Marina fees postponed

By Wayne Mize
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Out-of-town boaters who want to use the boat ramps at Lake Monroe harbor marina on the first weekend of August have been told to wait. Boat launch fees will not be collected until July 9.

The other commissioners went along with a creative Sanford Chamber of Commerce request to suspend impact fees for the first weekend of August.

Commissioner John Y. Moore said he would charge non-residents a $9 fee on weekends and holidays or a $100 annual fee for using the boat ramp facilities at the marina. The ordinance was to go into effect July 2.

Dave Farr, executive director of the chamber of commerce, requested the waiver in fee collection for the Independence Day weekend because several sailing organizations have asked for participation in the event.

If not for the fact of extended rainy seasons, I think it would be indisputable that the water level in Lake Monroe would be higher than it is now.

The sailing did not entirely please the Lake Monroe Sailing Association (LMSA).

The association was among those invited to participate in the boat parade by Farr and was also asking the commission for a waiver of fees for its bi-monthly regattas and races. However, an association board member, Eddie Commissioner John Y. Moore said the LMSA gatherings should be held some time in the future. The commission before a waiver was granted for the first weekend of August.

Along with other commissioners, the LMSA said after the meeting that they will probably not participate in the boat parade. Moore said he would like to see the LMSA regattas and races held on weekends.

The commission denied another request to waive the fees and approved the ordinance.

On their toes at the hospital

Visiting a hospital can be an interesting experience, as these children from the La Petite Academy in Lake Mary discovered Monday. The children were on a tour of Central Florida Regional Hospital when they discovered the nursery.

The kids apparently found the infants particularly interesting even though they had to stand on their tiptoes to get a view.

By Jane Casselberry

LONGWOOD — Lois Martin, director of Employee Relations for Seminole County, is leaving her $47,328-a-year job to become the city of Longwood's first personnel director with a salary of $27,000 and she hopes a lot less stress.

City Administrator Gene DeMara announced at the Monday night commission work session that he has hired Martin for the personnel job, she will begin work July 1.

She has more experience than DeMara had hoped for, DeMara said.

The personnel department was established upon adoption of the city's new Personnel Policies and Procedures June 1, 1987, and the duties and responsibilities have been assigned to the office since then. The position's personnel director was funded in the 1987-88 fiscal year budget, but was never filled.

Martin, who said she has been on leave from the county since April 1 because of personal problems, has worked for the county for 20 years. She said her responsibilities with the county include risk management, safety and insurance, which includes handling 1,400 insurance policies as well as handling records for the county's 800 employees.

Seminole County Administrator Ken Hooper said Martin's resignation letter stated she had numerous personal demands.

County, cities wrangle over agreement on impact fees

Herald Staff Writers

SANFORD — Backed into a corner, Seminole County commissioners may be faced today with little else but to put up a fight against cities who have yet to sign an interlocal bond impact fee agreement.

Seminole County Administrator Ken Hooper will ask commissioners to appeal Seminole Circuit Judge Kenneth E. Miller's March decision to prevent the county from collecting the impact fee from cities who don't want to pay.

The county has reached the point where the county has offered the best agreement possible, Hooper said.

Hooper said the county must file the appeal by June 30 and today is the last day county commissioners will meet before the time when appeal is filed, the county's $210 million bond building program is at jeopardy.

It is just out of time. Hooper said the county also includes Longwood commissioners' opposition to the interlocal agreement. Miller's decision said Seminole commissioners ruled the agreement was already in effect.

Orlando officials have also approved the agreement and Altamonte Springs officials say they have no major disagreements with it, but have not yet acted on it.

The Sanford commission tabled a motion on the agreement, saying they hoped county commission

POLICE

IN BRIEF

Drug suspect gives false name; now faces additional charges

SANFORD — With a corrected name, Seminole County investigators found they had a wanted man in their jail Monday.

Early Saturday morning, a man identifying himself as Len Clay Howell was arrested when deputies reportedly discovered him holding a matchbox containing rock cocaine and drug paraphernalia. He was arrested for possessing the cocaine and paraphernalia and taken to the Seminole County Jail where bond was set at $2,000.

The incident was described in the Sunday edition of the Sanford Herald.

Monday, a man called the Herald, saying he was Howell and the man arrested was his brother, John Young. After an inquiry by the Herald, sheriff's investigators discovered the man in the county lock-up was indeed John Henry Young, 36, Howell was the man's brother. Young continues to list his address as 2411 Jet Way, Sanford — Howell's residence, investigators say.

Lt. Don Eslinger of the City-County Investigation Bureau said a sheriff's warrants officer noticed the man's name on Eslinger's desk and commented he was wanted on an outstanding firearms charge with a bond amount of $4,000.

Eslinger said in addition to holding Young on the possession and firearms charges, additional charges may be filed against him for using a false name.

Cars stolen from school

SANFORD — Two 1988 Oldsmobiles, valued at $12,500 each, were stolen from Seminole High School, 2701 Georgia Ave., sometime over the weekend.

According to the police report, thieves broke into the Driver's Education room in the school and took the keys from a locked cabinet. The cars were then taken from a fenced compound beside the gymnasium.

Police are still investigating.

SANFORD — Seminole County Sheriff's Deputies have arrested an Apopka man after he allegedly threatened five juveniles with a gun at a restaurant when they refused to give him a ride.

Havier Martinez, 32, 1173 Forrest St. has been charged with aggravated assault and carrying a concealed firearm.

The victims told police a man approached them at the Waffle House at State Road 46 and Interstate 4. When the group refused to give him a ride, the man reportedly pulled a gun and pointed it at two of the victims.

The victims hailed the deputy who arrested Martinez inside the restaurant.

Deputies seized a .22 caliber revolver at the scene. Bond was set at $1,000.

Pawn shop owner arrested

SANFORD — A Sanford pawn shop owner has been arrested and charged with tampering with physical evidence, according to police records.

Anthony Winn, 41, 308 Wild Olive Lane, Longwood, was arrested Friday shortly after 2 p.m. by officers of the Seminole County Sheriff's Department.

Deputies responded to a complaint at the Sanford Pawn Shop, 1018 French Ave. indicating the serial numbers had been removed from a stereo that was on display at the shop.

After police questioned the shopowner, he allegedly smashed the stereo on the ground. Bond was set at $1,000.

Man beaten, car stolen

CASSELBERRY — A Winter Park man was thrown out of his car, beaten and robbed of his vehicle Sunday night while parked in a rear lot of a Casselberry bank.

The victim said he stopped in the parking lot because he had been drinking. However, between 8 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. he was forced from his car and beaten in the face. The assailant then fled in the victim's 1978 Pontiac.

Sanford man faces drug charges

SANFORD — A Sanford man was arrested Monday and charged with possession of cocaine after a chase that ended in the Lake Monroe Apartment Complex.

Dennis Lawrence, 20, of 37 Lake Monroe Terrace, has been charged with possession of cocaine and resisting arrest without violence, according to police records.

An officer with the Sanford Police Department chased the suspect after he allegedly fled when police approached him. Officers recovered a plastic bag containing cocaine, which the suspect allegedly dropped while being pursued. Bond was set at $2,000.

Suspect faces traffic charges

SANFORD — Sanford Police arrested a Sanford man on traffic charges including failure to appear and violation of parole relating to previous driving under the influence charges.

Kenneth Westfall, 40, 2503 Old Lake Mary Blvd., was arrested at 3 a.m. Monday.

Police officers observed the suspect's car crossing the center line as he drove along the 2600 block of S. Orlando Drive.

A check of the suspect's record revealed he was wanted for several traffic violations as well as driving under the influence parole violation and failure to appear. Bond was set at $5,000.

Bomb blast kills U.S. attache

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — A remote-control bomb explosion killed a U.S. naval attache today, catapulting him out of his bulletproof car moments after he left his house in a suburb of the capital, police and witnesses said.

The attache, identified by police as Navy Capt. William Nordem, 52, was thrown about 10 yards from his car when explosives planted in another car were detonated by remote control as he drove by, witnesses said.

Both cars were turned over by the blast and lay charred with their doors and wheels blown off. Nordem's bulletproof Mazda was blown off the narrow street and landed partially across the fence of a house, witnesses said.

Windows were broken within 100 yards of the explosion and telephone and power lines were shredded.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the blast but suspicions fell on leftist groups that have terrorized American military personnel in Greece in recent years.

Nordem left his house alone in the suburb of Kefalari, about 10 miles north of Athens, and was on his way to work at the U.S. Embassy when the explosion was triggered about 8:10 a.m. several doors down from his home, police said.

The embassy declined immediate comment, except to confirm the explosion. The semi-official Athens News Agency said Nordem had been defense and naval attache since August 1985.

Nordem is survived by a wife and daughter.

Yiannis Kapodistrias, 84, a retired university professor who lives on Nordem's street, said he heard a massive explosion as he was making breakfast and was slightly injured by glass that hit him in the head and face.

Sanford swamped when rains came

By Fred H. Cooper
Herald Staff Writer

Avast me hardies, how'd you like the deluge? Mates in the northern Texas case, the expressionist tier of the county really got it yesterday and last night. Maybe it was a case of Golden Gamers practicing for the dancing competition and dedicating their efforts by doing the light fantastic in a call for rain in the drought-stricken areas of the nation. The machinations hit the side of the front enclosing the area and resulted in a double-dousing in Sanford. A total of 3.25 inches of rain fell in the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. this morning, and more is on the way. Other areas of the county got between 2 inches and a little less than an inch. If you don't believe we're going to get more, just look outside.

The temperatures were a little more temperate, however, ranging from the low to mid-70's up to only 92 degrees. How do you like that "only." Rainfall was shared by all areas of the state, except along the Suncoast. It was dry from Clearwater to Naples. The temperatures ran considerably past our "only" up in the Panhandle. Tallahassee hit 99 degrees while Pensacola scorched a 101 degree reading. The heat up there must have tempered feelings in a hot demonstration. Oystermen from Franklin County are justifiably upset with the state due to cabinet approval for mechanical harvesting of beds in Apalachicola Bay. A protest at the state capital was planned. Temperatures in Franklin County were 92 degrees (down to only 80 degrees at night) and the protesters encountered 99 degrees in Tallahassee. It takes a heap of oysters to cool a body under normal times — just think what they went through.

The heat and drought is really having an effect on tolu lovers. They get little enough respect as it is, but now face the prospect of having to turn to real food in the wake of the loss of the soybean crops. Futures for this crop have zoomed from $3 a bushel to more than $10 a bushel in the past month or so, and most bushel are coming from the federal surplus crop stores. The drought has pushed the situation in the crisis stage in the Magnolia State.

Mississippi Gov. Ray Mabus toured his state's parched farmlands by helicopter. "It is the worst drought that Mississippi has experienced in my lifetime and one of the worst ever recorded," he said. Will McCarty, an agronomist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, said, "There is still time to make a cotton crop, but the clock is winding down."

About half of Mississippi's 2.5 million acres of soybeans has not been planted. "If we don't get a rain in 10 days, it will be disastrous for the soybeans crop," said agronomist Nathan McKinney. "It's bad, bad, bad."

An earthquake registering 5.7 on the Richter scale hit San Jose and Sunnyvale yesterday. Messed up the place even worse than it normally is but did little damage.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms today extended from Arizona across New Mexico into western and south central Texas and dotted the northern Rockies, western South Dakota and northwest Minnesota, the National Weather Service said.

(Reports by United Press International and data provided by the National Weather Service were used in compiling this report.)

Navy officer, instructor face court-martials in recruit death

PENSACOLA (UPI) — A Navy officer who heads a rescue swimmer school and an instructor could each face court-martial in the death of a water-phobic recruit terrified during a training exercise.

The officer and four of five instructors charged in the case were recommended for non-judicial punishment and had until Monday to accept the offer or choose a possible trial by court-martial.

The four instructors accepted non-judicial punishment, but Lt. Thomas A. Torchia "elected to refuse non-judicial punishment," said Cmdr. Dennis Hessler, a spokesman for Adm. Ron Thuman, chief of naval education and training at Pensacola Naval Air Station.

Torchia was charged with dereliction of duty in the March 2 death of 19-year-old Lee Mirecki of Appleton, Wis., at the Pensacola Naval Air Station, while the five instructors were charged with involuntary manslaughter and conspiracy to commit battery.

"Rear Adm. (David) Morris will now decide if dereliction of duty charges will be dismissed or referred to court-martial," said Hessler.

