Local high school students prepared for tougher test

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County schools have been working hard to make sure the students in local schools continue to test well on the High School Competency Test that is designed to be sure students have acquired the basic skills they need to succeed.

Students perplexed by how many centimeters a bug jumps and other puzzles on the high school competency test will have to get more right answers to pass, the governor and Cabinet have agreed. That may mean schools have to spend more money and time on remedial work, Education Commissioner Frank Brogan acknowledged after Wednesday's vote.

But he said he hopes schools will respond by improving instruction so students won't need extra help to meet the tougher standards.

Seminole County schools have put a renewed emphasis on skills such as reading and math at all levels from elementary to high school.

Nipping crime, giving kids hope

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — The downward spiral has been broken, they hope.

The Sanford Housing Authority and volunteers from the community and from the Sanford Police Department are taking steps to break the cycle of crime among the city's youth.

On Saturday, the BRO (Brethren Reaching Out) program will cut the ribbon on their new home in the Cowan Moughton public housing community.

"We're giving them the space to do what they need to do to help the young people of Sanford," Tim Hudson, interim executive director of the Sanford Housing Authority, said. "This is a great program."

BRO executive director Rose Davis said Sanford's young people have been "in need of someone to show them a more positive way of doing things for some time now."

Davis, a minister with Reddick Memorial First Born Church of Living God in Midway, said that in October, BRO became actively involved in the community effort to reach young people who had been involved in the juvenile justice system. It is the goal of BRO to give these young people the opportunity to "think out new ways of living that would bring to themselves help in getting some of the things they want in the world."

Hudson said the program will be successful, he thinks, because it teaches the young people involved in it to be self-sufficient and to have greater self-confidence.

"It teaches them how to stand on their own feet," he said.

The group now meets twice a week for an hour and a half each time. Davis said they are excited about the program and look forward to the meetings.

More than a dozen first-time offenders are enrolled in the program they hope will ensure they are last-time offenders.

Davis and other area ministers are trying to give the young people an alternative to the family and friends who surround them with violence and illegal activity. The young people are encouraged to complete

Figure the cat isn't likely to eat chocolate, which is a dog delicacy, but playing with tinsel may appeal to him.

By SARAH BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. — Don't forget Fido and Boots this holiday season. For them, it can be filled with danger.

They can be tempted by tinsel and ornaments, mistletoe and poinsettia, veterinarians say. And chocolate can be lethal to dogs.

It contains theobromine, a caffeine-like compound that stimulates the heart and nervous system. Chocolate also is toxic for cats, although they apparently don't have the same sweet tooth and are less likely to eat it.

Dogs and cats may find plants irresistible, said Larry Thompson, a clinical toxicologist at Cornell University's College of Veterinary Medicine.

While the occasional dog may be able to "snarf up a whole poinsettia" without any trouble, Thompson said he has seen animals with stomach or mouth irritations from eating small amounts of the plant.

Mistletoe is far more toxic, especially the berries. Thompson suggests buying the kind with plastic fruit.

Tinsel may be the most lethal Christmas tradition, for cats anyway.

Cats love the stuff, said Robin Tobin, a veterinarian at the Rotterdam Veterinary Hospital outside Albany. But ingested tinsel can get tangled in their intestines and most cats will die without surgery, she said.

As for turkey and all the trimmings, animals cannot digest it as well as people do. So resist the urge to indulge a pet in "leftover people-food" like fatty turkey or any kind of bones, Tobin said.

Nation's top drugstore chains to merge

By The Associated Press

CAMP HILL, Pa. — Rite Aid Corp. and Revco D.S. Inc., the nation's top two drugstore chains, today announced plans to merge in a $1.5 billion cash and stock deal.

Rite Aid's purchase will solidify its position as the nation's largest drugstore chain. The buyout will create a company with more than $11 billion in revenue and more than 4,500 stores in 22 states, and will mean the loss of more than 1,000 jobs.

The deal underscores the continued consolidation of drugstore businesses as changes in the medical industry heightens competition. The acquisition is one of several recently for Rite Aid.

Martin L. Orsini, Rite Aid's chief executive, said the merger will give the combined chain the ability to compete effectively in the changing industry.

Camp Hill, Pa.-based Rite Aid expects to eliminate $156 million in costs by eliminating 1,100 jobs in Cleveland, closing Revco's headquarters in Twinsburg, Ohio, and streamlining distribution expenses.

Rite Aid would also cut duplicative advertising efforts and expects to get better prices from its suppliers, since it will be buying in larger volumes.

Rite Aid already owns Eagle Managed Care, a prescription benefits management company that has struggled as an independent against drug distribution networks operated by large pharmaceutical companies.

Jeffrey Pittsburg, an analyst with Goldie-Pittsburg Institutional Services in Garden City, N.Y., who follows Rite Aid, said a merger would make Rite Aid more competitive.

"It would provide economies of scale. That's why Rite Aid has to do what it's doing," Pittsburg said.

The companies said a decision on which of their drug stores will be closed will be made after the merger is completed.

Rite Aid has more than 2,700 stores in 21 states and the District of Columbia. Revco has more than 2,100 stores in 14 states. The announcement said the merger will leave the chain with more than 4,500 stores, meaning that about 300 stores could be closed.

Rite Aid said the cost of the combination would reduce earnings by $163 million before taxes.

The deal has been approved by the boards of both companies but faces a federal antitrust review and is contingent on a successful direct offer to shareholders for their stock. The companies said they expect the merger to be completed in the first quarter of 1996.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Parents are taking no chances

FORT LAUDERDALE — Worried parents are taking no chances with nine confirmed or suspected cases of meningitis in Palm Beach and Broward counties in the last week.

Hospitals in both counties are reporting packed emergency rooms as people showing the mildest cold and flu symptoms make sure they haven't contracted meningitis, which can be fatal if untreated.

St. Mary's Medical Center in West Palm Beach saw its children's emergency room flooded with patients Monday — nearly 100 instead of the usual 46. At Palms West Hospital in Loxahatchee, the emergency room was swamped with a record 98 patients Sunday night.

"Everybody that had a headache and a fever came in and thought they had meningitis," said Dr. Jeff Davis, medical director for Palm Beach County fire and rescue.

The deaths of three children are believed to be linked to the disease. Another death, that of a 23-year-old polo player and horse groomer overnight Monday in Wellington, also is suspected to be linked with meningitis.

Client won't testify

MIAMI — The attorney for a German accused of his country's largest post-war real-estate swindle says his client won't testify until he's told what happened to his vast holdings.

Prosecutors want Juergen Schneider to testify in American bankruptcy proceedings. But Schneider's attorney, Michael Lacher, wants the German receiver of Schneider's holdings to testify first.

Schneider and his wife, Claudia, deserve to know what happened a full account of what property has been seized before they answer any questions, Lacher said.

"My client has never been told what happened to his property," he said.

Schneider is wanted in Germany on charges of fraud, forgery and bankruptcy fraud. His wife, Claudia, faces charges of bankruptcy fraud.

The couple have been in a Miami jail since May, when they were arrested at their oceanfront condominium in nearby Hollywood. They are fighting extradition.

