TODAY

Escaped prisoner caught

Donna Lynn Davis, 28, who had been arrested Monday near Altamonte Springs and later escaped while handcuffed in a Seminole County deputy's car, was found Thursday hiding in a house on Shell Lane in Lake Mary, according to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough. Davis was arrested and charged with one count each of escape and possession of drug paraphernalia. She is being held on a $56,000 bond in the Seminole County jail.

Florida in top 20

Eight of Florida's metropolitan areas ranked in the Top 20 in Money magazine's 1997 "Best Places to Live" survey. Three of the areas made the Top 10 list and they are Punta Gorda (4), Jacksonville (9), and Fort Walton Beach (10). Orlando ranked 18th. Key criteria in the survey included low crime, clean water and air, good schools and inexpensive living. All 20 of the state's metro areas ranked in the top 100.

Batgirl in town

Yvonne Craig, the actress who played Batgirl in the 1960s television series, Batman, will make an appearance Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Target store in Lake Mary.

Oviedo car festival

The Old Downtown Development Group of Oviedo will host a summer car festival Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The festival will include music from the 1950s and 60s, a rain gutter regatta, pine wood derby, prizes and food. Antique and custom designed cars will be on display on site at the crossroads of State road 434 and Central Avenue, State road 426, Geneva Drive and Railroad Street.

For information, call Rick Burns or Tom Snow at 365-1036.

Lake Mary zoning meeting

The Lake Mary Planning and Zoning Board will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. at city hall, 100 N. Country Club Rd. Included in the agenda will be a site plan review of WKCF TV 18 stations located on the west side of Skyline Drive, east of I-4. Applicant is Amdev Corp.

For information, call 324-3049.

County commissioners to meet

The Seminole County Commissioners board will meet Tuesday starting at 9:30 a.m. at the county services building, 1101 East First Street, Sanford. Public hearings will begin at 7 p.m. and will include discussion on ordinances regarding the regulation of alcoholic beverage establishments, public nudity, and adult entertainment establishments.

Volunteers, donations needed

The Children's Home Society, 111 North Oak Ave., Sanford is seeking volunteers to work with young mothers to offer support and encouragement. The society also needs donations of cribs, bassinets, strollers, and infant clothing and furniture. Donations are tax deductible. The society perinatal program offers support and parenting education for pregnant teenagers and first-time mothers.

Sanford has hosted a fireworks display all but one year over the past several years.

Sanford's grandest party ever

July 4 Big Bang expected to attract 30,000

By RUSS WHITE
Herald Staff Writer

Our Town Sanford is preparing for its grandest ever Fourth of July celebration with a music/fireworks spectacular. Officials expect 30,000 to attend.

Downtown Sanford Main Street Inc. is partnering the event with MIX 106.1 and COOL 105.9. Central Florida F.M. stations which will broadcast from Ft. Mellon Park beginning at 5:30 p.m. on Friday, July 4.

The fireworks go off at 9:30 p.m. Main Street Program Director Jennifer Singeisen said today that arrangements also have been made with Seminole Towne Center to provide parking. Shuttle buses will operate from the center to First and Park. There is a $3 round trip bus charge.

Local merchants are planning a sidewalk sale, and the Ritz Theatre will have a production of the musical comedy Nunsense.

"Everyone is into this year's celebration," Singeisen. "The county has contributed and Mayor Larry Dale has been very helpful and vowed the city's full support. We expect it's going to be the biggest and best Fourth the town has had in many years. I don't know what went on way back - but there's been nothing in recent years to match what's on tap."

Sanford has had July 4 fireworks celebrations in all but one year following the conclusion of World War II. Three years ago no one stopped fireworks in Sanford or anywhere else in the county the previous year's show that it would be his last as organizer. The following year, civic activist

Adult hearings may be split over 2 days

By RUSS WHITE
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County Board of Commissioners Chairman Randy Morris sent a memo to his fellow commissioners today suggesting that the BCC carry over its public hearings concerning ordinances on public nudity and adult entertainment from Tuesday to Wednesday night next week.

"My suggestion is that we go from 7 p.m. to no later than 11 p.m. on Tuesday night, and come back to make the commission decisions Wednesday evening," Morris said.

Morris is concerned about the board making decisions at 2 a.m., the results of which would not be known for another day by the public.

Warning: Avoid bank account number scam

From Staff Reports

TALLAHASSEE--Florida Agriculture and Consumer Services Commissioner Bob Crawford today urged consumers to avoid being victimized by a scam that promises up to $10 million in return for your bank account number.

More than 50 Florida residents have reported being offered the deal, and Crawford believes that hundreds more undoubtedly have been approached by those perpetrating the alleged scam.

To date, Crawford's Consumer Services Division, which takes complaints and handles telephone inquiries on a variety of scams, has no evidence that any Floridian has fallen for the bogus offer.

"Never share your bank account number with someone offering you a product or service," Crawford said. "If you do, they can raid your account before you know it."

The alleged scam hitting Florida in recent weeks involves a letter ostensibly from Nigerian businessmen who claim they must shelter $25 million or more in oil profits in a bank in the United States. The letter asks the recipient for his or her bank account number so they can deposit the funds in the account and promises to share up to a third of the money with the account holder.

Crawford's office has referred the scam to See Fraud, Page 5A

Confrontation ends peacefully

The Lake Mary Police Department surrounded the home on Country Club Road of a man who barricaded himself in. According to Lt. Dave Guildford, operations commander of the police department, on Thursday afternoon the man had an altercation with his mother and sister and then threatened to kill himself. The SWAT team entered the living room of the home and took the man, who was not armed and did not offer any resistance, into custody. The man was then taken to Columbia Medical Center in Sanford for a medical evaluation, Guildford said.

Filmmaker makes waves on festival front

By DAVID FRAZIER
Herald Staff Writer

Neil LaBute. Of course, you don't know him. But let me take this opportunity to introduce you. LaBute is a talented new filmmaker that has been making waves on the festival circuit with his movie, In the Company of Men, a cautionary, morality tale about corporate predators.

The film has been causing quite a stir sparking discussions and debates about the themes covered. It is a nearly brilliant film that connects with its audience through its characters.

LaBute will attend the sixth annual Florida Film Festival to promote his feature tonight at the Annie Russell Theater at Rollins College. In the Company of Men will begin at 9:30 p.m. However, I spoke to LaBute a week earlier from his home in Fort Wayne, Indiana. He is a vibrant man who indulged me with talk on his biting "dark comedy".

LaBute has been compared with the likes of playwright David Mamet. See LaBute, Page 5A

St. Johns River seeks national designation

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

The St. Johns River has been an integral part of the Central Florida community since people began moving southward.

Today, the river is more a recreational venue than a transportation thoroughfare. It has nonetheless not diminished in importance.

Pres. Bill Clinton will soon be selecting 10 rivers throughout the country to be designated as American Heritage Rivers.

The St. Johns River is a great Florida waterway, supporters of the river said. It is central to the life of the communities along its shores.

Clinton is expected to announce this fall which among America's rivers are to be given the designation of American Heritage Rivers.

Those rivers which earn that designation will enjoy preferential treatment when it comes to programs, grants and technical assistance. They'll have a better chance of getting federal dollars for economic development, for historic preservation and for environmental protection and restoration.

Federal permitting programs will be streamlined to promote local visions of cultural, economic and environmental projects along the rivers that get the heritage river designation.

"We could get federal 'talent' to help with projects," Bill Graf, a spokesman for the St. Johns River Water Management District. In addition, American Heritage River communities will have complete access to the national database of work and academic study to help guide local decisions.

Graf said the best part of the federal designation is that the local vision remains central to the plans made for the river.

Meetings will be held along the river to talk to invited community leaders to find out what they want to see happen to the river.

Graf said the vision can include preservation and maintenance of the communities' cultural heritage, as well as economic well-being.

Each meeting is expected to produce a vision of how the river will help the communities will prosper economically, culturally and recreationally, while maintaining the environmental qualities.

Graf said the communities surrounding the river will need to show their support for the desired designation as an American Heritage River.

The St. Johns River Water Management District is accepting letters of support through both their website and their Palatka post office box.

"We want to get these together by the end of the month so we can send them with the whole package to Washington," Graf explained.

At their website (http://sjr.stat.fl.us/new/ahr_docs.html), the St. Johns River Water Management District can provide a template for letters which can be instantaneously e-mailed to them or one can download the letter (or create their own) and mail it to American Heritage River, c/o SJRWMD, P.O. Box 1429, Palatka FL 32178-1429.

Howl at the (full) moon to night

It is going to be an odd day. The moon is full tonight and, legend has it, that means that all that is strange and unusual will occur under the light of the silvery sphere.

The moon will actually be at its fullest at 3:09 p.m., but you won't see it then, I guess.

