BRIEFS

Shooting suspect arrested

SANFORD — Investigators from the Seminole County Sheriff's Department arrested David Kemmler, 52, of 5270 Michigan Avenue on Friday. Kemmler is accused of shooting 63 year old Clarence Thompson once in the chest and once in the arm, on Wednesday, Dec. 21 at Thompson's house in the 2700 block of Celery Avenue.

According to Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, Kemmler apparently walked into Thompson's home and found his wife with Thompson. He reportedly struck his wife in the head with a handgun, then shot Thompson.

McDonough said during the fight, Kemmler accidentally shot himself in the finger. Deputies arrested him as he was leaving Central Florida Regional Hospital Friday afternoon, where he had apparently gone for treatment.

Kemmler has been charged with aggravated battery, armed burglary, aggravated stalking, and battery.

Are kids what they eat?

Good nutrition begins at home

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — If you are what you eat, then most kids are probably french fries and cookies, according to an informal survey by the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

The agriculture department said students prepare most of their own meals by age 12 and those meals are not full of fresh fruits and vegetables.

According to Bob Crawford, the state's agriculture commissioner, the survey highlights the need to teach good eating habits in school and to acquaint students with nutritious food choices through the school lunch program.

Dan Andrews, director of the food services department for the Seminole County public schools, said that for the last five years, nutrition is taught in the classrooms starting in kindergarten and nutritious lunches are offered through the lunch program.

But that doesn't translate into youngsters choosing the healthiest meals and snacks when it comes time to eat.

"We can't force them to eat anything," Andrews said. "Kids, and adults, are going to eat what tastes good, not necessarily what is good for them."

Crawford said the youngsters of the state need to have more information about good nutrition in order to make appropriate decisions at meal time and snack time.

"Good nutrition is essential to good health and academic performance, but our children are not getting enough of the fruits and vegetables they need to feel good now and prevent serious health problems later in life," Crawford said. "With children assuming responsibility for so much of their own nutrition it's essential that we influence their food choices. Our schools provide a wonderful opportunity to guide children toward good eating habits."

Andrews said the youngsters' eating habits are not so much a reflection of the things they learn in school as they are a commentary on society in general.

Fire fund established for burned-out family

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — A fund has been set up to help a Lake Mary family devastated by a fire which destroyed their home. During the blaze last Thursday, the family dog was killed, and the home and all its contents were burned.

Robin Gill of Sanford, through Sanford attorney James A. Barks, has opened the McGowen Fund at SunBank. Any Central Florida SunBank will accept deposits to the fund, account number 0538 000182818.

According to Gill, "Damage to the house, located at 236 Abbott Ave., Lake Mary, is unbelievable. What wasn't damaged by fire was damaged by smoke and water.

Gill said any donations to the fund will be greatly appreciated, as this family has lost most of their possessions, and will have a difficult time getting reestablished once again.

The McGowens, John, 29, and Wanda, 26, have three children, Jonathan, 6, Joseph, 4, and 7-month-old Jason.

According to Lake Mary Fire Marshal Lyn Right, the fire apparently started when a large extension cord apparently shorted out in the laundry room of the home, igniting a pile of clothing nearby. The family dog, a Chow, was

Bargain hunters' paradise

They'll shop 'til they drop today

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — Although major stores say Christmas shopping was higher in 1994 than in previous years, the storm of shoppers isn't about to let up.

Being the first working day after the Christmas holiday, many retail stores are launching into post-holiday sales today. Items obtained for the holiday shopping which are still on hand are being offered for reduced prices.

Some have referred to the week after Christmas as the "bargain hunters' paradise."

Stores were packed this morning, with many reporting lines of customers waiting when the doors first opened, to get first-pick of the sale items.

Aero Modelers finalize plans for Sanford facility

By SHARI BRODIE
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Longtime residents of Sanford can recall the days when the naval air station was in its heyday and the sound of jet engines was quite a common thing.

The recent air show called up a bit of nostalgia for those days and for past air shows when excitement is peaked as the Thunderbirds or the Blue Angels practice their routines above area homes and businesses.

