Lovestrand won't run

LONGWOOD — City commissioner Paul Lovestrand decided not to seek re-election Friday after two terms in office.

Lovestrand's district 5 seat will go to Bill Winston, president of the Devonshire Homeowners Association, unless a write-in candidate qualifies on the Nov. 8 ballot.

Lovestrand resigned as Longwood mayor to devote time to a planned run for a state representative seat which did not materialize. He remained a commissioner but insisted he was keeping his options open on whether to seek re-election.

In recent weeks, Lovestrand had been at odds with the commission over various issues, resulting in verbal sparring matches with now Mayor Steve Miller. Last week, commissioner Ron Sargent read a letter chastising Lovestrand's behavior.

Miller is being challenged by Jim Carrico, president of Hidden Oaks Homeowners Association for District 3 commissioner. Lovestrand is supporting Carrico.

In his decision not to run for re-election, he said he will continue to be involved in civic endeavors through volunteer service.

Civil War presentation

SANFORD — A unique presentation of the Civil War era will be presented tomorrow evening at the Seminole County Agriculture Center, 250 W. County Home Road. Thomas Tart, general counsel for the Orlando Utilities Commission, appearing in authentic costume, will portray Madison Starke Perry, Florida's fourth governor, as he leads a slide/video show of the state's involvement in the war between the states.

Sponsored by the Seminole County Historical Society, the presentation will be followed by the society's quarterly director/membership meeting.

Governor Perry, portrayed by Tart, served as a colonel with Florida troops in the Confederate Army. Tart says three battles and more than 267 engagements were actually fought on Florida soil, one of which involved the battle at Fort Pickens, in Pensacola.

The public is invited to attend this presentation, scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. There is no charge. For further information, phone the museum at 321-2489 Tuesday, from noon until 5 p.m.

PolitiBits

LONGWOOD — The campaign is over. The race is won. Now Seminole County Court Judge-elect Ralph Eriksson is trying to rustle up all his campaign signs dotting the county. Although he has gathered in all the signs on his maps, he is asking residents to report any of his signs still out there on the streets and byways so he can get them too. He can be reached at 333-2888.

13th Street widening

Busy Sanford intersection being improved

By NICK PFEIFER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A very difficult turning area on E. 13th Street, is being rebuilt. Seminole County road crews are doing work on both the Cleary Avenue and E. 13th Street sides of Sanford Avenue.

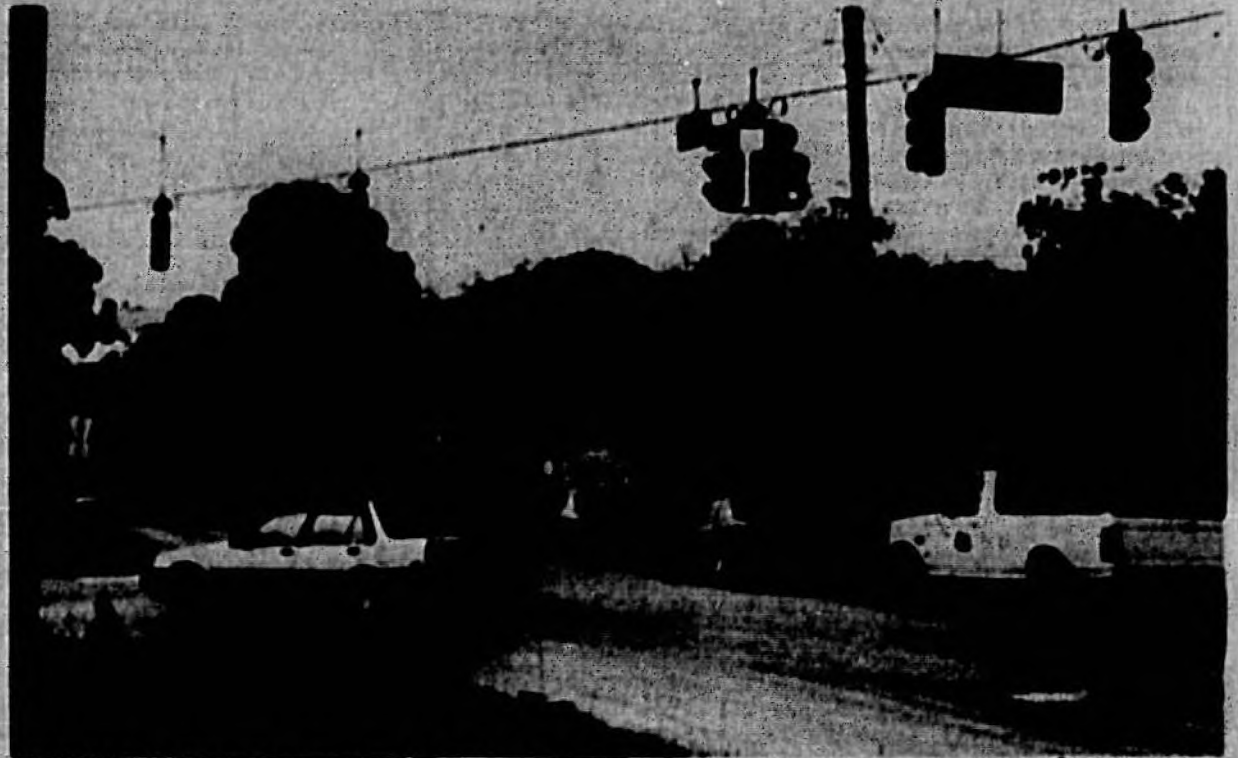

Markings were made late last week. Actual work will begin this week, and is expected to last possibly as long as a month and a half.

"We will be adding one right-turn lane on each side of Sanford Avenue," explained Civil Engineer Supervisor Mark Flomerfelt. "That will involve widening those areas by approximately 11 feet, but only for 300 feet to the east and west of Sanford Avenue."

Flomerfelt said there will also be some minor drainage work done in the area.

"From time to time we will have to restrict the traffic flow in the area," he said. "But it's the only way we can get the work done. When completed, it will smooth out that very difficult area which often causes traffic tie-ups during the peak rush hours while people wait to turn in one direction or another."

Flomerfelt said the project will cost approximately $60,000. "With our own county crews doing the work it will be much more economical."
□ See Widening, Page 8A

Work begins this week on improving the intersection at Sanford Avenue and 13th Street.

The Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association, SHDWA, held its annual fund-raising cruise aboard the rivership Romance Sunday afternoon. The cruise down the St. Johns River provided guests with an outstanding display of natural beauty outdoors, as well as food, entertainment and many door prizes indoors. A good turnout was on hand for the event, which is used to raise money for SHDWA's many projects including the recently announced sponsorship of the July 4th fireworks event, complete with picnic and family style events. In photo, guests waited for the cruise to get under way.

Prisoners released early

By SANDRA BULLITT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Prisoners are released each month from Florida prisons and correctional facilities by the Department of Corrections after serving a portion of their sentences.

Most inmates are released early, either under the Florida Control Release Authority, which was put in place to help cut down on prison overcrowding, or they meet DOC guidelines for release with credits earned for time served.

Although new sentencing guidelines have replaced control release, prisoners sentenced during the period when control release was in effect are being released from prison under those provisions.

The following lists are prisoners sentenced from Seminole County courts. The sentence listed was handed down by the listed judge and does not reflect any credit for time served in jail awaiting trial and/or a plea then sentencing.

Some prisoners are serving as little as one-third of their sentence or less.

Lake Mary to consider PBA contract

By NICK PFEIFER
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The City of Lake Mary and the Police Benevolent Association appear to be heading toward ratification of a union contract. The matter comes up before the city commission for consideration Tuesday night.

The eligible members of the police department voted Thursday, 10-to-1, to ratify the PBA agreement. Tuesday night will be the city's opportunity.

City finance director Randy Knight says he will recommend that the city now ratify the agreement, which will go into effect on Oct. 1, 1994.

"This wasn't any big fight between the city and the union," Knight explained. "They have been working on this since May of this year, and have finally reached this agreement, so I don't foresee any problems in coming to an agreement between the PBA and the city."

According to the highlights of the contract, it contains a number of proposals, including the following points:

- Allows the city to establish a Citizen's Police Review Board (but without authority to recommend, modify or impose disciplinary action).
- Eliminates future promotions to the rank of corporal.
- Modifies the testing requirements for promotion to sergeant. Changes years of service requirement from five to three years.
- Establishes an annual process for police officers to advance to the title of police officer first class, upon meeting three years of service, passing a written, oral and practical test, and having satisfactory performance evaluations. Upon obtaining the new title, the officer would receive a five percent pay increase.

• Changes the amount of vacation that can be taken at one time from 160 hours to 168 hours. The use of vacation remains at the discretion of the police chief.

• Adds a section on performance evaluations.

• Provides for a two percent pay plan adjustment for all members below the rank of sergeant, and a three percent pay plan adjustment for sergeants. It also provides for a merit increase of up to 2.5 percent for all members.

• Clarifies how overtime can be calculated.

• Provides for a one year duration to the contract.

The consideration of the PBA contract is listed in the agenda of the city manager's report for Tuesday night's Lake Mary City Commission meeting.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m., in city hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

Home building increases

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — New-home starts in the unincorporated areas of the county continued to increase for another month in August.

The Seminole County Building Department issued 139 permits for single-family homes last month, that's more than a 33 percent increase from July.

Rain, rain, go away...

Rain to continue for another month

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — From famine to feast, rainfall in Sanford has finally recovered.

A total of 10.41 inches of rain was recorded at Central Florida Regional Airport during August, 3.26 inches above the 30-year normal for the month. Rainfall for the past year reached 4.75 inches above normal last month. Next time you grumble about the afternoon downpours, remember water rationing and dead grass.

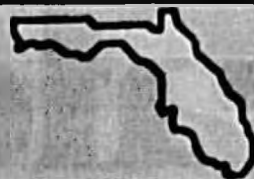

The statistics are provided by the St. Johns River Water Management District in their monthly "Hydrologic Conditions Report."

Excess rain this summer finally moved Sanford out of the deficit column into the surplus position. "Rainy" months should continue for another month, then begin the fall slide into the dry months.

The Wekiva River is responding enthusiastically to the rain. After months of below-normal levels, the river is now near a foot above the average minimum low level at State Road 46. The river flow has increased 150 percent since June, according to the report.

