Welaka Building

SANFORD — First Capital Property Group, Inc., has announced the awarding of a contract to provide construction management for the renovation and subsequent management and leasing services for the historical Welaka Building in downtown Sanford.

Renovation of the 30,000 square-foot building will include demolition of the existing interiors, creation of common restrooms, corridors and lobby, and exterior renovation with historical emphasis.

New interiors are planned to include the original 12-foot ceilings, original woodwork and dramatic skylights.

The anticipated use will be for retail and office space on the first floor, and full-service offices on the second floor.

While there was no immediate indication regarding when work will actually get under way, completion is already anticipated by late summer.

First Capital Property Group, Inc., a full service commercial real estate company, manages and leases over 800,000 square feet and 400 multi-family units in Central Florida.

Fatal accident

SANFORD — The Florida Highway Patrol investigated a two-car accident early Thursday at the intersection of SR-427 and U.S. Highway 17-92, south of Sanford. One person, Claude Jones, 74, of McArthur Road, Sanford, was killed in the accident.

A 1995 Plymouth, driven by Jones' son, Jesse Jones, 38, also of McArthur Road, reportedly collided with a 1982 Subaru station wagon, driven by Melvin Williams, 41, of Taylor Street in Oviedo.

The younger Jones was reportedly uninjured. Williams, and a passenger in his car, identified as Garry Sooman, 35, of Oviedo, were each reported to have received minor injuries, and were transported to South Seminole Hospital.

Troopers said the Jones' vehicle was traveling south on 17-92 and attempted to make a left turn onto SR-427, going into the path of William's vehicle which was heading northbound.

The Williams' vehicle reportedly struck the Jones car in the passenger side, killing the passenger.

No charges had been filed as of yesterday afternoon pending a further investigation. FHP troopers said alcohol was apparently not connected.

Public housing: No drug dealers Feds sanction Sanford's stance on criminal residents

From Staff and Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — Tequilla Harris says her family and friends often choose to stay inside their homes in a Washington public housing facility because of the drug-related crime that occurs outside their door.

"Because of the drug problem we don't go out that often," Miss Harris, 18, says. "It's so bad

Date-rape drug may gain felony status in state

From Staff and Wire Reports

TALLAHASSEE — The House voted 57-56 to make it a first-degree felony to illegally possess a sedative known as "roofies" and sometimes called the date-rape pill, rejecting a proposal for a total ban on the drug.

"You don't give a death sentence to something when you don't need to give it," Rep. Fred Lippman, a Hollywood Democrat who supported the amendment, said before Thursday's vote.

While Seminole County law enforcement officials have not noticed the use of "roofies" in rape cases here, those who examine rape victims for the county say the drug is likely a factor in at least some cases.

Some victims report they are unable to account for long periods of time prior to discovering they had been raped. They say they have neither taken drugs nor had anything to drink which might have impaired their judgement.

Visitors from other countries with legal prescriptions would be exempt from penalties under the amendment. Some lawmakers wanted to outlaw any possession of the drug Rohypnol, which is gaining in popularity among teen-agers.

"We need to do what we tell our young people to do and just look the big Swiss drug-maker in the eye and just say no," said Rep. Tracy Stafford, D-Wilton Manors.

Smitten man arrested after bombing

DESTIN — A man smitten with a married woman has been charged with placing a bomb outside a house where her husband was staying after learning to build the device on the Internet.

Christopher Marcus Dascenzo, 21, of Niceville, was arrested Wednesday on federal charges in connection with placing a pipe bomb at the Destin home of fisherman Jimmy Dalton.

The arrest came nearly two weeks after an Air Force bomb squad used a robot to detonate the device March 15. It caused no harm.

The investigation disclosed Dascenzo had developed a relationship with Dalton's wife, Debbie, while the couple had been having marital difficulties.

"I'm just upset about the whole thing," Dalton said from the house he shares with three other fishermen in this Florida Panhandle city. "I'm leaving town for a while."

Two of Dascenzo's fingerprints were lifted from a white box containing the bomb, according to sworn statement by federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent Kelly Newsom.

Dascenzo told a friend he found two web sites on the Internet titled "The Anarchist Cookbook" and "The Terrorist Handbook" that gave instructions on how to make bombs, Newsom said in his statement.

Counterfeit Magic tickets found

ORLANDO — Computers, optical scanners and other high-tech tools are enabling more crooks to get into counterfeiting more than currency — such as tickets for Orlando Magic games.

A local police detective who thought he was arresting a scalper outside the Orlando Arena this week ended up tapping into a phony ticket ring.

Two New York City youths were charged, other suspects are being sought and 22 fans were turned away at the doors Tuesday when they tried to use the tickets to the Magic-Lakers game.

Detective Ronald Harper seized 14 tickets and $470 from the suspects, who had been selling tickets to the same four seats. The face value of the tickets was $44 and the suspects sold them for $50 to $100, Harper said.

"Unless you had a real ticket beside it, it would have fooled me," Harper said. "This is something that we're going to see nationally."

There is little that unsuspecting buyers can do once they pay their money to scalpers and get turned away from a sporting event because the tickets are phony, he said.

Skydiver injured in accident

DELAND — A Norwegian skydiver lost part of a leg when he collided midair Thursday with another parachutist.

Nils Hellberg, 32, of Oslo, Norway, and Rob Laidlaw, 43, of DeLand were both experienced skydivers diving with about 18 others, said police Sgt. Michael Maxwell.

"They were trying to form some type of formation together coming in from different angles or whatever," Maxwell said.

Hellberg's left leg was severed below the knee, Laidlaw suffered back injuries, said police Sgt. Michael Maxwell.

Hellberg was airlifted to Halifax Medical Center in Daytona Beach, where he was in serious condition Wednesday evening in the surgical intensive care unit, said nursing supervisor Elizabeth Pendleton.

His leg was not recovered despite the efforts of about 100 people, Maxwell said.

HRS takes custody of twin babies

ORLANDO — Infant twins caught in a dispute between their mother and her boyfriend have been put in the custody of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Carl Pfeiffer, 37, dropped the two-month-old babies off at the local HRS office Thursday using a fake name and claiming the babies' mother had abandoned them, said Orange County sheriff's Cmdr. Steve Jones.

But after seeing the babies on the television news, the mother, Christiane Morgan, called sheriff's investigators to claim the children. She claimed Pfeiffer, who she believes is the babies' father, took the children to HRS in revenge after she fled their home and hid in a hotel.

The couple have been arguing lately, Jones said, because Pfeiffer denies being the father of Carl Francis and Tammy Annalena, born Jan. 30.

Pfeiffer told detectives Morgan had left him once before and went on drinking binges. He said he thought the children were in danger and gave them to HRS to protect them. He said he used a fake name to avoid the media, Jones said.

HRS spokesman Stuart Doyle said his agency would keep custody of the children until investigators determine whether they have been abused. There were no immediate signs of abuse, Jones said.

FDA plan to combat tainted fish sales

By PAT LEISHER
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — Federal food regulators, who estimate 20,000 to 60,000 Americans are sickened each year by bad fish, are on the road promoting new regulations to curb tainted seafood sales.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration program — which takes effect Dec. 18, 1997 — puts the onus on the industry to ensure no contaminated fish gets to the consumer.

The system is called Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point or HACCP.

To acquaint the industry with details of the program, the FDA is holding briefings in five cities across the country during March and June. Following Thursday's Tampa stop, sessions are planned for New Orleans, La. on June 10 and at Seattle, Wash., for June 13.

"We're here just trying to get ahead of the game," said Lenora Paynter of Martin Bros. Seafood in Homestead. She was among 70 seafood industry leaders at the Tampa meeting.

"I think it's a good program because there are a lot of seafood places that should not be in business. This program guarantees you have a quality product. To be HACCP-approved you have to be clean. And believe me, sanitation is bad in some seafood places," Paynter said during a break in the meeting at Tampa's Sheraton Grand Hotel.

Her company ships 150,000 pounds of live lobster to California during Florida's two-month harvesting season and expects to begin exports to Europe.

At a glance

- TAMPA — An upcoming federal program to prevent tainted fish from reaching the dinner table requires seafood processors, storage companies, handlers, and anyone involved in labeling, dockside unloading, holding or freezing to:
 - Identify critical control points of time and temperature.
 - Monitor these data and set outside limits.
 - Devise a corrective action plan for when and if limits are exceeded.
 - Keep records.
 - Verify procedures regularly or when changes occur in equipment, personnel or raw material.
- Analyze areas where their product could become contaminated.

Publix accused of more discrimination

By CATHERINE WILSON
AP Business Writer

MIAMI — Kathy Watkins was called in to work an 18-hour shift on Father's Day when both of her bosses were at a convention. She packaged cookies when her male supervisors were away at ballgames.

"I did what I had to because I thought one day Publix would open their eyes and give me the promotion I deserved. It took 20 years," said the single mother of two.

She was proud to become Publix's first woman general manager, running its Lakeland bakery plant. But she started asking questions when she realized male managers were earning more while supervising fewer employees.

Her sex-discrimination complaint launched a lawsuit Thursday claiming as many as 20,000 nonstore employees in the Lakeland-based chain were victimized.

"They discriminate against women. They said we can't do things," said Watkins, a 28-year employee who has been on disability leave since May. "I'm here for all the women who have been overlooked."

Publix already faces the nation's largest gender-bias suit claiming at least 100,000 women working in its stores since 1991 lost out on pay, promotions and choice job assignments.

The company would not comment directly on the lawsuit in the fresh suit because, Publix attorneys had not seen it but denied any widespread pattern of discrimination in the initial suit also filed at federal court in Tampa.

"We're the state's largest employer and an obvious target for lawsuits," Publix spokeswoman Jennifer Bush said in a statement. "This is nothing more than opportunistic lawyers trying to piggyback on recent headlines."

The new suit extends to current and former workers in warehouses, production facilities and the corporate office.