Meanwhile, though, in Fairbanks, Alaska, the moon isn't full. The sun will still be shining when the players take the field in the Midnight Sun Baseball Game.

To celebrate the Summer Solstice, an annual baseball game is played without artificial lights beginning at 10:35 p.m.

About 4,000 people are expected to attend this unusual game.

In Sioux City, Iowa this is the start of Waterfest Weekend.

This celebration on the riverfront includes hot air balloon races, water ski exhibitions, live bands, a car show, a volleyball tournament and a street hockey tournament.

Today is...

More than 5,000 people are expected to attend the event over this weekend.

In Guthrie, Okla., they're celebrating the Sand Plum Festival. The event celebrates the ripening of the Sand Plum, which has been used in traditional Victorian cooking since the turn of the century.

Approximately 10,000 people are expected to take part in the juried art exhibit, the bed races, the live entertainment, the children's activities and the parade.

In Dartmouth, Nova Scotia,

there will be a celebration of multiculturalism.

In nine tents, more than 40,000 people are expected to find performers, live bands, beer, children's activities and exhibits.

The event is held annually on the third weekend in June.

And, just where you wouldn't expect them to back into the water, mermaids will return to North Webster, Ind.

There will be a carnival and a parade designed to celebrate the mermaid. More than 100,000 people are expected to take part in the unusual event.

The DARE program will be the beneficiary of an SCCA-sponsored tournament in Gorham, N.H.

The Mount Washington Sportscar Hillclimb (The Climb to the Clouds) is the country's oldest such race. It has been run annually since 1904.

About 7,000 people will be on hand to watch the race.

It's a big day in West Vir-gini.

This is the state's birthday and there are several celebrations to commemorate the state's admission into the union on June 20, 1863. West Virginia was the 35th state admitted to the United States.

There will be a birthday celebration in Wheeling with music, exhibitions and birthday cake.

In Huntington, there will be live entertainment, free birthday cake, wagon rides, jugglers, dunking booths, food crafts and much more.

Among the rich and famous who are celebrating their own birthdays are actor Danny Aiello, who is 64; musician Chet Atkins is 73; actress Olympia Dukakis is 66; actor Martin Landau is also 66; singer Cindy "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun" Lauper is 44; singer Ann Murray is 52; and singer Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys is 55.

Oviedo sailor: part of the first line of defense

Special to the Herald

Having U.S. naval forces permanently based overseas allows the United States Navy to quickly respond to a multitude of crises around the world. Whether a mission is humanitarian or combat, these forward deployed ships and Sailors can be on scene in a moment's notice.

Recently, Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Mario M. Faria, the 25-year-old grandson of William and Lucy Ferrer of Oviedo, demonstrated the speed in which the Navy can react to an overseas crisis during a training exercise in the South Pacific.

Stationed on the aircraft carrier USS Independence, Faria and the crew deployed from their home base in Japan, and within only a few days joined other U.S. and Australian military units in exercise Tandem Thrust. This massive exercise, which involved more than 28,000 Sailors and Marines, was held in and off the coast of northeastern Australia.

The 80,000 ton Independence is homeported in Yokosuka, Japan, 35 miles south of Tokyo. Faria realizes the importance of being based overseas as well as participating in exercises like Tandem Thrust.

"A forward-deployed carrier battle group is important because it projects world power from open sea lanes, and being forward deployed allows us to respond to any major real-world problem in a matter of days," said Faria. Faria, a hospital corpsman, assists Navy doctors and tends to the health care of the ship's crew. Tandem Thrust demonstrated the ability of the U.S.

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Mario M. Faria at work.

Navy to work with their Australian counterparts in a major naval exercise. The month-long exercise also gave each naval service a chance to see different operating procedures and techniques.

"During Tandem Thrust, the United States and Australia showed that we can work as a team if the time was needed in a real-world crisis," said Faria. "I think it is important for me and the ship to participate in these types of exercises because it allows us to project world power to keep the sea lanes open. It also shows that we can support allied countries in times of need."

Today, U.S. naval battle groups are on station from the Western Pacific and the Arabian Gulf to the Mediterranean Sea. Carriers like the Independence, with more than 80 aircraft and 5,000 Sailors, serve as a deterrent to potential aggressors and can respond on short notice to any crisis around the world.

While exercises like Tandem Thrust keep Faria busy he enjoys being in the Navy and still has some goals to accomplish.

"My short-term goals are to get qualified as an enlisted surface warfare specialist. My long term goals are to finish up my college degree and receive a commission in the Navy medical field. I also want to be the best leader I can possibly be and to be the best husband and father to my wife and our baby due in August," said Faria, a four-year Navy veteran.

The ability to work hand-in-hand with foreign military forces allows the naval service to conduct successful joint operations. Being forward deployed ensures that if and when a situation arises, the Navy and its allies will be able to rapidly project power and take decisive action against any potential adversary.

Concert of Prayer should draw crowds to Sanford

From Staff Reports

The Central Florida area "Concert of Prayer" for the month of June will be held on Saturday, June 21st, at Fort Mellon Park, on the shores of Lake Monroe in the heart of downtown Sanford. The "Concert of Prayer", which begins at 7 p.m., will be held as a conclusion to "Celebrate Sanford Day", a community wide interactive day with a job fair, music, ministry, and special speakers from the business, church and governmental sectors.

"Celebrate Sanford Day" will be encouraging unity and cooperation to restore our city, and build stronger homes, and businesses. It will take place between the hours of 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and will lead up to the "COP" at 7 o'clock. "Celebrate Sanford Day" is sponsored by Men in Action and Christian Help. For information on how your business or ministry can participate, please call Paul Benjamin at 696-4888.

At the COP, we will pray that the pastors in this city will begin to really know each other. Pray together. Then bring their congregation's together in a visible manifestation of the unity of the body of Christ. When pastors and intercessors begin to worship together in any community, the power of the spirit causes a mighty move of

Prayer is the focus of concert in Sanford

God, lives are changed, communities are healed, and it affects us all.

The "Concert of Prayer" will bring together those of many races, cultures, and denominations to pray for each individual area of our city, particularly lifting up the unity of the families in the Sanford community, and those of every generation, (male and female, black, white, Hispanic and others) who make up that population. "No more walls...everyone working together" to make Sanford the safe, sound city that it should be.

Please come out and join us

Online porn lands man in jail

From Staff Reports

Thirty-five year old Ronald Kevin Earheart of 135 West Magnolia Avenue in Howey-In-The-Hills, Florida was arrested during the early morning hours Thursday morning by Special Agents from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) after FDLE received information that Earheart was taking pornographic pictures of an adult male performing sexual acts on an adolescent girl and then transmitting those photographs via computer Online services.

Agents from the FBI's Operation Innocent Images Task Force in Baltimore contacted FDLE late yesterday with information they received that a man, going by the name of "Kevin" and believed to be living in the Howey-In-The-Hills area, was using OnLine services to solicit and transmit child pornography. Further information indicated that "Kevin" was in fact taking pictures of himself performing sexual acts on a girl under the age of ten and then forwarding those pictures via his computer to another pedophile in an attempt to arrange a meeting between the child and the pedophile.

After receiving this information from the Federal Bureau of Investigations, FDLE Special Agent Doug Rehman, who specializes in apprehending "online Pedophiles" and is FDLE's representative to the Operation Innocent Images Task Force, immediately began trying to identify "Kevin". With information received from the FBI, SA Rehman was able to line

"Kevin" to Ronald Earheart. A search warrant served on Earheart's residence uncovered hundreds of pieces of evidence. Earheart has been charged with eight counts of capital sexual battery and numerous charges of child pornography, including production of child pornography. He is being held at the Lake County Jail.

FDLE was assisted by Lake County Sheriff's Office, Howey-In-The-Hills Police Department, Orlando Police Department, Ocala FBI and Baltimore FBI.

Pursuant to Florida Statute 119.07(3)(f) FDLE cannot release any information that would identify the victim or the victim's relationship to Earheart.

FDLE is concerned that there may be other victims. Anyone with information concerning Ronald Kevin Earheart, DOB 4/3/62, should contact the Florida Department of Law Enforcement at (407)245-0801.

Preparing your pet for disasters

From Staff Reports

The best way to protect your family from the devastating effects of a disaster is to have a disaster plan. If you are a pet owner, that plan must include your pets. Our pets enrich our lives in more ways than we can count. In turn, they depend on us for their safety and well-being. The American Red Cross of Central Florida released the following tips for keeping pets prepared this hurricane season and for other disasters.

1. Have A Safe Place To Take Your Pets.

Whether the disaster is a hurricane or a hazardous spill, you may have to evacuate your home. During a disaster, if you must evacuate, the most important thing you can do to protect your pets is to evacuate them, too.

