Man held after eagle shooting

ST. AUGUSTINE — St. Johns County deputies arrested a man after he admitted shooting an American bald eagle on Christmas Day because he thought the bird was a buzzard, officials said.

Michael Bernard Hudson, 32, has been charged with attempting to take a threatened species and attempting to take a non-migratory game bird, said Doug Tyus, an officer with the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

Hudson also was being held on a warrant from Winchester, Va., charging him with violating probation. Hudson had been convicted of auto theft in Virginia and was not allowed to leave the state, said St. Johns County sheriff's spokesman Kevin Kelshaw.

American bald eagles, the national symbol, are protected by law as a threatened species. Anyone convicted of harming one of the birds can face up to 60 days in jail and a $500 fine.

A motorist discovered the wounded 10-pound eagle Christmas morning. Cindy Mosling, director and founder of Bird Emergency Aid and Kare Sanctuary, took the bird to her mother's house in Jacksonville.

Its left wing was severely damaged by a shot from a .30.06-caliber rifle and had to be amputated.

Dog stuck in dryer vent

TUALATIN, Ore. — Buster the beagle got into trouble by doing what he does best — following his nose.

Firefighters had to rescue him after he got his head stuck in a clothes dryer vent leading out of a house.

The family that owns the house in this Portland suburb was away on vacation. Two boys who were feeding and exercising the dog noticed the problem Monday when they went to check on Buster. They found him with his head protruding through the vent.

The boys, 10 and 15, called their father, who came over and held Buster's back end — so he wouldn't twist his neck trying to climb out — while firefighters rushed to the scene.

Hot water and lotion failed to free the dog. Finally, firefighters took a power saw to the house, cutting a square hole around the head.

False identification corrected

A woman arrested by Sanford police last Thursday, gave officers a false name. Sanford Police Lt. Mike Rotondo said this morning the woman arrested has been identified as Lisa Montgomery, 19, of Sanford.

"At the time of the arrest," he said, "Montgomery had told officers her name was Sabrina Hampton."

The police report said the woman was apprehended when she attempted to leave a store on Orlando Drive, with $83.99 in clothing and beauty supplies hidden in her purse.

Police Chief Steve Harriett said an additional charge related to the false identity may be made against Montgomery.

Child-abuse killer

State wants McDougall to serve 5 more years

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A draft opinion from the state attorney general's office says a child-abuse killer should serve at least five more years in prison, rather than be released early on New Year's Eve. The ruling may become official as early as today.

Ron Sachs, the governor's communications director, said this morning, "I don't know when the Attorney General will actually sign the opinion, but I expect it sometime today or tomorrow."

Local officials are pleased with the proposed change, and hope it is approved.

Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett said this morning, "Anybody with reason should realize a man like Donald McDougall should not be released early. Anyone who participates in the commission of crimes, especially against children and the elderly, should never be released early."

Harriett added, "In my personal opinion, I don't believe his original sentence of 34 years was enough in the first place. People like him should be removed from society."

Sen. Gary Siegel, R-Altamonte Springs, a critic of the prison release system, hailed the opinion. He had joined Corrections Secretary Harry Singletary and State Attorney Norman Wolfinger of Seminole and Brevard counties in requesting the change.

"The people demanded justice and they were heard loud and clear," said Siegel. "I'm very pleased."

McDougall was convicted in 1983 of aggravated child abuse and second-degree murder in the torture-stabbing of 5-year-old Ursula Sunshine Assaid.

According to the opinion that has now been written by Assistant Deputy Attorney General Lea Garriinger, McDougall, 37, isn't eligible for so-called "provisional credits" used by prison officials to reduce See Killer, Page 5A

Sheriff says reorganizing aids morale

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sheriff Don Eslinger says his departmental reorganization will help improve efficiency and morale by involving all employees with policy decisions.

"When you want to build a team, you're going to have to have high morale and people working together as a team. Management will be expected to find areas to improve service and efficiency. But I want all employees to do that as well."

Monday, Eslinger announced a major reorganization of sheriff's office departments and staff under a four-department structure. Eslinger will also create several quality committees comprised of staffers to recommend further changes in policy and procedure to the organization. The changes will take effect Jan. 5.

Eslinger said the reorganization plan was developed through concepts and ideas he encountered during executive training at the FBI Academy in Virginia earlier this year. Eslinger said he also received advice from Troy Todd, former CEO of United Telephone Co. of Florida.

Sheriff Don Eslinger

Eslinger said Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett assisted in the reorganization. Harriett will leave Sanford after more than seven years as chief to become undersheriff, second to Eslinger. Harriett will serve as director of the Department of Administrative Services.

Agreement for mall stalled

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — The beginning of a tri-party redevelopment agreement for the Seminole Towne Center Mall was postponed last night. The City Commission wants more information before bringing the matter up for consideration.

James Willard, attorney for the Melvin Simon organization, developers of the mall, had submitted a new draft of the redevelopment agreement. It contained several changes from the original agreement. The changes deal with such matters as construction, access roadways, financing responsibilities, and other requirements.

"As we've already established," said City Manager Bill Simmons, "the City Commission would act as the Community Redevelopment Agency. Each of the groups, the developer, City Commission and Redevelopment Agency, would have to agree to all points of the proposal."

Spokespersons for Simon and Associates had previously stated that formal arrangements for the financing of the multi-million dollar project would not be finalized until the redevelopment agreement is approved.

Sanford to overhaul false alarm fees

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Business and home owners with faulty alarm systems may get a break from city fees currently charged for multiple false alarms to police and firefighters. Police Chief Steve Harriett has suggested changes be made.

Chuck Baragona, Jr., president of Commercial Chemical Products, Inc., 2600 W. Airport Blvd. appeared before the city commission workshop meeting last night. He explained how problems with a malfunction in his system has caused the city to impose several hundred dollars in fees against his company.

He suggested the false alarm fees did not take into account repair time and other problems. Commissioner Whitey Eckstein agreed. He explained how Seminole High School has already been charged over $600 in the false alarm fees since the ordinance went into effect earlier this year.

The original ordinance allowed for three false alarm responses with no charge during a six month period. The fourth however, would cost $35, with $50 for the fifth call, and $150 for the sixth call during that period.

When the city first started consideration of the false alarm fees, City Manager Bill Simmons had explained that responses by the police department cost an average of $59.58 per call, while responses by the fire department cost $62.40. Simmons had hoped the fees for the false alarms would not only help recoup some of the wasted

Drugs drive prostitute with AIDS

By The Associated Press

LAKELAND — An HIV-infected prostitute said she knows she puts customers at risk of getting the deadly virus but is driven to sell sex by her addiction to crack cocaine.

"You don't care," Donna Redmond, 31, told The Ledger in Monday editions. "Crack cocaine will pimp you. It's hell. It will destroy you. You'll do anything for it. You'll lie and cheat and steal just to get a hit."

"Once you take that first hit and get hooked, you'll do anything," she said. "You'll lay down with anybody and steal from your mom and dad. I've sold my body for $5 to get a hit."

She believes she has passed on the deadly virus.

"I feel bad, I feel remorse," she said. "I feel awe that I passed a deadly disease around. If I had it to do again, I wouldn't prostitute. But that crack cocaine will make you do anything."

She was released from jail during the summer after pleading with a judge to let her go home to live with her parents.

But Redmond didn't stay long. She returned to the streets and never followed through on the Social Security disability or food stamps her parents helped her to get.

She was arrested again in September and December as sheriff's deputies stepped up prostitution enforcement.

She is being held on a $6,000 bond. Judge Ronald Herring has ordered that Redmond have no chance of release under any pre-trial program or overcrowding order.

"There's men out there that I've been with that I'm too scared or too ashamed to tell them about it," she said. "But I can't say that I gave it to them because they do it with everybody."

Redmond believes she contracted the virus that causes AIDS three or four years ago while working the streets of Inwood, Auburndale and Haines City.

