Neighbors march against drugs

By MARVA HAWKINS
Herald Columnist

Neighbors in areas plagued by drugs and those who are concerned about the local problem are invited to march against drug dealers Friday.

Involvement includes: The Central Florida Prevention Coalition of Sanford, a partnership of Seminole Hope and Orlando Fights Back (sponsored by the Grove Counseling Center, Inc. and the Center For Drug Free Living). The effort is fueled by money from the Center for Substance Abuse and Prevention and HRS/Administration District Seven. Officials join the Neighborhood Advisory Council of Goldsboro and Lockhart and surrounding communities to bring the Write Process of Taking Back Your Neighborhood to Sanford.

Over 10 years ago, Coach Herman Write discovered one of his team's quarterbacks was taking drugs. He located his quarterback's drug dealer and chased him out of town. Wright has been running off drug dealers ever since.

Volunteers are invited to march through Goldsboro and Lockhart neighborhoods Friday, Nov. 8, 6:30 p.m. Participants such as community leaders, churches and students are invited to meet for a pre-march training at the West Sanford Boys and Girls Club, 919 South Perimmon Ave., 6:00 p.m.

This will be the sixth march held in Seminole County. Join the march against drugs and drug dealers. Take back our neighborhood from drug dealers and crime!

Lake Mary to discuss paving, drainage

By NICK PFEIFAUT
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — After many months of work, planning and fine-tuning, a proposed paving and drainage assessment resolution is scheduled to come before the Lake Mary City Commission for final approval this evening.

The area involved, zone 8, includes Washington Ave., Van Buren Ave., Fourth Street and Fifth Street, a total of 63 separate parcels of property.

The total project cost is listed at $708,989, including construction, engineering and right of way purchases.

Public hearings are scheduled this evening shortly after 7:30. The commission meeting will begin at 7 p.m., but will be temporarily recessed following the swearing in of newly elected Mayor David Meador and re-elected commissioner Gary Brender, and a reception in their honor.

All affected parties involved in the paving and drainage projects have reportedly been notified, and with public hearing scheduled, will be allowed to voice their opinions on the proposed resolution.

The city has determined that the amount of money to be charged against each property owner will be based on ETUs (Equivalent Traffic Units) at a charge of $2,387.17 per ETU. The city says there are 89.1 ETUs involved in this area scheduled for paving and drainage work. Almost all of the structures con-

Keepsake pin to accompany astronaut Shuttle mission postponed, but Buzz Lightyear can wait

By JOHN SALISBURY
Special to the Herald

When Columbia STS-80 launches, hopefully next week after being scrubbed for Friday, Buzz Lightyear in the form of a 1" x 1 3/4" pin, will be aboard. Astronaut Dr. Story Musgrave is carrying Sanford Herald Shuttle Photographer John Salisbury's Buzz pin among his personal gear. Dr. Musgrave (Story) will be the oldest astronaut, at 61, to go into space and will be Orlando's John Young for the most space flights (8). Another "First" will be credited to Story once Columbia lifts off. He will be the only astronaut to have flown aboard all of NASA's five operational Space Shuttles: Challenger (STS-51L) 1985, Discovery (STS-33) 1989, Atlantis (STS-44) 1991, Endeavor (STS-61) 1993 and Columbia (STS-80) 1996.

An FAA rated instructor pilot, Story has flown 17,700 hours in 160 different types of aircraft. An accomplished parachutist, he has made over 500 free falls including over 100 experimental free-fall descents involved with the study of human aerodynamics. Among his numerous contributions to mankind, he has written 25 scientific papers in the areas of aerospace medicine and physiology, temperature regulation, exercise physiology and clinical surgery.

Story's achievements here are taken from a three page NASA biographical data sheet. Salisbury, in June of this year, received a request from Dr. Musgrave for transparencies of his launch photo taken on December 2, 1993, when Story flew on the STS-61 (First Hubble Telescope Repair Mission). He will be using the slides in his future

Starting his ninth term

ORLANDO — Who would have believed a tax collector would be this popular?
 Orange County official Earl K. Wood will begin his 33rd year in the tax collector's office when he is sworn in for his ninth four-year term. The 80-year-old Wood first took over the job in 1964.
 In his folksy campaign style, Wood often reminded voters that he could dance. And he celebrated his victory Tuesday night with a jig.
 "What a victory," Wood said about his defeat of County Commissioner Bill Donegan, who hammered at documented flaws in the tax collector's operation.
 An audit by County Comptroller Martha Haynie this year noted numerous deficiencies in Wood's office, including delays in tax-collection deposits, which cost taxpayers some interest.
 Despite the critical audits, Wood contended that taxpayers are still receiving quick and efficient service. He extended his streak as the county government's longest-serving elected official.
 With a precinct or two still to be counted, Wood had 113,998 votes to 83,498 for Donegan.

Grand jury to decide on cop shooting

ST. PETERSBURG — Witnesses began testifying before a grand jury that will decide whether the police shooting that spurred a night of rioting two weeks ago was justified.
 The 16-member grand jury meets in secret and the testimony is closed to the public. It will decide whether police officer Jim Knight should face charges for fatally shooting 18-year-old TyRon Lewis on Oct. 24.
 About 300 people roamed the streets following the shooting, hurling molotov cocktails, rocks and bottles, and setting 29 fires. Several police officers and fire fighters were injured in the melee. Damages have been estimated at upwards of $5 million.
 Knight's partner was among the witnesses at the Pinellas County courthouse Wednesday, as was a 17-year-old boy who was a passenger in Lewis' car.
 The grand jury was expected to hear more testimony today.

Woman: story used without permission

DADE CITY — A woman whose abuse as a child was used in a book and a movie about baby swapping is suing the author, who is her sister, and others for $30 million.
 The woman, Sophia J. Gibbons, says the information was published without her permission and that the revelations humiliated her.
 Gibbons is the sister of Regina Twigg, who wrote a 1993 book, The Baby Swap Conspiracy.
 The book tells how Mrs. Twigg and her husband, Ernest Twigg, discovered that their baby had been switched at birth. They discovered this mistake in 1986, 10 years after she was born.
 Their real child, Kimberly Mays, won a legal battle to remain with Robert Mays, the man who ended up with Kimberly in the hospital confusion. Mays' daughter, Ariens, was raised by the Twiggs.