Oystermen protest ruling

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Several hundred angry oystermen planned to descend on the state Capitol today to protest a Cabinet decision they say threatens their livelihood, a spokeswoman for the group said.

"What (hurricanes) Kate and Elena didn't do, it looks like the state is going to," said Margaret Holton, president of Concerned Citizens of Franklin County. The hurricanes swept through the bay in 1985, destroying many oyster beds and putting "tongers" out of work for months.

Holton said several hundred protesters were expected to arrive at the Capitol about 11 a.m. today.

State unveils new licenses

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida drivers will soon have new licenses, designed to be easier to read and harder to fake.

Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles officials unveiled the new licenses Monday. They will be phased in gradually as the department installs special new cameras at its licensing offices, and will be available statewide by mid August.

"It's much more legible, it's clearer and much easier to be read by law enforcement officials and the business community," said James Cox, chief of the department's licenses bureau.

"It is virtually impossible to manufacture a forgery proof license, but we have tried to make it as difficult as possible."

The new licenses are the same size as current licenses, but redesigned so that the area devoted to driver information is 10 percent larger.

Paris train crash leaves 50 dead

PARIS (UPI) — Rescue teams gave up hope of finding any more survivors today after the worst rail disaster in Parisian history could rise beyond 50. A fire department spokesman said searchers had given up all hope of finding any more survivors from the collision during Monday evening rush hour.

Fire officials coordinating the rescue said the death toll from the worst rail disaster in Parisian history could rise beyond 50. A fire department spokesman said searchers had given up all hope of finding any more survivors from the collision during Monday evening rush hour.

"They (rescue workers) know there are no more people alive in there," he said.

By noon, 50 bodies had been recovered. A fire department spokesman said 32 people were hospitalized, and 15 were seriously injured, including a man whose legs were amputated to free him, authorities said.

The runaway commuter train sped past a red light about 650 yards outside Gare de Lyon — Paris's main rail terminal — picked up momentum on a downgrade and smashed into the rear of another train stopped at an underground platform.

The force of the collision sent the 12 passenger cars of both trains bucking upwards into the station ceiling and dismembered the bodies of many of the dead witnesses said.

It was unclear how or why the speeding train was switched onto the track still occupied by the train waiting to leave the platform. All that could be established shortly after the disaster was that the brakes failed on the runaway train.

"It is one of the biggest railway catastrophes of our time," Mayor Jacques Chirac said at the scene. Prime Minister Michel Rocard, who also went to the station, said it was "an atrocious accident."

French railway President Philippe Rouvillois said the engineer of the brakeless train warned his passengers over the intercom to move to the rear of the train. But the hundreds of commuters aboard the second train had no warning of the impending collision.

Railway spokesmen said the uncontrolled train reached a speed of about 50 mph before impact.

About 250 firefighters and rescue workers mobilized under the "Red Plan" for major disasters sped to the Gare de Lyon, a labyrinthine rail-subway interchange. Ambulances and a helicopter took the injured to hospitals.

Rescuers labored with whining metal saws to cut through crushed train walls and crawled over the dead to reach injured passengers.

Workers spoke of a "miracle" in the case of a 30-year-old woman pulled out of a 20-inch-wide space after four hours. Her first reaction was to straighten her skirt before she was hospitalized for shock.

Bodies were laid on the platform under white plastic covers while blood-spattered emergency teams treated those brought out alive. A Roman Catholic chaplain moved about administering the last rites.

"Someone said it was a bomb and we were really afraid," said one woman who was in the train that was rammed. "When we got outside there was smoke every where and then we saw one train had rammed into another."

"People were cut in two," she said. "It was horrible to see."

Driver jumps drawbridge

POMPANO BEACH (UPI) — A drawbridge opening with its gates still upright forced a motorist to make an 8-foot leap across the Intracoastal Waterway, giving the driver the feeling his car "fell out of the sky."

Afterward, the 16-year-old bridge operator closed the bridge and fled on his bicycle, officials said.

Gary Darras, 34, of Pompano Beach, was in his 1978 Lincoln Town Car near the middle of the bridge when it began opening.

Doris Chrisop, district manager of Global Contracts Services, the company that employs bridge-tenders in Broward County under contract with the state Department of Transportation, said it was William Sills' second day of operating the bridge on his own after completing a one-week training course.

Chrisop said Sills listed his age as 18 on his application, but police said he is 16.

Orlando skateboard ban revised

ORLANDO (UPI) — The city commission's preliminary approval of a citywide skateboard ban has been postponed until at least next month while the proposal is rewritten to outlaw boards only in the downtown business district.

Mayor Bill Frederick and the six commissioners decided during a stall session before Monday's regular meeting to limit the scope of the proposed ordinance, which would fine violators up to $500 and send them to jail for up to 60 days.

Banning boards from public and private property was proposed to stop skateboard damage to buildings, decorative "streetscape" fixtures such as planters and benches and fountains — and for the safety of pedestrians.

The commission's legal advisers ruled the revision was too radical to be introduced merely as an amendment, so a new law will be drafted and advertised and more public hearings held.

The earliest it could face preliminary consideration is July 18, it could not be passed until July 25 and will not take effect until 10 days after passage.

Skateboarders ranging from an adult Martin Marietta Electronics & Missiles Group employee to pre-teens crammed the commission chamber to testify against the ban along with parents, city residents and teachers who support the sport.

Brown had intended to support the ordinance for the safety of walking little children.

Former teacher will deliver keynote address

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Texas Treasurer Ann Richards, a former junior high school teacher, is "very surprised, tremendously honored (and) very, very proud" to be giving the keynote address at next month's Democratic National Convention.

Democratic Party Chairman Paul Kirk announced the selection in Washington Monday, describing Richards as a mainstream Democrat and a "lively populist" who "speaks the language of average working people."

Calling a subsequent news conference at her state Capitol in Austin, the 54-year-old Richards, the first woman to win statewide office in Texas in a half century, promptly revealed one theme of her speech would be the family.

"That's what I know the most about," explained the divorced mother of four.

"I must say that I was very surprised, tremendously honored (and) very, very proud," she said of her selection as the second woman to deliver a Democratic national keynote, which sounds the party's central themes and sets a tone for the fall presidential campaign.

Former Rep. Barbara Jordan, also of Texas, was the first woman — and the first black — to give a national keynote, sharing the job in 1976 with Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, the former astronaut.

Kirk said Richards, elected treasurer in 1982 and re-elected in 1986, will speak July 18, opening night of the four-day convention in Atlanta. He told reporters, "I think she'll do a singular, outstanding job."

Richards, who grew up poor near Waco, Texas, and taught government in an Austin junior high school before entering politics, said several people asked her how she landed such a prestigious job.

"I said for the past 10 years I have been making speeches at the Madisonville Cattlemen's Association and the McAllen Mexican-American Democrats convention, the Nacogdoches Chamber of Commerce and any number of places that you think of," she recalled, "and it's kind of like how do you get to Carnegie Hall? You just practice."

Kirk said that when he discussed the keynote last month with Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, the party's prospective presidential nominee "was very hopeful that we might make a selection of a woman" and was "heartened" by the suggestion of Richards.

Working together on nurse shortage

In a time when we seem to be beleaguered daily with recitations of problems from all quarters, it is refreshing to read of a problem area in which the principals are cooperating in seeking solutions while aggressively continuing to serve the community.

The shortage of nurses nationally is a reality. And that shortage has extended into Central Florida. But unlike the response in other areas, hospitals in Seminole County have entered into cooperative agreements for self-help, using creative approaches to elevate the status of nurses while relieving some of the more vexing problems which face these guardians of our health.

Seminole Community College has taken a forceful position in the preparation of individuals for careers in nursing care, and Central Florida Regional, Florida-Winter Park, Florida-Altamonte Springs, South Seminole Community and West Lake hospitals have joined together in supporting the nursing education programs of SCC. That support was demonstrated when the college proposed a budget for the coming year (to be funded by the hospitals), and the cooperating health care centers said it wasn't enough and pledged even more money for the programs.

Salaries for these nurses have been increased, but perhaps even more importantly, flexible time scheduling and special incentives such as child-care and continuing education programs have been made available. The professional contribution nurses make to the welfare of patients is now being recognized by physicians and hospital administrators; something patients have known all along.

The prognosis is not good. The shortage will continue in Seminole County, according to medical officials. But when those within the profession not only recognize a problem but seek creative solutions, we can be assured that health care locally is being taken seriously. What some see as a problem, they see as a challenge. We can be justly proud of the efforts of our local college and hospitals.

4 bicyclists set example for all

To many the lazy days of summer mean a time for slowing down with mental, if not physical, siestas each afternoon. The desire to stay close to an air-conditioner and worry about charity when the air gets cooler often seems to be the prevailing attitude.

But four men have demonstrated that individual efforts can be channeled into aid for a deserving cause regardless of the elements. Thus were John Lommerse, James Quinn, Jim Clark and Tom Clark motivated. The four bicycled from Sanford, Maine to Sanford, Florida in 14 days, braving record-breaking heat waves and traveling 1,500 miles through 15 states.

Their efforts were based on concern for the cardiac rehabilitation program of the American Heart Association. And their action in undertaking this journey has resulted in more than $5,000 in contributions to the heart program.

Upon their arrival in Sanford Sunday, they were greeted by a large band of well-wishers, friends and loved ones. We join the chorus of "welcome home," and hope their effort will stand as an example to others.

Fighting America's drought with talk

The granaries were fruitful, and starving men moved on the road. The granaries were full, and the children of the poor grew up rachitic, and the pustules of pellagra swelled on their sides. The great companies did not know the line between hunger and anger is a thin line. — John Steinbeck, "The Grapes of Wrath"

City slickers like me take so much for granted. Milk, cereal, eggs, bacon and toast on the breakfast table.

Lettuce-and-tomato salads at lunch. Corn and beef at dinner.

It just doesn't occur to the average city dweller that our larder won't always be filled. We suffer momentary discomforts with fluctuating high prices and temporary shortages. But rarely any serious economic dislocations.

All of that has changed with Drought U.S.A. 1988.

Areas known as America's Breadbasket — Iowa, Ohio, Kansas, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and sections of California — are coming up dangerously arid. There is no rain. There is no immediate likelihood of rain.

Reservoirs are falling 60 to 90 feet in California and the Carolinas. And barges carrying supplies and produce to urban markets are being grounded on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

While America sweaters, we're reduced to the impotence of Mark Twain's wry observation, "Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it."

Cattle ranchers are doing the only thing they can. Tens of thousands of cattle are being sent to slaughter because farmers can't afford to feed them.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has declared more than 850 counties in 18 states as disaster areas. Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has set up a Joint Senate-House Task Force to deal with crop failures caused by the drought.

Drought U.S.A. 1988 hasn't reached the deadly levels of the Great Drought U.S.A. 1933-38, nor are most experts predicting another "Dust Bowl" catastrophe such as the one that inspired Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath." But for individual farmers already bankrupted by the 1988 drought, the term

"Okie" dredges up frightening associations.

And that's the amazing aspect of the current drought — its cyclical recurrence. Meteorologists point out that since the Civil War there has been a drought every five to 10 years. Yet the federal government has ignored long-range policies for solutions, and instead focused on short-range policies for temporary relief. It's the difference between doing a rain dance and building a dam.

If we can't do anything about the weather, we can at least do something about the earth. Except for a few dams and improved irrigation projects, America's breadbasket is totally dependent on the fickle cycles of rainfall.

Another country has handled the problem more successfully. After Israel became independent, it recognized that water was the key to its survival. The Water Law of 1959 gave the state control of all water rights. Since then the tiny nation has transformed large areas of desert land into crop-producing oases.

Or are we going to talk about the possibilities of Drought 1988 becoming another Great Drought 1933-38?

Bush's winning issue

George Bush is not doing very well in the polls at the moment, but he's ahead in the joke derby, always a good sign. The best jokes going around are at the expense of Mike Dukakis. Is Dukakis a Greek? Sure. "Zorba the Accountant." Or, "The big difference between Pinocchio and Dukakis is that Pinocchio becomes a real human being in the end."

But even as Dukakis tries to blur the distinctions between himself and Bush, even as claiming recently in California that he is more "conservative" than Bush, there is a gleaming diamond of an issue that Bush can win with if he only gloms onto it. And if he does, there's no way out for Dukakis. To switch metaphors here, Dukakis will behave in the manner of Dracula in the presence of the Cross.