She has told men who picked her up that she has AIDS, and some have thrown her out of their car. With others, she has tried to just offer sex, take the cash, and then get out of the car.

"I see new girls out there and I talk to them," she said. "I say, 'Look at me, barefoot, walking around hungry and tired, standing on the street corner for hours.'"

"I tell them, 'You're going to be like me if you don't get off the streets,'" she said. "They all know I have AIDS. But yet, they still do it because of rock cocaine. They don't care. There's no reaching us when we're on it."

Feuds, hassles in Longwood

The city of Longwood has carried the nickname of "Wrongwood" for some time and the current city commissioners are doing little to improve the reputation of the town for feuds and hassles.

The latest incident concerns a public verbal exchange between Commissioner Steve Miller - aided by Mayor Paul Lovstrand - and City Administrator Jim McFellin over the problems of flooding in a section of the city.

McFellin charged that the manner and method of bringing up the issue was done in a way intended to embarrass him. McFellin is correct. Miller's actions during the commission meeting were not intended to solve the problem, they were intended to annoy and discomfort the administrator.

Miller, acting for himself or on behalf of someone else, has concluded he will annoy, harass, disturb or in other ways cause discomfort to McFellin, obviously in an attempt to drive him out of office.

Driving administrators out of office is apparently something done rather routinely in Longwood. They have had seven administrators in seven years, so Miller's actions are nothing new. But such a turnover is, to put it diplomatically, not the best way to run a city.

Miller even asked the commission to "admonish" the city administrator but his allegations against McFellin were simply wrong. Miller's basic contention was that McFellin had dismissed or ignored citizens' complaints about flooding.

The truth is he did not. McFellin simply explained that the real solution to the problem had to be resolved through both the efforts of the city and Seminole County. McFellin stated he would work with the residents to do all he could to alleviate the problem until a permanent solution could be found.

Anyone who is experienced in dealing with or covering politics knows what is going on in Longwood. The type of tactics being used by Miller and Lovstrand demean and degrade what should be an honorable position of public service.

It is not too late to change this and to change Longwood's very poor reputation. The commissioners can change simply by disagreeing without being disagreeable and by putting the public good first and everything else second.

Citrus growers' loss is our gain

Americans often are confounded by what the government does in their name. But nothing befuddles more than Washington paying farmers subsidies to withhold a certain portion of their crops from market so that consumers pay higher prices for food.

California's citrus industry provides a too ripe example of this absurd policy. Nearly 40 percent of the state's annual orange crop never makes it to supermarket produce stands. Two billion perfectly good navel oranges are either left to rot on trees, fed to livestock, dumped on foreign markets or juiced.

In a farewell gift to consumers before leaving office, Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan announced this week that his department no longer will limit sales of oranges and lemons grown in California and Arizona. In a fell swoop, Madigan put the fritters to a federal agriculture policy that has been in place for more than a half-century.

Federal "marketing orders" for citrus and other farm products were introduced in 1937 to help growers make it through the Depression. It was supposed to be a temporary program but, as lawmakers then failed to realize, once a federal entitlement is created, it is all but impossible to do away with it.

The citrus industry did not surrender its accustomed entitlement to artificially high prices for oranges and lemons without a fight. Sunkist Growers Inc., the Sherman Oaks, Calif., farmers cooperative (which operates much like a cartel), suggested it was very near un-American of Madigan to repeal a hallowed policy that ensured the nation's orange- and lemon-eating populations a steady supply of their chosen fruit at stable prices.

Sunkist also direly warned that 4,000 navel-orange producers in California and Arizona will lose up to $5 million a week and 2,000 lemon producers up to $1 million a week. Thousands of job losses are foreseen, as well as seasonal layoffs. I don't think so.

Sunkist is no more concerned about the fate of the West's 6,000 orange and lemon growers than, say, OPEC (a strikingly similar "cooperative") was about the fortunes of individual oil exporting countries. Preservation of the cartel is the utmost important thing to the Sunkist citrus barons.

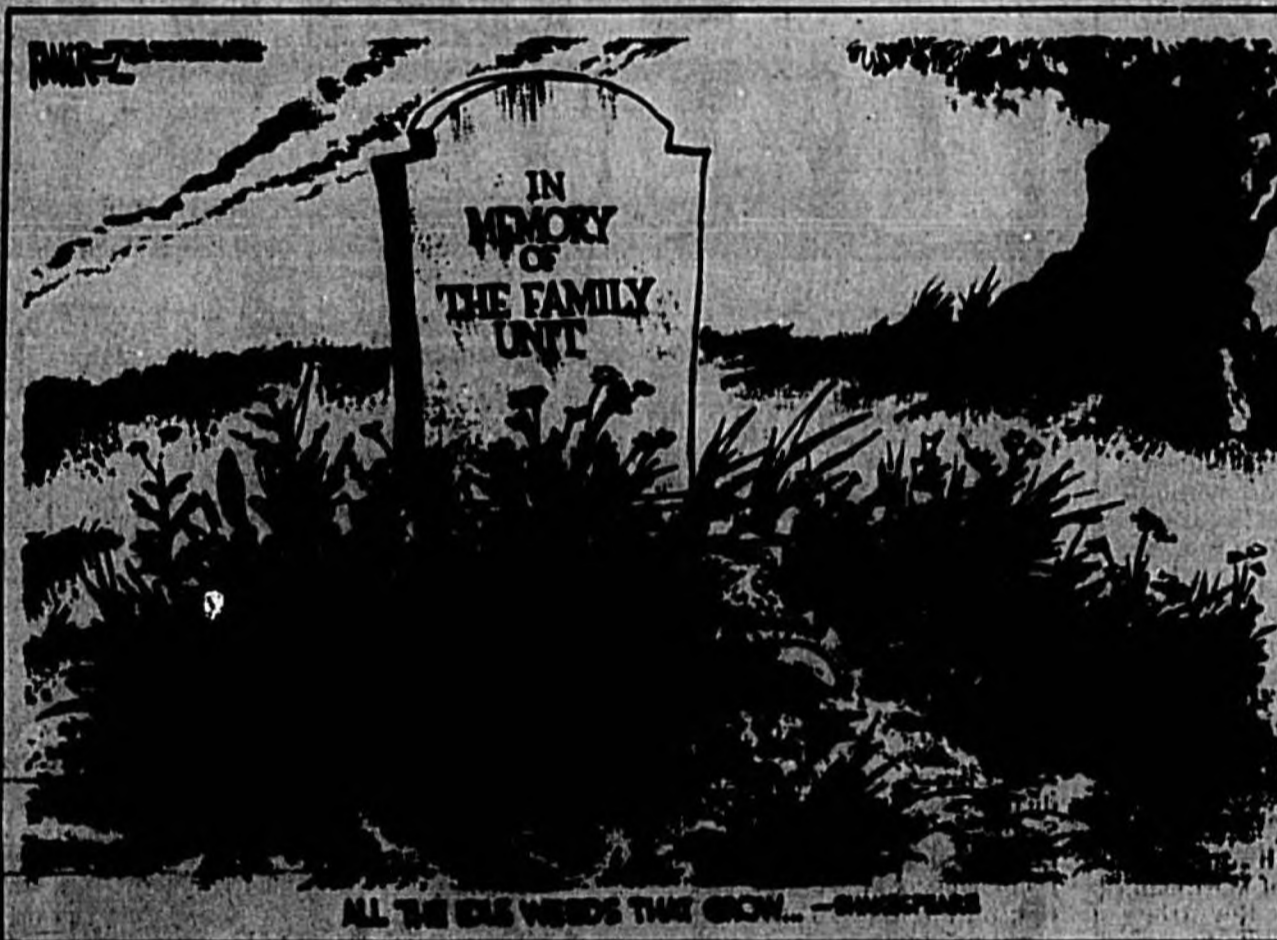

Until Madigan upset the apple cart, Sunkist had a neat arrangement that very well would have made the OPEC sheikhs envious. Under federal law, California and Arizona citrus growers were permitted to operate a committee -- on which Sunkist has a decided majority of votes -- to determine how much of each year's harvest is delivered to market.