Lee Dargue, president of the Sanford Aero Modelers, feels Sanford has a tradition as a center for aviation activity. Starting with the naval air station, Sanford's relationship with the wild blue yonder has continued to grow, with the development of a modern regional airport that has potential to grow into a larger national destination and with the establishment of a flight training academy.

Dargue is working hard to make another addition to the area though on a somewhat "smaller" scale.

Plans have been finalized, permits have been issued and work is proceeding on a model flight facility, located at Site 10 of the city of Sanford's reclaimed water discharge area on State Road 46, about eight miles east of Sanford.

The Sanford Aero Modelers (SAM), established in 1977, has

Burn victim home for Christmas visit

TAMPA — There were stockings hanging by the fire place and gifts piled under the tree. But for David Green, just being with his family on Christmas was the best present he could have hoped for.

"There are no words to describe how I feel," said Green, 38. "I'm home."

In August, Green suffered burns over nearly 90 percent of his body in an industrial accident. He wasn't expected to survive. But Saturday afternoon, he came home from the hospital by ambulance for a three-day stay with his wife, Sharon, and five children ages 3 to 16. He was scheduled to return to the hospital today.

Green and Samuel Suarez were working on a circuit breaker Aug. 16 at the Tampa Bay Center when an electrical short carrying 13,000 volts shot a white-hot flash through the room. Suarez, 32, died Aug. 21 from burns and internal injuries.

United Nations flag lowered at city

GAINESVILLE — The city of Gainesville has replaced the United Nations flag flying over city hall with a POW/MIA flag in a show of support for Bobby Hall, the U.S. helicopter pilot downed over North Korea.

Interim City Manager Karen Johnson made the decision Friday to remove the U.N. flag after threats from people opposed to the U.N. escalated into tampering and the possible endangerment of city employees.

Johnson said someone loosened the flagpole rope so that the flags — including the U.S. and Florida banners — fell into some trees. An employee who went to hoist them was then verbally abused.

Meanwhile, a city employee walking to lunch saw several people hanging around the flagpole.

"They seemed to be almost stalking the flagpole," Johnson said. "Our choices are either to have an incredible waste of taxpayers' resources and post a police officer there or possibly risk injury to an employee or innocent citizen. Neither of those are worth it."

Hall, of Brooksville, remained jailed in North Korea on Sunday while negotiators worked for his release.

Defective gene identified

GAINESVILLE — A defective gene may explain why some black people suffer from an atypical form of diabetes, according to University of Florida researchers examining the possible connection.

Dr. Dorlinda Varga House, a fellow in pediatric endocrinology, and Dr. William E. Winter, associate professor of pathology and pediatrics at UF's College of Medicine, believe the glucokinase gene might be defective in African Americans with the recently identified third form of diabetes.

House and Winter are now initiating new studies of the disease in African Americans who developed diabetes before age of 40 and have a family history of the illness. Volunteers are being sought to participate in the UF study, supported by a new $35,500 National Research Service Award from the National Institutes of Health.

House said the UF study will focus on the glucokinase gene, which is involved in detecting the elevation in blood sugar levels that occurs after eating.

Teens attempt suicide in refugee camp

GUANTANAMO BAY — Two Cuban teen-age refugees held at the U.S. naval base here attempted to commit suicide by hanging themselves, base officials said.

A 19-year-old man at Camp 6 was treated and released from a base hospital late Friday night. About two hours later, a 17-year-old male in Camp Tango was found attempting to hang himself. He also was treated and released, according to a base statement released Saturday.

"I imagine that leading up to the holidays, they may feel a bit more lonely, thinking about families and so forth," Air Force Master Sgt. Jerry Hawkins said Saturday, noting there has been past suicide attempts.

Also Saturday, a 28-year-old Cuban held in Camp Echo received third-degree burns on his right hand and thigh while melting the plastic Meals Ready to Eat wrappers. He was to be transported to the United States for additional care.

The refugees often melt the thick bags to make figurines, jewelry or sculptures, Hawkins said.