The three most liberal members of the Supreme Court — William Brennan, Harry Blackmun, and Thurgood Marshall — are all over 80, and in uncertain health. One has the intuition that they are hanging in there by a sheer effort of will, hoping against hope that Reagan will be succeeded by a Democrat, who will replace them with younger liberal activists.

Michael Dukakis is strongly for homosexual rights, against capital punishment, gives convicted felons weekend vacations, presides over business a few blocks from Boston's drug-and-prostitution ridden Combat Zone and is the governor of the state George McGovern carried, a state that is represented in Congress by two declared homosexuals, Gerry Studds and Barney Frank. Is it conceivable that President Dukakis would name three conservatives or even moderates to the Supreme Court?

The South should already be solid for Bush. But the swing Catholic vote shows signs of drifting home to its ancestral Democratic Party. The Catholics seem to be intrigued by Dukakis-the-ethnic — though in reality he has all the ethnicity of an ice cube.

Bush has to get going, if not now, when? If not here, where?

Disabled vet fights bureaucracy of VA

By Jack Anderson and Joseph Spear

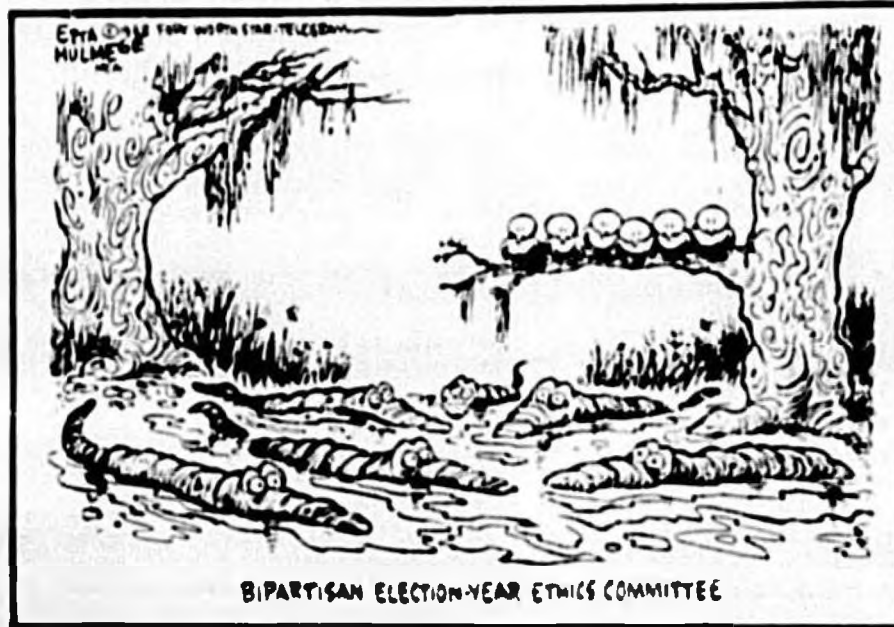

WASHINGTON — The war began for Johnny Alvin White Jr. after he was discharged from the Air Force in 1950.

For the past 38 years, the veteran from North Carolina has been fighting the Veterans Administration for disability payments because of crippling arthritis he claims was caused by injuries suffered in the line of duty.

White wasn't downed by the enemy. He was bounced out of a weapons carrier in an accident while he was delivering laundry. The VA maintains there is no connection between the injuries from that accident nearly 40 years ago and White's arthritis today.

The VA admits that White was injured in 1949, but White had to scrape to get that admission. Like a legion of other veterans, he was forced to reconstruct his military records on his own. The originals were destroyed in a 1973 fire at the National Personnel Records Center in St. Louis. White even had to produce proof that he had been in the Air Force.

Now, at age 57, he is so disabled by arthritis that he can't hold down a job. He has had about 40 positions in the last 32 years. Today, White spends most of his time in a makeshift office in his home, coordinating his private war with

Dems welcome Merkle

By Michael McClelland

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle's Monday morning entry into the U.S. Senate race has Democratic strategists smiling at the thought of Republicans being forced to tip toe through a political minefield.

Merkle represents a potentially troublesome obstacle to party favorite U.S. Rep. Connie Mack, R-Fla., who had been expected to coast to the GOP nomination with no opposition.

Merkle's entrance means Mack can no longer sit on the sidelines conserving his money while four Democratic candidates slug it out for their party's nomination.

"It's spectacular," said Greg Farmer, campaign manager for U.S. Rep. Buddy MacKay, D-Fla.

"The last thing we want to do is struggle across through the primary, stagger across the run-off finish line and look up to see Connie Mack standing there with $12 million and a smile on his face."

Farmer also said MacKay would rather run against Mack than Merkle because Mack "is predictable" while Merkle is "a loose cannon. You're never sure what he's going to do."

Michelle McLawhorn, spokeswoman for Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter's Senate campaign, noted that Mack already has avoided one debate, saying he would wait until after the nomination to debate the Democratic nominee.

But with Merkle in the picture,

McLawhorn said Mack must emerge from the shadows and lay out his position on the issues.

"It certainly helps the Democrats' chances of holding onto the Senate seat," she said. "It makes for a real race."

Leading Republicans suddenly found themselves in a delicate political situation.

Mack has long been their clear choice, while Merkle's sometimes abrasive style has angered many Republicans and once prompted Gov. Bob Martinez to ask the White House to remove him from office.

But GOP leaders know any attempt to keep Merkle out of the race would not be received well by voters. That left Florida GOP Chairwoman Jeanie Austin scrambling to embrace the electoral system and still keep Merkle at arm's length.

"Because I encouraged Republican Connie Mack to challenge (retiring Democratic Senator) Lawton Chiles when it appeared Mr. Chiles would seek reelection and when it appeared Mr. Chiles would receive no Republican challenge, it makes it difficult in this case to fully support a primary," Austin said.

Merkle also took the White House by surprise, throwing unwanted controversy on President Reagan's scheduled appearance at a Mack fundraiser on Wednesday.

Reagan has had a policy of not taking sides in GOP primaries, but spokesman B. Jay Cooper said the president will stand by his endorsement of Mack.

Snacks boost memory

By Rob Stein
UPI Science Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — An afternoon snack appears to boost concentration and memory, according to new research that confirms what had probably been common sense to most people.

"It is common sense," said Robin Kanarek, an associate professor of psychology at Tufts University in Boston who conducted the study. "But there really haven't been any studies that have looked at this before."

Kanarek had 20 college students come into the lab on four different days to eat breakfast and then lunch so she could control their nutritional intake on the day of the experiments.

She then had the students come back into the lab at about 3 p.m. and eat either something — a candy bar or a fruit yogurt — or drink a diet Coke and then perform a series of tasks.

To evaluate their concentration, the students were asked to look for a variety of number and letter combinations on a computer screen and press a button whenever a sequence of consonants followed by a number greater than 25 appeared. To test their memory, the students repeated a list of numbers backwards and forwards.

The students were 15 percent to 20 percent faster and more accurate after they had eaten the candy bar or yogurt, Kanarek said.

"What we found was that in the memory task and attention tasks the subjects did better when they got some kind of nutritional snack, either candy bar or fruit yogurt," said Kanarek.

Kanarek speculated that the extra nutrition provides an energy boost that helps people concentrate.

"This energy they get from the snack may help them pay better attention or remember better. I think it's more a general energy effect," she said.

"Late afternoon is a time when for a lot of people there seems to be a lull in their energy level. Having this extra energy seems to help them," she said.

the VA. The amateur sleuth is dwarfed by piles of correspondence from people helping him rebuild his service record.

An advertisement White placed in a veterans' magazine brought him his most important clue from the past — the supply sergeant who was with him on the laundry run in Germany in 1949. Walter Gordon saw the ad and answered White's plea for help. The two had not talked since White was discharged from the Air Force in 1950.

Gordon gave White an affidavit describing how they were both knocked unconscious when they were thrown from the weapons carrier in the accident. White White was recovering, he was knocked down a flight of concrete stairs when he tried to stop a drunken GI who was breaking windows in a supply warehouse.

White was so badly banged up that his commanding officer put him on the first ship stateside, according to Gordon's affidavit.

"I have no question that his problems are a direct result of the wreck and fall," Gordon wrote.

White has more than just Gordon's hunch to prove that his arthritis is service related. He has the opinion of a top arthritis expert, Harold W. Clark, vice chairman for research at the Arthritis Institute of the National Hospital, a private institution in Arlington, Va.

"In view of my 35 years' experience in arthritis research and the statistically significant data now available, there should be no question that Mr. White's arthritis has continued since being precipitated by his military injuries in 1949," Clark wrote in a letter to the VA last year.

Despite White's detective work, the VA maintains he lacks evidence to prove "continuity," or that his arthritis was caused by the crash.

White told our reporter, Dawn Larsen, that he started making claims to the VA in 1950 when he was discharged. But the VA has no record of any claim before 1975. White said he threw away the copies of his early claims when he was too new at the VA game to imagine he would need them.

Along with White's service record, medical reports about his injuries also were burned in the St. Louis fire. Normally the VA would scrutinize those records to determine whether a veteran qualified for medical benefits. In some cases, the VA has appointed medical experts to examine the veteran and reach an independent conclusion. But in White's case, the VA has not done so.

White feels trapped in the VA's vicious circle of appeals and denials. His latest appeal is in the hands of the Traveling Section of the Board of Veterans Appeals. He is asking for disability payments of about $750 a month in the future and back payments totaling about $90,000.

But White doesn't hold out much hope. He thinks he has been marked as a trouble maker because of his numerous appeals and because he has enlisted members of Congress to help him.

VA rules limit the kind of help White can get. Since World War I, veterans have not been allowed to pursue their cases in court, and they cannot pay a lawyer more than $10 to represent them.

White calls himself a patriot, but he admits that Memorial Day doesn't mean much to him anymore. "I know too much about how veterans are really treated to believe much in the supposed honor of the dead."

TELL YOUR STORY — Johnny White is not the only person who has run up against the brick wall of government bureaucracy. If you have a story to tell about frustration with the system, about a legitimate problem, about doors closed in your face, we may be able to turn the spotlight on the public servants who are supposed to be serving you. Send the details along with any relevant documentation, to Jack Anderson, 1531 "P" St. NW, Washington, D.C., 20005.

Lewis bolts to wind-aided 9.95

VILLENEUVE D'ASCQ, France (UPI) — Carl Lewis overcame a shaky start and the evening chill Monday to run a wind-aided 9.95 seconds in the 100 meters and then announced he probably will not run the event again until the U.S. Olympic Trials in mid-July.

Lewis, who ran the first sub-10.0 race of the year, start poorly and was in the middle of the pack midway through the race, but the Olympic champion glided past his opponents with a burst of speed in the last 40 meters.

Lewis's time bettered the previous season best of 10.03 by Joe DeLoach of Houston and Dennis Mitchell of Florida. Canadian Ben Johnson, the world champion and world record holder who originally was to run in this meet, has been sidelined with a leg injury.

In the pole vault, Mirosław Chmura of Poland brushed the bar as his cleared 19-4-1-1, second best of the year to Soviet Sergei Bubka's world record of 19-10-1-4.

Watson's 7-under wins VIP tourney

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Tom Watson shot a 7-under par 65 Monday to best Fuzzy Zoeller and Dan Pohl by one stroke at the 22nd annual Amara VIP pro-am golf tournament.

Watson claimed $3,000 by shaving four strokes off par with a 32 on the front nine and finishing with a 33 on the back nine in a winning round that featured seven birdies on the University of Iowa's Finkbine course.

Zoeller, one of four golfers to register an eagle, tied Pohl for second. Doug Tewell and Blaine McCallister shot 67, and Dave Rummels, Ed Flor and Lou Hinkle tied at 68.

"The course is out there to be taken," Zoeller said.

Holyfield moves into heavyweight picture

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — With Michael Spinks punched brutally out of the way Monday night, Evander Holyfield quickly assumed the role as the only fighter left considered a true threat to Mike Tyson.

"I'm not going to let his reputation beat me," Holyfield said after Tyson knocked out Spinks at 1:31 of the first round to retain his undisputed heavyweight title. "Just because he beat a lot of guys doesn't mean he'll beat me."

Tyson wastes Spinks in 1st round

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Mike Tyson's answer to intense media coverage of his personal life was an equally brutal assault of Michael Spinks.