First Hispanic on Osceola commission

KISSIMMEE — The chairman of the Osceola County Commission was defeated for re-election by political newcomer Robert G. Guevara, who will be the first Hispanic to serve on the panel.
 Guevara beat Charles Owen, an eight-year commission veteran, 58 percent to 44 percent.
 "This is not just a triumph for one particular group," said Guevara, a Democrat. "I'm for the whole county."
 He will become the first minority member of the commission. "I don't feel like a minority — Osceola County is my home," he said.
 Owens was dogged by ethical questions most of the year. The Florida Commission on Ethics questioned him about his real estate interests near a convention center project he was pushing. He also had a financial interest in a company proposing a bus-shelter advertising plan to the commission.

Man said he assaulted, killed baby

LAUDERHILL — An unemployed man who baby-sat the year-old daughter of a roommate is charged with sexually assaulting and killing the infant.
 Everett Dwayne Carter, 23, had lived with his wife and her best friend, Natalie Isidore, for three weeks after being discharged from the Navy. Unable to find a job, he watched his own 2-year-old son and little Bridget Isidore while her mother worked.
 Carter, who was arrested Wednesday, told police he had molested Bridget on Tuesday. When she bled and cried, he tried to calm her by tossing her in the air and catching her — but the baby fell and hit her head on a table.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Without Amendment 4, what happens with Amendment 5?

By CATHERINE WILSON
 Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Voters decided they like the idea of having polluters pay for Everglades cleanup.
 Now it's up to lawyers to decide what that means.
 With the tax on sugar growers dead, Amendment 5 adds language to the state Constitution making water polluters in the Everglades farming area primarily responsible for cleanup costs.

Proponents said Wednesday they now have a landmark environmental law with the power of a constitutional hammer.
 Thom Rumberger, chief attorney for Save Our Everglades, conceded the measure's meaning is not fully understood, but backers say it will accelerate the pace of Everglades cleanup, put sugar farmers on a bigger financial hook and open the door for lawsuits to force compliance.
 "Amendment 5 will be a powerful tool to bring them

(sugar growers) to their senses," he said. "Any statute, rule or regulation in conflict is now or will be declared unconstitutional."
 Bob Baker, U.S. Sugar Corp. senior vice president, took the opposition's election reaction as sour grapes from sore losers.
 "They're kind of beating the war drums, aren't they?" he said. "They seem to be more interested in trying to extract money from farmers than letting a process go forward that was making progress."

 Alfonso Panjul, millionaire president of Flo-Sun Inc., the sugar industry leader, said: "We're prepared to clean whatever it is we're supposed to clean. On the other hand we feel it was punitive punishment to focus on a single industry."
 Rejection of the tax on sugar growers in essence sends funding questions back to the state Legislature, which will be lobbied next year to get involved again.

Employee of the month

Bill Marcus, project coordinator for the city of Sanford Utility Department is presented the November employee of the month recognition award from Mayor Bettye Smith. Marcus is involved in the safety program for the department, and is involved with the reclaimed water program. He created the "Good Neighbor" fund program which has raised over $1,000 to help people in need.

Graham says results a factor in his decision

By BILL KASSON
 Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Election results that show voters seem to favor splitting governmental responsibilities between parties will be a major factor in U.S. Sen. Bob Graham's decision about his next political move.
 The Miami Lakes Democrat will announce Monday in Opa-locka whether he will seek re-election in 1998 or run again for governor, an office he held from 1979 through 1987.

and we'll be trying to decide," Graham said Wednesday. "I'm looking at what happened yesterday in terms of the elections and what that indicates the desire of the people to be."
 Although President Clinton, a Democrat, won re-election, Republicans retained control of Congress, padding their 53-47 Senate majority by at least one seat.
 On the state level, Republicans for the first time since Reconstruction took control of the Florida House and added one seat to their 22-18 Senate majority.

NASA tries to launch Mars craft again

By MARGIA BURN
 AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — A day after strong wind scuttled a launch, NASA prepared again today to send a spacecraft to Mars as part of a mission to determine whether there was ever life on the Red Planet.
 Global Surveyor, scheduled for a noon launch, replaces a probe that mysteriously disappeared three years ago.
 The spacecraft, which will study the Martian surface and atmosphere, will take 10 months to make the 435 million-mile trip and another six months to ease into a mapping orbit.
 "It's the beginning of a long sequence of missions ultimately whose goal must be to determine whether or not life was ever on Mars or even perhaps exists now," said Wesley Huntress Jr., NASA space science chief.
 Clouds and wind scuttled two launch attempts Wednesday. NASA has until Nov. 25 to launch the Global Surveyor on a Delta rocket. Otherwise it will have to wait two years until the planets are in proper alignment.
 The Global Surveyor, the first of 10 U.S. spacecraft to be sent to Mars over the next decade, is the long-awaited successor to the Mars Observer, the last NASA probe sent to the planet. It never reached Mars for reasons still unknown.

 NASA expects to launch a pair of relatively inexpensive spacecraft to Mars every 26 months through 2005, including a robotic mission to return Martian soil and rocks to Earth that should settle the is-there-life-on-Mars debate.

The Global Surveyor, made mostly from leftover parts from the Mars Observer, will scout for future landing spots as it scans the Martian surface and atmosphere from a 235-mile-high orbit. Its mapping mission should begin in March 1998 and last 687 days, or a full Martian year.

Total mission cost: $230 million, one-fourth the cost of the much more elaborate Mars Observer program.
 The Mars Pathfinder will follow on Dec. 2 and, if all goes well, land on the planet on July 4, 1997, two months ahead of Global Surveyor's arrival.

Freighter runs aground off of Key Biscayne

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — Coast Guard officials will off load several tons of fuel to free a German freighter that ran aground off Key Biscayne.
 Igloo Moon was traveling from Saudi Arabia to Houston when it banked itself in shallow waters on Wednesday. It was carrying butadiene — a liquid gas used to make rubber — and 180,000 gallons of oil.
 "We're doing overflights every two hours to make sure nothing is leaking and we'll continue to do that throughout the night," Hollinghead said.

