Student testifies about sex

SANFORD — A young woman told the court yesterday that as a high school student, she would sneak off with her 49-year-old teacher and have sex.

The encounters were usually followed by smoking cigarettes and talking about history.

Because she was 17 at the time of the affair, the teacher, George Sellers of Casselberry was charged with a dozen counts of having sex with a minor. Because he videotaped one of their lovemaking sessions, he is also charged with promoting a sexual performance.

Sellers was suspended without pay from Lake Howell High School last year after his arrest, pending the outcome of the trial which got under way yesterday.

The defense has said that the woman, now a topless dancer, made up the story to harm Sellers who had disciplined her boyfriend twice at school.

The trial continues today in Courtroom B at the Seminole County Courthouse.

Activist vs. cop chief: Two sides of volatile issue

By VICKI DeBORMIER

SANFORD — Johnell Jackson said the time has come for the good ol' boy network that controls the Sanford Police Department to be brought down.

Jackson said the "white-dominated" establishment in Sanford is keeping whites in control in the department and that white officers are unnecessarily targeting blacks for arrest in incidents where charges are never filed by the state attorney's office.

Sanford Police Chief Ralph Russell countered that Jackson's theories are unfounded and the people targeted for arrest are those who are breaking the law, no matter

Political gerrymandering Court rules local Congressional district unconstitutional, carved along racial lines

From staff and wire reports

SANFORD — This past Saturday, Florida Congresswoman Corrine Brown (D-Jacksonville), held a Civil Rights Summit in Sanford, during which she criticized the Supreme Court for ruling Congressional districts carved to help minorities get elected were unconstitutional.

Today, she is faced with the elimination of her own Congressional district.

District 3 is a wishbone-shaped area, meandering from Jacksonville to Orlando. The district includes some but not all of Sanford, some but not all of Seminole County, and parts of Volusia, Orange, Alachua, Marion and Duval counties, including 39 cities and towns.

The district is so irregularly shaped that some parts are no wider than 50 yards.

A three-judge panel announced yesterday in a 2-1 decision, that the state Legislature must come up with a new congressional plan by May 22.

In a statement sent to the Sanford Herald after the decision, Brown wrote, "The decision by the court in Florida declaring the Third Congressional District unconstitutional is extremely disappointing not just for the voters in the Third Congressional District but for the entire State of Florida."

She continued, "Any changes will not only affect this district but all of the districts in Florida. All of Florida's Congressional districts will have to be re-drawn."

The ruling affects at least six districts beside the 3rd, including those of John Mica, of Winter Park; and Bill McCollum, of Altamonte Springs. Brown said she doesn't believe her district was created as racial gerrymandering, as its composition is 50 percent African American and 50 percent white.

The decision "should not be interpreted as 'turning back the clock' on the gains made by African-American voters, and other racial and ethnic voting minorities" in voting rights, the judges said in a ruling Wednesday. "It's worse than that. It is doing away with the clock," said Brown.

She has already promised to appeal the ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court. "Voters have had to wait 127 years to elect an African American to Congress."

Brown, of Jacksonville, will keep the seat through the fall elections to finish her second term. One of three blacks who represent Florida in Washington, Brown said she will seek re-election.

Brown was elected in 1992 with 59 percent of the vote and won re-election in 1994 with 58 percent.

Radio talk show host Andy Johnson, of Jacksonville, sued two years ago to overturn the district, saying it was created primarily to elect a minority. Brown defeated Johnson in 1992 in the Democratic runoff for the seat.

"It gives me a chance to say, 'I told you so,'" said Johnson, who does not plan to run again. "As far back as '91, I was saying drawing the lines in this fashion was illegal, unconstitutional, wrong, not in the public interest."

Johnson's attorney, Rod Sullivan, said lawmakers should redraw the entire congressional map, not only those districts adjacent to the 3rd. He said he expected a similar legal

Landlord clears some code problems

By NICK PFEIFFER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A historic district landlord who became the focus of angry neighbors in a letter-writing campaign to the city has won code approval for some of her rental structures. However, not all of her problems have been resolved.

During the April 9 meeting of the Code Enforcement Board, a $100 per day fine was levied against Violetta Williams, 91, to begin after seven days, if code violations uncovered in previous inspections of the buildings were not resolved. The seven days ended at midnight Tuesday of this week, but no fines will be levied.

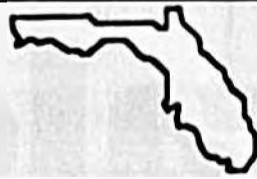

"The buildings underwent a compliance inspection Tuesday," said Attorney Tom Greene, "and we passed." Greene represents Williams.

Neighbors in the district had complained about the disrepair to the structures, and about the tenants Williams chooses. They said some tenants had harassed and threatened them. A letter-writing campaign followed, claiming Williams' rental compounds should be shut down as a public nuisance and for code infractions.

Greene said all but two buildings were required to be brought up to codes internally within seven days or the fine was to be imposed. "The other two buildings," he said, "at 612 Park Avenue and 718 W. First Street, were given 14 days rather than seven."

Death threats preceded bomb

CAPE CORAL — Death threats preceded a bomb that devastated the front section of a home, but no one was hurt by the blast.

The homeowner, Susanne Ferguson, said Tuesday's explosion may be connected to death threats she and her live-in boyfriend received, but declined to go into details.

"I'm not sure," said Ferguson, 53. "But I'm not ruling that out."

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms refused Wednesday to say if it had a suspect or motive. Investigators also refused to say if they knew the type of bomb and its power.

The explosion, in an affluent neighborhood in the town's southwest section, forced the evacuation of nearby homes while a bomb squad made sure no other bombs were present in the area.

Bay of Pigs commemorated

MIAMI — It was an invasion that wasn't. Thirty-five years ago Wednesday, Cuban exile military action against Cuban leader Fidel Castro — the Bay of Pigs invasion — was a resounding failure, changing the face of South Florida and U.S.-Cuban relations forever.

The objective was to launch a full-scale assault on Cuba, link up with underground units and overthrow Castro, who had assumed power two years earlier.

None of that happened on April 17, 1961. The United States didn't provide the Cuban exile force with air support. Reinforcements were never taken to the landing site. And U.S. planners didn't take into account coral reefs that damaged several landing craft.

At least 107 exiles were killed. Castro lost at least 161 soldiers but seized 1,189 exiles. Nearly all prisoners were returned to the United States in December 1962 after a $53 million ransom was paid to Castro.

Since the ill-fated event, more than half-million Cubans have fled to South Florida. Miami now has the largest number of Cubans outside Cuba.

Flagstar names new president

SPARTANBURG, S.C. — Flagstar Co. Inc. has named a human resources executive as president of Quincy's Family Steakhouse, which recently was accused of racial discrimination at a Florida restaurant.

Edna K. Morris, 44, was named Quincy's president Wednesday. She will supervise operations for the chain's nearly 200 restaurants, mostly in the Southeast, company officials said.

Morris replaces James R. Kibler, 41, who resigned earlier this month after 25 years with the company.

A week after Kibler's resignation was announced, news reports said a black woman accused a Quincy's restaurant in Merritt Island, Fla., of denying her a reservation for a class luncheon because of her race.

Army Sgt. Connie Brinson said that on March 19 she was told she could not make a reservation for the days she asked about. A few minutes later, a white male classmate of Brinson's was granted a reservation for one of the days she had requested.

The allegation is being investigated by Florida officials, and Flagstar Chairman James B. Adamson wrote Brinson apologizing for "our failure to make you feel welcome."

Connie Mack Jr. dies

FORT MYERS — Connie Mack Jr., father of Florida's United States senator and son of Hall of Fame baseball manager Connie Mack, has died of cancer of the esophagus. He was 83.

Mack, who was formally known as Cornelius McGillicuddy Jr., moved to Florida in 1951 after 15 years as a young executive with the Philadelphia Athletics, owned and managed by his father.

He played baseball and basketball at Duke University before going to coach with the A's in 1935 at age 22. He spent one season on the sidelines before going to the team's front office.

"I learned about life by watching how my father lived his, thinking of others above himself," Mack once said of his famous baseball father. "He taught us through his actions, he didn't need words."

In addition to several real estate ventures in the Fort Myers area, Mack spent thousands of hours volunteering at two local hospitals over a period spanning 40 years.

An Army veteran, Mack is survived by his wife of 61 years, Susan; three daughters and four sons, including U.S. Sen. Connie Mack, R-Cape Coral. Another son died of cancer in 1979.

A memorial mass is scheduled at 10 a.m. Saturday in St. Cecilia's Catholic Church in Fort Myers.

Violence in the air

Miami-bound jet makes stop for passengers arrested in a tiff

By ROBIN ESTRIN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — It was smoking that first got him in trouble with an airline crew and federal authorities, but Lionel Rotcajg had one thing to say after appearing in court: "I'm just dying for a cigarette."

