Fire destroys house

Sanford firefighters battled a house fire reported at 6:14 this morning. The home at 1612 Peach Ave., was determined to have been fully destroyed.

Fire investigators reported that the home was vacant, with work being done to it, but an electrical short caused by a long extension cord is believed to have started the blaze.

Fire investigators are planning to contact the city to have the house secured and demolished to avoid anyone being injured.

Ten units of the Sanford Fire Department responded to the blaze.

Officers underwater adventure

Four divers of Sanford Police Department's Underwater Search and Recovery Team attended the 1993 Public Safety Diver National Forum Oct. 27-29. The forum was conducted by the Orange County Sheriff's Office and the Central Florida Criminal Justice Institute at the Fraternal Order of Police Lodge on Lake Conway in Orlando.

The forum consisted of lectures, equipment demonstrations and competitive two-person team skill sessions.

Sanford team members Sgt. Darrel Presley and Cpl. Mark Nichols finished third overall in their division. Ofc. Bob Bartholow and Ofc. Doug Bottalico also competed.

The Sanford search and recovery team is organized to provide trained police divers for the recovery of drowning victims, evidence, stolen property, or items lost in an underwater environment. The team consists of five divers who have completed the Florida Police Standards 80-hour Underwater Police Science and Technology course. The fifth Team member, Ofc. Robert Shull did not attend the forum.

Incumbents ousted

Longwood voters also OK amendment for cop department in charter

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Three new city commissioners will be sworn into office today after voters swept the three incumbents out of office Tuesday.

Iris Benson, Ron Sargent and Annamarie Vacca defeated Harvey Smerilson, Fred Pearl and Rex Anderson for re-election.

A total of 1,208 votes were cast, 20 percent of the total registered voters in the city.

Voters also passed an amendment establishing the police department in the city charter by a 647 to 505 vote.

At a victory party in the Ed Myers Building, family, friends and political supporters rallied around the new commissioners.

"I have no plans yet for a special meeting," Mayor Paul Lovestrand said at the party. Lovestrand and commissioner Steve Miller attended the victory party for the three new commissioners.

Speculation was rampant prior to the election that as soon as Lovestrand could garner the necessary votes, the commission would fire city administrator James McFellin, appoint an acting administrator who would dismiss Police Chief Greg Manning and possibly assistant chief Terry Baker. Attorney Gerald Korman has been mentioned as a temporary administrator. Changes could also be forthcoming in the city clerk's office. Lovestrand and Miller have said at times throughout the year that they had "lost confidence in the ad-"

Haggling over property taxes

Appraiser still opposes tax cap law

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — Supporters of a constitutional amendment that caps property tax increases for Florida homeowners urged the state Supreme Court to put the measure into effect immediately and not postpone it until 1995.

Seminole County Property Appraiser Bill Suber was against the proposal when it was first presented, and even though it won voter approval, he remains in opposition.

"It's misleading," Suber said. "It doesn't cap property taxes, it puts a cap on increasing the appraised"

SANFORD — Members of the Seminole County Value Adjustment Board will decide Thursday whether to whittle about $500,000 from the coffers of area government agencies.

VAB special masters, their mediators, recommend reducing the value of 229 parcels of land throughout the county. Property owners originally sought value reductions on 556 parcels, but owners of 325 parcels withdrew their applications during the appeal hearing process.

The VAB will take final action on the recommendations 9 a.m. Thursday at the County Services Building. The VAB, comprised of school board members and county commissioners, typically accepts"

Seminole High Homecoming Parade transforms downtown

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Tomorrow afternoon downtown Sanford will be transformed into a city-wide pep rally for the hometown high school.

Starting at 5 p.m. the Seminole High Homecoming parade will make its way slowly down First Street beginning at the New Tribes Mission and culminating at Magnolia Square in the downtown business district.

The traditional parade, which for many years in the 1950s and 1960s followed that same route, was disbanded in the early 1970s and revived about a decade and a half later after students requested it.

"For a while there was a lull in the interest-level surrounding the parade and Homecoming activities in general," assistant principal Verna Jackson explained.

Thieves steal priceless treasure

ST. PETERSBURG BEACH — Pirates who looted 400-year-old treasure from a museum knew what they were doing, officials said, taking precious metals that could be easily melted down and sold.

"It's a shame," said Jimmy Doyle, director of the Port Royal Sunken Treasure Museum. "The historical value isn't significant to them at all."

The burglars jammed an alarm system and broke through back door Sunday night, passing over finds from six other shipwrecks before raising a sledgehammer and smashing the tempered glass protecting loot taken from the wreckage of the Portuguese ship Flor du Mar, which sank in 1511, Doyle said.

The gold and silver bars, diamond ring, 24-carat gold brooch and other items stolen are priceless, Doyle said.

"We have pieces of jade that are far more valuable" but they probably weren't taken because "they could be traced," he said.

Doyle doesn't expect to see the Renaissance-era treasures again. Once the gems are plucked from their settings and the metals are melted, they won't be difficult to sell, he said. The items are insured but Doyle said he was advised not to discuss the value of the purloined objects.

Police, who continued their investigation Tuesday, refused to say how the thieves foiled the museum's alarm system.

Drug agent under investigation

FORT LAUDERDALE — The federal drug agent who arrested Panama's military ruler Manuel Noriega is under investigation to determine if he pocketed hundreds of thousands of dollars in drug money, a newspaper reported.

Rene De La Cova, 43, a Drug Enforcement Administration group supervisor in Fort Lauderdale, was placed on administrative leave with pay last week, the Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale sources reported Tuesday, quoting unidentified sources.

De La Cova was the DEA agent in Panama in 1989 when U.S. troops invaded the country and eventually forced the ouster of Noriega. He accompanied Noriega onto a U.S. transport plane, where De La Cova formally placed him under arrest.

A 12-year DEA veteran, De La Cova was later transferred to Fort Lauderdale, and supervised agents in undercover efforts to infiltrate the money laundering operations of major drug traffickers.

The federal inquiry is focusing on whether De La Cova improperly shifted drug money from undercover operations into safe deposit boxes and bank accounts he controlled, sources told the Sun-Sentinel.

Mother charged with son's death

CRESTVIEW — A mother accused of beating her 2-year-old son to death with a boot after he wet his bed was jailed on an open count of murder.

Christopher Thomas Small died Saturday and his mother, Sandra Jean Small, 24, of Crestview was arrested Monday after an autopsy showed the child died from a blow to the lower right abdomen, city police said.

"The autopsy further revealed the child's liver and upper heart chamber were ruptured," police said in a written statement Monday night. "The child's mother admitted that she was spanking the child with a lady's boot and that the child was twisting and turning to avoid being spanked."

Witnesses told investigators they could hear Ms. Small about to discipline the boy for wetting his bed.

Small was charged with first-degree murder at his home and took him to North Oklawaha Medical Center where he was pronounced dead about an hour later.

Small's bond was set at $150,000 Tuesday at her first court appearance. She also was charged with aggravated child abuse.

Prosecutors or a grand jury will determine whether the murder charge will stand and, if so, the degree.

War hero dead at 82

LARGO — John "Mike" Mihalowski, who won the Medal of Honor for his role in the rescue of 33 sailors from the submarine USS Squalus when it sank in 1939, is dead at 82.

Mihalowski, who had suffered from cancer, heart problems and a stroke, died Friday at Wright's Nursing Home, said Gary Littrell of the Florida Department of Veterans Affairs and a family friend.

Although the Medal of Honor is rarely given in peacetime, the nation's highest military honor went to Mihalowski and three other Navy divers for their heroism in the rescue of sailors trapped aboard the downed sub.

The 300-foot Squalus sank on its shakedown cruise May 22, 1939, after its launching from Isle of Shoals, N.H. Aboard were 62 people.

In a 16-hour rescue, all 33 men in the forward section of the sub were brought to the surface and safety. Then Mihalowski and another helmeted, heavy-suited diver volunteered to go down again to get the men in the aft section.

"Finally, I got the hatch open," Mihalowski recalled in a 1983 interview, "and the aft end of the Squalus was totally flooded. Nobody could be alive."

Lawmakers continue tougher gun laws debate

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The House debate over how to outlaw teen-age gun use bogged down with speeches and questions a few hours after a judge set a trial date for four juveniles charged with the murder of a British tourist.

The lawmakers briefly discussed a bill that would make it a first-degree misdemeanor for anyone under the age of 18 to have a gun.

Violators could be ordered to do 100 hours community service and have their driver's licenses suspended for a year. Hunting and marksmanship activities are exempted and penalties for parents and dealers are strengthened.