Due to state health and safety regulations, Red Cross shelters cannot accept pets during a disaster. Service animals who assist people with disabilities are an exception. It may be difficult, if not impossible, to find shelter for your animals in the midst of a disaster, so plan ahead. Do not wait until disaster strikes to research your options.

Contact hotels and motels outside your immediate area to check policies on accepting pets and restrictions on number, size and species. Ask if "no pet" policies could be waived during an emergency. Keep a list of "pet friendly" places, including phone numbers, with other disaster information and supplies. If you have notice of a pending disaster, call ahead for reservations.

Ask friends, relatives, or others outside the affected area whether they could shelter your animals. If you have more than one pet, they may be more comfortable if kept together, but be prepared to house them separately.

Prepare a list of boarding facilities and veterinarians who could shelter animals in an emergency. Include 24-hour phone numbers.

Ask local animal shelters if they provide emergency shelter or foster care for pets during disasters. Animal shelters may be overburdened caring for the animals they already have as well as those displaced by a disaster, so this should be your last resort.

2. Assemble A Portable Disaster Supplies Kit.

Whether you are away from home for a day or a week, you'll need essential supplies. Keep items in an accessible location and store them in sturdy containers that can be carried easily (duffel bags, covered trash containers, etc.) Your pet disaster supplies kit should include the following:

- Medications and medical records (stored in a waterproof container) and a first aid kit.
- Sturdy leashes, harnesses and/or carriers to transport pets safely and ensure that your animals can't escape.
- Current photos of your pets in case they get lost.
- Food, potable water, bowls, cat litter/pan and can opener.
- Information on feeding schedules, medical conditions, behavior problems and the name and phone number of your veterinarian in case you have to foster or board your pets.

• Pet beds and toys, if easily transportable.

3. Know What To Do When A Disaster Is Approaching.

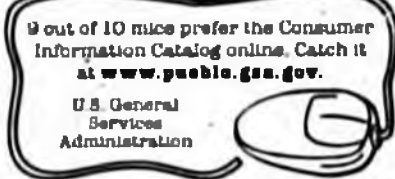

Often warnings are issued hours, even days in advance. At the first hint of disaster, act to protect your pet.

Call ahead to confirm emergency shelter arrangements for your pet. Check to be sure you have adequate pet supplies that are ready for transport at a moment's notice.

Make sure that all cats and dogs are wearing collars and securely fastened, up-to-date identification. Attach the phone number and address of your temporary shelter or of a friend or relative outside the disaster area. You can purchase temporary tags or put adhesive tape on the back of your pet's ID tag, adding information with an indelible pen.

Keep pets nearby so that you won't have to search for them if you have to leave in a hurry.

Remember, animals often react differently under stress. During any emergency, stay calm and offer gentle reassurance. Keep dogs securely leashed. Transport cats in carriers. Don't leave animals unattended where they might escape.

Save out sealife

The Save Our Sealife constitutional amendment is without question the most important marine fisheries reform in Florida history--and yet it now faces a potential threat from a little-known, and somewhat strange, source.

A newly appointed Constitution Revision Commission has begun a word-for-word review of the Florida Constitution, wielding the power to place its proposed revisions on next year's general election ballot. No vote by the Legislature is needed, no petitions from citizens are necessary.

The Revision Commission, which under the present constitution is to visit our state every 20 years like some sort of comet, can directly propose whatever changes it wants. That could include wiping out the historic net-limit amendment adopted through a citizens initiative campaign that won 72 percent approval of the voters in November 1994.

The potential threat to the netting amendment comes from a few legal scholars unfamiliar with the years of crises and failures of fisheries management that had caused citizens to launch the initiative as an emergency last resort. Some of these revisioners scoff at the idea of having net laws in the constitution rather than being regular statutes subject to annual changes.

It's a high-sounding, albeit naive, view. The truth is that achieving passage of such statutes before the last fish tangles his gills in nets the length of six football fields was well nigh impossible. The constitutional scholars should know that in the real world, where the legislative committee system reigns supreme, laws curbing special-interest exploitation typically never see the light of debate on the floor. In these cases, there are no free and open discussions by lawmakers as a whole.

The net-limit amendment campaign against over-exploitation took years of dogged grassroots work by conservation-oriented citizens, thousands of whom collected the 429,428 voter signatures required to get the issue on the ballot.

Since the amendment's effective date July 1, 1995, fish and other marine life have been making astounding comebacks in the absence of large-scale netting. The resurgence of our fisheries is truly amazing--and the best is yet to come as marine life expands further. Other states, and even countries, have now modeled similar campaigns on Florida's example.

Certainly, the Constitution Revision Commission should (1) learn and understand the background and importance of the net-limit provisions, and (2) carry forward into any proposed version the exact verbiage approved so recently by 72 percent of the voters. Change not a word, not a comma.

The come and go Comet Commission also plans to address the citizens initiative process in general, perhaps suggesting that it be made more difficult for the people to propose changes.

While some fine-tuning may be well and good, it's important to note that a false impression is being perpetuated, a claim that the constitution is now cluttered with dozens of voter-initiated changes. The truth is that of the more than 40 amendments adopted since 1968, only 10 have been citizen initiatives. The others, three-fourths of the total, have been placed on the ballot by the Legislature.

To be sure, numerous trial balloons are sent up every few years by various groups, but most fizzle out and faded away for lack of widespread support.

To sniff that the amendment process is "too easy" might remind one of a sedentary observer suggesting that people who finish the Boston marathon face but a cushy little trot in the park.

For those who waged the exhausting net-ban battles, that's a little trot we hope never to have to go through again.

The Save Our Sealife amendment not only is a good fit for the constitution, it has quickly become one of its most important and consequential policy mandates.

Who speaks for Asian-Americans?

President Clinton picked just the right audience for his big speech on affirmative action on June 14: the commencement ceremony at the University of California's San Diego campus.

The graduating students, all of whom were admitted to the university while racial preferences were still in force, applauded almost every sentence of his speech enthusiastically. Others who had applied and been rejected because of their skin color, even though their grades and SAT scores were higher than many of those accepted, weren't on hand to hear Mr. Clinton explain why discrimination against them was necessary.

Neither were the applicants for state jobs who were pushed aside to fill quotas for minorities less qualified. And no one there, you can be sure, gave a moment's thought to the businessmen whose low bids on government contracts were rejected in favor of higher bids by other businessmen lucky enough to belong to some favored minority.

It may seem harsh to refuse university admission to a black applicant merely because his academic qualifications are inadequate. Given the other disadvantages under which he (or she) usually labors, the impulse to help can be overwhelming. But we must remember that racial preferences are not a victimless crime: For every less qualified student admitted, a more qualified one must be turned away.

That is why I am utterly baffled by those alleged "spokesmen" for the Asian-American community who support affirmative action, especially in college admissions. For Asian-Americans are among those most unjustly discriminated against by affirmative-action policies.

Experience in California and elsewhere makes it clear that Asian-Americans are, on the average, the best students in our public institutions of higher learning -- better than blacks or Hispanics and, yes, better than whites. Whether this is owing to a superior genetic endowment, or stronger parental emphasis on the importance of study, or some other factor, the fact itself is indisputable.

For years, nevertheless, Asian-Americans were admitted under quotas that simply did not reflect their superiority. Only recently has this policy been modified, so that today the barriers are lower. But they still exist, and wherever more favored minorities are preferred thanks to "affirmative action," better qualified Asian-Americans are simply turned away.

This is bad enough, but the truth is that Asian-Americans are being very badly served indeed by liberals in their own community who insist on helping the Democratic Party play race politics, even when doing so means stepping in the faces of young Asian-Americans who have every right to expect their support -- or at least not their active opposition.

For example, Professor L. Ling-chi Wang of Berkeley scoffs at the model minority myth, in which Asian-Americans are portrayed as highly motivated and hardworking people.

Her mother seemed surprised by the answer.

Making memories with your children

Everybody (almost everybody?) agrees that mothers should be at home with their 2- and 3-year-olds during the day.

But Katie isn't 2 or 3. She is 16 years old and an 11th-grader in high school. Isn't she old enough to take care of herself when she comes home from school? Does her mother have to be there?

Let's ask Katie what she thinks. Her mother, a bank vice president who is gone from home from 7 every morning until 6 in the evening, put the question to Katie the other night as mother and daughter chatted.

"Do you mind coming home after school to an empty house?" the mother asked.

After a pause Katie replied, "I guess it would be nice if you were here."

Her mother seemed surprised by the answer. "But, Katie, you know that if you need me, I'll come home," she said. "You have my number at the office."

"Oh," answered Katie, "I don't need you. I just said it would be nice if you were here."

Everybody (almost everybody?) is beginning to see it's not the "quality" of the time we spend with our children (All time spent with a child is quality time), it's the quantity of time we spend that counts.