Rotcajg, 47, of Paris, and his mother, Regine Choukroun, 67, of Fribourg, Switzerland, were arrested Wednesday after they argued with the pilot and crew over where they could smoke on their transatlantic flight from Paris.

American Airlines Flight 63 was to have flown directly from Orly Airport to Miami Wednesday, but made an emergency landing in Boston instead to get them off the plane.

The two were arrested at Boston's Logan International Airport terminal, said Phil Orlandella, spokesman for the Massachusetts Port Authority.

According to the federal court complaint, the dispute began when Rotcajg, who was traveling in business class, broke airline policy by lighting a cigarette while standing in the aisle.

When a flight attendant told him that smoking regulations required that he stop, Rotcajg allegedly said: "I don't give a damn about the law. I am going to stand here and smoke even if you don't like it."

Currently, the airline allows smoking in the last rows of each cabin on its European flights. Passengers who wish to light up must all, though, since smoking is prohibited in the aisles.

Come June 1, all of American's European flights will be non-smoking.

When the attendant, Claudio Vannini, told the passenger he'd have to extinguish the cigarette or the captain and the FBI would be informed, Rotcajg allegedly responded: "You do that and I'll shoot you down."

Vannini told authorities that Rotcajg motioned at him with his fingers and thumb, as if he were holding a gun.

When the head flight attendant, Jennifer Brogan, tried to get Rotcajg to put out the cigarette, Rotcajg allegedly pushed her before returning to his seat, the complaint says.

When Capt. Richard C. Lesley also tried to calm Rotcajg, the defendant asked the pilot: "Are you going to shoot me?" Lesley said he decided to divert the flight to Boston for the safety of the passengers and crew.

As Lesley started to walk back to the cockpit after speaking with Rotcajg, Choukroun followed him making obscene statements, prosecutors said. "You can't tell me what to do," she allegedly told. "The last time someone told me what to do was when the Nazis invaded Paris."

Interfering with a flight crew is a federal offense and the disruptive passengers were arrested by the FBI, airline spokesman John Holard said.

Rotcajg's 7-year-old daughter and Choukroun's husband, who were traveling with them, continued on to Miami.

Helping at the Ritz

Helen Stairs, chairman of the Ritz Theatre restoration committee, accepted a $100 donation from Richard and Ette Jane Keogh to help with the restoration of the theater. The money was given on behalf of Annette Fitzgerald in memory of her friend Clyde A. Gleason, the first projectionist at the theater. The theater was called the Milano Theatre at the time when Fitzgerald and Gleason were friends many years ago.

One dead after three teens fleeing cops crash into van

By The Associated Press

TAMPA — Teen-agers in a stolen car crashed into a van as they fled authorities, killing one and critically injured three others, police said.

Michael Odell Barnum, 14, was pronounced dead at the scene but was resuscitated on the way to St. Joseph's hospital early Wednesday. He died later at the hospital, Tampa Police spokesman Steve Cole said.

The 16-year-old driver of the car, Horace Donald, was in an intensive care unit at St. Joseph's today, while passengers Rick L. Lovett, 15, and Shayla Muldron, 16, were in serious condition at Tampa General Hospital today.

The driver of a van the teens ran into, George Hamilton Bullock, 64, remained at St. Joseph's this morning but hospital supervisors did not have his condition listed. Bullock had to be cut from his overturned vehicle.

A fifth youth was treated at Tampa General Hospital and released. No one had been charged Wednesday.

The teens may be responsible for a rash of break-ins and car thefts in the West Shore business district during the past few days, Cole said. Except for Muldron, all the teens involved have extensive arrest records including numerous auto theft charges.

Bomb threats won't close USF April 29

By The Associated Press

TAMPA — Threats to blow up a building on campus won't shut down the University of South Florida but access will be restricted on April 29, the day an anonymous letter-writer promised to carry out the threat.

Officials said Wednesday that entry to the 1,700-acre campus would be limited to clients, faculty and students with IDs the weekend of April 27 to 29. Some roads and buildings will be closed, and no package or mail deliveries will be permitted. Worried administrators will also have bodyguards available.

USF Associate Vice President Rick Fender said additional security measures ordered are "two steps short of closing the university."

The increased security is in response to a letter sent to the Oracle, USF's student-run newspaper, March 25. Signed by "The One, the Leader of the War Purgers," the letter included a threat to blow up an administration building, kill an unnamed white female professor and place a fake detonator in a public area.

The anonymous letter-writer claimed the "War Purgers" were connected to the Palestinian terrorist groups and demanded the letter be published in the Oracle. Student editors didn't publish the letter but wrote a story about it.

The letter also asked for an apology for negative media coverage of Islamic Jihad leader Ramadan Abdullah Shallah, a former USF professor.

Officers said two men were in the vehicle, and as the result of a search, located three cellular phones, a camera, stungun, and a number of other items in the vehicle, which had reportedly been taken during vehicular burglaries on Markham Woods Road. Deputies said the two subsequently were connected with burglaries of five to 10 vehicles.

Jeremy Dale Scaman, 18, of 3126 Dellcrest Place, Lake Mary, and Russell Wayne Leveque, 20, of 102 Oakridge Court, Sanford, were arrested. Each has been charged with five counts of burglary to a vehicle, five counts of grand theft, and one count of theft.

Student arrested

Derrick Deon Jones, 18, of 1401 W. Seventh Street, Sanford, said to be listed as a student at Seminole High School, was arrested at the school basketball court by sheriff's deputies Tuesday. When officers arrived, they said he was involved in an altercation with a school security guard. An investigation showed Jones was reportedly under school suspension at the time, and was not allowed to be at the basketball court property. He was arrested on charges of trespassing on school grounds/refusing to leave, and resisting an officer without violence.

TV sex, violence gripes

By JEANNINE AVERSA
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS — Viewers will complain to their local TV stations about violence on the news or sex on talk shows, but very few gripe about soap operas, which generally are rife with sex and contain some violence, local TV executives say.

What local viewers complain about and how often they do varies widely from station to station, said executives interviewed at the National Association of Broadcasters convention here.

Viewers of KRON in San Francisco, for instance, are more likely to call the station with complaints about violence in entertainment programs and the news, than about sex.

"Violence is a real big concern," said Larry Shenosky, KRON's operations director. About the TV news, the station will get calls with people saying, "Why did you need to show that shot of the blood stain on street where two people were stabbed to death?" he said.

The station tries hard to balance such concerns with its editorial responsibilities, Shenosky said, saying decisions have to be made about what to air and not to air on a case-by-case basis.

KSPR in Springfield, Mo., is a different case.

"I've never gotten a call about violence," said Gary Whitaker, KSPR's vice president and general manager.

Instead, he said, viewers call about talk shows, especially when they are on when children could be watching and when they feature "frank discussions about sex." The station also gets calls about sitcoms that run in the early evenings — again when children might be tuning in — and the shows include sexual innuendo.

The complaints will be along the lines of "I thought it was going to be a light sitcom and then it went to a double entendre and to bathroom jokes and I couldn't get my kids away from the TV fast enough," Whitaker said.

Jerry Montgomery, general manager of KODE in Joplin, Mo., said his station "occasionally" gets complaints about sexual or violent content on individual shows, "but the complaints are pretty mild."

Montgomery said his station has a policy of not carrying "controversial talk shows." The only one KODE airs is "Live — Regis & Kathie Lee."

Jim McCormick, operations director of KHON in Honolulu, said his station never gets complaints about sex and violence. "Most of the complaints we get is when a favorite program has been pre-empted or moved," he said.

Soap operas, most executives said, drew few, if any, complaints from local viewers.

"We get no complaints. They have very, very loyal viewers," said KODE's Montgomery. KSPR's Whitaker said the same. KHON doesn't air soap operas.

Doctor impersonator Smooth con man masqueraded as physician

By MICHAEL FLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — He was the image of a good doctor, a knowledgeable professional with a soothing bedside manner and a rapport with patients.

Now authorities say Gerald Barnes was a fake, a failed pharmacist who took a real doctor's name, and off and on since the 1970s examined patients, prescribed drugs and diagnosed illnesses — at least once with deadly results.

Even through two previous arrests and an 18-month stint in prison for manslaughter, Barnes always found a way to slip through the cracks in the system and pick up his ruse where he had left off, authorities said.

"He's a very good con man," said Frank Heckl, a retired investigator for the California Medical Board who previously has arrested Barnes. "He has very good patient rapport, better than most doctors."

Barnes, 62, who held the post of chief physician at a prominent downtown clinic, was charged Monday in federal court with fraud and practicing medicine without a license.

He had been at the Executive Health Group, where he did contracted physicals of senior executives at dozens of large corporations, as well as determine whether officers were fit for duty at the FBI and the California Highway Patrol.