 Because the ship had punctured three of its fuel tanks, the Coast Guard was keeping boaters three miles away from the 464-foot freighter. Non-Coast Guard aircraft were being kept 3,000 feet away.
 Earlier on Wednesday, divers checked for leaks and surrounded the ship with containment booms.
 Hollinghead said Coast Guard crews would remove some of the fuel and gas.

Tuesday, officers located her at the trailer park and took her to the Sanford police station for questioning. She was subsequently charged with uttering a forged instrument, and petty/grand theft.

After being taken to the John E. Folk Correctional Facility, it was also discovered that she was wanted on an active warrant for violation of probation on a previous conviction of sale/purchase of cocaine. Police said there are other cases in which she may have been involved, and expect additional charges will be made.

Deputies said she was also wanted on a warrant for failing to appear on a charge of obtaining property with a worthless check.

Open container

David Leroy Jones, 57, 907 Bay Avenue, Sanford, was arrested by members of the Sanford police QUAD-based Tuesday. Officers said they saw Jones at 10th Street and Bay Avenue with a can of beer. They said when Jones saw the officers, he walked into a yard. After he was apprehended, the arrest report said he struck the officer in the face with his fist. He was arrested on charges of having an open container, and battery on a law enforcement officer. While the officer was not said to be badly injured, blood from his eye reportedly stained his uniform.

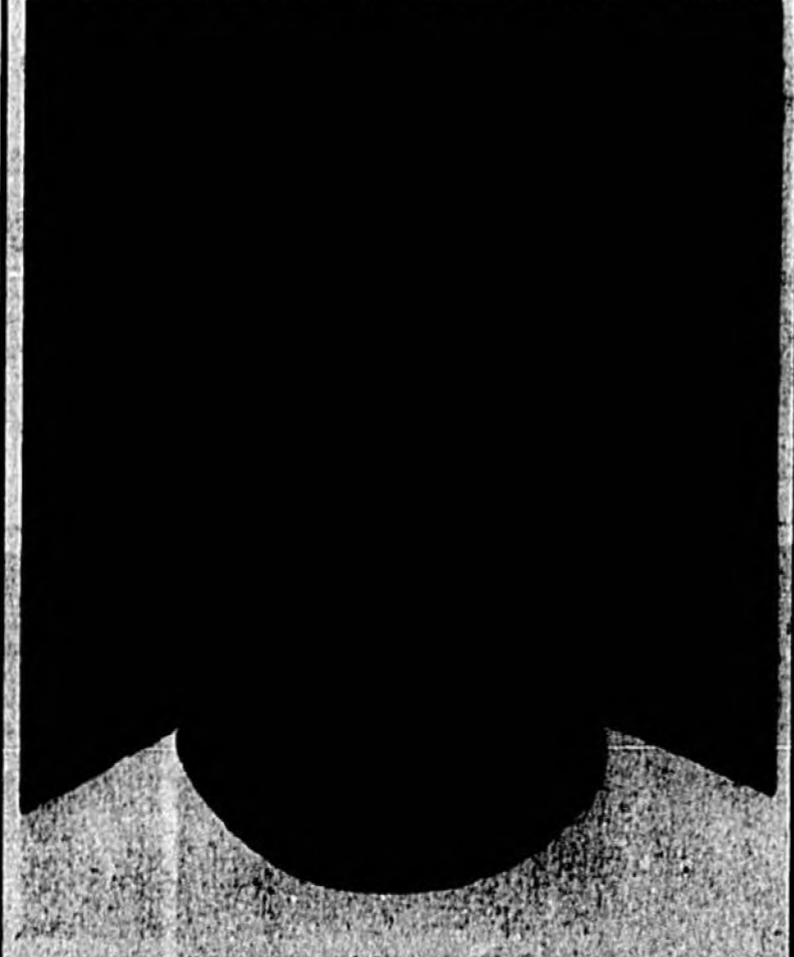

Miller A. Brown, 38, 1003 Cypress Avenue, was reportedly seen by Sanford police standing on 10th Street east of Cypress Avenue with a can of beer. As the officers approached, they said he walked into an alley near his residence. He was arrested on charges of having an open container and resisting an officer without violence.

Sanford police reports

Two men told police they were in a vehicle at the corner of Academy Avenue and Airport Blvd. Tuesday when two men pulled up in a black Nissan pickup. They said the two got out of the pickup and approached them with handguns, and eventually began shooting as the men in the car attempted to back from the area. Police said they found two Rem-um casings on the ground. Only two bullets reportedly struck the vehicle but no one was reportedly injured.

An estimated $1,500 in jewelry was reported stolen Tuesday from a residence in the 1100 block of Westcliff Circle in Sanford.

A stereo and jump battery box, with a total value of $483, were reported stolen Monday from a business in the 700 block of S. French Avenue in Sanford.

Arrested for sexual battery

Arthur A. Lewis, 24, a Major with the Esteroville police department, was arrested Wednesday at a residence in the 211 block of Winter Circle, Towne Center Apartments, in Sanford. Lewis was served with two Lake County warrants for sexual battery, in connection with the reported rape of his former girlfriend at her Leesburg apartment.

Vote leaves GOP, Clinton stressing common ground

By ALAN PRISM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Unlike the pugnacious bickering that marked their first shotgun marriage, President Clinton and congressional Republicans say they may be able to make a divided government work better the second time around.

"What the American people want us to do now is roll up our sleeves, get together," Clinton said Wednesday, a day after voters granted him a second term while retaining GOP majorities in the House and Senate.

He said if the two sides can continue the cooperation they showed in the final weeks of the 104th Congress just past, "We are going to have a great, great opportunity here."

Republicans said now that Clinton has adopted their agenda of balancing the budget and cutting taxes, there was potential for producing the progress that Americans are demanding.

"Assuming that 1997 is a continuation of what he campaigned on this year, there's no reason that we can't find common ground," House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., told supporters in Smyrna, Ga. "We don't have to live in a world of confrontation."

And Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said if Clinton follows up on his talk of eschewing big government, "We're going to be able to do some good things for the American people."

When Republicans captured congressional control in 1994 for the first time in four decades, both sides' rhetoric was less accommodating.

In his first Washington address following that vote, Gingrich served notice: "I am very prepared to cooperate with the Clinton administration. I am not prepared to compromise."