"They trade them and they give them away and the kids play with them and so forth. Some of them are used as like works of art," he said. "They have a couple of art galleries at some of the camps they have set up."

FBI sting backfires Medicare trap puts fake cards into use

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — FBI agents thought they were setting a trap when they bought copies of 35 Medicare cards and sold them to a suspected fraud operation.

Now the cards are being used to buy expensive leg braces and other medical equipment — and the FBI cannot track them.

"The FBI lost control of the cards. Now they have a monster on their hands," a government investigator familiar with the case told a Miami newspaper for a story in Sunday's issues.

Medicare says it can't cancel the copied cards, which have been in circulation 16 months, because that would wipe out the legitimate federal benefits to the people whose names are on those cards.

"Your Medicare number is the same as your Social Security number," said Faye Baggiano, associate administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration in Washington. "And Social Security numbers are insured for life."

Medicare routinely provides phony numbers that can be canceled without any consequences once an investigation is complete. It isn't known why the FBI insisted on using the real names and authentic Medicare numbers of people.

"Investigative techniques are sometimes limited to opportunities that present themselves at the time," George H. Clow III, chief agent in the FBI's South Florida office said in an attempt to explain. "It is not a perfect world."

The Herald said it examined the Medicare records for 10 people whose numbers were sold.

Twenty-three clinics and companies billed Medicare a total of $163,745 for services that the real card holders say they never got or tried to get.

One of the 10, Esther Machado, has nothing wrong with her legs, but Medicare paid a claim in her name for $3,205 for leg braces.

Maria and Rogelio Rodriguez have lungs that work fine, but someone using fake cards with their names and Medicare numbers was paid $5,484 for his-and-her oxygen equipment.

Maria Gutierrez has no problem chewing and swallowing, but one of the cards the FBI sold was used to get paid $2,555 for a six-month supply of feeding tubes and liquid formula.

"How can they let this happen to people they are supposed to protect?" asked Gutierrez, 76. "I had to play cop with the clinics myself, making calls to them and complaining to Medicare. I'm sure the FBI has very caring people, but in this situation they acted incompetently."

The FBI and Medicare are still investigating. The Herald said, but there have been no arrests.

HOLDERS OF 3 TICKETS WILL SPLIT $47 MILLION

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's $47 million Lotto jackpot will be divided among the owners of three lucky tickets, officials announced.

The three winning tickets in Saturday night's drawing were purchased in Clearwater, Lake Worth and Orlando. Each is worth more than $15 million. Lottery Secretary Marcia Mann said Sunday in a release.

The numbers drawn Saturday night were 6-10-12-34-38-48. Lottery computers revealed the cities where the winners were drawn, but which stores sold the tickets won't be known until the holders show up to claim their prizes.

The grand prize had been growing since Dec. 3. It was boosted by the Lottery's annual Happy Lotterdays promotion, which guarantees jackpots of at least $10 million each week in December.

On Saturday, Lotto tickets sold at the rate of more than $24,366 per minute. Some players were disappointed when the lottery's 8,700 computers went down because of a telecommunications problem; they were out of service for as long as an hour and 20 minutes in some places.

But after repairs sales returned to their brisk pace.

"It's just astounding," Mann said. "In seven years we just don't have anything comparable."

In 1990, however, tickets for a $106 million jackpot went at the record rate of about $40,000 per minute, lottery spokesman Ed George said Saturday.

There were other winners Saturday.

The 648 people who matched five of the six numbers can collect $1,544. Another 37,940 tickets with four of the numbers can be redeemed for $43.50.

And the 727,570 tickets with half the numbers drawn late Saturday are worth $4.50.

The New Year's Eve jackpot is guaranteed to be at least $10 million.

MOTOR-VOTER LAW GOES INTO EFFECT ON JAN. 1

By The Associated Press

Florida residents now won't have to take the initiative to register to vote.

Under a plan set to begin Jan. 1, residents automatically will be registered when they sign up for a driver's license, food stamps or even a library card — unless they refuse.

"You are going to have to say, no, you don't want to do it," said Sam Chavers, assistant general counsel for the Florida Division of Elections. "This is no longer going to be a passive system where you have a stack of forms on a counter."