His story began in Illinois, where under his given name — Gerald Birnbaum — he received a pharmacology degree and worked in a Chicago medical clinic as a pharmacist.

But in the mid-1970s, his career as a pharmacist ended when Illinois regulators revoked his license amid allegations of Medicare fraud.

He then moved to California and legally changed his name to Gerald Barnes — the same name as a real physician in Stockton. He asked for — and received — copies of the real doctor's license documents from California medical regulators.

Armed with those documents, he obtained a job at a clinic in East Los Angeles, and later a better-paying job at a medical center in Irvine.

The charade began to unravel in 1980, according to court papers, when Barnes sent home a 29-year-old patient after failing to recognize the man's complaints of dizziness, thirst and weight loss as classic symptoms of serious diabetes. The man drank a soda at home and died, and Barnes was imprisoned after pleading guilty to involuntary manslaughter.

But once he got out of prison, he resumed his act. He was convicted again in 1984 of grand theft and forging prescriptions while posing as a doctor at two Los Angeles County clinics.

At his latest clinic, Barnes had conducted five to 20 physicals a day. Court papers show that Barnes is believed to have performed medical examinations on hundreds of workers at the Los Angeles office of the FBI, including special agents, which is probably the reason the investigation has led to federal charges.

Like all good con men, Barnes was careful "not to get in too far over his head," Heckl said. "Normally, he'd recommend a difficult case to another doctor."

It was unclear how Barnes was able to go undetected, since his latest employer claimed to have done an extensive background check.

Paul W. Frankel, who owns Executive Health's New York-based parent, Life Extension Institute, said his company's investigation included a review of Barnes' medical license, driver's license and Social Security card. It also had four letters of recommendation and had a criminal background check done by a private investigator.

"We're dealing with a turn-of-the-century cottage industry of licensing doctors," Frankel said. "This is an example of system failure."

Even Barnes' wife, Lisa, told investigators she had no idea her husband was a fake. At his court appearance, she appeared shaken and was choking back tears.

Barnes appeared frail before the magistrate, telling her in a barely audible voice, "I have diabetes and prostate cancer."

When he was confronted with the allegations of impersonating a doctor last weekend, he tried to kill himself with an overdose of pills, according to court papers. He was ordered held without bail and is under a suicide watch.

Patience is a virtue on roads

Rome wasn't built in a day. Neither was SR-46, and probably many of the highway expansions we hear about in today's news.

In conducting research for another project, an article was found on the front page of the Sanford Herald published in December, 1946, almost 50 years ago.

"State Highway No. 46 from Sanford to Mims is now Officially Opened." It says. Work was actually completed within 13 months after the first dirt was broken. The article says however, that the project, "had been pending for 25 to 30 years before action was taken to build the final 16 miles of the (30-mile long) Sanford to Mims link." The final four years before construction was required in order to obtain right-of-way property for the completion of the road.

The article added that further work was needed to determine how the eastern link from Mims would be meshed through the city of Sanford, with the western SR-46 link, which was already in existence providing a road from Sanford to Mount Dora.

While there was no St. Johns River Water Management District from which to obtain permits at that time, and no restrictions about carving a road where gopher tortoises might be, it nonetheless took much cooperation between Seminole and Volusia Counties, plus approvals by various government entities.

Now officials are talking about the missing-link in attaching the GreeneWay from U.S. Highway 17-92 to Interstate-4, widening and expanding Rinehart Road between Lake Mary and Sanford, and other roadway projects.

There even has been talk about continuing the GreeneWay around Orlando to go west from Sanford, and circle around, coming to an intersection with Interstate-4 near Polk City, which would provide a complete by-pass highway.

We also hear about the possibility of rail lines running along I-4 for rapid transit through Central Florida, with the addition of park-and-ride lots at various stopping-points.

With the time it took to complete the SR-46 16-mile link five decades ago, we find little hope that we will see some of this other roadwork completed in the near future. We hope however, that our children, or grandchildren will someday be able to drive on the western GreeneWay link.

We are an impatient lot. When something is proposed, we have a tendency to expect work to begin almost immediately.

But just as in our forefather's time, it isn't going to be easy, and it isn't going to be as quick as we might like.

Actually, we would be better off in the future, if the various entities took some additional time in which to insure that what is built is done so properly, that pot holes aren't going to appear within days after highways are opened, and that widening projects aren't already required before the first cars use the roadways.

Thomas Edison once said, "Everything comes to him who hustles while he waits." We can endure waiting for progress, but we must demand that those working on this progress had better continue hustling.

LETTER

In defense of guns

Now that you have printed the article in which the reporter waxed prolific the statistics based on the anti-gun point of view--do you have the courage to present an "equal time" version for those of us that are pro-gun?

In case you are not aware of it, the organizations quoted in the article work hand in hand with Handgun Control, Inc. (A misnomer in that they want to ban ALL guns.)

Since when do persons of ages 18 and 19 qualify as "children"? Does anyone correlate the fact that these adults (and the near-adults) are very likely to be gang members and drug dealers? This is the type of distortion that is typically seen from these organizations.

When they can guarantee me that my family and I will be safe from attack within my own home, only then will I put down my gun and no longer use it as the last resort defense.

Thank you.

Get grumpy: Elect Andy Rooney

Because Bob Dole is no kid, age is going to be a serious issue in this election. Accordingly, we ought to try to talk about it seriously, at least some of the time. We've already heard that the "Dole 96" campaign button does not refer to his age.

Last week, CBS News correspondent Jacqueline Adams reported, semi-humorously, on a study by neuropsychologists at the University of Pennsylvania. The team, headed by Dr. Ruben Gur, reports that as we age, brain cells shrink almost three times faster among men than among women.

Here's how part of the conversation went:

DR. RUBEN GUR: Men, as they age, make more mistakes.

JACQUELINE ADAMS: Gur's tests show that as they age, men lose brain cells in their frontal and temporal lobes, and as a result, they can't concentrate or reason as well, and they tend to forget simple things.

DR. GUR: This may explain the belief that older men get grumpy.... Men are still at the heads of governments throughout the world. And these are aging men, and that's something we may want to keep in mind.

ANDY ROONEY: Testing things can prove anything they want.... They can prove that old men are grumpier if they want to, or they can prove that they're sweeter if they want to.

ADAMS: At 72, presidential candidate Bob Dole hopes to defy limits on old age.

DOLE: There must be exceptions...

There are, I called Dr. Gur, who said that CBS excised from the interview a most important caveat. "Experience may well compensate, or more than compensate, for lost cognitive powers," he told me.

Quite so. Winston Churchill served as England's prime minister until he was 81; Charles De Gaulle was the president of France until age 80; Konrad Adenauer was Germany's president at age 87. Ronald Reagan was president at age 77. Bob Dole will be 73 this July. (If re-elected, won't Bill Clinton be a better president at 51 than at 47?)

We should also ask whether we want a grumpy president or a sweet one: I think we need one who kicks ass, early and often. (And by the way, wasn't Andy Rooney grumpy when he was 30?)

A recent "Think Tank" program on public television (which I moderate) dealt with this question: "Are older people getting younger?"

The panel consisted of Dr. Richard Spott, director, Biology of Aging, National Institute on Aging; Dr. Elizabeth Cobbs, director, Division of Aging Studies and Services, George Washington University Medical Center; Dr. David Gutmann, professor of psychiatry and education, Northwestern University, author of "Reclaimed Powers: Men and Women in Later Life"; Betty Friedan, Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, author of "The Fountain of Age."

There was heartening unanimity among the panel. More of us are living longer, with fewer disabilities, with better medicines on the way, with more active and successful elderly people as role models and with society slowly catching on to the idea that age is not a sickness.

We should also ask whether we want a grumpy president or a sweet one: I think we need one who kicks ass, early and often.

Fruitcake Nation ready in Montana

Grab your partner and we'll drive dull care away. Doing a dance we call the Sourball's Segue...

I really believe we are missing a golden opportunity with this Freeman standoff in Montana. With a little imagination, we could solve the national nut problem once and for all.

The people who are holed up on the 960-acre farm they call "Justus Township" near the town of Jordan apparently share a bizarre theology known as "Christian Identity." They believe they are members of a superior white race. They consider themselves to be "agents" of God locked in mortal combat with the Satans of the secular world. They deny the legitimacy of government and have set up their own laws, courts, etc.

It's beginning to sound like a broken record, isn't it?

Regular readers will recognize a familiar theme when I suggest that we have here the makings of a Fruitcake Nation. The normal people of America should just go ahead and buy this farm, which has been foreclosed on, and give it to these eccentric fellows. We should let them do what they want: Set up an official state press, issue free assault weapons and unlimited ammunition to all.