The president said then that he would reach out to the GOP but said he would not "compromise on my convictions."

But after a stormy first 16 months in which two partial federal shutdowns wounded the GOP in the public relations wars, Republicans decided to be less confrontational.

Republicans and the White House believe they benefited when they concluded the 1995-96 Congress with compromises on increasing the minimum wage, modest health-care expansions and other bills. Gingrich said GOP leaders would like to meet with Clinton next week to discuss the legislative agenda.

That doesn't mean there won't be combat. Lott promised hearings on Democratic fund-raising from foreign sources that raised questions during the campaign's final weeks, adding, "Congress does have a responsibility to look into these matters."

But some Republicans have little stomach to continue probing the Whitewater series of allegations against the president and his wife, Hillary Rodham

Clinton. That job should be left to special prosecutor Kenneth Starr, said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee. D'Amato also headed the special Senate panel that examined the Clintons' ties with the owners of a failed S&L and subsequent dealings.

"It's not the time to be looking at investigations, either by the banking committee or any other Senate panel, he said, reporters Wednesday.

Foremost, Republicans say they want to continue their agenda of trimming taxes, spending and federal regulations and balancing the budget.

But with some races still undecided, they face a new Congress in which House Republicans will have a slim margin of about 19 seats, rather than the approximately 40-vote edge they enjoyed the past two years. They seem likely to claim a 236-207 majority, with two independents.

They have added at least one Senate seat to the 53 they had this year, but even so remain well short of the 60 votes they would need to halt Democratic filibusters in the 100-seat chamber. Votes are still being counted in the open-seat Oregon Senate race between Democrat Tom Bruggers and Republican Gordon Smith.

This is causing Republicans, including some of the House's aggressive freshmen, to suggest that even though next year's goals of shrinking government will be the same, their party will have to moderate its approach.

"Congress will be more inclined to compromise," freshman Rep. Steve Largent, R-Okla., predicted in an interview.

Veteran commentator goes out with a bang

By DAVID SANDER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Apparently unaware he was on the air, veteran television commentator David Brinkley called President Clinton a "bore" during his final Election Night show and said voters can expect more "nonsense" for the next four years.

Fellow ABC correspondents gathered around anchor Peter Jennings and the 76-year-old Brinkley on ABC's set shortly after 12:30 a.m. Wednesday to talk about the election.

After covering presidential elections since the 1956 Eisenhower-Stevenson race, the 1980 election to Brinkley's last as a broadcaster. He's also stepping down this Sunday as host of "This Week With David Brinkley."

"We all look forward with great pleasure to four years of wonderful, inspiring speeches, full of wit, poetry, music, love and affection — plus more goddamned nonsense," Brinkley said.

Jennings broke in: "You can't say that on the air, Mr. Brinkley."

"Well, I'm not on the air," Brinkley said.

The conversation continued after Jennings reminded him twice more that cameras were rolling.

Brinkley called Clinton's Tuesday night speech after winning the election "one of the worst things I've ever heard." He said the speech was "totally unnecessary."

The commentator praised his ABC colleagues for their creativity and said it was not a quality shared by the president.

"He has not a creative bone in his body," Brinkley said. "Therefore, he's a bore, and will always be a bore."

An ABC spokeswoman said Brinkley could not immediately be reached for comment Wednesday.

Help find suspect in robbery

The Seminole County sheriff's office has released this composite sketch of one of the suspects in Tuesday's armed robbery of the Green Bucks Pawn Shop, 1204 W. SR-436 in Forest City. The suspect is a black male, approximately 28 years of age, six feet one inch tall, 150 pounds, brown eyes and short black hair. His heritage is either Hispanic or Jamaican. He is the only one the pawn shop owner could describe. A total of 23 semi-automatic weapons and revolvers were stolen in the robbery. Persons with information about the suspects are asked to contact the sheriff's office at 330-8860 or their local law enforcement agency.

SANFORD — It was music the likes of which few hear in live performance anymore, mostly from the 1920s, 30s and 40s. The 15-piece Deltonians provided the music for Wednesday afternoon's Sanford Golden Age Dance competition. The warm up began at 2 p.m. on the floor of the Sanford Civic Center. All types of music were presented to get the ankles, hips, and feet moving once again. Approximately 150 persons were in attendance, although most of the music drew only 30 to 35 couples onto the floor at a time. Following a 1940s swing number, many of the people in attendance left the floor apparently winded by the effort they had made to trip the light fantastic.

Only a few dozen were actual participants in the dancing. It is a known fact that the beginning time period, and for one or two numbers between each competitive dance event. It's considered "open floor" and "everyone dance."

Then as the competition began, couples with their identifying numbers took the floor. Competition was held, one number for each rhythm, for jitterbug, waltz, cha cha, tango, rhumba, polka and fox trot. Even the Alroy dance was a competitive event.

Very few persons under the age of 55 were on hand. Had they been, they would have seen some footwork and maneuvers on the dance floor that might even tire a teenager. Some dancers commented, "You just don't find this type of music anymore." A few said they practiced in the privacy of their own homes, but others said they regularly attended the dances, featuring the same band, held at the Sanford Civic Center each Wednesday during the fall and winter months of each year.

Participants were proud of their dancing skills. But they were also clearly proud of what others were accomplishing, and lent warm applause to the winners of each category.

The dance competition has been one of the longest-running competitive special events in the 23 year history of Sanford's games, and has always drawn a large gathering of dancers as well as wanna-be's, who stood in line during special numbers, waiting to be asked, "care to dance?"

Signs are everywhere

One thing we certainly have more of than we need these days, is signs. Tuesday's general election campaign signs certainly inundated our roadways. While some have now been taken down, many others still remain. Hopefully, they will be taken down as soon as possible, but such is not always the case.

Add to this number the signs which are still in preparation for other elections such as the Sanford City Commission races and Lake Mary runoff elections, both scheduled for Dec. 3. Signs seem to be everywhere.

Then there are the signs indicating home builders. Anyone who has driven through the Deltona exit to I-4, will attest to the fact that there are many more signs promoting home builders, than should be allowed (if indeed they are being allowed).

Officials often complain about an individual resident who may post a sign on city right-of-way to announce a yard sale. They have, in the past, occasionally made a big thing about cracking down on these "illegal" yard sale signs.