The committee determined the market share of various citrus packers. The packers, in turn, determined how much product they received from individual growers. The beauty of the whole arrangement is that any packer or grower that bucked the system and challenged the citrus cartel, risked federal civil and criminal prosecution.

The only losers in all of this will be the citrus barons at Sunkist who suddenly find themselves an unnecessary anachronism.

Preservation of the cartel is the utmost important thing to the Sunkist citrus barons.

Songbird population down

It's a vastly uneven struggle, pitting some of nature's most delicate creations against a lengthening gauntlet of danger, and in it, the songbirds -- the bobolinks, warblers, tanagers and thrushes -- are losing.

The yellow throated warbler is heard less often now. There are fewer robins about. Across the whole spectrum, the numbers of songbirds are thinning dramatically in some cases, crashing in others. And it is humankind's unwitting hand that is silencing these harbingers of spring.

Among the songbirds of North America, some 250 species are neotropical migrants (from the tropics of the New World), a grouping that encompasses other species from hummingbirds to waterfowl. For thousands of years robust flocks of songbirds have winged between spring nesting sites in the United States, and Canada and winter refuge in the tropics of Mexico, the Caribbean, and Central and South America.

"Long-term studies over the past couple of decades have shown us that many of these species are declining very rapidly," says Peter Stangel, of the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation. "In the eastern United States about 70 percent of the neotropical migrants have been decreasing. That percentage seems to hold true for prairie species as well. It is a very broad-scale decline."

In the past 10 years, declines of 11 percent to 88 percent were recorded in the populations of more than two dozen songbird species monitored in a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service study. From the mid-1980s to the late 1990s only half as many waves of migratory birds crossed the Louisiana coast on their northern route, reports Louisiana University researcher Sidney A. Gauthreaux Jr. The least Bell's vireo has all but vanished from Southern California. In Michigan, the Kirtland's warbler is nearly extinct. All 250 breeding pairs known to exist could fit into a space no bigger than a grocery bag.

Why this havoc? Songbirds, of course, have natural predators. Egg-eating raccoons and blue jays take their toll. Hawks and gulls strike from the sky. But these predators have always existed. The real factor beginning to tip the balance against songbirds is human alteration of the environment.

Take in your mind's eye for a moment a typical songbird. A warbler, perhaps. It may weigh but a half-ounce, feathered lightly in yellow, blue or gray. It's at Mexico's Yucatan shore set for the 650-mile flight over the Gulf. Its winter habitat in the tropical forests to the south is growing smaller, lost to logging and land clearing. By the time it wings its exhausted way to the coast of Louisiana or Texas, a shoreline converted to homes, marinas and other development is encountered.

Then there are things as simple as glass. Millions of songbirds die annually by thwacking into modern windowed towers and backporch sliding glass doors. Even our pets take a toll. No one is sure about the numbers, but when domesticated cats are outdoors they are thought to account for the loss of several tens of millions of songbirds each year. This loss can be discouraged if cat owners give their pets less time to roam outdoors.

Loss of vegetation along river and stream banks due to livestock grazing, perhaps, or to altered water flows from hydroelectric projects mean, for songbirds, fewer places to nest and live.

Over the decades not only have vast expanses of traditional songbird habitat been converted to urban and agricultural use, but in doing so the remaining habitat has been broken up into smaller and smaller bits.

This fragmentation has triggered a particularly pernicious cause of the songbirds' decline. It has given another species a competitive advantage over songbirds that had not existed before.

Brown-headed cow birds thrive along forest edges. The forest fragmentation creates an exponential growth in the cow birds' prime habitat. They thrive by substituting their eggs in songbird nests. Their eggs hatch sooner than those of songbirds. The songbirds' hatchlings, in turn, often starve or are ejected from the nest as the foster parents feed the cow birds' young. Field studies in broken up forests suggest 66 percent to 80 percent of the young being raised by songbirds are actually cow birds. The cow birds' specialized survival technique, aided by our own actions that turn forests into patchwork, is believed to be a prime cause of the most recent and most rapid decline in songbird populations.

Partners in Flight is an international organization recently formed "to work in a cooperative way to promote songbird conservation," says the Wildlife Foundation's Stangel, who is involved in the effort. Government agencies from the concerned nations, environmentalists, forest products organizations and people interested in birds are part of the coalition.

The numbers of songbirds are thinning dramatically in some cases, crashing in others.

SARAH OVERSTREET

Economic summit was educational

One of the most interesting things I've watched on TV for a while was the president-elect's two-day economic summit. Since my employer expects at least a good show of an honest day's work, I couldn't keep my eyes glued to it, but I did keep CNN on in the background and sneaked a listen when I could.

There was a time I'd have thought even 10 minutes of an economic summit was a real napfest, and so would a huge percentage of my fellow citizens. We didn't think economics was something we should be interested in. The result was that we not only made half a century of economic decisions, but we didn't know how to play the game. We drove the car into the lagoon -- right after they jumped out.

Or as Stuart Altman of Brandeis University put it so well during the summit, we let them turn our economy into "a gigantic Ponzi scheme."

The average economic knowledge of American citizens is a national disgrace -- it's economic illiteracy, really. When we discovered a goodly portion of us couldn't read a sheet of safety directions or fill out a job application, we established programs all over the country to teach reading. Yet we can't understand the rules of compounding interest nor the best way to invest our money for long-term security, and it keeps us struggling to make ends meet during our working years and poor during retirement. Society is drained rather than enhanced. This isn't a crisis?

And why are people in the richest nation on Earth so stupid about economics? For starters, we hail from people who believed money was the root of all evil. They thought it was something nice people just aren't interested in, and didn't consider it a tool with which to do good and a necessary medium of exchange. Literature and movies glorified those who triumphed over poverty by being "rich in spirit," not by actually getting the family enough to eat or decent clothes to wear.

Education followed suit. English, math, science and physical education were required subjects throughout most public education, and economics, if offered at all, was filled with theory and no practical application. We learned nothing about anything we'd use in our lives: budgeting, how charge-account interest is figured, investing money for highest yield, managing a business.

After two years of high-school algebra, science and phys ed, I've yet to be asked to perform an equation, illustrate a chemical compound or execute a backward-roll in the 24 years since I graduated. Oh, but I'm the class clown in the bank loan office with a loan officer trying to explain the Rule of 78 to me. My high-school drama class did pay off, because I can sit there and nod my head and narrow my eyes as if I understand every word.

Idiotic young people in the 1960s and 1970s reached maturity in a culture that was trying to find meaning in spiritual values. Money was again evil, and going back to nature and simpler ways of life replaced politics as the subject of glorification. Don't be poor because you need money and don't have it; rather, fulfill your needs without money so you don't need it to begin with. By the time cultural common sense returned and we began to understand money as a tool we should learn to use wisely, it was difficult to find time to re-educate ourselves. We had families, careers into which we were putting extra hours, second jobs.

The average economic knowledge of American citizens is a national disgrace.

sentences of some offenders to ease overcrowding. McDougall had collected 1,820 days of such credits. "Inasmuch as McDougall was convicted of murder in the second degree, he would appear to be precluded from receiving provisional credits," the draft opinion states.

McDougall, who lived with the girl and her mother in Seminole County, forced the child to eat soap, deprived her of food and water for days and forced her to stand, naked for hours and recite the alphabet, according to testimony at his trial.

The opinion also says that McDougall would be ineligible for the credits if he committed a sex act or aggravated battery as part of his crimes.