Then we normal people should build a wall around the Fruitcake Nation and guard it zealously. We should invite persons of like persuasion to enter and set up residence, but we should severely limit egress. Wouldn't you feel more comfortable with all the wackos in one place where we could keep an eye on them? With all their Uzis and howitzers and bazookas, they could end up blowing each other away....

Speaking of guns and nuts brings to mind G. Gordon Liddy. Have you heard about the latest flap over favorite Watergate ex-con cum talk-show host has gotten himself involved in? Some time ago, you'll recall, he advised his listeners how to shoot federal agents. Now he says the Unabomber's brother, David Kaczynski, is a lousy "snitch" for turning in Theodore Kaczynski, who is believed to be the misanthrope who has been murdering and maiming people with mail bombs for 18 years. "It violates the taboo against turning on one's family," Liddy says.

One suspects G. Gordon is viewing this through a personal prism: If some member of the Liddy family had clued the Nixon campaign that they were hiring a very strange duck, Richard may not have had the chance to conspire in the Watergate burglary. How then would he have gained the notoriety that now enables him to make a handsome living on the public airways? Actually, one shudders to think...

Speaking of airways reminds us of communication satellites and that takes us to the Global Positioning System Network, a group of 24 orbiting satellites that the Pentagon maintains to permit ships, pilots, tank commanders, whoever, to locate their position on Earth to within a few yards. Recently, the White House announced this network will be opened up to civilian use, so that motorists, bikers, hikers, whoever, can use a hand-held receiver and pinpoint their exact location on the planet.

There is another potential use that apparently no one has thought of: Ross Perot can point his receiver at a GPS satellite and determine whether he is actually on the planet Earth.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Thinking about right to die

BOSTON — If you are looking for a medical term to describe their condition, you might call them the "worried well."

Since recent court decisions lifted the ban on doctor-assisted suicide in 12 states, both those who favor and those who oppose these rulings are worrying about what happens next.

It's only 20 years since Karen Ann Quinlan's case came to court attached to a life-support machine. It's only six years since the Supreme Court finally ruled that there was a right to die, or more properly, a right to refuse life-prolonging treatment.

Now, in rapid, stunning succession, the courts have taken two giant steps on assisted suicide, changing the rules for one-third of the population. First the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a Washington State ban, saying it violated the right to privacy. Then a more conservative 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals struck down a ban in New York on the grounds that there was no difference between pulling the plug and writing the prescription.

Even Dr. Timothy Quill, a plaintiff in the New York case and a poster doctor for this cause since 1991 when he wrote publicly of assisting a suicide, finds the speed of change "a bit unnerving." He applauds the rulings that will bring assisted suicide out of the closet, but says, "We are going from secretive to open in some sense overnight. I worry that we don't have the infrastructure of safeguards in place."

An ethicist Dan Callahan puts it, a movement built on the humane desire to alleviate suffering at the end of life "could go sour."

The concerns about this "souring" are strung out like worry beads along a moral chain. Will permission for assisted suicide become permission for euthanasia? Will we worry less about easing the path to death if we can speed it up?

Furthermore, will terminally ill people choose to end life when it becomes too painful a burden for themselves, or when they become too great a burden on their families? And will the right to choose suicide morph gradually into the duty to take this final exit?

Economists like Harvard Medical School's Raahi Fein, who describes himself as "torn" on this question, wonder about the right to doctor-assisted suicide in a country without the right to doctor care: "I don't consider it some accident that these discussions come at a time when the health care system is more and more concerned with the bottom line and limits."

Ethicists like Callahan who oppose these rulings wonder about the whole concept of "death with dignity." He fears that the rulings will promote a "yuppie notion of human dignity" if the underlying fear of childlike dependency, of incompetence and incon-tinence, would precipitate more suicides among the old and ill.

Most Americans support legal, assisted suicide--as I do--for the most personal of reasons. We just might want it someday. As Dr. Quill says, "My belief is that the people who will really benefit are the 75 percent who want this possibility. The possibility is much more important to people than the reality."

He knows many people who have gone on living once they had that reassurance from a doctor.

We believe furthermore that this care shouldn't depend on which doctors you know and what risks they are willing to take. We even hope that doctor-assisted suicide will be safe in the open than in the shadows.

But if we are moving in that direction, the "worried well" must ask how we will move safely. In Dr. Quill's words, "How can we make it work and promote good palliative care and hospice care and still provide this escape?"

One model is the Oregon law, the only one passed by state ballot only to be struck down, and is now on appeal. That law allows doctors to write prescriptions for aware, adult, terminally ill patients who ask orally and in writing. It requires a 15-day waiting period, two witnesses, a second doctor. The patients must be informed about options--especially about pain--and must take the drugs themselves.

Another model is one used now by doctors when patients--10 percent of them--want to come off kidney dialysis machines. In response to this self-death sentence, there is the call for a second doctor, assurance that patients are truly informed, that every effort is made to alleviate suffering.

In this era of managed care, Raahi Fein adds, there should be reviews to make sure that patients are not assisted too willingly.

None of these safeguards is perfect. But neither is the free-lance, underground system now in place. In the wake of two new rulings, there are 12 states with no legal safeguards.

Now, ready or not--and we are not--this issue is on its way to the Supreme Court. It's time to do more than worry.

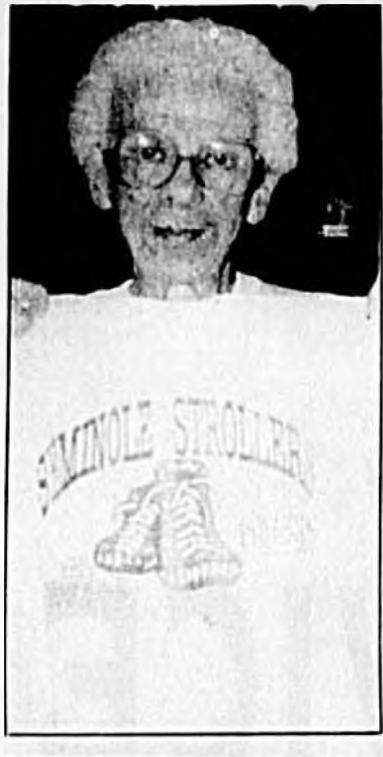

Most Americans support legal, assisted suicide--as I do--for the most personal of reasons. We just might want it someday.

Stepping out in style

Walkers, and near-walkers, of all ages take part in the thrice-weekly strolls around the Seminole Towne Center as part of the Seminole Strollers. Recently, Ayla Bradshaw rode in style with walkers Asuncion Carbonell, Bev O'Connell, Rita Flynn and Richard Marshall as they moved about the mall. Meanwhile, Helen Kaminsky, who has walked 108 miles as a part of the group, was honored with a colorful t-shirt for passing the 100 mile mark.

Youth gets life in shooting of student

From Staff and Wire Reports

A 24-year-old Tallahassee man sat silently, blinking, as he was sentenced to life in prison in a traffic-related shooting that paralyzed a Florida State University student.

Vincent Kenon, convicted of attempted second-degree murder in the October 1994 shooting of Steven Schultz, was handed a much harsher sentence than usual for that offense by Circuit Judge Ralph Smith on Wednesday.

The stricter sentence may have been the result of a letter-writing campaign launched by Schultz. One such letter, written to Sanford resident Loretta Bellstein, was forwarded to the Sanford Herald earlier this month.

It urged members of the general public to write to Circuit Judge Ralph Smith, and demand that he inflict a life sentence without a chance for parole. It was not immediately revealed how many letters may have been received by the judge.

Kenon's conviction could have resulted in a sentence of six to eleven years under normal sentencing guidelines.

Smith sentenced him to life under a law that lets judges depart from the guidelines in cases of extraordinary physical and emotional trauma and lasting physical injury.

Schultz, 24, who requires regular physical therapy, also sat silently, in a wheelchair. Friends and relatives of both youths were quiet as Smith read the sentence.

"His life as he knew it should be taken away, for my life as I knew it can never be restored," Schultz had told the judge.

He read from a yellow pad held by his mother, Pam Schultz, who knelt by his wheelchair.

The youth described a once "bright future." He was a senior at Florida State and an intern with the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission where he hoped to work after graduation.

"Now my life has become one of dependency, suffering and emotional trauma. Now my future consists of dependency on my family and nurses," he said.

"Unless you live the life Steve must live ... you can never understand the nightmares and the daily lifelong struggle and suffering that it takes for Steve to exist," said his father, Terry Schultz of Oviedo.

He described life-threatening struggles with blood clots, diabetes and other problems that have sent the youth's medical bills above the $500,000 mark.

Kenon's mother, Elizabeth

Kenon, also pleaded with the judge, but for a lesser sentence for the former Florida A&M University student with no prior criminal offenses.