Supporters and opponents alike pointed out that the bill will have a limited impact.

"It isn't a simple matter and you cannot handle it simply by passing a law," Rep.

"It's time that we do something that is meaningful and will make a difference, not just sound good or publish well."

- Rep. Victor Crist, R-Temple Terrace.

Elvin Martinez, a Tampa Democrat who sponsored the bill, said.

Critics said the legislation should be made stronger, arguing it should mandate some teen criminals be treated as adults.

"It's time that we do something that is meaningful and will make a difference, not just sound good or publish well," said Rep. Victor Crist, R-Temple Terrace.

Lawmakers sought to reach agreement on tougher sanctions in the aftermath of several weeks of publicity that has cast Florida as a 20th century version of the lawless Wild West.

And while legislators worked, a judge in neighboring Monticello set a Jan. 27 trial date for the four teens charged with the September slaying of British tourist Gary Colley. He was killed and a companion wounded after they were attacked at a well-lit interstate rest stop in the early morning hours of Sept. 14.

Florida has a hodgepodge of laws on the books now concerning teen-agers and guns, including one that bans minors under the age of 18 from using guns unless they're supervised by adults. Parents who let their children under 18 use guns without supervision can be convicted of a second-degree misdemeanor but current law has no penalty for the teen-ager.

Man freed to await trial for murder

By The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Two years after being arrested and charged with the slaying of a 21-year-old Navy wife, John Brewer is being sent home to await trial on the charge that could send him to death row.

Brewer is accused of first-degree murder in the 1990 strangulation of Dina Kichler. He has been held in the Duval County Jail for two years awaiting trial.

Circuit Judge Lawrence P. Haddock ruled Monday the evidence isn't convincing enough to continue to hold Brewer, 35, without bond — the normal course for anyone charged with first-degree murder.

"If I were certain that he was the one that did it, I, of course, wouldn't have released him," the judge said.

Haddock released Brewer on his own recognizance and ordered him to wear an electronic ankle bracelet so probation officers can monitor his location.

The judge also said Brewer must remain at work or in his father's home and also must contact a probation officer daily.

Brewer's trial is set for Nov. 29, but it is expected to be delayed.

Jeffrey Weinstein, president of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers and a practicing defense lawyer in Miami, said it sounds as if Brewer should have been released earlier.

"We can't presume people are guilty because they are charged," Weiner said Tuesday in a telephone interview. "Unfortunately, people start serving their sentences the day they are arrested."

Even capital suspects are entitled to reasonable bond, unless proof of guilt is evident in the case against them, the judge said.

"The evidence, looked at in the light most favorable to the state, does not identify the defendant as the perpetrator," Haddock said. "It doesn't exclude him, but it doesn't identify him."

The evidence consists of hair, blood and semen samples from Ms. Kichler's Mayport townhouse, but not all test results are in.

Judge shuts down charity for distribution failure

By Associated Press

BOSTON — A purported children's charity that raised $1.1 million in five states, including Florida, has been shut down by a judge because it distributed only about $8,000 in donations.

The Chosen Children Foundation was ordered to pay $30,000 in restitution and Suffolk Superior Court Judge Hiller Zobel permanently banned its founder from fundraising or other charitable activities in the state.

The foundation operated in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Florida and raised money through telemarketing and canisters at stores, prosecutors said.

"When people are asked to donate money to a particular charity, they make their contributions in the good faith belief that their donations will not be diverted to non-charitable purposes," said Attorney General Scott Harshbarger.

Harshbarger's office sued the charity in 1991, accusing the organization of raising money that went to pay its employees and professional fundraisers rather than to help children.

The charity raised about $1.1 million from 1989 until earlier this year, when fundraising was halted, but distributed only $8,146 for charitable purposes, Assistant Attorney General Eric B. Carraker said.

Joel S. Weinstein of Stoughton and his son, Eric M. Weinstein of Randolph, agreed to the settlement, according to their attorney, Herbert Lewis.

Last November, Zobel had named Gabrielle Wolohojian, of the Boston law firm of Hale and Dorr, to serve as temporary receiver.

The settlement directed Wolohojian, who donated her time, to end Chosen Children's operations and have it dissolved.

The consent decree also removes the Weinsteins from any position of authority with Chosen Children and direct them to the extent it is possible to seek return of money transferred from the charity, to its affiliates.

Observations on election

As the result of yesterday's voting, Longwood will have a new City Commission. Three out of the five seats were on the ballot. As the votes were counted and results announced, there were three candidates who came out winners. Three others were unsuccessful in the race.

In most such situations, it would be simple to say that the battle is over. Winners have been announced, now let's get back to running the city.

In Longwood however, past elections have proven that changes on the commission have not automatically brought about an end to disputes. Things have apparently not changed in this election. The political approach is clearly divided into two groups.

One group staged a demonstration at the intersection of S.R. 434 and C.R. 427 in downtown Longwood, calling for a "clean sweep" of the commission. They wanted all three incumbent commission candidates to be ousted.

During recent years, much has been said about the many split votes on the Longwood city commission, and disagreements between commission members. Any time a vote is against what one individual or group would like, the "other side" always gets the blame.

The two factions must realize it is their own constant bickering and fighting with persons they consider opponents, causing the problems. Until everyone on the commission starts to work together, nothing will change. Commission candidates, (as they did this year) will continue to call their city "Wrongwood."

Now is the time. The city has a full commission, with these three election winners now beginning three-year terms in office. No one needs to be concerned with an upcoming election. They can get down to business.

Five people are once again expected to do their best in governing the city. We are not suggesting they all vote unanimously for every item. Longwood should not have "yes men."

We do expect however, that they will make their decisions based on personal knowledge, facts, and what is best for the people of their city. The people do not want votes cast because some outside person prompts commissioners on how to vote.

Congratulations to the newly re-formed Longwood City Commission. When you recite that oath of office, listen to the words carefully. And keep the pledges you are making.

Subsidized housing

From time to time the Herald's Police Briefs carry items such as "so and so" with an address in one of Sanford's six public housing projects has been arrested, charged with a law violation and taken to jail.

Nobody has to tell me that everybody is presumed innocent until proven guilty. My question, therefore, is simply this: What happens when an occupant of a rent subsidized unit is found guilty?

Once during the 1970s when I served 10 years as a member of the Sanford City Commission we were told by the Authority director at that time, Tim Wilson, there were over 400 qualified families on a waiting list. I was told the other day by the present Authority director there were now about 600 families on that list.

I asked the director if occupants found guilty of crimes were evicted. I was told it is virtually impossible to evict any occupant found guilty as long as the subsidized rent was paid. This policy, I was told, included child molesters and those engaged in drug trafficking and addiction.

The director said that unless a "convicted" tenant was a "threat to the health and safety of others," the only reason for an eviction was non-payment of rent.

But I'm still concerned about the 600 families on that waiting list while some present occupants who are "convicted" law breakers virtually cannot be evicted, even in such cases as child molestation or involvement in the drug trade. It isn't fair to law-abiding taxpayers nor to those deserving folks on that waiting list who deserve public subsidized housing.

Is Commerce chief victim of scam?

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department's Public Integrity Section has stepped up the pace of its investigation of whether Commerce Secretary Ron Brown sought a $700,000 fee and lucrative business contracts from a Vietnamese businessman representing the government of Vietnam to help lift U.S. trade sanctions against that country. Reportedly, Brown, through his attorney, is alleging that he is the victim of a scam perpetrated by the Vietnamese businessman against his former homeland.

For more than a year another Vietnamese expatriate, Ly Tranh Binh, has been telling anyone who would listen — the FBI, Republicans in Congress and any reporter who will answer his phone calls — that Brown agreed to help Florida expatriate-businessman Nyugen Van Hao develop import-exports businesses with Vietnam and in the process to help end the U.S. embargo that makes such trade ties impossible.

Hao is a Ph.D. and the former deputy prime minister of South Vietnam. After his country fell to the communists, he fled to France and then lived in Haiti before coming to the United States. Today he lives in Florida where he owns a small convenience store, and set up a company called the Vietnamese Development Corp.

Others said to be involved in the deal are Marc

Ashton, a Haitian expatriate and Florida businessman, and Ashton's sister-in-law, Lillian Madsen.

Brown represented the former government of Haitian dictator Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier for many years and reportedly knew Ashton in Haiti. Ashton knew Hao while the latter was living in Haiti.

Binh does not hide the fact he has an old score to settle with Hao. They were partners in some deals that went bad, leaving Binh all but penniless.

As Binh tells it, Hao, who still has very high contacts in the Vietnamese government, contacted Ashton, who set up a series of meetings with Brown is alleging that he is the victim of a scam perpetrated by the Vietnamese businessman against his former homeland.