"It's wonderful that this man will not be allowed to be on the streets," Kerry Flach, assistant to Corrections Secretary Harry Singletary, said Monday. "We're very glad that the attorney general was able to find a legal means for us to keep him."

According to the opinion, the final determination on McDougall's case rests with Corrections Secretary Harry Singletary. Attorney General Bob Butterworth must sign the opinion to make it official, but Garringer said he did not expect that to be a problem.

While the opinion isn't binding, it does lend legal weight to any decision to keep McDougall behind bars.

McDougall could still challenge the decision in court. In November 1983, he was sentenced to 34 years for the girl's slaying. Even with five more years, McDougall will likely be released 18 years early because of other state laws that allow credit time to reduce prison overcrowding.

Eleven years and three months were lopped off his original sentence because of a state law giving him 10 days' credit for every month he serves. Another law providing credits for work in prison industries cut five years and nine months from his sentence.

The girl's mother, Susan Barrett Assad, served five years of a 15-year sentence.

And Flach said Butterworth's opinion also could affect the cases of 31 other inmates scheduled for early release during the next six months.

"This case is only emblematic of what's wrong with the system," said former state Rep. Dick Batchelor, an Orlando children's advocate. "The onus is now on the Legislature to change the law so there aren't any future McDougall cases."

expenses, but persuade alarm owners to maintain the equipment in a better fashion.

Last night, Harriett called for a reexamination of the ordinance. "The way I see it," he said, "we have three or four options. Number one, we could count any repeated false alarms during a 24-hour period as only one."

"Secondly," he continued, "we could continue to charge $35 after the first three alarms, and charge an additional $35 for each additional alarm beyond that."

"We could also give credit and not count false alarms if it is a bonafide alarm malfunction that is being worked on," Harriett said.

"The fourth option would be a combination of any of these," he added.

"Between September and October," Baragona told the commissioners, "we had seven false alarms at Commercial Chemical, and under the present ordinance, this will cost us $385." He continued, "If you go with Chief Harriett's first option, it would only cost us $235, and his second option would bring the fees down to $35."

He added, "I believe under our situation, this would be a more logical assessment."

"If we are going to reexamine this ordinance," said Commissioner Lon Howell, "I would like to see false alarms at residences be lower than those imposed on commercial businesses."

Mayor Bettye Smith observed, "It would seem logical, but it's just as expensive for police and firemen to answer a false alarm call no matter where it is, so I don't believe we should go along with that idea."

"It also takes police and firemen away from possibly responding to another call," added Commissioner A.A. McClanahan.

Commissioner Eckstein suggested the charges be reestablished at $35 per call, beyond the first three false alarm responses.

"I think we should also consider the time element for having a faulty system repaired," said Simmons. "There might be times, like over a three-day holiday weekend, when a resident or business can't get service people out to handle a problem for two or three days."

With a consensus vote, Mayor Smith instructed Simmons to come up with a new draft of the ordinance.

Simmons suggested the revised ordinance could possibly be prepared in time for the next regularly scheduled City Commission meeting, on Jan. 11.

Sheriff

Although the reorganization entails 30 staff transfers, Ealinger said the plan will result in about a $40,000 annual savings after several eliminated positions are vacated through normal attrition.

Only one person will receive a promotion as a result of the changes, said Ealinger. Lt. Greg Barnett, now in charge of the City County Investigative Bureau, will be promoted to the position of inspector in the Division of Professional Standards. Lt. Paul Jaynes, now in charge of the Criminal Investigations Division, will take over supervision of CCIB.

Two people will be hired, including Phyllis Yowell, a 19-year veteran of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

Under Ealinger's new "corporate" design management structure, Harriett will have the title of director of the Department of Administration. The department will oversee administrative services, the professional standards division, which includes what was formerly known as "Internal Affairs" functions; and computer services.

Financial manager Penny Flemming will become director of the new Department of Management and Financial Services, which will have fiscal and management oversight duties over all other departments. Ealinger said the department will be patterned similarly to the county's Office of Management and Budget, which Flemming headed.

The Department of Enforcement will become the Department of Law Enforcement, and enforcement commander Maj. Roy Hughey will be the director of law enforcement. Ealinger said all sworn directors will continue to hold the rank of major, with the exception of Undersheriff Harriett.

Maj. Dave Briction will remain the director of the Department of Corrections, but his second in command, Capt. Greg Futch, will become deputy director of the Operations Service Division, but with the same rank.

Futch's administrative duties will be given to Capt. Jay Leman, who will be transferred from the Administrative Services Division of the Sheriff's Office to become deputy corrections director.

act as the agency, nor the agency act as the commission, even though they consist of the same people, but it requires the approval of an agency. When the agency approves it, it would then go to the same people, but acting as the City Commission."

"It sounds complicated, but that's the way the legal documents must be approved," he explained.

During a workshop discussion, several commissioners requested more details regarding the differences between the original agreement, and the one presently being proposed.

Simmons said he would have a complete listing for commission study and consideration by possibly Jan. 5, or the next regular commission meeting on Jan. 11.

The Jan. 5 meeting, on a Tuesday, would be a special meeting called for the swearing-in ceremony of re-elected Mayor Bettye Smith, as well as commissioners Bill Thomas and Lon Howell.

mons said the information might be available as an additional item for that meeting, but he expected it would be more likely that the information would be presented for the Jan. 11 meeting, which would be the regularly scheduled workshop and meeting night. Mayor Smith and Simmons both explained the postponement during last night's regular meeting. No representatives of the mall or the attorney made any presentations.

Campaign encounters of chosen few lead to special invitations

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — More than 60 "faces of hope" President-elect Clinton credits with inspiring his campaign of inclusion will be his personal guests during inauguration week.

The invitations were extended to people ranging from a 10-year-old boy in Phoenix who dramatized in a letter to the president his family's economic plight to an HIV-infected marathon runner who tries to break down stereotypes of people with AIDS.

What they all have in common are chance encounters with either Clinton or Vice President-elect Gore — or their wives, Hillary and Tipper — during the campaign that either touched one of the four emotionally or capalized the message they wanted to deliver.

"Both families feel strongly about having the opportunity to honor them during Inauguration week," said Rahm Emanuel, the inaugural committee's co-executive director.

The invitees include 10-year-old Ryan Sollace of Phoenix, who wrote Clinton in October after his father had told him that, because of the family's economic situation, he couldn't play Little League baseball.

"I work nights, Cynthia works days, times are tough financially, and I had to tell him, 'no, you can't do that,'" Ryan's father, Michael, said Monday. "It's always been no, because we always have to work."

Clinton credited Ryan's letter with making a point "that I've been trying to make all over the country," only much "more powerfully than I could."

Ryan says he's going to the inauguration with his mother, who works for a freight company. Ryan's father said he would "love to go" but won't be able to get off work. He works for a street-sweeping service.

The inaugural committee is paying all costs for the "faces of hope" guests — including transportation, lodging and providing complementary dinner jackets and gowns for the Inaugural Ball. Two days before the Jan. 20 swearing-in, the Clintons and Gores will host a private luncheon for them.

Judge Fortunato "Pete" Benavides — whose Austin, Texas, program for wayward youths was cited by Clinton during the campaign as an example for improving communities and people's lives — said he had been planning to attend the inauguration on his own.

"I have been a judge for over 14 years and I've seen a lot of things and sometimes I get wise," he said. But after getting the invitation, "I feel like a kid all over again."

Michael Quercio, 32, of Worcester, Mass., also is looking forward to seeing Clinton again, after spotting him on the shoulder at a Boston long-ranger in October, and explaining his classes to Clinton.

"I am glad to meet Michael Quercio. I am gay and I am proud of it. I took a class on AIDS," said Clinton. "I am glad you attended and he said he was sorry. Then — we were already shaking hands — he took his other hand and clasped it over mine and never let go of me the four or five minutes we spoke. Nor did his eyes leave mine."