"My obligation is to be the ultimate professional no matter what happens," Tyson said Monday night after he recorded the fourth quickest knockout in heavyweight championship history, throwing previously unbeaten Spinks aside at 1:31 of the first round of the richest bout ever.

Tyson's distractions since March included printed allegations of wife beating, the death of co-manager Jim Jacobs, a squabble with co-manager Bill Cayton and the obvious wounding by promoter Don King.

Tyson, who weighed 218 1/4, attacked first, throwing a right that was blocked by Spinks. But the crowd of 21,785 at the Convention Center roared as Tyson and Spinks threw ineffective inside punches. Tyson countered a poor Spinks right with a right of his own. Seconds later a left hook put Spinks to his knees — the first time he was down in his 12-year career.

Spinks was up at referee Frank Capuceno's count of four. Tyson floored Spinks again with a right to the chin seconds later. Capuceno counted to 10 and waved the bout off at 1:31 of the opening round.

"When I came into the ring, I looked at his face and saw fear," said Tyson, who earned an estimated $22 million while upping his record to 35-0 with his 31st knockout. "I looked for a knockout."

"I knew it would be over in the first round. I'm just a better fighter than he is. You can be strong, but the power doesn't have any value unless you have the means of delivering it to the target."

Spinks, whose first loss in 32 professional bouts brought him $13.5 million, was not ready to second-guess his strategy.

"Maybe I was a little anxious, but I came to fight," said Spinks, who weighed 212 1/4. "He hit me with a good shot early against the ropes. I wanted to take the time to come back for a second shot. I thought I'd catch him coming in. Instead, he caught me with a good shot."

"His body shots didn't bother me at all. It's like I've said time and time again — it doesn't take a very hard shot to knock somebody down. He hit me in a spot right on the head where anybody would fall back."

The fastest knockout in heavyweight championship history came in 1900 when James Jeffries floored Jack Finnigan in 55 seconds. Michael Dokes knocked out Mike Weaver in 1:03 in 1982 and Tony Burns put away Jim Roche in 1:28 in 1908.

Tyson, the youngest heavyweight champion ever, captured the World Boxing Council title with a second-round knockout of Trevor Berbick in 1986. He won the World Boxing Association and International Boxing Federation belts the next year when he scored 12-round decisions over Bonecrusher Smith and Tony Tucker.

Spinks, who won the WBA light heavyweight title in 1981, beat Larry Holmes in 1985 to win the IBF heavyweight crown. He won a close decision over Holmes in the rematch seven months later and subsequently knocked out Stefan Tangstad and Gerry Cooney.

Promoters predicted Monday night's bout would gross up to $75 million. The expected audience watching on either closed circuit or pay-per-view was estimated at 2,750,000 with revenue bringing between $45 million and $50 million.

Ocoee ousts Athletics

By Chris Flater
Herald Sports Editor

OCCOEE — Altamonte Athletics' manager George Pihakis had no doubts that his team was every bit as good as the Ocoee A's. It just happened that Altamonte ran into Ocoee twice when ace pitcher Brian "Rooster" Russell was on the mound.

Russell, who shut Altamonte out on four hits on Friday, turned the Athletics away on two hits Monday night as Ocoee claimed a 4-2 victory in Top Team Tournament Majors Division action.

The loss eliminates Altamonte from the double-elimination tourney while Ocoee goes on to the district finals against South Daytona. Ocoee needs to win twice for the championship while South Daytona needs only one win.

"I felt we were just as good, but both times we faced their No. 1 pitcher with our No. 2 pitcher," Pihakis said. "That made a difference. We just caught them at the wrong time."

"But it's not us, than I'd like to see Ocoee win it," added Pihakis. "Their manager (Peter Armstrong) is real nice guy and a good sport."

Ocoee jumped out to a quick 1-0 lead when leadoff hitter Bobby Simmons jacked a home run in the first inning. Ocoee eventually built a 3-0 lead and Russell pitched no-hit ball until the sixth inning.

Meanwhile, Altamonte pitcher Matt Wolgemuth kept the Athletics in the game. It was the second game in a row Wolgemuth pitched well only to get the loss. He allowed only one earned run and eight hits in Friday's 5-0 loss in Ocoee.

Altamonte came up with a last-inning rally in the sixth when, with two outs, Genus McGee beat out a bunt single and Chris Lewis blasted a two-run homer practically out of sight.

Altamonte's Matt Wolgemuth strides and fires during Top Team Tournament action. Wolgemuth pitched a strong game on Monday night, but the Athletics were defeated by the Ocoee A's, 4-2. It was the second loss for Altamonte in the double-elimination tournament.

"That was really some shot," Pihakis said of Lewis' homer. "The people at Ocoee said it was one of the farthest hit balls they've ever seen."

Before Altamonte could really get its rally going, though, Russell retired the next batter to end the game.

"We hit the ball hard at times but usually right at someone," Pihakis said. "And that team doesn't make mistakes."

The Altamonte Athletics finished the season with an impressive 23-4 record which included 20 victories in a row at one point.

Morro's one-hitter leads Senior Mets

By Mark Blythe
Herald Sports Writer

WINTER GARDEN — Kevin Morro came up with a brilliant pitching performance, tossing a one-hitter, to lead the Altamonte Senior League Mets into the Top Team Tournament district finals with a 2-1 victory over Pine Hills Monday night before 201 fans at the Winter Garden Little League Complex.

Altamonte will now host the championship tonight at 7 and will be sending T.J. Hamilton to the mound. Hamilton pitched the final four innings in the win over South Daytona that enabled the Mets to advance into Monday's game.

Morro used the combination of his curveball and fastball to keep the Pine Hills batters off balance all night. Morro, though, was a little out of control as he walked eight batters while striking out eight as well.

"This is the third time he has pitched this week and his arm is really dead," Altamonte coach Angelo Morro said. "He's been worked really hard and it showed in the way he pitched tonight."

Morro's no-hit bid was wiped out in the first inning by lead off batter Brian Holmes who looped a single into left field. Clinton Robertson followed with a walk before Morro put the next three batters down in order. Pine Hills did not get a hit the remainder of the game.

Altamonte did not have a base runner until the third inning when Hamilton roped a two-out single to left center. Hamilton, though, was put out trying to steal third to end the inning.

Pine Hills came up with its only run of the game in the bottom half of the inning to take its only lead of the night. Holmes walked, stole second and advanced to third on a wild pitch. James then walked and stole second. Jason Reiser then hit a hard grounder to short to score Holmes and give Pine Hills a 1-0 advantage.

TOP TEAM BASEBALL

The Mets came right back and evened the game up with a single run in the top of the fourth inning. After an out, Tanner Morrison singled down the third base line and moved to second on a passed ball. After the second out Marty Horwitz connected on a run scoring single to center to knot the score at 1-1.

Morro stayed in control during the middle innings and helped himself get the win in the top of the sixth. Morro led off the sixth with a single and advanced to second when Morrison, dropped down a bunt. Morrison was also safe as the throw to second was late. After an out and a single by Horwitz loaded the bases. Kevin O'Neill was called in to pinch hit.

O'Neill delivered a run-scoring groundout as the throw to the plate brought Pine Hills' catcher Jamie Daniels off the plate. Daniels was able to throw O'Neill out trying for first though for the second out of the inning. Altamonte nearly scored two more runs as Mike Black followed with a hard hit shot to short, but the throw to first just beat Black as both Morrison and Horwitz had rounded third.

Morro saved his best stuff for the final two innings, but not before a score. In the bottom of the sixth Morro walked the first two batters before they both moved up on successful steals.

Morro then struck the next three batters out to end the inning and Pine Hills' last chance to comeback. Morro was equally as tough in the seventh as he struck out two and got the third to groundout to end the game and send the Mets into the championship.

Morro will now concentrate on hitting and fielding in the final game and hopes things will fall in place as they did

Marcis longs for Firecracker victory

By Chris Flater
Herald Sports Editor

DAYTONA BEACH — Just when it seemed destiny was calling, Dave Marcis received one of the unluckiest breaks in NASCAR history in last year's Daytona Firecracker 400.

With a scant few laps to go and Marcis holding a comfortable lead, Rick Wilson, running alone on the inside, crashed into the wall. The ensuing caution flag allowed the faster, more powerful cars to catch back up to Marcis and his dreams of winning quickly went down the drain.

This year's Firecracker 400 will mark the midway point of Marcis' 20th year on the NASCAR Winston Cup circuit. He has logged more than 200,000 hard, door-to-door racing miles and, after 20 years, he is running better than ever.

Marcis, now in his second year driving the Lifebuoy Soap Chevrolet, hopes to be in position to win the 400 again. And this time — he has the car and the first-class crew that can keep him up front.

"I'm going to run as hard as I can. Marcis, who resides in Averys Creek, N.C., said, "During the winter, we added a new crew chief, Ivan Baldwin, to our operation and he has taken a load off my shoulders. Now I have the luxury of being able to discuss the car and race strategy with someone, instead of trying to do it all myself."

"I hope we can fight our way to the front pack at least a few times this year," added Marcis. "Because I'd like nothing better than to add a few more victories to my collection."

The 1988 Firecracker 400 will be run this Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. at the Daytona International Speedway.

Marcis moved from his native Wisconsin to North Carolina in 1968 to pursue his dream of becoming a stock car racer. In his 20 years, Marcis has seen the highs and lows of the sport. While he has won some big races, including the 1976 Talladega 500, he has also been in the role of a true independent, sometimes running on tires thrown away by the big-budget, factory-sponsored teams.

And, despite a 1988 season that has already been filled with two horrible crashes and enough bad luck to last a lifetime, Marcis is still optimistic about the Firecracker. To most veteran NASCAR observers, Marcis should have won the '87 race and is not counted out of the '88 race.

"Well," mused Marcis, "a third place was satisfying, but we should have won it. It was a typical Firecracker, a battle all the way."

Lendl avoids upset, wins in five sets

WIMBLEDON

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Ivan Lendl, as close to disaster as a novice tightrope walker, Monday scrambled to safety by saving a match point for a five-set victory over Mark Woodforde and a quarterfinal berth in the Wimbledon Championships.

Lendl, seeking his first Wimbledon title after two appearances in the finals, defeated the unseeded Australian 7-5, 6-7 (6-8), 6-7 (4-7), 7-5, 10-8. The match lasted 4 hours, 46 minutes and was completed shortly before play at the $4.3 million tournament was suspended because of rain.

"When you are are match point down," Lendl said, "you have to be lucky to win."

Lendl and Woodforde took so long to settle their 68-game duel the fourth-round match between No. 6 seed Boris Becker of West Germany and Paul Annarone of the United States was postponed until Tuesday.

"It was my best and certainly longest-ever match," said Woodforde, ranked 54th in the world. "I really enjoyed it. It was the survival of the toughest out there. Unfortunately today I wasn't the toughest."

"I am sorry I lost, but I think perhaps I won in other areas. I had a match point against the world No. 1. That could give me confidence. I am not going to suddenly zoom up in the rankings but this could help."

The 22-year-old left-hander praised Lendl's strong serve.

"He served incredibly for five sets," he said. "You have got to nod your head to him for that. He was serving some bombs at me."

But there were duds as well as bombs from the No. 1 seed from Czechoslovakia. He offset his 24 aces with 21 double-faults.

Advancing to quarterfinals with considerably less fuss were Swedes Mats Wilander and Stefan Edberg. The women lost Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina while Steffi Graf of West Germany and Americans Chris Evert and Pam Shriver were among those moving to the quarterfinals.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Los Angeles Clippers and Indiana Pacers today receive yet another chance to convert strong college talent into a winning NBA team.

The Clippers own the first and sixth picks in today's NBA draft, with the No. 1 choice reserved for Kansas star Danny Manning. The Clippers owned three first-round choices last year, but improved only from 12-70 to 15-67 this year.

"One person can't go in and be a 'saviour,' not today. There's too much talent," said Manning, who carried Kansas to the national title this season.

Manning, 6-foot-10 and 230 pounds, hit 59 percent of his shots from the field in his four years with the Jayhawks, averaging 20.1 points. He averaged 9.5 rebounds as a senior and is a good shot-blocker, passer and ball-handler.

"I don't know if I can personally turn things around, but I think there are possibilities, and not just because I'm going there but because they have a lot of young talent," he said.

The Pacers, who missed the playoffs on the final day of the regular season, won the No. 2 pick in the draft lottery. General Manager Donnie Walsh has said he will take 7-4 center Rik Smits of Marist unless offered an established star for the choice.