Mother sues Burger King

WEST PALM BEACH — The mother of a man shot to death outside a Burger King is suing the fast-food chain, claiming it was negligent by failing to protect her son.

Gus Arkoulis, 22, of Chicago, was shot Feb. 10, 1991, a week after a security guard — hired after a rash of robberies at the restaurant — was fired because a manager deemed he was no longer necessary.

In opening arguments of the civil trial Tuesday, Stacy Bohlman, an attorney for Arkoulis' mother, Freda Kustogianis said the slaying was "foreseeable and preventable."

But John Wiederhold, a Burger King attorney, said the killing was "unpredictable, imperceptible and unpreventable" given that the restaurant was "not in a bad neighborhood."

The trial in Palm Beach County Circuit Court was expected to last two weeks. Mrs. Kustogianis is seeking unspecified damages.

Florida Power and Light cited

ST. LUCIE, Fla. — Florida Power & Light has been cited for violating nuclear-safety regulations by spilling 4,000 gallons of reactor coolant water at its St. Lucie plant in August.

The utility already agreed to pay a $50,000 fine imposed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission last week for other violations. FPL said Wednesday it won't contest the latest citation.

"This is regulatory catch-up," said Stacey Shaw, an FPL spokeswoman. "It is one we have already talked to the NRC about."

NRC spokesman Roger Hannah said the agency met with FPL officials last week to discuss the violation and what the company needs to do to avoid future problems.

In a notice sent to FPL Tuesday, the NRC said technicians at the plant knew of problems with a valve in February but didn't fix it until after the spill.

"We would consider an appropriate period in which to take corrective action is two, three months," Hannah said Wednesday. "It took them six months. And that's only after the incident occurred."

Still a good catch

TALLAHASSEE — Commercial fishermen can try to catch profitable amounts of jellyfish and some baitfish with shrimp trawl nets that remain legal after Florida's July 1 net ban, the governor and Cabinet say.

"We are going to honor the intent of the amendment but at the same time we are not going to go further and prevent fishermen from expanding into other areas," Gov. Lawton Chiles said Wednesday. "One of the great fears I heard was that we were going to prevent the harvest of jellyfish."

Families of victims want action

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Nearly two years after Danny Rolling pleaded guilty to the gruesome murders of five Gainesville students and nearly 18 months after he was sentenced to death, his first appeal has yet to be filed.

The families of the murder victims want action.

"It's very frustrating — postponement after postponement," Ada Larson of Pompano Beach said Wednesday when she and eight other parents and siblings met with Attorney General Bob Butterworth.

Mrs. Larson lost a daughter to Rolling.

"Nothing's being done," said George Paulus of Miami. "We haven't even gotten in the ballpark yet, much less get to base."

Paulus lost a daughter to Rolling.

Mario Taboada of Miami lost control in the courtroom when Rolling was sentenced and shouted that Rolling would be executed in five years or less.

"Now it seems like we may not even get the first appeal in five years," said Taboada, who lost a brother to Rolling, participating in the meeting by phone. "It's just devastating."

The state Supreme Court has given Rolling's public defenders three extensions for filing the first appeal, the latest just last week.

Butterworth's office got word of the extension Monday after it filed an unprecedented motion in the state Supreme Court asking the justices to publicly condemn the public defenders working on Rolling's case and to fine Nancy Daniels, who heads the office in charge of the defense.

"This case is a prime example of how lawyers for capital defendants manipulate and abuse the court system for the sole purpose of delay," Butterworth and Gainesville prosecutor Rodney Smith wrote in the petition.

"This pattern of conduct has been and will be replicated in every capital case because the objective of capital appellate defense lawyers is to cause delay at every turn and obstruct the resolution of legal issues."

The high court has not responded to the petition. However, the justices last week did grant Daniels' office an extension for filing the appeal until Jan. 22, the third delay granted in the case.

If no extension had been granted, the appeal would have been filed by last January.

Rolling's victims were Sonja Larson, Tracy Paulus, Manny Taboada, Christi Powell and Christa Hoyt. The murders included a beheading, a mutilation

Timeline

Key dates in the Danny Rolling appeal:

1994
Feb. 15 — Danny Rolling pleads guilty to five counts of first degree murder.
May 20 — Rolling given five death sentences.
Sept. 28 — State Supreme Court and lawyers receive some 13,000 pages of trial record and transcripts.
Oct. 5 — Office of Public Defender Nancy Daniels asks state Supreme Court for one-year extension to file brief, until Oct. 15, 1995.
Oct. 5 — State Supreme Court grants extension.
1995
Jan. 27 — Daniels' office asks for second extension, until June 1, 1996.
March 28 — Daniels' office asks for third extension, until Aug. 1, 1996.
May 16 — State Supreme Court orders

Daniels' office to file brief by Oct. 16, 1995.
Aug. 23 — Daniels' office sues to set aside the May 16th order and asks for more time.
Sept. 28 — State Supreme Court gives Daniels' office 30-day extension until Nov. 15.
Nov. 15 — Deadline for brief passes with no appeal filed; Daniels' office writes court that lawyers are still reading the record.
Nov. 14 — Daniels' office asks a fifth time for an extension, until Feb. 28, 1996.
Nov. 22 — State Supreme Court writes Daniels that it cannot extend the deadline past Jan. 22, 1996.
Nov. 27 — Attorney General Bob Butterworth and Rodney Smith, state attorney in the eighth judicial circuit, file petition in state Supreme Court opposing latest extension and asking that Daniels be publicly condemned and personally assessed a daily fine for every day past Nov. 15.

and sexual assaults. Daniels denied Butterworth's charge that her office has deliberately delayed the case.

"It's completely untrue that we have done anything to delay, obstruct or manipulate the system," she said. "We simply have a resource problem. We had too many capital appeals at a time when we had ... too few lawyers."

The office, with two lawyers assigned to death sentences from 32 counties in North Florida, had a backlog of 18 cases when it received the Rolling case, Daniels said.

"We think it would be wrong to pull any one case out of order," she said. "The reason for the delay is simply we were working on other cases which were in line before Mr. Rolling's came in."

The office now has four lawyers working on capital cases, two of whom are working full-time on Rolling's case and should be able to come close to meeting the new deadline, Daniels said.

The fact that the court has granted the extensions to begin with indicates that the office had a legitimate problem with caseload, Daniels said.

"I think the court understands our plight," she said.

Lion cubs must be moved

By The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Cathy Williams has to move two lion cubs she rescued from a roadside carnival out of Florida.

Williams was ordered Tuesday by the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission to move Sampson, one of the 7-month cubs, out of the state by 5 p.m. Friday. Otherwise, the cub will be seized. Sampson's sickly brother, Casper, will be evaluated and moved when he is healthy enough to make the trip.

Williams, a veterinarian's assistant, rescued Sampson and the other cub from the state illegally, but wanted to have enough time to nurse them back to health.

"I'm not stupid. I knew I couldn't keep the animals forever," she said.

Florida law makes it illegal for residents to possess wild animals.

