U.S. launches Titan rocket

WANDENBURG, Ark. (AP) — A United States Air Force Titan 4D rocket carrying a second military payload blasted off in the program's first launch since a space shuttle was left stranded in orbit earlier this month.

The launch of Titan 4D, the second most powerful active rocket in the American arsenal, followed NASA's space shuttle launch earlier this morning after a week of rain.

At Vandenberg Air Force Base, the Air Force's premier launch facility, a 400-ton Titan 4D rocket, carrying a second military payload, blasted off in the program's first launch since a space shuttle was left stranded in orbit earlier this month.

It rained for an hour and a quarter, but should not have caused any problems, the base made details difficult to see.

Ten die in train crash

LEPENAY, France (AP) — An express train carrying 100 people derailed in France, killing 10 people and injuring 100 others, officials said.

The train, carrying 100 people, derailed at a station in Lepenay, France, on the Paris-Lyon line, killing 10 people and injuring 100 others, officials said.

Officials said the train derailed on a curve, and the dead and injured were the result of people being thrown from the train. A report is expected.

Winning Lotto ticket sold in St. Cloud

TALLAHASSEE — Somebody bought a lottery ticket in St. Cloud worth $9 million, marking the third week in a row that players have won the Florida Lotto jackpot.

The winning numbers for this week's drawing were 4, 11, 12, 19, 31 and 40. Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said the only ticket to match all six numbers was sold in the northern Osceola County town of St. Cloud, a frequent stop for tourists headed to nearby Disney World. The winner had not come forward Sunday.

Last week, three Jacksonville residents split the $8.9 million jackpot, and the previous week two sisters from Indian town claimed the $31.5 million prize.

"This winning trend is great for Lotto players and for the Educational Enhancement Trust Fund," Paul said, noting that $53.3 million had been transferred to the trust fund last week.

Paul said 400,000 players shared $4.27 million in lesser prizes, with payouts as follows:

- 436 players had five of the six numbers to win $2,581.50
- 22,733 players had four winning numbers, good for $72.50.
- 377,099 players had three of the six, good for $4.

The Lotto jackpot for next week was estimated at $8 million.

Hit and run driver surrenders

WEST PALM BEACH — A Delray Beach man surrendered to authorities Sunday for leaving the scene of a 1986 fatal car accident, possibly ending a legal dispute on client-attorney privileges.

William Morser, 56, of Delray Beach, reported to West Palm Beach police at 3:38 p.m., and was released on his own recognition, police said. He was scheduled to appear before a county judge Dec. 9 at 8:45 a.m.

A spokeswoman at the Palm Beach County jail said Morser turned himself in for "leaving a scene involving death."

Attorney Joe Farrah, representing the victim's parents, said he believes Morser might try to run away because "He's been hiding for 32 months."

Morser declined comment, as did his attorney, Barry Kriecher, who scheduled a news conference for today.

Man killed in shootout with campaigners

LAKELAND — An armed man was shot to death during an argument with two campaign workers for Polk County sheriff candidate Tom Wheeler outside a Haines City food store, the county sheriff's office reported.

The incident remained under investigation Sunday and no charges had been filed, a sheriff's spokeswoman said.

Mauro DeGado, 31, died Saturday about 4 p.m. outside the A & D Store. He was shot by two men who had been riding past the store in a motor home carrying seven or eight Wheeler workers to a campaign function, sheriff's spokeswoman Lynne Breidenbach said.

She said Wheeler, a Democrat who is challenging Republican incumbent Lawrence W. Crow Jr., was on the campaign vehicle.

Breidenbach said the motor home stopped at the store and passengers disembarked after riders on the vehicle spotted DeGado and another man involved in an argument in the store's parking lot.

She said two of the men who had been inside the motor home, identified as Jim Blake and Joe Miano, fired three shots, striking DeGado, who was pronounced dead at the scene.

Burglar gets way with lottery tickets

TITUSVILLE — A burglar broke through a Titusville convenience store bathroom wall, drilled a hole through the safe and made off with lottery tickets in Florida's Money Tree scratch-off game, authorities said Sunday.

John Carbin, the owner of the Mobile Station at Garden Street and Interstate 95, said the thief broke in sometime Friday night and stole "quite a bit" of money, 296 lottery tickets, beer, cigarettes and a few other items.

Titusville police officer Kalleen McKee said authorities hope to identify the culprit when the stolen tickets are cashed in. The tickets have serial numbers 04-114418203 through 04-114418499, she said.

"As far as I know, nobody has cashed any of them in as of yet," McKee said.

Carbin said he believed it was one burglar, but that whoever broke in probably won't try to cash in the tickets. "They'll probably burn them."

Carbin noticed the burglary shortly after the store opened Saturday morning, according to police records.

Carbin said the bandit caused about $1,500 in damage, not counting the "considerable" damage to the building.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Turn over film, CBS ordered

United Press International

FORT MYERS — CBS News expects to make a decision Monday on whether it will appeal after losing a weekend attempt to halt the release of outtakes from a 1988 interview with serial killer Bobby Joe Long.

The network still has the tapes and its lawyers said they would decide their next legal step, which may be an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, after reviewing a formal order to turn over the outtakes. That order is expected to be issued Monday.

Long's attorneys asked for the outtakes after prosecutors announced they intended to use broadcast portions of the interview in a trial. Defense attorneys contended that they had a right to the outtakes to determine whether Long's statements were taken out of context.

CBS protested releasing the outtakes, saying it would undermine the integrity of the editorial process. News organizations generally oppose demands for unpublished materials and outtakes, arguing that such disclosures would make them an arm of the court and destroy their impartiality.

Pasco Circuit Judge Wayne Cobb ordered

The Lakeland court said it would issue a formal order Monday. Julin said the network may consider a direct appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, depending on what the Lakeland appeals court says in its order.

CBS to surrender the outtakes to Long's attorneys. The 2nd District Court of Appeal in Lakeland suspended the order while reviewing the case, then lifted that suspension on Friday.

CBS then took the matter to the Florida Supreme Court, and Chief Justice Raymond Erlich refused Saturday to reinstate the suspension.

The network's attorney, Thomas Julin, said CBS does not have to surrender the outtakes until formally ordered to do so.

The Lakeland court said it would issue a formal order Monday. Julin said the network may consider a direct appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, depending on what the Lakeland appeals court says in its order.

"I think all the options are open," Julin said. "It's up to CBS to decide what to do."

Assistant Public Defender William Eble said he expects the network will not give up.

"My client's position is that we still want those tapes," Eble said. "In all honesty, I don't expect CBS to produce those tapes. I expect them to pursue all their legal remedies."

Long, 35, is on trial for the second time on a first-degree murder charge in the slaying of Virginia Lee Johnson. The 18-year-old prostitute's skeletal remains were found on Nov. 6, 1984, in a field in southern Pasco County.

Long's death sentences in the Johnson case and a Hillsborough County murder were thrown out by the state Supreme Court, which ruled that investigators illegally obtained Long's confession.

Long also has pleaded guilty and was sentenced to life in prison for the murders of seven other women.

Jurors last week saw part of the broadcast interview.

Retailers dropping instant-winner sales

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Hundreds of retailers disheartened by low profits and the steady hassle of selling instant-winner lottery tickets have stopped selling the $1 scratch-off cards.

In the last two months, nearly 1,300 retailers have told the Lottery Department to take its tickets back, the Tampa Tribune reported Sunday. Only 650 new retailers signed on during those two months.

Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said there are still more than enough instant-winner outlets, but conceded she may increase retailers' commissions to stop deeper defections.

"The prevailing wisdom in Florida was that we needed 10,000 to 12,000 instant retailers," Paul said. "But numbers aren't important. Specific locations are important. We are recruiting specific locations where there may be holes."

There are currently about 14,800 instant-ticket retailers. The average retailer takes in $20.50 a week in commissions.

Paul said she is considering increasing the commission on each $1 ticket from 5 cents to 6 cents.

Overall, 3,907 businesses have dropped the ticket sales, while 4,320 have signed on since the games began in January. But since July, the number of retailers opting out has exceeded the number signing on.

From Sept. 12 to Oct. 12, 737 retailers stopped selling tickets while 372 new retailers signed contracts with the department. The month before, 421 retailers dropped out and 294 were added.

The lottery kicked off with first week sales of $5 million in instant-winner tickets, a national record. Sales have now leveled off to about $6 million a week, about 410 tickets for each retailer.

Paul hopes to revive interest in the instant tickets by adding a new gimmick next month. During the nightly drawing in the Cash 3 on-line computer game, lottery officials will draw five "Entry" tickets from the current instant-winner game.

The owners of those five tickets will receive 500 free instant-winner tickets.

Wife: Animal kills ruin family life

United Press International

MIAMI — The wife of a Santeria priest turned in her husband to the Humane Society, saying his monthly animal sacrifices were wrecking their family life.

Miracles Williams called the Humane Society Saturday and complained that her husband was sacrificing a goat and a chicken in their backyard — again.

Chief cruelty investigator Joe Torregrossa arrived in time to see a man slice open the belly of a skinned dead goat hanging from two hooks in a tree. A wriggling chicken, feathers and all, was smoldering in a baking tin.

In a backyard shed, Torregrossa found an urn of bloodied chicken feathers and a blood-stained wooden doll in a bowl with a woman's picture.

Miami police arrested Neator Williams and another unidentified man on charges of animal cruelty, a misdemeanor. The arrested men said they were having a backyard barbecue.

A next-door neighbor had complained in July that a lingering stench from the Williams' yard was making them sick. Police had visited the house twice previously after Miracles Williams called them, but they did not find any animals until this time.

The Williamses, Cuban immigrants who have been married 38 years, are in the middle of a divorce that Mrs. Williams blames on Santeria.

In a report published Sunday in the Miami Herald, Mrs. Williams said her husband became a high priest of Santeria 12 years ago. Santeria is an African religion brought to Cuba by Nigerian slaves, and brought to the United States by Cuban immigrants.

Miracles said her husband's monthly rituals of blood sacrifice were too much for her to bear.

"Our life has changed completely," she said. "It's not the same man I married."

Nude car wash shut down by police

United Press International

JACKSONVILLE — Jacksonville police have closed down the "Only Nude Car Wash in the Nation," a newspaper reported Sunday.

Police arrested 10 people when they closed the car wash at the Fantasy Club nightclub Saturday afternoon, the Florida Times-Union reported.

Those arrested included four nude women who had been scrubbing cars, two women in bathing suits who had been flagging down passing motorists and a woman who was collecting the $10 fee. The women were all nude dancers at the nightclub.

Also arrested were three male club employees, including one who was charged with resisting arrest after allegedly fighting with police detectives.

The car wash had been operating beneath a carport on club property since mid-September. The club marquee advertised the activity as the "Only Nude Car Wash in the Nation."