Smits would join a frontcourt featuring Steve Stipanovich, the No. 2 overall pick in 1983. Wayman Tisdale, the No. 2 pick in 1985, and Chuck Person, the fourth pick in 1986. Despite the infusion of talented college players, Indiana has reached the playoffs twice since joining the league in 1976 and has not had a winning season since 1981.

"They have some great players already," said Smits, a native of Holland. "If they take me, I'll look forward to playing there."

Smits averaged 24.7 points and 8.7 rebounds a game last year and was named East Coast Athletic Conference Metro Player of the Year for the second straight season.

"Smits has good athletic ability and he has excellent potential," Indiana Coach Jack Ramsay said. "He does everything pretty well. He's not great, at this point, at anything, but he will help us next year and in the future."

who gave up his last two years of eligibility at Kentucky, averaged 19 points a game as a sophomore. Richmond is the best defensive player of the three and averaged 22.6 points a game last season.

"The beauty of Chapman would be that he's a player who can not only play the (shooting) guard spot but also as Maurice Cheeks' career winds down, could move over and play point guard." Philadelphia General Manager John Nash said.

"Richmond is more of a power player, likes to post up and also uses his bigger body to kind of bully his way to the basket. Hawkins is a cute, crafty type of player who obviously is a prolific scorer."

The New Jersey Nets, with the league's second worst record after the Clippers, pick fourth. They are not committing themselves but probably are interested in a small forward, Smith. Harvey Grant of Oklahoma or Chris Morris of Auburn.

Golden State drafts fifth and needs a power forward. Temple's Tim Perry, the MVP at the postseason Orlando All Star Classic, and Rony Seikaly of Syracuse are considered the best in the lot.

The Clippers will almost certainly take a guard No. 6 and will be followed by Phoenix and the league's expansion teams, the Charlotte Hornets and Miami Heat. The teams that kept their picks then choose in reverse order of finish, with Boston and the L.A. Lakers closing out the first round.

The New York Knicks Monday traded center Bill Cartwright to the Chicago Bulls for forward Charles Oakley in a deal that will also alter the look of the first round.

The draft was reduced to three rounds as part of the league's collective bargaining agreement with the players' union.

Parker, 14, top U.S. archer

OXFORD, Ohio (UPI) — When she draws arrows out of the quiver and sends them scorching through the June air, her concentration appears unwavering.

But when 14-year-old Denise Parker leaves the archery range after the day's practice session, she's like any other teenager. She wears wrap-around mirror sunglasses and seems a little shy.

Earlier this month, Parker completed her domination of the women's field during the four-day U.S. Olympic Trials on the campus of Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

She will lead the American team to this summer's Games in Seoul, South Korea.

Also making the cut from a field of 75 women to the three-person Olympic squad were Debra Ochs of Howell, Mich., and Melane Skillman of Laureldale, Pa., who finished second and third in the competition.

"At first I felt a lot of pressure," said the 5-foot-3, 105-pound archer from South Jordan, Utah, who is the youngest person ever to make the archery team. Parker sometimes puts on radio headphones when she shoots.

Davies downplays Open chances

GOLF

LUTHERVILLE, Md. (UPI) — Despite playing on a course that suits her long hitting, Laura Davies Monday downplayed her chances to become the first golfer in a decade to repeat as U.S. Women's Open champion.

The 43rd U.S. Women's Open runs from July 21-24 at the Baltimore Country Club on the par-71, 6,232-yard Five Farms course that rewards power hitters such as Davies.

Davies became the first Englishwoman to win the U.S. Women's Open last year when she defeated Ayako Okamoto and JoAnne Carner in a playoff at Plainfield Country Club in Edison, N.J.

Hollis Stacy was the last golfer to capture consecutive Opens, winning in 1977 and 1978.

"I think any Open course is going to be set up so tough that it's going to be good for a strong player," Davies said at a news conference previewing the tournament. "Really, it's a putting contest most tournaments, but this one won't be because of the length that it is. Maybe it will be advantageous to the stronger players. I'm hoping it will."

Davies said she has not been burdened with trying to repeat as the Open titlist.

putting runs hot and cold. She says she has never taken a lesson in her life.

This is her first full year on the LPGA Tour after three strong years on the European Tour, including a victory in the 1986 Ladies' British Open.

Davies got off to an awful start in 1988, missing the first two cuts and finishing 62nd and 53rd the next two weeks before winning the Tucson Open and Jamie Farr Toledo Open. She won the only tournament she played on the European tour this year.

"When I won in Tucson, certainly that was a big relief because I was starting to read a few things in the papers saying (her Open title) was a one-time thing," Davies said. "I thought that was enough to put down any rumors that it was a one-time thing. Then to go and win in Toledo over Nancy (Lopez) on that last day was even a bigger relief."

Davies has succeeded on the European and American tours with sheer heavy hitting. Her

Blue Jays clawing way back

By RICHARD L. SHOOK
UPI Sports Writer

If Toronto Blue Jays' manager Jimmy Williams could change one thing about this season — he wouldn't.

Not the flap over the outfield shift which would have made George Bell the designated hitter, not the elbow injury to ace left-hander Jimmy Key, not any of the other things responsible for Toronto's worse than expected showing so far this season.

"I feel a whole lot better now," Williams said before Toronto finally reached .500 and could start looking to claw its way back into the American League East Division race. "We're fighting our way through this thing."

"I've felt a lot better this whole month. We're starting to hit the ball better, pitch it better and catch it better."

It shows in the win-loss columns, if not the standings. Toronto was 16-9 for June going into its game Monday night at Baltimore. The problem is the Blue Jays dug themselves a hole so deep their pace for June is not good enough to get them back near the top — unless they raise it to 10 over by the end of the week.

Detroit won last year at 34 above break-even, which meant winning 98 games. Being 20 games over put you seven games out of first. Toronto has to be nine games over .500 for June, July, August and September to get near 98 victories.

But things are looking up for Toronto, which just took two of three from Detroit after splitting four games with the Tigers the previous weekend.

Key did well in his rehabilitation assignment in Florida and should return soon. "I'd rather have him back later, healthy, than sooner and take a chance on re-injuring him," Williams says.

Bell is back in left field more or less full time after rookie Silvestre Campuzano proved he has a lot to learn about hitting breaking pitches at the major league level.

That means Lloyd Moseby, who wasn't crazy about the idea of moving to left, is back in center.

Everything combined means the Blue Jays have an excellent opportunity to get off center, which many people figured they would do from Day 1 in the season.

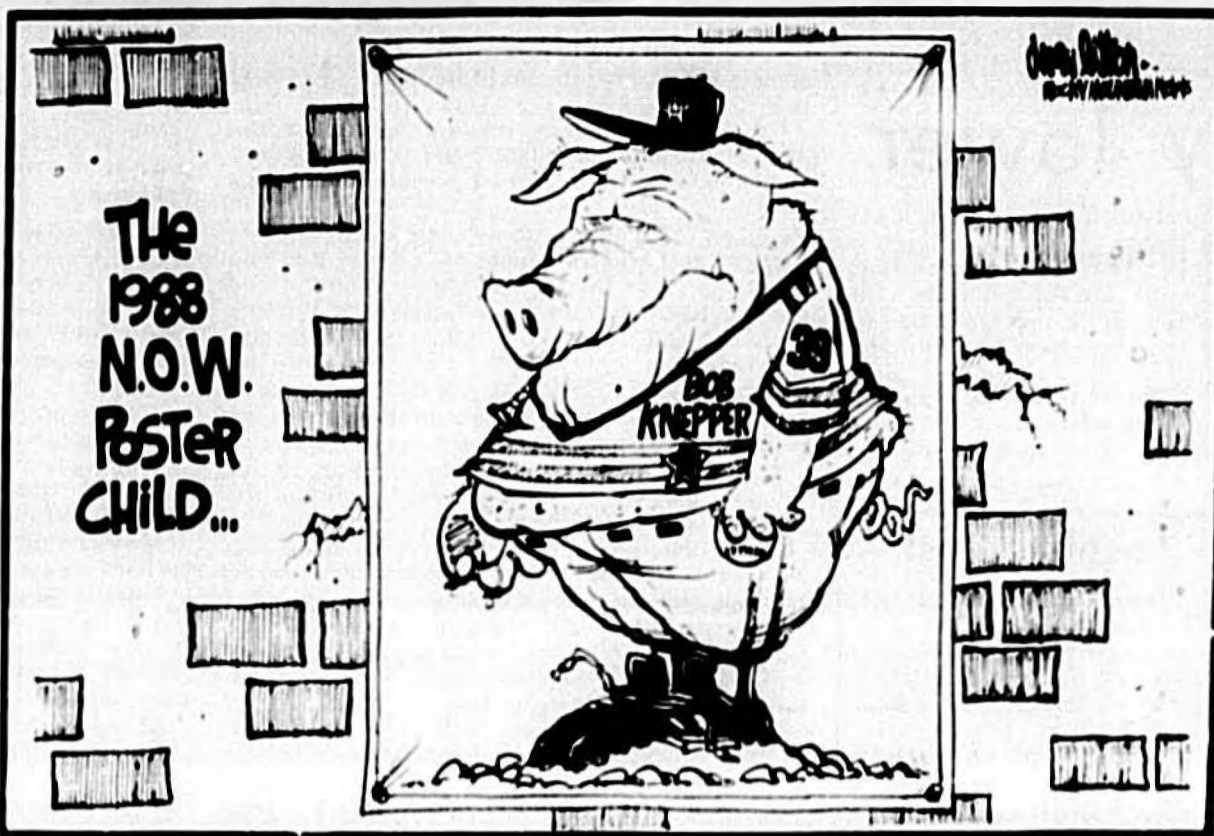

"I don't think you can change reality," Williams said. "I don't think you can change what is. And change is healthy. It's part of the game. You have to adjust, whether it's positive or negative."

"Sometimes, adversity is healthy. You get a chance to find out what you're made of. When things are going good, well, anybody can handle that. When things are going bad, you either fight back — or pack it in."

The decision to give Campuzano a shot at the center field job was jointly made by the organization. The criticism here is that the transition could have been made piecemeal, over 2-3 years, and without fanfare.

Then if Campuzano, or Rob Ducey, or somebody else flops you don't wind up going to the supermarket for a scratchpad to get the egg off your nose.

Pirates down struggling Mets

United Press International

The Pittsburgh Pirates overcame a controversial fifth inning and gave reason for its fans to dream of playoff action in October.

Despite having a run nullified in the fifth, the Pirates posted a 2-1 victory that moved them within 3 1/2 games of the struggling first-place New York Mets.

"It seemed like a postseason game," said Pirate third baseman Bobby Bonilla, referring to the intensity and loud crowd. "It's that's what it's like in the postseason, get me into one. That was fun."

Mike Dunne, 5-6, Barry Jones and Jim Gott combined to limit the Mets to five hits. Gooden, 10-4, gave up five hits, three walks and struck out just four before leaving for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

Bellard singled home Sid Bream, who had a fifth-inning leadoff double, to give Pittsburgh a 2-1 lead minutes before a controversy over a changed wild-pitch call delayed the game for more than 15 minutes.

After the single, Dunne hit a ground ball to shortstop Kevin Elster, who was beaten to the second-base bag by a sliding Bellard. Elster then tried to get Dunne at first, but the pitcher beat the throw. Gooden then walked Barry Bonds to load the bases and Jose Lind came to bat.

was a ball. The second pitch appeared to sail over a ducking Lind, and Bellard came home on the apparent wild pitch, while Dunne and Bonds advanced. New York Manager Davey Johnson protested the ball actually bounced off Lind's bat, and the umpires agreed after a lengthy discussion.

"I didn't go by the replay," Johnson said. "I thought I hit something (Catcher) Gary Carter) didn't even break for the ball, so I figured he felt it hit something."

"When I was up there waiting for someone to call something, a foul ball, or a hit batter, I saw the replay. It was obvious, I said, 'Holy mackerel! What's going on here.' I said (to Rungie at home plate) ask your guys. It's an important play, and somebody obviously saw it."

Bellard returned to third, sparking a long but unsuccessful argument by Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland, who filed a protest with the National League.

Cuba 2, Phillies 1

At Chicago, Shawn Dunston hit a two-run to carry the Cubs to their third straight victory. Rick Sutcliffe 6-5 yielded nine hits and Al Nipper retired one batter for his first major-league save. Shane Rawley, 5-8, was the loser.