Cheryl Jones, 38, of Lexington, Ky., recalled Tipper Gore stopping by the new home being built under a Habitat for Humanity program for her and her husband and helping "do one of the walls in the living room."

"We've had so many wonderful things happen this year and this just extends it," she said.

Turn Your Old Furniture Into Something Brand New

No matter whether your piece of furniture is inexpensive or a precious antique, Loveland's Refinishing can restore it to its original beauty. Bob Loveland opened Loveland's Refinishing in 1977, and moved to his current location, at 506 West 13th Street in Sanford, in 1985. Bob says, "Most any piece can be restored, so don't throw it away before you have it looked at." Loveland's handles all phases of furniture repair and refinishing, from stripping, repairing, custom refinishing, case work, rush seat work, press case work and some upholstery.

Custom refinishing is his specialty. Bob works with many decorators, doing normal to "far out" finishes, such as pickling on kitchen cabinets. "No job is too big or too small; we can handle it all." Loveland's offers pick-up and delivery and in-home touch-ups. Bob also handles insurance claims for State Farm, Allstate and other insurance companies; for moving damage.

Small jobs take less than one week, but allow four to eight weeks for "major reconstruction." Bob has even done work for local country clubs, such as Sweetwater and Rosemont.

There are two new features of Loveland's business that Bob would like to tell you about. First, Loveland's is a new member of "The Exchange". "The Exchange" is a barter-type system where members earn points for trade-out with other businesses that are members of the program. If you would like more information, give Bob a call.

And second, Loveland's has acquired an antique show space at the corner of State Road 436 and Red Bug Road. Bob is set up for consignment - he'll take all types of antiques and collectibles including glassware.

"Now that Christmas is behind us, make a New Year's resolution to get that old furniture re-done; and remember us at Loveland's Refinishing!" Loveland's Refinishing can be reached at 322-7496.

Casablanca

'Play it again, Hratch'

By TERRIL JONES
Associated Press Writer

CASABLANCA, Morocco — From the looks of the dim bar in Casablanca, you'd expect to look up and see Humphrey Bogart serving drinks under the gaze of Ingrid Bergman.

Fifty years after Warner Bros. released "Casablanca," among the most enduring and popular films in cinema history, the legend lives on in this watering hole on Morocco's western coast.

Much like Rick's Cafe Americain of the film, beggars and pickpockets thrive outside the Casablanca Bar, in a corner of the Hyatt Hotel in downtown Casablanca.

But inside it's not Sam, the black piano player, who croons "As Time Goes By" but a Lebanese named Hratch who sings in 14 languages — including Japanese.

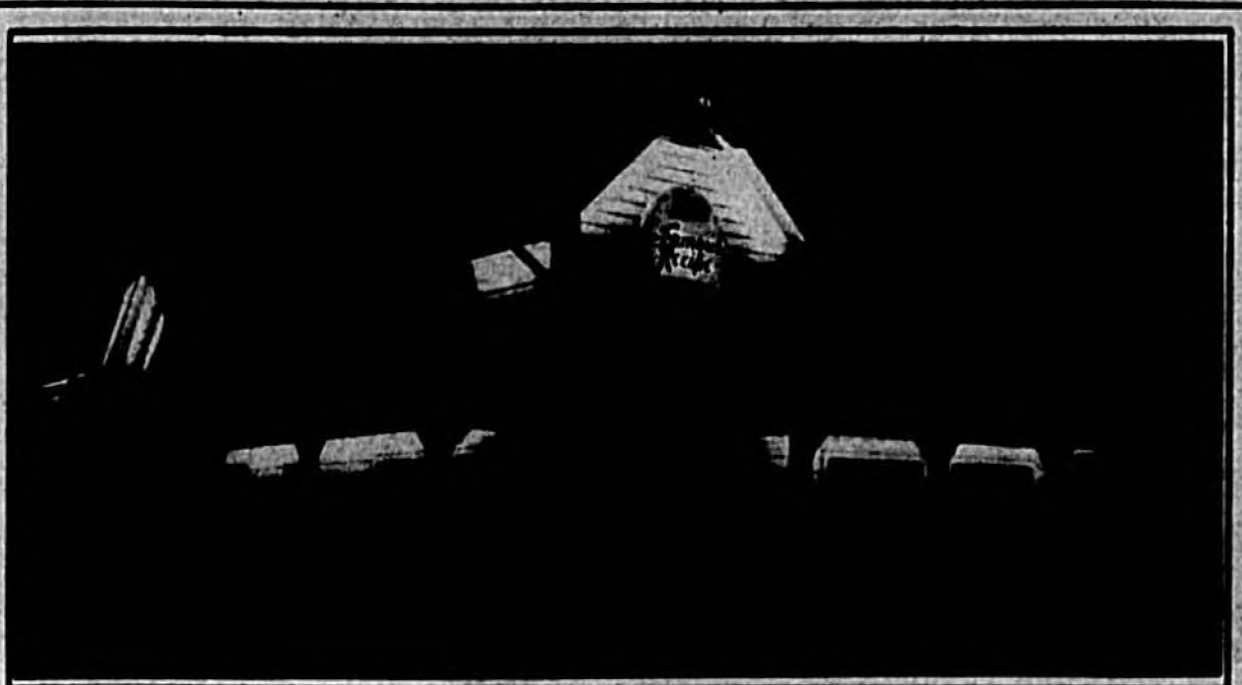

Movie posters of Bogart as hard-boiled but sentimental cafe owner Rick, Bergman as his ex-lover Ilsa and Paul Henreid as stoic but dedicated resistance leader Victor Laszlo cover the walls.

The waiters and bartenders are dressed as Bogart in the film's celebrated final scene, in trench coats and fedoras, or as French police captain Louis Renault.

"It's kind of fun, with all the people dressed up," said John Shanahan, an attorney from Roseland, N.J. "It's in character — the waiter's a seriously unfriendly Frenchman."

Casablanca isn't quite the den of espionage, intrigue and gambling the film evokes but a dusty port city of 3 million people, home to Morocco's textile, car parts and construction industries.

"There's no similarity; the movie was filmed entirely in a studio," says Abderrahim Daoudi, Casablanca's director of tourism. "But it had an enormous impact. Every day, somewhere in the world, it's shown.... It's an excellent publicity aid."

Winless streak over Shorthanded Tribe wins on penalty kicks

From Staff Reports

KISSIMMEE — Who needs a full team anyway? The Seminole High School boys' soccer team put an end to a two-year winless streak in dramatic fashion Monday afternoon in the opening round of the Central Florida Challenge at Silver Spurs Stadium in Kissimmee.

Despite playing without six players, including two starters, the Tribe was able to pull out a 6-5 victory over Stuart-South Fork on penalty kicks.

Regulation play ended in a 2-2 tie, but Seminole made four of five kicks in the shootout to claim the win.

Tony Otero, who almost didn't play because he missed the bus, nailed the game winner on the final try of the five attempts each team got.

"Four guys missed the bus," said Seminole coach Carlos Maerlino. "Tony was the only one who showed up. I asked the team if he should play or should we hold him out to teach him a lesson. They voted to let him play and he ends up with the game winner."

"It was a little lonely on the sidelines. I only had two reserves on the bench."

The victory moves Seminole (1-7) into a matchup with old foe New Port Richey-Gulf in today's quarterfinals. Gulf was the Tribe's opponent the last two times they appeared in the regional championships. South Fork fell to 5-6-1.

"New Port Richey, beat us 2-0 at their place and 2-1 at our place," recalled Maerlino. "The second time Geordie Davison scored with five minutes left to give us a 1-0 lead. I was pinching myself to see if I was asleep because they were 22-1 and we were 7-10, but they came on late to beat us."

Gulf beat Eau Gallie 4-1 Monday to advance to the quarterfinals.

Their (Gulf) coach saw me after the game," laughed Maerlino. "He said he was not going to tell them our record."