Under the new in-your-face approach, the information collected at driver license offices will be simultaneously fed to a voter registration form. That automatically will register willing U.S. citizens.

The registration should take less than a minute and should not cause backups in already jammed offices, say officials of the Florida Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles.

"We have most of the information already," said Kathy Cruce, a supervisor with the department. "All they have to do is say 'yes' or 'no' whether they are a U.S. citizen and 'yes' on residency and we can register them to vote."

With the new system, a license examiner will ask applicants their political party preference. But there is no ceremonial swearing-in. Now voters will merely sign a statement they are legally eligible to vote. Falsely declaring citizenship on the form is punishable by up to five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

The changes came from Congress, which passed the National Voter Registration Act in 1993. It is called the "motor-voter" act because it shifts the emphasis on voter registration from election offices to driver license stations.

The act requires all states to conduct federal elections under the new rules. The Florida Legislature this year passed legislation bringing all elections — federal, state and local — under the same rules. The state is spending $1.1 million on printers and new registration forms.

Thirty-one states have adopted motor-voter rules.

A man's bike and TV set with a total value of $175 were reportedly stolen Thursday from a residence in the 600 block of Mellonville Avenue.

Two girls' bikes valued at $219.90 were reportedly stolen from a delivery truck Thursday, while it was at Castle Brewer Court.

An estimated $505 in power tools were reportedly stolen Thursday from a shed in the 500 block of Plumosa Drive.

Christmas gifts and cash with a total value of $500 were reported missing Thursday from a vehicle parked in the 200 block of Yale Avenue.

A burglary was reported at a storage trailer Thursday, at the construction site of First Baptist Church in Sanford. An estimated $2,320 in items were reportedly taken.

Citizens use cellular phones to fight crime

By KAREN TESTA
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Richard Strachan spied a man carrying a rock on a highway overpass and knew the man planned to smash a window. Instinctively Strachan reached into his car for his weapon: a cellular phone.

"I spoke his language. I said, 'Don't you do that... I'm going to call the police,'" Strachan says. "And he saw me pick up the phone, so he took off running."

A member of the Dade County Neighborhood Cellular Watch Project, Strachan is one of more than 30 other citizens who have been trained by police and other county agencies on how to prevent crimes and improve the quality of life in their neighborhoods.

Just pick up a cell phone, and help is on the way.

Though sometimes, just reaching for the phone is enough.

"The potential of these phones is tremendous," says Metro-Dade Police Lt. Gerald Rudoff. "It could be a greater weapon than a gun."

"If a bad guy is intent on committing a crime and they see a person with a cellular, right away they ask themselves, 'Is this person involved with the program?'" Rudoff says.

Cellular One of Florida donated 50 cellular phones and 200 minutes per phone per month for the pilot project, which organizers hope will become a national model.

While wireless technology has long been used to combat crime, this is the first program that puts cell phones in the hands of the residents, says Tarleton Jones, spokeswoman for Palm Beach-based Cellular One.

Other programs have provided cellular phones to police officers, and residents were given the number to call them directly. That, however, caused problems trying to document the incidents because they weren't filtered through a dispatcher, Rudoff says.

In the latest program, officials will test the effectiveness of cellular crime watchers in 11 high-crime neighborhoods of unincorporated Dade County.

The cellular crime watchers were picked because they are active members in the community and already belonged to a Crime Watch neighborhood, Rudoff says. Their job, though, is not only to focus on crime.

"It's also for people to get involved in those quality of life issues" such as poverty, hunger and sanitation, he says.

Each operator was given training on when and where to call for specific issues. A log of the calls is kept by the phone's operator, and it is compared to a recorded printout through the phone company.

Neighborhoods must learn not every circumstance warrants a call to 911, Rudoff said.

But some do. One crime watcher spotted a person who wanted to jump off a bridge. The watcher immediately summoned police.

"As a result, the person did not injure himself," Rudoff says.

The program is being evaluated by Florida International University for its effectiveness and impact on the neighborhoods.