Police have long wanted to close the operation, but were unsure if they had the legal authority to do so. They waited until they got word from the State Attorney's Office that charges would stand up in court.

"It should have been closed down the first week," vice detective Bobby Deal said. "Once they started the car wash the state attorney had to research whether it was a violation of the law."

Said State Attorney's Office spokesman Audrey Moran: "Needless to say, there is not a statute that says Jacksonville shall not have nude car washes. But the case law on public nudity and breach of peace support it."

Police told Fantasy World owner Warren Colazzo Friday night they would shut the car wash down if it were open the next day. Deal said that Colazzo asked that police wait until after 5 p.m. to issue any citations so he could take in business from the Florida-Georgia football game.

Colazzo started the car wash as part of an ongoing protest against a city ordinance banning topless dancing at businesses that sell alcohol, including his own. He has been trying to have the law declared unconstitutional.

Colazzo disappeared when police arrived Saturday and was not arrested.

The four nude women were charged with breach of the peace and public nudity, both misdemeanors. The three other women were charged with breach of the peace, and the three men were charged with breach of the peace and aiding in public nudity.

Baby rescued from pool

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Seminole County sheriff's deputies report a 10-month-old baby who almost drowned Sunday is recovering today in an Orlando hospital.

Jacob Orlan Berkland, of 369 Banyan Drive, Altamonte Springs, was pulled from the family swimming pool by his mother Detya Berkland, at about 3:55 p.m. Sunday. She called for help and neighbor Mary Wallwood administered CPR to the baby before firefighters arrived, a sheriff's report said.

Jacob is in Florida Hospital-Orlando, where his condition was reported as critical.

Man arrested during mother's treatment

CASSELBERRY — Police helping firefighters who were trying to treat Mildred Woodall reported arresting her son who they said fought police and threatened firefighters.

Jim Walter Woodall, 30, of 160 Lazy Circle, was arrested at home at about 9 p.m. Sunday.

Police said they responded to the rescue scene where a fight was reported. There, police said Woodall threatened them and firefighters and fought police. The police report did not say why Mrs. Woodall was being treated, or why her son allegedly interfered with her treatment.

He is charged with battery on a policeman, three counts on assault on a firefighter and resisting with violence. Bond is $1,000.

Woman, police report attacks

SANFORD — A Sanford man who police said hit a woman and then shoved, kicked and threatened police who arrested him at home, is charged with battery, battery on a policeman and resisting with violence.

The man identified both as John Doe and Gerald Edward Kleynenberg, 38, of 700 Magnolia #9, was arrested at 9:21 p.m. Saturday. Bond is $500.

Man charged in knife threat

SANFORD — Sanford police report the arrest of a man who allegedly threatened a policeman with a knife during a fight at the Sanford Civic Center at about 12:30 p.m. Sunday.

Shams Mohi, 33, of 708 River Bend Blvd., Longwood, is charged with aggravated assault on a policeman. Bond is $500.

Loiterer charged with cocaine possession

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A Seminole County sheriff's deputy who confronted a suspected loiterer outside the Disco Food Store, Magnolia Street, rural Altamonte Springs, reported finding crack cocaine in his possession.

Terry Lee Small, 25, of 402 Magnolia St., Altamonte Springs, was charged with possession of cocaine and resisting arrest without violence at about 10:30 p.m. Sunday. Bond is $2,000. The cocaine was found in a search.

Police report cocaine found

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man who began walking away from a Seminole County sheriff's deputy outside an Altamonte Springs bar on Marker Street, was stopped and searched Sunday.

That led to the arrest of Horace Simmons, 31, of 711 Marker St. at 10:57 a.m. He is charged with possession of cocaine and bond is $2,000.

Auto theft suspect captured

LONGWOOD — A man who matched the description of a suspect in a Caselberry auto burglary that occurred at about 1:45 a.m. Sunday, was captured in Longwood at about 3:40 a.m. Sunday.

Casselberry police charged Joseph Edward Conaldi, 19, of 1340 Chilean Lane, Winter Park, with auto theft. He was captured on Dog Track Road, after Longwood police noticed he matched the description of a man who tried to steal a pickup truck from the house of James Costantini, of 1219 Quintuplet Court, before Costantini spotted the suspect and fought him. The suspect fled and police were alerted to the incident.

Burglar reported inside vehicles

CASSELBERRY — A witness reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies that he saw a man inside his truck and in other vehicles at 725 Coachlight Drive, Caselberry.

That led to the arrest at 3:10 a.m. Sunday of Douglas Ashley Paul, 22, of 200 Fern Park Blvd. #214, Fern Park, at the crime scene. He is charged with two counts of auto burglary and bond is $1,000.

Suspect jailed on armed robbery spree charges

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A Sanford man arrested Sunday and charged in the armed robbery of a Sanford convenience store has charges pending against him in four other area robberies.

Ricardo Lopez Johnson, 22, of 1006 Mangouline Ave., was arrested by Sanford police at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, in connection with the 10 p.m. Saturday robbery of the Cumberland Farms, 3100 S. Sanford Ave.

Police in Sanford and Lake Mary, and Seminole and Volusia county sheriff's deputies determined they all were looking for the same suspect, who police said began a weekend crime spree in DeBary at about 8 a.m. Saturday.

Saturday.

In all cases the robber was traveling in a compact white car and had a blue towel wrapped around his right hand when he approached store clerks and demanded cash.

The clerks believed the robber had a gun under the towel and reported they were threatened.

The first Sanford robbery occurred at the Circle K, State Road 46 at Persimmon Ave.

The arrest was made after the suspect came to the Sanford police station to report his car, which had been abandoned in Sanford during a police pursuit, had been stolen. The victim of the fourth robbery reportedly identified a suspect in a photo lineup and that brought the first charges against Johnson, and a $1,000 bond. Sanford police said he has been identified as a suspect in the other cases.

Sanford Capt. Charles Fagan said he didn't know the total of money stolen.

Games

Dr. Sammy Lee, who won the Olympic gold medal in high diving in 1948 and 1952, congratulated Sanford on its sponsorship of the Games and reminisced about his Korean heritage.

"My parents emigrated from Korea in 1905 and I was back in Korea in 1953 when Americans were dying to keep South Korea free," he said. "Thirty five years later I was back again to see the greatest Olympics in history and it's thanks to this great country that South Korea was able to host a free olympics this year."

The recruit band from the Naval Training Center in Orlando presented a concert of patriotic music before the ceremonies began, and played the "Star Spangled Banner" after the U.S. flag was presented by the Sanford Knights of Columbus Color Guard, and James Deiso, 93, of Rockledge sang, "God Bless America."

year, wind surfing made its debut at the Golden Games last year as an exhibition.

According to Pete O'Neill, manager of Sunset Sailboards, sponsors of the event, response to the new sport has been terrific. "We're surprised at the enthusiasm from everyone," O'Neill said.

Wright has been wind surfing for nine years. He said he's out on his board at least three times a week.

"The main thing is to get a lot of practice," he said. "Anybody can learn wind surfing if they want to. All they need are a few lessons and lots of practice."

Wright said he has won 14 different awards in various competitions in Florida and Hilton Head, S.C. He described Sunday's conditions on Lake Monroe as "difficult. There was a bad chop and the wind was gusting. It was difficult to hold the sail out of the water."

Even so, the challenge of the games appeals to him.

"Games like these give older people the opportunity to compete against equals. The more competition, the more I enjoy it. This clearly illustrates that when you're 65, you're not finished. All this physical activity is very beneficial from a health point of view," he said.

Longwood mulls fee hikes

LONGWOOD — City commissioners at tonight's regular meeting are scheduled to hear the first reading of an ordinance to increase water and sewer fees.

If approved, water rates would be raised by 25 percent and sewer fees by 30 percent. The money would be used to improve both facilities, according to city officials.

"It's an increase right up the line," City Administrator Gene DeMarie said.

Customers of the city water system would be charged $6.25 for the first 3,000 gallons with incremental increases for additional gallonage used.

Residential customers would pay a monthly sewer fee of $31.20 for sewage treatment while commercial establishments connected to the city's water system would pay 350 percent of their water bill or a minimum of $50.

Commissioners also are scheduled to recommend bid awards for water and sewer materials. Seven vendors responded to bids which have been evaluated by the purchasing and public works department.

system.

For Jenny, 10, it means not letting juvenile rheumatoid arthritis and intestinal problems cause her to miss a year of school. It also provides a distraction from disease and the tedium of being cooped up away from friends and social activities.

For Jenny's mom, Kathy, it is a financial and emotional break. "With sick children the cost of medicine and doctor's care is frightening enough," she said. "But to also have to consider the cost of tutoring... well, that could really be devastating to a family."

The 15-year-old Seminole program began with one teacher — Karlene Duke — and 32 students. Today, Duke serves as coordinator and schedules the activities of five full-time and eight part-time instructors. A job which is complicated by the county's recent growth and congestion, and has Duke investigating telephone/video units to aid with increased enrollments.

According to Jenny's instructor, Dotti Urshan, teachers spend 25 hours a week with different students, and nearly as many hours preparing lessons.

"We may have one student in third grade, one in twelfth, and one in seventh," she said.

Homebound teachers coordinate closely with students' classroom teachers, using identical textbooks and materials. Duke says every effort is made to send students back to school with the confidence that they can succeed.

Jenny likes the one-on-one attention a homebound teacher provides. "If I have a question to ask, I don't have to worry about what other people might think," she said. "I just ask it."

She is a quick study, who does not succumb to the distraction of a nearby swimming pool, or a six-year-old sister who runs in and out of the room. She answers questions as quickly as they're asked, and will continue to do so until fatigue sets in. She uses a pen for her assignments, even math, saying it's easier for her to grip, and glides across the page with less effort than a pencil. Her folders are filled with newspaper clippings, papers marked excellent or wow, and lists of upcoming assignments.

Jenny and Urshan's relationship is closer than the ordinary teacher and student. In fact, Urshan is a familiar and welcome friend to the whole family.

"The education is super," said Kathy. "Jenny is very bright and because Dotti can zero in on trouble areas, Jenny doesn't get bored with repetition of things she already knows."

What Jenny and other homebound students dislike is the isolation. They are cut off from friends, parties, music and plays, and the normal chitchat that fills school hallways. "My friends and I we use to be able to talk," Jenny said. "But now I don't know what's going on at school, and it's harder to talk."

It's also hard to tell friends that you're not feeling well and need for them to leave. Urshan explained that children can't see Jenny's sick, so confusion and hurt feelings often result. She appears normal, there's no cast to sign or bruises to gasp over.

Jenny's situation is further complicated because next year she will be a middle school student attending a new school. Seminole High School teacher

Tony Ackerson, himself a former homebound student, recalls similar adjustments. In 1975 a car accident put him out of school with spinal injuries; he was 13-years-old.