Maerlino knew he was in for a tough game after the South Fork coach told him before the game. "I don't care what your record is. I know what conference you play in. You're not going to fool anybody."

South Fork took a 2-1 lead at halftime after unassisted goals by Fabiano Barros and Rick Boyce offset an unassisted score by the Tribe's Bill Morris.

With time running short, Seminole finally gained the 2-2 tie with 7:12 remaining on a Jim Johnson score off an assist from Morris.

Unlike the regular season, when an extra period is played to try to break the tie before going to penalty kicks, the team's went directly to PK's. Both team's pick five players each and they go in alternating order until as winner is decided.

The Tribe missed its first attempt, but then goalkeeper Jon Williams, Ben Brown, Jason Walraven and Odera each connected on their tries, while South Fork hit its first two attempts, but then missed two of its last three to give Seminole the victory.

The win broke another winless streak for the Tribe's head coach.

"In 18 years of coaching this was the sixth time I've gone to penalty kicks," said Maerlino. "And it's the first time I've come out the winner."

Maerlino said there is a lot to think about, strategy wise, when you go to penalty kicks.

"Do you put your best kicker first or last? Do you kick first or do you let them kick first?" said Maerlino. "I like to go first because then you put pressure on them to match you. As far as your kicking alignment goes, I've tried it both ways."

"Sometimes I put my best kicker last and he never gets to try, because the match was already over. Today I put my best kicker first and he was the one who missed, you never know."

Seminole outshot South Fork 11-8 and also attempted seven corner kicks to two for their opponents. The South Fork goalie, Doug Smith, came up with five saves, while Williams deflected three for the Tribe.

Unlike most games this season, the multi-talented Williams was forced to stay in goal the whole game because Seminole's back-up keeper was out with an injury. Williams normally plays the first half in goal and the second half on the field.

"I don't know if we can win tomorrow," said Maerlino. "But it was fun getting over the losing streak. It could be interesting today. This is the third time in four years Williams has been in goal against Gulf, (the other times as a freshman and as a sophomore). Their coach couldn't believe we still had him."

Seminole hammers hosts in 'Classic'

From Staff Reports

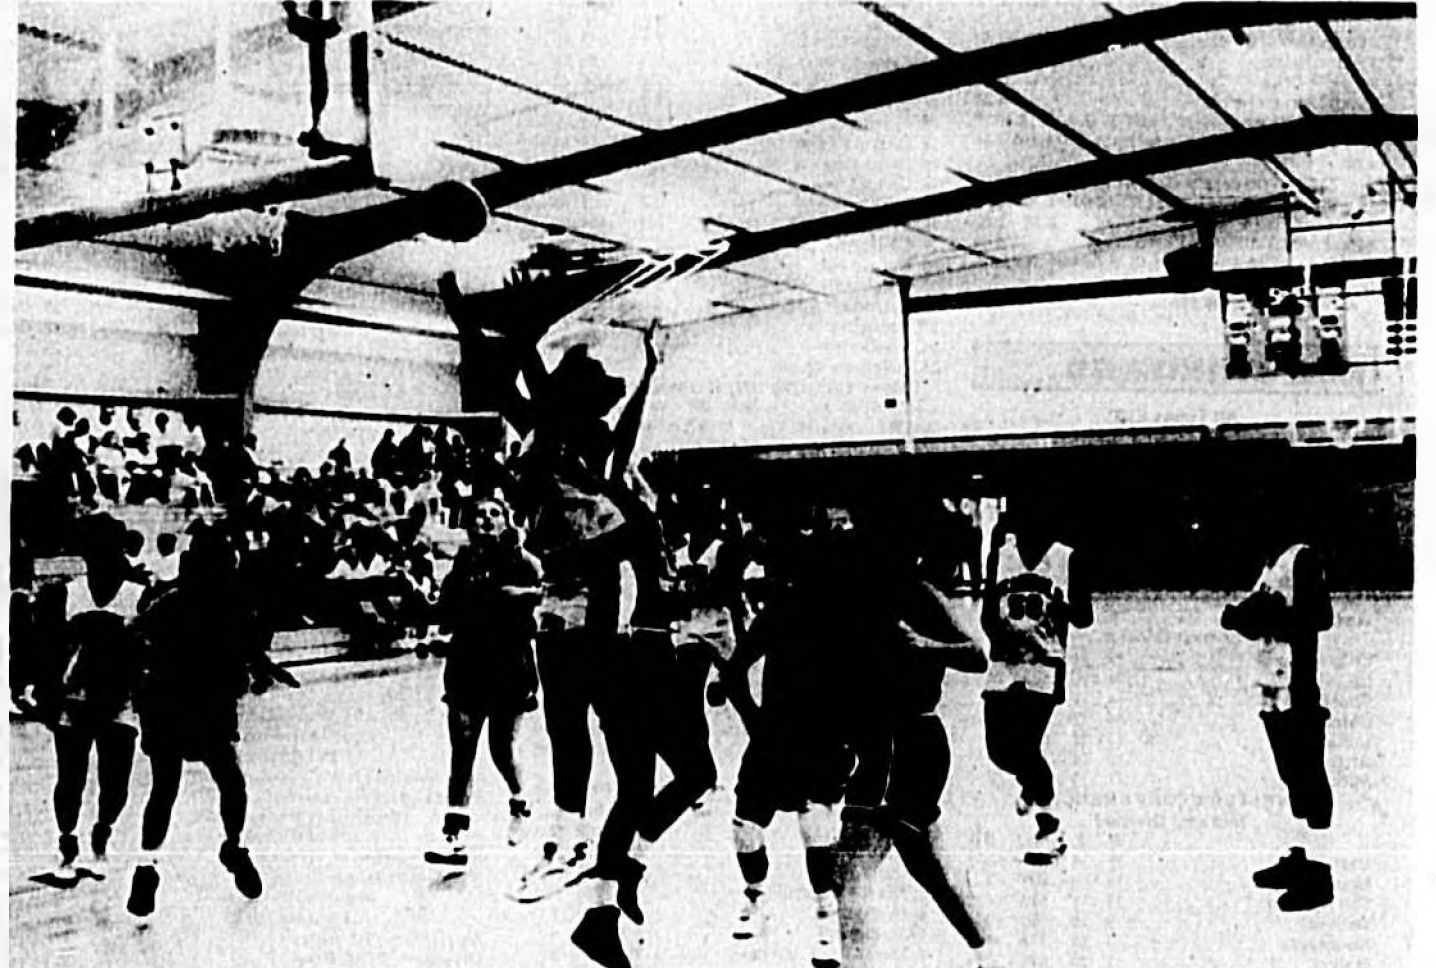

LAKE GIBSON — The Seminole High School girls' basketball team pounded its second straight opponent, mauling host Lake Gibson 75-24 in the opening round of the Polk Holiday Classic at Lake Gibson High School.

"The girls played well," said Seminole head coach John McNamara. "It's the first time we've had five players score in double figures this year. We really balanced the offense out well. They were very active on the floor and really did a good job, considering the holiday layoff."

The victory moved the Tribe (8-5) into a winner's bracket game against Bonifay-Bethlehem at 10:30 a.m. this morning at Lakeland High School. Bethlehem, ranked No. 4 in Class 3A, advanced by knocking off Cape Coral-Mariner 67-59. If the Tribe lost this morning they were to play at 4:30 p.m. and if they won they will play at 8:30 p.m. tonight.

Seminole got another huge game out of Nikki Washington. The senior forward hit for 25 points, grabbed 11 rebounds, handed out six assists, came up with six steals and blocked four shots. All of this despite sitting out the last 11 minutes of the game.

The other starters' statistics weren't as shabby either. Sophomore point guard Tenshita Eason had 14 points and five steals, senior center Kay Mullins had 11 points and grabbed nine rebounds, guard LaHoma Faison had 11 points, seven rebounds and five steals and forward Cindy Boone had 10 points and 10 rebounds.