"What seems to be lost is that Vincent Kenon's life is about to be interrupted also. I think his life is very much worth saving," she said. Kenon did not speak.

The family plans to appeal, Mrs. Kenon said. Both families declined to comment further as they left the courtroom.

"I'm just glad justice was served and everything worked out for the best," Steven Schultz said in a television interview later.

He was shot in the head after he pulled into traffic on a busy street near the Florida State campus after a post-midnight stop at a pizza restaurant with two friends.

Schultz testified that another motorist began pounding on his car and a few moments later, a man he identified as Kenon walked up to the driver's side of his car, stuck a gun through the window and fired.

For Kenon to shoot someone over a traffic dispute, said Smith, "causes great concern about what the defendant would do - If he were not sent to prison for a long period of time - if confronted with something that would cause real provocation."

what color they are.

Jackson also said, because he has spoken out he is in fear for his life. To protect himself, Jackson has filed a report with the state attorney's office.

"I had to get myself some liability," he explained.

Tom Artingstall, an investigator with the state attorney's office, said Jackson filed a "rambling two-and-a-half hour report" with him on Tuesday.

"He put a lot of things on the table," Artingstall said. "I think his heart is in the right place, but he needs to focus on one issue at a time."

Russell said Jackson's accusations are not fact-based and said Jackson is accorded the same courtesies as anyone else who visits the Sanford Police Department and who requests information from their files.

"As long as it is public record," Russell said, "Mr. Jackson can have anything in our files."

Russell said Jackson has recently been making requests for his department to supply numbers of arrests by certain officers and other matters that require extensive research.

"He's welcome to that information," Russell said, "but we have to charge him for the time required to do that research."

Jackson is known as a citizen's advocate in the Seminole County black community. He has fought local governmental agencies over issues such as the lack of code enforcement in some areas of the city, police brutality and improper arrests.

He said he is currently trying to find out which Sanford Police Department officers are making arrests which fail to result in charges. Those who engage in such a practice, Jackson believes, are doing little more than harassing members of the community.

He believes that such harassment in Sanford is often racially based. Much of it is being done by the QUAD squad that operates in Sanford's public housing areas.

However, Jackson said, until he concludes his research with the numbers he has obtained from the police department he can not prove his theory.

For example, he said, one officer made 13 "unsubstantiated" arrests out of 55 in a three month period. Many of those 13, he said, are black.

"Are they just trying to intimidate the blacks," Jackson asked.

Russell said that arrests are made only on the basis of whether or not an individual is breaking the law.

"Whoever is violating the law will be arrested," he noted.

The chief also defended the QUAD unit as a unit that was not only requested by the residents of public housing, but also a very effective policing group.

"Since we instituted the QUAD unit, there has been a 68 percent reduction in street level crime in that area," Russell said. "And to get rid of those officers would be contradicting what the community is asking for."

Jackson begs to differ with the chief on that point.

"They are taking all that government money and drugs are still the same," he noted.

Police records indicate, however, that reports of drug and other criminal activity in the area patrolled by the QUAD unit have decreased dramatically.

Jackson said he will not back down on his research or his demands for changes in the police department. Though he said he feels threatened by the police, he noted, he will not be intimidated.

Jackson plans to collect signatures on a petition that he will send to the governor's office. If the governor fails to step in, he said, he will bring a group to Tallahassee to protest.

"We want to make more people to be aware of this and the only way to get any action is to threaten to demonstrate," he said. "We need to do something to get an outside agency to look at what's going on here."

Russell said Jackson is welcome to whatever he needs to conduct his research if he is willing to pay the administrative fees. He noted that Jackson has been to the police station every day this week, not something he would do if he was being threatened by officers.

Still, Jackson said, things are not right at the Sanford Police Department and he intends to use whatever means necessary to get to the bottom of it.

"It's their house," he noted, "and everybody there is a relative."

U.N., World Bank warn huge cities threaten environment

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Bangkok has 6.6 million people and is adding 300 to 400 motor vehicles a day to its legendary traffic jams. By 2010 it is expected to have 9.3 million people and a number of cars limited only by its rapidly growing prosperity.

The World Bank estimates that by 2010 there will be 800 million motor vehicles in the world — 1.1 billion, counting the two- and three-wheelers popular in the Third World.

"By 2015 the world will have 33 'megacities' with populations over 8 million and more than 500 cities with population of 1 million or more," says a report made public today. "By 2020 energy use will increase by 50 to 100 percent. Emissions of greenhouse gases that contribute to the risk of climate change will increase by 45 to 90 percent," it said.

The report was issued jointly by the U.N. Development Program, the U.N. Environment Program, the World Bank and the World Resources Institute, a private research group. The occasion was the spring meeting of the bank and the International Monetary Fund.

The report highlights problems associated with the growing number of city poor and the prospect of water shortages. Though food production is expected to keep up with the growth of population, they said the number of malnourished Africans is expected to increase by 70 percent to 300 million by 2010.

That is due to poverty rather than a food shortage. A different World Bank report issued Wednesday noted that incomes have declined for people in many southern African countries since 1980.

"Rising prices can quickly put food out of the reach of the 1.1 billion people in the developing world who live on a dollar a day or less," wrote Per Pinstrup-Andersen, director of the International Food Policy Research Institute.

In a statement with the current report, Chairman Maurice Strong of the World Resources Institute said that "taken one by one, (current) trends extending into the future appear manageable."

"But when you put them all together, they pose a potentially serious hurdle to the aspirations of all nations for a better quality of life," he said.

Gripes

since it became a Fox affiliate, but when it did run them the station didn't get any complaints, McCormick said. KRON's Shenoaky said the station gets some complaints about soap operas.

"When there is an emergency and you have to pre-empt the soaps our switchboards will be flooded with angry calls," said an executive from a TV station in New Orleans, who asked not to be identified. "There is nothing on TV more rife with sex and violence than the soaps," the executive said.

The issue of sex and violence on TV leaped into the national spotlight earlier this year. Spurred by political and public pressure, the TV industry pledged to President Clinton in February to rate shows for sexual and violent content. The TV industry says it will have a ratings system in place by January.

Eventually that ratings system will work hand in hand with a computer chip that will be installed in new TV sets. People will be able to zap shows containing violence and other objectionable material from their TV screens, using a remote control-like device.

Codes

He explained that inspectors hadn't uncovered an electrical problem in the storage area of one of the buildings during a previous inspection, so additional time was granted. The other building requires additional painting.

Sanford Building Inspector Dan Florian, who conducted the inspection, said some of the problems originally brought out, such as improper or poor condition of doors and windows, are considered exterior work, and were not involved in the inspection.

"Those matters still remain to be brought up," he said, "which will take that to the Historic Preservation Board."

Among items which Florian said he found had been brought up to codes now, were such matters as holes in walls, electrical problems, smoke detectors and other situations.

Greene says he is fully aware of the need to bring the other two structures up to code for internal inspections before the 14 day time limit, and said he expects the work will be completed by that time.

"There are still some other matters which will need to be resolved," Florian said. "These involve licenses and permits for structures which apparently had more families in them than the original licenses allowed, but this is a separate matter and will fall under other jurisdictions rather than ours."

The properties which were given the compliance inspection this week were those located at 611 and 621 Oak Avenue, 615 Park Avenue, and 210 Laurel Avenue.

The decision couldn't have come at a worse time for lawmakers, who are headed into the final two weeks of their 60-day regular session with the budget and most major issues still unresolved.

House Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace said public hearings will be held later this month about the redistricting plan. Lawmakers then will try to hammer out an agreement, one that probably affects North Florida but leaves the rest of the state intact.

"I don't believe the entire state has to be or should be redrawn," said Wallace, D-St. Petersburg.

The judges said Wednesday they would retain jurisdiction over the case in the event the Legislature doesn't pass a valid redistricting plan.

District Judges Maurice Paul and Roger Vinson voted to overturn. Circuit Judge Joseph Hatchett, who is black, dissented in the opinion.

Vinson was on the panel that approved the original plan in 1992. Hatchett, who authored a 68-page dissent Wednesday, also was one of the judges who approved the district in 1992.

The ruling said the court in 1992 "engaged in a well-intentioned effort to enhance the voting opportunities of African-American and Hispanic voters." But the judges said the panel "did so with an erroneous understanding" of the Voting Rights Act.

The nation's high court struck down Georgia's 11th Congressional District, now held by Cynthia McKinney, a black Democrat. A three-judge federal court in Georgia is working on a new congressional district map for the state.

Daughter succumbs to leukemia

ORANGE, Calif. — Of all the road trips in Rod Carew's Hall of Fame career, this one had to be the shortest: a few blocks down Main Street from Anaheim Stadium, to a motor home in the parking lot of Children's Hospital.

Carew and his wife, Marilyn, sometimes spent nights there so they could be near their 18-year-old daughter Michelle, hospitalized with leukemia.

