Women Voters To Offer Ideas On Redistricting

The Seminole County will present to the county commissioners within 30 days several alternate plans for changing commissioner district lines to achieve equal populations in the five districts. The commission Tuesday voted 3-2 to ask the league to present the alternatives to the county commissioners within a month Commissioners Bill Kirchhoff, Dick Williams and Bob French voted in favor, Kimbrough and Harry Kwiatkowski voted against

Currently the population size of the districts varies as much as 50 per cent. Commissioner Rirchhoff, who represents most of Sanford, has 18,535 people in his district, while who represents Forest City and part of Altamonte

"I'm not interested in the league drawing up the proposals. This is a political issue," said Kimbrough. "There will be a heck of a lot of hassles making Seminole County school board districts the same as the county commission's' another proposal of the league.

But Pat Bailey, secretary of the league's Seminole County chapter said, "Equal population is our first priority. Having the same district boundaries for the school board and county commission is a lower priority."

"I don't see any disadvantage to the league doing it," Williams said.

Commissioner Kwiatkowski disagreed. "It's going to be a political decision, and there's a number of projects the

Carter Wants Broad Power

To Impose Gas Rationing

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter wants broad authority to impose gasoline rationing in the event of an energy crisis, but a key member of Congress says it is unlikely such authority will be granted. Administration sources said Tuesday that the President is going to ask for standby authority for rationing that could reduce gasoline consumption by at least 25 per cent. But Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said he was surprised at the report of Carter's plans. "I doubt Congress, barring some situation that does not now exist, some national emergency ... will grant that authority to any president,

Carter Not Bound By Campaign Stand

President Carter has good reason to try to put some distance between himself and the next director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The late J. Edgar Hoover was too close to the presidents he served, as the revelations since his leath have made clear.

But we're beginning to doubt whether Mr. Carter has accomplished anything useful by setting up a nine-member advisory committee to pick the five "best-qualified" candidates for the job. The committee headed by Irving S. Shapiro, chairman of the Dupont Corp., has handed five names to Mr. Carter. The President has made them public and announced that in all likelihood he will choose his nominee from among them.

This process, Mr. Carter assured us last February, would help assure that the appointment is "completely removed from politics" and is based solely on merit. Without rushing to judgment of any of the five men named, we can observe that the President may have painted himself into a corner. There are some embarrassments in the group — the trips to Las Vegas by Sheriff William Lucas of Detroit, for instance - and those embarrassments are now in Mr. Carter's lap.

It has been left to the digging of reporters to turn up any questionable associations in the lives of the candidates, and to round up the pros and cons inevitably inspired by such a list. Such a public ordeal is a heavy price to pay for being considered for a federal appointment. Why didn't the Sharpiro committee check these people out more

It didn't have time, apparently. Mr. Shapiro says his panel originally was given 90 days to make its search, asked for 60 days more but got only a 30day extension, and still didn't ask for a "full field" FBI check on the finalists. In the end, he says, choices were made mainly on "gut judgment" about the qualities of the 48 candidates called in for

Mr. Shapiro says the panel was looking for omeone of the character and caliber of Gen. George C. Marshall, the warrior-statesman of the Roosevelt-Truman years and a truly towering figure. We wish he hadn't mentioned that. It only makes the five candidates, none of whom has a national reputation, look all the more like the result of hasty compromise.

Mr. Carter is now stuck with his list. Perhaps one of the five has the makings of a good FBI director. But perhaps not, and the President will have to keep looking. He has not made his own choice any easier by inviting the public into the selection process. The appointment will still be his, and the new FBI director will serve at his pleasure.

Congress changed the law in 1968 to provide that appointment of the FBI director be confirmed by the Senate. That provides for ample public examination of the appointee. In 1976 Congress decreed that the director can serve no more than 10 years. That protects against Hoover-style empirebuilding. Congress also has given itself new authority over the FBI budget.

Those structural reforms should have a beneficent effect on the future of the FBI. In the end, however, President Carter must assume responsibility for the executive direction of the agency with all the problems it faces in being rebuilt from within and restoring its public image. Removing the appointment from "politics" is a nice rhetorical point, but that doesn't remove from the Oval Office the necessarity of making a decision that may have political consequences.

The Yankees of those days were a magic of their own. I remember the chill which ran up my spine as stepped into the dugout. The Yankees weren't wearing pinstripes, but I envisioned them as I spotted Mantle, Berra, Skowron, Maris.

Roger was ducking sportswriters, who kept asking him if he was going to hit 52 in '62? Trying to seem unimpressed at the size of Mickey's neck muscles, or how young Whitey Ford still appeared, I heard a voice beckoning me from the dugout, where Casey sat leaning on one hand, legs crossed.

Alaskan Dilemma

Nine years after discovery of the huge oilfield at Prudhoe Bay, oil at last is flowing through the 800-mile trans-Alaska pipeline - and the nation has a brand new energy headache. The problem is that by Oct. 1 the pipeline will be transporting 1.2 million barrels a day, twice as much as West Coast refineries can absorb Moreover, no pipeline is ready to move the surplus to the Midwest, where it is much needed Clearly, a permanent solution must include a pipeline connecting the West Coast with crudehungry midcontinent refineries. Until that i done oil industry officials and President Carter's energy advisers have three temporary ways to go, unfortunately none of them attractive.