Drinking water supplies are also rebounding. The water level in a Geneva well increased by close to one foot between July and August. It was within a third of a foot of the historical maximum level it reached in March 1993. A Longwood well, which tends to fluctuate more, increased by 2.61 feet. It still has more than 11 feet to go to reach the maximum of record, reached in September 1960 following Hurricane Donna.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Gas pipeline stopped

TALLAHASSEE — State environmental officials have ordered a halt to construction of an 800-mile gas pipeline running the length of Florida, charging builders have been "grossly negligent" by repeatedly fouling Florida streams and wetlands.

The Florida Department of Environmental Protection suspended the $600-million gas pipeline project, accusing Florida Gas Transmission Co. of "flagrant disregard" for regulations protecting state waters.

The project is an expansion of an existing Florida Gas pipeline that runs from western Louisiana through Mississippi and Alabama, delivering 925 million cubic feet of natural gas to Florida.

The pipeline project runs from western Louisiana to West Palm Beach, crossing on its underground path 697 wetlands and streams. Construction has proceeded in several locations at once.

DEP charged Florida Gas, a subsidiary of Enron-Sonata Corp. of Houston, has committed at least 38 permit violations.

"Despite receiving promises by their top management that they would stop the violations, we have seen no change in their processes," DEP Secretary Virginia Wetherell said Friday in issuing the emergency order to halt construction of the gas pipeline.

Simpson investigation goes to Miami

MIAMI — Los Angeles police were in Miami investigating whether O.J. Simpson planned to sail to freedom on a sleek 140-foot yacht named Miss Turnberry.

The boat was owned by Turnberry, Fla., developer Donald Soffer, who was served with a subpoena Wednesday. The police and an L.A. assistant district attorney were pursuing a lead that Simpson had planned to flee to the Bahamas on the Miss Turnberry after the murders of his ex-wife Nicole and her friend, a Miami newspaper reported for a story Saturday.

Soffer had hosted Simpson, Nicole and their two children on the Miss Turnberry for three or four days in February. Afterward, Soffer said he never discussed the yacht with Simpson or any of his representatives.

"They have reports that O.J. was planning on being on the boat right after the murders," Soffer said. "They were trying to intimate he was planning on getting out of the country when he had the famous car scene, when he had the money on him. That's not true."

Soffer, a friend of Simpson's who believes the former football star is innocent, called the police action "grasping at straws."

"They're even checking on my plane to see if he was in fact planning on taking my plane!" Soffer said. "I've given them everything, the boat log and the plane log. I can't lie. I was under oath. They subpoenaed me, and I came down with my records, and I answered questions."

The police also interviewed the boat's captain, Chris Kennedy, Soffer said.

AIDS 'in the cards'

FORT LAUDERDALE — Broward County health officials plan to hand out hundreds of decks of playing cards carrying the facts about AIDS and the HIV virus during lectures at neighborhood senior centers.

One lesson, carried on the eight of clubs: You can't get Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome from a public toilet.

"You can only get AIDS by having sex with gay or bisexual people," reads one side of the nine of hearts. "False," says the other side. "Heterosexuals can also be infected."

"It's another avenue for us to spread the message," says Lee Agate, chief AIDS coordinator for the Broward public health department.

Three years ago, Broward health officials searching for a cheap way to get as much information as possible to the public about AIDS and HIV, the virus that leads to AIDS, had more than 1,000 decks of the fact-filled playing cards manufactured.

Most of the educational card decks went to inmates in the Broward County Jail, to teen-agers and to other high-risk groups. But hundreds of the decks were left over. Now, the county has targeted seniors, who health officials says are increasingly stricken, largely because they remain uninformed about AIDS.

Woman files suit in auto accident

WEST PALM BEACH — A woman who said she was injured in a car accident has filed suit against the son of sports and entertainment mogul H. Wayne Huizenga, claiming he caused the chain-reaction accident.

The suit was filed Friday in Palm Beach County Circuit Court against H. Wayne Huizenga Jr., of Fort Lauderdale, by Willie Jean Spencer and her husband, James M. Spencer, of Orlando. The suit seeks more than $15,000 in damages.

According to the lawsuit, Willie Jean Spencer was stopped at a traffic light in Delray Beach on June 17, 1993. Huizenga failed to stop, striking the rear of two other vehicles, which then struck Spencer's car, the suit claims.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

NOW a step closer to boycott

By EDDIE DOMINGUEZ
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — The National Organization for Women has called for an economic boycott of Pensacola if the city doesn't pass an ordinance establishing a protective ring around abortion clinics.

But the mayor of the Panhandle city says he won't be forced by NOW into passing a buffer-zone ordinance. Two abortion doctors and an unarmed escort have been fatally shot in Pensacola since March 1993.

"Part of what's missing in Pensacola is the political will to stop this violence," NOW president Patricia Ireland said Sunday in Miami. "There is no quick fix here, and I think we are looking at a long-term project. ... It is tough. It is hard medicine. But I have seen three murders there."

The group's national board on Sunday unanimously approved a boycott of Pensacola as "a last resort." The boycott, which would focus on conventions and tourism possibly in Escambia and Santa Rosa counties, still has to win approval from NOW's executive committee.

Part of what's missing in Pensacola is the political will to stop this violence.

-Patricia Ireland

No additional details or a deadline were discussed, nor did the group specify what other means it was considering to make the city adopt a buffer-zone ordinance.

NOW wants the city to pass such an ordinance and Florida to adopt a similar law.

The Washington-based group's latest push comes in response to the July 29 slayings of Dr. John Bayard Britton and his escort, James Barrett, outside the Ladire Center clinic. Barrett's wife, June, was wounded. Former Presbyterian minister Paul Hill, 40, of Pensacola, is awaiting trial for those crimes.

Dr. David Gunn was fatally shot outside the city's other clinic in March 1993, former chemical plant worker Michael P. Griffin serving a life sentence for that slaying.

Pensacola Mayor John Fogg, who edged late Sunday that a boycott could have an impact, but added he didn't think people would stop patronizing the clinics because of it.

"This community, like any other, cannot be held hostage by NOW," he said.

Fogg said the city council was not opposed to a buffer zone, but was concerned the ordinance wouldn't pass legal muster.

"We know that if the city council passes a buffer zone, it is certainly going to be challenged up to the Supreme Court and it going to cost the city hundreds of thousands of dollars to defend," Fogg said.

NOW members were hoping to convince Gov. Lawton Chiles or State Attorney General Bob Butterworth to consider buffer-zone legislation — with little success so far, Ireland said.

"Bob Butterworth is not even returning phone calls," she said.

Ireland said Chiles and Butterworth said it's Washington's responsibility to enforce the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances law, which allows the establishment of buffer zones to protect abortion providers and recipients.

NOW had originally considered a statewide boycott, but narrowed it to Pensacola after the Florida NOW objected.

Law intact as $295 fee reviewed

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The status of a law that requires new Floridians to pay $295 to legally drive their automobiles may be up in the air, but compliance officers are on roads and in parking lots looking to nab violators.

Since 1991, Florida has collected nearly $250 million in auto impact fees, according to Eric Taylor, an assistant attorney general.

It may have to pay it all back.

That decision rests with the Florida Supreme Court, which has been reviewing the constitutionality of the impact fee since March.

Last December, Orange County Circuit Judge Lawrence Kirkwood ruled the impact fee unconstitutional because it applies only to vehicles from outside Florida. So refunds are due, Kirkwood ruled.

But, meanwhile, Rebecca Moore spends eight hours a week cruising around Palm Beach County on the lookout for violators. She recalled one encounter with a young mother.

The woman's car was an "old rust-bucket" and she said she didn't have the money to feed her child, let alone register her vehicle, Moore said.

"When I told her that the law required her to register the car, she cried," Moore said.

Donna Fisher is another Palm Beach County officer for the Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles.

"Some don't have the money, and I feel sorry for them," she told The Palm Beach Post in a Sunday story.

While anonymous callers report many of the violators, Moore and Fisher catch others. They have the power to ticket the violating vehicles, but most often issue a warning.

The state requires that new residents register within 10 days if they have a job or a child enrolled in school.

Volunteers turn out for cleanup

By The Associated Press

Volunteers hit the beaches from Tampa to Fort Lauderdale — to pick up trash for the seventh year as part of the Florida Coastal Cleanup program. The most common item of trash?

Cigarette butts.

"Smokers think the world is their ashtray," grumbled Peggy Benenati, one of about 30 volunteers from the Broward County Sierra Club who helped clean up Fort Lauderdale's South Beach.

Cigarette butts were also the most common litter in Melbourne. Hundreds of thousands of them littered the sands, said Jerry Nicholas, who also picked up trash at Paradise Beach Park.

From Fort Lauderdale to Melbourne to Tampa, volunteers Saturday picked up trash to cleanup Florida's beaches.

"I wanted to help because I hate seeing all this garbage lying around," Tami Afentakis said.

The Madeira Beach woman was one of about 100 volunteers on the Pinellas side of Tampa Bay. She tromped through the mangroves, collecting glass bottles, plastic cups and six-pack rings.

Scuba divers joined the work this year. About a dozen divers congregated in south Tampa to clean beneath the fishing pier.

Last year, 18,603 volunteers from Florida traveled 1,189 miles of coastline, picking up 366,058 pound of trash. Saturday's total trash picked up or the number of volunteers had not been released.

The Center for Marine Conservation collects data about the types of trash, where it came from and its state of decomposition. The trash is separated into recyclable materials and waste, and the data is sent to the organizers of the event.

The data helps evaluate the effectiveness of environmental laws and determine whether different approaches should be taken to curb coastal pollution, according to Randall Parkinson, an oceanographer and coordinator of the Brevard County beach cleanup.

● Angel Lewis Samabria, 19, 3810 Elder Springs Drive, Sanford, was located at the jail Wednesday. She was wanted for failing to appear on a charge of criminal mischief.

● Thurman Latherio Byrd, 27, 2370 Granby, was located by deputies during a traffic stop Wednesday in Midway. He was wanted on a warrant for obtaining property with a worthless check.

● Jeffrey David Conant, 34, 700 E. Airport Blvd., was arrested by deputies at his residence Wednesday. He was wanted on a writ of bodily attachment, and a warrant for driving with a suspended/revoked license.

● Michael William Miller, 48, 110 W. 13th Street, was located by deputies at his residence Wednesday. He was wanted on a warrant for grand theft.