Wednesday morning, someone drove the motor home away. A few hours later, Carew was in the hospital lobby telling reporters Michelle had died with her father, her mother, other family members and friends by her side.

Menendez brothers sentenced

LOS ANGELES — Jurors who chose life imprisonment over a death sentence for Erik and Lyle Menendez agonized during deliberations that one said were eerily similar to the defendants weighing whether to kill their parents.

The panel, which took 13 hours over three days to recommend life without parole, said Wednesday they spared the brothers because of their youth, lack of criminal history and the impression that they seemed like souls worth saving.

"There was no way we could put them to death," said juror Bruce Seitz. "There were other good things about them that warranted their life, that warranted their living."

Juror Andrew Wolfberg, who spoke emotionally about the agony of such a decision, said he felt as if he was in the brothers' position when they opened the door to the family room of their parents' Beverly Hills mansion and began firing shotguns.

Anti-terrorism bill

WASHINGTON — Even as the Senate voted overwhelmingly in favor of an anti-terrorism bill, Republicans were divided about whether the legislation would accomplish what it was supposed to.

"We have a measure that will give us a strong upper hand in the battle to prevent and punish domestic and international terrorism," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, the presumptive Republican presidential nominee, shortly before the 91-8 vote Wednesday evening.

But Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., while praising the bill, said the country remains "very open" to terrorism. "Will it stop any acts of terrorism, domestic and international? No," he said, adding: "We don't want a police state."

The bill moves to the House today on the eve of the first anniversary of the Oklahoma City federal building bombing that killed 168 people. Lawmakers are trying to finish the legislation by Friday.

Call for minimum wage increase

WASHINGTON — Moderate House Republicans are calling for an increase in the minimum wage, aligning themselves with President Clinton and the Democrats on the issue but exposing election-year divisions within their own party.

"We want to guarantee that a minimum wage at 40 hours plus is enough to support a family," said Rep. Chris Shays of Connecticut, one of 20 GOP lawmakers who signed on Wednesday to an increase despite opposition from Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, the party's presumptive presidential nominee, and other GOP leaders.

The Republicans' bill would raise the federal minimum hourly wage from $4.25 to $5.25 an hour — 10 cents more than the Democrats' version — in two steps. The first 50-cent increase would take effect 90 days after President Clinton signed the bill. The second increase would come a year later.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich sidestepped the question of whether the bill would be scheduled for a floor vote.

Teen pregnancy

WASHINGTON — Public health workers say they'll have to rework programs aiming to cut teen pregnancies because of new research showing the fathers aren't fellow classmates — they're usually adult men.

A study in today's American Journal of Public Health found two-thirds of the babies born to teen-age mothers in California in 1993 were fathered by adult men who were, on average, four to six years older than the girls.

"This is important new information about the fathers because it tells us we can't just focus on adolescents," said Kristin Moore of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy.

WORLD BRIEFS

Struggling with deadly questions

MONROVIA, Liberia — Holed up in an army training complex with a band of armed rebels, some 10,000 people struggle with a terrible question: Should they stay inside and face cholera and starvation, or should they go onto the streets and risk being shot?

The men, women and children fled to the seaside complex a week ago, seeking shelter from a resurgence in the 6 1/2-year-old civil war. Now they're trapped, caught in the middle of a standoff between rival warlords.

Barricaded inside the compound are forces loyal to rebel leader Roosevelt Johnson. Outside are the forces of Charles Taylor. Part of a six-man interim government, Taylor is demanding Johnson's surrender in exchange for a truce.

As long as the standoff continues, most of the refugees are too afraid to leave.

Eye on future peace

BEIRUT, Lebanon — With an eye on future peace talks with Israel, Syria has effectively told its 40,000 troops in Lebanon to hold their fire while bombs crash down around them.

Apart from switching from red berets to olive-green battle helmets, Syrian troops around Beirut have barely responded to Israel's relentless air and artillery strikes targeting Hezbollah guerrillas.

If Syrian forces were to enter the battle, the current mini-war in Lebanon could swiftly escalate into a huge conflagration involving two of the strongest armies in the region.

Japanese, American partnership

TOKYO — President Clinton appealed to the Japanese today to "forge a partnership for leadership" with America to battle against terrorism, nuclear proliferation and other post-Cold War dangers.

Clinton, the first U.S. president in 13 years to address Japan's parliament, urged America's World War II foe to "join forces" for a larger role in global affairs.

"No nation can solve these problems alone," he told the Diet in a speech that climaxed the last day of Clinton's three-day visit. He later left for St. Petersburg, Russia, the next leg of his trip.

With a mixture of security and economic themes, Clinton's speech was a call for Japan to resist isolationism and accept its responsibilities abroad.

Parents sue over Catholic sex ed

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — The parents of 10-year-old Princess Jagarnauth-Walker sued the Archdiocese of Miami to reverse her expulsion from a Catholic school during a dispute over an "explicit" sex education class.

The mother is active with the parish next to St. Bartholomew Catholic School and her husband, an Elvis impersonator, volunteers his act for the church's carnival.

They consider St. Bartholomew an important part of their family life, but they claim they want the school to follow Vatican instructions that parents should have some say in the handling of sex education.

"I'm very much in favor of sex education," Alecia Jagarnauth-Walker said Wednesday outside Circuit Court in Fort Lauderdale. "The book is proper for high school students."

The lawsuit filed Wednesday claims the school is violating guidelines from the Vatican that call for sex education to be optional, with parents given the choice.

The textbook, called "Benziger Family Life," is used in more than 50 Catholic schools in Dade, Broward and Monroe counties, Archdiocese officials said.

The textbook says sex is reserved for married couples and gives a very straightforward explanation, using the specific terms for sexual organs and sex acts.

"During sexual intercourse, the husband places his erect penis in the vagina of the wife," the book says in a section called God's Gift of Sexuality. "This very special physical closeness causes feelings of pleasure that result in sexual climax, or orgasm."

Mrs. Jagarnauth-Walker protested the use of the textbook, first to the school, then to Catholic officials at increasingly high levels in the Archdiocese.

The mother was called to the school office last month by Principal Maria Glass and told to sign a "gag letter," agreeing to end complaints about the textbook and the class.

"I felt my rights to free speech were being violated," Mrs. Jagarnauth-Walker said, noting her daughter began getting disciplined more often at school.

Ms. Glass, who did not return calls made to her office Wednesday by The Associated Press, wrote a letter to the family explaining her actions.

"We did not feel that the strategies you were using to express your concerns were in the best interest of your daughter, nor of the faculty and administration of St. Bartholomew," the principal wrote March 22. "You were further notified that unless these strategies ceased immediately, your child would be considered withdrawn."

Mrs. Jagarnauth-Walker denied claims her daughter was being disruptive and said the class has affected other students at the school.

"The kids are more verbal with the language and I'm very concerned about that," Mrs. Jagarnauth-Walker said.

The lawsuit, filed by Miami attorney Ellis Rubin, asked that Princess be readmitted immediately, that the textbook be made optional to families, and that all punitive action against the child stop. It also asks for unspecified punitive damages and legal costs.

Princess said she thought the teachers "chose me out of the other students" for discipline after the book dispute began.

"It makes me feel mad," Princess said.

Did the textbook bother her?

"No, but I wouldn't read it if my mother didn't want me to," Princess said.

Another couple with children at the school, Peter and Bernadette Anderson, threatened legal action last year after seeing a copy of the book. They eventually were given permission to keep their daughter out of the sex education class.

"This principal takes the attitude if you don't like it, take your kid out of school," Peter Anderson said. "We were hit with a gag order."

The Archdiocese said Wednesday it would not respond publicly to a lawsuit it has not seen, but offered a general comment on its programs.

Misuraca gets first career victory

By THE HOPS Special to the Herald

BITHLO — Dennis Misuraca, running for Rookie of the Year honors at Orlando SpeedWorld, captured his first career victory at the track Friday night.

Misuraca, 25, of Winter Springs, was a wire-to-wire winner of the Late Model feature, followed by Ricky Wood of Orlando and Steve Dorer.

"This is my first season driving a Late Model," said Misuraca, a former mini-sprint champion who pocketed $525 for the victory. "I'm trying to make a career out of it. My boss understands that on Friday's I'm not coming to work. I'm going racing. And I'll be at New Smyrna on Saturdays. I want to be Rookie of the Year at both tracks."

Orlando's Barbara Pierce returned to victory lane Friday after winning her eighth Sportman feature of the year at SpeedWorld.

Tommy Patterson Memorial at NSS

By THE HOPS Special to the Herald

SANSULA — The best Modified racers in the Sunshine State are expected to converge on New Smyrna Speedway on Saturday (April 20th) for the second annual running of the Tommy Patterson Memorial.