"Academically it was a breeze," he said. "If anything, you have a better education because of the individualized treatment, but the social adjustment — that was tough."

By the time he was well enough to return to school it was a high school classroom he was sitting in. Ackerson says he tries to bring the positive attitude of the homebound program, and that individualized treatment to his current teaching and coaching duties.

Any student who expects to be out of school for three weeks or longer, or has a chronic illness requiring extended absences is eligible for the homebound/hospital program.

Duke said there is no waiting period, and applications are available in all school guidance offices, county hospitals, social service offices, and the homebound office at the Rosenwald Exceptional Student Center. For more information call 831-4259.

Lake Mary wins in elections

Voters in Lake Mary will find themselves in a fortunate situation tomorrow as they cast their ballots for mayor and three commission seats. The array of qualified candidates allows voters to choose from among excellent alternatives.

The only downside in this otherwise fortuitous situation is that one city official will be knocked out of office in the mayoral election. Mayor Richard A. Fess is seeking re-election and is being challenged by incumbent commissioner Randall C. Morris. Both have demonstrated effective representation on the commission and both have made significant contributions to the betterment of the community.

Mr. Fess has served two terms as mayor and has compiled an exemplary record in that office. Mr. Morris won his post as commissioner last year in a landslide and has done nothing to disappoint his supporters.

The Herald recommends the re-election of Mr. Fess based on his record as mayor and his experience in service to the city.

Six candidates are vying for commission seats one, two and four. All present impressive credentials in business or education and in service to the community.

Paul D. Tremel is seeking re-election to his post as seat 4 commissioner. His two terms in office have been effective and have established a foundation to aid in facing the environmental and other growth problems that Lake Mary will face in the coming years. The Herald recommends Mr. Tremel for re-election to seat 4.

Wayne King has served three terms as a Lake Mary commissioner in previous years and is a veteran of the extended sessions of those meetings. During years between commission service, Mr. King has served on the city's planning and zoning board and the board of adjustment. He has applied his training as biologist and ecologist to the benefit of Lake Mary. Based on his experience in service to the city and his knowledge of environmental issues, the Herald recommends Mr. King for seat 1.

David J. Meador is making his first race for public office but his record of professional and civic service is exemplary. He has presented programs and ideas for the city which are realistic and has suggested goals which are attainable. The Herald recommends the election of Mr. Meador to Lake Mary seat 2.

Berry's World

"The service was fine. I don't tip because I don't want to be loved and I don't need approval."

ARNOLD SAWISLAK

Like them or not, you should vote for one

WASHINGTON — Several national polls in the closing weeks of the campaign have revealed that about two-thirds of the public is dissatisfied with both candidates the major parties nominated for president.

The first thought that evokes is, "My God, what if two-thirds of the people refuse to vote?" The second thought is, "My God, almost half of the people already refuse to vote."

Walk down the street and count off 10 adults. Ask them if they plan to vote. As many as seven or eight may say they do, but in fact the experts will be amazed if six do.

In large numbers, that means we will be lucky if the total vote Tuesday much exceeds 90 million of the 183 million Americans who are 18 or older and the 120 million or so who bothered to register.

That also means if the winning candidate gets 55 per cent of the vote, less than 50 million of the 200 million-plus Americans of all ages will have participated in the selection of a new president. And that compares unfavorably with many countries we Americans look down on because they don't give the majority of their people a voice in their own government.

In 1984, the cheery news was that an estimated 53.1 per cent of Americans 18 or older voted because the comparable figure for 1980 was 52.6 per cent. But this year, students of voting patterns are predicting that turnout will be barely over 50 per cent.

There used to be a theory that low turnout was a sign of voter satisfaction with things as they are. In view of what was going on in this country in some of the last few presidential election years such as the inflation of 1980, the after-taste of Watergate in 1976, and Vietnam in 1972 and 1968, that is hard to swallow, but it hardly applies this year. In 1988, there is no status quo — whoever is elected.

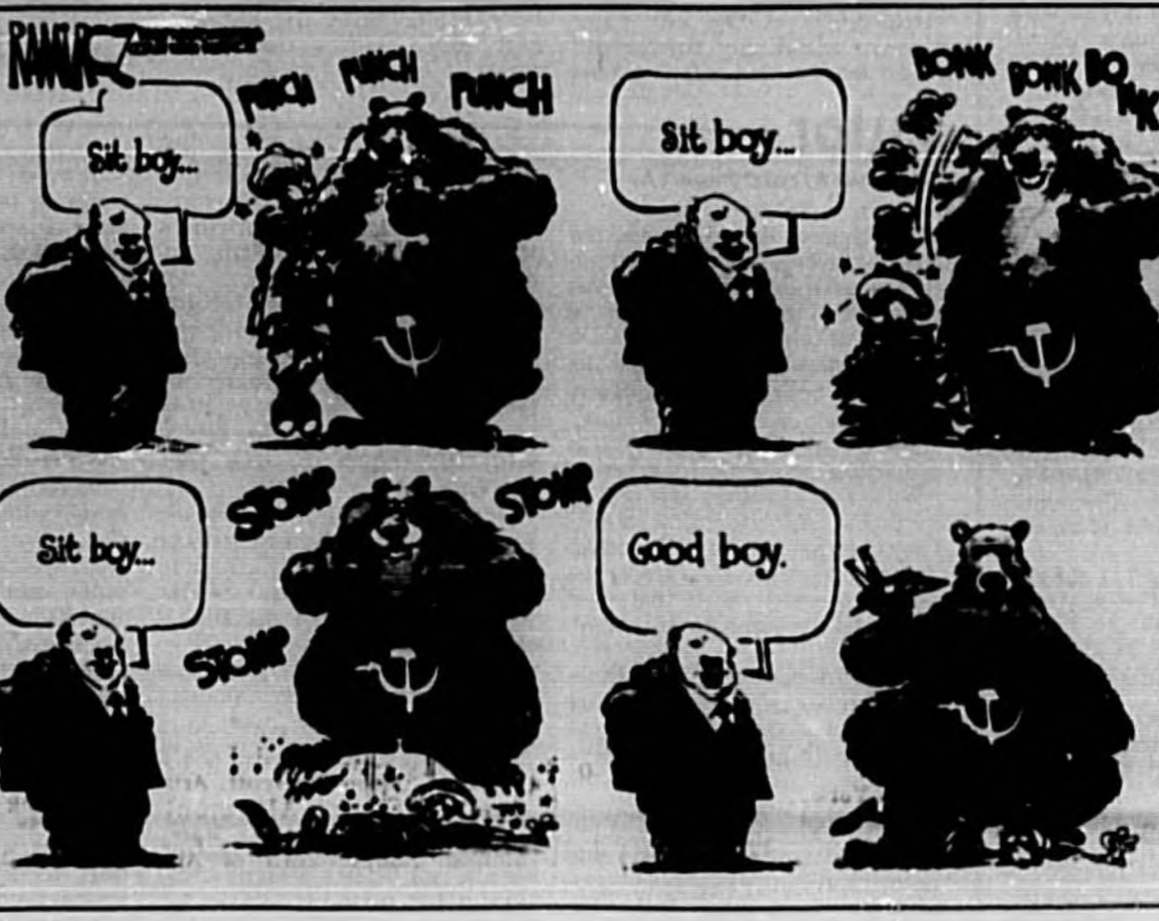

We will be lucky if the total vote Tuesday much exceeds 90 million.

he won't be Ronald Reagan.

There is also the possibility that people refrain from voting as a form of protest against the political establishment. In most cases, that can be easily detected as in South Africa recently when opponents of apartheid organized a boycott because the government permitted only whites to vote for whites, blacks for blacks.

Of course, citizens in most states can find a minor party candidate — a Ron Paul or a Lenora Fulani — for whom they can vote, either as a better choice than the Republican and Democratic candidates or as a protest against them. At the minimum, those votes will be part of the total turnout and signal that those who cast them had something to say.

Simply put, not voting is a cop-out. It dishonors and damages one of the few systems of government in the world that even tries to empower ordinary people. Even when citizens do not like the choices they have, they should vote for whoever they think is the lesser of evils and then get active in the political process to improve their choices next time.

JACK ANDERSON

Despite qualms, folks should vote

WASHINGTON — If as many people voted for independent presidential candidate John Anderson in 1980 as claim to, Ronald Reagan wouldn't be president of the United States today. In the cynicism about Reagan which has become yuppie chic, it is tough to find anyone who contributed to his landslide victory — about as tough as finding anyone who voted for Richard Nixon. "Don't blame me, I voted for George McGovern," was the baby boomers cry of the '70s. "Don't blame me, I voted for John Anderson," has replaced it in the '80s.

The moral of the story is this: Despite the moaning and groaning of voters, 1988 is not the first time that people have despaired of not having a clear-cut choice for president. And it will not be the last.

Blame the primary system, blame the media, blame the "handers" and the "spin doctors." But the reality is, the American electoral process does not produce heroes or gods and probably never has. It produces men and women who aren't much different from ourselves.

If you want Mother Teresa for president, you must lay down your guns and give all your money to the poor. If you want Ollie North for president, you must shred the Constitution and rearrange Miss Liberty to put her hand over her heart.

The heroes of the left and the right simply won't make it on the ballot and so we are left with George Bush and Michael Dukakis — nobody's heroes, but our consensus nevertheless.

Tomorrow, all registered American voters are entitled to walk into a polling booth, close the curtain behind them and pull the levers, push the buttons or punch the holes.

Nothing short of death should keep voters away — especially not a malaise about choices. Imagine voters in the Soviet Union being offered a free and open election for the first time, and then imagine them staying home because the debate bored them or the media trivialized the issues or the candidates weren't dynamic enough.

If pollsters say the candidates are 20 points or 0.2 points apart, the voter should still cast a ballot.

It's an old saw, but still true, that every vote counts.

Had James G. Blaine received one more vote per precinct in New York state in 1884, he, not Grover Cleveland, would have been elected to the White House.

An extra vote in each precinct in California in 1916 would have meant victory for Charles Evans Hughes over Woodrow Wilson.

In 1876, an Indiana voter insisted on leaving his sickbed to cast his ballot in a congressional contest. His man won by a single vote and was named to a commission chosen to referee contested returns in the presidential race between Samuel J. Tilden and Rutherford B. Hayes. The congressman sided with Hayes, to whom the commission awarded the disputed votes by an 8 to 7 decision. The result: Hayes became president of the United States by an electoral vote of 185 to 184.

In 1960, John F. Kennedy beat Richard M. Nixon by a popular-vote margin that averaged less than one ballot for each of the nation's 166,137 election precincts.

