U.S., Hanoi Agree To Aid Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) - AB understanding has been reached on a U.S. economic aid program for North Vietnam, but American officials said there will be no formal agreement until all fighting ends in Indochina.

Fearful of upsetting congressional sensitivities, the officials were reluctant to give any de-

However, it was learned the program covered five years and deals primarily with providing food and housing, at least at the outset. Later aid would cover rehabilitation of the North Vietnamese economy, such as rebuilding light industry destroyed by American bombing.

Administration sources said none of the aid could be used for war production.

The sources refused to discuss cost of the program, although when U.S.-North Vietnam economic talks first began in Paris last March reports surfaced mentioning $750 million over five years.

Compromise Needed In Ecology Fight

Atomic Energy Commission controls had resulted in contamination of ground water with resulting danger to the Columbia River near the AEC's Hanford, Wash., and Idaho Falls, Idaho,

This, strangely, was pleasing news to to some of the nation's most militant ecologists, conservationists, pure air-water rooters and the like. It proved their point -technological "progress" is bad per se.

It also illustrated the ridiculous polarization that concerns extreme positions taken by industry on one hand and environmentalists on the other. There is a need for more power, more energy, more oil.

It is a need that any intelligent individual can recognize and it sometimes leads to industrial greed and disregard for ecological

On the other hand, there is a relatively small but militant, powerful and persistent segment of the population, often led by the Sierra Club, that refuses to recognize this need and insists on retaining the pristine nature of the environment to the total exclusive of either development or even proper management techniques.

There are hundreds of examples beyond the dumping of half a million gallons of radioactive liquid waste by the AEC at Hanford-and the cries of anguish and "I told you so" from the environmentalists. These are examples of industrial abuses and they include examples of ecological obstruction. They cry out for decent and considered compromise to the end that the nation's needs can be met and the nation's beauty can be retained. Among the examples of uncompromising confrontation was the Santa Barbara oil spill mess, with resulting degradation of the shoreline and the killing of thousands of birds. The Sierra clubbers and others cried, "No more oil, never again." Some of the oil people were equally

Federal 'Help' Hurts

Railroad Policy Off The Track

NEW YORK - "If someone had set out with malice aforethought to destroy the effectiveness of the American railroads," observed Dr. Clarence B. Carson in his work, "Throttling the Railroads," "he could hardly have devised better ways than those employed by the federal govern-

This year is likely to be a fateful year for the American railroads in general and the Penn Central in particular. Two plans have been advanced to deal with what has been called "The Wreck of the Penn Central." One is to liquidate the massive rail system and allow it to go out of business by Oct.

Another, favored by many in Congress, is to give ailing or bankrupt railroads like the Penn Central huge outlays of federal funds for reorganization while at the same time granting the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) and the Department of Transportation (DOT) greater power to run and manage the railroads.

It is a political sign of the times that Congress and the country are not alarmed at the possible economic effect the liquidation of railroad lines like the Penn Central would have, and refuse to face the central causes behind the wreck of the railroads. Yet the proposal to save the railroads from certain doorn or liquidation is more of the same government intervention that had brought about the ruin of the railroads-which started with the establishment of the ICC in 1887. There are those in Congress who see the solution to the problem by granting more power to the ICC, when it is the

According to the former board chairman of the Penn Central, Stuart Saunders, ICC delays in approving rate increases for his line cost $125 million in revenues in the three years prior to actual filing of bankruptcy. Furthermore, when the line asked the ICC for permission to abandon at least 5,000 of its 20,000 miles of track as an economy move to aid in its reorganization, the ICC delayed and then approved only 1,000 miles. Studies conducted estimate that ICC regulations cost all the nation's railroads annually between $1.7 to $2.4 billion. In turn, this has cost the economy as much

Such facts, as well as the 86-year history of failure of the ICC, seem to have no appreciable impact on those in and out of Congress who now argue, in essence, for a total government take-over of the railroads. As Dr. Carson points out in

"Government throttled the railroads in three ways

"In the first place, restrictive regulation took away crucial managerial authority from the railroads and vested it in the Interstate Commerce Commission. This was supplemented, in turn, by various legislative inhibitions of a general nature. In the second place, government subsidized, and otherwise privileged competitive means of transport. In the third place, government fostered the organization of railroad unions and aided them in various ways in circumscribing and hamstringing the use of rail facilities." It is for these three reasosn that trustees of the bankrupt

Penn Central want to liquidate the rail line.

SAN JUAN P.R. (NEA) Puerto Rico, caught in a slight economic downturn and saddled with at least 12 per cent unemployment, is nevertheless plunging ahead with vigorous plans for growth as if it were kind of a miniature Japan.