Patterson, who died of Lou Gehrig's disease nearly three years ago at age 42, still carries a lot of clout among Florida's racing fraternity. Drivers will never quit on a peer who refused to let wheelchair confinement keep him from the speedway.

Whether he was working as a fill-in fuel man at Charlotte Motor Speedway for NASCAR Winston Cup driver Rick Wilson or helping brother Wally with his No. 47 modified car, Tommy never turned his back on the sport he loved.

Patterson always will be remembered for his room-brightening smile, his strength as a race competitor, his wit and humor. New Smyrna Speedway regulars can't forget the sound of his laughter echoing across the barbeque grill near the tent pitched in his pits, well into the wee hours of Sunday morning after still another Saturday night of stock-car racing.

Patterson always made SpeedWeeks worth the wait. He was restricted by an electric wheelchair during his waning days, but Tommy's love for racing never waned.

Orlando's Greg Hughes won the first running of the Tommy Patterson Memorial, and he since moved to Montana.

More than 38 Modified drivers are expected to vie for the $2,000

Pierce, 50, the winningest female stock car driver in America during the past two years, was shut out last weekend at both SpeedWorld and New Smyrna Speedway, where a wreck (Friday) and broken lug studs (Saturday) put her out of the running.

But Pierce was back in her Daytona Racing Souvenirs-backed No. 57 Monte Carlo Friday night, cruising to victory over runner-up Fireball Maguire of Merritt Island and Hank Sanders from Winter Springs.

Ormond Beach's Conrad Grenier picked up his seventh victory of the year at SpeedWorld in the 20-lap Mini Stock Special by Goodyear. Brian Bellaw of Altamonte Springs was second, followed by Richard Newton, Ronnie Watson and Pedie Allison.

WOOD WINS AT NBS SAMSULA - Ricky Wood avoided a first-lap, multi-car wreck Saturday night and cruised to victory in the Late Model feature at New Smyrna Speedway.

Wood, who leads the Late Model points standings at New Smyrna Speedway and Orlando SpeedWorld, then bolted to a wire-to-wire, 15-lap victory over John Kennedy and hotshot rookie Dennis Misuraca of Winter Springs.

"We did some fine-tuning on the motor during the week and changed the setup on the car and it was real loose last night," Wood said of losing Friday night Misuraca at Orlando SpeedWorld.

"I couldn't really get into the gas. But we set it on the scale and did some changes tonight and it was handling a lot better than it normally does. The car felt good."

"But the clutch was slipping and about to go at the finish. If we would have run a full race (the feature was shortened from 25 to 15 laps), I wouldn't have finished. I bailed it home for 15 laps."

Ormond Beach's Conrad Grenier held off Altamonte Springs' Brian Bellow for a Mini Stock photo finish among lapped traffic.

Babe Ruth

The Pirates, who only had three hits, took a 4-0 lead heading into the bottom of the fourth inning, but the Marlins came back with single runs in the fourth and fifth innings to make the score 4-2.

The Pirates got a run back on a pair of errors in the seventh inning to take a 5-2 advantage, but the Marlins were far from out of the game.

With one out, Darrell White was hit by a pitch and Ben Weigert doubled ahead of a two-run double by George Shannis that made the score 5-4.

Meanwhile, at Sanford Memorial Stadium, the once-beaten Elks Lodge #1241-Devil Rays earned an early 2-1 deficit to build a 5-2 lead heading into the bottom of the fifth inning.

But the winless Athletics came roaring back with three runs in the bottom of the fifth inning to tie the score at 5-5.

The Devil Rays answered right back though, scoring the winning run in the top of the sixth inning to pull out a 6-5 victory.

The Pirates now lead the league with a 5-0 record, while the Nobles Construction-White Sox are 4-0. The Devil Rays are third at 4-1, with the Rotary Club-Royals and Kiwanis Club-Indians both standing 3-1.

Trailing the leaders are the Knights of Columbus-Cardinals (2-2), the Expos (1-3), the Marlins (1-4), the Braves (0-4) and the Athletics (0-5).

This Friday, at Sanford Memorial Stadium, the Indians will battle the Cardinals at 5:45 p.m.

Pacing the Pirates were Donald White and Alex Scott (one double and one run each), James Drake (single, run) and Adam Frank and Joe Harris (one run each).

Providing the offense for the Marlins were George Shannis (double, two singles, run), Mike Robinson and Ben Weigert (one double and one run each), Lazarus Mitchell (double), Phil Hunt and Jimmy Franklin (one single each) and Darrell White (run).

Patriots

Matt Krot had a lead off double in the bottom of the first inning for Lake Brantley, took third on an error, and scored on a two out sacrifice fly by Jeff Hall to make the score 1-0.

The Patriots defense made the lead stand up for three innings by recording outs on nine of the first ten Bulldog's batters.

Luke Scott collected the Bulldog's only hit of the game to lead off the second inning, but was thrown out at third on a fielder's choice.

Brian Snow gave DeLand its first scoring threat in the top of the fourth inning when he was awarded first base on catcher's interference.

Advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt, reached third on a ground out, and tied the score 1-1 on a passed ball.

Not to be outdone, Lake Brantley answered with a run of its own in the bottom of the fourth. Hall hit a one-out single to right center field, stole second, and scored on an RBI single by Chris Harney.

Broek followed with four strikeouts in the last three innings, and the Patriots defense preserved the win by retiring nine of the next 11 batters that came to the plate.

Hall was 2-for-2 with a sacrifice bunt to lead Lake Brantley's offense, while Krot, Harney were each 1-for-3 at the plate.

Shawn Yates was 1-for-2 at the plate for the Patriots, while Dominick Shaw and Tom Anderson each drew a walk.

Save money, beat the heat

BARBARA MORTON

Personal finance

Most Floridians, natives and transplants alike, would probably include the Sunshine State's beautiful climate as a primary reason for living here. We get to experience beautiful, sunny days during the winter months, while most of the country is digging out from a blanket of snow and sleet.

Still, with the good, we have to accept the bad. In Florida, the price we pay for that beautiful winter weather, is the long, hot, humid summers we experience every year between April and October.

For many, the physical discomfort is only one negative aspect of the summer heat. The other is the annual increase in utility bills that results from running the air conditioning all summer long.

While this increase can't be prevented, there are certain steps every consumer can take to soften the blow. The secret to saving money on energy costs during the summer is to keep your thermostat at the highest possible temperature while staying comfortable. Let's start with how we dress.

The key word is "cotton". Because cotton is a natural fabric, air flows more freely through it, allowing your body's natural cooling systems to work more efficient. Synthetic fabrics trap the perspiration inside, which adds to your misery. For men who have to wear socks, cotton absorbs the perspiration and keeps it away from your skin.

Dress lightly around the house. I am amazed at how people turn their air conditioning down to 68 degrees and bundle up in a sweat shirt and sweat pants, while it's 90 degrees outside. Try turning the thermostat up to 78 degrees and wear a t-shirt and shorts.

The other way to keep that thermostat set at a higher temperature requires a few minor adjustments around the house.

Set your thermostat to 78 degrees while you're home, and 84 degrees while you're away. Many people turn the air off when they aren't home. They forget that, in addition to cooling your home, the air conditioning unit also keeps the humidity of the air down. Leaving it on all day keeps the air drier, which means you don't have to set the thermostat as low at night.

Take advantage of the free energy check available from most utility companies. They'll send an expert to your home, at no charge, and alert you to areas where you may be wasting energy. Many people find that they have poor insulation in the attic, resulting in high electric bills. You should also receive some helpful tips on how to improve your home's energy efficiency.

Replace the filters in your air conditioner every month. Dirty, clogged filters are a major waste of money because the air conditioning unit has to use some of its energy just to force the air through the obstructed filter. And that's in addition to the energy needed to cool your home.

Run your fingers around the door and window seals of your home to check for drafts. If air can get in and out of your home through a seal, heat is certain to be seeping in. If you find a draft, replacing the seals is a relatively simple and inexpensive job you can do yourself. Also, keep your curtains and blinds drawn. Glass is an excellent conductor of heat, which is bad for your electric bill.

Keep in-and-out traffic through the doors to a minimum. If possible, And try to use the oven as little as possible by doing all your baking at the same time.

Concert cougher's ill wind blows no good

DEAR ABBY: For our 33rd wedding anniversary, my husband took me to see "Miss Saigon" at Cincinnati's new Aronoff Center. We had wonderful seats for this spectacular play; however, it was totally ruined by a very inconsiderate 60ish man who was seated directly behind me. He coughed incessantly during the entire performance.

There were times when I felt my hair blowing from the force of his cough! He seemed oblivious to the fact that he was annoying anyone, never bothering to cover his mouth, or take a cough drop, or perhaps get up and leave.

Abby, he was not alone; he had a nicely groomed woman with him who could have at least nudged him or told him to cover his mouth.