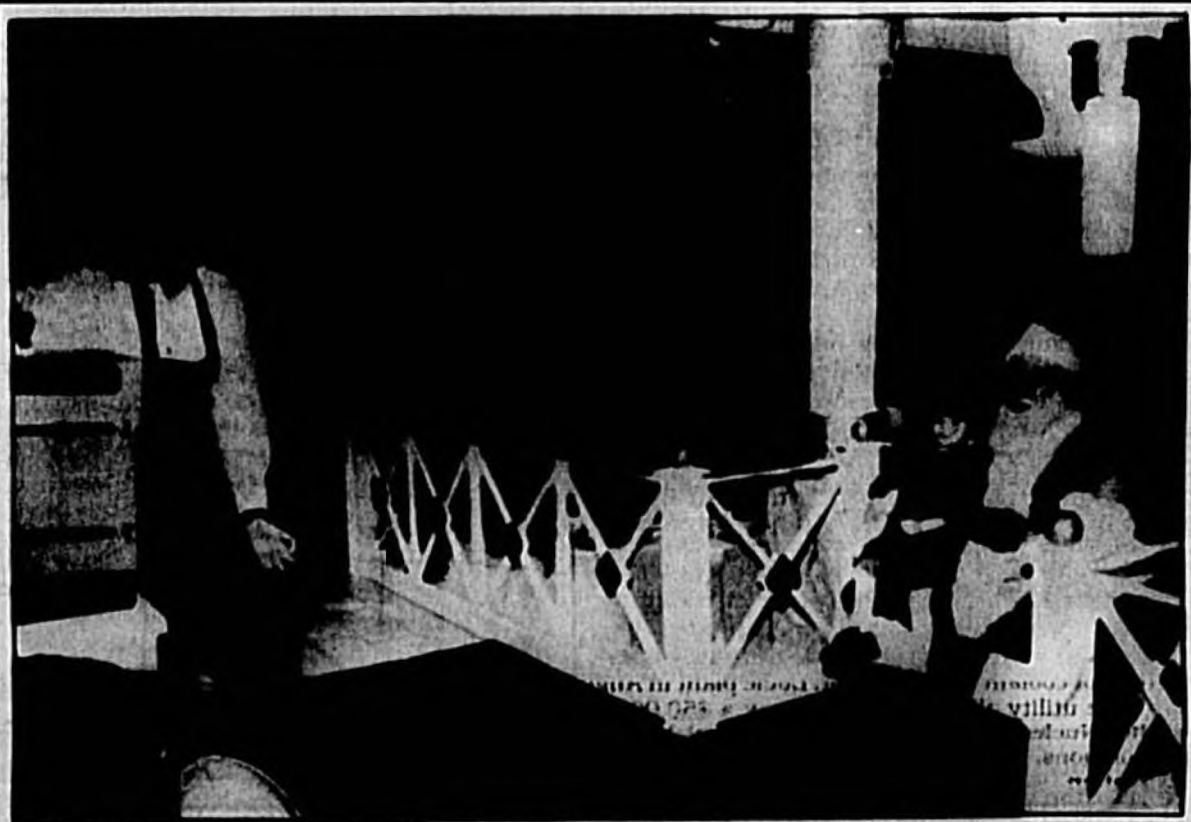

Williams pleaded no contest Monday to charges of possessing the cubs and paid $267 in fines. She agreed to move the animals out of state.

Sampson will be moved to a 500-acre farm in Georgia which has a trained cat handler. The farm needs a week to pour the concrete and put up fences that will become the 70-pound cub's new home.

"Fish and Game is not willing to give me seven days. That's all I need," Williams said.

Lt. Linda Harrison, an inspector with the commission, wanted the lanky, honey-brown cub immediately taken out of the state, but finally agreed to give Williams 72 more hours.

"There will be no more extensions," Harrison said.

Jump on the information superhighway

Years ago, not everyone could handle a typewriter. Those who learned and became proficient, usually ended up getting the better paying jobs, and were more in demand.

That isn't good enough now. Probably more than half the people know how to type. Today, those who know how to handle a computer are the ones who are getting the jobs and earning the money.

Those who have no knowledge of computer operation, especially persons who are nearing middle age, may say, "Why should I learn about computers, I get along now with what I have."

The problem is, "now" ends up being "before" as time goes whipping past each of us. "Now" quickly becomes the past, and the time we wanted begins to catch up.

Our point? Perhaps it's time to learn what a computer is, what it can do, and how you can make it work for you.

You say you won't need one? For some, that response may work. For most however, the need is going to get more and more as each day and week passes.

Listen to what people are talking about these days. They are giving what may sound like jumbled numbers such as "com dot colon SAN FL dot nine, colon, etc." We expect many people have no idea what this is. It's the words used to identify a particular number to dial up on the appropriate computer to contact someone. You may want to call up a nationwide magazine and scan some articles. You may wish to check the stock market. You may even want to contact Rush Limbaugh. This is the way it can be done, right in your own home or office.

Now, if you are convinced that not knowing computer operation is going to slow you down, let's look at what might be done to combat this problem.

The best approach is to seek computer education. Locally, we recommend Seminole Community College.

There is a special computer institute which is working diligently to provide everything from beginners training to advanced technology. For first-timers, probably the Basics PC (personal computer) course is the best starting place. Then, once you have learned the words and found out what can be accomplished, you could go on to higher level classes.

You do NOT have to be a full-time SCC student. These classes are offered to people who may not want anything else except computer information.

Start with the basics. Going any higher at the beginning will have you snowed, if you don't know what people are talking about when they mention a window, mouse, DOS, Lotus, or thousands of other words.

Start at the beginning, then work your way up. You, your family, your bosses, will all be pleased not only with your new knowledge of computers, but they will be proud that, regardless of your age, you are still willing to learn.

If you want information on the day or night classes in computers at SCC, phone 328-2036 for the Computer Institute. Classes can be arranged for $90 or less.

If you want something of a more home-style nature, to play games or write letters for example, contact the Community Education Program at 328-2121.

We have one of the best community colleges in Florida right here in Seminole County. It's here when we need it, and when it comes to computers, many of us need it right now.

Abe Lincoln wasn't Lincoln either

Consider two new books about Republicans: "Bob Dole" and "Lincoln." Taken together, with presidential primaries coming up, they can add perspective to what we know about presidents.

After all, the Dole presidential campaign could be called "What About Bob?" It's said that he doesn't stand for anything, that he has pandered, that he's not really a conservative, that he's too conservative, that he can be a sarcastic meanie, that he has a dark side, that he doesn't get anyone excited, that he's a professional politician, that his image is manufactured and that he's lost each of the three times he's been involved in a national election.

Pulitzer Prize-winning Richard Ben Cramer's short (163 pp.) book on Dole is an excerpt from his landmark earlier volume "What It Takes," about the 1988 presidential candidates. It offers a different view. Born in 1923 of a middle-class family in Russell, Kan., enduring an oil crash and a dust-bowl Depression, Bob Dole was the busy kid who was into everything. He emerged as the handsome hometown high school basketball hero. In 1943, while a student at Kansas University, he was drafted into the Army. He went to officer training and into combat as a lieutenant in Italy, where he was gunned down. The strapping young man weighed 192 pounds when he went into service and 122 pounds when he came home. Only rare willpower and an excruciating four years of treatment resurrected most of his torn body. The first thing his wife-to-be, a nurse, heard about him was, "Oh that poor Bob Dole, he doesn't have long to live." He thought he might end up crippled, selling pencils on a street corner. He survived, harshly handicapped and fiercely ambitious.