Domestic problems

● Reginald Stafford, 37, 1323 Oleander Ave., Sanford, was arrested by Sanford police at his residence Thursday following a reported dispute with a woman. He was charged with aggravated domestic violence, and lewd and lascivious act in the presence of a child.

● John Anthony Fioravanti, 29, 900 E. Airport Blvd., was arrested by Sanford police at his place of employment Tuesday, following a report altercation with his wife at their home. He was charged with battery, domestic violence.

● Christine E. Hayes, 35, and Gregory Rios, 31, both of 170 Lakeside Drive, Sanford, were arrested by deputies at their residence Wednesday following a dispute. Each was charged with aggravated assault, domestic violence.

● Rachel Summer Anderson, 24, 110 Riverbend, Lake Mary, was arrested on Rising Sun Blvd. by deputies Wednesday following a fight with a male. She was charged with battery, domestic violence.

● Charles Albert Peel, 18, 820 Cherokee Circle, Sanford, was arrested by deputies at his residence Thursday, in response to a disturbance call. Peel was charged with resisting an officer without violence.

Spaghetti is music food

Dr. Gerald Elliott, left, and Terry Douglas, were among the many cooks and servers Friday, at a spaghetti dinner at the Seminole High School cafeteria. The event, sponsored by the Band Parents Association, was held to raise money for band uniforms, instruments, and other needs. No estimate of the total amount raised Friday was immediately available.

Child support collection lagging

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The state Department of Revenue, which took over the job of collecting delinquent child support payments 2 1/2 months ago, is still trying to come to grips with the enormity of the task.

The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services used to be in charge of child-support enforcement.

However, state lawmakers this spring decided the revenue agency would be better at collection than a social service agency.

But HRS records are so sketchy that the Department of Revenue has no idea just how many cases it has inherited, according to Revenue spokeswoman Donna O'Neal.

"We have no faith in HRS's accounting system," O'Neal said. "The records we inherited are in a shambles."

O'Neal said all the HRS data has been tossed because the numbers can't be verified.

At a July press conference marking the transfer of the child-support enforcement division, state officials said Florida has more than 1 million open child support cases.

They also announced that fewer than 25 percent of families owed support actually receive full payment each month.

Revenue Director Larry Fuchs said enforcement measures include garnishing deadbeat parents' wages, revoking their professional licenses, placing liens on their property or assets and suspending their driver's licenses.

But it could be a year before a significant division overhaul and greater enforcement kick in, and collection methods may need to be redesigned for greater effectiveness.

"The system we were handed was dysfunctional," O'Neal told The Florida Times-Union in a Sunday story. "It took 20 years to create this system. We can't fix it overnight."

The Revenue Department said it won't begin to know the extent of the problem until early studies are completed in November.

Last year, HRS had a budget of $107 million and just over 2,000 employees to run the Division of Child Support Enforcement.

Anne Donovan, former HRS assistant secretary for child-support enforcement, said the Revenue Department is exaggerating the problem as a tactic to lower collection expectations.

Donovan said HRS was stuck with a faulty computer system, now the subject of a lawsuit, which caused glitches in collecting and filing clients' cases. But those kinks should be ironed out by January when computer problems are fixed, she said.

space walk since 1984.

The space shuttle and its six astronauts were set to land at Cape Canaveral, Fla., at 2:23 p.m. EDT, but stormy weather was forecast. NASA could send the shuttle to Edwards Air Force Base in California later in the day instead.

"It's been a great mission to planet Earth," Mission Control told the crew in this morning's wake-up call. "I think it's safe to say we've demonstrated a new technology for studying our planet's atmosphere. Unfortunately, it's time to return."

"Well, you never can tell," replied commander Richard Richards. "Maybe our planet's atmosphere will keep us up here one more day."

Discovery pilot L. Blaine Hammond Jr. said the crew was looking forward to some earthly pleasures — showers, for one.

"It's pretty fatiguing up here," Hammond said Sunday. "I think a lot of us are looking forward to getting home, getting a good shower and some good old earthbound things we enjoy."

"However, of course, I think given another day or so to be up here if we had the chance, we'd all jump at it just because it's an opportunity so rare," he said.

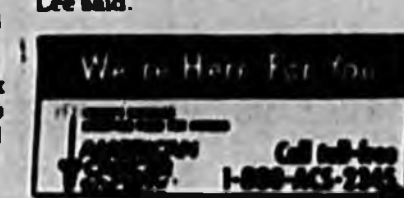

The astronauts, launched into orbit Sept. 9, achieved everything they set out to do. They released and retrieved a sun-gazing satellite, collected data on shuttle exhaust plumes and assisted ground controllers with a weather-scanning laser.

The high point was Friday's 7-hour spacewalk by Mark Lee and Carl Meade, using a slimmed-down version of the jet pack employed in the last untethered spacewalk 10 years ago.

The new pack is intended to be used as an emergency rescue device for future space station crews.

Lee described the spacewalk as a once-in-a-lifetime "special treat."

"There's a mix between having to concentrate very hard on maneuvers to make sure you do them right ... and the exhilaration of seeing some sights that I'm probably never going to see again and never experience," Lee said.

A $25 million laser machine spent more than 50 hours flashing light pulses at clouds, atmospheric particles and the Earth's surface. A telescope on board gathered the reflected laser light for a study of global climate.

One target was Typhoon Melissa in the Pacific Ocean. Discovery flew directly over the storm's eye, allowing atmospheric scientists to record cloud heights and densities throughout Melissa.

Such information eventually could help meteorologists gauge the strength and life span of such storms, said project scientist Pat McCormick.

The first U.S. robot in space, a 250-pound machine called Romo, zipped through its work in Discovery's cargo bay. It removed 100 semiconductor crystals from storage racks and placed them in furnaces while the astronauts slept.

At the touch of a button

Having another car will improve one's hearing. We may be headed in that direction insofar as law enforcement is concerned.

Avis Inc., the rental car company is starting the project. In South Florida, they are equipping a few rental vehicles with Emergency Police Alert systems.

According to an Avis spokeswoman, the device is similar to having the ability to phone 9-1-1 at the touch of a button. The device has been developed by a company in Miami, and is planned for the entire Avis fleet over the next few years.

How many times have motorists seen crimes being committed or seen suspicious activities which may be illegal? Waiting until one arrives at his or her destination to phone information to the appropriate law enforcement agency is often too late. As such, people will believe it doesn't help, and won't make that call.

We hope that automobile manufacturers will eventually have these items installed on all new vehicles being built, and made available for those already in existence.

There is a great deal of talk about crime problems. Crime is in Sanford, Seminole County, the entire state and nation. It cannot be considered something which is happening only in a particular community, although some have more crime than others.

If people have the ability to call for help immediately, without waiting to reach a phone, the dispatching of an officer can be quicker, and hopefully, be of better service in finding law breakers.

There is a constant need for private individuals to be on the lookout for problems. It is tantamount to having additional eyes helping in law enforcement.

With this new device in our vehicles, it will be additional cars as well.

We commend Avis for this additional item in its rental cars. We hope it won't be long before they are available nationwide.

We especially hope they will also be added to private vehicles as soon as possible. They would be less expensive than having a mobile telephone, and according to word about how they operate, a great deal easier to use, with only a flip of a button.

The world of progress is moving forward. It's a good move.

LETTER

No to net ban

There are several aspects of the net ban that people have not explored. Do you know that the entire white shrimp industry will be shut down? White shrimp have the sweetest, most delicate flavor of Florida's shrimp species. They are born, breed and die within three miles of the beach. Because shrimp boats will be moved three miles out, there will be no more harvest of this species.

Stone crab and blue crab harvest will be affected through a loss of bait. There is no way to import bait to use in crab traps economically. "Stone Crab Joes," the famous stone crab restaurant, once tried to import bait, but gave it up as a lost cause. If you are able to buy bait economically, the cost of trucking it in, and renting freezer space, soon make it a losing proposition.

Grouper and snapper require bait, mostly caught by nets. The bottom line is that more than fishing nets will be affected. If you enjoy any type of fresh, locally produced, Florida seafood, the net ban will affect you directly or indirectly.

If you refuse to sacrifice quality seafood, vote NO on Amendment 3, Nov. 8!

NAT HENTOFF Drug law: Cruel and usual punishment

Nelson Rockefeller, the late governor of New York, is remembered by many in the art world as an enthusiastic, sophisticated collector. For many New Yorkers in prison, however, he is remembered as the author of the 1973 Rockefeller Drug Sentencing Laws, whose harsh mandatory minimums helped lead the way nationally to reducing judges' discretion in sentencing.

Some years ago, I asked Gov. Mario M. Cuomo if he might try to move the legislature to make these laws more humane. He said he didn't think the legislature could be budged. But, as a political leader, shouldn't he try? No comment. Nor certainly is there a chance now to make the Rockefeller drug laws more flexible when fear of crime is chronic.

Recently, several lower court judges in New York did take the risk of sentencing a young woman's long prison term because they were appalled at the damage the Rockefeller law would have done to the rest of her life. Their attempt failed when they were reversed by the Court of Appeals, the state's highest court.

What has happened to Angela Thompson is hardly unique. In 1988, when she was 17, she was arrested after making a single sale of crack cocaine to an undercover police officer. (There was no other criminal activity on her record.)

The sale took place at the residence of her uncle, Norman Little, who, according to the dissenting opinion in the Court of Appeals, was "running a major drug-selling operation in Harlem."

The 17-year-old "had grown up in a variety of places and under several different custodial arrangements" until she was employed by her uncle. Her drug sale to the police agent qualified as an A-1 felony because it weighed 2.3 grams -- less than one-tenth of an ounce over the next lower level crime.

On a plea bargain, she was offered four years to life, but she insisted on her right to trial. She was convicted. The penalty for an A-1 felony is a mandatory indeterminate sentence, with a minimum of not less than 15 years. The maximum is life imprisonment.