Brown, one before he became Commerce secretary and two after.

Brown at first denied any knowledge of Hao. Later he said he had never had "any relationship, business or personal" with Hao. But he now admits to meeting Hao three times — all social occasions, he says — and that at no time did he even discuss representing Hao or working to overturn the U.S. embargo against Vietnam.

Binh says Hao told him that Brown had agreed to represent him if $700,000 was paid into a Singapore bank account, and if valuable contracts were given to a company in which Brown would hold a hidden interest. Sources say that Binh has passed several lie detector tests, which only means that he believes the story.

Lillian Madsen has also emerged as a central player in this drama. Estranged from her husband who has remained in Haiti, she is living in a $360,000 Washington townhouse owned jointly by Brown and his lobbyist son Michael. Madsen has described herself as a "close personal friend" of Ron Brown.

The Browns have said they signed the mortgage for Madsen as a favor because she was new to the United States, and to Washington, and that they consider the townhouse an investment.

Washington up to flood stage, again

I did a damn fool thing after last year's elections. I cleaned my boots and put them away and now the creek is rising again, and I'm wading around in the muck in my street shoes.

After 25 years in Washington, you would think I'd have more sense than to assume that because it is a non-election year the political discourse would remain fairly high-toned. How was I to know that Bill Clinton would commit some foreign policy blunders that would bring out the worst in our public servants?

First came the ill-conceived attempt to track down and seize Somali warlord Mohammed Farrah Aidid, which culminated in the tragic raid on the Olympic Hotel in Mogadishu in which 14 American soldiers died and 77 were wounded. In the face of an imminent revolt on Capitol Hill, Clinton promised to have the troops out of Somalia by March 31.

Then came the frustrating effort to restore Haitian president Jean-Bertrand Aristide to the office from which he was deposed in September 1991. When the Haitian military reneged on its promises to reinstate Aristide, Clinton decided to squeeze them into submission with a naval blockade.

All this was too much for the Republicans, the party of pacifists, who decided it was time to restore congressional authority to oversee foreign policy. Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., proposed a law that would require the president to seek congressional approval before sending troops to Haiti or Bosnia. Congress was "caught napping" on Somalia, he said, but now it should speak up "before the body bags are counted, before the caskets come home, before we have the bad news about the tragic loss of one American life in Haiti."

Wait a minute. Wasn't it just 20 years ago that Congress passed a War Powers Act to force Richard Nixon to ask congressional permission before he put U.S. troops in any hostile situation where they were expected to remain more than 90 days? And were not the Republicans, including Bob Dole, vociferously opposed to any law that would "tie the president's hands" on foreign policy?

Wonder what changed their minds? Now comes former vice president J. Danforth ("You say potato, I say potato") Quayle with the tut-tutting observation that "it's sad" and our own fault, really, because we refused to entertain a debate on foreign policy during last year's campaign and now we have to put up with Clinton's "on-the-job training."

Take Somalia, for instance. Clinton "has to understand that if you're going to send our troops into harm's way, they better have added protection." Quayle told a USA Today reporter, "We've lost some lives, tragically, because of the lack of military capability to provide for their safety."

Wait a minute. Wasn't it George Bush who sent the troops to Somalia in the first place? Weren't those Navy SEALs landing on the beaches last December in the glare of television lights, carrying weapons and dressed in full battle regalia? If they were not expecting a military engagement, they were a little overly prepared. Is Dan Quayle now trying to tell us the Bush administration had no inkling it was putting American troops in harm's way? And didn't J. Danforth ("What a waste it is to lose one's mind") Quayle support his president's efforts at the time?

Wonder what changed his mind? In truth, I should've seen this tidal wave of hypocrisy coming some time ago, when Dole and other Republicans started calling for independent counsel investigations of Democrats.

Cloning raises ethical questions

BOSTON — At some point all parents, except those with too much confidence and too little imagination, have lain awake at night thinking about how we would do it — childraising — differently if we had a second chance. We would be braver or more cautious, more permissive or more authoritarian, more understanding or more judgmental.

One of the givens of life, however, is that children are unique, or as Mr. Rogers would put it, special. We know that we can't raise a son or daughter one way, then start all over again with the same exact genetic material. Or can we?

Just a week ago, Dr. Jerry Hall announced to all the world that his team at George Washington University Medical Center had successfully split human embryos and made identical copies of them. None of these embryos was actually implanted in a womb. The researchers purposely chose genetically abnormal embryos that could not have been brought to term and were in fact discarded six days after fertilization.

But since then, the spectres raised by this research have been multiplying faster than any reproductive cell. There is the spectre of a freezer full of identically genetic "twins" all waiting for wombs. There is the spectre of biocientists running amok in the gene pool.

Normally I don't belong to the Jurassic Park school of the scientifically anxious. I don't worry about mad scientists creating human monsters in their labs. When I think of biogenetic research, I don't conjure up the image of Frankenstein. What I do see is an ethical Jack-in-the-Box.

Wind up the science box and Surprise: Baby Louise pops out of the petri dish! Surprise: Embryos in the freezer section of your bio-market! Surprise: You too can copy an embryo at the bio-Xerox center! The research comes flying out of the lab and into the public consciousness with little warning. We learn what we can do before we figure out what we want to do.

This element of surprise is especially disturbing when we are talking about the act(s) of creation. The new reproductive choices of the past decade have forced an endless series of hard ethical decisions. We've seen one couple wrangle over custody of frozen pre-embryos. We've learned about the misuse of genetic testing to abort female fetuses. We've met parents who conceived a baby as a bone marrow donor for their daughter. We've read about a man who committed suicide, leaving behind 15 vials of frozen sperm as a legacy for his lover.

This time, the cloning of the human embryos was devised to help infertile couples. It would increase the supply of embryos in fertility clinics. But the idea of copying two, six or other 10 other identical embryos raises questions that have little to do with infertility.

Is it all right to give birth to two or three genetically identical children over a period of years? If one child comes out "just right", should parents have the option of picking another such "winner"? Should adults be allowed to store away a "spare" in case of the death of a child or in case they need one as a donor for a sick child?

What if a child who was cloned grows up and wants to give birth to her own pre-frozen twin? And while we are conjuring up fantasies could a couple sell spare embryos the way they can now sell sperm or eggs?

My only answers to these questions are: No and Whoa. This biotechnology comes out of the marketplace of ideas which is too often literally a marketplace. This time the market is responding to the demand for a people product.

"Our goal," said Dr. Jerry Hall, "is to help parents achieve pregnancy." But it's fair to ask when these technologies put too much importance on pregnancy and not enough on parenting, even on children.

The concept of cloning embryos both overemphasizes and undermines individuality. On the one hand, cloning is part of a reproductive technology dedicated to the importance of passing along our own unique parental genes. On the other hand, the mass reproduction of one child inevitably devalues the uniqueness of that child.

Yes, we are products of our environment as well as our genes. Even two clones raised by the same parents would have some different experiences — just as identical twins do. But you don't have to believe in Frankenstein to worry about the effect of having a clone of your own in the freezer.

For the moment, the mass reproducing of people is still in its embryonic state. But this latest scientific surprise reminds me of the line from an old song: "There will never be another you."

Don't be too sure.

There is the spectre of a freezer full of identically genetic 'twins' all waiting for wombs.

I did a damn fool thing after last year's elections.

Crooms

Principal Barbara Kirby laughed, cheered and stomped to the beat of the Magic's theme music along with her students as players like Donald Royal and Nick Anderson shook hands with the kids and their teachers.

Curley Neal, best known for his ear to ear smile and basketball tricks with the Harlem Globetrotters, is now a member of the Magic administration. The Magic and Crooms are business partners so Neal is familiar with many of the students.

"My friend," he called out to one young lady as she approached him, waving shyly.

He gave her a bear hug. "How have you been? You bringing those grades up like we talked about?"

New head coach Brian Hill introduced himself to some of the students and teachers while his players renewed old friendships.

"This is wonderful," he said. "This school has got a great attitude."

When Hill got up to address the assembled students in the school's multi-purpose room, he admitted that he was not the best student when he was in school.

"Like anyone would, if you gave me an inch, I'd take a yard," he said. "But I learned that everybody...everybody has opportunities. The key is what you do with those opportunities."

Students were dumbfounded when assistant coach Bob Hill, speaking of motivation, told them of an NBA player who had decided he wanted to play in the NBA when he was a teen.

He and his best friends went to school early each day to play. His friends skipped school to play ball, but he made it a point to go to class. He earned a college scholarship and eventually made it to the NBA.