"They are cheating women. They are depriving them of their right to have a piece of the American pie," said attorney Ervin Gonzalez, who announced the lawsuit at a news conference. "In their mind, they believe it's OK to do what they're doing. Their perception is just totally wrong."

Young victim testifies on teacher molestation

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Seven years ago, Auguste Sadberry was molested by a school teacher. Now she's urging state lawmakers to protect students from sexual predators like the young victims of Billy Campbell, who is serving life in prison for sexual battery on children.

Fired from a teaching job in South Carolina in 1979 for inappropriate behavior with a 5-year-old, he moved to Tallahassee, where he had jobs at three different elementary schools. At least twice he got into trouble for his behavior, but he was able to find another teaching job.

In 1988, Campbell was arrested after a student reported seeing him molest a classmate. He was convicted in 1991 and is serving a minimum of 25 years in prison.

"Why is he able to abuse me at the third school?" Sadberry asked the Senate Education Committee on Thursday. "As I look into each of your eyes, can you look back into my eyes and tell me why?"

Her mother, Kris, and other parents whose children were abused by school employees said local and state education officials needed to do more to protect children from sexual abuse.

The committee voted unanimously for legislation (CS-SB 368 & 2580) that would require the Department of Education to establish a computer database containing the names of teachers whose names were listed.

The bill also would require all school district employees who haven't already submitted fingerprints for background checks to do so by Jan. 1, 1998.

The bill now goes to Ways and Means and then the full chamber.

A similar bill (CS-HB 815) passed the House Education Committee earlier this week. It must clear the Appropriations Committee before going to the full House.

Florida has required fingerprints for school employees since 1984, but workers already on the job before then were exempted from the requirement, said education department lobbyist Sandi Harris.

Sen. William Turner, D-Miami, said cost shouldn't be a factor in issuing the mandate.

"There are strange things happening every day to children in this state and in this country," he said. "We've got to protect them. I don't care what it costs."

POLICE BRIEF

Mall thefts

Altamonte Springs police made two arrests Wednesday, in connection with what was described as repeated thefts from a retail store in the Altamonte Mall. Police said they started their investigation when it was reported items had been missing and empty boxes had been found several times in the stock rooms of a store. After surveillance cameras were installed, one store employee, identified as Neil A. Shillingford, 30, of Deltona, was reportedly seen taking a camcorder from a box and apparently hiding it.

Another person, identified as Joel P. Baptist Jr., 30, of 1030 Whittier Circle, Oviedo, was eventually connected with Shillingford. Officers arrested the two men at the store on Wednesday.

According to the police report, both men admitted having taken items from the store on several occasions. Baptist reportedly said the items had been taken since Christmas of last year. Police checked Baptist's home in Oviedo and reported finding some of the items.

Baptist was estimated by the police report, as having been responsible for $939.92 in items. Shillingford reportedly was associated with the theft of $1148.88 in items.

Each has been charged with grand theft.

Christopher D. Thornton, 32, 90 Hidden Lake Drive, Sanford, was stopped by Lake Mary police on Lake Mary Boulevard Wednesday. He was charged with operating a motor vehicle with a cancelled/suspended/revoked license and attached tag not assigned. He was also found to be wanted on a warrant for failing to appear on a charge of driving with a suspended license.

Trade deficit hits six-month high

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit widened dramatically at the beginning of the year, climbing to $10.27 billion. Imports hit an all-time high, reflecting higher demand for foreign oil and cars.

The Commerce Department said today the January deficit was the worst showing in six months and was 47.6 percent larger than a December imbalance in goods and services of $6.96 billion. Exports fell, led by a huge drop in civilian aircraft, which plunged to the lowest level in 18 years.

The sharp deterioration in America's trade balance was certain to be seized upon by President Clinton's opponents as evidence that the administration's trade strategy is failing to protect American workers from increasing foreign competition.

However, the administration insists that its stress on big trade agreements to knock down foreign barriers represents the best course. The administration says it seeks to ensure America's economic security, and says efforts to raise protectionist barriers will not work to save jobs and will end up costing American consumers in higher prices.

Private economists predicted that the monthly figures will look worse for several more months as U.S. exports are hurt by economic weakness overseas while imports climb as the U.S. economy picks up steam.

"I think we may have seen the best on trade for a while. The good figures at the end of 1995 gave us something of a false dawn," said Robert Dederick, chief economic consultant at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

The deficits with Japan and China were both up in January, but analysts noted that they were still well below their record highs.

While analysts had been predicting the January deficit would worsen to around $9 billion, the actual $10.27 billion was much higher than expected. For all of 1995, the deficit was $11.04 billion, the poorest showing in seven years, but that performance reflected an extremely bad first six months with gradual improvement in the second half of the year.

For January, exports of goods and services dropped 2.2 percent to $66.60 billion while imports were up 2.4 percent to $76.86 billion. The trade deficit is the difference between what America imports and what it sells abroad.

The drop in exports was led by shifts in two big-ticket categories that can swing widely from month to month. Exports of civilian aircraft dropped $726 million to $493 million, the lowest level since February 1978.

Analysts said while commercial aircraft sales have been on a downward trend, the January decline reflected a lengthy strike at Boeing.

Exports of telecommunications equipment were down $420 million to $1.44 billion in January. Analysts said this category had shown a big rise in December.

On the import side, America's foreign oil bill rose to $5.15 billion in January, an increase of 12.5 percent from December. The average price per barrel of crude oil climbed to $16.45 in January, up from a December average of $15.86. The quantity also rose to an average of 7.43 million barrels per day, up from 7.32 million barrels in December.

Imports of foreign cars and parts in January rose by $472 million to $10.79 billion. By contrast, U.S. exports of cars and parts were up only $79 million to $5.39 billion.

The deficit with Japan was up 9.3 percent from December to $3.79 billion. Even with the increase, the monthly deficit was the second lowest in more than two years. Imports from Japan fell to the lowest since May 1994, but U.S. exports to Japan were down as well.

The deficit with China jumped 39.3 percent to $2.74 billion, while the deficit with Mexico rose to $1.28 billion.

Home sales dip first time in four months

By JOHN D. McGLAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — New home sales slipped 1.7 percent in February, the first decline in four months, as the Midwest suffered the biggest loss in more than two years. But sales advanced in other regions.

The Commerce Department said today that sales of single-family homes totaled 700,000 at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, down from a revised 709,000 in January. The January rate originally was estimated to be 693,000.

It was the first decline since sales fell 1.6 percent last October, at the time the third drop in a row. The trend was reversed in November as mortgage rates continued to fall.

Although rates began to rise again in February, many analysts had expected continued sales increases as the threat of higher borrowing costs pushed buyers into the market.

In fact, many analysts had expected a gain of about 1 percent in sales in February when 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 7.17 percent, up from 7.03 percent in January, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

New drug sharply reduces brain damage from strokes

By DANIEL G. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — Until a few months ago, there was no treatment for strokes, the nation's No. 3 killer. Now it appears there are two.

At a medical conference Thursday, researchers announced the promising results of experimental use of a medicine called citicoline that protects the brain from catastrophic damage after a stroke.

Just last December, another team reported that a widely used heart attack medicine — tissue-plasminogen activator, TPA — also reduces the chances of brain damage if given quickly after a stroke.

If citicoline works as well as it appears, it may turn out to be an even more important addition to stroke therapy, since doctors believe it is less dangerous and easier to use.

Indeed, they suggest that citicoline may someday be routine treatment for virtually everyone who has a stroke.

"This is definitely the most exciting time ever in the history of strokes," said Karen Putney, vice president of the National Stroke Association.

Strokes take the lives of about 500,000 Americans annually. Only heart disease and cancer kill more people.

Citicoline is the first of a group of so-called neuroprotective drugs, which shield the brain from a destructive chain reaction started by a stroke. In a study, the drug appeared to limit the size of the stroke, speed up recovery and improve victims' mental functioning.

The study was paid for by the maker of citicoline, Intermune Pharmaceuticals Inc. of Lexington, Mass. The company has not yet asked the Food and Drug Administration for approval to sell it.

Especially noteworthy are the medicine's lack of side effects and its apparent success even when given to a patient many hours after stroke symptoms start.

TPA, in comparison, must be given within three hours of the start of symptoms. Even when used properly, 6 percent of patients suffer disastrous bleeding inside their brains. Because of the drug's limitations, most stroke patients probably will not be able to take it.

Citicoline, it appears, could be much more widely used.

"Because it's so safe and can be given up to 24 hours after a stroke, I think it will be an important breakthrough," said Dr. Wayne Clark, who headed the team that tested the drug at 21 hospitals.

Clark, director of the stroke center at Oregon Health Sciences University, presented the findings at a meeting of the American Academy of Neurology in San Francisco.

The researchers enrolled 288 stroke patients, who were randomly assigned to get either dummy medicine or one of three different doses of citicoline within 24 hours of the start of their symptoms.

The best dose turned out to be the smallest, 500 milligrams daily. The doctors found that 55 percent of patients given this amount had full recovery on a scale that measures their ability to take care of themselves, compared with 38 percent in the placebo group.

The outcome of the study "was too good to be true, but it was true," said one of the drug's inventors, Dr. Richard Wurman of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. Steven Warach of Beth Israel Hospital in Boston said that assuming citicoline holds up to further testing, "I think this drug will be given to the majority of stroke patients."

Most strokes occur when a blood clot gets stuck in an artery in the brain, choking off the supply of oxygen. Patients tend to worsen in the days after a stroke. This is because the breakdown of dying brain cells releases chemicals that harm surrounding tissue.

Citicoline prevents these toxic substances, called free fatty acids, from accumulating. It also provides building materials that nerve cells need to repair themselves.

Join march for violence-free community

This Saturday, in keeping with the theme of this month, the Violence-Free Community Committee will hold a youth and family vigil. It will consist of a march (beginning at 2 p.m.) from the Seminole County Courthouse on North Park Avenue, to Fort Mellon Park where a memorial ceremony has been scheduled, complete with guest speakers.