The choices are to sell unneeded Alaska crude 's to Japan in return for Middle East oil delivered to the East Coast; to ship it in tankers through the Panama Canal to the Gulf Coast; or to relieve the glut by shutting down the Naval Reserve oilfield at Elk Hills, Calif.

Purely from an economic standpoint, selling some 600,000 barrels a day to Japan makes sense. However, the political and psychological costs would be excessive.

Too many people believe there is no oil shortage and the "crisis" is a ripoff engineered. by a greedy industry. Seeing Alaska crude! flowing to Japan would reinforce such suspicions and make the public less likely to cooperate in

Also, trading Alaskan for Middle Eastern crude would keep this country highly vulnerable to another oil embargo, hardly a sound policy.

Canal, the Alaska surplus would have to move to Gulf ports in small vessels; an expensive and wasteful procedure. However, this probably will turn out to be the least bad temporary measure.

Closing down the Elk Hills would deprive the chaos, of confidence arising out of despair. "turned around" and converted to carry Alaska crude. That would be an excellent step, since Midland could easily be connected to pipelines serving the Midwest.

However, California authorities and environmental radicals are fighting the unloading of tankers at Long Beach on the grounds that it would add to air pollution. The protests are a bit reminiscent of those that delayed the Alaska pipeline for years and helped bloat its cost to $7.7

The industry itself recognized that it could not continue to sell bonds of municipalities about Because of what it called "unreasonable" which it knew little. Bond dealers now insist on demands from California air-quality officials, Exxon has reluctantly withdrawn from the Long Beach project. Crum said his decision was motivated by feelings and concern for his family, his love for the university, "but most of all my love for the people and fans of Louisville.' Louisville had a 21-7 record last season and won the Metro 7 Conference title. After six seasons here, Crum's .789 winning percentage based on a record of 139-37, ranks second among the nation's major college coaches to Jerry Tarkanian of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas. Tarkanian is 102-16.

ther. "I am a smoker," he said, "and every time I smoke a cigarette I see the warning: the surgeon general has determined that cigarette smoking is hazardous to your health." But knocking off the price support program, as his amendment proposed, is hazardous to the interests of farmers, most of them concentrated in a half-dozen Southern and Border states. As seniority would have it there is a good deal of congressional clout concentrated there, too. That runs up the odds against repeal of the tobacco price support program. Nevertheless, Johnson planning to try again later this month with an amendment to please out the separts after two or three years. That way, he says, the Agriculture Department would have time to study the impact on farmers and consider steps to ease their

But the paradox stands. The government spends about $44 nillion a year to support to bacco prices, inspect and grade crops and underwrite research on production. The same government spends $3 million directly, and much more indirectly, to cope with tobacco as a health program.

There are powerful economic arguments on the other side of the ledger. Tobacco is the fifth largest cash crop for U.S. farmers, and about 500,000 of them get some income by

Mini Speakout Hopes To Involve The Uninvolved mini-speakout to be held Saturday from 10:30 a.m. - 1:30 have their say at the Women's Conference, especially as p.m. in the fine arts auditorium at Seminole Community "We want to reach those women who don't usually attend meetings. In particular, the homemakers," explained Teri Buratti, coordinator.

The speakout, she said, is "a kind of preview" to the Florida Women's Confreence on Observance of International Women's Decade, to be held July 15, 16 and 17 in Orlando. The purpose of the speakout is to gather information about women's concerns - especially those women who are not usually outspoken or involved with the Women's Movement, said Ms. Buratti.

"We are trying to reach the silent majority - those women who are 'just' housewives, but who do have opinions," said Mrs. Mart Tucker, whose particular conference participants will elect delegates to the National Conference and vote on a plan of action for the Women of Florida.

The organizers of the mini speakout urge women who would like to voice their concerns to attend the informal gathering Saturday. Registration will be from 10:30 - 11 a.m. and the speakout will run for about two hours. Assisting Ms. Buratti in coordinating the event is Winkle LeFils, president of the Florida Council of Catholic Women and vice chairman of the Florida Farm Bureau Women. Assisting the coordinators is June Gordon. Project 21st Century Women. SCC.

This Trifle Not Soggy

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor DEAR CECILY: At a dinner party recently there was a disussion about what should go into the dessert called Trifle. One of the guests said he didn't like it because "it was usually an excuse to make stale sponge cake into a soggy mess." However, I've tasted some delicious Trifles and would appreciate having a recipe that wasn't "a soggy mess!" - DESSERT

There are many ways to make a decent Trifle. Some good recipes call for sponge cake layers, some for ladyfingers. Sometimes crumbled macaroons or slivered almonds go in. Sometimes a jam, jelly or preserve is used. The Trifles we like best are made with fruit. At this time of year you might like o try the following recipe calling for fresh apricots and strawberries. It's a dessert an acquaintance of ours enjoys serving because she says her guests have always approved of
