe our show won't catch on. It's not a bad thing that we are enjoying word-of-mouth promotion. People who watch the show talk about it. They remember the dialogue and it doesn't insult anyone's intelligence. The characters are a caring bunch of people whose home away from home happens to be the bar. Hey, there are a heck of a lot of places where there is much of Mayday Malone in Danson, just as elements of Diane are present in Shelley Long. Both performers are married, and happily so, but they set off sparks on camera.

Danson is aware of their special magic, saying, "We come from totally different acting backgrounds, but something happens on Tuesday nights when we do the show for a live audience.

"It's difficult to describe, but there's flirting, one-upmanship, healthy competition and mutual trust. We absolutely relax and have fun. It isn't the same during rehearsals, but the performance chemistry is there.

"I like playing Sam. He's my first leading man role with sexual overtones. He's given me a new awareness of myself in that respect.

"Our cast has a genuine family feeling and I think that comes across on the screen. We work in a mutually protective atmosphere. We're all professionals and our work is very important to us. But we also share the desire to have fun.

"All we really want to do is share it with as many viewers as possible."

Kenyatta On 'Against The Odds'

By Andrew J. Edelstein
Nickelodeon has been marking Black History Month this February with several provocative programs.

On Sunday, "Against the Odds," the biography series hosted by Bill Bixby, tells the story of African statesman Jomo Kenyatta.

Vintage film clips and still photos are used to chronicle Kenyatta's life, beginning with his youth as a primitive Kikuyu tribesman in Kenya and following his struggle to lead his people to freedom.

For young viewers who are becoming aware, via the film "Gandhi," with the role that one man can play in shaping his country's history, Kenyatta's story, albeit briefly told here, is equally inspiring.

"Lincoln and Malcolm X," History Month, airs Thursday, Feb. 24 and profiles black nationalist leader Malcolm X.

The offices of Largen and Clonts, Surgical Associates, P.A., announce the addition of whose practice is limited to plastic and reconstructive surgery. Visits by appointment only. Telephone 323-2348, Lakeview Professional Center, Suite 1 and 2, 819 E. First St., Sanford.

The Frances Farmer Story

Frances Farmer's tragic life story is retold in "Will There Really Be a Morning?," airing Tuesday on CBS.

Susan Blakely stars in the drama, which is based on the autobiography of the Hollywood star of the '30s, Lee Grant, John Heard, Melanie Mayron and Royal Dano co-star.

The story follows Miss Farmer from her troubled childhood in Seattle, where the young Frances was caught between a dictatorial mother and an ineffectual father.

In college at the University of Washington, she first became interested in radical politics and acting — the latter turning into a successful career on Broadway and in Hollywood.

Gruesome Tales On 'Ripley's'

By David Handler
Here's your big chance to witness cannibals, kamikaze turtles, blindfolded bullfighters, giants, shark conjurers, Nepalese goddesses, Swiss boulder hurlers, Senegalese wrestlers, Texas rattlesnake sackers, Peruvian torture devices, Japanese mystic healing rites and, for you nostalgia buffs, a penny arcade museum in Greenwich, Conn.

This queer grab bag is, of course, "Ripley's Believe it or Not!" the ABC video update of the old Robert L. Ripley syndicated feature. A one-hour magazine made up of short features, nature films and historical reenactments — a "journey into the strange, the bizarre, the unexpected" — "Ripley's Believe it or Not!" may sound a bit like "That's Incredible!" but it isn't.

Palace as host. Blessed with a deliciously menacing grin, a cat-like purr of a voice and the world's creepiest set of cheekbones, Palance is one of the screen's most convincing heavies, going all the way back to "Shane" some 30 years ago.

Dogs growl at him, then run under a table to hide. He seems to have a great time ringleading this ghoulish cavalcade, playing it like he's telling you ghost stories around the campfire. He's perfect. You keep waiting for him to eat a live insect. What a guy.

Fashion model Catherine Shiff started out the season as Jack's supporting host and narrator, but has recently been replaced by Jack's own daughter, Holly, who is an actress and some kind of dish. Don't get me wrong, Jack. I mean that in a respectful way. She seems like a real nice kid. Well brought up. Holly handles most of the nature and travel films, leaving pop free to handle the good, creepy stuff. Like the Edgar Allen Poe short story about cannibalism at sea that actually took place in real life 50 years later in England. Same details. Even the name of the victim was the same.

"An incredible coincidence?" wonders Jack. "Or something else..."

Or the gory tidbit about public hangings held in New York City's Washington Square in the 1820s. Same tree is still there. "There are probably a million oddities in the Naked City..." smiles Jack.

Or the 1934 tale of the Sydney, Australia, aquarium shark that spit up the arm of a missing saloonkeeper. "One of the strangest cases of indigestion on record..." concludes Jack.

Or the 1840s Scotch physician who held the world's record for fastest amputation of a leg — this being before the era of anesthetics. "He once removed a leg in 25 seconds," Jack informs us, eyebrow raised, as he fondles the doctor's shiny, razor-sharp saw.