When telling my daughter about this, she suggested that from now on I carry cough drops to offer people who do this, thus conveying the message that their coughing is very annoying.

Abby, what's your opinion on handling such a situation? I came very close to saying something, but I didn't want to stoop to his level of rudeness.

SALLY IN CINCINNATI
DEAR SALLY: No one would deliberately cough under these circumstances, but since this gentleman (?) seated behind you made no effort to cover his mouth and had coughed so violently you felt your hair blowing, you would have been justified in turning around and asking him politely to please cover his mouth when he coughed.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but a family problem has gotten out of hand and I need the help of an objective party.

My older brother, "Victor," who is 28, attempted suicide two years ago after a messy breakup with his wife, with whom he was still in love. He now regrets the act and realizes that they married too young (at 21).

Since suicide is a crime in our religion, my parents and my younger sister, "Sarah" (who is still in college), refuse to speak to Victor.

In a few months, I plan to marry a wonderful man. We had planned to include both Victor and Sarah in the wedding party. However, each has said he/she will not attend if the other does.

My parents predict that my marriage will end as Victor's did if I allow him to come. Victor says our parents will disown me, too, sooner or later, so it may as well be sooner. My husband-to-be just rolls his eyes.

Whom should I choose, Sarah or Victor?

DISTRAUGHT MIDDLE CHILD

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR DISTRAUGHT: It is your right to invite whomever you want to your wedding; furthermore, it's unfair to be put on the spot as you have been. Anyone who says, "If you invite so-and-so, I'm not coming," deserves to be excluded. I would exclude both of them.

Study: Little evidence that drug testing deters use

By J.L. HAZELTON
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Companies are testing for drugs as much as they ever were, but a new survey released Wednesday by a leading management group found no evidence that it has any effect.

"Costs have increased tenfold since 1990 with very little statistical evidence of results," said Eric Greenberg, who conducted the survey for the American Management Association. "No finding of our survey efforts can confirm with statistical certainty that testing deters drug use."

If testing does deter drug use, researchers would expect to see a smaller percentage of workers testing positive over time. But the percentage of employees testing positive in 1995 remained flat at 1.9 percent. At the same time, the number of companies doing the testing remains about the same.

"That is not a good case for deterrence," he said.

Eighteen companies said they quit testing in 1995 because it wasn't cost effective, Greenberg said. On average, the companies responding to the survey spent $50,000 on drug testing last year.

The association's corporate membership of 9,500 organizations together employ a quarter of the American work force.

The survey was conducted by mail in January among 961 companies that tested about 186,000 workers and more than 500,000 applicants during 1995. Its margin of error is plus or minus 3.5 percent.

This was the first time that the annual survey asked if companies kept statistical evidence on the impact of drug testing.

Only 5 percent said they had data showing lowered absentee rates or illness; 6 percent had data showing fewer disability claims; 9 percent found lower accident rates; 2 percent had evidence of fewer incidents of employee theft; and 3 percent had evidence of fewer incidents of employee violence.

As in 1994, 22 percent of firms immediately dismiss employees who test positive. About 44 percent said they offered drug education and awareness programs.

Greenberg said companies are wise to offer more than just testing.

Companies that combine testing with anti-drug initiatives have consistently reported test-positive rates 35 percent to 50 percent lower than those of companies who test workers but offer no help.

Is diverticulosis permanent?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with diverticulosis of the colon. Is there medical treatment or medication that will get rid of the problem?

DEAR READER: As we age, almost all of us will develop diverticulosis, the presence of sacs or pockets in the lining of the large intestine. The condition is harmless, and there is no way to prevent or eliminate it.

Sometimes, these pockets become inflamed, leading to abdominal pain, gas and bleeding. Called diverticulitis, this disorder requires antibiotics and, on occasion, surgery.

There is no way of predicting who will suffer such infection, nor is there any consistent method to prevent diverticulosis from progressing to diverticulitis.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Diverticular Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from gout and wonder what can be done for control. DEAR READER: Gout is a form of acute arthritis caused by an accumulation of uric acid in the joints. It is inherited — or may be caused by certain prescription diuretic medications, such as the thiazides. Diagnosis depends on blood tests and analysis of the joint fluid.

Therapy for acute attacks includes colchicine, Motrin and other prescription medications. Gout can be prevented by taking daily doses of allopurinol, a prescription drug that lowers the level of uric acid.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "About Gout." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife has been diagnosed with mycobacterium avium. She is fatigued, short of breath, and the prognosis is that the symptoms will increase in intensity. She's been placed on Cipro and Biaxin, and we've been told the treatment may be required for a year.

DEAR READER: This lung infection, caused by a distant relative of the tuberculosis micro-organism, produces a form of pneumonia marked by malaise, sweats, fever, deep cough, loss of appetite, shortness of breath, and chest pain. It is spread from person to person, via the respiratory route.

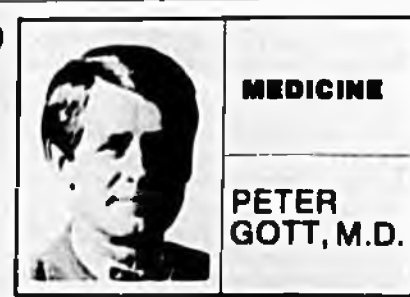

The infection is diagnosed by special tests, such as a sputum culture. Unlike most pneumonias, infection with M. avium can be resistant to standard antibiotic therapy — and treatment may have to be continued for months.

Your wife's doctor has wisely placed her on "double therapy" using two powerful, new (and expensive) antibiotics. This program should do the trick. It sounds as though she is in good hands.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently read an article about beta carotene being good for people, but not if they are smokers. I'm a smoker and want to use the vitamin. Is there a contra-indication?

DEAR READER: I think you misunderstood the article. Beta-carotenes (a type of vitamin that may help prevent cancer) are recommended for smokers, who are at higher risk of developing malignancies. (These vitamins do not protect people against the serious health consequences of smoking, including emphysema and other lung disorders.)

MEDICINE

You can use beta-carotenes. There are no contra-indications to their use, providing you follow the manufacturer's directions.

WIN AT BRIDGE

You are feeling sleepy

By Phillip Alder

What do you think about hypnosis? I have always been somewhat skeptical, but I suspect there are people who are susceptible to this form of control.

In bridge, "control" usually means keeping trumps in check. Many players would lose trump control in this deal. But, as often happens, the key play occurs outside the trump suit.

What do you think about the bidding? How would you try to make four hearts after a spade lead?

Four hearts isn't a bad spot, but three no-trump will often be easier. North was correct to raise to two hearts with his minimum hand. South should rebid two spades or three no-trump. In the latter case, if North has four trumps, he will go back to four hearts.

South appears to have 10 tricks via one spade, three hearts, five diamonds and one club. However, if the trumps are breaking 4-2, as South has to expect, the timing needs to be perfect.

Suppose South wins the first trick, ruffs a spade in the dummy, plays a club to his ace and ruffs another spade. Whatever South does now, the defenders have an answer. Let's assume South plays a club to his queen. West wins with the king, plays a heart to his partner's ace, regains the lead with the spade queen and forces declarer with the club 10. East must make a long trump for one down.

The best play is to duck the first trick. If the defenders continue with a second spade, declarer ruffs in the dummy and drives out the heart ace. When back on play, perhaps with the spade ace, declarer draws trumps and runs dummy's diamonds.

HOROSCOPE

Friday, April 19, 1996

A situation you have worked hard to improve looks as if it will yield rewards in the year ahead. A streak of good luck will help to clear obstacles from your path.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Heed your financial instincts today, especially if you negotiate a delicate matter. Your assets will give you a definite edge. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You can advance your personal goals today, but do not let others make unreasonable demands on your time. You must try to operate independently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You will notice that a current project has many more fringe benefits than you originally thought. Today you could begin to see things in a new light.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You will make a favorable impression on others today. In fact, you may draw their attention to qualities that have gone unnoticed previously.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In order to achieve the best results today, pursue your objectives as quietly as possible. You will be more effective if you hide your motives from others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can increase the probability of success today if you test your ideas as rapidly as you conceive them. Waiting will dilute their impact.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Achievements will come easier for you today if you are less forceful and more logical. Use your head, not your muscle or your mouth, to try to make points.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A joint endeavor can succeed today, provided the workload is distributed equally and each contributor focuses on what he or she is supposed to do.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will be sharp today and you shouldn't have problems handling assignments that require imagination and concentration.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Friends might ask you to arrange social activities today. They will see you as a catalyst because you know how to combine the right people for a good time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Even if you have to work longer hours today, you should finish an important matter rather than letting it drag on. Bite the bullet and get it done.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) If someone in particular is on your mind today, make an effort to get in touch with him or her. This person might have good news for you.