Ignore the polls. As Gov. Michael Dukakis has correctly pointed out, he had a commanding lead in the polls when he was running for a second term in Massachusetts in 1978 and he lost on Election Day. The polls come close to predicting whom people will vote for, but they cannot accurately project who will get out and vote tomorrow.

GEORGE F. WILL

The case for Dukakis

WASHINGTON — Because neither candidate has made a convincing case for himself, this column today undertakes to do so for Dukakis. The case for Bush comes in the next column.

Consider the case for Dukakis while you are sitting in a traffic jam or on a plane in congested traffic at a congested airport. You are then congealed in a consequence of the Reagan-Bush administration's budget deficits.

Whenever you buy gasoline or an airline ticket, you pay taxes that go into trust funds that can be spent only for highways and airports. But these funds are being hoarded to make the deficit seem to be "only" $155 billion. The deficit is the numerical expression of a cultural tendency and a governmental dereliction of duty. America's tendency is to consume more than it produces. The neglected duty is to husband resources and plan for tomorrow.

Three-quarters of the debt incurred by the U.S. government in 190 years prior to the Reagan-Bush administration was the result of war. The debt was (as Alexander Hamilton said of Revolutionary War debt) "the price of liberty." The Reagan-Bush debt is just the price of profligacy. Would Dukakis do worse? Not likely.

Democrats may have learned restraint. Even during the 1982 recession, the worst contraction since the Depression, they did not mount a serious drive for a jobs program. And having campaigned demagogically in 1982 against Social Security cuts, they collaborated in a cut (by raising the retirement age). Of the 255 Democratic congressmen, 138 have arrived here since 1978, after Carter's turn toward austerity. They have not had a chance to acquire the habit of liberality in domestic spending. The decade has produced pent-up pressure for spending, but perhaps a Democratic President would be best for enforcing discipline.

Dukakis rightly insists that some new spending is needed. As productivity growth slows, we are investing less generously in children than previous generations did. For all his flag-waving, Bush will not summon Americans to the patriotic act of forgoing, through taxation, even a small portion of private consumption. Such forgoing would serve the collective good (which, Bush please not, is what government is for) by reducing the deficit. That would reduce the drain of private savings away from productive investment. And more could be spent by government to reduce the dangerous educational deficit of the rising generation of citizens.

Dukakis, in his come-to-think-about-it-!-!

ust-remembered-I'm-a-liberal mood, has been criticizing some American inequalities. Bush says this is un-American. "You see, I think that's for European democracies or something else—it isn't for the United States of America. We are not going to be divided by class."

Bush, you're something else if you think there are no class divisions that condition access to education, legal services, medical care and other important things. It is a national scandal that one-fifth of all children live in poverty and a national travesty that a presidential candidate denies class realities.

As for that object of universal political worship—the middle (if Bush will pardon the expression) class—consider this: Four-fifths of Americans—all but the top 20 percent—are paying a larger portion of their family income in federal income taxes than before Reagan's presidency. Dukakis' foreign policy is, of course, improvised incoherence generated by dangerous instincts. For example, he criticizes intervention in the "internal affairs" of Nicaragua, but wants to overthrow the governments of Panama and South Africa. And his campaign conversion to the support of some military modernization is unconvincing. But then Bush blithely endorses SDI, MX, Midgetman, the B-1, Stealth, a 600-ship Navy, improved conventional forces and budget restraint. His calculator needs new batteries. The difference between Dukakis, who may find that some systems are jobs programs with Democratic constituencies, and Bush, who is unwilling to put tax money where his moving lips are when praising defense, might be small.

The next President must restrain American and Western European lenders from unleashing a flood of credit to the Soviet Union, a flood that would reduce the pressure on Gorbachev to choose between militarism and improved living standards. But regarding East-West trade, the Republican Party reveals itself as a party of blinkered businessmen and the crassest commercial values. Democrats might do better.

Under Bush or Dukakis, foreign policy for the next few years will be largely a matter of watching while Gorbachev defines himself.

The neglected duty is to husband resources and plan for tomorrow.

It's an old saw, but still true, that every vote counts.

Stocks open lower

United Press International

NEW YORK — Prices opened lower today in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which fell 24.54 Friday, was off 9.42 to 2136.38 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 456-181 among the 1,014 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 6,079,000 shares.

Stock prices closed sharply lower Friday in moderate trading, dragged down by fears that a stronger-than-expected October unemployment report could reduce the potential for lower interest rates.

The jobless rate last month dropped to 5.3 percent, and non-farm payrolls rose by 323,000, well above market estimates of around 240,000.

The strong gains countered earlier evidence in August and September of an economic slowdown, and renewed fears that the Federal Reserve Board might not have the freedom to lower interest rates and could even be forced to tighten.

Dollar drifts higher; gold, silver mixed

United Press International

The dollar moved slightly higher today in light trading on most major foreign currency markets. Gold was mixed.

Currency traders in New York said uneasiness ahead of Tuesday's presidential election slowed trading activity as most players seemed content to sit on the sidelines for the next two days.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar closed higher against the Japanese yen, at 125.07 yen, up 0.44 yen from 124.63 yen on Friday.

In Europe, the dollar began the day in Frankfurt at 1.792 West German marks, up from Friday's close of 1.7807.

The dollar opened in Paris at 6.1165 French francs, up from 6.0755 and in Milan at 1,330.50 lire, up from 1,323.9.

The dollar fell in Zurich to 1.50 Swiss francs, down from 1.5062 and slipped in Brussels to 37.85 Belgian francs, down from 37.95.

In London, the pound opened at $1.787, compared with $1.7855 on Friday.

In early New York trading, the dollar was slightly lower against key foreign currencies in thin trading.

On the bullion markets, gold opened $1.50 an ounce higher in Zurich at $422 an ounce, but fell $2.50 in London to $422.

Japanese, Swiss lead in savings

United Press International

GENEVA — Japan and Switzerland are far ahead of all others as the world's thriftiest nations, a survey showed Monday.

The report by the International Savings Banks Institute was based on figures provided at the end of 1987 by its 3,000 affiliated banks in 75 countries.

Average per capita savings in banks and other savings institutions amounted to the equivalent of $38,439 in Japan and $34,763 in Switzerland — more than three and nearly four times higher than the United States.

Belgium was third but far behind at a per capita figure of $17,987.

Others in the top 10 were West Germany ($16,102), Austria ($13,209), Denmark ($11,792), United States

($9,888), Sweden ($8,667), Singapore ($8,742) and Finland and Norway almost tied ($8,321 and $8,205).

The ISBI noted that only bank savings were compiled without taking account of other forms of savings such as insurance, which is a major competitor for banks.

It also cautioned that the tabulation in U.S. dollars was partly distorted by the decline in the dollar last year, especially against the Japanese yen and Swiss franc and other leading European currencies.

medals here.

"I want to show seniors that even though they may be up in years, they can still be fit and get into a lot of disciplines that call for strength, flexibility and endurance," Maine said.

And he should know. The retired family physician who has delivered 4,000 babies, has been concerned with health and fitness since he began practicing in 1934. The Youngstown, Ohio, native said he shuns any type of regular exercise like jogging because it's "too monotonous and too much like work."

Instead, he keeps active by doing the things he enjoys like roller skating, gardening, water skiing and swimming.

"I've been active all my life but I didn't know about these games until last year," Maine recalled as he waited for his turn to sail out on a choppy and windblown Lake Monroe Sunday.

A friend mentioned some local games to Maine who began to ask questions, became interested and eventually signed up. Never expecting to win, he went home with 10 medals from his first competition.

"Then I found out I qualified for the state meet," Maine said. "I won 17 medals there and qualified for the nationals. I never even expected to smell a medal at the national meet but I won 17 medals there, too."

Maine certainly doesn't limit himself to a few selected events. He reeled off a list of competitions that would make an Olympic gold medal athlete wince.

Maine will compete in sailing, biking, canoeing, basketball, golf, track and field, diving, table tennis, swimming, race walking, billiards and leisure walking events plus the famous pancake race.

Alongside Maine, standing with his hand shielding his eyes from the brilliant November sunlight, stood Bob Nelson, Nelson, a resident of the United States Naval Home in Gulfport, Miss. is no stranger to the Golden Age Games. A participant since 1977, Nelson pledged on his 80th birthday, last Jan. 10, that this would be the year he'd get serious.

"I've always been an also-ran," Nelson said with a twinkle in his eye. "I'm not a real champion at anything, but I do many things and enjoy them all."

He must be doing something correctly because last spring in Texas, he said, he was named the national champion in swimming for his age group.

Nelson, a former physical education professor at Georgia Tech, has entered 16 events this year including swimming, tennis, table tennis and biking. The competition invigorates him he says.

"The games are great. They give guys who like to compete butterflies again. It's a fantastic feeling. I love to compete," he said.

papers, mark them and take them into the voting booth with them," she said.

In addition to selecting a new president and U.S. Senator, voters will choose a new District 17 state senator and fill two state cabinet seats. Local voters will have a choice of several candidates to fill local offices.

On the county level, voters will choose a new tax collector, new District 5 and District 3 county commissioners, and decide whether to keep or replace the Sheriff, John Polk.

Voters in five cities also will elect officers to represent them. Longwood voters will select candidates to fill two commission seats and Lake Mary voters will choose two commissioners, the mayor and three charter questions.

Altamonte Springs voters will select two commissioners and Casselberry voters will have to decide on three councilmen and whether to retain their paramedics in a binding referendum. Winter Springs will decide on two councilmen.

A multitude of thought-provoking issues will also face voters. On the state level, they must decide whether or not to adopt 11 amendments to the Florida Constitution and Seminole County voters throughout the county will decide whether the county should have a charter to give the county similar powers and privileges as the cities.

There are two seats open - District 2, and District 3 - in the Seminole County School Board race. Tuesday's voters will also be selecting a superintendent for the county's 43 public schools, district office and transportation department.

Space tech to help spot forest fires

PAADENA, Calif. — A spinoff from the space program is being modified to help spot and track forest fires, using satellites to provide firefighters with information in minutes rather than hours.

"This is a technology spinoff," J. David Nichols of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory said Sunday of the plan to use space program techniques and hardware to better deploy firefighters and their equipment.

The infrared sensing and mapping device now under development at JPL will be mounted on a Forest Service airplane, said Nichols, the project task manager, and will use the space-based Global Positioning System satellites for faster and more accurate mapping of forest fires.

He said the system should be able to pinpoint even the smallest hotspot in the remotest of areas, then relay the information via airplane, communications satellites and ground-based monitors so fire bosses can plan their attack on the flames.

Facial deformities may signal AIDS in kids

ATLANTA — Some babies with the AIDS virus have facial deformities known as dysmorphic syndrome that researchers believe may reveal the presence of the deadly disease long before the victims become ill.