Nikki Washington (No. 44) and her Seminole teammates put on a clinic in the opening game of the Polk Holiday Classic, crushing host Lake Gibson, 75-24. The Tribe is scheduled to play a doubleheader today.

"LaHoma, Nikki and Belinda Morgan played a heck of a floor game," said McNamara. "Morgan (a sophomore called up for the tournament) is jelling well with team despite only being up a week. I think she's really going to help us in the long run."

Morgan finished the game with four points, six steals and seven rebounds.

Sharita Jones was the only Lake Gibson player to score in double figures, finishing with 10 points.

County teams advance in Pizza Hut

By TONY DESORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

ORLANDO — Maybe it was weather. Maybe it was the time of day, the day of the week or season of the year. Whatever it was, the Pizza Hut Invitational boys' soccer tournament cranked up Monday with a slate of unattractive games.

How unattractive was it? A total of 12 yellow cards (cautions) were awarded in six of the eight games. Three of the yellow cards went to Seminole County coaches.

In the process, three Seminole County schools — Lyman, Lake Mary, and Lake Brantley — managed to advance to today's quarterfinal round at Bishop Moore and Edgewater high schools.

Lyman, ranked No. 2 in the Florida Athletic Coaches Association Class 4A state poll, edged Bishop Moore 1-0. Lake Mary, ranked sixth in the state, topped Dr. Phillips 3-0. Lake Brantley, No. 10 in the state poll, outlasted Boone 2-1.

Despite the victories, none of the three county coaches were pleased with the wins. As Lyman coach Ray Sandidge said, "We won't win this tournament playing at that level."

At least they won. Ovielo and Lake Howell suffered heartbreaking losses, the Lions having a goal disallowed in a 1-0 loss to Coconut Creek while the Silver Hawks squandered a 2-1 halftime lead in a 3-2 loss to Tampa-Chamberlain.

In other first round games, defending Class 3A state champion Daytona Beach-Seabreeze bested Winter Park 1-0, Clearwater Central Catholic ripped Edgewater 9-0 and Tampa-Leto topped Evans 2-0.

Lake Brantley opened the tournament with its win over Boone at Bishop Moore. Jimmy McLeellid scored 53 seconds into the game and Sean McClafferty added a goal at 15:42 to give the Patriots a 2-0 lead.

Unfortunately, Lake Brantley then dropped into automatic pilot. Even though the Patriots outshot Boone 23-6 and had a 5-1 advantage in corner kicks, the Braves cut the lead in half when Dusty Reineke converted a penalty kick in the second half.

"We just went into cruise control," said Patriot coach Jim Brodie. "We had some great opportunities, but we just didn't have the killer instinct to put them away."

Lake Mary didn't have that problem, taking a 1-0 lead in the first half on Tony Bazile's goal and getting second half goals from Kevin Murphy and Jody DeBruin.

Still, Ram coach Larry McCorkle wasn't thoroughly pleased with the result.

"It was like we were playing in slow motion," said McCorkle, shaking his head. "We still have that youth in us. It's like we're almost afraid to go out and create something."

"Our defense played well. We didn't allow too many dangerous situations."

While Lyman didn't allow Bishop Moore any real dangerous opportunities — save a penalty kick in the second half — the Greyhounds didn't do anything to put the Hornets away.

"We played well enough to get to the next round," said Sandidge. "In the first half, we played all right, but we didn't put away any of our chances."

"We had eight quality chances and we only put one of them away. We need some guys to step up and score some goals."

The only goal Lyman scored was a penalty kick that Danny McAvoy knocked home at 42:40 of the second half.

Dolphins glad for off week

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Rather than basking in the glow of their first AFC East title in seven years, or looking forward to their first bye week in four months, the Miami Dolphins were in a bad mood.

One reason was the knee injury suffered by leading rusher Mark Higgs in Sunday's 16-13 overtime victory at New England. Tests showed Higgs has torn cartilage in his right knee, which will require arthroscopic surgery and perhaps sideline him throughout the postseason.

But what really had the Dolphins sore Monday was the publication by three South Florida newspapers of comments receiver Mark Clayton made in the locker room after Sunday's game. The remarks referred to Lisa Olson, a

From Midway to law school

Hall looks forward to receiving his degree

By Shirley K. Baker
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — "I always knew my future held something different for me, either in sports or some other profession," said the proud 28-year-old Anthony Hall, a third year law student at the University of Florida Law School in Gainesville.

Having grown up in Midway, he was a good student in elementary and middle school, but it wasn't until he entered high school that he decided what would be different about his future.

He admits that "Although I did not apply myself in high school and make better grades, I soon developed a keen interest in my social studies classes." In fact, it was a legal studies course taught by Whitey Eckstein at Seminole High School that influenced me to pursue a college major and profession in law.

Since graduating from Seminole High School in 1985 where he lettered in track and football, Anthony has had many experiences, all of which have brought him closer to his goal, a degree in law. He attended school and played football at a college in Minnesota. The following summer in a black history course taught by Dr. Lurline Sweeting at Seminole Community College, Anthony said, "I developed a new-found respect for the history and culture of black people and decided to complete my undergraduate studies at a four-year African-American college."

In 1990, Anthony graduated from Morris Brown College, a part of the Atlanta University system in Atlanta, Ga. with a double major in history and paralegal studies.

Acceptance by the University of Florida Law School has brought Anthony even closer to his dream of a career in the legal profession.

In addition to his heavy class load, he is also very busy as editor of the black students' newsletter, "Black Letter Law" and articles editor of "Umoja Law Journal" which focuses on race, racism, and the American law. He is a volunteer at Horizon Center, an alternative school for at risk children in Gainesville. At the Horizon Center, Anthony lectures, tutors, and gives motivational talks to students. Remembering his attitude toward school as a high school student, Anthony said, "I can't emphasize enough the importance of a good primary and secondary school education to these at risk kids."

Last summer, Anthony in a law clerk's position with the Southern Center for Human Rights in Atlanta, Ga., had the opportunity to work with capital punishment and prison condition cases. He said, "This experience has made me more sensitive toward the institution of capital punishment and its implementation." During this winter break from school, Anthony plans to work with Orlando's Haitian refugees.

Anthony is all smiles when he talks about receiving his Doctor of Jurisprudence degree from the University of Florida Law School in December, 1993.

His plans, after graduation, include practicing law in the city of Atlanta and studying for a Ph.D. in African-American history. His ultimate goal is to teach on the college level and practice law.

Anthony is the only son of Ms. Virginia Hall who resides in Sanford with her daughter, Tracie.

Making music from kitchen gadgets

The Kitchen Band has a good time making music from kitchen gadgets. During the holiday season, they entertained over 800 children plus other guests at the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) Christmas Store when the children shopped free for their families. The band makes numerous appearances during the year.

Couple's bounty was food for the needy

DEAR ABBY: This letter is long overdue. George and I celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary last April and we used a suggestion we read in your column. We had a lovely party at the Chicago Corinthian Yacht Club, and our invitations read: "Your love and friendship is the only gift we need. However, if you wish to bring something, please make it an item of non-perishable food that will be donated to the needy."

Abby, it worked! We had a heavy carload to deliver. The people at the pantry were amazed at the quantity of food we brought in. We thank you for publishing that suggestion and hope you will continue your wonderful column for a long time.

JANE LEONARD, SKOKIE, ILL.

DEAR JANE: I'm pleased that you used my idea for your 50th wedding anniversary celebration. May you and George enjoy many more anniversaries.

When all is said and done, all we really have in the end is the pleasure we receive from that which we give away.

DEAR ABBY: During the holidays, blood banks around the country face the task of providing transfusions for the many hospital patients who depend on our community blood supply. The need is so great, and you have been such a stalwart friend, Abby, that we are asking you to remind your readers once again that the need for blood never takes a holiday.