Every year we honor people who have died in our armed forces. We honor others who served in the military putting their lives at risk. We also honor our forefathers and others who helped mold our nation into what it is today.

This time however, we believe the intent is different. By focusing on persons who have suffered the loss of loved ones, family members, friends, through violence, we may be showing the world that we are sick and tired of it.

According to committee chairman Linda Kuhn, there will be speakers on hand at the park to give personal testimony on how they are surviving after becoming victims of violence.

This isn't just a nationwide or statewide situation. This is local. The speakers will talk about the tragedies which happened right here in our own back yards.

We hear a lot about violence around the world. Bombings, mass murders, assassinations, and military attacks are happening all the time. But look right here in Seminole County. We have murders, suicides, muggings, rapes, arson cases and other situations going on all-too regularly.

It's great to have compassion for the rest of the world and its problems, but we had better start looking closer ...right here in Central Florida ...and begin fighting against the violence which faces us each and every day.

We highly urge people to turn out for this march, and be on hand at Fort Mellon Park for the ceremony. There are things to be learned from the guest speakers, and there is a solidarity to be shown by supporting the march and joining fellow citizens, side by side, to show we want exactly what the observance designates, "a violence free community."

LETTER

Competent candidates

District 33 residents should be thankful for competent candidates in the race for state representative.

About three years ago I met Tom Feeney at the home of friends and was amazed at his grasp of issues - moral, economic and educational. Since that time I've had occasion to speak with him briefly on two occasions (neither was political) and to hear him give a major speech on national defense.

Prior to 1990, Tom Feeney represented a significant portion of the area that now comprises District 33. He is eminently qualified to serve Oviedo, most of Sanford, a good portion of Deltona and Winter Springs, Chuluota, Geneva, Bithlo, Christmas, and more.

All voters need to study the issues and make an informed decision Saturday, March 30.

All voters should be aware of the fact that the Christian Coalition never endorses a candidate. Nor does it support a candidate financially. It is strictly an issues-oriented organization.

A shameful waste

Oh please! It is going to cost we taxpayers how many hundreds of thousands of dollars to stage this special election? The candidates are going to spend how many hundreds of thousands of dollars to win? What a shameful waste.

Not enough questions were asked when Marvin Couch was running for office. If political parties would, just once in awhile, think about the people and do their homework on their candidates, we would not be going through this fiasco.

The Christian Coalition and the Republican Party are sending us another of their anointed sons. They had better look at Mr. Feeney's voting record when he was in office. He cost a very good man, Mr. Bush, a lot of votes because of his strange voting behavior in Tallahassee. This same Tallahassee record is public property and it should be brought out for scrutiny.

I beg you political parties, Christian Coalition, etc. Before you bring people before us, know their backgrounds thoroughly.

If anyone in Seminole, Orange or Volusia counties knows reasons why Hampton, Hattaway or Feeney should not represent us in House Seat #33, come forward now while we can do something about it at the ballot box.

First Amendment lawyer punished

I first became aware of Martin Garbus, a First Amendment specialist, when he assisted in Lenny Bruce's defense some 30 years ago. Bruce was on trial in New York for being obscene. He was convicted, but eventually an appellate court reversed the verdict -- too late for Bruce who had died.

Garbus went on to defend civil rights protesters in Mississippi and various writers and newspapers being sued for libel. And he helped write the constitutions of postcommunist Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

In 35 years, Garbus had never represented a plaintiff in a libel suit. But in 1994, he made an exception. A 27-year-old black woman had been raped in Brooklyn's Prospect Park. In three columns in the New York Daily News, however, columnist Mike McAlary charged that she had not been raped. He cited unnamed sources inside the Police Department as saying, "The woman, who probably will wind up being arrested herself, invented the crime."

Feeling she had now been raped twice, the woman went to several lawyers and they recommended Garbus. He has sued McAlary and the News for libel. Garbus has taken the case pro bono. There have already been a number of pretrial hearings and depositions.

The News, which is published by Mort

Zuckerman, has expressed full faith in McAlary's credibility. One headline on his column read "Rape Hoax the Real Crime."

However, in a most unusual internal rebellion, more than 30 staff members at the Daily News signed a petition to the editors. It recalled that the News had recently published a four-part series urging "hundreds, maybe thousands" of rape victims to come forward. McAlary's indignant colleagues added that police commissioner William Bratton had said that "physical evidence of rape had been found." McAlary's columns, the petition continued, and "the News' hypocritical performance are a disgrace." Meanwhile, in New York magazine, Robert I.

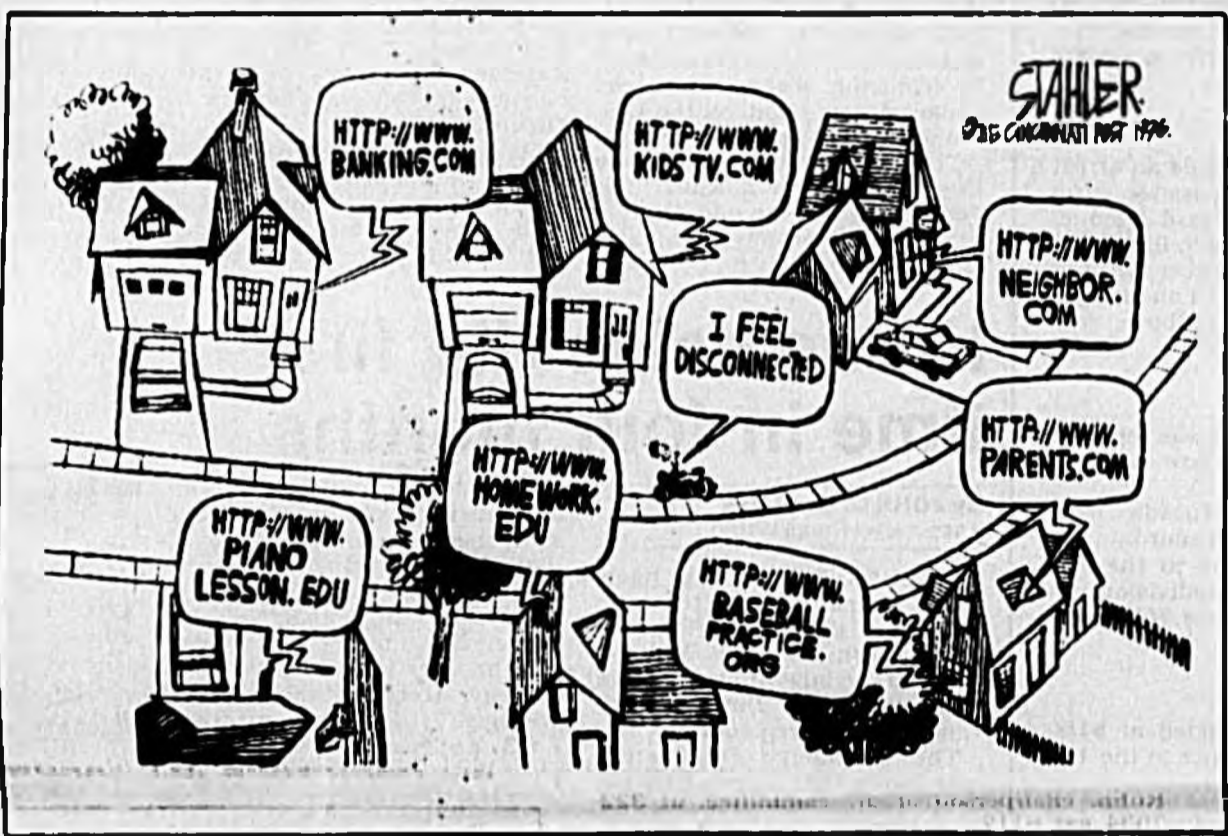

He has been censured for his role in the case by an organization of some of the most distinguished First Amendment lawyers in the nation.

Friedman, a veteran reporter and editor, wrote that during a deposition in a case charging him with having broken his contract with the New York Post, McAlary had said he sometimes used "writing devices" in his columns to "illustrate a story." Accordingly, he continued, not every one of his columns is intended to be "read as factually, word for word."

As the depositions of McAlary continued -- one of them sent across the country by Court TV -- Martin Garbus has been censured for his role in the case by an organization of some of the most distinguished First Amendment lawyers in the nation. The Libel Resource Defense Center, headquartered in New York, describes itself as dedicated to promoting "First Amendment rights in the libel, privacy and related law fields." Its Defense Counsel Section is composed of more than 180 law firms across the country specializing in libel defense litigation and legislation.

Garbus' law firm has been suspended from LRDC "until it has ceased representing any plaintiffs in a libel action against a media defendant or journalist." Those are the rules and -- Executive Director Sandra Baron tells me -- there are no exceptions. Garbus should have shown that woman the door.

DONNA BRITT

Bombarded by advertising

WASHINGTON -- Five months after my son's birth, it was time for some outside entertainment. First stop: a local movie theater.

Settling in, I watched the screen fill with a single word: "Love." No movement, no scenes from a new film -- just "love." After an eternity, I learned what I was watching: an ad for the new Beatles anthology.

Then came commercials for Plymouth automobiles and Coca-Cola. I noticed that the popcorn that was once sold in a tacky red bag now came in an artsy black and white sack -- complete with a designer jeans ad.

The next week, we attended a Washington Bullets basketball game. While cheering the home team on to yet another loss, I noticed that scores of steps at USAir Arena had been stenciled with the words "Office Depot." I saw entrance portals pushing Safeway, CVS and GEICO; scoreboards hawking Marlboro and Amtrak; "TOYOTA"-printed pads wrapping the backboard supports. Two miniature dirigibles, with "Domino's Pizza" and "Lays" (potato chips) printed on them, spouted coupons onto our heads. Even my employer, The Washington Post, had a blurb on the giant screen.

All told, I counted 336 surfaces -- including the uniforms of the "Reebok Bullets" cheerleaders -- plastered with logos in the arena.