Graduate student Steve Ellison has distributed about 450 written interviews on quality-of-life issues to participating neighborhoods and will repeat the surveys at the end of the 12 months and compare the results.

He also has interviewed some of the operators.

"So far everybody thinks it's a great program, but I need to see how it will continue or whether it will continue," he says.

Merle Hall, executive director of the Dade County Crime Watch, says the cellular program provides a unique way for residents to help themselves.

"I believe in people being resourceful and not waiting for government or an agency to have to help," she says. "If you empower yourself, you can move mountains, so to speak."

One key to the program's success, however, is for the operators to be inconspicuous.

"We aren't standing out front, we're doing it very discreetly," says Strachan, 59, a former Dade County school administrator. "We have not been harassed or jumped on."

While Strachan says he goes out to speak to the residents of Liberty City, a poor inner-city neighborhood, other operators stay more behind-the-scenes.

"I don't go around telling everybody," says Joe Johnson, 38.

Johnson, a security guard at a meat market, says some of his neighbors know he is involved in the program and give him tips. One woman called recently and said she had seen syringes in an area where children play.

Johnson called police, and the needles were removed.

Johnson says his neighborhood also has seen a decrease in trespassers and drug dealers since the cellular project began.

"Now they are aware we have a citizens crime watch," he says. "And now they're a little bit hesitant to come out and create any problems for us because they know we will notify the police."

Observing Boxing Day

Today is Boxing Day. We don't officially observe this as a holiday in the United States, but at least, let's give it some thought.

Boxing day is observed on the first regular working day after Christmas. It is a legal holiday in Canada, most of the United Kingdom, and many other countries.

It started as a day on which Christmas gift boxes were given to lamplighters, dustmen, and eventually postmen, generally, to all those functionaries who render services to the public at large without receiving payment directly from the individuals they serve.

Our point here is to suggest that we continue to honor these working people. We may not have lamplighters as such, but we have people who work at our power plants and handle emergency calls even on holidays.

We don't have dustmen, but there are people who pick up trash, even in neighborhoods other than their own, simply because they believe it's the thing to do.

We DO have postal carriers. Think, if you will, how hard their work has been for the past four to six weeks. They have handled millions of Christmas cards and helped route, sort, and deliver tons and tons of gifts. If they are pleased that the holiday is over, who could blame them. They actually are referring to the end of the annual heavy work season.

Who else? How about the law enforcement officers, fire fighters, business persons, convenience store clerks, gas station operators. There are thousands and thousands of people who worked on Christmas day. Some did it for profit, while others did it because it's their job.

We are not suggesting giving the postman a gift today (although there wouldn't be any objections). We are, however, suggesting that they, as well as all others with whom we come in contact, who had to work rather than be home with their families on the holiday, be given an extra show of appreciation today.

It's Boxing Day. We don't have to declare it a holiday, but at least let's observe its intent.

The need for spiritual regeneration

Dr. James (Jim) Henry, pastor of First Baptist Church Orlando and president of the Southern Baptist Convention which is comprised of 38,000 churches and 15 1/2 million members conversed with me relative to the message of Christmas.

Dr. Henry affirmed that there is a positive Christmas message for Americans. He believes that God has provided us with a window of opportunity and we need to respond. We have drifted away from bedrock Christian values. The Christ child came to bring us good news and the message has not changed. Today, we are not faced with oppressive Roman rule and may freely elect to serve God.

This is a time of great hope if we will keep the first and second commandments. The chief culprits in man's struggle to accept the message of Christmas are America's fascination with materialism and the greed that ensues.

We are the richest industrialized nation in the world yet the way in which we relate to each other reflects a real void in our lives. The cruelty that abounds in our society through wanton criminal acts and abuse of women and children are all symptomatic of the vacuum in our lives individually and collectively. People are constantly searching and have tried almost everything the secular world has to offer and have found no satisfaction. There is a pervasive feeling in their lives that something is missing. Our nation has been and is suffering from a lack of moral principles. We have failed to observe the Ten Commandments. We have not prioritized our lives to help ourselves and others. Instead there appears to be a lack of concern for others and little respect for authority.