He went to law school, ran for local, state and federal office, running, running, running, wheeling and dealing, serving constituents, colleagues, state and nation, rising to Senate majority leader.

After all, the Dole presidential campaign could be called "What About Bob?"

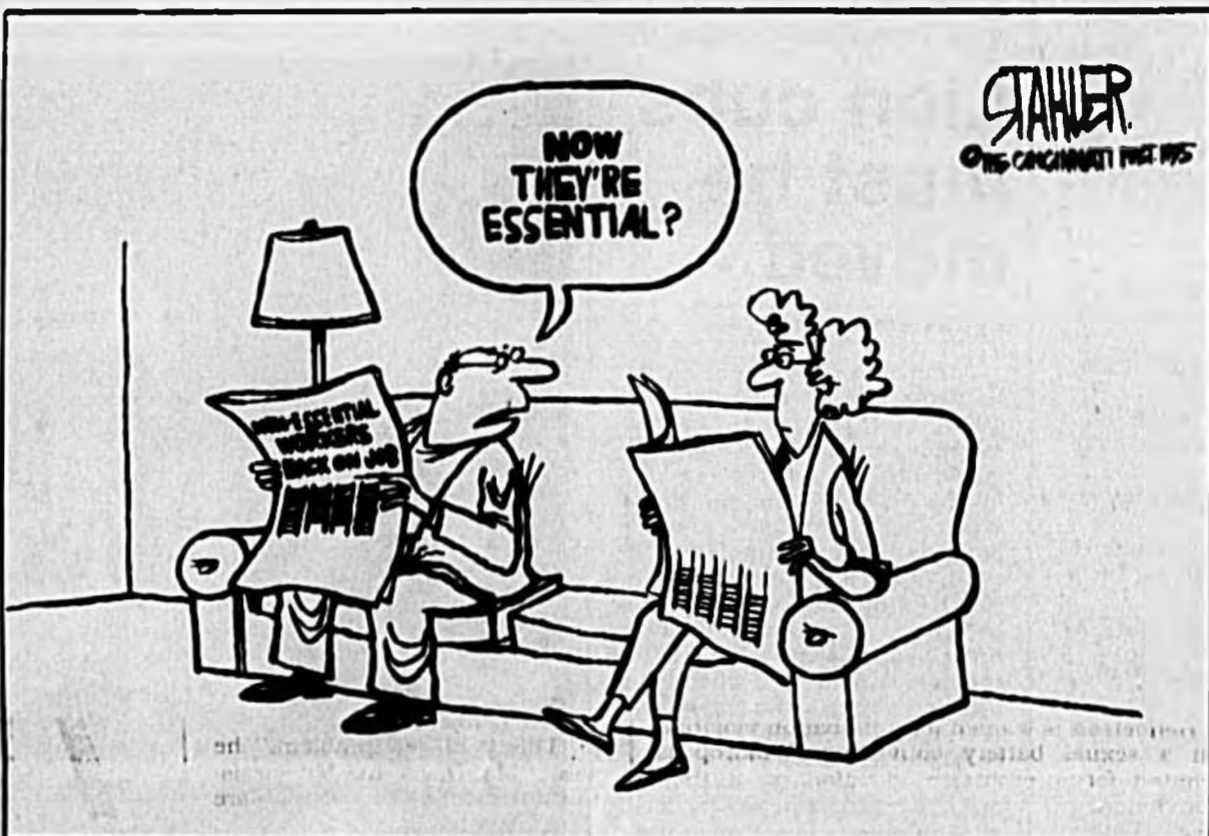

David Herbert Donald's "Lincoln" also tells the story of a troubled young Midwesterner. Lincoln was born in a log cabin. His mother died when he was 10. He received almost no formal education, went west to Illinois in his teens and worked at odd jobs. He, too, became a lawyer.

Had Lincoln's biography been written before he became a great president, these are some of the things that could have been said about him:

He ran as "Honest Abe, The Rail Splitter," but as Donald recounts, Lincoln "had little love for his pioneer origins; he disliked physical labor and left it as soon as he could.... Rather than a simple backwoodsman, he was a prominent and successful attorney representing the most powerful interests in emerging corporate America."

He suffered bouts of depression. He had dark moods. He made political deals. He could demagogue with the best of them. He said, "My policy is to have no policy." He announced, "I am not, nor ever have been, in favor of bringing about in any way the social and political equality of the white and black races."

When Lincoln ran for president, Donald writes: "To all outward appearances he was less prepared to be president of the United States than any other man who had run for that high office."

MORTON KONDRACKE

Dole puts lead to test on Bosnia

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., keeps trudging ahead of the 1996 Republican pack on his way toward the presidential nomination, but he faces perhaps his greatest test in the next few weeks over the question whether to send U.S. troops to Bosnia.

On top of his endorsement by Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson, the latest good news for Dole politically is that his private polls show that in New Hampshire, political novice Steve Forbes has moved into second place in the GOP race, diminishing the prospects of his most-experienced rival, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

On the strength of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of TV ads, Forbes is pulling 14 percent of the New Hampshire vote, to 38 percent for Dole, 8 percent for Gramm and 7 percent each for columnist Pat Buchanan and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander.

Earlier this month, Dole won the much-publicized Florida GOP straw poll only narrowly, but he still won, and he remains far ahead in money raised this year, with an expected $21 million total for the year to $14 million for Gramm, who also has transferred $5 million from his Senate campaign committee to his presidential effort.

Also to his benefit, Dole's private polls show that his disapproval ratings are low among Republicans - 13 percent in Iowa, 20 percent in New Hampshire - meaning that it will be easy for supporters of his rivals to turn to him as they drop away.

This is true in spite of hammering from rivals who allege that he hasn't done enough to push conservative policies through Congress. The press's most frequent rap on Dole, that he lacks a vision of where he wants to lead the country, makes no dent with Republicans, according to campaign aides, who say that their polls show that 67 percent of GOP voters disagree with the idea.

While well out in front of his rivals, Dole faces a major test of his leadership and judgment over Bosnia. All the other major GOP candidates turned a fast thumbs-down on President Clinton's troop request, but Dole has wisely given Clinton a chance to convince him that his policies are sound.

That's evidence of presidential stature on Dole's part, evidence that Dole appreciates America's leadership role in the world and hasn't automatically leapt to take a partisan position hostile to the Democratic president.

Throughout the Bosnia conflict, in fact, Dole has been more consistent than any other American politician - certainly far more so than President Clinton, whose policy seemed for three years based on the absolute that American ground troops would not be deployed in Bosnia.

Dole from the beginning advocated lifting the arms embargo against the Bosnian Muslims, favored using U.S. air power to beat back Serb aggression and opposed the introduction of U.S. troops.

Clinton, who wavered repeatedly on the arms embargo and on bombing, has now shifted on the troop issue. Dole needs to decide whether to shift, too. The test for Dole is whether he can bring himself to back the risky policy of a Democratic president when his rivals are leading the GOP back toward its traditional policy of non-interventionism - even, isolationism.