But there seems to be very little concern about the location and placement of election or business signs. While they may be professionally printed, as compared to the off-hand-written yard sale signs, they are, nonetheless, filling our streets and roadways with clutter.

We take pride in where we live; our residences, streets, neighborhoods, cities and counties. Especially at this time of year with the northern birds coming down to enjoy the winter months with us, we want to look our best.

What do visitors see? A plethora of signs. Signs here, signs there, signs all over the place.

Certainly there must be some way to control this blight on our communities. While politicians and others certainly have their rights to display signs, the motorists, locals or visitors, have their rights as well. They should be allowed to drive through an area without being swamped with signs, signs, signs. Perhaps it is just that campaign season in Seminole County is so long, with county races a memory and some city races still to come.

We urge all candidates to remove signs promptly when elections are over, and for government entities to practice strong control over the placement of all signs.

Postage stamps

It makes my blood boil when I read that the United States Postal Service will put a rabbit and three movie monsters on a United States postage stamp, and turn down a request to have the most decorated soldier in World War II turned down.

If not for the movies he made later in life, the baby boomers would not know the name, Audie Murphy.

He fought and lived through many battles during World War II, won a battlefield commission but died in a small private plane crash years later.

What a pity, at this time of year (Veterans Day), nobody remembers Audie Murphy.

I read where someone has petitioned to get the Three Stooges on a stamp.

They might as well put Benedict Arnold on one also.

Blue over being black and white

I was last in Montgomery, Ala., during what A. Philip Randolph called "The Unfinished Revolution." E.D. Nixon -- a Pullman porter, head of the local NAACP and the man who persuaded Martin Luther King to lead the Montgomery bus boycott -- met me at the airport.

Neither of us was aware that an unmarked police car was tailing me and continued to take note of everyone I interviewed in that segregated city. The day after my story appeared in the New Yorker, the Montgomery Advertiser, in an editorial, excoriated this outside agitator, and named people I had talked to -- much to their concern.

The Advertiser has changed, with some very able reporters covering the news without conspiratorial spins. But there has still been segregation in the city's high schools and junior high schools. Not the usual kind. This form is "benign" in intent, but it winds up separating kids because of their color.

In a number of junior high and high schools, there have been racial quotas in homecoming elections at the end of the football season. The homecoming court must be half white and half black. And the girls who run for the court -- and for queen -- have to declare whether they are white or black. The intent is to give kids of both faces a fairer chance to be on the court.

At the start of a recent NBC News story on this attempt to bring the races together, by putting tags on them, reporter Bob Dole was at homecoming night at Prattville High. The football team and the band were resplendent, but Shanda Davis was not. She had wanted to run for homecoming queen, but her homeroom teacher told her she could not be on the ballot unless she chose to be either white or black. She refused and dropped out of the race.

"I'm black and white," Shanda Davis told the NBC camera. "My mother's white and my father's black."

There has still been segregation in the city's high schools and junior high schools.

Shanda added that she was going to gather signatures on a petition to change the policy.

Crystal Ransom, her white friend, said: "It's a whole personality thing. It's not your color." And Crystal Maylin added: "They make you vote on people by the color of their skin. And if you're going to do that, then you're not really saying that they're equal."

But at Prattville High School, things they are a-changing. Shanda Davis and another girl have gathered 171 signatures on a petition to end the racial quotas. And the principal, Roy Johnson, told the Montgomery Advertiser: "We will make a change next year. We want to make it as fair as we can."

The principal first had some learning to do. Earlier in October, he talked to eight girls who are neither black nor white but belong to other races. "They felt like they were excluded," the principal said. "And certainly speaking they are."

Even non-straight speaking. That's how quotas work.

But Holly Karts reports that she interviewed a number of parents in Montgomery -- black and white -- "who are nothing wrong with electing a half black, half white homecoming court in a school that is 90 percent black." "I guess it keeps the peace," said one mother.

Mandate-mongering moment

The people have spoken. But what have they said? If you think the spin season is over, think again. The mandate-mongering moment is upon us. Every politician and pundit plays the game. Here, with some returns still coming in, is the mandate monger:

Yes, it was a "status-quo" election, the phrase defined as "the existing state of affairs at a particular time." But what was that existing state?

Clinton was (and is) president. Republicans held (and hold) the Congress. The Republicans held (and hold) the governorships. The situation in state legislative chambers remains competitive.

But that existing state of affairs was a most unusual one by any recent American standard. It reflected what was called the Republican "earthquake" of 1994. The rumble of that GOP earthquake sent a simple message: Unwind the excesses of modern liberalism.

Until 1994 there had not been a Republican-controlled House of Representatives for 40 years. And until this election there had not been two successive Republican Houses since 1928. (The new House is up roughly 21 seats for the Republicans; last session it was up 37.)

Moreover, the vast majority of the infamous Republican freshman class of 1994 were re-elected. (Only about a dozen lost.) In our system, it is not easy to bounce a Congressman who has been elected more than once. Moreover, in modern elections there is a rule of thumb that in the mid-year election of a second-term president, that president's party loses seats in the House. In theory, that would expand the GOP margin in 1996.

Each in 1993, Democrats held 61 percent of the House seats, in the new Congress the Democrats held 47 percent.

In the Senate, the Republicans gained either one or two seats (depending on the balance of the mail ballots in Oregon.) The GOP total of 54 or 55 seats is probably enough to forestall the appointment of a moderate to the Supreme Court.

President Clinton won and deserves congratulations. He ran a professional and astute campaign. By co-opting the value-issues early and often, he ate Bob Dole's lunch. Clinton remains a cornerstone of the status quo. (In any event, the Constitution guarantees that no president will ever be "irrelevant." Nor will any unified Congress.)

On the Clinton front, two important facts color the situation. One: Clinton won with just 49 or 50 percent of the vote. (Although, in fairness to him, it is obviously harder to climb above 50 percent in a three-party contest. Still, no Democratic president has gone over 51 percent since 1964.) Two: Clinton positioned himself in a more conservative position than any Democratic standard-bearer in recent history. (Who could have imagined that it would be a Democratic president who ended up signing into law a termination of the 80-year-old federal entitlement to welfare?) If Clinton harbored any thoughts of a revival of big-time activist government, that idea goes by the board given the make-up of the new Congress.