Giants 10, Braves 9

At Atlanta, Brett Butler collected three RBI and three hits to pace a 19-hit San Francisco attack. Alton Hamaker, 4-1, hurled 4 1/3 innings in relief for the victory. Scott Garretts struck out the last two batters for his fourth save. Atlanta starter Rick Mahler, 8-7, took the loss.

Padres 9, Reds 2

At Cincinnati, Tony Gwynn hit a three-run homer to key a seven-run second inning, powering San Diego over Cincinnati. The big inning followed a mixup by the Reds in the first inning when three players batted out of turn. Dennis Rasmussen, 6-6, was the winner. Jack Armstrong, 0-2, was the loser.

Dodgers 4, Astros 0

At Houston, Mike Scioscia homered and Shawn Hillegas and three relievers combined on a five-hitter to carry Los Angeles. Hillegas, 2-0, allowed two hits over six innings. Alejandro Pena went two innings for his sixth save. Joaquin Andujar, 0-3, was the loser.

Expos 6, Cardinals 3

At St. Louis, Hubie Brooks hit a three-run homer in the 14th inning lifting Montreal. Brooks' homer came off Steve Peters, 3-3. Jeff Parrett, 6-2, who had surrendered a game tying home run in the 13th earned the victory. Bob McClure recorded his second save.

Butler averaged nearly two strikeouts per inning with a season total of 146. Butler also pitched two no-hitters. Coach Mike Bomo stated that "Butler relies primarily on an overpowering fastball where Bono has the ability to spot the ball and use a variety of pitches."

The A's only allowed 63 runs while scoring 291 this past season. Only six of the 25 games went the entire seven innings. Todd Pollock led the team in hitting with a healthy .591 average while playing shortstop. Jeff Butler was second in hitting at .566, including three home runs. First baseman Hunter Kemper led the team in RBI's while batting .463. The A's finished the season with a fine team average of .385.

The A's were backed by a strong team defense as they went nine games before committing an error. The outfield was controlled by Thomas Roysden who repeatedly made outstanding catches and strong throws.

A's repeat as Bronco champs

FOREST CITY — The Oakland A's of the West Seminole Pony League became the first Bronco Division team to win back to back championships in the league's history. The A's returned eight players to their team this season from last year's championship squad. Manager Terry Butler told the team at this year's opening practice "The hardest thing to do in sports at any level of competition, is to repeat as champions." The A's, though, met the challenge and finished the season with a 23-2 record, winning both the regular season and league playoffs. The A's dominated the

White leads KC with bat, glove

United Press International

Frank White displayed skill Monday night with his bat and glove.

The Kansas City second baseman led off the eighth inning with his sixth home run of the season to break a tie and made a key defensive play in the ninth as the Royals edged the Chicago White Sox 2-1.

In the ninth inning with Greg Walker on first base and Mike Woodard on third, Royals catcher Mike MacFarlane threw low as Walker tried to steal second. White charged, scooped the ball and threw home to nail Woodard and end the game.

"The play was probably more exciting, more emotional," White said. "But it always is when you win like that. That was a good play on my part and a good play on Mac's part to block the plate."

Woodard said he had to be aggressive with the game on the line.

"It was a good play. He came across the bag, made a good throw and got me. That was a chance we had to take. That's how the play works, you get your lead and when the throws to second, you take off."

"It's a play where you can really die. But if you make it, everybody's happy."

Mark Gubicza, 11-5, stretched his personal winning streak to six games. Gubicza allowed four hits before Jerry Don Gleaton relieved to earn his third save.

Chicago starter Jerry Reuss, 6-4, had given up five hits, four of them singles, until White slammed a 1-2 offering into the left-field stands. It was his second home run this season off Reuss.

White said, "I haven't hit him that well at all. I've just got two good pitches and hit them both for home runs."

Elsewhere, Boston outscored Cleveland 9-5. California walloped Minnesota 16-7. Seattle defeated Texas 6-3. Detroit downed New York 6-3. Baltimore stopped Toronto 6-2 and Oakland beat Milwaukee 5-4 in 14 innings.

In the National League: Chicago 2, Philadelphia 1; Pittsburgh 2, New York 1; San Francisco 10, Atlanta 9; San Diego 9, Cincinnati 2; Montreal 6, St. Louis 3 in 14 innings and Los Angeles 4, Houston 0.

Red Sox 9, Indians 5

At Boston, Jody Reed hit his first major-league homer to highlight a five-run sixth inning and hand Cleveland its third straight defeat. Dennis Lamp, 2-3, worked 2 2/3 scoreless innings in relief. John Farrell fell to 8-5.

Angels 16, Twins 7

At Anaheim, Calif., Jack Howell and Bob Boone each homered and had four RBI to lead a 17-hit attack. Kirk McCaskill, 4-5, allowed 10 hits, walked one and struck out five over five innings. Fred Toliver fell to 0-1 and outfielder Dan Gladden hurled a perfect eighth inning.

Orioles 6, Blue Jays 2

At Baltimore, Jim Traber and Rick Schu smashed home runs and Cal Ripken Jr. added a two-run single to help defeat Toronto. Jeff Ballard, 4-4, scattered seven hits over seven innings to earn the win. Toronto starter John Cerutti, 4-4, allowed four runs and five hits in four innings.

A's 5, Brewers 4

At Oakland, Calif., Dave Henderson singled home Carney Lansford in the 14th inning with one out to lift the Athletics. Dan Plesac, 1-1, suffered the loss. Dennis Eckersley, 2-1, recorded two outs for the victory.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mike Greenwell of the Boston Red Sox walloped five homers and knocked in 14 runs over six games to earn unanimous American League Player of the Week honors.

Greenwell batted .500 for the week (13-for-26), scoring eight runs and amassing a slugging percentage of 1.077. He stole a base and accumulated an on-base percentage of 533.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Alan Trammell of the Detroit Tigers holds a narrow lead over incumbent Cal Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles in voting to determine the American League's starting shortstop at the All-Star Game July 12 in Cincinnati.

Trammell, who has been an All-Star four times but never a starter, held a 6,764-vote lead through Sunday's fan balloting, outpacing Ripken 534,394 to 527,630.

Outfielder Jose Canseco of the Oakland Athletics leads all American Leaguers with 1,165,720 votes.

Other AL leaders include Mark McGwire of the Oakland Athletics at first base (890,692), Paul Molitor of the Milwaukee Brewers at second base (536,624), Wade Boggs of the Boston Red Sox at third base (790,598), Terry Steinbach of Oakland at catcher (486,120), and outfielders Dave Winfield (1,116,277) and Rickey Henderson (621,380) of the New York Yankees.

BOSTON (UPI) — Roger Clemens was examined Monday by Dr. Arthur Pappas and a decision will be made Tuesday as to the right-hander's availability for a start Wednesday night.

"Our coaches made some great calls and everyone on the team came through," Morro said. "Horwitz came up with a big hit, Morrison dropped a perfect bunt, things just went well tonight. We hope we can play another tough ballgame tomorrow night."

Altamonte had several chances to put the game away early but were stymied by the five hit pitching of Kevin Reynolds. Reynolds finished the game with nine strikeouts without walking a batter. Reynolds continuously was in front of the batters but could get no help from his offense.

Altamonte's first chance to take the lead came in the top of the third when Black led off with a double to the left center field

"We're just hoping for one more good game," Angelo Morro said. "If we can get the team to do the things they did tonight we'll have a good game, they played a tough game."

Stocks open slightly lower

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened slightly lower today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which fell 34.50 Monday, was down 0.17 to 2108.29 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advancers 365-315 among the 1,165 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 7,110,000 shares.

The fear of higher interest rates in the United States and abroad sent stock prices sharply lower Monday in heavy trading.

William Tiritilli, vice president of research at Rodman & Renshaw Inc. in Chicago, blamed the pullback on "normal profit taking, renewed inflation fears and concerns over higher interest rates."

"It moves to new highs and then pulls back. I think it will move higher again as we enter July and see the positive second-quarter earnings reports."

Sales pushed dollar down; gold, silver slightly up

By United Press International

The dollar was lower today on major world money markets due in part to a concerted move by major central banks of Europe selling dollars for European currencies. Gold moved higher.

In New York, Tim Seala, Treasury manager of Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., said central banks including those from Britain, West Germany, France, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium and Austria sold dollars.

The banks, according to Seala, sold dollars in the open market as part of a concerted intervention ending the dollar's two week rally.

In early New York trading, the dollar edged slightly higher against key foreign currencies in light trading, despite the intervention.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar fell below the 131-yen level in Tokyo, marking the first decline for the dollar in seven trading sessions.

The dollar closed at 130.95 yen, down 0.75 from 131.70 yen on Monday.

Japanese Finance Minister Kiuchi Miyazawa told a morning news conference he saw no need for the Bank of Japan to intervene to support the yen.

A dealer quoted by the Kyodo news service said dollars were sold on reports that the New York Federal Reserve Bank had sold dollars to prop up the West German mark.

In Europe, the dollar opened in Frankfurt at 1.8055 West German marks, down from 1.8195 on Monday.

In Zurich, the dollar opened the day at 1.4905 Swiss francs, down from 1.544 and in Paris at 6.122 French francs, down from 6.16.

The London morning gold fixing was $443.85, up $2.10 from Monday's close.

Older workers pose challenges

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A dramatic drop in entry-level employees coupled with the aging of the workforce is pressuring American businesses to retain and retrain older workers, a survey reported today.

But most are poorly prepared to do either, according to the survey reported by the American Society for Personnel Administration and Commerce Clearing House.

In a sampling of 600 personnel managers from a variety of companies, 75 percent said career counseling and training of senior employees is needed but only 30 percent of their companies had such programs in place.

"American business, like the country itself, is trying to adjust to the dramatic rise in the average age of its workers," said Ronald C. Pilenzo, president of the personnel group.

on her time at home and long hours put in at the county kept her away from those demands.

"We'll certainly miss her," Hooper said. "She's been here many, many years."

Martin began working for the county on Dec. 1, 1971 as a secretary. She became personnel director on Jan. 14, 1979. Previously, she served as manager of the county Manpower Department, overseeing federally-granted job training programs in the county.

Martin said she enjoys working with people and is looking forward to a more hands-on situation dealing with people rather than a chain of command, which she said is the case in her present job. The county has six times as many employees as Longwood.

DeMarie said he first met Martin in 1982 when he interviewed for the job of assistant county administrator. He was interim town manager of Golden Beach at the time. He said when she heard he was working for Longwood, she called to say "Hello" and he invited her to come down to discuss the personnel director job.

Registration for decals now open

SANFORD — Boaters using the Lake Monroe harbor marina can now register for permit decals at the city Parks & Recreation Department at City Hall. The $5 fee for nonresidents, and the decals for city residents, will be required by July 9 to use the marina boat ramps.

City residents will not be charged, but must display a decal in order to use the ramps without paying the fee.

Non-residents will be charged $5 per day on weekends or holidays or pay a $100 annual fee.

Jim Jernigan said that the decals are not yet back from the printer, but boaters can pre-register and obtain a serial number for later pickup.

For more information, boaters can telephone the department at 322-3161.

Parole board rejects 'Onion Field' killer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — "Onion Field" cop-killer Gregory Elias Powell was denied parole by the California Supreme Court for at least another 10 months because of the notoriety he received in a best-selling book and hit movie, his lawyer said.

The newly conservative-leaning high court voted 6-1 Monday to uphold a 1984 appellate court's decision to revoke the parole for Powell that had been approved in 1986 by the liberal-leaning court headed by ousted Chief Justice Rose Bird.

Powell will not be eligible for parole reconsideration again until May 1989, according to his attorney, Karen Snell.

"Once again a hard case has made bad law," said Snell. "Had it been any other person than Powell, the court would not reach the same result."

Justice Allen Broussard, who wrote the 1986 decision that was overturned Monday, issued a strongly worded dissent that attacked the parole board decision as politically motivated.

"One cannot help but suspect that the Board of Prison Terms decision here is not the product of impartial adjudication, but an emotional reaction to the prospect of parole for a notorious prisoner whose notoriety was revived by the showing of a movie depicting his crimes," Broussard wrote.

Powell, 54, shot and killed Los Angeles police officer Ian Campbell in an onion field near Bakersfield in March 1963 after kidnapping him and his partner off a Los Angeles street.