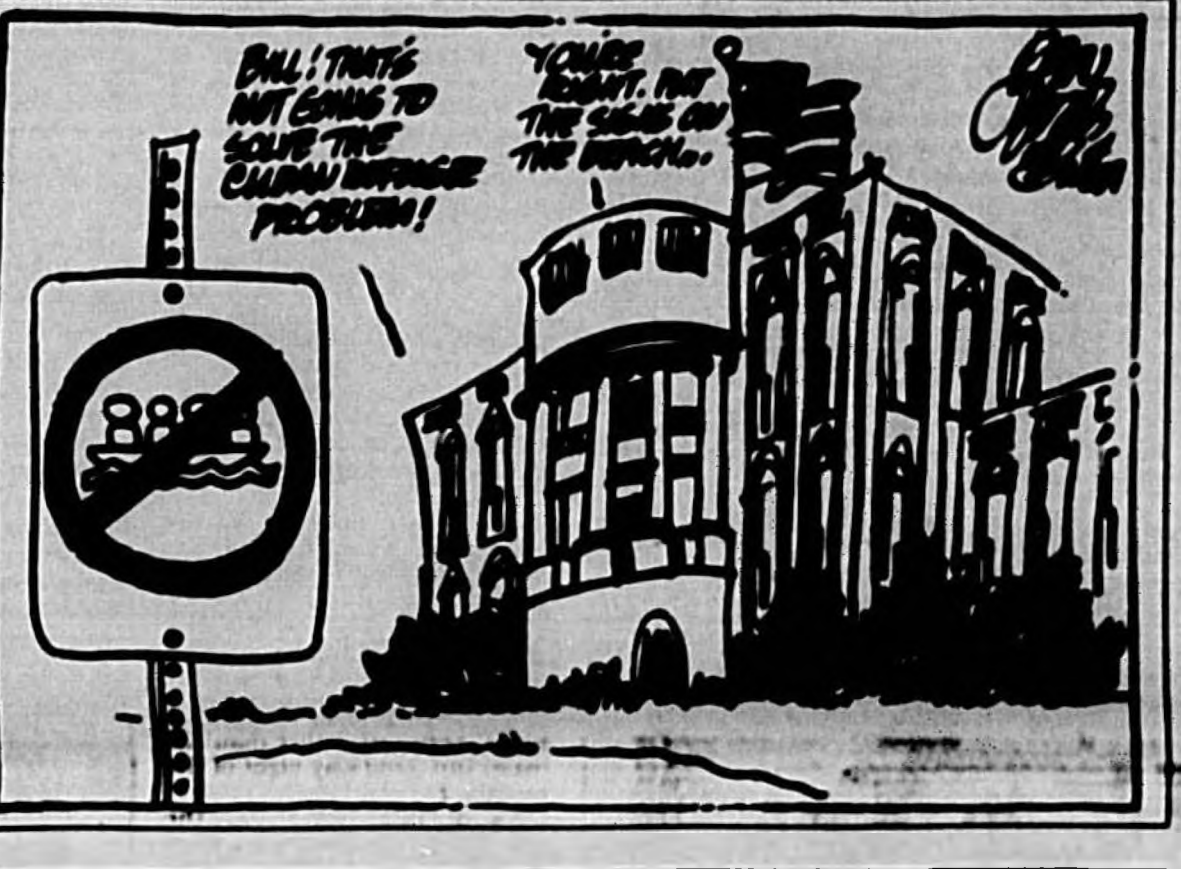

What has happened to Angela Thompson is hardly unique.

The trial judge, Juanita Ring-Newton, erred. The minimum mandatory sentence, she held, would be cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth Amendment. Instead, she sentenced Angela Thompson to eight years to life. The judge acknowledged that the legislature had decreed a tougher minimum, but she added: "I think it is still the law of this country that the punishment must fit the crime." After all, this was "a single transgression of the law."

The case went up one level to the Appellate Division. A majority on that bench also refused to go rigidly by the book, and upheld the lower sentence of the trial judge. Said appellate justice Sidney Aach:

"A system of justice which mandates a 15-year prison sentence, as a minimum, on a 17-year-old girl, who was not cared for by her parents and (was) under the domination of her uncle also mandates a lifetime of crime. And impose on the community, upon release, a woman who may be incapable of anything but criminal activity. If we do not attempt to rehabilitate such young people, we condemn ourselves as well." Again, the prosecution appealed this lower sentence in the name of the people.

HODDING CARTER Radical surgery won't cure Haiti

As this is written, Gunga Dan Rather is in Haiti, ready to pretend he is a working reporter when the American invasion occurs. Nothing could be more indicative of the pseudo-seriousness of President Clinton's first major venture in muscular foreign policy. Wrong on every count, an invasion of Haiti represents (1) a forced march back to the future, (2) an expensive, demeaning exercise in presidential damage control, or (3) both.

That is not the way it is being presented by the president and his earnest minions, none of whom apparently have the strength of character to resign in the face of terminal foolishness. America's credibility is at stake, they say. Belief in our commitment to human rights rests on a decisive blow. What we intend is simply the restoration of the democratically elected president of Haiti, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, to his rightful place, a venture endorsed by the United Nations.

All this is said with a straight face by men and women who have kowtowed to China's aging totalitarianism, waffled as Bosnia, a sovereign member state of the U.N., was hacked to pieces, and hemmed and hawed while the genocidal butchers of Rwanda did their work.

Let it be stated categorically. It is not American credibility that is at stake in Haiti. It is Bill Clinton's. What's more, overthrowing Haiti's tinpot dictators will do nothing for either.

The president's credibility was all but shredded when the vessel carrying American forces turned around and fled from Port-au-Prince, while a ragtag gang of thugs rioted on the docks. If force was going to be used, that was the time to use it, in the face of deliberate physical provocation and the express repudiation of a solemn agreement. It should have been done quickly, efficiently and without bombast. It would have been justifiable on almost every count, backed by the American people and supported by Congress.

Now it is months later, and squashing the nasty little men who run Haiti will not easily erase that painful picture, made all but ineradicable by time. What it will do is revive memories of older, no less painful images. Cold-blooded interventionism -- and that is what this slow-motion invasion is -- was once a U.S. specialty in the Western Hemisphere. Ronald Reagan renewed the patent for such famous victories in his invasion of Grenada, population 140,000, over a decade ago. Bill Clinton's foreign policy was supposed to be different, a new policy for the post-Cold War era. Some difference!

But there is more than one similarity. President Reagan, following in a direct line of precedent from his recent Democratic and Republican predecessors, stoutly resisted congressional involvement in his overseas adventures. Democrats protested, claiming correctly that the Constitution gives Congress the power to declare war. Lo and behold, however, Bill Clinton, anti-war protester of the 1980s and 1970s, is a born-again Reaganite, and the Democratic congressional leadership meekly acquiesces. Congress is not to be let in on the decision-making (though, as with all of the president's positions, this was subject to change late last week.)

Paraphrasing the less said about Republican hypocrisy on this score, the better, "Let us vote, let us vote," they clamor, just as they clamored with equal volume against similar Democratic demands when Nixon, Reagan and Bush were president. As with thieves, there is apparently no honor among partisan politicians.

What's the hurry? We are a great power. We could afford to wait, tightening the screws week by week, intensifying the pressure, ensuring that the Haitian cabal finally understood that their old paymasters and mentors across the Potomac in Washington could no longer protect them. Whatever the expense of an embargo, whatever the suffering of the boat people and the embarrassment of the refugee holding pens at Guantanamo, nothing can match the cost, suffering and consequences of an invasion.

None of this is to argue against the use of American power in the pursuit of national defense, peace or the requirements of international law. There are times and places that dictate its use, as in Bosnia at several points over the past two years. Large issues, such as the integrity of a nation-state in the face of external aggression, require bold steps, not for reasons of theory but of practical necessity. A world unsafe for Bosnia is a world unsafe for us all.

But Haiti, whose tortured past is no argument against its right to a better future, is a case whose outcome affects only Haiti. Setting it right requires consistent, firm treatment, not radical surgery.

It is not American credibility that is at stake in Haiti. It is Bill Clinton's.

White House security gaps

WASHINGTON -- President Clinton has been warned repeatedly by the Secret Service to curtail his morning jog around Washington because there is only so much protection even a phalanx of agents can provide on city streets.

The events of last Monday, however, cast doubt on how safe a president is even in his White House bedroom. Fortunately, the first family was operating last Sunday night across the street at Blair House while repairs were being made to the White House air conditioning system, and the Clintons in no danger from the small plane that crashed onto the South Lawn.

White House security was one of the topics President Bush discussed with us during an Oval Office interview back in 1989. Dissuading concerns raised by security experts that the White House has little defense against airborne suicide attacks, Bush told us:

The events of last Monday, however, cast doubt on how safe a president is even in his White House bedroom.

"You're talking with a man who is old enough to remember the kamikaze pilots of World War II... whose ship was attacked by such pilots. So I remember it personally and vividly, and I know what damage someone intent on sacrificing one's own life can do driving a plane."

Yet, he said confidently, "I am satisfied, without going into any detail, that the security of the White House is adequate.... Put it this way, I feel secure when I come to work every day."

In the annals of White House security breaches, threats tend to fall into two categories: those with political motivations, and those who act out of psychological instability. In the past, we have reported on both.

In June 1988, we reported the story of an Iranian pilot who claimed he was trained for suicide missions against possible targets in America. Upon defecting to the United States, the pilot, Houshang Mortezaei, told U.S. intelligence officers how he was trained with an elite group of others to be a suicide pilot for terrorist missions.

"I belong to one of the kamikaze units of the new Iranian terrorist army," Mortezaei told intelligence officers. "I was selected along with 32 other pilots to undergo training in Won San, North Korea, during 1982." Mortezaei went on to explain how he and his fellow pilots trained in single-engine Swiss Pilatus planes. "We hedge-hopped, touching tree branches and flew under bridges. They had us do the most unbelievable somersaults. American intelligence agents later helped corroborate this account by confirming that a Swiss company had delivered about 80 Pilatus PC-7 aircraft to Iran for "crop dusting" purposes. The aircraft could easily be converted into flying suicide machines.

Although politically motivated terrorism remains a threat, the acts of a lone lunatic can be just as dangerous. Such was the case on George Washington's birthday in 1974, when an unemployed Philadelphia man tried to hijack a plane at Baltimore-Washington International Airport. He intended to crash-land it into the White House. After firing his way onto the plane, killing two people, the man was wounded by a guard's bullet. He then turned the gun on himself.

Samuel Joseph Byck described his plan, which he called "Operation Pandora Box," in a tape that he recorded more than a month before the attempted hijacking. Just hours before his date with destiny, Byck mailed the tape to us.

"Whoever dies in Project Pandora Box, will be directly attributable to Watergate scandals," Byck told us on the tape.