As columnist Dick Feagler said the other morning in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, "Kids want to know a parent is available. Not available to drive them to soccer practice or computer camp or gymnastics or baton-twirling -- but just to know they're there, somewhere around the house."

"Kids want parents around to respond to such non-quality issues as 'Ma, I cut my finger.' 'Can I have a peanut butter and jelly sandwich?' or 'Have you seen my baseball glove?' Such availability takes time."

It is the observations of people like Feagler and research from other sources that led Newsweek magazine to devote eight pages of a cover story on "The Myth of Quality Time: How We're Cheating Our Kids."

Appearing in the bookstores at the same time was "The Time Bind" by sociologist Arlie Hochschild. The sociologist's interviews with scores of women workers led her to conclude that American women "are not working because they have to but because they want to."

At work, "people have buddies, they carry on flirtations, their birthdays are celebrated." We work, in other words, because we like it better at work than at home.

Another survey of 250 children in several U.S. cities concluded that the ties between today's children and their parents are surprisingly weak. "Fewer children accompany their parents on chores and errands," the survey said.

Something else Feagler the columnist wrote brought back memories of my own bringing up.

"I remember helping my father do stuff," Feagler said. "Gimme the wrench," he would say. "Gimme the pliers."

We didn't go to Midas Muller in my boyhood days. My father was Midas and I was his assistant. "Gimme the wire-cutters," he would say.

When I would sometimes see him backing the Model A out of the driveway, I would stop him and ask where he was going. "Going to Rudy's," he would say. "Want to come along?"

I'd jump in and we would drive to Rudy.

Dump the silly little boxes

President Clinton cares deeply about the racial situation in America. Now he has presented us with a "major" speech and initiative about the issue. Clinton wants Americans to talk about race in the next year in a "candid national dialogue," replete with "town meetings." In order to come up with "concrete solutions" to make us "one America," a nation no longer divided white and black but the "world's first truly multiracial democracy."

Not a bad idea at all. But so far it seems like an exercise in race-based, politicized, hypocritical Clintonesque rooted in the view that a multiracial democracy comes about by getting Americans to check boxes about their race and by keeping score. The question is: Can something good come from the dialogue? A public tip-off about the whole deal occurred just before Clinton's address at the University of California at San Diego (UCSD). At a White House press briefing, the names of Clinton's "advisory board" were released. The board is commissioned "to help bridge the racial divide and propose actions to address critical areas such as education, economic opportunity, housing, health care, crime and the administration of justice." Big stuff.

What could be wrong with a candid national dialogue about big issues? Well, it turns out that all seven of Clinton's board members, plus the official "consultant" already march in lock-step to Clinton's pro-preference view of affirmative action, which is the central issue of the debate. A journalist asked White House briefer Sylvia Mathews (deputy chief of staff) this: "Why bother having that board if you've already decided that you want these people to support what you already believe?" After dithering, Mathews acknowledged the obvious: "The people that are mainly against affirmative action are not a part of the advisory board." Who might these people be who are mainly against affirmative action? An ABC-Washington Post poll recently asked: "Do you think blacks and other minorities should receive preference in college admissions to make up for past inequalities, or not?" Almost three-quarters of the respondents said no, including 81 percent of whites and 48 percent of blacks.

So it will be Clinton's pro-preference commissioners vs. three-quarters of the American people. Hnm ... Who will prevail when it comes to shaping the concrete solutions?

Clinton began his speech by parading members of his administration, heavily weighted toward appointees who are Filipino American, Puerto-Rican American, Mexican American, African American, Japanese American and female American. Clinton likes to say his team "looks like America." But do his appointees, taken as a totality, think like America?

Who might these people be who are mainly against affirmative action?

Clinton, the box-checking diversity-monger, repeatedly bragged about the great multiracial texture of the UCSD student audience. It turns out that 2 percent of the graduates were black, while California is 7 percent black; 34 percent were Asian in a state that is 10 percent Asian; 11 percent were Hispanic, vs. 28 percent of the state. That's diversity?

Clinton condemned California's passage last year of Proposition 209 and noted that it might "re-segregate" America, as evidenced by a decline in black and Latino admissions to UCLA, Berkeley and the University of Texas. "Re-segregation" is a strange, mean and inflammatory word for a president to toss around while trying to bring us all together.

What Clinton didn't mention was that if minority students have (probably temporary) difficulty in getting into the elite schools like Berkeley, they will end up one step down the food chain at the still very fine schools such as UCSD or Riverside, Davis, Santa Barbara, or in the Cal State system at places like Fullerton, San Francisco or San Jose, or in California's junior-college system.

Clinton used the much-headlined projection that by the year 2050, whites would no longer be the majority in America. But that is a long way from locked-in, depending on the number and composition of immigrants coming to America in decades to come.

And so it went. Slippery stuff. As a professional chatterer, I generally approve of professional chattering. But a dialogue presupposes at least two points of view, which are obviously not going to come from the president. Might it have been better to hold the dialogue and let nature take its course? After all, as Clinton correctly noted, "We are more integrated than ever. More of us share neighborhoods, work, school, social activities, religious life, even love and marriage across racial lines than ever before."

But talk is what we'll get. What it yields

Outstanding teens earn Lasertoma youth awards

From Staff Reports

Rebecca Torres, a recent graduate of Oviedo High School, was awarded the Greater Seminole Lasertoma 1996 Youth Service Award. Rebecca was honored for her work following the goal of Lasertoma, in service to mankind. In school, Rebecca sold the most environmental T-Shirts as part of a science project to raise money for clean-up along the St. Johns River and for protection of wildlife. She also participated in the first multi-cultural activity at Oviedo High School. An event that included dancing, sampling of multi-cultural foods, and displays of visual presentations from countries around the world.

"Through the years," she writes, "I have been involved in the community." At the annual Spanish Festival, Cinco de Mayo, she sold T-Shirts, balloons, pictures and painted clown faces on children. These efforts helped raise scholarship money for minorities. She also served in the Seminole County Teen Court Organization as a defense attorney. The purpose of this program is to have juvenile offenders tried and punished by their own peers. Defendants realize their own wrong doing and agree to never commit another crime of this or any sort. She states, she has never seen the same offenders back again.

This past school year, she volunteered at a local elementary school, tutoring children grades K-5 with their spelling, reading, mathematics, and computer skills. In high school, she actively participated in anti-drug campaigns.

"I am very proud of the activities I have participated in, both in school and community. These experiences have granted me the opportunity to work with others and has given me a sense of responsibility.

Jo Bush was awarded the Greater Seminole Lasertoma "Woman of the Year" award at the awards luncheon held on June 7, 1997, at the Rose Cottage Tea Room in Sanford. Joe was applauded for her dedication to Lasertoma, for her work on sponsorships, the telephone and sunshine committees, as well as, holding the office of first vice president. Joe also received her 500 hours service pin. In addition to all of her activities, Jo volunteers at the Meridian Nursing Home in Longwood.

Cynthia Miller, president, also awarded the other officers for a job well done in 1996-1997. Certificates were presented to Nancy Chenet, second vice president, Alice Jarrell, secretary, and Marilyn Armstrong, treasurer. Nancy was again commended for successfully chairing the Fashion Show and Luncheon Committee. This was Nancy's third year in heading up this popular event. The Fashion Show and Luncheon, held in May this year netted $2,400 which goes to fund Lasertoma projects such as awarding of scholarships, benefiting speech and hearing programs in Seminole County, sending children with hearing difficulties to Camp Endeavor and the Marie Taylor needy children's fund. Lasertoma also supports the Grove Counseling Center and the Lakewood Adult Care Center.

Alice Jarrell in turn presented Cynthia Miller, president, with a gift of butterfly earrings as a "thank you" for a successful year.

Joyce Cable received her past International Director's pin. Joyce is hoping to be elected as Lasertoma's International Secretary at the International Convention to be held in July in St. Louis, Missouri.

met in his writing style and his ability to capture realistic everyday dialogue. On his ability to pick up on office room jargon, LaBute said, "I'm a good listener. You have to get to know people and hear what they talk about." LaBute also worked in a computer company back in New York where he was able to observe a lot of mannerisms and situations that he reflects in his movies. Plus his father-in-law runs a company and his brother is the president of one so his ability to capture corporate America should come as no surprise.

LaBute's background is mostly in theater. He has written several plays -- some of which he may turn into movies. His influences was "restoration" comedy, especially, from France. He divides In the Company of Men into separate acts each one as good as the other.

LaBute says that he also tries to achieve a timely yet timeless effect to his films. "I want a film to be as timely 25 years from now as it is today," LaBute said. However, In the Company of Men --labeled as controversial by most festival goers-- should not be taken as hard fact about corporate America. "Movies function in the realm of possibility not like documentaries that function within fact," LaBute said.