Powell was twice sentenced to die, but the penalties were overturned on appeal in 1967 and 1974. In 1977, the parole board set a 1983 release date, based on his good behavior in prison.

stoners will resolve the problems when they meet today.

City commissioners reluctantly tabled the agreement Monday night after City Attorney William Colbert said he had two major concerns with it.

Colbert said the county's unwillingness to delegate authority to amend the priority lists and other functions to the city-county board would give the Board of County Commissioners absolute authority and would leave cities with no default provision.

Colbert also said the county's stipulation that a previous court decision in favor of the cities be set aside if the agreement is signed is unacceptable.

Colbert also told commissioners that, in his opinion, the two issues need not be part of the agreement for it to be legal.

Longwood became the first city to go along with a controversial agreement Monday night when city commissioners voted unanimously approval.

However, City Administrator Gene DeMarie said the action may be "just a symbolic show of support for the concept because I don't see it going anywhere."

Mayor Dave Gunter said the 20-year agreement "would benefit us greatly. It would be a definite asset to have 4-laning of County Road 427 and in the future Lake Emma Road, Longwood Hills Road and E.E. Williamson Road. I feel comfortable with it."

DeMarie said, "Aside from the issue of city-county relationships, from a purely technical planning and managerial standpoint, it's a good document and I recommend approval. If I were in your shoes, I would take a chance."

Since March, the county has regularly met with representatives of the cities in an effort to reach an agreement to collect the fees in a way both the county and the cities can live with. County commissioners approved the agreement earlier this month.

One of the main sticking points, as pointed out by Colbert, is cities want guarantees county commissioners will agree to any changes in road projects the majority of a new city-county board approves.

The board is made up of one member from each of the seven cities and one member from the county, each with an equal vote. Under the agreement, if six of the eight members on the board and county commissioners agree to a change in project priorities, then the changes can be made.

But the proposed agreement does not offer the cities guarantees the changes will be made by commissioners, even if the three-fourths approval is made by the city-county board. The agreement sets the county's position clearly: "The county reserves its right to approve any activities affecting its road system."

County Attorney Nikki Clayton said current county commissioners can't legally commit future county commissioners to agreeing to any changes the city-county board wants. In effect, the county cannot turn control of county roads and county road dollars over to the cities.

One of the best ways to assure the county will agree to changes sought by the board is to have the agreement entered as a settlement, county officials have said. But the cities also don't want the county to seek to enter the agreement — if it is adopted by all seven cities — as a settlement in the case, replacing Lettler's decision.

The cities say if the agreement is entered as a settlement, they give up their victory of winning one over on the county — the county can't force them to do its bidding.

Michigan bans for-profit surrogacy

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — The American Civil Liberties Union vowed to challenge the nation's first law making surrogate parenting for profit a crime, but supporters of the Michigan statute say it will serve as a model for state legislatures around the country.

Gov. James J. Blanchard signed the bill into law Monday, calling it "a significant improvement over the uncertainty and confusion of existing state law."

"While (the bill) does not provide all the answers, it does provide important protections for children — my paramount concern — involved in surrogacy contracts," Blanchard said.

Under the law, all surrogate parenting contracts for profit will be void and unenforceable beginning Sept. 1, but people who have negotiated and signed contracts before that date will be exempt.

A couple could arrange to have a surrogate mother bear a child after Sept. 1, but they could not pay her for her services. Instead, the couple would be allowed to reimburse her for her medical expenses and other costs incidental to bearing a child, like maternity clothes, special foods and possibly even housing.

Michigan becomes the first state in the nation to make it a felony to arrange a contract and a misdemeanor to participate in one.

People arranging contracts — usually attorneys or physicians — could be charged with a felony and face a $50,000 fine or five years in jail. Couples or surrogate mothers participating in the agreement for profit could be charged with a misdemeanor and face one year in jail or a $10,000 fine.

Opponents of the legislation, who had urged the governor to veto the bill, vowed to challenge the law in the courts.

The ACLU's challenge likely will be based on the grounds that it is an invasion of privacy.

decision would be forthcoming but one could possibly be made within 90-180 days.

The commission then decided to table the annexation for 90 days and to discuss the matter again at that time.

The commission also tabled until the next meeting a first reading of annexation of property which lies between State Road 46 and the vacated Seaboard Coastline Railroad, facing Brusson Avenue, because of possible allegations from Seminole County that the annexation would create an enclave.

In other action, the commission:

- Granted conceptual approval of the Interlocal Agreement for sign control along Lake Mary Boulevard, pending city staff and city attorney endorsement.
- Granted an off-site sign variance to Florida Carpet, 2895 S. Orlando Drive, for one year.
- Granted a waiver of the required 25-foot setback ordinance for Hanson's Automotive Services, 185 W. Airport Blvd.

Try it you'll like it

Tesia Olszewski, age 1, isn't thrilled about the idea of a cookout as her mother, Media of Sanford, introduces her to a barbecued hot dog. Tesia pushes the meal away, but with motherly patience, Media continues to prod Tesia to just give it a try. The crying stopped once Tesia's taste buds caught the flavor and, in a happy end to this story, Tesia takes the hot dog as her own and becomes a fast frankfurter fan. The two, residents of Shenandoah Village apartments, were attending a management-sponsored cookout Saturday. Heavy rains moved participants inside but couldn't quench a good time.

DEAR LOVES COMPANY: You're not. Read this from my book "The Best of Dear Abby."

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from a 28-year-old mother of four who tacked a poster on her door with "rules" to keep visitors away.

Well, I'm a 38-year-old mother of six, and I'm amazed that anyone would want that much privacy. We're newcomers who live in the country, and I'm stuck out here with six kids, two dogs and three cats. I'm so hungry for company, I'm ready to go out on the road and flag down some strangers.

Please print my "poster" in the paper for all to read: —You may smoke inside, outside, on the roof or anywhere you wish. Just don't burn the house down.

—If you're hungry, help yourself to anything you can find. And if you can't find anything, ask one of the kids. They'll fix you a peanut butter and brown sugar sandwich.

Harley-Davidson logo big seller

By Arthur Frederick
MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)—Harley Davidson Motor Co. wasn't selling many motorcycles in 1983, but company executives credit the motorcycle maker's survival in those dark days to the sale of accessories — everything from Harley Davidson wallpaper to panties sporting the Harley logo.

Many modern Harley dealerships resemble boutiques more than they do motorcycle shops, with dealers selling clothes, underwear, household goods and baby furnishings, all with the popular Harley Davidson logo.

"It was a major factor in keeping us going during the dark times," said Frank Cimermanic, Harley's director of business planning. "When our volume was shrinking, the parts and our licensing efforts kept us in there."

Harley, in business since 1903 and the nation's only surviving motorcycle manufacturer, has been as much a cult as a purveyor of two-wheeled vehicles.

The Harley logos, basically unchanged through the years, are apt to turn up anywhere, from T-shirts to tattoos on the chests and derriers of dedicated Harley buffs.

By the early 1980s, Harley was going through some of the worst days in its history. The company's heavyweight motorcycles were under attack by similar-sized machines from Japan, and Harley rapidly was losing its market share.

The company teetered on the brink of bankruptcy, and sold fewer and fewer motorcycles. But the sales of Harley clothing and accessories never faltered for a moment.

The company found a continuing source of revenue in the parts and accessories that bear its name.

"We have helmets and leather jackets and lightweight jackets, accessories sold by Harley to its dealers," Cimermanic said. "We also have licensed product companies that make everything from Harley luggage to Harley T-shirts, Harley shorts and Harley denims."

"We provide them, at a charge, with a license to use the Harley logo and the Harley name on their products, and those products can also be sold through our dealerships."

The result is an amazing collection of goods, all sporting the Harley logo. There are Harley Davidson cigarettes, Harley Davidson condoms, and at one point there was even Harley Davidson beer, a joint venture with the Pabst brewing company.

Patty Rudkin, who along with her husband Barry operates Augusta North Country Harley-Davidson in Augusta, Maine, said the accessory business is what has made the dealership successful.

"We have bar stools, panties, leather goods, dog collars with spikes, men's and ladies' sweat shirts, leather pants, chaps and jackets," she said. "There are things for the children, like trucks and baby bibs and baby blankets. We have collapsible chairs, director's chairs, wrapping paper, pins and patches, lamps and clocks."

It may take a while to sell a $10,000 motorcycle, but the parts and accessories move out of the shop quickly, Rudkin said. And when someone does buy a Harley Davidson motorcycle, the visits to the dealership have just begun.

"The bike is only the beginning," Rudkin said. "Then you have to outfit yourself. I always tell them that it is only the beginning, that once you are hooked that addiction really grabs you."

Selling motorcycles is the main reason the Rudkins' dealership exists, but the accessories make the business go.

"That is the biggest part of our business, and without it we couldn't exist," Rudkin said. "The bikes alone won't do it, and service won't either. It is the accessories, the repetitive business every week."

Utility responsible for Diablo Canyon

By Chris Chrystal
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — State officials Monday hailed a landmark agreement making the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. fiscally responsible for the performance and durability of its Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant.

The tentative agreement between PG&E, the state Attorney General's office and the state Public Utilities Commission disallows about $2 billion in operating costs from PG&E customers to shareholders. It is subject to approval by the PUC after a series of public hearings.

"In the hard bargaining that led to this agreement," Attorney General John Van de Kamp said, "we have settled on terms that will result in a disallowance of more than $2 billion, far larger than any public utilities commission in the United States has ever disallowed."

Van de Kamp noted that the disallowance was five times greater than one last year for the San Onofre nuclear power plant near San Diego.

"This agreement shifts the risk of poor plant performance from the ratepayers to the utility," Van de Kamp said. "The shifting of risk is what we have fought so hard for and what makes this agreement so unique."

A spokesman for the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. said the utility was, in effect, giving Diablo Canyon a vote of confidence by agreeing to the potentially risky settlement.

"If the plant operates well, we'll get paid for it," Frank Thorsberg said. "If for any reason the plant does down, we don't get paid."

"I think the plant's performance speaks for itself," Thorsberg added. "It has a tremendous operating record."

Under performance-based pricing, PG&E will earn revenues based on a pre-established price for each kilowatt-hour of electricity produced at Diablo Canyon.

The new price will start at 7.8 cents per kilowatt-hour and will be adjusted annually based on an agreed-upon index. The agreement, if approved, will cover Diablo Unit 1 until May 6, 2015, and Unit 2 until March 12, 2016.

The price rate is tantamount to an aggregate 5 percent electric rate increase for customers, but PG&E shareholders will pay the price as well — their dividend will drop to about 35 cents from 48 cents per share.

The agreement also calls for an Independent Safety Committee consisting of three people, one each appointed by the governor, the attorney general and the chairman of the California Energy Commission.

Dena Johnson, right, co-owner of Dena's Pets, and Manager Mark Kentner.

Dena's Pets has moved to central location

Dena's Pets, formerly in the Seminole Centre, Sanford, moved to its new Five Points location at 1730 N. Highway 17-92 five weeks ago. Open seven days a week, Dena's is now located just south of the County Road 427 and State Road 419 intersection for the convenience of customers in Lake Mary, Longwood, Winter Springs and Oviedo, as well as Sanford.

Dena's Pets will match anyone's price. They have a variety of pets such as tropical birds and fish, mice, gerbils, hamsters, tarantulas, iguanas, pythons, boa constrictors, nine-week yorkie and cocker spaniel puppies. Dena's is also getting in Schnauzers, Pekingeses and Lhasa Apso pups.

As a get acquainted offer, for a limited time first time customers will get their choice of a free bag of bird seed or a free fish — a 99-cent value.

Watch Dena's Pets ad for weekly specials. She has all kinds of pet foods including Science Diet for dogs and cats and a full line of seeds.

If you've been thinking of starting an aquarium, now is the time to take the plunge and take advantage of Dena's dazzling specials. For only $16.99 you can buy an economy tank, filter and gravel — you just add the water and the fish and for $159 you can get a 55-gallon tank, hood, and custom-made pine wood stand. Speaking of our finny friends, Dena is offering a 50 percent off Sunday special on fish.

The fish area in the store is expanding with the addition of 400 gallons of new tanks. Most of the birds and fish are bred and hatched locally. Baby birds are handled especially for first time bird owners.