Dr. Arye Rubinstein, writing in the government journal Research Resources Reporter, said the dysmorphic syndrome deformities include increased distance between the eyes, prominent box-like foreheads, flat nose bridges, mild upward or downward slant of the eyes and long eyelid fissures.

Infected babies may also have a blue tinge to the white section of their eyes and have shortened noses, a well-formed triangular groove in the upper lips and distended lips, he said.

Sakharov arrives in U.S.

BOSTON — Soviet nuclear scientist and human rights champion Andrei Sakharov, making his first visit outside his homeland in 30 years, arrived in the United States urging both countries to "make the world better without war."

Sakharov, who plans to visit relatives, seek medical treatment and meet with President Reagan on his first trip to the United States, was to meet first today with members of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in suburban Somerville, Mass.

The frail, 67-year-old father of the Soviet hydrogen bomb, arriving in Boston on Sunday night after a 9 1/2-hour journey from Moscow that included a brief stopover in New York, was greeted by his stepdaughter, Tatiana Yankelevich.

Soviets close in on new space record

MOSCOW — With little fanfare, two cosmonauts aboard the Mir research station will surpass a 326-day space endurance record this week in yet another routine but important milestone for a Soviet space program aimed at one day mounting a manned flight to Mars.

Vladimir Titov and Musa Manarov, who were launched Dec. 21, 1987, will match the current space endurance record at 5:55 p.m. EST Friday when their time aloft will equal the record set last December by cosmonaut Yuri Romanenko of 326 days, 11 hours, and 37 minutes, according to Soviet space expert James Oberg.

The Federation Aeronautique Internationale in Paris, the organization that sanctions space records, will not recognize a new endurance mark until Titov and Manarov beat the old record by at least 10 percent. If all goes well, that will occur Dec. 14, seven days shy of a full year in space.

The American record for long-duration space flight stands at 84 days, a mark that will not be equaled by U.S. space fliers until NASA's space station is built in the late 1990s.

Walesa threatens nationwide strike

WARSAW, Poland — The outlawed Solidarity trade union says workers in at least 30 major enterprises already have indicated that they will join a threatened nationwide strike next week if the government refuses to reverse its decision to close the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk.

The threat of such a strike was made Sunday at a rally of more than 2,000 people after a mass at St. Brigida's church in Gdansk amid growing dissatisfaction over Solidarity leader Lech Walesa's response to the Oct. 29 announcement to shut down the shipyard.

"The people began to say that I am chicken-hearted," Walesa, the 1983 Nobel Peace laureate, told the crowd in explaining why he chose to confront the authorities. Walesa had previously called for the closure decision to be reversed before round table talks with the government could begin.

Walesa said he would announce "a strike alert for the whole of Poland unless the decision to close the shipyard, the birthplace of Solidarity, is suspended by Tuesday." Under a strike alert, Solidarity leaders are to select strike committees and await Walesa's signal to go ahead with the job action.

Candidates making last-minute appeals to undecided voters

United Press International

George Bush and Michael Dukakis put in a frenzied final day of campaigning today with the same question on their minds — whether the Democrat's late campaign movement was enough to disrupt the Republican's plans of succeeding Ronald Reagan in the White House.

In the final full blitz one day before an estimated 90 million Americans — roughly half of those eligible — will vote Tuesday, both candidates left little to chance, scheduling a hectic day that was to end tonight with half-hour, nationally televised messages from both sides.

Dukakis, recognizing he faced the far tougher task of the two men in their effort to become the nation's 41st president, pulled out all stops and scheduled campaign stops around the clock and across the country until Tuesday morning.

After Sunday night appearances in the Pacific Northwest, the Massachusetts governor headed to a rally this morning in Cleveland because a new poll showed him closing the gap in Ohio.

Following that, he was to travel to St. Louis because he believed he was making up ground in Missouri and then was to head back to the West Coast for a full day in California, the biggest election prize with 47 electoral votes. He planned to leave California late tonight, hold a middle-of-the-night rally in Des Moines, Iowa, and close out his campaign Tuesday morning by voting in Boston.

Although not pushing nonstop, Bush also was moving at a frenetic pace. Following his campaign tactic of recent days, the vice president planned to shadow Dukakis with stops in St. Louis and Ohio. He also was to be in Michigan before ending the day in his adopted hometown of Houston.

The vice president's chief surrogate, President Reagan, also planned to finish up with a last push through his home state of California. Bush is believed to hold a slight edge in the crucial state.

California is not one of the states built into Bush's "mist-win" political base. A top Bush campaign adviser said Reagan would be the perfect "clean-up hitter" to blunt the last-minute effort by Dukakis and dash any Democratic hopes of victory.

"California is the ultimate insurance policy," the aide said. "California is the death star for Dukakis."

The late flurry came as one poll — from NBC News and The Wall Street Journal — showed Dukakis had cut Bush's national lead to 5 points. However, a CBS-New York Times survey placed the margin at 9 points and an ABC News-Washington Post poll put it at 10 points, as did a Cable News Network-USA Today poll.

The NBC-Wall Street Journal poll indicated that Dukakis was moving strong, but the other surveys hinted that his so-called surge may have run out of steam — a theory subscribed to by Bush strategists.

Nonetheless, Dukakis declared in Colorado Sunday that Bush was "slipping and sliding; we're rocking and rolling."

"They can't match it," Dukakis said of the GOP before a huge crowd in Portland, Ore. "They can't match us. Sure they've got the ads. They've got the mailings, but they haven't got the people."

Campaign chairman Paul Bruntz argued that in critical target states the race was shifting dramatically in the Democrat's favor. But other aides conceded the governor still had considerable ground to make up on Bush.

At a rally of between 10,000 and 20,000 people in Woodland Hills, Calif., the vice president, his voice raspy, shouted that he had "never felt better or stronger or more ready to fight for every single vote out there."

Pressing his familiar campaign theme, Bush equated Dukakis with "the failed policies of Jimmy Carter" and asserted that "now is not the time to take a chance on a liberal spending governor coming out of nowhere."

Craig Fuller, Bush's chief of staff, told reporters aboard Air Force Two that the campaign's own polls showed a lead of 9.

UPI survey indicates a potential Bush landslide

United Press International

WASHINGTON - Republican George Bush is eyeing the potential of a landslide win Tuesday, providing he holds on to states where he currently is running ahead of Democrat Michael Dukakis.

The following are the results of a United Press International survey of the battle within the 50 states, grouped by region. Included are each state's electoral vote.

NEW ENGLAND

Massachusetts

Dukakis is expected to carry his home state and its 13 electoral votes, after having moved to stem some disenchantment.

Connecticut

Bush, who grew up in the state, has opened up a lead there after weeks of a very close battle for its eight electoral votes. Democrats are basing their hopes on the fact that Dukakis, from a neighboring state, is well known.

Maine

With four electoral votes, Maine is leaning to Bush, who has a summer home in Kennebunkport. The race has changed little in weeks.

New Hampshire

With four electoral votes, the state is solid for Bush and has remained so since the beginning of the campaign.

Rhode Island

Dukakis once was a solid bet to capture Rhode Island and its four electoral votes, but his lead has slipped. He is still running ahead, but by a much smaller margin.

Vermont

The state, with three electoral votes, had been leaning toward Dukakis, but now may be leaning to Bush. It has gone GOP in every presidential election in 134 years, except for Lyndon Johnson's 1964 landslide.

NORTHEAST AND MID-ATLANTIC

New York

The biggest prize of the region, with 36 electoral votes, is leaning toward Dukakis as it has for weeks. However, recent polls show the Dukakis lead shrinking. Democrats have won the last four gubernatorial contests, but the state has gone to the GOP in three of the last four presidential elections.

Pennsylvania

The Keystone State and its 25 electoral votes is close and is likely considered a tossup state. Dukakis had once led there. The state is a key for the Democrat.

New Jersey

With 16 electoral votes, New Jersey last went Democratic in a presidential election in 1964. Once considered a tossup state, it moved solidly into Bush's corner, although Democrats say the race is tightening.

Maryland

The generally liberal state and its 10 electoral votes was once considered a sure Dukakis bet, but now seems to be leaning to Bush. The vice president could be helped by a large number of Republicans who registered because they want to repeal the state's new handgun law.

West Virginia

With a 2-1 Democratic edge among voters in West Virginia, Dukakis was considered a solid winner, but the race has tightened, largely because Bush has stressed Dukakis's gun control position. The state and its six electoral votes are now considered a tossup.

Delaware

Delaware and its three electoral votes appear to be leaning to Bush.

Florida

The biggest prize of the South, Florida carries 21 electoral votes. Bush opened a huge lead in mid-September and has held it, even though Democrats outnumber Republicans 2 to 1 in voter registration.

North Carolina

The state and its 11 electoral votes were leaning to Bush, but now appears to be solidly in his corner, largely because of the conservative themes he has been pushing.

Virginia

With its 12 electoral votes, the state has gone from leaning to Bush to solid for Bush.

Georgia

Bush has steadily solidified his lead in the state, which has 12 electoral votes. Some local Democrats have moved away from Dukakis and very few new black voters, generally Democrats, have been registered.

Tennessee

As in much of the South, the state, with 11 electoral votes, appears to have moved solidly behind Bush.

Louisiana

Louisiana has 10 electoral votes and is leaning for Bush, who is seen as more sympathetic to the problems of oil states. Although voter registration is 8-to-1 in favor of Democrats, the state has turned against the Democrats in five of the last six national elections. The exception was Southerner Jimmy Carter's win in 1976.

Kentucky

The nine electoral votes appear were leaning to Bush and now appear solid for the Republican, who seems to hold a lead of between 10 and 15 percentage points.

Alabama

Bush appears to hold a solid lead in this state, with its nine electoral votes.

South Carolina

The eight electoral votes from the state appear to be solidly in Bush's corner.

Mississippi

The latest polls show Bush with a solid lead in this conservative state, which has seven electoral votes.

Arkansas

Arkansas, with six electoral votes, supported Reagan. Bush overcame an early Dukakis lead and appears to be holding an edge. His campaign was helped by a recent appearance by the president.

THE MIDWEST

Illinois

Along with Ohio, Illinois - and its 24 electoral votes - is the prize of the Midwest. The race is extremely tight and has remained a dead heat for weeks. Dukakis needs the state more than Bush.

Ohio

Bush seems to have solidified his lead in the state, which has 23 electoral votes, and now appears to hold a double-digit edge.

Michigan

The state, which has 20 electoral votes, has always been close and seems to be a tossup. Dukakis has been hitting the state hard with his populist "on your side" theme.

Indiana

The Hoosier State and its 12 electoral votes are solidly in the Republican column and were likely to go to the GOP even before Bush chose Sen. Dan Quayle as his running mate.

Missouri

The state, which has 11 electoral votes, is leaning strongly to Bush.