Hunt for Islamic terrorists leads to Brazil border area

By YOSSE LEWAN
Associated Press Writer

FOZ DO IGUAÇU, Brazil — The heavily forested junction of Brazil, Paraguay and Argentina on the Parana River is a hub of lawlessness where almost anything or anyone can be bought, sold or hidden.

Smugglers move liquor, electronic goods, cocaine, refugees, even babies, among the three countries. Brothel owners pay sex traders to bring in teen-age prostitutes. Arms dealers peddle weapons.

New police and intelligence agents are investigating rumors that Foz do Iguaçu and Ciudad del Este, just across the Parana in Paraguay, are hideouts or bases for Islamic terrorists.

Agents from Israel, the United States, Argentina and Brazil are trying to determine whether Arabs who live in the region have links to the bombing of the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that took 29 lives in 1992 or to the July 18 car bombing of a Jewish center there that killed 66.

Philip Weiss Jr., U.S. State Department coordinator for counterterrorism, said terrorist "cells" of Hezbollah, a Shiite Muslim group supported by Iran, were operating in the region.

"There is a growing body of evidence that these criminal acts were carried out by Hezbollah terrorists," he said after visiting Ciudad del Este and Buenos Aires in September.

Although there is no proof that Arabs were involved in the July bombing, police have detained and questioned dozens of recent immigrants from Lebanon, where Hezbollah is based.

About 1,000 fundamentalist Shites have arrived illegally in Ciudad del Este and Foz do Iguaçu since 1992, according to Brazil's federal police. This is the group under suspicion.

Brazilian soldiers and federal police have searched Arab-owned ranches, gun shops and residences along the borders with Paraguay and Argentina and on the frontier with Uruguay several hundred miles to the south.

The effort has angered prominent Arabs.

"For God's sake, leave us alone," said Kamal Osman, 43, owner of a shopping center and discount variety store in Foz do Iguaçu, who immigrated from Lebanon in 1981.

"We want to work, to live in peace," he said. "This type of hysteria hurts our business. Who knows? We could have a Jewish fanatic come here and set off a bomb because of this false propaganda."

Paraguayan and Brazilian police say there have been four bomb threats in the area in two months, three in Ciudad del Este and one in Foz do Iguaçu. In July, police found a small bomb outside an office building of Arab businessmen in Ciudad del Este. No one has claimed responsibility for any of the incidents.

Arabs have long been a part of Brazilian culture, achieving prominence in business, politics and the arts. Many were Lebanese Christians who fled persecution in the 1800s and, after World War I, rule by the Ottoman Empire. As Christians, they faced little overt prejudice.

Many became traders in duty-free Ciudad del Este, or merchants who bought goods there to resell in Foz do Iguaçu or Puerto Iguazu, Argentina, the third border town.

Most of the Arabs who arrived after 1975 were Shiite or Sunni Muslims fleeing the Lebanese civil war that began that year.

Wilson Romao, chief of the Brazilian federal police, said in February that five Arab men had approached arms traffickers to buy plastic explosives and assault rifles. He told the newswatchly Isto E that the border region offered "all of the facilities for the acquisition of arms and eventual escape useful for terrorist operations."

In March, responding to intelligence reports of weapons stockpiles and guerrilla activity, soldiers raided cattle ranches bought by Arabs in recent years along Brazil's unpatrolled border with Uruguay.

"We found nothing, but we're still worried about foreigners gaining control of our southern borders," a ranking army commander said, on condition of anonymity.

After the July bombing in Buenos Aires, Argentine and Paraguayan authorities began interrogating new Lebanese immigrants who lacked papers.

Paraguayan police also detained a Lebanese merchant and a woman who claimed they witnessed the bombing and knew Arabs who financed the attack. Both were released for lack of evidence.

On the Argentine side of the border, police detained five Lebanese citizens for questioning early in September, including a 16-year-old boy.

"This is a witch hunt," said Hassan Wahab, treasurer of the Islamic Cultural Center in Foz do Iguaçu. "If a terrorist came to me for help, I would go to the police. Terrorists should have their hands cut off."

percent increase over August 1993. Housing permits are up 13 percent for the year over the same period a year ago, according to a monthly report released by the county.

New commercial construction continues to increase as well. The county issued six permits last month for new commercial structures, double the three issued by the county in August 1993. The county has issued 72 percent more permits for new commercial construction so far this year over last year. Commercial alterations remained constant last month at 12, although permitting activity is up 13 percent for the year.

Overall permitting showed a slight increase when comparing

August 1993 and last month. A total of 711 building permits were issued by the county last month, compared to 665 a year ago. Total permitting activity for the past 11 months is still below last year's totals because of the impacts of the March 1992 hailstorms which damaged so many south Seminole County rooftops.

Deal averts Haitian invasion

WASHINGTON - The Clinton administration clinched a last-minute deal to avert a hostile invasion of Haiti but now has to ensure the agreement to reinstate President Jean-Bertrand Aristide is carried out.

U.S. troops this morning were poised to go ashore in a "permissive" environment. The Pentagon's invasion commander, Army Gen. Henry Hugh Shelton, headed to meet with Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, the chief of Haitian armed forces who overthrew Aristide three years ago. Shelton was to inform Cedras in Port-Au-Prince how the U.S. forces would come ashore.

The peaceful entry of the troops was agreed in the 11th-hour deal by Haiti's military leaders to relinquish power in exchange for amnesty and a postponement of their departure until Oct. 15 or parliamentary approval of the amnesty, whichever comes first.

The invasion was to have begun Sunday evening. The Pentagon dispatched its planes at 6:47 p.m. But they were recalled 75 minutes later after word came from former President Carter in Port-Au-Prince that the Haitian leaders had finally agreed to step down and let Aristide return to power.

Early morning decision

WASHINGTON - The time all presidents dread had come. For Clinton, it was 1 p.m., and his defense secretary gave him two options: Dispatch paratroopers and go as planned or cancel the military strike, giving negotiators more time.

"Pack 'em!" Clinton replied. And the invasion force was headed for Haiti.

The order put in place a odd scenario, with Clinton responsible for an invasion force in the air and a negotiating team on the ground. Senior administration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the invasion would have taken place Sunday night - if not for the sheer stubbornness of former President Carter.

Haitian leader pleads for calm

PORT-AU-PRINCE - The figurehead president of Haiti pleaded for calm when American troops land today to enforce an agreement that will oust the military leaders and restore exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power.

The last-minute accord, reached Sunday after President Clinton ordered American paratroopers into the air, halted a land, sea and air assault by American forces.

The capital was generally quiet after midnight, but there was scattered gunfire earlier after an American delegation headed by former President Jimmy Carter ended two days of intense talks with Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and Brig. Gen. Philippe Biamby, army chief of staff.

The generals who toppled Aristide in September 1991 backed down in the face of overwhelming military might and agreed to let American forces enter the country peacefully to oversee the transfer of power.

Fighting worst in six months

SARAJEVO - The U.N. commander in Bosnia is warning the government and rebel Serbs to stop a sudden surge of fighting in Sarajevo or face action that could include NATO air strikes.

Ethnic purges in the Serb-held northeast, meanwhile, drove some 1,300 fearful and weary Muslims from their homes to the safety of the northern city of Tuzla.

In all, about 9,000 non-Serbs have been forced from their homes in northwest and northeast Bosnia since mid-July. More refugees were expected today.

Mortar shells, machine-gun fire and anti-aircraft fire erupted Sunday in Sarajevo in the worst fighting in more than six months. The fighting wounded at least eight people and sent residents scurrying for cover.

Irish faction to travel to Washington

BELFAST - Leaders from both sides of Northern Ireland's sectarian divide go to Washington this week to argue their cases, emphasizing the importance of U.S. opinion as they grope for a peace settlement.

The Irish Republican Army's declaration of an open-ended truce has raised hopes that peace may be at hand at last in the British province, where 25 years of sectarian and political strife has killed more than 3,100 people.

Roman Catholic nationalists who seek an end to British rule and unification with Ireland want Washington to help get Sinn Fein, the IRA-allied political party, involved as soon as possible in peace talks. Pro-British Protestants want to dampen U.S. enthusiasm for the 19-day-old IRA truce.

Amtrak derailment remembered

MOBILE - Every time a train whistles, Eather Lou Lucius shivers at a fresh memory of screams in a dark Alabama bayou.

Mrs. Lucius was aboard Amtrak's coast-to-coast Sunset Limited that derailed one year ago, on Sept. 22, as it hurtled over a remote bridge riddled by a barge moments earlier.

Most of the passengers made it out of the harrowing mix of bayou water, flaming diesel fuel, glass shards and upended rail cars.

But 47 people - 42 passengers, three engineers and two crew members - died in Amtrak's worst disaster, an accident that exposed the need for greater rail and barge safety on backwater routes in America. More than 100 of the 210 people aboard were injured.

Many Haitian exiles angry Reaction bittersweet to Haitian accord

By BOB BOERNDORF Associated Press Writer

MIAMI - Many Haitian exiles are angry that the agreement between the United States and Haiti does not force strong man Raoul Cedras out of power immediately.

A crowd of about 75 people blocked a downtown street late Sunday in front of the Haitian Refugee Center in Miami, which has more Haitian exiles than any other U.S. city.

"Jimmy Carter hypocrite, Cedras must go," they chanted. "Bill Clinton hypocrite, Cedras must go."

More than 180 Haitians listened to President Clinton's announcement of an accord - negotiated in part by former President Carter - that allows Lt. Gen. Cedras and other key figures until Oct. 15 to relinquish power.

They sat expressionless in and outside the refugee center, many not understanding the broadcast in English. But when one man yelled "Oct. 15" in Creole, their expressions turned to shock and anger.

"They should force (the military leaders) into the trunk of a plane and dump them wherever they want," Samedi Floruit said.

"They have to leave now. Now. Now. Now." "It's not fair to leave them there, not even until tomorrow. They should leave now," Simon Ville yelled.

"The agreement will pave the way for the eventual return to power of Haiti's democratically elected president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Clinton said.

At the Philadelphia Church of God, next to the refugee center, another group of more than 100 Haitians prayed in Creole.

Tania Vil said she prays every day that Aristide would be restored.

"I feel great," she said through tears. "I am happy because God has helped me. He has helped Haiti."

As cars passed through Little Haiti during Clinton's news conference, many drivers honked their horns and cheered and waved.

But the crowd grew larger and more disappointed as the news spread that Cedras would not be leaving immediately.