Dena's Pets is a full-service pet shop and grooming service. They are offering a bath, clip and blow dry for your pet (up to 25 pounds) for only $7.50. Phone 321-2957 for appointment. Walk-ins accepted up until noon. Wing clipping for birds is $4 and toe nail clipping for cats, small animals and birds is $3.50 to $4.

Dena Johnson started the business four years ago with the help of her parents, John and Margaret Johnson. Mark Kentner is manager. They believe in offering personalized service. They offer tank cleaning in your home or office and for their elderly or disabled customers unable to drive, they will pick up and deliver pets for grooming. They also carry merchandise to your car.

As part of their community involvement, Dena's will be offering a free dip for dogs with a donation to the Missing Children's Foundation. Dena also does volunteer work putting on educational seminars at local schools and nursing homes.

Dena's Pets is open Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. She is also on call nights and holidays in emergencies.

Sports posters sure winners

By William D. Murray
UPI Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — John Costacos likes to raise eyebrows. It begins with his 60's-length hair, jeans, shades and easy-going West Coast style and carries over to the offices of Costacos Brothers Inc., one of Seattle's fastest growing businesses.

Instead of being in one of the high-tech skyscrapers that dot Seattle's modern skyline, Costacos Brothers is located in a parking garage above a Budget Rental car franchise.

Costacos with his brother, Tock, have set the nation's nearly $20 million-a-year poster market on its ear with their MTV-style, personality shots of many of the country's hottest sports stars.

Since entering the market in 1986, the Costacos brothers have watched their company's sales soar to more than $4 million with even greater growth on the horizon.

"I had no idea this (this company's amazing growth) would happen," said Costacos, who handles the creative end of the business while brother, Tock, handles the financial side.

"My brother likes to tell the story of when he went for a job interview with a friend of the family, who happened to be a banker here in Seattle.

"The friend told my brother to try and find a business where he could be his own boss. He said we should start a company and see where the hole would finally open up. We got into this business and carefully moved along for the first few months, but then the hole opened and we found our spot."

Costacos said the company should sell close to 2 million posters this year with the average wholesale cost of $2.50 and the poster's store price at an average of $5.

The break the Costacos needed came when Kenny Easley, the All-Pro safety for the Seattle Seahawks, agreed to pose for a poster. In rapid-fire succession, the Costacos signed Los Angeles Raiders defensive back Lester Hayes and then Chicago's Jim McMahon.

"We didn't have a license with the NFL, so we couldn't put out game action shots," Costacos said. "We decided to do personality posters. With McMahon, we dressed him up like a Road Warrior and called it Mad Mac. The poster sales were amazing."

McMahon's poster struck a chord in the marketplace and sales soared. In just one week, 10,000 copies were sold.

Unfortunately, the brothers had not planned for such immediate success.

Working out of their West Seattle home, they were forced to store cartons of the McMahon poster on the front lawn and have friends come over and package orders in the front room.

"I sat on the phone in the kitchen from seven in the morning until seven at the night taking orders," Costacos said. "At the same time my brother was frantically trying to set up a warehouse and an office."

The brothers followed that success by landing a contract to do a poster last season with Seattle linebacker Brian Bosworth, whose stellar on-field play and off-beat lifestyle moved him quickly from All-America to national personality.

The Land of Hoop poster — featuring Bosworth in an Oz-like setting surrounded by youngsters dressed as Hoopkins — sold more than 20,000 copies its first two days on the market. Since that time more than 400,000 posters have been sold.

"Controversy sales," Costacos said. The McMahon and Bosworth posters are by far our best sellers."

The uniqueness of the Costacos' posters have landed them the likes of Joe Montana, Lawrence Taylor, Howie Long, Charles Barkley, Michael Jordan, Karl Malone, James Worthy, Eric Davis and Roger Clemens. In all, they plan on having 52 posters on the market this year.

The lure for the athlete to do a poster is not profits, but a chance to do something enjoyable. A sports industry source said an endorsement deal such as a poster usually lands an athlete 12.4 percent of the wholesale price. If a poster sells 100,000 posters that means he would come home with $31,250.

"Athletes do it for the fun, not the money. No one is going to get rich off what they make on a poster," Costacos said. "The hard part is not getting them to pose, but to find a concept."

For example, Montana, He's not known as a rowdy quarterback or for just one part of his game. When you ask people about Montana, they just say he's great. So we came up with the idea of him standing on a hill with the Golden Gate in the background and calling it Golden Great."

The method to Costacos' play-on-words madness is straight from Madison Avenue. He does not come up with the ideas while sitting at his desk. Instead, like an advertising guru, his ideas come to him while he's lying in bed or driving his car.

"We look at everything about an athlete — his habits, what the public's image of him is," he said. "Then we try to come up with a concept. But to be truthful, many of the best ideas come to me when I'm not in the office."

Once the concept has been drawn up, one of the brothers and a crew head to a site to shoot the poster. Most of their work is done in June and July because of the weather and the player's availability.

In Oakland recently, the brothers shot an upcoming poster of Oakland Athletics slugger Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco. The pair were dressed in outfits similar to the Blues Brothers with the theme being "The Bash Brothers."

The shoot cost $5,000 to stage with 60 photos being taken of the two players who were accompanied by four youngsters wearing "Jr. Bash Brother" T-shirts. The $5,000 price is the average, Costacos said, with the most expensive shoot being the Bosworth poster which cost $14,000.

However, not all the shoots come off without major problems. Costacos returned to Seattle on June 23 after a shoot of Cleveland Browns defensive back Gerald "Ice Cube" McNeil had to be called off because the ice house where the poster was to be shot ran out of ice thanks to the midwestern heat wave.

In San Francisco, a June 25 shoot of a Ronnie Lott poster "Designated Hitter" had to be cleared with police since it was to be shot in an alleyway.

"It's still all worth it," Costacos said of the problems. "I love raising eyebrows and this gives me a perfect way to do it."

The Costacos brothers have recently reentered the T-shirt market and have a top-seller in their "Real Men Wear Black" shirt.

Four killed in ambushes

HOUSTON (UPI) — Four people who broke away from a violent polygamist sect were killed almost simultaneously in a series of carefully calculated ambushes in Houston and the Dallas suburb of Irving, police said.

All of the victims had broken away from the followers of the late Ervil LeBaron, the head of the violent Mormon polygamist sect known as the Church of the Lamb of God. Two of the men who were killed were once charged along with LeBaron in the murder of a rival polygamist leader.

One of Monday's victims, Mark Chynoweth, told the Houston Chronicle recently that anyone who broke from the group was on a hit list and that he was at its top.

Police spokesman Dan Turner told the Houston Post that at least 12 Chynoweth family members were cooperating with police out of fear that they, too, might be killed.

"They're in fear of their lives," Turner said.

Authorities have linked at least 12 homicides to the feud that developed when the core of the LeBaron family moved to Sonora, Mexico, the Post said.

Chynoweth's body was discovered about 4 p.m. at Reliance Appliances in Houston, where he worked, Turner said.

His niece, Jenny, 10, and brother, Duane, 31, were lured to a vacant house, where they were told to deliver a washing machine, and were killed there about 10 minutes after Mark Chynoweth's body was found, said Turner.

"Witnesses said they saw the driver of the suspect's vehicle get out of his truck and talk with the appliance delivery man. There was a brief conversation and that man was shot several times in the head by the suspect," Turner said. "Then the suspect shot the girl in the head."

The fourth victim, Ed Marston, 32, of Irving, a Dallas suburb, was ambushed at a vacant house in Irving where he had been told he could pick up some appliances about 4 p.m., said Irving police investigator Charles Cheek.

Marston was shot twice in the chest and died two hours later, said the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Marston and Mark Chynoweth were charged, along with LeBaron and four other suspects, with murdering rival polygamist leader Rulon Alford in 1977.

Marston and Chynoweth were acquitted, but LeBaron was found guilty. He died in the Utah State Prison in 1981 while serving a life sentence.

"I can't say for sure, but they're related," Cheek said of the four slayings on Monday. "But hell, I've never been to Milwaukee, but I'm sure it's there."

Houston police were not sure if the two assaults seen fleeing from the shootings of the girl and her father also killed Mark Chynoweth, but the slayings took place about 10 minutes apart and within 10 miles of each other, Turner said.

Dangers ahead when parents abuse drugs

Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A few years ago my son married a girl who smokes pot. This bothered me, but I never said anything until I became a grandfather. But now, I see her filthy house, she sleeps or watches TV during the day, ignoring the babies, cries for no reason and smokes in front of the kids. My wife thinks I should stay out of it, my son tells me pot never hurt anyone, my daughter-in-law gets mad, and, meanwhile, the children suffer. What should I do?

DEAR READER: You raise several important issues pertaining to interpersonal relations. Let's first take care of the medical aspects. Marijuana is harmful. It is a mind-altering drug that causes changes in perception, defects in judgment, deterioration of motor skills and addiction in susceptible individuals. Although the occasional use of pot is not medically hazardous, chronic use can lead to a permanent state of poor motivation, irresponsibility, unconcern with personal appearance and preoccupation with maintaining drug sources. It would seem that your daughter-in-law is exhibiting some of this behavior.

I think it's important for you to realize that you have no control over your son and his wife. As much as you may disagree with their lifestyle, they are making choices and will have to accept responsibility for those choices. Therefore, any comments you make about their behavior is likely to be construed as parental interference rather than constructive criticism. Your wife is correct. Stay out of it.

Nonetheless, I share your concern about the welfare of your grandchildren. If, in truth, they are being mistreated, your son must be told. Should he refuse to act, I believe you have an obligation to notify the children's probation officer, as a last resort, the proper child welfare authorities. Lots of kids are left to cry, unwashed and unsupervised, this does not necessarily constitute child abuse. However, if your grandchildren really are suffering, someone should intervene.

In all of your dealings with the young family, emphasize your concern about the children; avoid appearing judgmental about the adults' behavior, no matter how much it galls you. By keeping the focus on the children, you may be able to improve the situation at home without alienating your son and daughter-in-law.

To give you more general information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report, "Help II: Mental Health and Substance Abuse," which lists self-help groups and information or referral sources.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Here is a tip from George Rosenkrantz, author of "Tips for Tops." If you are defending and know how to beat the contract, take charge and stop partner, in the clearest way possible, from making an error.

In today's deal, you are West and lead your singleton ace of hearts against four spades. On this card your partner plays the deuce, a discouraging card, but perhaps a card suggesting that your side's source of tricks may be in the club suit. So you switch now to the three of clubs. That play is a success. Declarer plays low from dummy, and East wins the club jack. He next plays the club ace. Is there something for you to do now? If left to his own devices, partner will quite possibly try to cash another club trick for your side. Maybe that will work. But there is certainly a possibility that declarer will ruff a third club, and you yourself know for certain that you can beat the contract absolutely if partner will right now play back a heart for you to ruff.

To wake up your partner to the necessity of returning a heart, you should play the king of clubs under his ace. This play should be a clear signal that your opening lead was indeed a singleton, and partner should now return a heart without fail to set the contract.

James Jacoby's books, "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books. ©1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 29, 1988

Select your associates wisely in the year ahead because they could either make or break you. Constructive alliances will enormously enhance your chances for success.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be very thoughtful regarding the way you deal with companions today. A few wrong moves or careless comments could swiftly shatter the existing harmony. Cancers, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your AstroGraph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1 to AstroGraph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Pace yourself wisely today and don't attempt to do more than you can handle. When the whistle blows, pack up your tool kit and take off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you're a gregarious person who enjoys the company of others. However, if you feel more like being a loner today, don't force yourself to mingle.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can't be too heavily handed at home - family members won't respond pleasantly to your behavior. Why provoke discord?

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Forego trying to impose your views on an unsympathetic listener today. This person is slow to anger, but such an intrusion could really get him/her steamed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is not the best day to discuss financial matters with your mate. Each party is apt to feel the other is wasting too much money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Agreements you try to make today could be rather tough to negotiate. Those involved are not likely to find the terms satisfactory, nor will anyone be willing to make concessions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Use your common sense regarding health matters today. If you know there's something you shouldn't be eating, drinking or doing, pass it up.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A misunderstanding may arise between you and a valued friend today. The problem could be magnified beyond its significance if it becomes a clash of wills.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Without wanting to be you might find yourself the center of attention today. Others will be looking for things to admire.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today a debate may merely be an exchange of ideas and a learning experience, but the person you take on might see it differently and respond in a serious fashion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It is hardly the time to take on new financial obligations if old ones are still hanging fire. Be careful how you overburden your budget.