One candidate, Pat Buchanan, is an out-and-out isolationist who believes that almost nothing beyond America's borders is worth the life of an American soldier. Gramm, Alexander and Forbes don't automatically rule out U.S. intervention overseas, but they didn't even pause to consider the future of NATO before announcing Clinton policy.

It isn't clear that Dole should or will support Clinton. He needs to be sure that the administration's mission and strategy for Bosnia are sound - particularly, that the United States won't take unacceptable casualties and suddenly abandon its NATO allies in Bosnia, which would have disastrous consequences for U.S. leadership.

It should not be necessary for Clinton to prove that Bosnia constitutes a "vital national interest" for the United States - in the sense that the U.S. economy or population will suffer direct damage if the U.S. does not participate.

He does have to make the case for a "compelling national interest" - that is, an interest that justifies risking some American lives. He has to make the case that the "stability of Europe" really is at stake in Bosnia, that the resumption of slaughter in Bosnia will damage the moral climate of the West and that U.S. leadership of the West will suffer a failure to participate in Bosnia peacekeeping.

If Clinton can succeed in this task, then it's incumbent upon Dole to help Clinton mold a bipartisan national consensus around the Bosnia operation.

It's likely that Dole's Republican rivals will attack him savagely if he sides with Clinton.

Also to his benefit, Dole's private polls show that his disapproval ratings are low among Republicans.

JACK ANDERSON

Chief export may soon be terrorism

WASHINGTON - The greatest threat to American security in 1996 may not come from Iran, Iraq or North Korea. U.S. foreign policy-makers are privately fretting about the North African nation of Algeria.

This potential powderkeg has drawn close attention from U.S. officials after eight recent terrorist bomb blasts in France were linked to Algerian rebels. A total of nine people have been killed and more than 100 have been wounded in France since July.

American officials worry that it's just a matter of time before the threats spread to America. These officials also fear that the rise of Islamic radicalism in Algeria will hamper American policy interests in North Africa and the Middle East - where the peace process is still reeling from the assassination of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

The growing threat of Algerian terrorism should come as no surprise to our readers. We've been warning of this danger as far back as February 1991. Four years ago, we revealed U.S. intelligence reports warning that Iran was trying "to establish Iranian-style Islamic states" in Algeria and other nations that would wreak havoc on the world.

Those predictions have turned out to be all too true. Because of the rise of Islamic radicals - known as "Islamists" - Algeria is locked in a bloody civil war that has taken nearly 40,000 lives since 1992. The war began when the Algerian army forced President Chadli Benjedid out of office and canceled parliamentary elections to prevent the Islamists from seizing power.

While neither side is close to victory, the war has now spilled north into France. Algeria's former colonial master, French authorities believe most of the recent terrorist bombs were planted by Islamic militants in protest of France's ties to Algeria's military government.

No matter how the war is resolved, experts warn, things look bad for American interests. If the war continues to drag on, massive political chaos could destabilize the entire region. If the Algerian military prevails, the Clinton administration will have to deal with a regime that it has openly criticized.

But the worst scenario by far has the Islamic radicals taking over. Should this happen, the Mideast peace effort would come under further assault and America would once again become a target for terrorists.

"The triumph of Muslim militance in Algeria ... would embolden Islamists elsewhere in the Islamic world to redouble their revolutionary efforts, increase subversive pressures on pro-Western secular regimes and encourage further opposition to the Arab-Israeli peace negotiations," one written analysis explains. "In the worst-case scenario, a radical Islamic Algeria could become another Iran - a base for actively exporting anti-Western revolution, terrorism and anarchy."

Clinton advisers believe the political turmoil in Algeria is likely to grow in the coming months, which could draw two American allies - Morocco and Tunisia - into the conflict. That would destabilize NATO's southern flank and damage U.S. military operations in the region.

It would also bring Washington one step closer to the type of indiscriminate violence that's already turned Paris into a battleground.

WHITE HOUSE WATCH - The president who once insisted that he's still "relevant" took great pains last week to remind federal employees that they're still "essential."

American officials worry that it's just a matter of time before the threats spread to America.

Tests

"The schools try to get the students ready for the test before they take it", Dave Winger, director of testing for the school district, said. "We don't want to do remediation."

The Seminole County schools use a number of methods to help the students, including practice tests and computer-assisted instruction.

Winger said the district tries to use earlier scores from CTBS tests and from the Grade Ten Assessment Test to predict those students who might not do well on the competency test. Those students are given extra time and work in preparation for the test.

Through he will consider the possible need for additional dollars, Brogan said. "My belief is that remediation is not the central issue and the curriculum should be addressed to decrease the need for remediation overall."

Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet approved raising the passing scores on the tests needed for high school graduation without debate, over objections from some educators.

"Obviously we want scores that are realistic to what is necessary for work competency and going on into college and community college," Chiles told reporters outside the meeting.

And if more remedial work is needed, he said, "getting that started early is probably important."

"Right now we have an awful lot of students that need remediation. An awful lot of time in our community colleges is spent remediating students and some in colleges," said Chiles.

Winger doesn't think that is necessary for Seminole County students.

"We prepare them well for the test and we make sure they have the necessary skills," he said.

Aaron Wallace, president of one of the state's two major teachers' unions, Florida Teaching Profession-National Education Association, told the panel his group favors higher standards.

But Wallace added, "Quite frankly as a classroom teacher I must caution you that I would think the floodgates are open for additional failures ... I think about also the stigma that is attached to students who are categorized as disadvantaged."

Students usually take the competency test in their junior year and can retake it until they pass. Last October, 98,293 students took the multiple-choice exam.

The test consists of two parts, mathematics and communications. Currently, students must correctly answer 39 of 55 mathematics questions (71 percent) and 48 of 65 communications questions (74 percent) to pass.

Starting in August 1998, correct answers will be required on three more of the math problems (78 percent) and seven more communications questions (85 percent).

Education officials estimate that could cut the percentage of juniors passing the mathematics portion on their first try from 78 to 71 and the percentage passing the communications section from 89 to 75.

Landmark sign demolished

CASSELBERRY - With a few smashes from the wrecking ball a landmark sign along U.S. Highway 17-92 was demolished on Wednesday morning.

The massive Seminole Greyhound park sign with its flashy red arrow pointing eastward toward the park was crumpled to the ground to make way for the road widening project that is to take place on Seminola Boulevard.

Crane operator Ernie Foerster of Fields Landclearing of Altamonte Springs took 15 minutes to complete the task.

Robbery suspects sought

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - Altamonte Springs Police are seeking four men in connection with the armed robbery of Liberty National Bank, 520 State Road 434.

According to police, the four black males entered the bank at about 10:30 Wednesday morning wearing hooded sweatshirts. Police said they were armed with handguns and shotguns and ordered everyone to the floor.

Police said two of the men jumped over the teller counter and placed an undetermined amount of money in a bag before leaving the bank in a 1988-90 dark gray Pontiac 4-door car.

Police said the men are all described as black males between the ages of 18 and 25. Their description and method of operation match a bank robbery at the Great Western Bank in Altamonte Springs on Nov. 6, investigators believe.

Anyone with information relating to the robbery is being asked to call the Altamonte Springs Detective Division at 630-3826.