Millions of Americans are mired in poverty, lack of health care and are recipients of welfare. These human needs must be addressed through cooperative planning involving church leaders, governmental leaders and leaders of the private sector. Jobs that pay wages commensurate with what is needed to support one's family must be available.

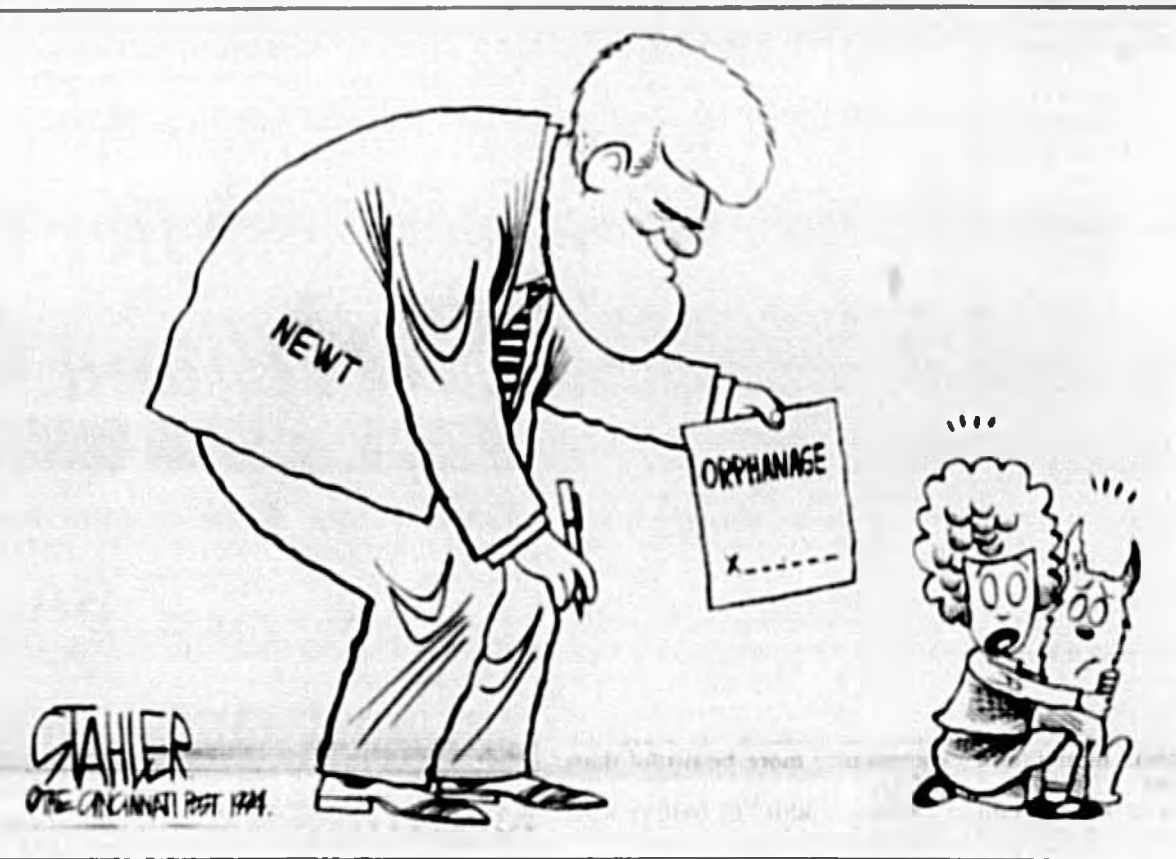

Relative to the possibility that welfare reform will place infants in orphanages, Dr. Henry felt that placement would depend upon parental circumstances. The Baptists have children's homes that effectively help children. Children whose parents are addicted to drugs and who are abused may find refuge against the turmoil in their lives in well run homes where their physical safety and emotional stability are assured.

The answers to the challenges facing our beloved nation as we prepare for the new year are the same answers provided with the birth of the Christ child. Jesus' birth made hope and love paramount.