It didn't bother me so much that my husband and I paid good money to see a mediocre movie and a losing game. What was irksome was that we spent a combined $88 -- $14 for the film and $74 for two game tickets -- to have several hundred companies hawk their wares at us. What was bothersome was that it took being out of the loop for several months to notice the incapability of advertising, and how accustomed we've become to it.

Like other baby boomers, I grew up with TV, the medium that years ago permanently implanted "Does she or doesn't she?" and "I can't believe I ate the whole thing" into my brain. But in those pre-cable days, TV was always free. Now we pay for the privilege of being sold to.

Am I the only one who thinks merchandising has gotten out of hand? Don't other folks wonder why there's a parade of men, women and kids acting as unpaid human billboards for Tommy Hilfinger, Ralph Lauren, Nautica, DKNY and Filiz?

Receipt tapes at the grocery store now advertise the local cleaners and oil-change establishments. Half-hour infomercials sell "essential" hair straighteners and vitamins. The Eddie Bauer model of the Ford Explorer sports-utility vehicle offers a few additional features for an additional couple of grand.

Sporting events may be the worst. Every phase of the proceedings is sponsored: the building (Phoenix's America West Arena, Washington's coming MCI Center); the halftime show (the "Prudential Halftime Report"); the stats ("Dutch Boy In The Paint"); Nike "jewelry" pinned to the laps of college coaches; and messages embedded in the ice on which hockey players skate (Bud Ice beer). Recently, my 10-year-old noticed that towels used by players during an NBA game featured three Perry Ellis insignias.

And don't even think about ads on the Internet.

Is this stuff merely irritating, or has it turned us into a nation of spending drones? Paul Farhi, a business reporter for The Post, says he, too, was floored by the amount of advertising at a recent basketball game. Farhi has written about what he calls "over-commercialization," but says, "I don't think anybody cares. ... There's so much of it, people fail to notice it anymore."

Silver Spring, Md. graduate student Kathy Rushing dismisses the ads we find in our mail, grocery carts, even in school materials, as "background noise" -- except when it comes to her three children.

"It's become an important part of parenting to make kids aware that advertising wants to manipulate them," says Rushing, who recently found herself discussing a perfume TV commercial with her daughter, 17. "It was supposed to be easy, but sort of glamorized someone who was almost like a stalker. It really bothered Jessica at this stage of her life."

No wonder I became hypersensitive about ads after having a baby. Merchandising, says Rushing, has become "another piece of society (parents) have to fight against."

We'll never win. Recently, my husband bought the cutest infant-size denim jacket. I loved it -- except for the "Gap Classic" logo on the back. When I suggested to Kevin that I would have problems with letting our baby stroll for the Gap, he fixed me with an unmistakable look:

Just Do It.

All told, I counted 336 surfaces plastered with logos in the arena.

CIA comes to terms with French faux pas

WASHINGTON -- The Central Intelligence Agency has confirmed a story we broke last May detailing how a sex scandal in the foreign intelligence community created an international uproar -- and gave the United States a black eye.

The French government made waves in February 1995 when it expelled five CIA agents stationed in Paris for conducting political and economic espionage.

As we reported last year, the rare diplomatic brawl between the two traditional allies was triggered by sensitive information the French government obtained from a female CIA agent in Paris. Classified U.S. intelligence reports we had access to alleged that the agent passed the secrets to a French official with whom she was romantically involved.

A knowledgeable intelligence source told us that the CIA's inspector general is issuing a new report that reveals the agency was indeed trying to steal economic secrets from French companies and trade officials. The classified report also confirms that the mission was compromised by the agent's sexual dalliance.

The report comes on the heels of a high-profile Senate hearing that examined the extent of economic espionage by friendly nations in the United States. Chaired by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who heads the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, the hearing found that many American companies have had their economic secrets stolen by foreign governments, adding up to billions of dollars in annual losses.

The bungled French affair shows that America's hands are not clean when it comes economic espionage. The only difference is that our mistake-prone CIA got caught. Intelligence sources say the French flap is illustrative of the same kind of bureaucratic bungling and indifference that allowed Aldrich Ames to compromise American secrets for nine years before being caught.

Like Ames, the agent in France operated in an organizational culture in desperate need of reform. The new CIA report admits that agency officials let the agent continue her spying even after they discovered that she was carrying on an affair with the French official she was targeting.

"The issue here is that we have another Ames case," one intelligence source told our associate Ed Henry. "The CIA culture wanted to protect this woman rather than really discipline her."

While Ames was stopped in his tracks once CIA officials learned of his betrayal, the Paris agent was allowed to stay on the CIA payroll even after she flunked a lie-detector exam that tipped off agency officials to the indiscretion.

Instead of firing the agent, the CIA allowed her to continue handling sensitive cases. Intelligence reports show the CIA claimed it could not fire the agent because she was so distraught that she might have overreacted and leaked even more information to the French if the agency severed its ties to her.

"She said, 'I will not be fired!'" explained one intelligence source. "So the agency caved in and said, 'OK, we'll make you a contract employee.'"

Meanwhile, the agent kept spilling secrets to the French through her lover. She reportedly disclosed the identities of the spies in our embassy, the names of CIA agents in Paris, and the locations of safe houses there.

The House and Senate intelligence committees are now privately reviewing the classified damage assessment by the CIA's inspector general in an attempt to figure out who should be held accountable.

The bungled French affair shows that America's hands are not clean when it comes economic espionage.

Drug

LaRoche, is 10 times stronger than Valium. When mixed with alcohol, it may produce a loss of inhibition, memory, or consciousness.

Last month in Cooper City, three teenagers were charged with drugging a girl and raping her repeatedly after crashing a Sweet 16 party and spiking the girl's drink with roofies.

The Drug Enforcement Administration is taking steps to reclassify Rohypnol as a drug with no accepted medical use in the United States. As such, it would be grouped with heroin, methamphetamine and LSD.

The U.S. Customs Service said earlier this month it would start seizing any amount of the drug brought into the country by travelers, in commercial shipments or by mail. Until then, travelers to the United States could bring a three-month supply for personal use.

Under Florida law, Rohypnol is classified with drugs that have relatively little potential for abuse, like Valium.

But every lawmaker who spoke Thursday supported increasing the penalties for illegal possession of the drug.

Stafford and Rep. Kenneth Pruitt, R-Port St. Lucie, proposed classifying roofies in the strictest category, with heroin, LSD and marijuana. Any possession of these drugs, except for research, is outlawed.

Rep. John Thrasher, R-Orange Park, proposed keeping the current classification, but increasing the penalties for illegal possession to equal those for heroin, LSD and other drugs in the highest-security class.

The House voted 57-56 for Thrasher's amendment, defeating Stafford and Pruitt's amendment.

The amendments were to a bill (HB 49) that reduced the classification of another drug.

The House planned a final vote for its next floor session. At that time, it will take a two-thirds vote to add amendments. A companion Senate bill (SB 414) is awaiting action in the Ways and Means Committee.

Goard said the change was prompted because of a wedding scheduled at the Congregational church, which would have been in conflict with use of the facility as a voting place.

Signs are to be posted at the Congregational Christian Church entrance informing prospective voters of the change in locations.

"I'm sorry we had to make this last minute move," Goard said, "and we don't have time to advertise any change, so I hope the people will understand."

The voting, this Saturday, will be a primary for the Republican Party nomination for Florida House of Representatives District 33. Facing each other are Tom Feeney, former running mate of unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate Jeb Bush, and Phil Hampton, Oviedo City Council chairman. While past history information was not immediately available, it is believed this will be the first time ever, that local people will be able to cast their ballots in any election on a Saturday. Goard said she has been in office since the 70's, and is unaware of any election held on other than the normal weekday, especially Tuesdays.

In the 32 separate Seminole County precincts represented by House District 33, Goard said there is a total of 19,130 persons registered as Republicans who would be eligible to vote. She would not predict what the turnout might be, but other political officials say they expect it may be rather low as is the case with a one-item ballot.

The winner of this Saturday's election will face Democrat Jim Hattaway in another Saturday election scheduled for April 27.

weeks at the academy because of budget restrictions.

He said he believes the training he received was the highest caliber available.

Dillard was one of 254 law enforcement officers from throughout the nation to graduate from the FBI program. They represented 49 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, six military organizations, three federal/civilian organizations, and 18 foreign countries.

The FBI course offers advanced investigative, management and fitness training for selected officers having a proven record as a professional within his or her agency.

Training is handled by FBI Academy instructional staff members, special agents, and others who hold advanced degrees in law enforcement and are recognized internationally in their field of expertise.

On the average, the officers have 16 years of law enforcement experience, and usually return to their agencies to serve in executive level positions.

Dillard has been with the Sanford Police Department since 1977. He said he believes he is presently the only active officer on the force to have completed the FBI academy.

Steve Harriett, former Sanford police chief and now Under-sheriff of Seminole County, was the last local graduate of the Quantico facility.

The official graduation ceremony for this latest FBI class was held last Friday, with FBI Director Louis J. Freeh as principal speaker. Penny Marie Phelps, a lieutenant with the Bay City Michigan police department spoke on behalf of this particular class.

Since the FBI Academy started in 1935, a total of 28,981 officers have graduated, with over 17,000 still active in law enforcement work.

Housing

a small front yard scattered with old, broken toys. A peeling "Say No To Drugs" poster hung from a door. "I would hate for a young baby to have to sleep on the street because of someone's older brother or dad."

In Sanford Timothy Hudson, executive director of the Sanford Housing Authority, instituted a similar policy in January. Thus far he has evicted three families from public housing.

Hudson defends the policy saying it is his goal to make Sanford's public housing units safe and desirable places to live. He also believes public housing should not be a permanent homestead for generations of residents.

Several of Harris' Washington neighbors also described the order as draconian.

"I don't think it's right," said Ashley Hines, who has lived in the public housing facility for 28 years. "The whole family shouldn't suffer. Punish the one person."