"Cedras kills people. Cedras will keep killing people," said Louis Dargent. "I want Cedras to leave right now."

U.S. Sen. Connie Mack, a Florida Republican, said he was pleased a military invasion had been averted. But, he said, he hoped the Haitian leaders would not go back on their agreement to step down.

"The Haitian military has broken agreements in the past," Mack said in a statement. "I hope this time they will step down for good and allow democracy to be reestablished."

Mack said the threat of an immigration crisis would remain imminent for Florida until democracy is restored to Haiti.

Meanwhile in Jacksonville, N.C., families of Marines from Camp Lejeune were relieved.

"I was pretty anxious the past few days, but it looks like everything will be fine now," Colleen Seaton said.

Her husband, Sgt. Michael Seaton, and about 1,800 other Marines were awaiting the command to invade Haiti aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Wasp.

"To some degree I'm relieved, but I'm completely relieved when I pick my husband up and bring him home," said Kelly Goddard, whose husband, Capt. Brent Goddard, is also stationed off the Haitian coast.

Bridging the gap

Bunny Caramitro, left, executive director of The Sanford Bridge, welcomed on-lookers to the dedication of the residential drug/alcohol treatment center at Sixth Street and Holly Avenue Friday. Other speakers included Mayor Betty Smith, seated behind Caramitro, Harry K. Singletary Jr., secretary of the Florida Department of Corrections, Circuit Court Judge O.M. Eaton Jr. and Harry Dodd, director of Probation and Parole Services Program office for the DOC. Non-violent offenders with drug or alcohol problems may be ordered to complete the treatment program as an alternative to prison. The 85-bed facility is privately owned and accepts private clients as well as the 45-beds reserved for use by DOC.

Deaf beauty queen starts down long road

By JOHN CURRAN Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY - With three hours of sleep behind her and a roomful of reporters in front of her, Heather Whitestone demonstrated again the poise and determination that helped her become the first deaf Miss America.

She made people repeat their questions. She told photographers to stop shooting because their flashes prevented her from reading lips.

And when a persistent reporter looked puzzled at one answer, she turned the tables. "Let me know what you don't understand," she said.

And so it went Sunday as Whitestone, 21, of Birmingham, Ala., began her yearlong reign as Miss America.

She received a new red convertible, romped on the Atlantic City beach and serenely stood for photographs after photograph on the boardwalk, where the pageant started 74 years ago.

"The most handicapped (person) in the world is a negative thinker," she said.

Whitestone, a junior at Jacksonville State University, just almost all her hearing at age 15 after a reaction to a shot. She reads lips, uses a hearing aid and knows sign language.

She needed six years of speech therapy to learn how to say her last name.

Her platform is telling young people - not only those with disabilities - that anything is possible.

She quoted Helen Keller - "Know your problems but don't let them master you" - and recalled how her mother told her that the last four letters of "American" spell "I can."

Sunday's news conference was just the first of many for Whitestone. Miss America usually travels about 20,000 miles a month for speaking engagements, presentations and other appearances.

Jayne Bray, chairwoman of the Miss America Pageant board, said it won't be easy for Whitestone.

"Maybe she won't be able to give a speech as long as a normal Miss America might give," Bray said. "Maybe we are all going to have to go out and learn a little bit of sign language to help her out, which would be wonderful."

IN BRIEF

AROUND THE STATE

Florida lightens hold on No. 1

GAINESVILLE — Florida opened its lead over Nebraska in the AP poll after handing Tennessee its worst home defeat in 70 years, 31-0.

The Gators received 33 first-place votes and 1,507 points from a nationwide media panel. Nebraska, which defeated visiting UCLA 49-21, got 20 first-place votes and 1,490 points.

Nebraska is No. 1 in the USA Today-CNN coaches' poll, but UF is just six points behind.

Florida State remained third in the AP poll with three first-place votes and 1,376 points. Michigan held fourth with 1,336 points.

Penn State is No. 5, followed by Miami, Colorado, Arizona, Notre Dame and Auburn.

FAMU players MEAC's best

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Ray Domingo and Rod Williams of Florida A&M were named the offensive and defensive players of the week in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

Domingo passed for 264 yards and two touchdowns in a 38-34 loss to Jackson State. The 6-1, 212-pound junior quarterback from Lakewood, Calif., hit 19 of 32 passes.

Williams, a 6-3, 277-pound sophomore defensive end from Madison, had eight tackles, including three sacks and five for losses.

Miamian Al Sberil of South Carolina State, a 6-8, 280-pound guard, was named the offensive lineman of the week after being the blocking in a 37-0 win over Charleston Southern.

Gerulaitis found dead

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Vitas Gerulaitis, a free-spirited tennis professional who won the 1977 Australian Open and later became a broadcaster, was found dead at a friend's home.

An autopsy on the 40-year-old was scheduled for today. Police said there was no indication of suspicious circumstances when they found Gerulaitis' body Sunday afternoon.

Gerulaitis played tennis last Wednesday in Seattle on the Champions Tour, a circuit for men's players 35 and over. He withdrew from the event the next day because of a bad back.

Gerulaitis was ranked No. 3 in 1977 and reached the finals of the U.S. and French Opens in 1979 and 1980. But cocaine use during the late 70s and 80s undercut his ability as a player.

Gerulaitis, who left the main tour in 1985, worked a week ago for CBS at the U.S. Open as a studio analyst. He also played in the men's 35 and over doubles event during the tournament.

US wins first Presidents Cup

GAINESVILLE, Va. — The United States built a big lead, then survived some surprising late drama to win the first Presidents Cup with a 20-12 victory over the International team.

The U.S. team came into the day needing only five wins in singles to take the cup and quickly won four of the first five, only to watch the next four matches go to sudden-death playoffs.

But those playoffs became meaningless when Fred Couples struck a 170-yard iron shot close enough to the hole on No. 18 to be given the birdie putt by Nick Price. Price then lost the match — and the Presidents Cup — when his chip for a birdie to tie barely missed.

In all, the United States won six of the 12 matches, lost two and four were halved.

Tracy gets first oval win

NAZARETH, Pa. — Paul Tracy finally got his first oval track win, leading the fifth 1-2-3 sweep of the season by Marlboro Team Penske in the Boesj Spark Plug Grand Prix.

Taking the lead from pole-winning teammate Emerson Fittipaldi on the first lap around the Roger Penske-owned one-mile Nazareth Speedway, Tracy led 192 of the 200 laps.

Al Unser Jr., who clinched the Indy-car PPG Cup championship last week, finished second, outdueling Fittipaldi, who wrapped up the runner-up spot in the championship.

Raul Boesel was four laps behind in fourth, followed by Stefan Johansson and Teo Fabi.

Muddy morning stars

Locals lead harriers through Barnett slop

By TONY DESORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

ORLANDO — Yuck. In conditions that would have tested the abilities of the hardest 4 x 4 vehicle, the Lyman High School girls cross country team and the Lake Brantley boys squad put together superlative efforts in Saturday morning's Edgewater Invitational at Barnett Park.

Earlier in the morning, in the University of Central Florida Invitational, Lake Mary High School graduate D.J. Lewis won the men's race to lead Florida Invitational to the team title while Lake Howell graduate Mimi Palumbo helped Jacksonville to the women's team title with her sixth place finish.

The Lyman Greyhounds, led by Kelly Hudson's fourth-place finish in 12 minutes, 52 seconds, outscored Dr. Phillips 83-69 to win the girls' team title while the Lake Brantley Patriots, paced by Tom Sanchez's 12th-place finish in 17:08, were a close second to Edgewater, 82-84, in the boys' team standings.

"That's a big improvement," said Lake Brantley coach Charlie Harris. "I didn't think that we'd be that close to Edgewater."

"What we have to do from here is get more as a team and have some people finish further up in the race. We have six weeks before we find out where we really are, but this is a good indication of where we can be."

The races were run over a course covered either by standing water or mud. By the time they were finished, most of the competitors were covered from head to foot in slime.

"Everyone had to run in the same conditions," said Harris. "What we did is we went out and competed well today."

Led by Sanchez, Lake Brantley's five scoring runners all placed in the top 30. Omar Wise (17:46), Jeremy Boehl (17:47), and Brad Lang (17:48) were 17th, 18th, and 19th, respectively, while Aaron Meiswinkel came in 26th (18:08). Also competing for the Patriots were Adam Williams (93rd, 20:04) and Greg Siquardo (112th, 21:04).

Following the Patriots in the Class 6A boys' standings were Lyman (third, 144), Oviedo (fourth, 161), Lake Howell (fifth, 163), and Lake Mary (eighth, 230).

Doing the scoring for Lyman were Rob Evans (sixth, 16:28), David Kincaid (22nd, 17:54), Brian Richardson (34th, 18:12), Jason Scott (38th, 18:16), and Brian DeBier (44th, 18:33). Ryan Baker (85th, 19:52) also ran for the Greyhounds.

Making up Oviedo's team score were Scott Thelen (21st, 17:54), Ty Kracht (23rd, 17:55), Pete Buntington (26th, 18:05), Paul Izzo (37th, 18:15), and J.P. Green (54th, 18:48). Oviedo's other entrant was Nick Paxon (94th, 20:08).

The top five finishers for Lake Howell were Matt Miller (16th, 17:37), Ben Brown (24th, 17:59), Chris Kempink (32nd, 18:10), Bobby Froust (36th, 18:13), and Ryan McDermott (55th, 18:49). Also representing the Silver Hawks were Cory Franks (76th, 19:35) and Craig Noyes (78th, 19:37).

Lake Mary's scorers were Simon Williams (25th, 18:02), Aron Cook (35th, 18:12), Rich Heineman (47th, 18:37), Eric Condon (56th, 19:01), and Kellen Williams (64th, 19:10).

Like the Lake Brantley boys, all five of the Lyman girls placed in the top 30.

Joining Hudson in securing the title for the Greyhounds were Marve Aford (11th, 13:53), Greana Rivers (16th, 14:10), Michelle Burger (24th, 14:24), and Joy Kaminski (29th, 14:30).

Falling in behind Lyman and Dr. Phillips in the Class 6A girls' team standings were Lake Mary (third, 170), Lake Brantley (fourth, 189), and Oviedo (eighth, 223). Seminole. □ See Running, Page 2B

Water, electricity don't mix

While football players and cross country runners continue to deal with the wet conditions created by the recent spell of frequent rain, the swimmers in last Tuesday's meet between Lyman and Lake Mary were forced out of the pool midway through the event by the lightning that accompanied the cloudburst.