Wisconsin

The Badger State, which has 11 electoral votes, was leaning to Dukakis but now is considered a tossup.

Minnesota

The state and its 10 electoral votes were considered solid for Dukakis, but the race has tightened to almost a dead heat. Dukakis is believed to have a slight edge.

Nebraska

Nebraska has nine electoral votes and has gone from leaning to solid for Bush.

Iowa

Iowa, which has eight electoral votes, has not gone with a Democrat since 1964. It is considered solid Dukakis territory this year, but the race has tightened considerably since the second presidential debate.

Kansas

With seven electoral votes, the state is leaning for Bush. Except for Johnson in 1964, the state has voted for the Republican presidential candidate in every national election since 1940. Major issues are agriculture, the aviation industry and oil and gas production.

North Dakota

The state, which has three electoral votes, is solid for Bush, who has strengthened his lead there.

South Dakota

The state, with three electoral votes, is leaning to Bush. It has not voted for a Democrat candidate, including native George McGovern, since 1964.

THE SOUTHWEST

Texas

In Texas, which has 29 electoral votes, Bush has improved his position into a solid lead, although public opinion poll margins have varied widely. The state became critical when Dukakis chose Lloyd Bentsen, the state's senior senator, as his running mate. Bush claims the state as his home, although he has connections to other states as well. Democrats say Bentsen can still help Dukakis pull out a victory, but Republicans argue that the Democrats have already gotten all the help possible from the senator. Dukakis spent considerable time in the state early, but has been there less more recently.

Oklahoma

The state has eight electoral votes and Bush is considered a solid favorite, mostly because of the state's strong conservative leanings and a record of voting Republican in right of the last nine presidential elections.

Arizona

The state has seven electoral votes and is considered strong for Bush, mostly because of its voting history and conservative leanings. It has not gone Democratic in a presidential election since 1948.

New Mexico

The state, which had been close, now is leaning strongly to Bush. Democrats outnumber Republicans almost 2-to-1 and are gaining in voter registration. But the state has not voted for a Democratic presidential candidate since 1964.

MOUNTAIN STATES

Colorado

The state and its eight electoral votes are leaning to Bush, although his lead appears to have been shrinking.

Utah

Utah, with four electoral votes, is solid for Bush, who seems to have a 2-to-1 edge.

Idaho

Bush should have no trouble winning four electoral votes in the heavily Republican state.

Montana

Montana and its four electoral votes have generally been considered safe Republican turf and Bush appears to be leading. However, the race has been very close, with the environment and the state's soft economy top issues.

Wyoming

The state and its three electoral votes belong to Bush, who has led there from the start of the campaign. Only once since 1952 has the state voted Democratic in a presidential race - supporting Johnson in 1964.

THE FAR WEST

California

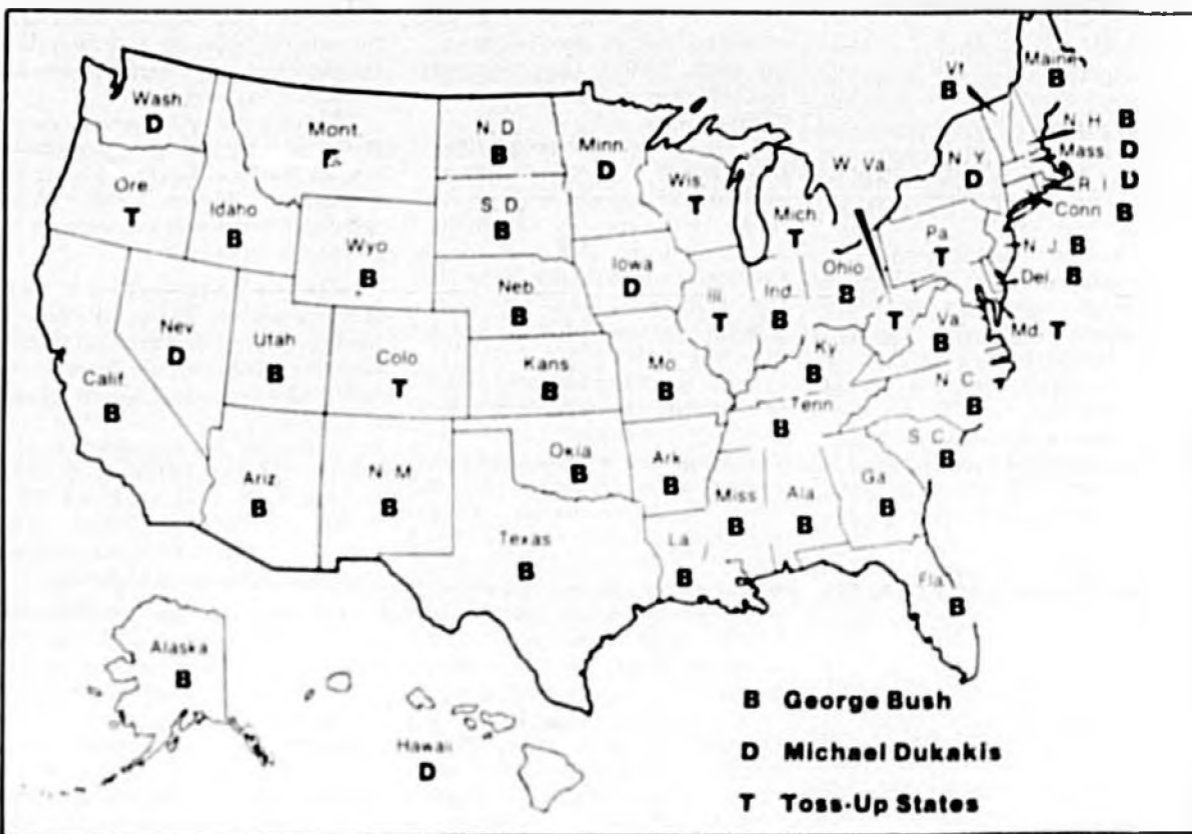

The state, with 47 electoral votes, is the biggest prize of the election and was a tossup for weeks. Bush, however, appears to have opened up a lead since the second presidential debate in Los Angeles, although Dukakis forces are still hopeful and say they are gaining. Bush is helped by the organization of Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, who has been trying to stir up support and claims the race is nearly a dead heat. If Dukakis is to have any chance at winning the White House, he must win California.

Washington

With 10 electoral votes, the state was leaning to Dukakis, but now is considered too close to call. Working against Dukakis is a 20-year win string for Republican presidential candidates in the state.

Oregon

The state, which has seven electoral votes, appears to be a tossup. It has voted Republican in nine of the last 10 presidential elections, but earlier this year appeared to be leaning to Dukakis.

Nevada

The state, which has four electoral votes, is now considered solid for Bush. Dukakis may have lost his last chance for the state when he supported the congressional decision to make Nevada the site of a nuclear waste dump.

Reagan heads for California to campaign

United Press International

WASHINGTON - President Reagan, viewing the election as a referendum on his presidency, campaigned down to the wire today in hopes of winning his home state of California for Vice President George Bush.

Reagan, who finished his 1984 run for the presidency in California, readily agreed to make an election eve round trip to the Golden State at the request of the Bush campaign.

In the drive to pin down the state's hefty 47 electoral votes, Reagan was scheduled to campaign for George Bush in front of the Queen Mary at Long Beach Harbor and in San Diego before flying back to Washington tonight.

Alaska

A solid Republican state, Alaska and its three electoral votes seem to be solid for Bush, partly because of Dukakis's support for gun control and opposition to oil development in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. Neither candidate has visited the state.

Hawaii

Hawaii, which has four electoral votes, is a staunchly Democratic state. It had been very strong for Dukakis, but the governor's lead has been shrinking. Nonetheless, he is expected to carry it.

Bush confident as race winds down

United Press International

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — Having directed a final flash of indignation at Michael Dukakis, George Bush was winding up Campaign '88 today with his advisers "but certain he will be the 41st president of the United States."

As Michael Dukakis waged a desperate, frenzied finish to a campaign that has seen the fortunes of each rise and fall, Bush worked to run out the clock and run up the score on Election Day.

Campaign stops in Michigan, where he made three appearances last week, and Ohio, which he visited twice, were characterized only as insurance in battleground states he does not need to win under a bottom-line strategy devised months ago.

His advisers, however, were both hopeful that the two states would fall to the GOP and confident that Dukakis was not close enough in any other state locked up or leaning to Bush to deny the Republicans control of the White House for another four years.

For his part, Bush, who has won only two elections in more than 20 years of public service, continued to insist while campaigning Sunday in Colorado and California that the race would "come right down to the wire."

At the same time, the candidate of the "kinder, gentler nation" delighted his audiences by dismissing Democratic complaints of negative campaigning as "whining" and "crying" and painting Dukakis as a dangerous threat to a Reagan era legacy of peace and prosperity.

"This is not the time to take a chance on spinning our economy out of control again," he said. "Don't play recession roulette when you go into that voting booth."

Even before new polls showed Bush holding his own nationally and rolling toward a large electoral vote victory, campaign aides dropped the pretense of caution and took the view that the question was no longer whether he would win, but by how large a margin.

With the schedule set and no last-minute changes anticipated, campaign manager Lee Atwater joined the Bush entourage a day earlier than expected for the close of the campaign, explaining there was nothing more to be done in Washington. Other members of the campaign staff were to be on hand today in time for a huge wind-up rally in Houston, where Bush will watch the returns Tuesday night.

One top campaign adviser said Dukakis, trailing Bush by as much as 10 points in the latest polls, "could still take a good chunk of states." Enough to win? "No," the official said without hesitation.

After cautioning against overconfidence for days, the Bush camp at last displayed at least a form of it.

While offering the caveat that "we don't want to take anything for granted," chief of staff Craig Fuller readily agreed — perhaps prematurely, in the minds of some other campaign advisers — that Bush "has the ability" to win the necessary 270 electoral votes. Looking beyond Tuesday, he voiced hope of a victory big enough to hand Bush a powerful mandate to govern.

"I think we will have a mandate because of the contrasts we've made between Bush and Dukakis," Fuller said. "And winning gives you a mandate to pursue a set of policies."

"But I think if we can strengthen the electoral vote — and we all feel and are convinced George Bush can do that — it will enhance his ability to take the country in the direction that he's fought for throughout the course of the campaign, was pumped up and even excited, throwing more passion than usual into speeches punctuated by biting attacks on Dukakis."

Angered at how Democrats have charged racism in his repeated references to Willie Horton, the black convicted murderer who terrorized a Maryland couple while on a furlough from prison in Massachusetts, Bush asserted he, rather than Dukakis, was "the one who wants to put the tired baggage of bigotry behind us."

"And I don't like it a bit when the liberal governor unleashes his minions to accuse me of racism," he exclaimed.