"Most of the time, these young people have too much time on their hands," Hudson said. "That's how they got in trouble. BRO will give them an alternative to that."

Sanford Police Cmdr. Dennis Whitmore said the police department stands "solidly" behind the program.

"We think this is a really positive approach to the criminal activity in Sanford," he said. "We are interested in seeing how it will work. We are sure it will be good for the community."

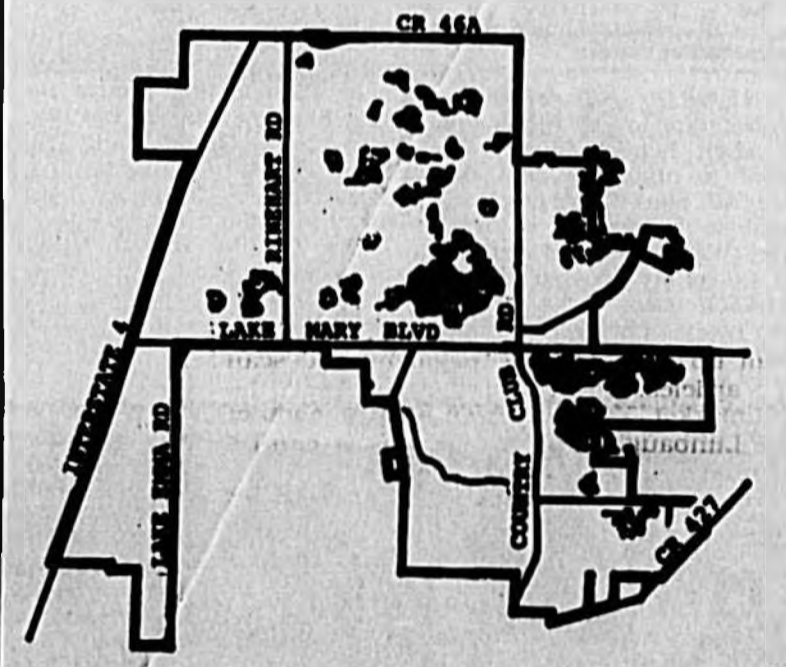

Hudson and Davis are pleased to have various agencies and individuals working together on the BRO project.

"This is all our problem," he said. "Mr. Davis and Mr. (assistant director) Alvin Johnson are doing a great thing for our young people." ## Seminole High choirs will light up the stage at Disney

Special to the Herald

SANFORD — Robert O. Maguire, director of the Seminole High School Chorus, is pleased to announce that the entire SHS Show Choir has been invited to participate in Walt Disney World's Annual Candlelight Ceremony on Dec. 22, 23 and 24 at Epcot.

Previously, only a select group of singers from each Seminole County school was chosen, but this year the entire 200 member chorus will serve as the Anchor Choir. Participating groups include Fantasy, Pizazz, Destiny, Madrigals and Gospel Choir. The group, plus accompanying chaperones, will number over 200 on each of the three nights.

Disney is providing transportation, meals, and a generous honorarium for the choirs' performances on those three nights. Also, each member will receive two tickets for each show.

Choral members are currently involved in rehearsals of the 11 Christmas songs which will be performed with the Disney Orchestra, Voices of Liberty, the herald trumpets and Disney Cast Choir.

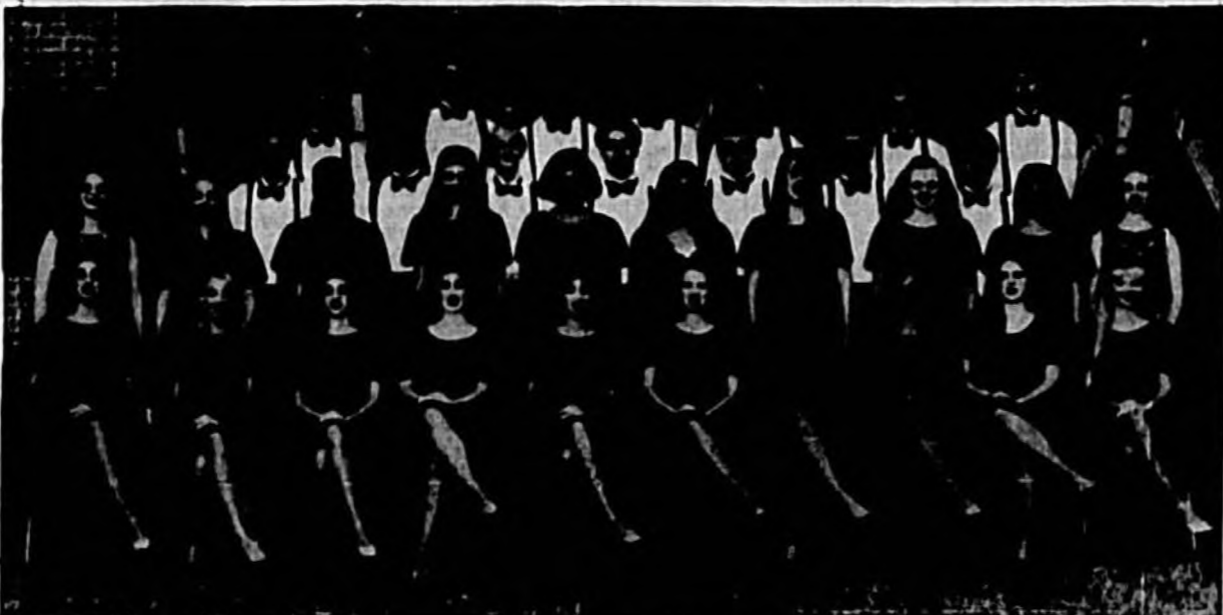

Parents and school officials say they are very proud of the quality of the chorus members and the positive way in which they represent Seminole High School and Sanford.

AROUND THE STATE

Flyers edge Panthers

MIAMI — Kevin Haller scored from just inside the blue line with 30 seconds left in overtime to lift the Philadelphia Flyers over the Florida Panthers 2-1 in a clash of Atlantic Division foes.

Haller's shot came after a last-minute blitz by Philadelphia that saw Florida goaltender John Vanbiesbrouck negate four rapid-fire shots.

The puck seemed to be smothered by Florida's Scott Mellanby when it squirted loose and Haller came up with it, shooting it past Vanbiesbrouck's glove.

The Flyers caught Vanbiesbrouck out of position early in the third when he blocked a shot by Petr Svoboda with an outstretched leg.

The rebound, though, landed in front of Brent Fedyk and he deposited the puck in the open net at 1:02 of the third to tie the game at 1-1.

Florida had taken a 1-0 lead when Magnus Svensson scored at 8:43 of the second period for his first goal of the season.

Lightning fit to be tied

ST. PETERSBURG — Defenseman Roman Hamrik's power-play goal at 17:37 of the second period gave Tampa Bay a 2-2 tie with the Hartford Whalers, extending the Lightning's unbeaten streak to six games.

Hamrik took a feed from Petr Klima and beat Hartford goaltender Jason Muszatti with a slap shot for his third goal of the season.

After a 4-10-4 start, Tampa Bay (9-10-5) has pulled into the thick of the Eastern Conference playoff race by tying a club record with the six-game unbeaten streak (5-1-0). The Lightning have won six of their last eight.