During the last off season, he was visiting the old neighborhood where those two friends still lived. As he walked down the street talking to them, both were shot dead as the result of a cocaine deal.

"Because he stayed in school, he got somewhere," Hill said. "His friends had gone nowhere and now they were dead."

Additionally, Hill said, that player lost both his parents to AIDS.

"If he can overcome that kind of adversity," he said, "any of us can do the same."

Neil Anderson addressed the issue of attitude, saying one of the keys to success was a good attitude toward life.

"I feel good inside myself about what happens to me...and about what's going to happen to me," he said. "I don't smile much and people think I have a bad attitude, but that's just my personality. You've got to have a good attitude inside if you're going to succeed."

Donald Royal told students they had to set goals for themselves, starting with simple goals.

"Like getting to school and getting to class on time," he said. "Just set simple goals for yourself for now and set long term goals too. Without goals, you can't achieve anything."

With his omnipresent smile, Curley Neal told students they needed to adopt an "I can" attitude and to believe in what they do.

He handed out Magic hats and shirts to students who could spell words like "motivation" and "attitude" and to a young man, who his peers announced was the smallest in the school. The youngster told Neal that he believed he could spin a basketball on the tip of his finger, a trick made famous by Neal decades ago as a part of the Globetrotters. With a little help, the boy did it.

"See," Neal told him. "If you believe it, you can do it."

The other students cheered. "Keep your head up," he told them. "Think positive and remember that God loves you."

Finally, Magic Girl Katrina Webster talked to the students about citizenship.

"You've got to respect others if you're going to be a success," she said. "You've got to do things for others and do it from the heart. And you've got to remember the little things like just saying 'please' and 'thank you.' That's what's important."

Though the event lasted more than an hour, students were still listening intently as it neared the end.

"Hey, I'm gonna stay in school," one young lady said. "If Donald (Royal) thinks it's cool, it must be cool."

Value

the recommendations.

In all, special masters recommended trimming about $24 million from the county's $10 billion in total taxable property value. Last year, trims accounted for $24.8 million and in 1991, the years hundreds of people protested increases, trims amounted to less than $19.5 million.

Seminole County will lose $161,000 in anticipated income from its general fund and road and fire districts. Sanford will lose $16,871; Lake Mary, $5,145; and Longwood, $1,938.

A special master recommendation to grant Sanford commissioner Lon Howell half of his homestead exemption will be among seven homestead recommendations considered. Property Appraiser Bill Suber denied Howell's $25,000 exemption based on evidence he spent much of his time in DeBary with his girlfriend and had signed a Volusia County school document declaring his residency there.

A special master recommended Howell be granted half an exemption because he had rented a portion of his home.

Actually, Howell was the most successful of the homestead appellants. Special masters upheld Suber's exemption denials on four other households. One petitioner did not pursue an appeal and Suber's appraisers decided to grant an exemption to a home previously denied.

Among the biggest winners in the recommendations were United Telephone Co. of Florida, which successfully had a $8.1 million appraisal reduced to $4.8 million, a $1.3 million reduction.

Developer Charles Clayton saw a 52 percent reduction for one parcel, from $2.5 million to about $1.2 million. Sunshadow Apartments Ltd. saw a $1.4 million cut from its $10.7 million holding.

The biggest loser was Orlando Regional South Seminole Inc., which sought a 50 percent exemption for South Seminole Community Hospital and Westlake Hospital, both in Longwood. ORSS is a subsidiary of Orlando Regional Healthcare System Inc., the non-profit owners of Orlando Regional Medical Center, Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children and Women and other central Florida medical facilities.

ORSS argued as a non-profit company, it was entitled to half off the two Seminole County facilities because it was equal owner with former sole owner, South Seminole Inc., a for-profit corporation. The two companies formed the partnership last December.

SSCH land and equipment was appraised at $12.9 million. Land and equipment for Westlake was appraised at $5.1 million.

Special master Vicki Smith decided because ownership of the facilities was now equally shared, they did not meet state law and courtroom tests requiring the business to be a "predominantly" non-profit venture.

Tax

value of a home. Taxes could still go up."

Voters approved Amendment 10 a year ago to limit yearly increases in the appraised value of homestead residences to 3 percent, the inflation rate, the change in a home's market value, or whichever amount is lowest.

"That's the key to this whole amendment," Suber said. "Most people fully believe this will keep their property taxes from being increased more than three percent in a year."

Suber says that depending on millage rates, the cap limitations could effect lower cost homes more than those of the upper levels. "In one scenario," he said, "my figures show that, under certain circumstances, with this three percent cap on evaluations, taxes on a $500,000 home may not increase more than three percent, but a $30,000 home owner could see taxes go up as much as 18 percent."

Since the measure was approved, the Department of Revenue and Lee County Property Appraiser Ken Wilkinson have haggled over when the so-called Save Our Homes amendment goes into effect. The revenue department says the amendment should begin in 1995.

The Supreme Court heard arguments from both sides

Tuesday and will decide when it should take effect.

"Right from the very start," Suber said, "I have argued with Ken (Wilkinson) about this, especially in the fact that the wording was wrong. Since it was approved, I've stayed in contact with him, and I still don't believe the measure has been written properly."

Wilkinson, who has spent seven years promoting the property tax cap, said any delay in enacting the amendment could cost homeowners millions of dollars in potential tax savings, particularly in high growth areas along the coast and Central Florida.

"Had this been in effect in 1993, which was the intent not only of the voters but of me because I drafted it, it would have in Lee County alone eliminated $188 million of taxable value," Wilkinson said after lawyers finished their arguments before the court.

The revenue department appealed a circuit court judge's ruling earlier this year that allowed the amendment to start Jan. 1.

In arguing for the delay, Joseph Mellichamp told the court that the effective date should be 1995 because no specific date was written into the amendment. State law required the amendment to take effect the first Tuesday after the first Monday of this year, or Jan. 5.

Because property is assessed as of Jan. 1 each year, the first round of assessments under the cap would begin Jan. 1, 1994, establishing the base year, while the cap takes effect with 1995 tax bills.

"It's not the department's fault this amendment was written this way. It is not this court's fault," said Mellichamp, a senior assistant attorney general. "This court should not supply or delete words from this amendment, Mr. Wilkinson wrote it this way."

Larry Fuchs, executive director of the revenue department, said the agency needed another year to complete its biannual review of county tax rolls under new methodology designed to ensure property appraisals reflect market value.

The agency has reviewed half of the state's 67 counties and if the amendment took effect next year, "any unfairness or inequity in the tax rolls will be made permanent," Fuchs said.

Wilkinson's lawyer, Ted Tripp of Fort Myers, argued that the amendment did not include any provisions for a two-year delay.

"There is no provision that says changes shall be limited after the Department of Revenue has a couple years to change the homestead assessments, and therefore change the basis from which we will operate," Tripp told the court.

ministrator" but stopped short of calling for a vote on the issue.

The new commission will also be selecting a new city attorney to replace Becky Vose who resigned effective Nov. 30.

As the partygoers enjoyed the success of their "Clean Sweep" campaign, Thomas Cleeton joked the group had adopted the phrase, "Annie kicked fanny" in light of Vacca's 729 to 427 victory over Anderson. She received the highest number of votes of any individual candidate. Cleeton's wife, Jane is president of the Longwood Better Government Association political action committee which backed the three new commissioners.

"My mom and my grandmother are here from Maryland so they will be here (at the swearing in) too," Vacca said. Vacca is a homemaker who is active in Girl Scouts and church activities.

Anderson, who was seeking his third term on the commission, could not be reached for comment.

"I'd like to thank the people of Longwood who voted for me," Sargent said after his election, "and gave me the opportunity to represent them. I worked very hard to do this but I hope they understand they need to use me like they haven't used other commissioners. They need to call me and let me know what the problems are because it's hard to do anything when nobody says anything. But tonight, they said something, that means they want something and I'm here to serve them."

Sargent defeated incumbent commissioner Fred Pearl by a 673 to 493 vote. Pearl expressed his disappointment in the outcome.

"Hey, what can I tell you. God save the town," Pearl commented after learning the results. "At least they can't touch the police department. Oh, I guess they can because they've got five votes."

By approving the police department in the charter amendment, it requires a unanimous vote by the five commission members to change the charter.

The race for the first district seat provided a bit of deja vu with a different outcome. Harvey Smerilson defeated Benson last year by 104 votes for the seat vacated by Adriene Perry. Tuesday night, Benson defeated Smerilson by 170 votes for a three-year commission term.