Perhaps you can also remind your readers that giving blood is safe: You can't get AIDS or any other disease from giving blood! It's simple and usually takes 30 to 40 minutes from registration through post-donation juice and crackers. And, most important, giving blood saves lives!

Last year, more than 4 million Americans received blood transfusions. Sadly, only about 5 percent of those able to donate actually give blood. Here in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, we need more than 700 units of blood every day, including Christmas and New Year's!

Abby, Americans have so many blessings to celebrate. Why not celebrate the blessings of good health by sharing it? This holiday season, visit your local blood center and give the gift that lasts a lifetime: Give blood.

DEAR ABBY: At a recent party, a large bowl of dip was served with vegetables cut into small "sticks" — carrots, cucumbers, etc. To my horror, I saw people proceed to dip half-eaten vegetable sticks back into the bowl of dip!

This struck me as being very unsanitary. Am I too fussy, or not?

REPULSED IN VERMONT

DEAR REPULSED: You are not too fussy — you're sensible. When serving a dip, a spoon should be provided in order to allow the guests to spoon out the dip onto small cocktail plates.

DEAR ABBY: The first thing I look for in my newspaper is the obituary column. When the cause of death is listed as cancer, I always wonder if the deceased had been a heavy smoker.

I wish that very important fact would be included in the write-up. Am I the only person who wishes it were?

DEAR LOW ISLANDER: I'm sure you're not. But unless the deceased had requested that it be included in his/her obituary, which is highly unlikely, that "very important fact" will remain a mystery.

DEAR ABBY: I see you are into cockroaches again. Here's one:

My wife and I sit in the front pew at church. One Sunday I noticed a cockroach on the chancel dais approaching the altar. I got a tissue from my wife, left my seat, knelt devoutly at the rail with my head in one hand and surreptitiously seized the bug with the other. I crossed myself (not with the cockroach), arose and left to flush the insect down the restroom toilet.

It was a win-win situation. The congregation thought I was very pious (nobody was discomfited at Communion by a six-legged co-worshipper), and the cockroach thought he went to heaven.

Medication causes Irregular heartbeat

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have an irregular heartbeat that began after cataract repair. I take Inderal and blood pressure medication. I'm in my early 80s and never had trouble before, so why should my heart behave abnormally following this simple procedure?

every compound used in treating heart ailments.

It is possible that your friend was taking prescription drugs that he may have stopped when he began the herbs? This switch might have improved his vision if the medicine were to blame. (I

DEAR READER: The relation between your cataract surgery and the irregular pulse may be pure serendipity: The two events, which are common in the elderly, may have occurred one after the other by chance.

However, I am intrigued by your unnamed "blood pressure medication." Could this be the culprit? Possibly.

Inderal is a beta-blocker used to treat heart trouble and high blood pressure. It does not cause an irregular pulse rate; rather, it calms the heart.

On the other hand, other anti-hypertensive drugs -- such as diuretics -- are notorious causes of heart-rhythm irregularities, some of which can be dangerous.

Check with your family physician, who should be able to sort out the puzzle by examining you and determining the cause of your irregular pulse.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A gentleman I know had bad vision and went to an ophthalmologist for very expensive glasses. He began using herbs and now has the driver's license he was unable to get prior and he doesn't need glasses. It seems like a miracle, and I wonder what herbs would be beneficial for better vision.

DEAR READER: I am skeptical of any relation between herbs and improved vision. Nevertheless, your anecdote is impressive. I suspect there's more to the situation, though.

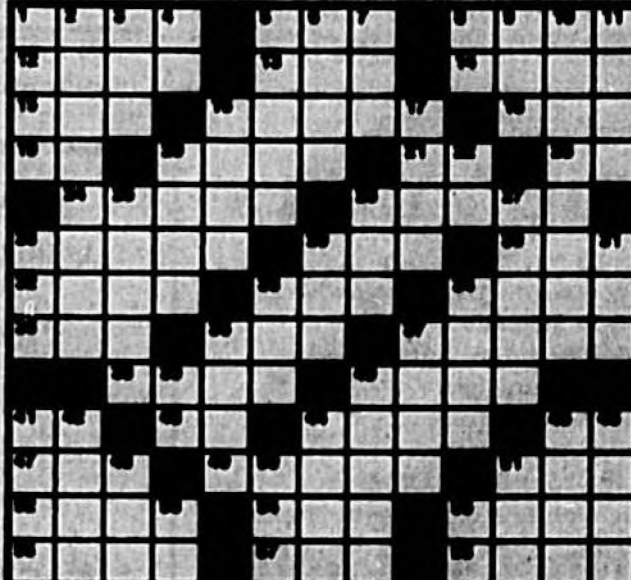

For example, many medicines can adversely affect vision to one degree or another. Such drugs include digoxin and almost

Answer to Previous Puzzle

By Bernice Neale Ocol YOUR BIRTHDAY Dec. 30, 1992

In the year ahead there is a possibility you might become involved in two unrelated endeavors. Although both are apt to be small, each will have surprising potential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Irrelevant interests might be uppermost in your mind today. This may cause you to perform poorly where your serious responsibilities are concerned. Keep your priorities in order. Capricorn, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Capricorn's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You have good earning potential today, but there is a chance you might waste more than you accumulate due to a series of small miscalculations.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Where your work or career is concerned today, it is best not to take verbal commitments as gospel. Some people with whom you may be dealing might tell you only what you want to hear.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Usually you are not the type of person who holds things in, but today you might be moody and secretive. It is best to voice your frustrations, provided that it is done logically.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) If your friends plan something expensive today with which you're not in accord, don't be reluctant to bow out or you could later regret your participation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your dignity and reputation could suffer today if you behave poorly in front of others. Should something sticky develop, keep your head and behave rationally.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It is imperative that you have careful plans today or else you might later find yourself in a pickle trying to sort out a disorganized mess.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though you might presently be making progress on an important endeavor, keep your hopes and expectations within reasonable bounds. Make allowances for negative variables.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In your one-to-one associations today, a failure to comprehend the other person's point of view could be detrimental to both parties. If you keep an open mind, you will encourage cooperation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't spread yourself too thin today by attempting more than you can manage. Overburdening yourself could result in aggravation instead of accomplishment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Beware of inclinations today to be wasteful with resources that have been entrusted to you by others. Treat their funds at least as prudently as you would your own.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If domestic conditions are not as harmonious as they should be today, ask yourself honestly if you're the instigator. The answer might surprise you. (C)1992, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

By Phillip Alder

It is nearly 1993. It is time to learn a little about squeeze play. A good starting point is Hugh Kelaey's book "Simple Squeezes" ($14.95, Gollancz, 800-274-2221).

Kelaey lucidly explains the key aspects of the subject. And as he says, most simple squeezes play themselves. Usually, while you are cashing winners, you need to watch for only one key honor. If it hasn't appeared, try to run your other suit. Maybe an opponent has made the "wrong" discard.

The penultimate chapter is useful too, explaining how to defend against squeezes. Finally, there are 20 problems on which to test yourself.

Today's deal from the book gives you an idea of what to expect.

Against four hearts, West leads the spade nine. After winning with the king, most Easts would continue spades, hoping to promote a trump trick for West. But these defenders play as if they can see through the backs of the cards. At trick two, East switches to a trump.

West ducking your king, you lead another spade, but East wins and returns his second heart. West winning and playing a third round, killing the spade ruff in the dummy.

Now it looks as though you need the club finesse to work. But is that a realistic hope? Remember, East opened the bidding. He must have the club king. Instead, just run all your red-suit tricks, bringing everyone down to two cards. The dummy will have the A-Q of clubs; you will hold the spade 10 and club two. But what will East keep? He cannot retain both the spade ace and the K-x of clubs. He has been squeezed.