LaBute's next project is called Levers, a film he describes as Carnal Knowledge and is about relationships. This young, bright filmmaker said that his style and subjects may scare away prospective studios, but that is how they are with Mamet. In the Company of Men, which is LaBute's directorial film debut, has already received the Filmmaker's Trophy from Sundance. If you were not so lucky to see his picture at the festival, make sure you see it where you can. LaBute is a talent to watch whether you agree with his vision or not.

How would he portray them? He doesn't say, but he calls on them to "join with others" in a multiracial coalition to defeat the forces of reaction.

Or consider a liberal front called Asian Pacific Americans for Affirmative Action, which during the campaign against California Proposition 209 had the gall to assert that "We need affirmative action so that people's qualifications, not stereotypes, are weighed" even though the very foundation of affirmative action is the disregard of qualifications in favor of skin color, to the detriment of Asian-Americans.

Asian-Americans would do better to listen to Lance T. Izumi, an Asian-American who is a senior fellow at the Pacific Research Institute. He warns: Empirical evidence demonstrates that Asian-Americans are clearly hurt by race-preference policies (at least in the university admissions area).

As matters stand, the best interests of Asian-Americans are being sold like sacks of potatoes by self-appointed spokesmen who are liberals first, Asians a distant second, and Americans last of all.

remains to be seen. Clinton can control his box checking side of the debate.

But will the national dialogue serve as a sounding board for anti-immigration advocates? It might, and one would hope from pro-immigration advocates as well. Ideally, it can serve as a podium for those of us who believe that a nondiscriminatory, nonpreference, colorblind policy is the way to go. Ward Connerly, a black businessman and a University of California regent who led the fight in favor of Prop 209, is starting a new organization called the American Civil Rights Institute (P.O. Box 188350, Sacramento, CA 95818).

Connerly would be wise to show up at every one of Clinton's town meetings. He has a pretty solid line to purvey: Americans are tired of checking those silly little boxes.

In Loving Memory Arthur Fernanzo "Son" Jackson

November 14, 1960 - June 20, 1996

We cherish the years of memories that you left us. In our hearts, since you went home to be with the Lord. We miss hearing your words of wisdom, and your loving kindness, caring for others, your smiles and laughter on your face, listening and talking, doing things with you. Alicia Silverstone as Batgirl, George Clooney as Batman and Chris O'Donnell as Robin in Warner Bros.' Batman and Robin, also starring Arnold Schwarzenegger and Uma Thurman.

Suiting up with Batman and his caped companions

Batman & Robin (PG-13): Michael Gough, who plays butler Alfred, and Pat Hingle, who plays Commissioner Gordon, are the veterans of all four Batman movies. In what has become a virtual "Who's Who in Hollywood?" series, Gough and Hingle have stood the test of time, character write-offs, Batman flings, megastar villains, changing directors and styles, sidekicks, and, count them, three Caped Crusaders!

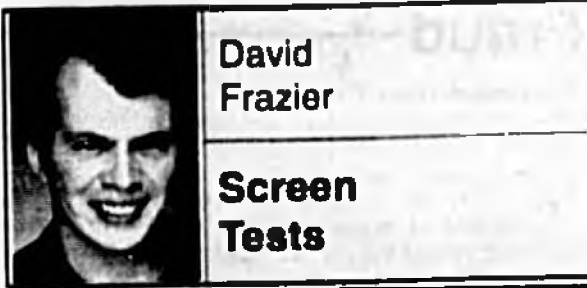

Batman & Robin is the fourth installment of the famed superhero cinema series, and what a franchise for Warner Bros. Studios. Joel Schumacher, in his second Batman effort, directs a new face in the role of the "batty" one. TV's ER star George Clooney suits up as Batman with Chris O'Donnell returning as the Boy Wonder to save Gotham from a trio of nuisances. Arnold Schwarzenegger amusingly plays Mr. Freeze, an icy foe that wants to turn Gotham into a polar cap. He is joined by Uma Thurman as Poison Ivy, a "di-vine" she-devil with a kiss to die for. Along with her is blown up, big man Bane, played by pro wrestler Jeep Swenson. The dynamic duo, along with new sidekick Batgirl (Alicia Silverstone), begins to fill Gotham and Ivy's scheme to turn the earth into a floral icebox.

Batman & Robin is an exercise in excess. Schumacher floods the sets with flamboyancy that would make his Batman Forever as drab as the grittier Tim Burton Batman movies. The film is liberal fauvism, a chaotic kaleidoscope of colors that will send your eyes into a tailspin.

Batman & Robin is lighter with Schumacher and screenwriter Akiva Goldsman, both worked on Batman Forever, throwing more comedy into the mix. Schumacher's Batman movies, which borders on the same campiness of the 60's television series, are an obvious departure from the Burton films. There are even these more noticeable animated sound effects that seem pretty silly. Not quite as silly as a sequence where Schwarzenegger's Freeze leads his henchmen in a chorus of song from one of those old stop-motion Christmas specials. During this sing-along, we notice that Freeze is wearing these corny polar bear slippers. Arnold wearing polar bear slippers?

However, truth be known, I liked the movie. Batman & Robin is full of wonderful spirit even if it is a little silly. You could say that Schumacher brings a more comic book look and feel back to the series. It takes some getting used to, but I eventually came around.

Clooney is no Michael Keaton, but neither was Val Kilmer. With his swaggering head and sly smile, he lifts Bruce Wayne/Batman into more endearing characters. Yet Clooney's debut as the bat is shadowed by the performance of Schwarzenegger, who has a lot of fun as the Popsicle Freeze. O'Donnell retains a boyish charm as Robin. But watch out for the ladies! Silverstone (Clueless) is striking as the stubborn, head-strong and stimulating girl Bat. And, oh my, Uma Thurman (Pulp Fiction) stazes as a Mae West like villain with eyes that will turn guys into a melting pile of hormones -- no alienation intended to female readers; I'm sure you'll be able to enjoy the performance as well. And as "stunning" as the performance is, the sure can't carry a note (so to speak) as Bruce Wayne's love interest.

David Frazier

Screen Tests

If I had to gauge this Batman among the others, I would have to say this is the weakest one. But I still had a good time. Maybe this is a good ending point for the series I mean. Three stars (out of four).

IN BRIEF

Wrestling at Civic Center

SANFORD — The Independent Order of Foresters (IOF) and Southeastern Championship Wrestling present an evening of wrestling matches for the benefit of Luis Vidal of Deltona. Mr. Vidal is confined to a wheel chair and is unable to speak. The I.O.F. would like to raise funds to purchase a computer system enabling him to communicate with others and pursue a self supporting career in journalism.

The matches will be held on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Sanford Civic Center.

There will be a double main event with Jim "The Anvil" Niedhart taking on Death Row and "Leaping" Lanny Poffo, with manager Angelo Poffo, facing Bruce "The Rockin' Hillbilly."

Tickets are $7 for ringside and $5 for general admission.

"Life Can Be Sweet" run

DeBARY — "Life Can Be Sweet," a 5-K charity run and fitness walk to benefit the Volusia Medical Center's Diabetes Outreach Program in DeBary, will be held at DeBary Golf and Country Club on June 22nd starting at 7:30 a.m.

The Road Runners of America Club-sanctioned event costs $17 to enter and will award more than 20 prizes in 18 categories, including Clydesdales (runners weighing in at more than 190-pounds) and children aged 11 and under. Dozens of volunteers will be manning refreshment tables along the route and T-shirts will be provided for all runners.

Interested participants should contact Altavista Sports in DeLand (904) 736-0002, or DeBary Golf and Country Club Sales Office (800) 246-5344.

DeBary Golf and Country Club is located on U.S. 17-92 in DeBary, one-half mile south of Saxon Boulevard.

Summer School Hockey Camp

SANFORD — Coach Roy McKinley will conduct an in-line hockey camp for the young player at Central Florida Skate and Sport, 2720 West 25th Street (330-7909).

The camp will be June 23-27 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. and is for players between the ages of eight and 12.

Every player must be a league player, a member of USA In-Line and have minimum required equipment.

Each day of the camp a separate skill (passing, shooting, skating, positioning, stickhandling) will be covered. Every player will receive a certificate for each skill mastered. In addition, each player will receive a trophy at the conclusion of the camp.

Cost is $80 and includes rink time, instructors and trophies.

For more details, call Roy McKinley at 574-6520 (H) or 899-4886 (Beeper).

LM 3-on-3 Basketball Tourney

LAKE MARY — The event will be June 27-29 at Lake Mary High School for players (both boys and girls) aged 10-16, as of January 1, 1997.

Age divisions are: girls (10-11, 12-13, 14-16) and boys (10-12, 13-14, 15-16).