It already has over a billion worth of petro-chemical plants on which it hopes to found a host of labor-intensive satellite industries producing varied byproducts in demand in the huge mainland American market.

Now it wants a great deep-water port capable of taking today's oil tankers of 200,000 tons and more, around which it expects even larger refineries and petro-chemical works would be established

Led by serious, quietly-driving 36-year-old Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon and a veteran economic developer, Teodoro Moscoso, the island's unique commonwealth government is trying to lure not just more U.S. industry (some 120 of the top American manufacturers already have plants in Puerto Rico), but to draw in the ambitious Japanese, to pull in some European firms, and to interest its island neighbor, the Dominican Republic, in becoming a vast supplier of foodstuffs for its swelling 2.8 million population.

The periodic visitor (this is my sixth trip to assess the is land's development over the past 15 years) is inevitably keenly impressed with the optimism, unflagging yet always hard-headedly realistic, which marks its leadership.

Puerto Rican leaders understand fully that their economic fate is closely tied to conditions in mainland America. The mainland is the key source of their development capital and the great outlet for their products. Trouble there is trouble here. Though they are 1,600 miles from Washington and the gloom of Watergate, they naturally fret over the uncertain-

Still, Puerto Rico keeps constantly in mind that it is mainand America's fourth biggest market. And, while the first flush of its stunning tourist boom is long gone and the giddy days of the first hopeful industrial invasion have given way to harder long-range planning, the spirit of advance stays

Puerto Rico has opened a development office in Tokyo. A leading Japanese electronics manufacturer today has plants here employing 600 people and is expected soon to lift that

Off its experience in building its initial complex of petrochemical plants, Moscoso says in an interview that the islanders think they have the technical know-how to get seri ously into shipbuilding (a field wherein Japan today has 50 per cent of the world's business). It is estimated some 11,000 persons are sufficiently trained to make a suitable shipyard Moscoso and others well understand that Puerto Rico, for all its "showplace" gains of the past, can't stay on an upward course simply by luring industries which invest grea sums in plant but need relatively few workers. The island's unemployed are restless, and as is seen everywhere in the world, they are drifting into the cities to complicate already swamping urban problems. So key element is moving the petro-chemical industry past its basic stage and into the "satellite" phase calling for plants making plastic products, synthetic libers, etc. That's Puerto Rico's tourism lost its bloom when its flashy, costridden hotels took on an image of a combination Miami Beach and Las Vegas. But here, too, bright new ideas are

Divorcee took his pillow talk seriously

By Abigail Van Buren E 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a married woman who has been deeply involved with a married man for four years. He has children and so have L.

I divorced my husband thinking he would divorce his wife and marry me. I can't honestly say that he promised to divorce his wife, but he said so many things like: "If we were both free, I would marry you in a minute," and: "I have never loved anyone the way I love you." I took it to mean he would divorce his wife and marry me. I was

My husband never suspected a thing until I made a full confession. Now that he knows the truth he will have nothing to do with me. Was I foolish?

DEAR VIRGO: You were. Your mistake was taking pillow talk seriously. Actually, it's nothing more than a lot of horsefeathers.

DEAR ABBY: I love my inlaws, but they are my problem. My husband and I have two children, 6 and 3. They are the only grandchildren my inlaws have [which is probably why they spoil them the way they dol. My husband travels a lot, and I like to go with him for a few days every few months. This keeps our marriage My inlaws beg to keep our children when we're gone, but after the children have been with their grandparents it takes me a week to get them to mind. My inlaws let the kiddies stay up as late as they want to, and they feed them candy and soft drinks between meals. Also, when I say something, my word is law, and I don't put up with any back-talk. The grandparents never discipline them, and when the kids talk back, they laugh and think it's cute. I don't want to seem ungrateful, Abby, but I resent my inlaws spoiling all the work I've put into training my children. I have stressed my rules several times, but they don't pay any attention to them.

How can I drive my point home without getting them angry with me? If I hired a sitter my inlaws would be terribly hurt.

DEAR TOO: Your signature sums up the reason for your problem. Toughen up, and tell your inlaws that either they must follow your rules, or you'll not leave your children with them.

A few months ago, returning from our vacation, Joanne bumped into an old high school chum. Diane We were preparing to get off the plane - Joanne trying to make some order of the chaos created by three overtired children and a husband still trying to regain his composure.

Diane, wearing a rather chic outfit topped by a dramatic cloche hat and accompanied by a well behaved 10-year-old. child and a husband who enjoyed flying, spotted Joanne and greeted her with a warm, "Joanne

Introductions were exchanged. Diane recounted what she had been doing the past 10 years, occasionally brushing the back of her hand against her hat while Joanne caught up on the years, while smoothing the massive wrinkles on her pantsuit caused by three children who had each demanded an hour on mommy's lap.