Andersen, Saints' defense stymie Bucs

By FRED OSWALL
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA — The New Orleans Saints could always depend on Morten Andersen and, until the last two weeks, their defense.

Andersen remained steady Sunday and the defense came back to life against Tampa Bay. The 13-year pro kicked three first-half field goals and the Saints, who yielded 68 points in the first two games of the season, made them stand Sunday for a 9-7 victory.

The triumph enabled the Saints (1-2) to avoid their worst start in 14 years, while denying Tampa Bay (1-2) — which missed a 54-yard field goal as time expired — its most promising start under coach Sam Wyche.

"I challenged the team to play well this week," said New Orleans linebacker Sam Mills. "I just spoke about what was on my mind. I thought that we had to answer the bell."

Andersen kicked field goals of 43 and 31 yards in the first quarter and Jim Everett threw 31 yards to Wesley Walls to set up another 43-yard kick just before the half for a 9-7 lead.

The Saints defense gave up just more than 400 yards per game in losses to Kansas City and Washington, but only allowed 232 Sunday. The unit held up in the intense 87-degree heat despite being on the field for most of the fourth quarter.

"It was a black and blue slugfest," Wyche said. "They came in here in a must-win situation. We've got to swallow hard now ... but this team is going to win a lot of football games."

The Bucs had the ball for more than 10 minutes of the last period, but weren't able to do much until Erickson's 28-yard completion to Willie Green on fourth-and-27 in the final minute.

An 11-yard pass interference penalty against Tyrone Legette at the Saints' 36 gave Tampa Bay its last hope with one second remaining. The 54-yard field goal attempt was within Michael Husted's range, but sailed wide right.

"I think this is going to give our defense a good deal of confidence for next week," Mora said, looking ahead to a game at San Francisco. "I felt a good spirit in the locker room after the game."

Autumn athletics in Florida ... just add water

It's wet ... everything and everywhere.

If your clothes hamper is anything like mine, it's been filled constantly with mud-stained clothes. And those clothes that aren't covered in mud are hanging over a chair, drying out from the latest "20 percent chance of rain" deluge.

And lately, it seems like we've spent 100 percent of our time walking around in that "20 percent."

It'd be one thing if it rained a little now and then, enough to keep the grass a pleasant shade of green (forest green as opposed to milkweed green) and the water levels where they should be.

But even as a sponge can hold only so much water, the sandbar that is Florida has pretty much reached its maximum capacity of water retention. Since it can't filter down, it just forms puddles, then ponds, and eventually lakes.

Smart people avoid these areas, knowing them to be difficult and potentially dangerous to navigate.

SPORTS

TONY DESORMIER

Didn't your mother ever tell you not to play in the rain or splash in the puddles? You get wet, you catch a chill, you catch a cold, then you get sick, isn't that the progression of events?

I wonder how mothers felt watching their prides and joys rolling around last Friday night (and last Tuesday and Thursday, for that matter) on fields that had been reduced to sopped sponges.

Then there were the young men and women who slogged through the Edgewater Invitational cross country meet — and the accompanying University of Central Florida Invitational — at Orlando's Barnett Park. Tiptoeing around standing water before the race, they covered each other with mud during the race.

After the race, there was a long line at the public spigot, where the runners gathered to wash their shoes after the event. The problem was that you had to wade through mud to get to and from the spigot.

Being a sports writer in these conditions is its own special kind of hell. Athletes have the distraction of competition ... at least they're doing something. Parents and fans who brave the elements and conditions can make preparations to deal with the wet.

Those of us of the sporting fourth estate? We slog along, following the story and chasing coaches and athletes through the rain and the mud. Still, it beats working for a living.

You'd think that adults would know better than to go out and play in the rain or mud, but we don't. In men's softball league games last Thursday night at Pinchurat Park, the pitchers had to throw from the senior girls pitching rubber because the regulation adult's pitching rubber was underwater.

Often, it doesn't matter how much you prepare, you're going to get wet. Mother Nature has a twisted sense of humor that way.

For example, I got up Friday to go for one of my tri-weekly bike rides. Before taking to the road, I watched The Weather Station, checking the local radar to make sure there were no thunderstorms sneaking up. After getting geared up, I went outside and gave the horizon a good look in all directions.

Satisfied, I got the bike out of the garage and started pedaling. Ten minutes later, a couple of miles away from the house, some of that "20 percent chance of precipitation" soaked me to the skin. And it continued to come down all the way home, stopping only after I put the bike back in the garage.

It can't rain forever, can it?

Caution allows Wallace to limp home with a win

By BOB BRONSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

DOVER, Del. — In one of the more bizarre endings to a NASCAR race, Rusty Wallace led a frustrated field across the finish line at a virtual standstill race to win the SplitFire 500.

With a flat tire and his Ford Thunderbird around the one-mile Dover Speed Down International race track under a caution flag.

Right behind him were Dale Earnhardt and Darrell Waltrip. Wallace was lucky he was able to keep the car moving — Earnhardt would have won had it stopped at any time on the final lap. He was even luckier to have been in contention.

First, Mark Martin, one of a record-tying 12 drivers to lead in the fiercely contested event, blew a big lead and crashed out.

Then, with two laps left and NASCAR ready to end the last of 13 caution periods with a one-mile shootout — which Wallace could not have completed — Rich Mast and Sterling Martin ran out of fuel. That necessitated a finish under caution and negated a final showdown between Earnhardt and Waltrip.

Fifteen laps later, after Wallace had closed a six-second deficit to about two, damage to the left front of Martin's car finally did him in. His tire flattened coming off the high-banked fourth turn and he went hard into the wall.

The Chevrolets of Earnhardt, Waltrip and Ken Schrader followed Wallace. Wallace was fifth in a Ford, followed by the Pontiac of Kyle Petty and the Chevrolet of Terry Labonte, the last car on the lead lap.

Running

which competed in the Class 5A-2A division, was represented by two runners and did not have a team score.

Angie Olson broke into the top 10 for Lake Mary, finishing seventh in 13:10. Completing the team score for the Rams were Megan Page/Wilkes (19th, 14:18), Carrie Magan (39th, 14:43), Brenda Mell (41st, 14:44), and Alison Neri (64th, 15:13). Ursula Yadav (72nd, 15:20) also ran for Lake Mary.

Julie LaBret (10th, 13:46) and Samantha Jomagn (15th, 14:09) paced Lake Brantley. They were joined by Kathie Koepke (23rd, 14:24), Kelly Blakely (66th, 15:14), and Marissa McDonnell (75th, 15:41). Other representatives of the Patriots were Cathy Miller (89th, 16:04) and and pass the ball." Kirby said.

Jackson caught six passes for 100 yards — his best effort in three seasons with Miami. Jackson also contributed the game's most memorable play when he avoided being tackled after the 1-yard line by tossing a lateral to Irving Fryar, who scored for a 21-7 lead.

The Dolphins' defense, depleted by injuries at linebacker and cornerback, nonetheless frustrated New York.

"It's a patchwork defense," Brown said. "but we have a lot of guys that have a lot of heart."

Cornerback Darrell Malone and rookie linebacker Aubrey Beavers — both playing more because of injuries to others — came up with the first interceptions of their career to thwart early threats. Beavers made a diving catch of a pass bobbled by tight end Johnny Mitchell after New York had reached Miami's 39-yard line.

"We killed ourselves," Mitchell said. "I just want to forget this game."

Brown and Michael Stewart also intercepted Eliason's passes in Miami territory in the fourth quarter.

Sorting through the confusion

How to determine which is the right 'cide'

Insecticides, herbicides, fungicides. There are terms that home gardeners frequently hear recommended by the nursery or garden center. But how do they differ and when is the right time to use them?

Pesticide is a general term for products used to eliminate pests in general — from insects in your pantry to weeds to fungus diseases.

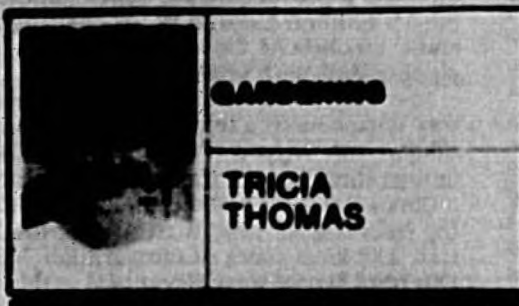

Insecticides control insect pests like cock roaches, chinch bugs or caterpillars. They usually eliminate insects in one of three ways — as a stomach poison, as a contact poison or as a pathogen or disease that kills the unwanted pest.

Stomach poisons are insecticides that must be ingested to be effective. They are applied to the leaves or other plant parts that the insects are eating and kill when ingested. Therefore, they are most effective on chewing insects like caterpillars and bugs.

Contact poisons kill by being absorbed through the shell or skin of the insect. They are most effective when drops of spray land directly on insects. They also control residues on leaves and twigs. Insects that crawl around like cockroaches are best controlled with contact poisons.

Disease producing organisms kill insects by affecting their internal organs. These are the latest technological advances made in the area of pesticide research and are called biological controls. Since they are naturally occurring biological pesticides are usually safer than traditional pesticides. Growth regulators are in this category since they usually control the pest by interrupting the life cycle.

Insecticides are available in different formulations to enable the home gardener to control their pest most effectively on a variety of plants in lawns, on shrubs trees and vegetables. A popular lawn insecticide may come in a liquid concentrate for diluting in water and applying in a compressed air or hose and sprayer or a granular formulation applied in a spreader and watered in. Common all-purpose garden insecticides may come in liquid, granular or dust formulation. Bait formulations are simply ingested food impregnated with a pesticide.

GARDENING

Multi-purpose insecticides control a broad spectrum of insects. These products unfortunately kill beneficial insects, which ends up killing the harmful insect's predators as well as the pest. There are many, many more beneficial insects than harmful ones. In fact, less than 1/10 of 1 percent of all insects are pests on plants.

Herbicides are chemicals that kill unwanted vegetation such as weeds. In the past, most herbicides were non-selective meaning that they killed all plants including the cultivated ones. Herbicides like Round-Up and Kellen-Up are some of the non-selective herbicides available at the garden centers. Non-selective herbicide simply means it kills everything green! So use caution with non-selective herbicides. Today, most herbicides are selective.