As part of Thursday's order, the Department of Housing and Urban Development must grade housing authorities on their compliance with the so-called one-strike rule. Those with low scores would be less likely to receive certain federal funds and more likely to be subject to increased federal supervision.

Patricia Williams, who has lived in the facility for eight years, said people deserve more than one chance and that the government should do more to increase economic opportunities in lower-income neighborhoods instead of evicting troublemakers.

"They should worry more about getting people jobs," Mrs. Williams said. "That will help a whole lot. Jobs, education, programs that they can get into. But we hardly got any programs for these pre-teens to go to."

But some residents in the neighborhood applauded Clinton's action.

Asked if she thought the directive was a good idea, an 80-year-old woman who asked not to be identified, said: "Sure is. Get rid of them."

A resident in the neighborhood for more than 20 years, she said she has noticed a growing drug problem in the neighborhood in recent years.

Others, however, said the people who live in the neighborhood are not the ones responsible for the crimes.

"I don't think it's in the housing," said 21-year-old Constance Ingram.

Ingram said she thought the police needed to make more of an effort to collar criminals.

"If the police would come around here and clean the area up then it would be OK," she said. But they don't, she added, "because they're scared."

Congress sends Clinton farm bill that phases out subsidies

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congress gave final approval early Friday to farm legislation that would end price-based subsidies and government planting controls that have been the basis of farm policy since the Depression.

The House passed the bill 318-89 shortly before 1 a.m., hours after Senate approval by a 74-26 vote. President Clinton has voiced "very serious reservations" about the bill but has said he would sign it.

The compromise bill, which also covers nutrition and conservation programs, dairy product management and peanut quotas, has traveled a long, slow road through Congress.

But there was a sense of urgency to get it passed this week, with Congress set to leave for a two-week recess and Midwestern farmers anxious to know government policy as they prepare for spring planting.

The seven-year "Freedom to Farm" bill would end the link between prices and subsidies, instead guaranteeing farmers steadily declining "market transition payments" based on past subsidies.

At the same time, the government would no longer require land to be idled or deny payments if farmers switch from their historical crop.

"From now on the federal government will stop trying to control how much food, feed and fiber our nation produces," said Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Dick Lugar, R-Ind. "Instead, we will trust the market for the first time in a long while to direct those signals."

With farmers knowing exactly how much they will receive from the government, they will be able to plan ahead, saving money for hard times, supporters said.

But critics warned that the new system could leave farmers vulnerable when prices or production are down and that it is unseemly to pay farmers who let their land sit idle.

"I believe the underlying farm policy contained in this legislation is fatally flawed," said Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D. "Farmers get a check from the government even if they plant nothing. That is wrong. This legislation contains payments that are fixed but sharply declining. That is wrong. This legislation provides no adjustments if prices plunge or yields are low. That is wrong."

The crafters of the legislation met administration demands by retaining the Conservation Reserve Program, which keeps environmentally sensitive farmland out of production by paying landowners 10-year leases and by guaranteeing $200 million to protect the Everglades.

Sen. Bob Graham, a Florida Democrat, welcomed "the tremendous step forward that this legislation represents for that goal of saving the Everglades."

It also maintains the current food stamp program for another two years while Congress works on welfare reform and continues research programs for two years.

On one of the most contentious issues, the bill would end the special tax on dairy producers and phase out the government support for butter, powdered milk and cheese over four years.

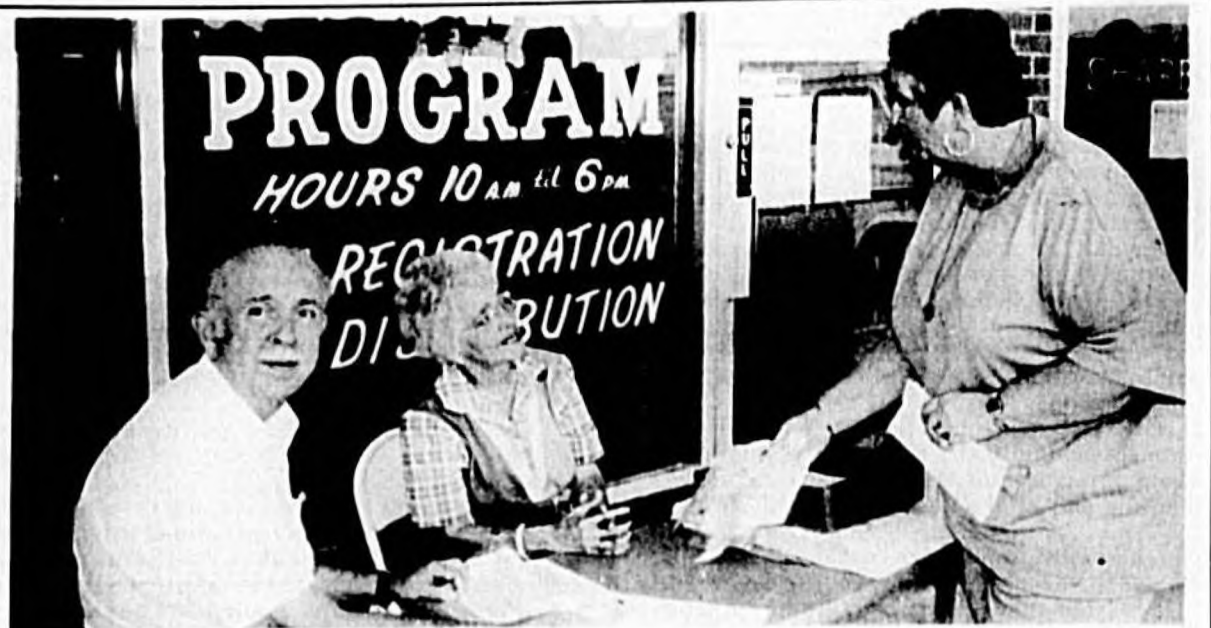

Within three years, the Agriculture Department would have to merge 33 regional dairy price-setting agreements into between 10 and 14, and make prices more uniform.

The final bill eliminated House-passed provisions to penalize peanut growers who don't sell if offered government support prices or above. Instead, growers who refuse to sell for up to two years are barred from the government support program for a year.

To satisfy critics concerned that farmers would be left without direction after this bill expires in seven years, the bill states that the 1949 Agricultural Adjustment Act would take over if new farm legislation isn't enacted.

It is estimated that the bill would cut about $2 billion from farm spending over the next seven years, projected to be $48.8 billion.

The bill is HR 2854.

Vial of Life

Distribution of the Vial of Life must be a continuing project. A number of organizations are helping provide the vials, especially designed for senior citizens. They are to contain valuable information regarding medication, allergies and other items which may be of assistance in a medical emergency. Earlier this week, Vista and

Families' national park bargain visits may be stopped by bill

By M. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A family visit to a national park has long been a bargain, but it may not be one much longer if a bill advancing in the House becomes law.

For one thing, grandma and grandpa might no longer get in for free, nor would the kids. And don't even think about bringing in a carload of people for $5. That will be history.

An overhaul of the fee system for the country's more than 350 national parks and monuments moved out of the House Resources Committee by a largely party-line 24-12 vote on Thursday and is likely to be considered on the House floor in the coming months.

The bill's supporters, mostly Republicans with a scattering of Democrats, called it essential to give the U.S. Park Service the money it needs to operate and begin to address a growing backlog of repairs.

But some Democratic critics said it goes too far and will prevent millions of elderly and poor families from enjoying the beauty of some of America's greatest natural and historical treasures.

"Someone with four kids is going to be priced out of the parks," said Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore., one of a dozen Democrats who had favored more modest fee increases.

Among its provisions, the bill would: —Scrap the Golden Age Passport, a lifetime free entrance pass for people 62 or older for a one-time fee of $10. Senior citizens would pay regular fees.

—For the first time, charge entry fees for those 16 or younger. Visitors 12 or younger would get in at half-price.

—Establish fees on a per-person basis, instead of by carloads. The price for a family of four going to many of the parks would jump to $20 or more, compared with $5 per carload now. Caps on fees would be eliminated, so in some parks fees could soar.

—For the first time charge fees to go into visitor's centers, and increase fees for camping and other services.

A proposal offered by Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., would have capped fees at $6 per person, retained the pass for senior citizens and continued to allow children into parks for free. It was defeated, 24-15.

"We're trying to put some money into the hands of the Park Service," said Rep. James Hansen, R-Utah, a chief architect of the bill. He said the current fees subsidize park visitors, most of whom, he said, would prefer to pay.

In an attempt to blunt criticism, supporters agreed to take out of the bill provisions that would have imposed fees on the disabled and the blind, and decided against charging visitors for using bathroom facilities.

Under pressure from Democrats, the panel agreed to reinstate fees charged to charter aircraft operators for flights over the Grand Canyon and other parks after several lawmakers noted the irony of charging the elderly and children, but not tour operators.

Can states build walls to keep out gay marriages?

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Hawaii may become the first state to recognize gay marriages. But would a homosexual couple with a Hawaii wedding license be considered married in any other state?

Hawaii's top court is threatening to force state officials to authorize such marriages. This legally and politically explosive question already has touched off legislative efforts in more than half the states to counter any Hawaiian sanction of same-sex marriages. It's a constitutional showdown in the making.

Because of concern about legalized gay marriages, "we are seeing a national assault on the lesbian and gay community," says David Smith of the Human Rights Campaign, a gay-rights advocacy group. "Religious, political extremists are whipping up hysteria and fear."

But Jay Sekulow, lead lawyer for a family-values advocacy group founded by television preacher Pat Robertson, says the opposition is aimed at preserving the "special status" of marriage.

"There is a sociological and moral impact when a state authorizes homosexual marriages," says Sekulow, who is with the American Center for Law and Justice. "It tells people that homosexuality is accepted and normative."

Three gay couples sued after Hawaii denied them marriage licenses in 1991. Citing various legal rights that flow from marriage, the homosexuals said they were being treated unfairly.