While we were waiting for our baggage, I noted that Diane was carrying a tennis racket. Since tennis is my favorite outdoor sport and since Diane lived nearby, we promised to get together for a few sets, soon as possible.

That night, after we unpacked and the children were asleep, Joanne recalled that there had been more than a little competition between her and Diane during high school, the two of them vying for leads in the school plays, Joanne' often getting the straight lead, Diane cast as the vamp.

I nodded, fell asleep and promptly forgot about the whole incident for about two months. Then, last Saturday, a perfect tennis day, my usual partner, Joe, called and said he had to work, and couldn't play. A few phone calls later, I was still without a partner when I remembered Diane.

'Honey, what's Diane's last name?" "I thought I might call her to see if she wanted to play."

'Why don't you give me tennis lessons? 'I'd love to, but I want to play now.

I know I'm not a B-plus player but I could learn. Fine, but I'd like to play now. "Call another man. If you play with her it might be like. Bobby Riggs and Maggie Court. "Everybody else is out." Well, why don't you and Joe play tennis tomorrow?"

"I want to play now. I'm all dressed for tennis." Joanne looked at me for a few moments and then turned away, silent. Then it dawned on me. Joanne didn't want me to play tennis with Diane because she was jealous. A Paul Newman or Henry Kissinger I'm not, but for a few months, I felt like

I spotted a sale on tennis rackets in Sunday's paper and cut it out for Joanne.

New Base Closings Feared

AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Pentagon officials reported the possibility of a new round of base closings amid a growing feud with Congress over severe defense cuts.

This could be a Pentagon signal that congressmen might feel the effects of their actions in the loss of military installations, and civilian jobs back home. Sources indicated consideration of possible new shutdowns is in its early stages and involves examination of lists of bases that are of marginal value to the armed services. Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger, in office only about a month, opened fire on congressional budget trimmers Wednesday. He accused them of "follies" in voting drastic cutbacks in military manpower, arms aid to South Vietnam and Laos, and other programs. Thursday, Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., returned Schlesinger's fire in a speech advising McIntyre, a veteran member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, spoke of "Pentagon follies" as primarily responsible for the diminishing support for the defense effort. He accused the Pentagon of advancing "illconceived ... extravagant ... redundant pro-

The defense budget has been under its heaviest attack in years in both the House and Senate, with many key weapons projects feeling the bite. The most immediate cause of concern to top Pentagon civilian and military officials is the Senate Armed Services vote to hack 156,000 men from the armed services over the coming year. This would bring the total down to 2,076,800 men, smallest in nearly a quarter of a century.

If this cut is sustained, Pentagon officials say the combat readiness of the forces will be seriously endangered.

I've never seen the Taj Mahal. Nor have I looked up at the Leaning Tower of Pisa, or

Most of my life, as a matter of fact, has been spent right here in my own town. Not be-

But I know, deep in my heart, that even if I never leave my home town I'll have more cause I don't want to travel. To visit these faraway places is one of my big desires-and, one to do than I can hope to accomplish. Because God is just as much here as he is anywhere.

Our minister used that thought in his sermon last Sunday, and he told us how much there is

If we'd bring just one other person to church with us on Sunday, we'd really be doing for all of us to do in our own particular place—and how much remains undone!

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Grocers turned to rationing or the black market to cope with beef-buying sprees by shoppers as the week's end brought a widening of the nationwide beef shortage.

By Friday, 9,000 workers had been laid off at 100 beef plants that were forced to close or curtail production as cattlemen held onto their animals, the American Meat Institute reported. Many restauranteurs said they expected to make similar staff and service cutbacks early next week because suppliers cannot or will not replenish their dwindling beef sup-

The cattlemen are keeping their beef from market until the scheduled Sept. 12 end of the beef price freeze retained by President Nixon July 18 when he ended ceilings on other foods.

The meat institute and the Agriculture Department said on Friday that the number of cattle slaughtered in the first full week after the President's action had declined 23 per cent from the previous week. "The situation has deteriorated much more quickly than we thought it would," said Herrell DeGraff, the institute's president. At the same time, the government continued to maintain that the seriousness of the shortage was exaggerated. "There are adequate supplies of meat available for the pub-William N. Walter said.

lic," Cost of Living Council spokesman But Gwen Braud of Slidell, La., like other preweekend shoppers across the country, took no chances. "We're buying meat now while there's still some left to buy," she said as she wheeled a cart with $30 worth of pot roast away from the meat counter at the giant Schwegmann's supermarket in New Orleans.