Cost is $60 per team or $15 per player and all players must have a signed parent consent form.

Tournament highlights include — T-shirts for each tournament participant; individual trophies for top two finishing teams in each division; 3-point shooting contest; free throw contest; three games guaranteed; four players per team.

To obtain a registration form, call 324-5286.

NSA Church State tourney

PALATKA — The National Softball Association (NSA) will hold a State Softball Championship for Church Competitive and Recreational division teams on June 27-28 in Palatka at Triangle Park.

Entry fee will be $200 per team with a sanction fee of $20.

For information contact Richard Goodwin at (904) 328-9382 or Barry Williams at (904) 325-4942.

SCC Basketball Camp

SANFORD — Seminole Community College head basketball coach Ken Patrick will hold a camp for players ages seven-to-14 (both boys and girls).

The camp will be from June 23-27 and will go from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily.

The camp will be held in the air-conditioned Health and Physical Education Building and will be under the direction of Johnny Carlsson, who has 10 years of international coaching experience.

A quality staff of college and high school players will put the campers through their paces with a special emphasis on shooting techniques, individual offensive moves, passing and dribbling skills, individual defensive fundamentals and the playing of games.

There will also be NCAA Division I coaches Lynn Bria (University of Central Florida) and John Hughes (University of South Florida) as guest speakers.

Cost is $99 session, with lunch available for $3 per day or ala carte.

Longwood no hits Sanford; Grt. Seminole whips Flagler

By COURTNEY LEFFEW
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Longwood and Greater Seminole quickly established themselves as the teams to beat Thursday evening as they both posted impressive wins on the opening night of play in the Babe Ruth Baseball Bambino Major A District 7 Tournament at Roy Holler Junior Field.

Christian Rosado and Vibert Rodriguez combined on a no-hitter, striking out seven and walking two, as the Longwood All-Stars dumped host Sanford 12-1 in four innings, while Greater Seminole, from the Oviedo/Winter Springs area, got a two-hit, 10 strike out performance from a trio of pitchers as it blanked the Flagler All-Stars (from Bunnell) 11-0 in five innings.

All four teams will be in action again tonight at 6 p.m. with the Longwood taking on Greater Seminole at Roy Holler Field and Sanford facing Flagler at Lakeside Field.

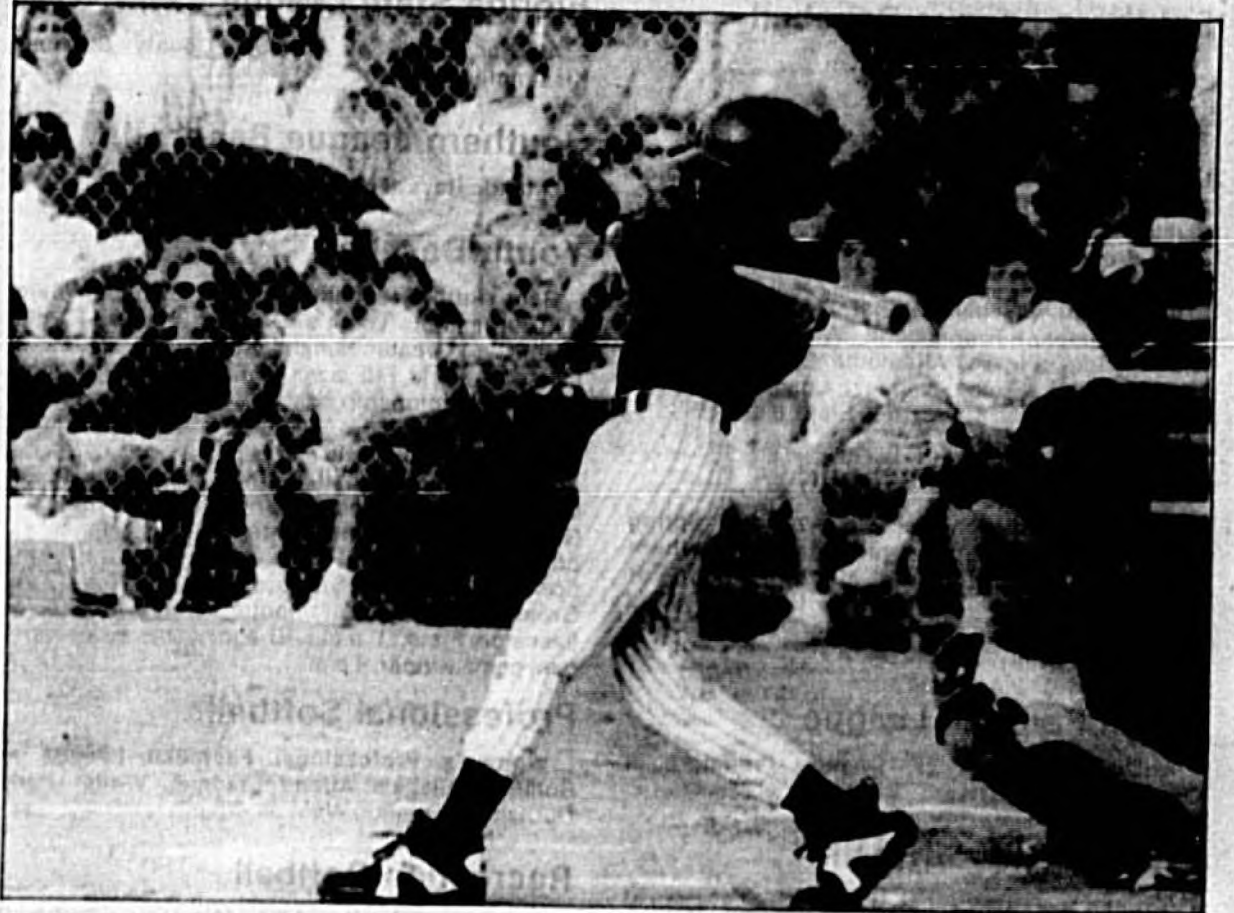

The Loser's Bracket championship game will be held on Lakeside Field at 10 a.m. on Saturday with the winner of that game taking on the remaining undefeated team at 1 p.m. on Roy Holler Field in what could be the championship game.

If after the 1 p.m. Saturday game both teams have one loss, the winner-take-all game would be contested at 1 p.m. on Sunday at Roy Holler Field.

The winner of this tournament will advance to the Area Tournament in Winter Haven starting on Friday, June 27th.

Seminole County is already assured of having at least one team at the World Series as the Altamonte Springs squad will be the host team at the series that will be held at Eastmonte Park starting on August the ninth.

with a single and scored one out later ahead of a home run by Rosado.

That was only the beginning as Longwood tacked on three more runs before the inning was over and, after Reggie Campbell walked and scored for Sanford in the bottom of the first inning, the visitors got back-to-back home runs from C.J. Clemans (a two-run shot) and Rosado and plated another run to make the score 9-1.

Despite the loss, Sanford manager Jeff Deen was not giving up.

"If we focus on just playing better we'll be in the game. We have very good athletes that need to come together as a team," said Deen. "Longwood is a very good team and we had too many errors. We've been together a short time and have only had about 10 practices, which we fought rain and

Greater Seminole, Longwood win Major Commish openers

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Greater Seminole and Longwood both survived tough opening round games as the Florida Babe Ruth Baseball Bambino Major Commissioner's District 7 Tournament got started at Lakeside Field Thursday.

Scott Logsdon only allowed two hits and three base runners as Greater Seminole, from the Oviedo/Winter Springs area, shutout host Sanford 5-0. Logsdon struck out five and got 10 ground ball outs.

Daniel App singled in the first inning and Ben Hill singled in the fifth inning for Sanford, but both were stranded on first base. Sanford's best chance to score came in the bottom of the sixth inning as Steve Bacak walked and pinch-runner Antwain Bell got as far as third base.

Insurance that you don't need

1. Cancer Insurance. Some companies offer a person age 50, for example, up to $200,000 of cancer health care for only $13.95 per month. Benefits include $100 a day for the first seven days in the hospital. Customers under age 70 who remain cancer free get all of their premiums back every ten years. How can an insurer afford to do that? Consumers overpay for protection according to Robert Hunter, director of insurance for the Consumer Federation of America. Kiplinger's suggestion: "Stick with comprehensive health care coverage and invest any extra money yourself."

2. Flight Insurance. Plane crashes do get our attention, but most people already have adequate life insurance. The airlines are all insured and tickets purchased with an American Express card automatically gives you at $100,000 worth of coverage. Kiplinger's suggestion: "Skip the insurance and the airplane food, and buy a good lunch."

