Courageons Living

Most of us have known someone at some time other in our lives who seemed to have more than his full share of troubles, but who nevertheless seemed somehow to rise above them. And most of us have seen people who, though they were apparently getting along well enough, were always complaining about something.

Of the former kind, George Sokolsky writes in the New York Herald Tribune. His name was Frank Scully and he had been hurt in a game. His leg had become tubercular and more than twenty operations had been performed upon it. Years had been spent in hospitals and most of that time it had been a fight just to remain alive. Every waking minute had been steeped in suffering.

"Yet Frank remained gay," Mr. Sokolsky writes, "His laughter brings joy to his less gay friends. His enthusiasms cheer even the pessimist. His faith in life and in man knows no end. When Frank wanted to write a book, he called it 'Fun in Bed," for that was the only place that Frank could have any fun for many years of his life. And Fun in Bed' is a book which shows those who suffer how o be cheerful and happy. And Frank knows, for he is ever cheerful and happy.

In spite of his troubles, Frank grew up, carned his iving, married, had children, and reared them. And throughout all this time there was never a moment when he was without pain. He married a beautiful girl, who was not afraid to marry a man who would never be without pain. And he had graceful, healthful children, who, though their father suffered continuously, never knew it.

One day Frank and his wife were walking near a lake. A child fell overboard and was drowning. Frank's wife jumped in to try to save it. But she tired and herself began to drown. Frank, now with only one leg. and with uberculosis still racking him with pain, jumped in and with strong arms, managed to get them both out. But meumonia set in. For months he lay at the point of death, out finally survived.

"There are lots of Frunk Scullys in this world-lots of nen and women who smile through suffering and hardhips," says Mr. Sokolsky. "There are lots of men and omen who cannot be defeated. For real strength is not in one and muscle. It is in the will to conquer oneself first and then to achieve a useful life.

"The curageous person cannot be defeated. Ill health, ard luck, depressions, political disturbances—they are food ir his courage. He takes them in his stride and goes on. And as he goes on, he sings. As he goes on, he is full of good cheer. For he builds his own life with his own maerials. And what more can anyone ask than to have the ourage to do that?"

Ten Thousand New Jobs

According to Gilbert Seldes in the April Cosmopôlitan, he American citizen is on his knees begging for a dictaorship. "The government is doing ten thousand new jobs be equipped for "standins for the citizen," he declares, "and the citizen has not accepted even the responsibility of knowing what is going on.

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women-lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke.

Miss Keeler verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies.