The Hawaii Supreme Court ruled that the state's refusal violated rights guaranteed by the state's constitution unless there was some compelling reason.

Now the lawsuit is back in a trial court, and legal observers say the gay couples are likely to win. A final ruling by the Hawaii Supreme Court may be two years away, however.

It is a state's highest court — not the U.S. Supreme Court — that has the last word when a state constitution is being interpreted. But other states' reactions to the Hawaii controversy appear destined to reach the nation's highest court some day.

The federal Constitution generally entitles a law in one state to "full faith and credit" in all the other states. That's why a man and woman married in one state are considered legally wed in all others.

Encouraged by the Sekulow and others, legislators in 29 states have considered carving out an exception — by defining marriage as a union between a man and a woman.

Three states — Idaho, South Dakota and Utah — now have laws on their books saying just that. Legislators in 15 other states are considering taking the same step. In addition to Hawaii, those states are Alabama, Alaska, California, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee and Wisconsin.

Such efforts have fizzled for now in 11 states — Colorado, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Mississippi, New Mexico, Rhode Island, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming.

Are such efforts constitutional? Someone licensed to drive or able to drink or own a gun in one state does not necessarily possess that right in another state, but is marriage different?

Evan Wolfson, legal director of the gay-rights Lambda Legal Defense and Educational Fund, says it is. "Marriage enjoys a unique constitutional status. Although regulated, it is a fundamental right."

He hopes recognition of gay marriages will doom state laws against sodomy.

The Supreme Court recognized the right to marry as something special in its famous 1967 Loving vs. Virginia decision, which struck down state laws that barred interracial marriages.

"The freedom to marry has long been recognized as one of the vital personal rights essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men," the court said then. "Marriage is one of the basic of civil rights of man, fundamental to our very existence and survival."

So basic, the court said in a 1987 ruling, that states cannot prohibit prison inmates from getting married to fellow inmates or people on the outside.

"Inmate marriages, like others, are expressions of emotional support and public commitment," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote for the court. "These elements are an important and significant aspect of the marital relationship."

Sekulow knows a constitutional confrontation is looming. "Litigation will focus on whether states are required to recognize marriages that go against their state law. I think the answer is 'no.' We'll see."

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Government shutdown

WASHINGTON — Congress and the White House inched toward a compromise today on spending legislation that would avert a government shutdown at midnight. But a final deal remained elusive.

On Thursday, Congress resolved one longstanding fiscal dispute by sending President Clinton a bill extending the government's borrowing power through September 1997. The measure would allow the national debt to reach $5.5 trillion, up from $4.9 trillion.

White House aides said the president would sign it, and the Treasury Department quickly announced it would auction nearly $50 billion in securities on Monday and Tuesday.

Along with the debt bill, Congress sent Clinton unrelated measures.

Americans' health insurance

WASHINGTON — Americans would be able to keep their health insurance when they change jobs under a bill passed by the House, but unless Republicans drop provisions calling for medical savings accounts and limits on medical malpractice awards, the legislation may never become law.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich indicated he realized as much Thursday prior to the 267-151 vote, and said the provisions could be eliminated later if necessary to stop President Clinton from vetoing the bill.

"But we want to make the case," said Gingrich. "We want to try to convince him."

The underlying purpose of the bill is to guarantee that workers get health insurance when they change or lose their jobs, even if they have a pre-existing health problem.

Easing restrictions on Palestinians

WASHINGTON — Responding to Arab anger and European appeals, the Clinton administration has forged an agreement to ease Israel's restrictions on Palestinians on the West Bank and Gaza.

The plan, announced Thursday by Secretary of State Warren Christopher, shifts gears both on the focus of a two-day conference of 27 nations and U.S. strategy for coping with terrorism and the anxiety four suicide bombings have caused the Israeli people.

The conference, continuing today at the State Department, is expanding its agenda from considering measures to counter terrorism to ways to ease the impact of Israeli security measures on Gaza and the West Bank.

At the same time, the administration, which had implacably backed Israel in screening out Palestinians, shifted its concern to include the impact of the measures on the West Bank and Gaza and to engineer modifications.

Using a woman's voice

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Listen to political ads on television and the voice of authority behind the images is almost always a man's.

The most notable exception is when a candidate wants to get down and dirty. Then, a woman's voice is the choice.

"If you want to present negative ads, we like them to be very reasoned," said Russ Schriever of the Stuart Stevens Group, a New York City firm that makes political ads. "Using a woman's voice to give a reasoned voice kind of takes some of the edge off."

Candidates also are more likely to use a female voice when they want to reach women voters on a particular issue. The Stuart Stevens agency used a woman's voice for ads touting Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole's family values.

WORLD BRIEFS

Britain's beef industry

TURIN, Italy — The European Union's ban on British beef exports has put Prime Minister John Major of Britain in a delicate spot.

He must be suitably angry at today's EU summit to please the vocal anti-Europe camp in his governing Conservative Party. But he can't overdo it or his 14 EU partners may turn stony when it comes to footling the bill to restore Britain's beef industry and compensating farmers.

The need for EU funding to repair the ban's damage together with Britain's go-slow stance on further European integration raises the prospect of some horse-trading at the meeting.

British officials say they have no plans to pursue such bartering at the meeting, called to discuss closer union.

Arafat's regime

JERUSALEM — Hanan Ashrawi took a long drag from her cigarette and flashed a mischievous smile, recalling how fellow members of the new Palestinian legislature rejected some of Yasser Arafat's key proposals.

"We have good bylaws," Ashrawi said, shaking her head as if to quell suspicions that the 88-seat council is nothing but a rubber stamp for the PLO leader. "The council members take their jobs seriously."

His musical background comes through three generations. After being born in Key West, Fla., he attended school through the ninth grade in Miami.

He moved with his family to Sanford where he has been a viable part of Sanford and nearby Central Florida communities.

Butler's career as a disc jockey began while in high school. He is a musician by day and night. On Sunday mornings he can be seen at St. John Baptist Church and other churches which invite him to blend his drum music in with their choirs. He can accommodate churches by installing number one electric P.A.

the sum of the century, Old Faithful was highly dependable in hourly eruptions, to the minute. In the past 25 years, the geyser has been timed at anywhere from 65 to 77 minutes.

people have speculated that the syndrome is brought about by the geyser's vent.

IN BRIEF

AROUND THE STATE

A tie in baseball?

WEST PALM BEACH — Derek Aucoin, ticketed by Montreal to be the closer at AAA Ottawa, pitched two hitless innings to help the Expos to a 3-3 tie with the Florida Marlins. Aucoin struck out the side in the ninth and worked through the final inning — the 10th — before the game was called.

The Expos scored two runs in the seventh on passed balls by Florida catcher Charles Johnson. With runners on second and third, Johnson let a pitch from Kevin Brown get away, allowing David Segui to score. Brown's next pitch, a high fastball, also got by Johnson and Henry Rodriguez scored.

Darrin Fletcher drove in a run in the second inning for Montreal.

The Marlins got two runs in the fourth. Devon White brought in a run when his grounder was bobbled by Mark Grudziclanek and Quilvio Vera followed with a run-scoring single.

Gary Sheffield drove in a run in the ninth.

Marlins finalize roster

WEST PALM BEACH — The Florida Marlins finalized their opening day roster Thursday by optioning relief pitcher Jay Powell to Triple-A Charlotte and dropping pitcher Mark Gardner from the major league squad.

David Weathers, who pitched two scoreless innings in the Marlins' 3-3 10-inning tie with Montreal, survived the cut and was retained for the middle reliever's spot in the bullpen.

His performance Thursday dropped his earned run average this spring to 4.19. He held opponents scoreless in five of his last six outings.

Gardner was offered two choices by the Marlins. He could either be released to negotiate with other teams or go to Charlotte, where the Marlins could recall him or use him as a trade.

Powell is expected to be back with the Marlins, perhaps as soon as 18 days into the season when Matt Mantel completes his 90 days of active service time.

Powell, who allowed just two earned runs in 9 1/3 spring innings, will go to Charlotte and work as a closer.

Penguins edge Panthers

MIAMI — Mario Lemieux and Jaromir Jagr became only the second teammates to both score 60 goals in a season when each connected in Pittsburgh's 3-2 victory over Florida.

Lemieux got his 64th goal and Jagr scored his 60th. Wayne Gretzky (73) and Jari Kurri (71), then with Edmonton, did it in 1994-95.

The Panthers broke ahead 1-0 just 15 seconds into the game on a goal by Mike Hough.

Lemieux's power-play goal with 1:07 left tied it. Then he set up a power-play goal by Ron Francis with 43 seconds remaining.

Jagr's goal came at 13:42 of the second period, putting Pittsburgh ahead 3-1.

Florida pulled to 3-2 on a goal by Rob Niedermayer with 3:04 left in the third period, but Pittsburgh held off a final charge.

Graf reaches Lipton finale

KEY BISCAYNE — Top-seeded Steffi Graf extended her winning streak to 18 matches, beating No. 8 Lindsay Davenport 6-4, 6-4 in the semifinals of the Lipton Championships.

In the other semifinal, No. 6 Chanda Rubin beat Karina Habaudova 4-6, 6-4, 6-2. In men's quarterfinals, No. 2 Pete Sampras defeated Vince Spadea 6-3, 6-4 and No. 6 Goran Ivanisevic beat No. 4 Michael Chang 6-4, 6-4. No. 3 Andre Agassi will play No. 15 Arnaud Boetach in the other semifinal.

NEW YORK — While one of Stephen Marbury's older brothers said the freshman guard will enter the NBA draft, Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins insists the Yellow Jackets star is still considering his options.

Cremins said an announcement about Marbury's future will be made Tuesday or Wednesday. Donald Marbury Jr., one of Stephen's three older brothers, told the Daily News the decision already has been made.

