O EXPAND the telephone system to meet the greater needs of the South, requires a continuous flow of new money to build additional plant; and greater revenue to pay the cost of rendering the more extensive service.

This year the growth of the business in Florida, alone, will require additions and replacements costing approximately $9,500,000. This money must be secured from investors, and the company's earning capacity must be sufficient to make the investment attractive.

This rapid expansion is causing the investment per telephone to increase steadily and the revenue per telephone station must be maintained at a proper level, to insure the flow of new capital.

Economical management and efficient workers have kept the operating expenses at a minimum. and today your dollar buys more and better telephone service than ever before.

The problem of maintaining a proper margin between expense and revenue is one of equal concern to the telephone user and the telephone company. Its solution depends largely upon your appreciation of its importance.

THE BACKBONE OF A PROSPEROUS COMMUNITY

Villages, towns and cities are invariably judged by the prosperity of their merchants, by the prominent part they take in civic affairs and by the confidence in the city as displayed by their investments.

With the prosperous merchant in evidence on every hand, so, too, will be found a prosperous people. With the community reputation largely dependent upon the merchant, he in turn is dependent upon the citizens of that community. His problems are your problems, his success your success. Your trade should be his trade.

Sanford merchants have supported and fought for every move designed and executed for the solid and substantial growth of the city. In return they deserve the whole-hearted support of the people of this community.

appeared to be Sarazuta's game taking two of the three games played with the Gulls on this visit, by a score of 7 to 6.

It was one of the most ragged games seen here this season, all hurlers being hit more or less freely and both teams contributing in the error column. Only Stanton for the visitors failed to get a hit, while Denicke got two, one for an extra base, and Tanner three, one being a two bagger, and one a three bagger. For the Gulls, more than half of the team made hits, Manush geting two. Turner of the Gulls also had a two base rap