(Other mandate-mongers will claim that Democrats now have a long-term advantage in the presidency. We shall see. It is not an easy case to make about a president with a bare 49 or 50 percent.)

What about the 90 states, the laboratories of democracy and often the farm teams of national politics?

In 1992 there were 30 Democratic governors and 18 Republican governors. After this week's election, there were 33 Republican governors and 17 Democratic governors. In 1992 the Democrats controlled 96 state legislative chambers and the Republicans controlled 29 chambers. After this week's election, Democrats held 50 and the Republicans held 44.

So this was a status-quo election that confirmed a very solid Republican position. In a peculiar way, this confirmation is particularly powerful because of Republican stupidity. By preaching "revolution" when they were elected in 1994, Congressional Republicans allowed themselves to be portrayed as revolutionaries. That is not what a healthy country wants or needs. Had they originally portrayed themselves as "evolutionaries" (which is what they eventually did), it is unlikely that their majority would ever have been in danger. If the GOP can keep control after monumental stupidity, their base is strong.

Both sides have learned a lesson, or should have. Democrats found that they can't appear too liberal (1993-1994). Republicans found out they can't appear too conservative (1995-1996.) But the Democrats lost Congress for their sins, the Republicans held on. Moreover, the victory of California Proposition 209, ending affirmative action that yields preference by race and gender, represents a sea change in American politics. It is likely that we will now see a phasing out of proportionalism, hopefully gradually and gently. The school-voucher movement, another conservative issue, has been gaining ground in some states and localities.

What does all this signify? On a variety of issues there has been lumpy progress toward the center-right. There has been a slow unwinding of liberal excesses.

We are now in for a year or two when scandal and substance will be intertwined. On the substance side, it seems clear that the unwinding will continue.

But that existing state of affairs was a most unusual one by any recent American standard.

Clinton got the golf vote

About 16.4 million of the votes Bill Clinton got on Nov. 3, according to a recent survey, came from SCGs.

That stands for "Stroke Challenged Golfers." In an earlier age, they were known as hackers and duffers.

The pollster approached middle-aged men in plaid pants and middle-aged women in knit shirts and visors as they exited the polls, and asked them whom they had voted for. Through extrapolation, it was determined that Clinton got 75 percent of the Mulligan Vote. That's the 16.4 million figure cited above.

A "mulligan," for the uninitiated, is a do-over in golf -- a practice shot. If you will, this is usually, but not necessarily, taken off the first tee. Very good golfers turn their noses up at the practice. Stroke Challenged Golfers, which is to say 90 percent of those who play, delight in them.

The SCGs who went for Clinton said it was because he was "one of us." This is one more example of how the Republicans miscalculated the electorate. They tried to argue that Clinton's penchant for mulligans spoke to the character issue.

When New Mexico Gov. Gary E. Johnson introduced Bob Dole to an audience on Oct. 18, for example, he accused Clinton of lying about the score he recorded for a game in Albuquerque.

"President Clinton says he shot an 83, but nobody believes he shot an 83," Johnson said. "The people who support him and who will vote for him -- none of them believes he shot an 83. Character does count. Integrity does count."

Then Dole took the microphone. "We're going to start getting tough with this guy," he said. "I don't know if he shot an 83 or a 283 or a 483. You'll never really know."

Your average golfers were aghast at this attack on people who take a free shot now and then, and they said to themselves: There you go, you dumb clucks, you just lost the Mulligan Vote.

The fact is, if mulligans constitute cheating, then there are a lot of flawed people in this fine nation. Over the past few years, a number of good golfers have allowed me to play along with them, and I have yet to encounter one who did not, at minimum, occasionally take two shots off the first tee and play the best ball. Nor have I played with anyone who didn't judge the ball around a little bit in the fairway or the rough with their clubhead, just to get it out of depressions and the like. "Winter rules," we call them, except they're used all year.

Clinton, by testimony of many who have played with him, has a pretty decent game. He orbits the ball off the tee, but his short game is apparently nothing to be envied. According to a book entitled "Presidential Lies: The Illustrated History of White House Gossip," by Shepard Campbell and Peter Landau, when Clinton played with friends in Little Rock, his rule was "one extra tee shot and two extra fairway shots per nine holes." Admittedly, that's a bit much. But even if he took all the free shots the arrangement allowed, he'd still be shooting below 90. According to "The Little Rock Book" written by the late and much-revered teacher Harvey Penick, if every stroke is counted and the rules are honored, "the average golfer won't break 100."

Taking mulligans is not even unique by presidential standards. Since the turn of the century, we have had 16 golfing presidents.

There has still been segregation in the city's high schools and junior high schools.

presentations. On June 21, Story called this reporter upon receiving the slides. During this telecon, Story was asked if he would take Buzz along on his upcoming STS-50 mission.

On October 22, this reporter photographed the STS-50 crew at Kennedy Space Center and initially met Story and other members of his crew. The primary mission of STS-50 involves releasing two free flying satellites.

1) Third flight of the Wake Shield Facility, designed to generate an ultravacuum in space in which to grow the advanced semiconductor high-purity thin films.

2) Shuttle Pallet Satellite-two carrying a telescope and instruments to measure and gather ultraviolet data on celestial objects as well as other astrophysics data.

The Wake Shield Facility will be retrieved after three days, the Pallet Satellite after 13 days. The 16 day STS-50 mission includes two Space Walks, continuing the evaluation and flight tests of hardware and procedures for future Space Walk activities especially in the assembly and maintenance of the International Space Station.

Columbia is scheduled to land at Kennedy Space Center following its mission.

The assessments are not due immediately. They will not be required to be paid until after the improvements have been completed. At that time, they may be paid within 30 days, with no interest charged. If the amount is not paid by the end of that 30 day period, the amount may be payable over 10 years, with an interest rate of four percent per annum.

Getting the resolution approved in a complex situation.

If, after bringing the matter to the table and hearing any public input, the commission approves the Paving and Drainage Assessments for zone B, the commission will adjourn, and reconvene as the Board of Equalization.

The Board is then required to also take public input and make any adjustments to the assessments.