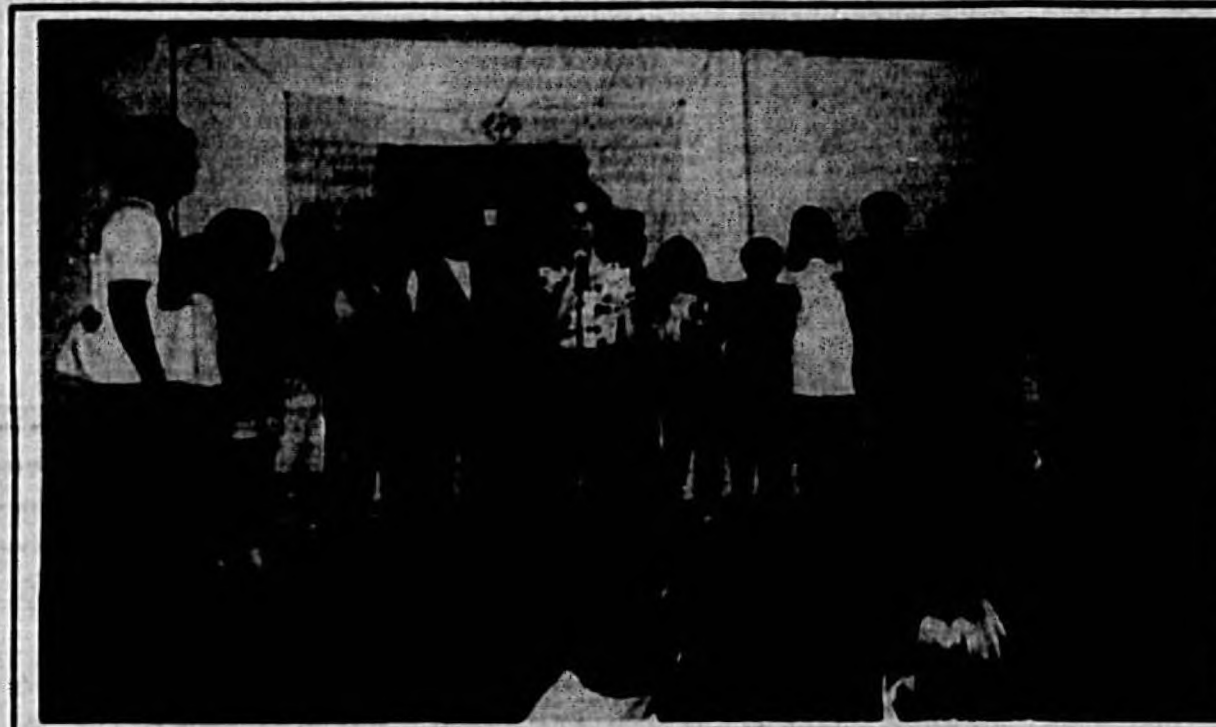

meaning that they are only effective on certain groups of plants like grasses or broadleaf weeds. Most herbicides are effective only on young tender plants rather than mature plants, but non-selective herbicides must be absorbed by green, actively growing tissue.

Fungicides are effective against fungus diseases, but most of their action is preventative. Three conditions must be present for a disease to happen: a pathogen, a host plant and ideal environmental conditions. By eliminating any of these three factors you will not have disease development. When applying a fungicide, you are basically applying a protective coat that prevents the fungus from developing. Bactericides are just like fungicides but are effective on bacterial diseases.

If you are planning to use a pesticide, it can be a big help to bring a sample of your plant into the Extension Office for diagnosis as to whether you have a disease, insect or other problem. Every Monday morning from 9:30 a.m. until noon, there is a plant clinic at our office which is located at 250 W. County Home Road, Sanford, off 17-92, across from Flea World. There are Seminole County master gardeners available to help you with your problem and to help you make the best pesticide choice if you need to use one. It is also a good time to pick up any of our many fact sheets on various topics for gardening in Florida.

Any products referred to in our articles are for educational purposes only and not to be considered as a recommendation.

DEAR READERS: A few weeks ago, I published a letter from Ellen S. of Lakeview Terrace, Calif., saying she had found an old photo album in a vast mountain of junk that a previous tenant had left behind in an old Victorian mansion near downtown Los Angeles. The album contained snapshots dating from the late '30s through the '50s. Some were of Japanese-American men wearing U.S. infantry uniforms, vintage 1942-1945, as well as family members of several generations. The album apparently had belonged to a Japanese American family named "Tsunekawa."

ADVICE

Knowing that I would be interested in returning the album to the Tsunekawa family, Ellen sent it to me, asking if I could locate the family, who were among the many Japanese Americans who had been sent to an internment camp in Poston, Ariz., for the duration of World War II.

Among the letters I received was the following:

"DEAR ABBY: Our parents were in Poston, Ariz. — they were the only Tsunekawa family in Los Angeles. Both are now deceased. Dad died 20 years ago. Mother died four years later.

"Thank you for wanting to locate us.

MR. AND MRS. JIMMY TSUNEKAWA, MONTEBELLO, CALIF."

This Tsunekawa family appeared to be the family to whom the album belongs. When I contacted them, I learned that they had received telephone calls from as far away as Hawaii and New Zealand. Our conversation convinced me that they were indeed the family Ellen and I were seeking.

Readers, here's the rest of the story. After the parents passed away, one of the Tsunekawa brothers cleaned out his parents' home. Not being a very sentimental person, he discarded many items other family members might have kept. (He left some of the better things on the porch, instructing the neighbors to help themselves to anything they wanted.)

After many years, this precious photo album is now back in the hands of the Tsunekawa family — thanks to the sensitivity of Ellen S. Another happy ending!

DEAR ABBY: If Leslie Barnes of Dallas doesn't provide an explanation as to why men's and women's clothing buttons from opposite sides, here is what I have read:

"When originally introduced, buttons were expensive and therefore used only on the clothing of the upper classes. Wealthy women were dressed by their right-handed servants, so the buttons were located on the left side of garments.

"Men dressed themselves, so the buttons were placed on the right side of garments."

BERNIE ALTMAN, CULVER CITY, CALIF.

DEAR BERNIE: Thank you. Your explanation appears reasonable — so I'm squirreling it in the back of my mind in case I'm ever on "Jeopardy."

Immigration stealth issue in state governor's race

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles, who jokes these days about being a "tired, old fellow," is trying to center his tough re-election campaign against the youthful, energetic Jeb Bush on the question of experience.

Bush, the 41-year-old son of the former president, argues that Chiles' 35 years in office represent part of the problem. Chiles' supporters counter that they have proof that the governor's experience makes him the best candidate to continue to lead Florida.

For one frantic day in mid-August, the 64-year-old Democrat worked the system about as quickly as possible to avert a repeat of the 1980 Mariel boatlift that brought 125,000 Cubans to South Florida. The influx overwhelmed police, schools and other social services, and the region didn't recover from the stress for several years.

"I'm a product of Mariel One," Chiles said recently. "Bella went off inside of me, man. (I thought, 'This is starting all over again unless you do something.'")

In Key West on the morning of Aug. 18, the governor declared a state of emergency and demanded federal intervention as Coast Guard cutters cruised into port, packed with anxious Cuban refugees.

Attorney General Janet Reno cautioned against being melodramatic earlier that morning. But after a day of intense lobbying by Chiles and other Florida officials, she changed her tune.

By the next morning, President Clinton had ordered the indefinite detention of Cubans picked up at sea, reversing the United States' 28-year-old policy of welcoming Cuban refugees with open arms.

Chiles and a contingent of Floridians, including the influential Jorge Mas Canosa of the Cuban American National Foundation, persuaded the president to keep the pressure on Castro by transporting Cubans to safe havens such as the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba — not to Florida.

"They said I was acting hysterically," Chiles said. "But just look at how high the numbers went. What if we had waited four or five days?"

The number of Cuban rafters swelled to more than 2,000 a day at the peak of the exodus.

"It's a domestic political race with foreign policy implications, a fairly unique situation," said Doug Richardson of the Democratic Governor's Association. "Chiles handled it skillfully, and good government is good politics."

The governor's actions were popular among Floridians. Even Cuban Americans like former Miami Mayor Xavier Suarez had to admire how Chiles pulled it off.

"At first, I thought Chiles might be shooting from the hip," Suarez said.

Chiles' dramatic plea for federal help. "But then I thought — and still feel — it was a good political move. It will help with nine out of 10 Florida voters."

On Sept. 9, the Clinton administration reached an agreement with Havana allowing 20,000 Cubans a year to immigrate legally to this country. In return, Castro agreed to shut off the flow of rafters.

Bush has strong support in the Cuban-American community, speaks fluent Spanish and his wife is Mexican-born. While he doesn't favor bringing thousands of detained refugees to Florida, he quickly turns the debate to increasing U.S. pressure to topple Castro.

"The response has been to deal exclusively with the rafters and that is wrong," Bush said. "Chiles seems to be viewing this as another card to play in the political race and that's a shame. This is too important to lower to the level of politics."

But most every other issue is on the table and many of them play to Bush's advantage these days.

Many voters are fed up with government, angry about crime, nervous about taxes and unhappy with the Democratic Clinton administration. All of this leads Republican analysts to view Chiles as a vulnerable incumbent, particularly with polls showing Bush within a few percentage points of Chiles.

Democrats and Republicans are involved in fierce fights for control of the governor's office in the five most populous states. Ironically, Jeb Bush's brother, George W., is challenging Democratic incumbent Gov. Ann Richards in Texas, another state with immigration woes.

Just last week, California's Republican Gov. Pete Wilson aired a television ad complaining that Clinton has helped Texas and Florida shut off immigration, but left California in the lurch.

Chiles has a $1 billion lawsuit pending against the federal government to recover the long-term state and local costs of immigration. Many of the bills from Mariel were never paid to the state. And Florida is in the process of deporting many jailed illegal immigrants.

"Who do you want representing you in the governor's office when dealing with a Hurricane Andrew or the threat of Cuban immigration?" said Frank Greer, a Chiles consultant from Washington.

The Republicans discount the long-term effects of the immigration issue and say this election will be won and lost on issues closer to home like crime and the desire to restrain government — both themes are Bush favorites.

Chris Henick, executive director of the Republican Governor's Association, says the results of the Sept. 9 primary show Bush on the move and Chiles in trouble with a Democratic protest vote against him of almost 30 percent.