Bush argued the Democrats were to blame for the nastiness of the campaign, having set the tone with recent attacks on him "at that idiotic Democratic convention" in July.

Dogged Dukakis visiting several key states today

United Press International

CLEVELAND — Democrat Michael Dukakis, determinedly campaigning around the clock until Election Day, crossed the country early today to urge stalwart union members to vote and help him win a come-from-behind victory.

Arriving in the pivotal state before sunrise with a light snow falling, Dukakis hoped his dramatic, last-ditch personal appeal would help garner him its precious 23 electoral votes.

After the brief rally, arranged on only a day's notice, Dukakis planned a similar stop in St. Louis, before returning to the West Coast and a previously scheduled noon rally in San Francisco.

There was some disappointing news with three fresh polls showing Dukakis trailing Republican Vice President George Bush by 9 and 10 percentage points, after a weekend NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll showed Dukakis had narrowed the gap to 5 points.

But a dogged Dukakis, greeted at each stop by overflow crowds of fervent fans, continued the battle entering a second day of a 48-hour marathon final push that began Sunday morning.

In the Cleveland suburb of Brookpark, the Massachusetts governor asked a crowded United Auto Workers hall, "Is Ohio going to let the pollsters and the pundits decide this election? Or are you going to send a message tomorrow that will be heard all around the country?"

Sunday night, in rallies in Washington state, Dukakis asked exuberant crowds, "Which candidate will stand up for the average American family?" To a crowd in Tacoma, Wash., at a function Bush declined to attend, Dukakis asserted it was "the fundamental question of this campaign."

Dukakis, summoning huge crowds as he traveled through the Midwest, West and back and forth across the country in the final days of the campaign, left the Northwest early today for a last-chance bid for the electoral bonanza of Ohio. With word that new polls showed him only 6 points behind Bush in the Buckeye State, aides scheduled a quick trip to Cleveland before the governor headed back to California by way of St. Louis, in another key state, Missouri.

Weight Loss Pill Approved for U.S. Gov't. Patent

'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight Already Sweeping U.S.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special) — An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors' claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"
Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body
The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat
According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

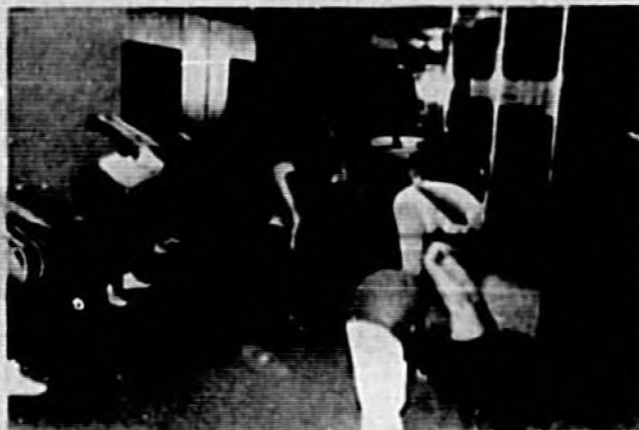

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public
If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no task" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+ $3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+ $3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W246, Beverly Hills, CA 90210. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free (1-800) 527-9700, ext. W246.

Gretzky: Another milestone

Prior to the trade that brought Wayne Gretzky to Los Angeles, his passage of milestones had grown anticlimactic. Now, however, they serve to illustrate the ascent of the Kings.

Gretzky became the third player in NHL history to score 1,700 points and rookie Mark Fitzpatrick made 34 saves in his debut Sunday night, leading the Kings to a 5-3 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks. Los Angeles moved within one point of first-place Calgary in the Smythe Division.

At his current pace, Gretzky will pass Gordie Howe to become the all-time scoring king in Los Angeles' 79th game of the season. By then, he could be helping the Kings gear up for a run at the perennial powers in the playoffs.

HORSE RACING

Horse of the Year battle rages

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The Breeders' Cup victories by Personal Ensign in the Distaff and Alysheba in the Classic Inflamed, rather than settled, the long debate over which of the two 4-year-olds should be Horse of the Year.

Who is the better, more accomplished horse? Who did the most for racing?

Alysheba had the edge in informal surveys of racing writers who, along with Racing Form employees and racing secretaries, vote for the Eclipse Awards.

But the polls, taken after Saturday's seven Breeders' Cup V races at Churchill Downs, produced some intense arguments between Alysheba's backers and Personal Ensign's proponents.

All, however, agreed that it was too bad the competition for the coveted title could not be declared a dead heat, since the 1988 accomplishments of each horse were greater than those of many previous Horses of the Year.

Navratilova outlasts Zvereva

WORCESTER, Mass. — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova, completing what she said may have been her best tournament of the year, overcame 17-year-old Natalia Zvereva, 6-7 (4-7), 6-4, 6-3, Sunday to win the $300,000 Virginia Slims of New England Championship.

Navratilova earned $60,000 for her eighth victory of the year and third in the Centrum since the tournament moved to Worcester in January 1986.

"It was just a thrill to be part of it," Navratilova said. "I was enjoying myself. I was even enjoying her (Zvereva's) good shots."

Zvereva won $27,000 for 1988 total prize earnings of $253,230. But she won't get to keep the money since her prize, along with that of the two other Soviet Olympians, goes to the Soviet Tennis Federation.

Zvereva stayed off a pair of set points in the 10th game of the first set to force the tie-breaker. She jumped ahead 5-2 with an overhead smash to win the set.

Navratilova, who won the first four games in the second set, Zvereva cut the deficit to 5-4, but Navratilova was able to close out the set.

Frost takes Tucson Open

TUCSON, Ariz. — David Frost fired a 5-under-par 67 Sunday to record his second victory of the week, a five-shot triumph in the $600,000 Tucson Open.

Frost, a native of South Africa who now lives in Dallas, finished with a 72-hole total of 22-under-par 266 at the Tournament Players Club at StarPass.

Frost birdied the first three holes and parred the next 10 before carding birdies on Nos. 14 and 16.

"I just played real steady," said Frost, who won $108,000 with his second PGA Tour victory. "After three holes I was thinking of the record (27-under-par by Ben Hogan in 1945). But there was no way I was going to change my strategy."

It ended a magical week for Frost, who also won the $90,000 first prize in Tuesday's PGA Shootout.

Bears rip Bucs

United Press International

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bears provided little stress for their coach, Mike Ditka.

With Ditka forced to watch Sunday's game from a hospital room where he was recovering from a mild heart attack, the Bears generated four touchdowns over the second and third quarters to easily defeat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 28-10.

"I talked with Coach Ditka," said defensive coordinator Vince Tobin, the acting coach in Ditka's absence. "He called after the game. He said it was a great effort by a lot of people."

"Everybody, I thought, was under some tremendously adverse conditions this week. But they hung together and they played well. I was extremely proud."

The other main source of anxiety for the Bears came because quarterback Jim McMahon was out injured. But Mike Tomczak responded by

Patriots bop Miami

United Press International

FOXBORO, Mass. — The New England Patriots have become as efficient at home as the Miami Dolphins are futile against AFC East opponents.

The Patriots, led by 104 yards rushing by John Stephens, defeated the penalty-plagued Dolphins 21-10 Sunday, New England's fourth consecutive win at home and sixth straight over Miami, improving to 5-5. The Dolphins, 5-5 are winless against division opponents in four games this year.

"It was a real disappointment. It was essential that we get it done up here," Miami Coach Don Shula said. "I really felt we were going to get it done today."

New England planned to run the ball as much as possible, a luxury missing from their offense until Stephens arrived this year as a first-round pick. Stephens totaled 100-plus yards for the third consecutive game, the first Patriot to do so

UCF blanks Virginia

ORLANDO — It's on to North Carolina.

The University of Central Florida women's soccer team advanced to the quarterfinals of this year's NCAA national championship tournament with a 2-0 win over the University of Virginia on Sunday.

Now the Lady Knights advance to meet the University of North Carolina (15-0-3), which was ranked No. 1 in the final national polls. UCF, which finished ranked No. 11, played the Lady Tar Heels earlier in the season in a 0-0 tie.

The game will be played either next Saturday or Sunday in Chapel Hill.

"If we play as good as we're capable of and they play as good as they're capable of, then one goal could be the difference," said Bill Barker, the first-year coach of the Lady Knights. "That's what happened earlier this year."

Against the No. 10-ranked Lady Cavaliers on Sunday, UCF controlled most of the game, putting together one good run after another, keeping Virginia back in its own half of the field.

With less than three minutes gone, senior three-time All-American Michelle Akers made a bid to put UCF ahead but her strong shot hit the right post and bounced away.

The Lady Knights kept up the pressure but weren't getting any clear shots on goal. Leslie Suder rectified the situation with 21:15 left in the first half when she took a pass from Rena Creighton, turned and fired a half-volley past Virginia goalkeeper Shelly Shreve.

"We just couldn't get our shots to fall," said Barker. "I think that if Michelle's shot had gone in, we would have won by three or four goals."

As it was, UCF was having trouble finding the net. The Lady Knights efforts weren't helped any when forward Mauri Harris (UCF's second-leading scorer behind Akers with eight goals) went down with a left hamstring pull.

Still, by maintaining control offensively and the fullback foursome of Ellie Golembewski, Alyson Barnes, Kit Conner and Cathy Reid stuffing the Cavalier attackers the few times they ventured across midfield, the Lady Knights took the 1-0 lead into halftime.

Leonard returns to ring

United Press International

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Ray Leonard returns to the ring Monday night in a quest for two more world titles and another shot of glory, against light heavyweight champion Donny Lalonde.

Lalonde's World Boxing Council 175-pound title and the new WBC super middleweight (168-pound limit) championships will be at stake. If Leonard wins, he will become the first boxer to capture world titles in five weight classes.

Leonard, 32, says he will put the titles and his $15 million payday out of his mind at the opening bell. He will be happy just to be a boxer again for the first time in 19 months and the second time in over six years.

"I don't care particularly about history," Leonard said. "I care about winning."

"I'm a perfectionist. It could be Marvin Hagler, it could be Mike Tyson, it could be Donny Lalonde. I always have everything to lose and there could be nothing to gain."

Leonard scored an upset over Hagler April 8, 1987 to win the WBC middleweight title, and he announced his retirement the following month. But Leonard could not stay away for good, just like to his three previous retirements.

Lalonde, a 28-year-old Canadian, predicts he will retire Leonard for the final time. Lalonde, who stands to make $5 million, resents the public perception that his role in this fight is as a foil for Leonard.

"After this fight, I'll be known as the guy who retired an old guy like Ray Leonard," Lalonde said. "I'll put him in his place. He thinks he can come out and pick a name out of a hat and win. Leonard has hung around too long, he's past his prime."