If the Board approves the matter, it adjourns and is reconvened as the city commission meeting once again, after which time the official resolution will be brought up for a formal vote. If approved, only then will it be official.

The starting time for the city commission meeting this evening is scheduled for 7 p.m. at Lake Mary city hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

Cabinet remodeled for second term

By WALTER R. NEARS AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon made all his appointees resign and then decided who could stay in a second term.

Ronald Reagan let his White House chief of staff move to the Cabinet in a job swap that led only to trouble.

Second-term shakeups are customary.

Now President Clinton faces a swift Cabinet overhaul, a shakeup that began with the word of four resignations even before the president got back to his re-won White House on Wednesday.

The secretaries of State, Defense, Commerce and Energy are leaving, the first three by choice, the last with a nudge after controversy over costly world travels.

And there are more changes to come.

Leon Panetta, the White House chief of staff, is resigning, too, after he helps Clinton shape plans and proposals for the term ahead.

The White House all but advertised the Cabinet remodeling days in advance, a signal of change, new faces and a new look heading into Clinton's final four years.

Nixon said that was his motive in 1972 when he called for the resignation of every political appointee in the administration the morning after he was overwhelmingly re-elected. He wrote in his memoirs that he meant it to be symbolic of a completely new beginning, never intending to accept wholesale resignations. But he came to see it as a mistake that didn't take into account the chill on morale.

There were six Cabinet changes at the start of Nixon's second term, four early in Reagan's. One was the switch that sent James A. Baker III, who had been a strong and effective White House chief of staff, across the street to become Treasury secretary. Donald T. Regan traded jobs with Baker and in the troubled term that followed, Regan missed Baker's management.

The Clinton White House decided against calling in resignations from all hands. Instead, Panetta managed the process, checking plans and passing the word on Clinton's wishes.

Panetta, first a congressman and then Clinton's budget director, became chief of staff in mid-1984 in a shakeup intended to bring discipline and management to a drifting operation.

He's become an envoy to Congress, and a prime spokesman for Clinton, a regular on the television talk shows. In one such appearance, he said that the aim now is to get the new team into place by the end of the year, that he is assembling names for the open spots, and that the lineup could include some Republicans.

Panetta's role will be difficult to match in a second term.

And there may be some strains in Clinton's changing of the Cabinet guard. A Republican Senate will have to confirm his choice for each post and there will, inevitably, be controversy somewhere.

Clinton promised a first term Cabinet that looked like America, and wound up debating what that meant in numbers of women and minority appointees, finally saying that he wasn't going to play quota games with his nominations.

It took him three nominees to install the first woman attorney general; the first two foundered over disclosures that they had hired illegal immigrants as household workers.

There are no such diversity pledges out now.

But there is word that the White House wouldn't be unhappy to see Attorney General Janet Reno depart a job she wants to keep. An effort to push her out would invite controversy just as the Justice Department is considering Republican demands for an independent counsel investigation of disputed Democratic fund raising.

At a White House homecoming celebration, Clinton thanked his assembled Cabinet and staff for the achievements of his first four years. "Very often I get the credit for the work you do, and then when something goes haywire ... if I make a mistake, you have to figure out how to try to clean it up.

"And I'm sure I'll give you other opportunities in the year ahead."

The best dog in the world

No one should have a dog as intelligent and fascinating as Molsen. And I doubt if anyone will.

To begin with, Molsen is a much nicer person than the average person.

She is loyal and loving and always in good humor.

She is playful and joyful and most delightful.

She is charming and gentle and most sentimental.

She is elegant and effervescent and debonair.

She is winsome and wise and one of the guys.

Who could ask for more?

Russ White
STAFF WRITER

The dashing and fascinating Molsen

You might be wondering how Molsen obtained her name. A young woman from Windsor, Ontario, Canada is the supplier.

Molsen is a highly revered name among Canadians.

Molsen, the saying goes, is good for what might as ya. eh?

Let me tell you how smart Molsen is. She met a dog the other day who claimed to be a police dog. "Oh, yeah?" Molsen asked. "Let me see your badge."

If that wasn't absolutely hilarious, this past Sunday morning without a warning, Molsen fetched the Sunday newspaper from the driveway and brought it into the house. Dropping it at my feet, she smiled demurely and said, "I'm your news hound."

I believe that Molsen will become a good watch dog. How can I be sure? She already knows how to tell time.

Being a golden retriever, means being able to play ball. And Molsen is already the belle of the ball.

She has a tiny basketball that she likes to chew on.

I watched her make 10 consecutive free throws the other day.

Next thing I know, she'll want to be a Bulls dog.

My, how Molsen's taken to music. She especially likes the Pointer Sisters, Joe Cocker, and Three Dog Night.

Molsen, a profoundly thoughtful dog, says her prayers at night and reads the Bible in the morning.

She's deep into dogma.

The other day, I noticed Molsen taking everything she could out of our closet. Slippers, socks, a hat and a tie. "Going someplace?" I asked. "Not in these clothes!" she answered.

From what I'm told there are nearly 80 million dogs in the United States. I sure hope everyone loves theirs like we love Molsen. She's only two months old and already quite the lady. Certainly, a welcome addition to the family.

We used to have a mutt named Lucky, who lived with us 17 years. When Lucky died, we couldn't bring ourselves to get another dog. Then, Laura showed up one night with Molsen. It's been heaven ever since.

Molsen's chewing on my feet as I write this. She just looked up to say, "End it will you? Time to play."

Getting the most for your used car

For most people, buying a new car is a process that burdens them with anxiety and doubts. Can I afford the monthly payment? Will my new car last a long time? Will I get tired of the car after a year or two? Should I just keep the old car and get it fixed?

Further aggravating the situation is that every time you walk into an auto dealership, the deck is stacked in their favor, not yours. This is especially true when you trade your car in. Many have wondered whether they should sell the car themselves instead. Is it worth the hassle?

The answer is yes. If you think about it, when you trade your car in on a new one, the dealership is calling all the shots. They determine how much your car is worth and how that amount translates into a down payment. Most important, they determine how much of the cost still has to be paid in addition to the value of your trade-in. And since they're in the business to make as much money as possible, you can probably guess who ends up on top after all the numbers have been crunched.