"It's not my loss," Smerilson commented, "it's the city's loss. I didn't think the people would fall for all the dirt and lies. I guess I'm just surprised that Longwood took the dirty road and listened to the lies. The dirt works. When people say they don't want a dirty campaign, it's not true. People just like to hear dirt."

Smerilson said at least the charter amendment passed but then he added, "they've got five votes. They can do what they want. It really doesn't matter, they've got complete control. But I guess the clean sweep continues next year and they sweep out the other two (Lovestrans and Miller). Right? That's what a clean sweep means. You've got to remember the people that put the $3 tax on and were against cutting the commissioners' salaries are the two that are on there now, so those two need to be swept out next year."

"I have a lot of people working, helping me and I worked very, very hard," Benson commented on her victory. "I walked all over this city. I thank the people for putting me over the top. People understood the issues this time and they wanted a change in the city government."

The new commissioners will be sworn in this afternoon at 4 p.m. in the commission chambers of city hall.

offer canoe access to the Wekiva River.

Committee members, primarily environmentalists and biologists, reasoned an existing boat ramp would provide less intrusive river access than creating one at Plantation of some other naturally- prized property.

The Katie's recommendation raised concerns, particularly on the part of commissioners Dick VanDerWeide and Pat Warren, who were concerned the committee may be shifting from its directive to preserve unique natural lands.

Since the acquisition program was approved by voters in 1990, 1,476 acres have been acquired with $6.2 million of the tax-supported natural lands bond money. The purchases were assisted with about $5.8 million in matching dollars from the state and St. Johns River Water Management District. Another $2.8 million in acquisition deals are pending.

Among the proposed purchase projects commissioners will consider adding to the list is Camp David Hedrick, located south of downtown Geneva on State Road 428. The Boy Scouts of America Central Florida Council considered a sale or lease of the property to expressway builder Hubbard Construction Co. in 1991.

Hubbard investigated the site for a possible borrow pit, but after residents and local scouts opposed the project — and Hubbard was cited by the county for clearing sensitive upland areas — the deal was dropped. The Boy Scout council still wants to sell the campground to raise money for a new headquarters and to make repairs at other camps.

The campground is adjacent to the state's Demetree property preserve and close to the Econlockhatchee River corridor acquisition area.

Also recommended for the list is the 900 acres that once comprised the Hi Oaks East and West development projects, which lie along the southeastern border of the county. The property flanks the Econ.

Hi Oaks West was approved for dense development in 1987. Developers proposed low-density residential development at Hi Oaks East in early 1990, but the environmental community opposed the project and it was subsequently withdrawn.

Parade

Today, the situation is much different.

Students have been preparing for the festivities for weeks.

Some campaigned for a position on the Homecoming Court. The court was named last week and the King and Queen will be crowned at halftime of the football game on Friday evening.

Others have been designing and creating fancy paper and streamer floats. "The Homecoming theme of 'Beware...Seminole Park' (based, of course, on the blockbuster movie 'Jurassic Park') has inspired a host of colorful and frightful floats and truck decorations.

And, still other students have been preparing for Friday's Homecoming Dance. The dance which follows the football game will be a semi-formal affair at the Sanford Civic Center.

All week long students have been preparing for the Big Event with activities that are designed to get them in the fun, team spirit mood.

Monday and Tuesday were Hippie Day and Twin Day, respectively. Today is GO Day, so students are dressed in their finest toga.

At school tomorrow, students will dress in the colors of their favorite colleges before heading downtown for the parade.

The parade organizers hope to bring many of the school's fans out onto the sidewalk along First Street to cheer on the football team and encourage them toward victory over the Leesburg Yellowjackets. They have invited downtown merchants to come out and join in the celebration.

Downtown Sanford will be alive with music, dancing and cheering. The students at Seminole High hope the public will be out there to support them.

Are we leading world into economic recovery?

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

Sales of American homes and cars are surging. Factories are busier. Government number crunchers say the economic outlook should improve even more next year.

In Japan, meanwhile, people are fretting about the demise of lifetime job security and the country's biggest bankruptcy in the postwar period. Germany's employers are cutting once-sacrosanct benefits and considering a four-day workweek to save money.

The United States, which once looked like a deteriorating powerhouse about to be overtaken by Japan and Germany, now seems to be enjoying a substantial growth spurt.

At the same time, its chief foreign competitors are stumbling and staggering through the kind of acute economic pain Americans began to feel years ago.

Some forecasters even see the makings of a U.S.-led global renaissance in the coming year, assuming American businesses and consumers grow more prosperous and confident.

Under that scenario, the United States will assume the role of the global economic catalyst, as it has done in the past, creating demand for goods and services needed to stimulate growth worldwide.

"You can look forward in mid-1994 to a world firing on all cylinders, where the U.S., Japan and Europe are all growing simultaneously," said William Sterling, an international economist at Merrill Lynch & Co., the big Wall Street investment firm. "The process of growth becomes self-amplifying."

To be sure, this is not a prevailing view. Signs of American weakness still abound, from a near daily diet of corporate "downsizings" to the persistent recession in California and the North-east.

Many economists remain extremely cautious, tempering optimism with reminders of false starts in the economy that followed the Persian Gulf War and the election of President Clinton a year ago.

They point to American family incomes, which aren't growing significantly. Unemployment — or fear of it — is a common theme around the office, assembly line and dinner table.

A monthly layoff tally released today by the Chicago job placement firm Challenger, Gray and Christmas Inc. showed that pink slip announcements surged 37 percent in October to an average of 3,200 per day.

"Workers at all levels, especially recent victims of mass layoffs, must be terribly confused by all the talk from economists about a growing economy while at the same time reeling an increased number of layoff announcements," said James Challenger, the firm's president.

Still, anxiety over jobs has obscured signs of vibrancy. On Tuesday, for example, the government reported that sales of new homes hit a seven-year high in September, strengthened by the tonic of lower interest rates that made mortgages more affordable. The key U.S. forecasting gauge of economic activity also rose for the fourth straight month, pointing to healthier growth in 1994.

On Monday, a survey of industrial purchasing executives showed that U.S. manufacturing expanded in October for the first time in five months. Last week, U.S. automakers reported the strongest sales rate of cars and trucks all year.

Why are we growing while Germany and Japan are stagnating?

"Our interest rates came down earlier than foreign interest rates," said Sterling. "It's kind of a first-in, first-out pattern. We went into recession earlier, interest rates came down, that helped restore growth."

The lower cost of borrowing in the United States, however, isn't the only reason for the reversal of fortune. Japan and Germany are confronting their own peculiar sets of problems.

The Japanese are suffering partly from the hangover of excessive real estate speculation in the 1980s, which inflated property values and made Japan look much stronger than it really was.

"We're still in a recession caused by the breaking of the bubble," said Arthur Alexander, head of the Japan Economics Institute, a Japanese government-funded group in Washington.

The bad news from Japan shows no sign of abating. On Tuesday, for example, a Japanese construction company sought bankruptcy protection because of failed real estate investments that reportedly ballooned its debt to 590 billion yen or $5.5 billion, a record in postwar Japan.

In Germany, the costs of reunifying east and west have led to a case of national economic indigestion marked by rising unemployment and the worst recession since World War II.

This may sound reassuring to Americans concerned over a loss of U.S. competitiveness. But many economists say this is a flawed assumption in an intertwined world economy. A weak Japan and Germany cannot buy American-made jetliners, computers and food or patronize American beaches and resorts.

Others question whether the U.S. economy is really as strong as the data suggest. How, they ask, can consumers continue to spend at such a strong pace if they're not making more money? How will continual layoffs and looming tax increases affect the average American's willingness to borrow and spend?

"It doesn't make sense for business to go out there and expand rapidly when demand isn't out there," said Philip Braverman, chief economist at DKB Securities Corp., a New York investment firm.

"It doesn't make sense for consumers to go out there and buy homes at a rapid clip when jobs aren't available. More people will discover it's smart to be cautious."

Wildfires race into Malibu, residents hurt

By MICHAEL WHITE
Associated Press Writer

MALIBU, Calif. — Savage winds sent waves of fire raging over canyon ranches and seaside mansions in this celebrity hideaway, forcing thousands to load up their Jaguars and Jeeps and crowd onto gridlocked highways.

It was Southern California's seventh day of wildfires. Twice in a week, firestorms have gutted whole neighborhoods.

Two men were near death late Tuesday. As many as 100 homes were destroyed, and 20,000 acres of rugged canyon, pricey homes and sprawling horse ranches were black.

Flame-topped palm trees dotted the heavy smoke as the fire raced out of control from Santa Monica Mountain canyons 12 miles inland, to the edge of the Pacific Ocean.