3. Free Accident Insurance. The initial coverage of a $1,000 worth of accidental-death and dismemberment. Sure its free, but the insurance company wants very much to sell you additional insurance. In $10,000 chunks. Ordinary term life insurance covers almost all events and is not much more expensive. Kiplinger's suggestion: "Take the freebie if you wish, but assume the quid pro quo will be endless free junk mail."

4. Free Accident Insurance. $200,000 worth of accidental-death coverage free for two months. Afterwards it is about $100 per year. For your heirs to collect, you must die in an accident while you are a fare paying passenger in an airplane, taxi, train, or bus. Kiplinger's suggestion: "Ask yourself if two free months is worth the effort of signing the application."

5. Disaster Protection for your mortgage. If you are ousted by flood or other disaster, the insurance cost is typically about $12.50 per $1,000 of mortgage payment. Sounds good, but more than likely it is duplicative coverage to your homeowners policy. Standard homeowners coverage will cover rebuilding costs. Kiplinger's suggestion: "Assume you will pay the mortgage yourself and check the homeowners for living expense coverage."

Keep your mouth shut, Mother

Dear Mary,

When I was raising my family, I stayed with my husband even though he was an alcoholic and cheated on me for 20 years, because he was a good dad and loved the kids. When the kids grew up and got married, I divorced him and I've had the best 10 years of my life since then.

What bothers me is that both of my sons-in-law remind me so much of my ex-husband. It makes me want to cry. The good news is that they are really great with their kids, but the bad news is that one of them rules the house with an iron hand and the other one is a workaholic. If I was a betting woman, I'd bet that the son-in-law who rules the house is in the early stages of alcoholism right now and will be cheating on his sweet wife within the next few years. The other son-in-law works 80 to 90 hours a week, works out at a gym about 10 hours a week, then likes to pursue his race car hobby in his "spare" time. He's a good husband and father when he's home, but I think being a good spouse and father involves more than a few hours of "quality" time each week.

Should I say something to my daughters about what I've noticed? I don't want to be a meddling mother-in-law, but I also hate to see my daughters go through what I went through.

To Meddle or Not

Dear To Meddle,

Keep your mouth shut! If you are right in your observations, your daughters will deal with their problems in the way they feel is best, just as you did. "Warning" them will not change their husbands' behavior, but it will make you look like a wicked witch in everybody's eyes.

If and when your daughters ask you for help and support, be there for them in every way you can. They will appreciate it. But nobody likes to hear, "I told you so", or "I knew this would happen". By the way, you are right that young people often pick mates that have personality and/or character traits of their opposite sex parent. In your case, that's not

Separate checks may make diners happy, waiters sad

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I need your opinion about something that is puzzling my husband and me. When several couples go out for dinner together, is it rude to ask for separate checks?

We have been made to feel very cheap when we ask for separate checks, but there are times when we have paid half the bill when our portion should have been much less.

Please tell me how to handle this without causing embarrassment to anyone. There is also the matter of leaving a tip. Shouldn't each diner pay part of the tip?

We get a lot of dirty looks from servers when we ask for separate checks. Why?

LONGTIME READER IN MAINE

DEAR READER: There is nothing wrong with asking for separate checks, particularly if there is a great disparity in the drinking habits of the couples. That way, each diner can pay the proper portion of the tip.

You may be getting dirty looks from servers because it is more trouble for them to write separate checks than to make out just one.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to share the following story that both saddened and inspired me.

My mother died in October of 1995, and it had always been her wish to be cremated so that she could help the soil grow wildflowers. We spread her ashes in the family cemetery. The following winter and spring were extremely dry in Texas. Spring rain was practically nonexistent and we had none of the usual wildflowers that typically paint our fields and highways. Lakes were very low and many crops were ruined.

My parents had been happily married for 49 years and her death was devastating to my father. He visited the cemetery often.

In March, when Dad drove to the cemetery for a visit, he couldn't believe his eyes. The area where we had laid mother's ashes was covered with small blue wildflowers! He wept while gathering some of them. He didn't know what kind of flowers they were, so after returning home, he showed them to a knowledgeable friend who replied, "These are forget-me-nots!" Despite the drought, my mother's last wish had come true, and she certainly chose the appropriate flower to grow.

HER DAUGHTER,
FARMER'S BRANCH, TEXAS

DEAR DAUGHTER: How fitting that your mother got her wish, and how appropriate the symbolism of the flowers that greeted your father when he went to pay his respects to the memory of his beloved wife.

Save labels

SANFORD — Sanford Church of Christ, 1500 S. Park Ave., is working desperately to save Campbell soup, V-8 labels, Prego spaghetti, Pepperidge Farms, Vlasic and Swanson labels to purchase a church van. Members are short on funds so this alternative method can help provide transportation for youth activities, those unable to drive, running errands and visiting other church functions.

Anyone wishing to help with this effort please send labels to the church office at the above address at the zip code 32771 or call the church office at 322-7781.

Jeannette Stiffley will also pick up labels from those desiring to contribute. Please contact her at 322-8234. One million labels are necessary so much help is needed to make this goal a reality.

Mens Bible study

SANFORD — Each Monday at 7:30 p.m. Sanford Christian Church is conducting a Mens Bible study. Presently the study is looking into the seven steps outlined in Promise Keepers. The study is open to all men in the area.

Call 322-0980 for more information. The church is located at 730 Upsala Rd. in Sanford.

A universe with structure, order and chaos

By DR. WM (BOB) PARKER
1st BAPTIST MARKHAM WOODS

Dr. Wm. Robert (Bob) Parker

Recently, Paul Harvey spoke of the case of an English surgeon who was discovered as a carrier of AIDS for thirteen years. Five thousand patients of his who could have potentially contacted the disease were being recalled. Harvey also noted that a recent problem had arisen in Italy from a law which states "those with terminal disease cannot be put in jail." This brought a barrage of AIDS carriers to take up the practice of thievery. Surely, there is something about both of these events that is not kosher!

Every behavior, action, motivation and thought has a cause. There is conscious or unconscious design involved. Direction or lack of direction results in behavioral patterns. Behavior does not simply arise spontaneously in a vacuum. Behavior events are not without reason, cooperating forces and factors. "Branches must have roots. And though the roots are seldom seen, they determine the size and character of the branches." Granted, not everyone knows the "reasons" for behavior completely or even accurately. Perhaps, the surgeon kept his disease secret thinking he could practice medicine without infecting his patients? Those with AIDS may have reasoned - "I am dying anyway and that gives me the right to be a thief under the law?" Today, we label some behavior as a syndrome, but rightly it is a symptom of a deeper problem!

Speaking to chaos in a structured universe

When we think of the "fleeting of America" (waste of tax dollars) or the constant advertising of court trials dealing with bombings, murders, or crimes of a sexual nature-are there any real answers to this chaos? The answer lies in a foundation of order which describes a commitment to a system of wholesome values.

Introducing this value system in a case study

This case study might be called a day out of the life of the Biblical character of Joseph (Genesis 37, 39/50). Here is a man whose thinking and acting involves a strategy for survival. The life of Joseph powerfully demonstrates a clear-cut value system.

The Joseph story

Joseph was sold into slavery by his own brothers and bought by Potiphar an Egyptian. Potiphar was greatly impressed by Joseph's nobility of character. In fact, Joseph's "high" training that he received in his father's house and the favor of God which rested upon him was such that Potiphar entrusted him with all the affairs of his household. Joseph was sexually tempted by Potiphar's wife, but he rejected the allurements. However, Potiphar's wife, enraged by the rejection of Joseph, lied and falsely accused him which resulted in Joseph's imprisonment. Soon, however, his character triumphed in prison. The events which followed in his life brought him from the Bedouin Slave to become the Bedouin Prince. That which shaped and guided the whole course of Joseph's life from his Palestinian home was consummated in the words: "Inasmuch as thou art a man in whom is the spirit of God." From this, Pharaoh lifted Joseph-the slave-to Joseph the Prince and Prime Minister! This was incredible since Joseph was in no way-in line to be one of the "king's favorites."

The life of Joseph demonstrates three truths

1. He was convinced of being faithful to his master (Potiphar). Defined as responsibility.
2. He was convinced of being faithful to himself. Defined as personal integrity.
3. He was convinced that he must be faithful to God. Defined as obedience to God.

Joseph acted in this fashion not because he had too so nor because the allurements was not greatly inviting-but because he was committed to Divine values. Tragic as it may be-and crude as it may sound, we live in a society today filled with chaos, whose value system too often cannot tell the difference between Estee Lauder and sewer gas! Joseph could!

By the way, these principles of Joseph are still powerful today. Think about that!

Pastor speaks of vacation

SANFORD — It's that time again. School is out or soon will be, and millions of American families will be taking to the road to spend a few days or several weeks on summer vacations. What should have been a relaxing, invigorating family time will likely turn into an endurance contest with promises of "never again!"