To get the best price for your car is actually fairly easy, but does require some effort. As with the sale of any product, your first step is to make the product as appealing as possible, and that has a lot to do with how the car looks to the potential buyer.

BARBARA MORTON
Personal Finance

Fixing minor problems usually will add more to the value of the car than the cost of the repair. And by all means, have the car detailed. Have the engine steam cleaned and the corrosion removed from around the battery terminals. Also, vacuum everywhere and tighten anything that rattles when the engine is running. The next step is to pick an asking price for the car. Check the classifieds to see what other comparable cars are selling for as a guideline. And if you have access to the NADA price guides, that's a great resource too.

When advertising and showing the car, it's essential to create an air of excitement around the vehicle. "Runs great," "like new," "low mileage," and "clean" are all phrases that get responses in newspaper ads. When you show the car, talk about how much you loved driving it and how you hate to give it up. Also, make appointments for two or three prospective buyers to see the car at the same time. There's a good chance that they'll feed off each other's enthusiasm and be less likely to let their decision drag on too long.

Another great way to encourage the buyer is to have all the information they will need from their bank in order to get financing. Have several sheets handy with the model and serial number, as well as any options that would drive the value up. This will also serve to make you appear more serious and business-like to the buyer.

Finally, be very careful of accepting anything other than cash or a certified check as payment. If you accept a check and it bounces, you can attempt to collect on the check, but it doesn't necessarily give you the legal right to repossess the car. If they can't give you cash, or at least let you accompany them to the bank to cash their check, you're better off walking away from the deal.

Teen gives mom ammunition for their battleground at home

DEAR ABBY: My youngest daughter, "Martha," is 18 and has moved back home after two months on her own. I never knew how much I valued my privacy until my husband and I had a chance to spend time alone. Now my life has been turned upside down.

Don't misunderstand me. I love Martha with all my heart and would be devastated if any harm came to her. But she uses my perfume every day because she doesn't want to buy her own and "borrows" my clothes at will. Every night I have to retrieve my belongings from her room.

If I talk to my husband about our daughter, he defends her. If I confront Martha, she runs to Daddy. The tension around here is causing friction between my husband and me.

The other night, Martha came home at 1:30 a.m. and proceeded to fix herself a snack in the kitchen, waking me up. The next morning at 5:30 a.m., I turned on the stereo, turned on the lights and made so much noise that nobody in the house could sleep. My husband thinks I have lost my mind, but I'm determined that my daughter is going to have a dose of her own medicine.

This girl pays no rent and brings home $200 a week. The only thing we ask of her in the way of housework is that she keep her bathroom clean. We insist that she contribute $25 per week for food and purchase all of her personal items. So far, she has paid on time, but she is starting to run out of supplies in her bathroom, and I'm sure they'll appear on our grocery list on Friday.

How am I going to keep peace in my home? Am I being petty, as my husband says? This could destroy my marriage if it continues. Please help me. -- HELL ON THE HOME FRONT IN FLORIDA was away from home for only two months before returning, I have to wonder how you coped before she left. However, since she is employed, you are doing the right thing to charge her for food and insist that she purchase her own personal items. It will help ease her into the financial realities of being on her own.

DEAR HELL ON THE HOME FRONT: Since your daughter

Difficult economic conditions are keeping many adult children in their parents' home. But remember, it is your home. A grown child lives with you by privilege, not by right.

If the friction continues, you and your husband might consider subsidizing her in an apartment of her own.

ELSEWHERE

Baseball owners reject deal

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Owners voted 15-12 to reject their proposed five-year labor agreement with the players' association, probably meaning the deal and its change of play.

After a deeply divided six-hour meeting, owners voted 9-0 to give their ruling 10-man executive council authority to fairly a modified agreement on behalf of all teams.

But union head Donald Fehr called the rejection extremely unfortunate and it appeared more players would agree to changes. Baseball probably will operate for another season under the agreement that expired in December 1995. The deal remains in force under the federal court order that ended the 232-day strike on March 31, 1995.

Dodger top NL rookie

NEW YORK — Todd Hollandsworth won the NL Rookie of the Year award, a record fifth straight year, as a Los Angeles Dodgers player has captured the honor.

The 23-year-old outfielder led all NL rookies in hits, doubles, homers (12), RBIs (59), stolen bases and fewest errors, hitting 291.

Hollandsworth received 15 first-place votes and 105 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Florida Shortstop Edgar Renteria got 10 first-place votes and 84 points. Pittsburgh catcher Jason Kendall got one first-place vote and 30 points.

Magic get first win of season on foreign soil

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO — Anternee Hardaway scored 23 points as the Orlando Magic broke the game open with an 11-0 third-quarter run to beat the New Jersey Nets 108-95 tonight.

Turnovers and cold shooting hurt the Nets in the second half as they lost for the second time in as many games. Both teams lost in as many games before coming to Tokyo for a two-game series, which will conclude on Saturday.

The Magic rebounded from a slow start in which they fell behind 14-6. Despite a series of fast breaks that misfired, a pair of baskets by Horace Grant helped them tie the game 22-22 at the end of one quarter. Three field goals by Hardaway helped put them ahead 43-39 with four minutes to play in the half.

The Nets responded with an 8-0 run, including four points by Kendall Gill, to put them back up 47-43. But Orlando came back with an 8-0 run of its own, capped by Nick Anderson's 3-pointer, before New Jersey cut it to 51-49 and Robert Percey missed a layup after a steal as the half ended.

The Nets pulled ahead 59-57 thanks to three baskets by 7-foot-6 Shawn Bradley, before the Magic's decisive 11-0 run, six by David Vaughn, put them up 68-59.

Another 6-0 run by Orlando made it 79-63 late in the third quarter.

The Nets narrowed the deficit to 79-71 with an 8-0 spurt, but that was as close as they got.

Gerald Wilkins scored five points in a 7-0 run that put the Magic up 93-77 with 7 1/2 minutes to play. He finished with 18.

Rony Selikaly, the center, acquired from Golden State last week, scored 10 of his 13 points in the fourth quarter for Orlando.

Gill led the Nets with 22, and Bradley had 18 points and 11 rebounds.

The Magic shot 50 percent from the field and the Nets just 37.2.

The Nets were without coach John Calipari, back home in New Jersey with his wife, as during the fourth of their club.