Deborah Carpentier, barefoot, in shorts, her face streaked with soot, stood at the water's edge clutching her 18-month-old son as the hillside above her blazed a bright crimson in the night.

"I had him wrapped up in a wet towel. He was screaming," she said. "We stood on the beach and watched our house burn."

Just off the beach, a Coast Guard cutter waited to evacuate people by sea if necessary. Firefighters perched atop lifeguard towers to monitor the blaze.

Chaos reigned at roadblocks along usually scenic Pacific Coast Highway. People trying to get out vied for road space with drivers scrambling home after learning of the fire. Frantic, some abandoned their cars, trapping firetrucks in massive traffic jams.

Elsewhere across Southern California, several other fires erupted Tuesday and roared through brittle brushland, just days after firestorms torched more than 800 buildings.

Packwood: court battle over diaries

By SCOTT SONNER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — After a crushing defeat in the Senate, a defiant Sen. Bob Packwood is digging in for a court battle over shielding his diaries from lawmakers investigating alleged sexual misconduct and possible criminal wrongdoing.

A tortured two-day debate — during which one lawmaker urged the veteran Oregon Republican to "have the grace" to resign — culminated in a 94-6 Senate vote Tuesday night to force full disclosure of the diaries.

"I believe he has lost the grasp of what it means to be a U.S. senator," Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., told a Senate chamber ringed with echoes of the Clarence Thomas-Anita Hill hearings two years ago.

"None of us is without flaws," the former majority leader declared. "But when those flaws damage the institution of the Senate, it is time to have the grace to go."

But if resignation was on Packwood's mind, he offered no hint throughout the debate. Instead, he vigorously argued his own case, saying the Senate Ethics Committee had no right to "rummage" through thousands of pages of what he termed "very personal" diary entries.

And his lawyer, James Fitzpatrick, said Packwood was prepared to carry on the fight in court. "At this point, I think our inclination is to resist the subpoena on the grounds it exceeds the Fourth Amendment rights of the committee," he said after the Senate vote.

Fitzpatrick would not comment on whether Packwood might consider resigning or whether the senator ever solicited jobs for his wife — an issue raised by a suggestion that the diaries contained evidence of possible criminal wrongdoing.

Packwood himself disclosed on Tuesday that the original sexual misconduct probe

I believe he has lost the grasp of what it means to be a U.S. senator.

— Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

has been expanded to questions of whether he attempted to have lobbyists hire his wife in exchange for some senatorial "quid pro quo."

Fitzpatrick attempted to put a good face on the contentious debate.

"We very clearly framed the issue for the courts to understand the purpose of this subpoena — in light of our willingness to tender all relevant information — was simply to permit the committee to rummage through those diaries in an attempt to find completely new unrelated charges against Senator Packwood," he said.

"It was our desire to get all diary evidence relating to the pending ethics charge (on sexual misconduct) promptly before the Ethics Committee so we could go forward," he said. "The Ethics Committee decision will unfortunately delay that process for some time as we move through the courts."

Sen. Dennis DeConcini of Arizona was the lone Democrat to vote against the Senate resolution authorizing the committee to seek the court order to enforce the subpoena. The other opponents were Packwood, John Danforth, R-Mo., Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., and Arlen Specter, R-Pa.

Senators turned aside a proposed compromise that would have limited the scope of the subpoena as critics argued that restricting the subpoena would grant Packwood special treatment not afforded all Americans.

"The proposal suggests that there be two standards, one for 250 million ordinary citizens" and another for 100 U.S. senators, said Committee Chairman Richard H. Bryan, D-Nev.

Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., recalling the testimony of Ms. Hill two years ago at Thomas' Supreme Court confirmation hearing, said the compromise would have amounted to a "cover-up."

Danforth, who helped push a short-lived compromise with Specter, said the full subpoena for the more than 8,000 pages of Packwood's diaries was an "enormously sweeping request."

"I'm not here to defend Bob Packwood," Danforth said. "This is a blockbuster of a precedent and it goes to the fundamental issue of civil liberties."

Simpson, who also offered a compromise that was voted down 77-23, said the committee request for all of Packwood's diaries was "frightening in its scope" because it wasn't narrowed to "relevant" information involving sexual misconduct, intimidation of witnesses and the hiring issue.

Answering those who said women are carefully watching the case, Simpson said, "We get it. I get it. ... What we have some trouble with here is political correctness. We probably don't get it, because political correctness or media pressure has nothing to do with justice or freedom or due process."

Packwood told a rapt chamber that the committee raised questions about his "helping Mrs. Packwood find employment and linkage to official duties." Packwood said the job solicitations involved four people, two of them lobbyists, but did not elaborate.

Packwood and his wife, Georgie, were divorced in 1991.

He offered Tuesday to provide all diary entries on the employment opportunities for his former wife.

Premieres pummeled in TV ratings race

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — "Paula Poundstone" took a pounding on its first night, but ABC won the week anyway, according to Nielsen Media Research figures released Tuesday.

The talk-variety hour premiered Saturday with a puny 6.6 rating and 12 share, ranking 82nd out of 94 shows, Nielsen said.

"South of Sunset," another premiere, did even worse. It was cancelled after its first airing Wednesday.

The CBS action-adventure series bagged a 6.1 rating and 9 share, distinguishing itself not only for its brief run, but also for what was likely the smallest audience tuned to a premiere broadcast in television history.

Also on CBS, the retooled sitcom "Hearts Afire" had a heartless 7.9 rating and 12 share. And "Diagnosis Murder," starring Dick Van Dyke, got a 10.7 rating and 20 share.

One ratings point equals 942,000 television households.

Share is the percentage of TV sets in use at any one time that are tuned to a particular broadcast.

In prime time overall for the week of Oct. 25-31, ABC was on top with a 13.4 rating and 22 share. CBS was second with a 12.0 rating and 20 share, while NBC was third with an 11.0 rating and 18 share. Fox averaged a 7.7 rating and 12 share.

In the evening news derby, "ABC World News Tonight" kept its year-long hold on the top spot with a 10.2 rating and 21 share. "NBC Nightly News" was second with an 8.9 rating and 18 share, and "The CBS Evening News" scored an 8.8 rating and 17 share to rank third.

Here are the top 10 prime time shows, their networks and ratings: "Home Improvement," ABC, 24.4; "Roseanne," ABC, 22.7; "60 Minutes," CBS, 22.1; "Seinfeld," NBC, 20.4; "Coach," ABC, 18.8; "Grace Under Fire," ABC, 18.7; "Frasier," NBC, 18.2; "NFL Monday Night Football," ABC, 17.4; "PrimeTime Live," ABC, 16.5; "Murder, She Wrote," CBS, 16.2.

Change is again the refrain, this time GOP celebrates

By JOHN KING
An AP News Analysis

NEW YORK — A different election year, a different party doing the celebrating. Yet the message was much the same: Voters everywhere are restless, hardly ready to stifle a clamoring for change.

This time a year ago, it was Bill Clinton and fellow Democrats who benefited from the disquiet, winning the White House after a 12-year drought and capturing eight of a dozen governorships up for grabs.

But today the Republicans are rightly celebrating, triumphant in contests for the top jobs in New Jersey, Virginia and New York City — posts in Democratic hands when the voting began.

And it wasn't just in those marquee contests where voters voiced their dismay — some might say disgust — with politics and politicians. In Maine and New York City, term limits were endorsed by whopping margins, a symbol of anti-incumbent sentiment sure not to be lost on politicians who face the voters next year.

Three incumbent mayors also were defeated, in Hartford, Conn., Dubuque, Iowa, and Parkersburg, W.Va.

"It is not a good time to be an incumbent politician in this country," Democratic National Committee Chairman David Wilhelm said at the close of a bleak day for his party.

That's a sobering message for Democrats who, because of their majorities in Congress and advantage at statehouses, have much more at risk next year, when the entire House, 34 Senate seats and 36 governorships are up on the ballot.

Yet Republicans can't celebrate for too long either.

Except for Virginia, where Republican George Allen was elected governor in a landslide, the Republican victories were by no means overwhelming. Christie Whitman won the New Jersey governor's race by roughly 35,000 votes of 2.3 million cast, and Rudolph Giuliani's win in New York was by a similarly fragile margin, roughly 44,000 votes of 1.7 million.

Much like Clinton a year ago — when he won with 43 percent as an angry electorate gave independent Ross Perot 19 percent — Whitman and Giuliani can hardly claim powerful mandates.

"In New York and New Jersey, there was obviously considerable doubt as to whether the Republican challengers could actually deliver," said GOP pollster John McLaughlin. "They won, but there was still a credibility gap."