Relaxing, rewarding vacations usually don't just happen, as you think about getting away this year, here are some suggestions that might help make it a better time.

1. Get away. It's very rewarding to get away from the ordinary routine. Visiting places build memories.

2. Plan your budget. Don't spend the rest of the year paying for your lack of control on vacation.

3. Don't forget to leave your home burglarized proof.

4. Don't forget to whom you belong. Remember you are Christ's ambassadors.

5. Don't forget to remember your church. Your financial gifts are important during the summer.

6. Relax and have fun. Plan your trip so that it will be enjoyable.

7. Come home a better person than when you went away.

Charter member, seniors honored

The Prime-Timers of First Baptist Church Markham Woods recently honored a charter member of their group - Mildred Tremel. The occasion was a luncheon at the Black-Eyed Pea in Longwood. For many years, Tremel was an active member of the group. Recognition was given for her devoted service to the church in preparing and overseeing the weekly Wednesday Church Dinners and in baking and furnishing all the cookies needed each year for summer Vacation Bible School. Attending the luncheon are: Bob Paschall (from left, upper photo), Roger Hurless, Mel Krumlauf, Blanche Hurless, Marvel Krumlauf, Liz Long, Pat Paschall, Mary Eula Holtzclaw, Joe Chambers Sr., Betty Chambers, Mildred Tremel, Rosita Lopez, Armanda Lopez.

Some of the same church members were recognized in a service honoring senior adults who have been married 50 years or more. These included Mel and Marvel Krumlauf (from left, lower photo), Roger and Blanche Hurless, Hubert and Cnll Pearce and Rosita and Armanda Lopez. The ladies received roses.

Worship is life-long commitment

SANFORD — To worship God is a lifelong commitment. We worship individually and we worship corporately. As we worship corporately we gather together as a family. We are not the audience, but rather God is the audience. The primary importance in worship is not what we do, but what God is doing.

In worship, we behold God in all His glory. Worship tells and acts out the life, death, resurrection and coming of Christ through the proclamation of the Word and the celebration of the Sacraments.

Rev. Bruce Scott

We bring our offerings of music and time and finances to present to God in obedient response and thankfulness. We listen to God's Word through Scripture and sermon. We pray.

Because of the physical architecture of our church, it is quite easy to find ourselves focusing on what is going on "up front." We can quickly fall into a spectator perspective and even an entertainment mentality.

Let us continue this Sunday to focus on God, turn our eyes upward, our thoughts inward, and focus on who God is. If we are moved to a worshipful response of applause, then let us applaud with our whole being. But if our desire to applaud is a response to good entertainment, then let us refrain.

Come and find your worth-ship in worship.

Is vitamin regimen too much?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 70 years old and need all the energy I can get. Consequently, I take the following vitamins: Centrum Silver, 500 milligrams of calcium, 1,000 units of vitamin E, 500 mg. of vitamin C, and 1,000 micrograms of vitamin B12. Am I overdoing it?

DEAR READER: Probably. A strong multivitamin/mineral product, such as Centrum Silver, will supply all the vitamins and minerals that you need. Of course, you're also obtaining many vital nutrients from your food, so even the Centrum may not be necessary.

Authorities recommend calcium supplements (1,000 to 1,500 mg. a day) for older men and post-menopausal women, to retard the rate of osteoporosis. Therefore, given your age, the calcium is a good idea.

Also, I see no harm in taking vitamin E, although I doubt that you need it.

Likewise, the amount of vitamin C you are taking won't harm you, but there is enough of this compound in the Centrum, so additional doses are unnecessary.

Finally, you can skip the B12 because it, too, is plentiful in food and is included in Centrum.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a black female without serious skin problems. However, for the past few months, I've noticed little pink spots that appear on different parts of my body. They are enlarging but aren't painful or swollen. Can I do anything to stop this?

DEAR READER: Painless, expanding areas of skin pigmentation are usually due to vitiligo, a common and harmless condition that affects people of all races.

Vitiligo has many causes, including Addison's disease (deficiency of the adrenal glands), diabetes, pernicious anemia, and thyroid disorders. In some people, the vitiligo is inherited.

In others, no cause can be identified.

You should be examined by a dermatologist and undergo blood tests in an effort to discover the cause of your skin affliction. Some forms of vitiligo are curable, for example, by using thyroid supplements for hypothyroidism.

However, in most instances, the therapy is cosmetic: creams or tanning lotions to camouflage the depigmented areas. Remember that because areas of vitiligo lack melanin (skin pigment), they can sunburn badly — even in persons with dark complexions. So if you're out in the bright sunshine, be sure to use a sunscreen on the exposed areas of vitiligo.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Why is it not safe to fly when you have a cold?

DEAR READER: During the cabin pressure changes when climbing or the increasing (external) pressure. It is more difficult for the air to enter the Eustachian tubes, especially when the tissue around the vents is swollen and inflamed. If the pressure cannot be equalized by swallowing hard or yawning, the ear drums are depressed inward, leading to pain and loss of hearing.

People with colds or upper-respiratory infections should delay flying to avoid this complication, called "barotitis."

If the trip is essential, however, such people can prevent barotitis by using a nasal spray (Afrin and others) that shrinks the tissues surrounding the Eustachian tubes, thereby allowing pressure-equalization to take place.

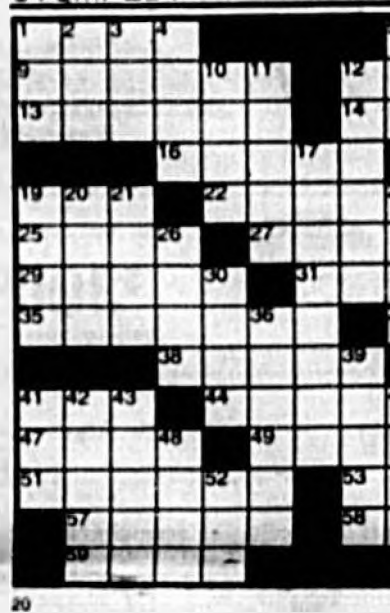

Although barotitis is uncomfortable, the condition usually resolves within several hours after touchdown.

Counting the cookies

By Phillip Alder

Children usually love to eat cookies. They visit and revisit the cookie jar, even when told not to by their parents. As a parent, though, how do you know when your child has had his fingers in the jar if he eats the cookie out of your sight? The only way, short of putting a lock on the jar, is to count the cookies regularly. Yet how many parents can be bothered to do that?

It's the same at the bridge table, of course. Most players cannot be bothered to count the cards. In this deal, how would you plan the play in four spades? West starts with three rounds of diamonds. East follows once, discards a low heart, and ruffs. Back comes a heart.

South was tempted to bid three no-trump over two spades, and when the dummy came down, he wished he had. But that could have been silly, especially if partner were short in diamonds.

South saw that he had to find the club queen to get home. Judging that the overcaller was more likely to have any missing honor, declarer drew trumps, cashed the club ace, and led a club, planning to finesse dummy's jack. West's discard left the contract unmakeable.

South should have left the club suit until last.

After drawing trumps, learning that West had three spades to go with his six diamonds, South should have cashed his second heart honor, played a trump to dummy's ace, and ruffed the last heart in hand. When West follows, South learns that he began with either 3-3-6-1 or 3-4-6-0 distribution. So, the contract has become guaranteed. Declarer leads a club to dummy's king and finesses through East on the way back.

HOROSCOPE

Saturday, June 21, 1997

In the year ahead you should be in a better position than you've been in the past to build a solid financial base. Handle your resources with care and think "save" instead of "spend."

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This isn't one of those days when you'll wish to be left alone to do your own thing, so make plans for something social with two of your favorite pals. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may be in an extremely industrious mood today, and you're apt to accomplish more than usual. This record could soar even higher if you're consistent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Spending the day with an old friend could take the edge off the more sobering aspects of your life. It is the type of happy break you need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There won't be anything or anyone more important to you today than your loved ones. Your show of concern will strengthen these bonds even further.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) An opportunity may present itself today that enables you to have that sought-after serious discussion with a pal. It should work out impressively well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Summer officially begins today, so you'd better start getting all of your play things in order. Prepare for your outdoor activities with a smile.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) How you utilize your time today could be extremely important to you. You are not likely to allow others to impose upon you or waste precious hours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your logic and your intuition should work in a compatible manner today. Give equal credence to each as to what you reason and what you perceive.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Continue to be realistic about people as well as your lot in life. Major achievements are possible if your outlook is honest and practical.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Usually you're too engrossed in your latest project to wonder what others think about them. Today, however, peer approval could be of great significance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Easy-going you may be, but you never fail to take your responsibilities seriously. Today your behavior will be drawn from both sides of the spectrum.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) When involved in joint endeavors today, your more serious side is likely to surface and override your nonchalant attitude that you usually like to display.