Brendan Shanahan scored his fourth of the season for Hartford (9-11-2), and Muszatti (0-1-1) made 33 saves in his second start of the season.

Frantisek Kucera opened the scoring for the Whalers at 18:04 of the first period.

After Tampa Bay pulled even on Bill Houlder's second of the season at 1:51 of the second, the teams traded power-play goals. Shanahan beat Darren Puppa on a deflection of Brian Glynn's wrist shot for his fourth at 5:12, and Hamrik finished the scoring.

No bowl for Hurricanes?

MIAMI — The University of Miami is optimistic the NCAA will disclose sanctions by the end of the week, in which case the Hurricanes likely will withdraw from bowl consideration.

Miami, in line for the Orange Bowl, might choose to sit out the postseason even if the announcement is delayed until after the bowl schedule becomes final Sunday. Miami admitted guilt to six of 10 allegations at a hearing held Nov. 10 by the NCAA Infractions Committee.

BLUESHIRT

Knights shine on road

ROCK HILL, S.C. — Howard Porter and Harry Kennedy scored 21 points apiece to lead Central Florida to a 77-66 victory over Winthrop.

Central Florida (2-0) was down four points at intermission, but the Knights shot 66 percent in the second half to pull away.

Two other Knights scored in double figures. Brad Tice and Sanford's Brad Trains came off the bench to add 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Dodgers get Blowers

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers ended their search for a third baseman, acquiring Mike Blowers from Seattle for minor league infielders Miguel Cairo and Willie Otanez.

Blowers, 30, hit .357 last season with 23 homers and 96 RBIs in 134 games. He tied a major league record for grand slams in a month with three in August.

Tarheels head for Miami

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — North Carolina, 6-5, accepted an invitation to the Carquest Bowl.

The Tar Heels' opponent for the Dec. 30 at Joe Robbie Stadium will be determined Friday.

Lake Mary repeats as Pop Warner state champs

Special to the Herald

JACKSONVILLE — They're back again! The Lake Mary Rams Junior Midget Pop Warner Football team has won an unprecedented second straight Florida State Championship.

Saturday, November 25th at Mandarin High School Stadium, the Pop Warner Mid-Florida Conference Champion Rams met the South Florida Conference Champion Riverside Wildcats. It was a hard fought battle, but when the dust had cleared the Lake Mary squad had repeated as state champions with a 30-13 victory.

Two of the four touchdowns came on passes from quarterback Kyle Joyce to running back Eric Coleman.

In addition to his two touchdown passes Coleman, who had a spectacular day on both offense and defense, added a third touchdown on a 15-yard run.

Last week's outstanding player, Corey Jackson, had another excellent day, scoring the final touchdown on a 30-yard run and having several tackles on the defensive side of the ball.

The local teams other running backs, Matt Mergo, Anthony Ballerino and Michael Kuc, also had good games running the ball, with Mergo, a running back/linebacker/kicker, tacking on three two-point conversion kicks after touchdowns.

Following the game, head coach Rick Joyce paid great tribute to his offensive line and superb defensive squad.

"The line and defense are absolutely the best in the state, if not the country" said Coach Joyce. "The offensive line protected the quarterback from sacks and opened the holes necessary for the backs and quarterback to score an outstanding 339 points in the regular season and 56 points in four playoff games."

"The defense may be even more remarkable, allowing only one touchdown during the regular season and only four touchdowns against the best in the state in the post season."

Lake Mary's accomplishments have earned it the right to represent the Southeastern U.S.A. region in the upcoming National Pop Warner Football Tournament, sponsored by Walt Disney World, to be held in Orlando.

The Rams will play the Northwest U.S.A. region at the Silver Spurs Rodeo Stadium in Kissimmee on Thursday, December 7th at 8 p.m. The winner of that game will then meet the winner of the Southwest USA/Northeast USA game in the Pop Warner Junior Midget Super Bowl on Sunday, December 10th at Orlando's Cypress Creek High School.

Other members of The Lake Mary Junior Midgets, all of whom attend Rocklake and Greenwood Lakes middle schools, are Brian Leon, Andy Britt, Scott Register, Mitch Pernal, Corey Kieba, Jason Hadley, Leighton Frasier, Michael Nicholas, Charles Conti, Corey Bond, Michael Thompson, Ryan Whelan, Eddie Hook, Jeff Midkiff, Chris Eichenberg, Justin Chamberlain, Jason Dowdy, Mehul Patel and Adam Rabinowitz.

Assisting Rick Joyce in coaching the team are offensive coordinator Tony Ballerino, Dave Coleman, Dan Eichenberg, Nick Mergo, Nick Dini, John Marshall, Ed Hook and Lane Derryberry. Diane Thompson is the team mother.

Lake Brantley's Deyon Williams (No. 33) sails around the Patriots' 82-89 decision over the Sandcrabs Wednesday. Lake Brantley improved to 5-1 with the win.

Patriots stay hot behind balanced offense

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Jim Adamczyk scored 19 points to lead five Patriots into double figures as Lake Brantley improved to 5-1 on the season with an 82-89 win over Daytona Beach-Seabreeze in a boys' basketball game Wednesday night.

Kyle Becker had 15 points for the Patriots, while James Gilchrist and Deyon Williams added 12 points each and Tim Pollock chipped in with 10.

"We had good balanced scoring," said Lake Brantley coach Steve Jucker. "Seabreeze has a good team, and we played an average game. We didn't have the intensity that we played with at Evans, and Seabreeze never quit."

The teams were tied for much of the first quarter, but Adamczyk's three-pointer at the end of the period gave Lake Brantley an 18-15 lead.

A Gilchrist layup with 7:07 remaining in the second quarter extended the Patriots lead to 22-15, but the Sandcrabs pulled within 33-29 with 1:03 before halftime. Lake Brantley had a 34-29 lead as

Family separated for 20 years

Dear Jerry, I haven't seen my mother or my siblings in some 20 plus years. Whatever happened wasn't my fault, but I come from a very stubborn family. Mom is still alive but refuses to other than speak with me periodically. As for my two brothers and sister, as far as they are concerned, I'm dead. I see all these shows on television about families getting back together again and have hopes that this would happen to me. What do you think or should I just go on with my life?

S.O. in Sanford

Dear S.O., You can choose your friends but you can't choose your relatives. All of you, no matter who was at fault and for whatever reason, are victims. Sometimes people are too proud and stubborn to see the error of their ways. Undoubtedly you have concerns and miss your family, however, they made their own choices as well and don't think for a minute that they're not consumed by their own actions as well. No, I wouldn't make any special effort to bring you all back together again as this could be even more painful than what has persisted over this length of time. Yes, go on with your life and recognize that, although you are a victim, that you are not the reason. Either way everyone loses unfortunately. You've had to find out that time does not heal all wounds; but you can heal!

'ESPecially' JERRY STEWART

Dear Mr. Stewart, I need to know if my marriage is going to work out. I recently told my husband that I have been seeing another man. Instead of getting mad at me, he (my husband) asked me who was better? My husband has always been somewhat passive and doesn't show much emotion. You would think he'd get mad or something? I still care for him a lot but there's no excitement to our marriage; in fact there never was and I wonder what I am doing here? Could you make a suggestion as to what I should do?