So, again, the message appeared to be something like this: Voters aren't thrilled with what they're getting from government, but aren't overwhelmed by the alternatives, either.

"The fact is that there is an American electorate that is searching for answers and is not convinced that either party has a monopoly on the right answers," Wilhelm said. "So they are looking for real leadership."

Evidence in exit interviews with voters that showed deep reservations about Whitman and Giuliani even among many of their supporters lent credence to that analysis.

But the results still carried this harsh reality for Democrats: In the six biggest races since Clinton was elected president, the voters have sided with Republicans.

First came a Senate election in Georgia, followed by another Senate win in Texas and a GOP victory in the Los Angeles mayor's race. The New Jersey, Virginia and New York City wins were three more trophies for the GOP, three more elections in which voters decided to shake things up.

"We must reject the notion that what has happened today is anything other than a fair and forthright call for change," said the New York mayor who lost, David Dinkins.

Republicans couldn't help but insist that Clinton was a factor in that call.

"While all of these races are most affected by local issues and the quality of candidates, they are all impacted by a national political environment which has really helped Republicans this year," said Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour. "The Democrats like to say all politics is local. Well, we learned again that, locally, Clinton is a very unpopular president."

The Democrats disputed that, pinning their losses on local factors — Florida's $2.8 billion tax hike in 1990, New York's intractable crime and budget woes, Terry's lethargic campaign.

The grass is always greener...

An expectant mother contemplates the future. Will her offspring be healthy? Will it be a cow or bull-calf? Life for this Sanford dairy cow? She wouldn't have it any 'udder' way.

Lake Mary sweeps to 5A-Region II crown

From Staff Reports

NEPTUNE BEACH — By solving one problem, the Lake Mary High School girls volleyball team took care of another problem and, as a result, its 5A Region II showdown with Neptune Beach-Fletcher posed little problem, the Rams winning 15-5, 16-14.

Lake Mary, which captured its third consecutive volleyball regional title, advances to the 5A Section I championship match at Orange Park on Friday night. Orange Park, which also is in the Jacksonville area, knocked off Niceville 10-15, 15-12, 15-0 for the Region I crown last night.

Rather than make the three hour trip to play Tuesday's match on a school bus, a tour bus was chartered for the Rams. The seats that weren't taken up by Lake Mary players and coaches were filled by cheerleaders, fans, and family members.

"What really helped was that we chartered a nice bus for us to make the trip," said Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry. "And we had it packed with parents, junior varsity players, members of our boys team."

ORANGE PARK — Success for one of the Orangewood Christian School team nearly meant disaster for the other.

Luckily for all the Rams involved, it didn't.

Early Tuesday evening, the Orangewood Christian boys soccer squad claimed the Region I championship with a 2-1 sudden-death shootout victory over host St. John's Country Day School.

While that match was still going on, the Orangewood Christian girls volleyball squad, which travelled to Orange Park along with the soccer team and a host of family and friends, had to be dragged away in order to prepare for its 1A Region III match with St. John's.

Whether it was the wait, the emotional drain of the soccer match, or just nerves, the Orangewood Christian girls got off to a slow start, missing six of their first

SANFORD — A win is a win is a win.

They each took different paths, but the top three teams in the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Fall Tuesday Night Slowpitch Softball League at Chase Park all won.

Third place Ken Rummel Chevrolet scored eight runs in the top of the first inning and went on to double up the Orphans, 12-6; second place Monroe Harbour Marina had to score two runs in the top of the seventh inning to edge Wheelchel & Howard, 8-6; and Discount Propane flashed a lot of leather on defense to remain undefeated with a 5-1 victory over Gager Pest Control.

Discount Propane's win moves it to 8-0 on the season and one victory away from clinching at least a tie for the league title. Monroe Harbour Marina is 6-1 and still nipping at the leaders' heels, while Ken Rummel Chevrolet is 4-3 and in third by itself.

Trailing the leaders are Gager Pest Control (3-4), the Orphans (2-5) and Wheelchel & Howard and Florida Manor (both 1-6).

Next week, Wheelchel & Howard challenges Discount Propane at 6:30 p.m.; Gager Pest Control tackles Ken Rummel Chevrolet at 7:30 p.m.; the Orphans take on Florida

SANFORD — For a team made up largely of first-year players playing for a second-year coach, the Seminole Community College men's basketball team showed impressive poise in their 1993-94 debut Tuesday night at the SCC Health and Physical Education Center.

Led by freshmen Michael Sheppard and Ralph Philpott, the Raiders overcame a jittery start to post a 74-69 win over the taller, deeper Pasho-Hornando Community College Conquistadors.

Sheppard, from Rochester, N.Y., was the game's leading scorer, knocking down 18 points and handing out five assists. Philpott, a Lyman High School graduate from Allamonte Springs, contributed 14 points and six rebounds.

"I'll take it," said SCC coach Bernard Merithe, starting his second season at the helm of the Raiders. "We were sloppy at the start, but that was mostly jitters."

"Most of the team is made up of freshmen playing their first college game. Preseason games are one thing. For most of them, this was their first official college game. They were nervous out there at the start, but once they settled down, they were all

Orr caps '93 with End-of-the-Month win

Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — Orlando SpeedWorld ended its 1993 point season with a bang as 200 cars jammed the pit area to near capacity.

Pete Orr capped a superb season by capturing the 50-lap End of the Month Late Model Championship, while rookie Donald Shedd earned the Modified point championship on the final race night.

Wildwood's Wayne Anderson, the 1993 FASCAR (Florida Association of Stock Car Automobile Racing) champion, set the evening's fast qualifying time and led a side-by-side battle with Orr before Orr took command on lap 48.

Third running Ron McCreary spun on lap 46 to bring out a caution. As the green flag flew for a restart, a backmarker that had been leaking water pulled back onto the track. As the field hit turn three it was havoc as the cars ran through a thin film of water.

With the exception of first place Orr and last place Hal Perry, the remainder of the 18 car field spun out.

McCreary, who was working his way through traffic in an effort to regain his earlier position, had no where to go and plowed into the cars of Ronnie Roach and Wayne Akers. McCreary and Roach were out of competition for the evening, while Akers made repairs and eventually drove to a sixth place finish.

Anderson slipped past Orr on the restart to lead for three laps, but the Horns Around Farms Chevrolet Camaro driver would not be denied as Orr took the point again on lap 32 and led the rest of the way for his sixth victory of the season.

Anderson came home second, followed by Ed Meredith, Bruce Lawrence and Ricky Wood.

Meredith came back later to back up his third place Late Model finish with a convincing win in the Modified feature.

Wayne Heckle took second, with Kelly Jarrett, Bruce Thompson and Glen Carter rounding out the top five.

Shedd, who led the point race by only two points going into the night, finished sixth, which was good enough to give the rookie the 1993 Modified point title.

Ted Vullips outgained 1993 point champion Bobby Sears of Osteen for his first win at SpeedWorld in the mini-stock feature. Finishing third through fifth were J.D. Duncan, Gene Merritts and Conrad Greiner.

The Limited Late Model event went to Michael Williams, his sixth feature win of the season. Williams was followed by Timmy Todd, Gary Schlichter, Ted Head and the 1993 division point titlist Jacob Warren.

Sportman honors went to Jerry Smith as he outlasted Barbara Pierce, Rick Johns, Dick Douglas and Jeff Luu.

Mike Hughes capped his ninth Bomber win of the year, topping 1993 points champion Wally Semrow by three car lengths at the checkers. Glen Castro, John Smith and Glen Cordell trailed.

Randy Newby took his first career win in the Run-Abouts over Chuck Vola, Steven Cordell, Mike McCreary and Jim Foy.

Kenny Campbell topped a 28 car Mini-Bomber field for his seventh win of 1993.

With the exception of first place Orr and last place Hal Perry, the remainder of the 18 car field spun out.

right." Phillipott gave SCC the first lead of the game when he converted a free throw 19 seconds into the game. The Conquistadors (0-1) scored the next seven points and 18 of the next 23 to go up 15-0.

With Pasco-Hernando holding a 21-20 lead, the Raiders pulled back ahead on a dunk by Charles Davis off a pass from Sheppard. Then it was SCC's turn to go on a run, outscoring the Conquistadors 10-1 to take a 32-22 lead. Pasco-Hernando surged back, scoring 10 straight points to tie the score with 38 seconds left in the first half.

Sheppard sliced through the center of the Pasco-Hernando defense for a lay-up with six seconds left, sending SCC into the lockerroom at halftime up 34-32.

The Conquistadors opened the second half with a basket to tie the score. After an exchange of baskets left the score knotted at 30-30, Phillipott corralled a rebound, stuck it back in, and was fouled on the play. He converted the free throw, putting the Raiders ahead to stay.