ESPN and the Atlanta Journal-Constitution also said Marbury would enter the June draft. Underclassmen have until May 12 to announce their intentions.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Connecticut's Jennifer Rizzotti, who has helped keep the Huskies in the running for a second straight national title, is the AP women's player of the year.

Angie Lee, who engineered a dramatic turnaround at Iowa in her first season, was selected the coach of the year in balloting by Associated Press member newspapers.

“Bonanza” begins

Lake Brantley to host prestigious tournament

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Editor

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The eighth annual “Big Blue Bonanza” baseball tournament kicks off its five day run beginning tomorrow at Lake Brantley High School.

The event has become one of the better high school tournaments in the state, attracting some of the top teams. The winner of this tournament has gone on to the state championship game in their class each year.

The “Big Blue Bonanza” is a favorite of scouts, both professional and college.

They will be a new champion crowned this year as two-time defending champion Key West, the No. 1 ranked high school team in the nation, has decided not to return for an opportunity at a “three-peat.”

In last year's final, the Conchs defeated surprising Deltona 6-1 for the championship.

Lake Brantley finished third, Seminole fourth, New Smyrna Beach fifth, Lake Mary sixth, Lake Howell seventh and Edgewater eighth.

Local teams competing in this year's field are the host Lake Brantley Patriots, Seminole High School Fighting Seminoles, Lake Mary Rams, Oviedo Lions, Dr. Phillips Panthers, Deltona Wolves, New Smyrna Beach Barracudas, Mainland Buccaneers and Spruce Creek Hawks.

Completing the 16-team field are the Delray Beach-Atlantic Eagles, Jacksonville-First Coast Buccaneers, Neptune Beach (Jacksonville)-Fletcher Senators, Satellite Beach-Satellite Scorpions, Groveland-South Lake Eagles, Boca Raton-Spanish River Sharks and Ocala-Vanguard Knights.

Five of the 16 teams in the tournament were receiving votes in this week's Florida Sports Writers Association state poll. Dr. Phillips is ranked 5th in Class 6A, while Deltona is rated 6th in 6A. Satellite is 8th and First Coast is 11th in Class 5A; and South Lake is 11th in Class 4A.

Saturday's opening day schedule, at Lake Brantley, has South Lake playing Mainland at 10 a.m.; Oviedo taking on New Smyrna Beach at 1 p.m.; Seminole battling Vanguard at 4 p.m.; and Sr. Phillips facing Satellite at 7 p.m.

The rest of the first round, also at Lake Brantley, will take place on Monday. At 10 a.m., Fletcher hosts Spruce Creek; at 1 p.m., First Coast challenges Lake Brantley; at 4 p.m., Deltona tackles Spanish River; and at 7 p.m., Lake Mary welcomes Atlantic.

There will be four games a day at both Lake Brantley and Seminole (starting Monday morning). Games at Lake Brantley start at 8 a.m., 11 a.m., 4 p.m. and 7 p.m., while games at Seminole (Loser's Bracket) start at 8:30 a.m., 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The tournament will conclude with the championship game at Lake Brantley at 7 p.m. on Thursday.

Padilla pitches SCC past Lake City

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Seminole Community College did not get a lot of offense Thursday, but what it did get Ricky Padilla made count as the Raiders blanked Lake City Community College 2-0 in a Mid-Florida Conference baseball contest stopped after six innings because of rain.

Padilla, a freshman from Lake Howell, scattered five hits and did not walk a batter as he improved his record to 4-2 on the season. The righthander struck out three.

The Raiders also had five safeties, but three of the five led to runs.

Oviedo's Adam Coleman, a freshman, deposited the first pitch of the second inning into the trees beyond the left center field fence for his second home run of the season.

In the third inning, Eric Kindell grounded out to short to open the inning, but Okeechobee freshman Tim Gillis smacked his fourth double of the season to right center field and moved to third on a single by Jacksonville's Gerald Eady. St. Cloud's Chris Thorne then reached on an infield single to third with Gillis crossing the plate with SCC's second run.

Robert Marciano had the other Seminole hit, collecting his 10th double of the season.

The Raiders improved to 16-18 overall, but more importantly stayed right in the thick of the conference race with a 7-3 record. The Timberwolves fell to 23-12 overall and 6-6 in the M-FC. SCC will play a non-conference game against Harper College from Illinois today at 3 p.m. before heading to Palatka on Saturday for an M-FC doubleheader against St. Johns River Community College starting at noon on Saturday.

Seminole Community College head coach Jack Pantallas makes a point to pitcher Ricky Padilla (No. 12, top photo) prior to Thursday's Mid-Florida Conference game with Lake City and the advice must have worked as the Lake Howell freshman tossed a five-hit shutout as the Raiders topped the Timberwolves 2-0. Oviedo's Adam Coleman (above, left) gets congratulations from third base coach Ed Dickmyer after hitting his second home run of the season and Tim Gillis (above, right) rips a double that led to SCC's other run.

Bleach removes mildew stains

Description of mildew. Mildew, a discoloration on the surface of house paint, is caused by certain stain fungi (small forms of plant life). The commonest species are black, but some are red, green, or other colors. Mildew fungi grow most extensively in warm humid climates. They grow on paint on both sunny and shaded sides of buildings, but particularly on walls behind trees or shrubs where movement of air is restricted.

Mildew fungi can be distinguished from dirt by examination under a high-power magnifying glass. In the growing stage, when the paint surface is damp or wet, the fungus is characterized by its threadlike growth. In its dormant stage, when the surface is dry, it has numerous egg-shaped spores; by contrast, granular particles of dirt are irregular in size and shape. A useful confirmatory test for the presence of mildew on paint can be made by applying a drop or two of common household bleach solution (5 percent sodium hypochlorite) to the stain. This solution will usually bleach the stain in 1 or 2 minutes. Stain that does not bleach is probably dirt. It is important to use fresh bleach solution because bleach deteriorates on standing and loses potency.

CONSUMER FOCUS

How paint makeup affects mildew. Some paints are more vulnerable than others to attack by mildew fungi. Zinc oxide, a common paint pigment in top coats, mildly inhibits the growth of these fungi; thus paints that contain an appreciable amount of zinc oxide are not so vulnerable to mildew. Titanium pigments have very little inhibiting effect on mildew. Mildew develops on soft paints more readily than on hard ones; for example, it progresses more readily on exterior flat house paint than on exterior enamel. Paints containing linseed oil are very susceptible to mildew without adding either zinc oxide pigment or a mildewcide (a poison for mildew fungi). Porous latex (water-base) paints without mildewcide applied over a primer with linseed oil will develop severe mildew in warm, damp climates. Acrylic latex paints are the most mildew resistant of the water-base paints.

Prevention and cure.

● Before considering repainting, consider changes, such as moving shrubbery close to the painted surface, that can be made to avoid the return of mildew.

● In warm, damp climates where mildew occurs frequently, use a paint containing zinc oxide and a mildewcide for top coats over the mildewcide-containing primer coat.

● For mild cases of mildew, use a paint containing a mildewcide. Frequently, a mildewcide can be purchased at a paint store and mixed into the paint.

● Ideally, to cure mildew, remove the mildew from the old paint surface and treat with a water repellent preservative or other fungicide before repainting. After treatment, apply a paint that contains a mildewcide.

● To kill the fungi and clean areas for repainting, scrub the paint surface with the following solution:

1 ounce (1/4 cup or 30 ml) household detergent

1 quart (946 ml) (5 pct) sodium hypochlorite (household bleach)

3 quarts (2,838 ml) warm water or enough to make 1 gallon (3,785 ml)

Scrub with a fairly soft brush, rinse thoroughly with fresh water from a hose.

● Treat the old paint surface with a fungicide and repaint with a zinc oxide-containing acrylic or latex paint.

Lying is normal part of growing up

In last week's column we heard from the parent of a teen-ager whose lying had gotten out of control. This week we will look at the dynamics behind this kind of behavior, how and why it gets started and how parents can intervene positively when their children lie.

Lying is a normal part of growing up. Very young children may lie based on wishful thinking. A preschooler may say that Barney came to her house yesterday. As the child gets older she may begin to lie when she is frustrated. She may make up stories that she wishes were true, such as, "I'm going to ride on an airplane to see my grandma."

Nearly all teen-agers lie to their parents at one time or another. They may lie to protect themselves from punishment, to make themselves feel important or to gain some benefit that they feel they need. "I was in by midnight, but I forgot to wake you up." "Somebody stole my lunch money; can I have $5 for the rest of the week?" "I lost my report card, but I had all As and Bs." These are the kinds of lies teens often tell their parents.

FAMILY COUNSELOR

Now, ask yourself - have you lied to your kids? Kids learn about honesty from a very early age by experiencing it, and parents are always the primary teachers. Did you tell your child that the booster shot wouldn't hurt? If your teen asked whether you used drugs in the 70s, did you tell the truth?

Lying always injures trust regardless of whether it's the child lying to the parents, or vice versa. Regardless, most kids will grow up to be reasonably honest especially if the parents consistently model open, honest and appropriate behavior.

Chronic lying is a form of acting out. It may be an underground way to "get even" in response to feelings of rejection. Deceiving people gives the teen a feeling of power. However, the continued lying may reach a point where their perception of reality becomes confused and interferes with the ability to react to a situation logically.

If your child lies frequently, what can you do to change the situation?

First, model honest behavior. Do not try to hide important pieces of your life. If Dad has a drinking problem, don't lie about it. If your first child was conceived before your marriage, acknowledge that you made a mistake and you hope your teen Second, leave the art of interrogation to law enforcement. Don't trap your child between confessing and telling more lies.

If you know she lied about going to the movies yesterday, say so.

Third, when your child lies, try to understand the meaning behind it. Did she lie because she's afraid of your reaction if she told the truth? When punishment is appropriate, grounding and taking away privileges are reasonable; beatings, screaming and threats are not. It is also appropriate for the child to feel guilty about lying, but do not make her feel unlovable or stupid. A young person who feels worthless and unloved may become self-destructive.