Dee, Lake Mary, FL.

Dear Dee, It sounds to me like you knew what you were getting into when you married your husband or were you just looking for a place to rest until something better came along? As for telling him about your extra-marital affair, could it be that you just found it necessary to be demonstrative and try to prove something to your husband or, perhaps, yourself. Before you get all used up why don't YOU seek some counseling and start to find out just who YOU are first before you start making any decisions about your marriage or any other relationship. The means doesn't always justify an end!

Dear Mr. Stewart,

Do you think that I'll survive the holidays? I always get "blue" during this time of the year. Family gatherings seem so phony! Turkey seems so plastic and gift exchanging seems so stupid. If I were an ostrich I'd bury my head in the sand until January 1st. And I keep saying why me, why me? Even Prozac doesn't help; can you? Martin, Sanford, FL.

Dear Martin, If you are expecting me to feel sorry for you, you're wrong. It sounds to me like you want to convince yourself or me that you are depressed. Not on your life! You're angry, but not for the right reasons. The petty and trivial seem to arouse your psyche. Put aside the trivial, get your gliblets in order and have a great time; as you'll be alright in spite of yourself. And save me some turkey...

(Write to Jerry Stewart, C/O Sanford Herald, 300 N. French Ave., Sanford FL 32771. Stewart's phone for appointments and speaking engagements: 1-407-236-2414.)

Ties binding son to parents cause some readers to choke

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Irritated in Ohio," who was upset because her 38-year-old husband calls his parents twice a day. What's her problem? If that's the only thing she can find wrong with her husband, she should consider herself lucky. I think any man who thinks that much of his mother would make a wonderful husband.

I'm very close to my parents. Both are in good health, but they live 250 miles away. Since I can visit them only a couple of times a year, I call them almost daily. If I ever meet a man who thinks I shouldn't be so close to my parents, I would tell him where to go. I would never jeopardize my relationship with my parents to compensate for someone's low self-esteem. Perhaps "Irritated in Ohio" should work on her self-esteem issue and stop feeling threatened when her husband calls his parents.

BARBARA CARROLL, SPRINGFIELD, ORE.

DEAR BARBARA: Although my thinking is along the lines of yours, I was surprised at how much mail "Irritated" letter generated from readers who disagreed with my answer. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing about the letter from "Irritated in Ohio," the woman whose husband calls his parents twice a day. He didn't call when he and his wife went away on vacation, and his parents laid a guilt trip on him.

You said you didn't understand why the wife should be upset. You missed the boat, Abby — big time! A man leaves his parents and cleaves to his wife at marriage. She becomes the most important person in his life when this new core family forms. Contact with parents is not cut off, but it should be reduced.

If the husband has a loving relationship with his parents and calls to check up on them every other day or so (or even once a week), that should be sufficient. If he has to check in with his parents twice a day, something is seriously wrong. At 38, he should have emotionally separated from his parents. (I've been married 21 years and have a good relationship with my in-laws.)

PAULA CUPP, CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

DEAR PAULA: Many people agreed with you. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: A man who calls his parents twice a day should not be admired. There's a difference between being devoted and being dependent.

What are the causes frequent urination?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had excessive urination for the past year. At night I might go as many as eight times. I've had an IVP, urinalysis and cystoscopy. All tests have come back negative.

DEAR READER: Excessive urination — especially at night — has many causes, ranging from inordinate consumption of fluids in the evening to serious medical conditions, such as diabetes, urinary infection, heart failure, prostate disease, and others.

You have apparently been under the care of a urologist, who appropriately examined your urinary tract, using such tests as urinalysis, IVP (kidney X-rays) and cystoscopy (examination of the lower tract with a lighted instrument).

Now, it seems to me, your doctor should take a step back and refer you to an internist (diagnostic specialist) in order to investigate some of the other causes of frequent urination that I mentioned. For example, you need a blood test to check for diabetes and a cardiogram and chest X-ray (for heart failure).

While you're waiting for an appointment with the specialist, try a little experiment: Don't consume any fluids after dinner. If your problem is as simple as fluid overload, this trick may substantially reduce your urinary frequency, a finding that would delight your internist and save you the nuisance and expense of further testing. Let me know the outcome.

To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Diabetes Mellitus" and "Understanding Heart Disease." Other readers who would like copies should send $3 for each report to P.O. Box 2617, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158. Be sure to mention the title(s).

DEAR DR. GOTT: A pulmonologist told me I have a calcium buildup in my lungs. I've never smoked and am 75 years old. Would any medication clear up this condition?

DEAR READER: The body often deposits calcium in inflamed areas during the healing process. The lungs are no exception. These deposits are harmless but appear prominent in chest X-ray examinations. There is no medication to treat these calcifications, and they will not affect your health. In most cases, they can be disregarded.

Remember, however, that certain chronic lung infections, such as tuberculosis, can lead to calcification. Your doctor will want to make sure that such an infection (for which antibiotic therapy is appropriate) is not present. Skin tests and sputum analyses are useful in this regard. Ask your physician about this.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What causes calcification of the pleura? Is it dangerous?

DEAR READER: As infections resolve, the body often deposits calcium at the sites of inflammation. The pleura, which is the thin but tough membrane that covers the lungs, can become calcified in areas where inflammation has been present.

For example, pleurisy was at one time extremely prevalent in children. Often due to tuberculosis, it caused severe, sharp pain on deep breathing. Once the infection was treated, painless areas of pleural calcification often became evident on the chest X-ray and were permanent.

Thus, it's not the harmless calcifications that are worrisome; it's the cause that is of concern. When doctors diagnose pleural calcifications, the physician must determine if the original infection were totally eradicated or whether it could continue to smolder and require antibiotic therapy.

MEDICINE

In general, this decision can be made by special testing, such as bacterial cultures. Pleural calcifications that reflect old, "burned-out" infection do not need treatment.

Courageous or foolhardy?

By Phillip Alder

Marvin Kitman said, "If God wanted us to be brave, why did He give us legs?" Well, you don't need legs to play bridge, but it helps to be brave.

This deal was played in Biarritz, France, earlier this year. West, Jean-Pierre Carde, missed a chance for a truly courageous play.

The auction by Laurent Bouscarel, South, and Jean-Christophe Quantin was lengthy but reasonable. Following South's reverse, three diamonds was game-forcing; North would have rebid a conventional two no-trump with a weak hand.

Declarer won the first trick with the club ace, drew trumps and played a heart to dummy's nine. After it held the trick, Bouscarel continued with the spade ace, discarding a club, and the spade queen, preparing to throw a second club. When East covered with the king, South ruffed, played a heart to dummy's ace, threw his second club loser on the spade jack and conceded one heart trick.

Nicely done by declarer, but Carde realized he had missed a great chance. Suppose, on the first heart lead, he had played the king. Wouldn't South, placing East with the heart jack, win with dummy's ace, throw one club on the spade ace and run the heart 10 through East? If so, the contract would fail, South having to lose a club trick as well.

Phillip Alder's book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available, autographed upon request, for $14.95 from P.O. Box 189, Roslyn Hts., NY 11577-0189.