Gators keep tumbling

By DAVID CONCORAN

JACKSONVILLE — Just five weeks ago, Galen Hall and his Florida Gators were the talk of the college football world.

The Gators, then ranked No. 15, were coming off a 19-6 upset win over then undefeated and No. 10 LSU at Florida Field. And things were looking pretty good for Hall and the Gators.

But then everything fell apart. The Gators went from being undefeated (5-0) and tied for first in the SEC to having lost their last four games in a row. And the Gator fans went from yelling "The Year of the Gator," to "Hall must go."

In the confines of the Florida Gators locker room after Saturday's 28-3 defeat at the hands of the Georgia Bulldogs at the Gator Bowl, there was the look of a football team that just five weeks ago had it all together and now is wondering what went wrong?

The Pittsburgh Steelers were humiliated to the point their coach suggested the players not accept their paychecks this week.

Broncos rebounded from two blowout losses, Denver, 5-5, had been outscored 94-44 in losing its previous two games. Kansas City are an NFL-worst 1-8-1.

At Cincinnati, the Bengals rolled up 559 yards total offense in a 42-7 rout of Pittsburgh, the largest victory margin in the Steelers-Bengals rivalry.

At Seattle, Robb Riddick ran for a touchdown Sunday and Buffalo's defense stretched its streak for not allowing a touchdown to eight quarters. The Bills improved to an NFL-best 9-1 and expanded its lead in the AFC East to a league-best 3 1-2 games. Seattle, 5-5, remained in a three-way tie for first in the AFC West.

after recovering a fumble by Neal Anderson at the Bears' 43-yard line. Testaverde found Bruce Hill for 22 yards and connected with Hill on a 21-yard TD pass.

The Bears took a 7-3 lead with a nine-play drive that covered 70 yards. Tomczak highlighted the drive with a 17-yard run to the Buccaneers' 17 on third-and-6. Sanders scored from the 1.

"I think subconsciously it was in the back of our mind, a whole game," Tomczak said. "But we knew we had our job to do: to go out there and win the ballgame."

Neither team scored in the fourth quarter.

The Bears went ahead 14-3 on their next possession on a 1-yard run by Anderson.

Vinny Testaverde, returning to start for the Buccaneers after being benched last week, was 22 of 52 for 305 yards with two interceptions. Tampa Bay, 2-8, lost its fifth straight overall and its 11th in a row to the Bears dating to 1982.

"They (the Bears) deserved to win," Buccaneers Coach Ray Perkins said. "They were clearly the better team."

"We played poorly in all phases of the game. The defense played pretty good and then, when they'd hit us with a big play..."

Tomczak's 20-yard touchdown pass to Dennis McKinnon 1:22 into the third quarter gave the Bears a 21-3 lead. It was the Bears' first third-quarter points this season.

The Bears went ahead 28-3 five minutes later when Tomczak hit Emery Moorehead on a 2-yard TD pass after bringing the Bears to the 2 with a 41-yard hookup with Dennis Gentry.

in 12 years. "John Stephens is playing great football and he is healthy. He's got tremendous talent and we're getting the ball to him. We didn't have to go to the passing game," New England Coach Raymond Berry said.

The New England offense planned to exploit the Dolphins' weak defense against the run, mixing plays with Stephens. Robert Perryman and Mose Tatupu. The Patriots rushed for 203 yards on 44 carries.

The Dolphins hurt themselves with 110 yards in penalties, including a roughing the kicker foul that led to a New England touchdown in the second quarter.

"We try to teach our players the devastating result penalties can have, and today was a great example," Berry said.

Miami's Dan Marino, 3-8 against New England in his career, finished the game 29 of 51 for 359 yards with two interceptions. He threw a third-quarter touchdown pass to Ferrell Edmunds, but could not convert two late fourth-quarter drives.

Patriots safety Fred Marion, who made one interception.

After a scoreless first quarter, New England made it 7-0 on a 1-yard run by Perryman at 1:38 of the second quarter. Miami's Tony Franklin, an ex-Patriot, kicked a wind-aided 51-yard field goal to make the score 7-3 at 11:47 of the second quarter.

New England took the ensuing kickoff and marched 79 yards in eight plays, quarterback Doug Flutie hitting Irving Fryar with a 1-yard touchdown pass to make the score 14-3 at the half.

Flutie directed a 66-yard, 11-play drive capped by a 13-yard touchdown run by Stephens to make the score 21-3 with 7:16 left in the third quarter.

Marino hit Edmunds with a 20-yard touchdown pass at 14:30 of the third quarter to make the score 21-10.

The Patriots defense put enough pressure on Marino during the game to force several bad passes. Jim Jensen had 12 catches for 110 yards for the Dolphins, a team record. The Patriots held Miami's two deep threats, Mark Clayton and Mark Dupler, to eight catches for 91 yards.

Artificial limb will be a help

DEAR DR. GOTT: Due to osteoarthritis I have had one knee joint replaced. My other knee is pretty bad now and it will have to be replaced soon. Will having two false knees be more difficult than one?

DEAR READER: If your own knee is so painful and stiff that walking is uncomfortable, you will probably be better off with a second artificial knee.

You may have to be especially careful of two synthetic knees, and you may need physical therapy to strengthen your legs, but you'll certainly be more mobile.

Ask your orthopedic surgeon to give you a full explanation of what to expect.

For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Understanding Osteoarthritis." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter, age 40, has been diagnosed with MS but I think she has Cushing's syndrome as well; she looks and acts just exactly like the description in the medical book. How can we find out?

DEAR READER: Multiple sclerosis is a diagnosis of exclusion. In other words, there is no definitive lab test; other neurological disorders that mimics MS are ruled out until MS is left, by exclusion.

On the other hand, Cushing's syndrome is a constellation of symptoms and signs, such as easy bruising, round face, diabetes and weakness. It results from an overabundance of cortisone in the body and easily diagnosed by blood tests. The doctor measures the amount of serum cortisol (cortisone) both before and after the administration of dexamethasone, a synthetic steroid drug. The dexamethasone should shut off the body's production of cortisol, thereby lowering the amount measured by the second blood test. In Cushing's syndrome, dexamethasone does not reduce serum cortisol.

If you are concerned that your daughter has Cushing's syndrome, her physician could perform the necessary blood tests or refer her to an en-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Do you know some youngsters who you think would love to learn to play bridge? "Teach Me to Play" by Jude Goodwin and Don Ellison is the book for them. Winner of the American Bridge Teachers' Association's "Book of the Year" award, it offers delightful activities that make learning the game easy for anyone - not just the 8- to 14-year-olds for whom it is designed. (It is available from Pando Publication, 540 Longleaf Drive, Roswell, GA 30075, for $12.50 including postage.) Next year there will be a second volume, focusing on declarer play, defense and leads. "Teach Me to Play" is filled with hundreds of line drawings, cartoons, puzzles and projects that hold the learner's interest.

In today's hand from the book, North-South bid quickly to three no-trump and West led the king of diamonds. South plays low from both hands on the first two diamond tricks. On winning the third diamond, declarer tries a losing club finesse. South wins the spade return, cashes his high spades and the club ace and king. When West shows out on the third round of spades and East on the third round of clubs, declarer has a complete count on the hand. West had two spades, six diamonds and four clubs, and therefore only one heart. With absolute assurance he leads a heart to dummy's ace and a heart back to his 10, making his contract.

HOROSCOPE

What the day will bring...

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
November 8, 1988

In the year ahead greater emphasis than usual will be placed upon your relationships. The things that are apt to bring you the greatest success will be traceable to ideas you got from others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your natural charm and enchantment can be utilized today. You should be able to get what you want without appearing aggressive or demanding. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you are in need of a favor today, the people who are apt to be most helpful will be those with a compassionate nature. Don't waste your efforts appealing to the hard-hearted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Dare to be a dreamer today, because you'll be a pragmatic visionary. Things that you visualize will have real possibilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your behavior will command the attention of others today. Don't let this disturb you, the impression you make will generate good publicity.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be compassionate and understanding today if a friend comes to you with problems. This person may only muster enough nerve to talk to you about the tip of the iceberg.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The demands of others could be heavy today, but you should be able to profit from taking care of their needs. The service you offer has value.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Control might be more in the hands of associates today than your own. However, this could be for the best, so don't get pushy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

New life may be breathed into a project today that you have left to collect dust. With a few changes and improvements, it can be turned into something constructive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Being in the company of people who take life too seriously won't alter your outlook today. Your enthusiasm will inspire them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you feel creative or inventive today, experiment with your ideas. Your imagination isn't running amok, it's working for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) People tend to recall actions better than they remember words. However, today you'll be able to get your points across so effectively that what you say will be easily understood and accepted.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be alert for some camouflaged developments today that could enable you to add to your resources. If you're perceptive enough, you'll recognize what isn't obvious to others.

Computer 'virus' suspect says he didn't mean to hurt network

United Press International

WASHINGTON - The graduate student suspected of creating the "virus" that jammed thousands of academic and military computers around the nation last week reportedly intended not to hurt the network but only to penetrate it and hide a message there.

The suspect, Robert Tappan Morris Jr., 23, a Cornell University graduate student described as a brilliant but bored computer expert, was said to be in contact with his father in the Washington area and was expected to meet this week with FBI agents seeking to determine if he is responsible for the nation's worst case of computer sabotage.

A spokesman for the FBI, which is investigating whether federal laws were broken, said Sunday that possible penalties could total a maximum 20-year prison term and $250,000 in fines. Under the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, unauthorized access to federal government computers is a crime.

Defense Department spokeswoman Susan Hansen said in Washington that the virus created "widespread" disturbances in the unclassified branch of the military's defense data system, but it appears no information was lost.

The New York Times Sunday quoted friends of Morris as saying he had spent weeks creating the computer "virus", but by all accounts he meant no harm to the system - he only wanted to penetrate it and hide a message.

Morris was able to penetrate the system because the programmer who designed its electronic mail system left a secret "back door" so he could easily gain access to the project for fine-tuning or repairs, but forgot to close it before the program was distributed in 1985, the Times reported today.

The Times, quoting friends, said that after penetrating the program and letting the virus loose, Morris left for dinner, intending to go to bed immediately afterward, but after eating, he could not resist going back to his computer to see how the virus was progressing.

Morris, who had been working virtually around the clock, was shocked to learn he made a single programming error involving one number that ultimately jammed more than 8,000 computers by repeating messages time after time.

When he recognized that things had gone terribly wrong, the friends said, he arranged for a friend to send out instructions on wiping out the virus to the same computers plagued by it. But the instructions were electronically posted in a place where few would see them, the Times reported.

The Washington Post reported Sunday that Morris's father said his son "is simply unavailable (to federal authorities) ... and will remain unavailable until he has time to retain a lawyer."