SCC's lead would reach 10 (55-45) and 11 (63-52) points before Pasco-Hernando started to chip away. The Conquistadors cut the gap to six on three occasions, the last time at 69-63 with 48 seconds remaining in the game.

Aaron Merrell, one of three sophomores on SCC's roster, made a pair of free throws to give the Raiders a 71-63 edge. Don Tillman also converted a pair of free throws to put SCC back up by 10.

Elbardo Rolfe and Shawn Wilson each threw in a three-point field goal around another free throw by Tillman allowed the Conquistadors to make the final 74-69.

Two areas that Merthie thought would be problems - turnovers and free throw shooting - didn't appear to be major stumbling blocks against the Conquistadors.

"Coming in, I'd thought we'd have problems turning the ball over," said Merthie. "We keep wanting to play uptempo. When we start giving the ball away, we have to go in spurts, when the opportunity is given to us."

One way Merthie was able to keep the Raiders in check was the constant shuffling he had to do to keep his few legitimate big men - Antonio Sutton (8 feet, 7 inches) and Michael Burch, Charles Davis, and Phillipott (all listed at 6 feet, 5 inches) - in the game.

"Because of some injury and eligibility problems, we had to shuffle players around quite a bit," said Merthie. "We have to try and play a safe game to make sure we have some inside help at the end of the game."

As it turned out, Sutton fouled out while Burch and Phillipott finished the game with four fouls each.

Led by Merrell (who converted seven of eight free throws), the Raiders were just good enough from the charity stripe (making 20 of 31 attempts) to keep Pasco-Hernando at bay.

"You'd like to make more free throws, but we made the key free throws, that's the main thing," said Merthie.

SCC will return to action this weekend, when the Raiders hosts their annual tournament.

On Friday, Broward Community College will play Gulf Coast Community College at 6 p.m. with the Raiders taking on Brevard Community College at 8 p.m. Friday's losers will play at 8 p.m. Saturday while Friday's winners will square off in the championship game at 8 p.m.

and other friends and fans. "As a result, we had a lot of fans there. A lot of credit goes to them. They were loud and supportive. It seemed like they were the only ones in the gym."

After ripping off a win in the first game, Lake Mary sprinted out to a 6-0 lead in the second game. That's when the Rams encountered their first problem.

"We had a 6-0 lead in the second game," recounted Henry. "Then they (Fletcher) just started serving these really nice balls. There were a couple of aces and things started to snowball. We did all the other things. We just couldn't deal with their serves."

The Senators eventually went on top 7-6 in the second game before the Rams were able to right themselves. After that, it was nip-and-tuck to the final point.

"Both teams made their share of errors on serve receiving," said Henry. "We did a pretty good job on defense. They (Fletcher) were tipping and dumping balls. We read that pretty well and were able to dig them up."

"We made our own mistakes. Added with their good serving, it made for a tough second game."

Henry said that a starting time for Friday's match with Orange Park will be announced some time today.

"In the second game, we got off to kind of a slow start. Finally, Jen Dickinson served seven consecutive points to give us a 7-2 lead. Andrea Hart served five straight points and Allison Hirschy jump-served the last two."

Far corners of the earth evident in spring fashion

By FRANCES PARNES
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Oscar de la Renta unveiled long, loose North African gowns, exotic scroll work and spice tones evoking the far corners of the earth.

Jennifer George stayed closer to home at the spring fashion previews on Tuesday, showing simple American sportswear separates including her trademark great, crisp white shirts.

In the manner of designers at last month's Paris and Milan shows, de la Renta came up with tunic jackets, Nehru collars, layered styles reminiscent of Indian saris, and rustic wooden disc necklaces. Flowing pants, a key silhouette, seemed featherweight and billowy in seersucker linen gauze, silk and chiffon. The collection went native in earthy hues such as cinnamon, apricot, mocha and marigold.

"I like the feminine, floating fabric," said Ivana Trump after the show.

Also on hand were Barbara Walters, Beverly Sills and designer Carolynne Roehm.

While de la Renta's clothes are practically destined for A-list tables at "21," some of Jennifer George's styles are to the country club born.

Preppy button-front navy miniskirts looked snappy and sporty with menswear striped cotton oxford shirts. Bare legs went with George's ever-present Bas Weejuns in black or cordovan.

The designer did not skimp on interpretations of white shirts.

"I take my direction from them," said George. "Instead of simply designing a cotton poplin shirt, I have a tremendous selection of great white shirts, from an empire waist baby doll shirt to an asymmetric Mandarin collar shirt."

Monday evening belonged to Nicole Miller, whose models paraded as tough schoolgirls in teeny, bottom-baring baby doll dresses. Naughty black mesh thigh-high stockings and platform shoes lacing up the leg were necessary accessories.

Moving away from the age of innocence, Miller's dread-locked models looked funky in empire-waist flippy mini dresses, rompers or cheeky hot pants, with drab canvas army boots or rubber galoshes.

Presley poster boy for libraries

By The Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Elvis Presley not only swiveled his hips. He enjoyed curling up with a good book.

That's why the American Library Association has chosen him for a poster encouraging people to read.

The late king of rock 'n' roll is shown on the poster reading a script of the 1961 movie "Wild in the Country." Above his head is the word "READ."

The association will send out catalogs offering the poster to about 280,000 schools, government offices, military bases and other library sites.

"We've worked with a wide variety of celebrities over the years, from Bill Cosby to Sting to Whoopi Goldberg to Harrison Ford," said Marcia Kuzmaul, the Chicago-based association's marketing director. "We feel Elvis belongs with the rest of them."

Presley loved to read and always took books on concert tours, she said.

Consult gynecologist about hysterectomy

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am on my surgeon's waiting list for a hysterectomy, yet I am confused as to whether I should have my ovaries removed. I'm 44, have fibroid tumors in my uterus, a cyst on my cervix, and cysts on my ovaries as well. I've been on Anaprox for years to control the pain of menstruation and I am having the procedure done because of excessive bleeding. I don't want to go through menopause prematurely and have to take estrogen. Help.

DEAR READER: The question of whether you should have your ovaries removed is best negotiated with your gynecologist, who knows you and your health problems. Although I can understand your reluctance to undergo early menopause (which will occur when you are divested of your ovaries), you are, at 44, pretty close to menopause anyway, so the issue is moot. A decision about the ovaries would be more germane in a younger woman.

Because your ovaries will serve no real purpose other than to provide a source of apprehension because of the possibility of ovarian cancer, I suggest that you have them taken out. This will eliminate a worry as you grow older. Estrogen supplements in menopausal women are relatively inexpensive and free of side effects.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter has been diagnosed with sickle cell anemia. I don't have it, my other children don't have it, and I wonder if it could have been acquired from a blood transfusion.

DEAR READER: Sickle cell disease is not acquired from blood transfusions.

It is an inherited affliction, caused by an abnormality of hemoglobin, the oxygen-carrying pigment in red blood corpuscles. This abnormal hemoglobin causes the red blood cells to lose their normal doughnut shape and become comma-shaped (like sickles).

Patients with this disease suffer serious consequences, including anemia, bone pain, abdominal pain, nerve injury, kidney damage, and susceptibility to infections.

The diagnosis is made by special blood tests; patients

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

The diamond nine is known as the Curse of Scotland. The editor of Bridge Magazine, a British publication, gave six possible explanations - each unlikely to be right. They ranged from the order for the Massacre of Glencoe in 1692 being written on the back of the card, to the nine lozenges that formed the arms of the Earl of Stair, who was especially unpopular because of his union with England and his connection with the aforementioned Massacre.

Whatever the actual reason, a Scot would have his eye firmly fixed on the most important card in today's deal.

North's response was a limit raise, showing at least four trumps and about 11 points.

One declarer ruffed the clubbing lead, drew three rounds of trumps and cashed the diamond king. East's discard was a blow as powerful as any struck at Glencoe on that fateful day. With only one trump remaining in the dummy, South had an unavailing diamond loser. Eventually he took the spade finesse, but it lost; one down.

The successful declarer saw that he needed only four diamond tricks, not five. So, after drawing trumps, he led a low diamond toward the dummy, planning to finesse the Curse. But West split his honors. Declarer calmly played dummy's three.

Winning the spade switch in hand, South finessed the Curse, cashed dummy's diamond king and spade ace, ruffed a club in hand and cashed the A-Q of diamonds, discarding the club seven and spade jack from the dummy. A spade ruff in dummy gave him these 12 tricks: two spades, five hearts, four diamonds and the spade ruff.