Traits of a potential abuser

DEAR READERS: Yesterday I published a letter from the grandparents of a 19-year-old woman who was brutally murdered by a young man with whom she had lived for four months. Her grieving family asked if I would reprint the column that outlined the traits of a potential batterer. In her memory, here it is. It was adapted from "Signs to Look for in a Battering Personality," with permission from the Project for Victims of Family Violence, Fayetteville, Ark.

REASONS TO LEAVE YOUR LOVER. WARNING SIGNS OF AN ABUSIVE PERSONALITY

Something's just not right in your relationship, and you can't put your finger on it. So here's some help. If your mate is displaying a combination of these behaviors, then you may have a potential batterer on your hands.

1. A PUSH FOR QUICK INVOLVEMENT:

Comes on very strong, claiming, "I've never felt loved like this by anyone." An abuser pressures the woman for an exclusive commitment almost immediately.

2. JEALOUSY: Excessively possessive; calls constantly or visits unexpectedly; prevents you from going to work because "you might meet someone"; checks the mileage on your car.

3. CONTROLLING: Interrogates you intensely (especially if you're late) about whom you talked to, and where you were; keeps all the money; insists you ask permission to go anywhere or do anything.

4. UNREALISTIC EXPECTATIONS:

Expects you to be the perfect woman and meet his every need.

5. ISOLATION: Tries to cut you off from family and friends; accuses people who are your supporters of "causing trouble"; the abuser may deprive you of a phone or car or try to prevent you from holding a job.

6. BLAMES OTHERS FOR PROBLEMS AND MISTAKES: The boss, you - it's always someone else's fault if anything goes wrong.

7. MAKES EVERYONE ELSE RESPONSIBLE FOR HIS FEELINGS: The abuser says, "You make me angry" instead of, "I am angry" or, "You're hurting me by not doing what I tell you." Less obvious is the claim: "You make me happy."

8. HYPERSENSITIVITY: Is easily insulted, claiming that his feelings are hurt when he is really mad. He'll rant about the injustice of things that are just part of life.

Baptist youth complete course

SUSAN WENNER

SANFORD — A total of 37 youth recently graduated from an etiquette class and more presented by members of the First Baptist Church of Sanford. Male and female teenagers took this 13 week course in an effort to improve their walk with the Lord through their appearance and speech.

Various professional instructors were on hand each week to speak on numerous subjects. A physician, hair stylist, nutritionist, physical therapist, principal and business professional all shared their expertise with the young people.

The church members also worked together to present the topic of "Understanding Sexual Morality" in a Christ-like fashion. Mayor Bettye Smith shared tips on overcoming self-consciousness.

Other topics covered were relating to good eating habits, the importance of physical exercise, skin care, proper posture, hair care, choosing the right clothing, personality testing and importance of proper conversational skills.

The young ladies were treated to a color analysis. All were taught and practiced good manners.

covered. The young gentlemen were taught the proper way to seat a lady.

A professional model was available to teach the correct runway walk for the fashion show that topped off the course. Clothing for the final event was selected by the students.

Casual and formal clothing was modeled. Sears at the Seminole Towne Center, Sacoos, Old Navy Clothing Store and Brenners at the Altamonte Mall all donated outfits for the show.

According to Sidney Brock, youth minister of First Baptist, "the fashion show was the culmination of the graduation of the 13 week course." He also shared that the event held limited seating and it was "maxed out."

The graduation and fashion show titled, "Spring into Fashion" was held at the Sanora Clubhouse. Catering by handled by Linda Kelley.

The food and decorations were "lavish and elegant," said Brock. "We had fingerfoods, hors d'oeuvres, a fruit basket, vegetable tray, a graduation cake and punch. It was a nice, nice day."

Caleb Hiebert, a male participant, commented, "I enjoyed it (the course). It taught me a lot of good stuff. It taught me how to respect elders, women and myself and how to treat myself."

Katy Paul, a young lady graduate, said, "I thought the course was helpful to each of us. It showed me a better way to act and be. It taught me how to treat people in authority and how to talk to and address people I don't know. It taught us how to improve our appearance and how to act more lady-like."

A parent, Pat Fosellus, added, "I really appreciated this. Young people find themselves out in public without their parents. They feel self-conscious and unsure of themselves. The course taught them how to behave in an acceptable manner, how to dress, behave at a dinner table and how to greet people. If they are shy they have that knowledge to draw on. It was great to see these kids begin the course and see the metamorphosis and how they changed over this period of time."

Hypertension drugs are not addictive

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife suffers from high blood pressure. She is on three drugs. Because her company changed insurance plans, her new doctor wants to give her two different medications instead. He says there is no danger — she will be on them for the rest of her life. Our pharmacist says no, that medication can be very addictive and it should only be for short-term use. Who's right?

DEAR READER: I'm afraid you misunderstood the pharmacist. Your doctor is correct.

Hypertension is a common and serious disease that will invariably lead to heart disease, stroke and kidney disorders, if not treated.

Although most people with high blood pressure can be successfully treated with mono-therapy (one drug), many hypertensives require two or more drugs to bring the blood pressure down and keep it normal. In general, such therapy must be continued for several years.

The medicines used to treat hypertension are not addictive; they merely lower the blood pressure and produce other beneficial results, such as protecting the kidneys and reducing the cardiac workload. These drugs are not just for short-term use.

In fact, stopping them without medical supervision can lead to dangerous "over-shoot," when the blood pressure rebounds to unacceptably high levels.

Follow the doctor's advice. I believe that the pharmacist has unnecessarily confused the issue. This surprises me, because pharmacists and doctors generally agree and work well together as part of the health care team.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Every now and then I have a lot of clear, slimy discharge from my rectum that lasts for about a day. I'm too embarrassed to ask my doctor about this, but feel comfortable with you.

DEAR READER: A clear rectal discharge may indicate a simple problem, such as low-grade inflammation or hemorrhoids, that could be easily cured with medication.

While I am complimented that you can share an embarrassing problem with me, your family physician is really the person to whom you must turn. Ask him — or her — for an examination that should, in my opinion, include flexible sigmoidoscopy, an office procedure during which the doctor examines your lower colon with a fiberoptic instrument.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently had tests on my gallbladder. While there don't appear to be any stones, there is, as my doctor says, sludge. I've taken Actigall to thin the sludge, but it hasn't helped. Should my gallbladder be removed or is other treatment available?

DEAR READER: Most acute attacks of gallbladder pain are caused by stones that form in this organ and either irritate the gallbladder lining or block the flow of bile, leading to excruciating abdominal cramps, fever, jaundice, and liver inflammation. As a general rule, gallstones range in size from a grain of rice to objects as big as a penny.

However, sometimes gallstones don't actually form; the gallbladder becomes filled with a pasty deposit that doctors call "sludge." This material can act the same way that fully formed stones can — and is diagnosed the same way: by ultrasound or X-ray studies.

Actigall is a prescription drug that dissolves some types of gallstones and sludge. Evidently, it didn't dissolve yours. Therefore, your best option is probably to have your gallbladder

MEDICINE

(and its contents) removed. This is a relatively simple operation. Today's technology permits surgeons to operate on the gallbladder using laparoscopy ("band-aid" procedure). Once the gallbladder is out, you should have no more difficulties.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Gallbladder Disease."

WIN AT BRIDGE

Count up the spoils

By Phillip Alder

While looking up quotations for these columns, I learn some facts of debatable value. For example, what was George Eliot's real name?

In "Adam Bede," Eliot wrote, "There's no real making amends in this world, any more nor you can mend a wrong subtraction by doing your addition right."

Another budding bridge player! If you can't add up correctly, you have an "incorrect view" around the corner — like the declarer in today's deal.

A jump rebid of opener's original suit shows about seven playing-tricks. North, with two trumps and a near maximum for his response of one no-trump, was happy to go on to the vulnerable game.

West guessed well to lead the diamond 10, his partner winning the first three tricks in the suit. Then East exited with the club queen.

Declarer won with his ace, played a spade to dummy's jack and finessed the heart jack. However, West produced the queen: one down.

When he noticed that West had begun with only two hearts, South said, "Just my luck. I take the percentage play in hearts, but the wrong line works this time. Huh!"

"You can't make amends now, but you didn't do your addition. How many points has East produced?"

"Well, eight in diamonds and presumably three in clubs."

"Right! Yet he couldn't open the bidding. How can he have the heart queen as well? You must play out the ace and king as your only chance."

George Eliot's real name was Marian Evans Cross.

HOROSCOPE

Saturday, March 30, 1996

In the year ahead you might have success with products, methods or people who are progressive and inventive. Operating along traditional lines could hold you back, so try new things.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It might be wise today to avoid taking financial risks. Also, do not provide fiscal advice to others unless you're prepared to share the blame for a failure. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) The balance between harmony and hostility in your household will be delicate today. Even small infractions can ignite sparks and start fires.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you may hear one of your friends degrade a pal who isn't present. He or she does not deserve the harsh treatment, so stand up for your buddy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Carefully screen all of your new involvements at the time. You might be held accountable for financial losses incurred by someone else in the group.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Use caution when dealing with others today. Arrogant or condescending behavior will only invite harsh criticism in the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you do favors for others today, act out of the kindness of your heart. If you have ulterior motives, people will see right through you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A poorly informed friend might encourage you to gamble on something about which you both know little. Do not let the blind lead the blind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) Ambition is a laudable trait. However, in your quest for success, you should not hurt others. A tarnished victory won't leave you with much to admire.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you deviate from your blueprint today, you could drift off on nonproductive tangents. Try to finish what you start.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you cannot achieve parity in an endeavor, you may have a low success rate today. Make certain that each person can hold up his or her end of the bargain.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A matter of equal significance to you and your mate might cause you to pull in opposite directions today. Try to get your heads together.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) A well-intentioned friend might offer a helping hand today. Unfortunately, your pal may be a poor assistant and create more work than he or she accomplishes.