"Ripley's Believe it or Not!" tends to be a bit gruesome sometimes, maybe too gruesome for little kids. It did turn this reporter's stomach more than once. But it isn't as bothersome as "That's Incredible!" which sometimes seems to function as the "Let's Make a Deal" of the suicide prone. This is harmless fun.

For another, only "Ripley's Believe it or Not!" boasts the great Jack

SEARCH FOR FREEDOM

In honor of National Black History Month, NICKELODEON, The First Channel for Kids, premieres "Voice of the Fugitive," the tense odyssey of escaped slaves who make their way to freedom across the Canadian border in 1851. The show airs Feb. 27.

Jaclyn Raves About 'Rage Of Angels'

By Peter Meade

Of all the roles Jaclyn Smith has played, from "Charlie's Angels" to "Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy," to her latest in NBC's production of Sidney Sheldon's "Rage of Angels," the role she likes the most is that of mother to her infant son, Gaston Anthony Richmond.

Filming for the four-hour miniseries, which airs Sunday, Feb. 20 and Monday, Feb. 21, began just four months after his birth. However, the baby accompanied his mother to New York City for the filming of what Miss Smith refers to as "the best role I've gotten to do."

"This is not a character role with wigs and costumes," says Miss Smith, of her role as attorney Jennifer Parker.

"I was thankful for the Jackie O. role, although it wasn't critically acclaimed. It was an autobiographical sketch and I think it was a positive view of her life. I'm told they (the Kennedys) liked the movie and it was a step for me to do the character.

"This role is not built on just looks or image," says Miss Smith, "so it's a step up from the 'Charlie's Angels' days. Jennifer is very strong — that's what attracted me — and she's a survivor."

Miss Smith knows about surviving. She was the only one of "Charlie's Angels" to survive the show's 1978-81 tenure. Although she still lists 'Angel' alumnae Kate Jackson, Farrah Fawcett and Cheryl Ladd as friends, she disagrees with their individual exits from the show.

"I signed a contract and I upheld it," she explains. "I saw what it did to my friends, but I wanted to see it through. It wasn't right to leave."

Staying did mean turning down several big film offers, including the 1979 James Bond film "Moonraker," but the 34-year-old actress is now content that future roles will materialize because of her acting ability, not her good looks.

"Charlie's Angels" is an image to fight," she says. "I want to be accepted as a serious actress.

"I turned down six scripts before 'Rage of Angels.' The main thing is not jumping, but waiting for good things."

'T.J. Hooker' Is An Old-Fashioned Cop

By David Handler

He has the warmth of a Marine drill sergeant — eyes in a permanent squint, jaw squared, shoulders back. He is a grimly determined bulldog who has little to say once he's on a case, aside from the occasional, "Right now, we've got a job to do."

Mostly, he tracks down thugs, and he'll do anything to get the cuffs on 'em. He'll dive from rooftop to rooftop, onto the hood of an onrushing car, over a wall. He'll knock down a door with his shoulder and come up firing.

"When he gets involved in a case," observes T.J. Hooker's rookie partner, "he gets a little intense."

Hooker is an old-fashioned TV cop, the kind for whom there is only good and evil, right and wrong. He has no self-doubt, no patience with moral or social complexity, no life away from the badge, no first name.

He is, in his own words, "a street cop." William Shatner plays the heck out of him — clenched fists, swagger, the works.

Trouble is, after a couple of seasons of forging ahead into the gray area with "Mill Street Blues," it's hard to swallow the old black and white of ABC's "T.J. Hooker." To me it seems dated, a throwback to "Dragnet."

After all, what is Hooker if not a bulked-up Joe Friday in uniform, a guy who does it by the book, a guy who never smiles, a guy whose few brushes with the spoken language lean to terse sermonizing?

Take Hooker on teen alcoholism: "Kids and booze. What a waste."

Like "Dragnet," "T.J. Hooker" bears the official LAPD stamp. Our hero operates out of the Los Angeles Police Academy, affording us the chance to see recruits learning the ropes, as well as doing vigorous calisthenics on the lawn — often led by Hooker himself.

Hooker has a stoic commander (Richard Herd), who in turn employs his own fluffily blond daughter, Stacy (Heather Locklear), as dispatcher. But the only person he really has time for is his partner, young Vince Romano (Adrian Zmed), who he affectionately calls "junior."

Romano is a chip off the old block, complete with wavy hair and swagger. Like Shatner, Zmed seems to always be concentrating on holding his stomach in.

The big difference between Hooker and Romano is that Romano has emotional attachments, attachments that haunt him from week to week. It seems he's mixed up with everyone in the city of L.A. who commits a crime.

"T.J. Hooker" takes us back to the TV cop show of whiny, acned villains, oversimplified police procedure, impossible coincidences, in-the-nick-of-time shoot-outs. We've outgrown this kind of show. It's almost nostalgic. Almost, not quite.