Dr. Henry believes that the recent elections were a clarion call for the return to Christian values that will help to create the type of societal changes that are needed.

Dr. Henry is encouraged by the fact that many non-Christians have abandoned their search for answers in the secular realm and have returned to church. There are young mothers who are willing to remain at home with their young children and sacrifice material possessions for time with their children, which they deem more important. Hosts of godly men are reaffirming their commitment to their wives, their children and their church. These changes multiplied over time will provide a spiritual regeneration and a cultural rebirth essential for our nation.

Giving up on sex, for now

WASHINGTON — Mention sex to one woman I know and this is her first — and, she swears, her most honest — reaction:

"Yuck. Sex is disgusting. I have no one in my life I want to do it with. Whenever I do it, I ask, 'Why did I do that?' There's too much in it emotionally, from a woman's perspective, just to do it. ... It's nasty."

My friend, who is single and cute, is only 25. She isn't especially religious. She loves men. Hardly a prude, she admits to having slept with "way too many" guys. She is not what they once called "frigid" — in fact, she says, she "often has multiple orgasms."

So why is she speaking such heresy? According to movies, theater, books and most every other phase of pop culture, everybody and her Aunt Hilda is falling into bed as easily as leaves from autumn trees. Having fun, no harm done.

My friend says that's a sham, and she's sick of it. She's had it with the pretense that sex, for women anyway, is simple. Just something to do.

Now I, for one, have thought for years that America's latest company line on sex — that if it feels good, do it, as long as you wear a condom — was bull. I've said as much to every young girl — and boy — who'll listen.

But why should they listen to me? I'm married, settled, a mom. Maybe I'm as out of step as I feel when I read the exploding statistics on teenage motherhood or cringe at explicit lyrics on the radio.

So I asked a genuine, "Generation X" homegirl, one of my many former babysitters, her feelings about this most charged of human interactions.

For starters, how would she advise young girls?

"What would I tell a 16-year-old virgin about sex?" she asked. "I'd tell her, 'Just say no.' I'd say, 'It doesn't even feel that good' — that even when you're sexually satisfied, you can be unsatisfied on an emotional level, which ruins it."

But if the girl's mind was made up, she said, "I'd say, 'Be sure it's what you want. Be sure always to protect yourself.' But because there's no 100 percent birth control, I'd say that today 'No' could be the difference between life and death."

OK. So how does a hip, young '90s woman get to a place where sex becomes "yuck"? And if she's that negative about it, why has she kept doing it?

She almost smiled. "Because I think, 'This one time, it might be satisfying,'" she said. "The last couple of times I've had sex, I guess I was hoping I'd feel something I hadn't felt. ... The guys are happy, but I'm not. I look for the emotional. I want to be held, and kissed, and talked to. Guys just don't want to do that."

Most men, she said, have no idea of women's real feelings about sex.

"I was talking to two male friends about this. They were asking, 'Why do women fake orgasms?' I said, 'Me. I fake them to get it over with.' They were like, 'That's awful!' And I asked, 'Would it be better to say, 'This is terrible ... so just stop?' A lot of women fake. Men just don't know."

So what, I asked, is her bottom line?

"I want a monogamous, serious relationship that's mutually satisfying. That's all. That's what most women want, no matter how much they're pretending to be liberated."

What she wants, she says, is love. But she has been in love. I reminded her and ended up getting hurt then, too.

But with love, she says, "at least you're starting in the right place. You ... have something to build on. Plus, when it ended, I didn't wish I could take (the sex) back."

Many women today, she says, are acting on what they think they should feel, not what they do feel.

"I've thought, 'This is what I'm supposed to want.' There's this idea that sex is uncomplicated — but it's one of the most complicated things you can do. It requires every part of you. It's too intimate an act to be simple."

"In sex, I'm giving a man the most precious thing I have. I'm letting him inside of me. And I've had experiences where guys act as ... if nothing happened. And you feel dirty."

So much disillusionment, so young. My friend may not speak for all young women, or even most. But enough must feel what she expresses for somebody to listen.

She's listening, anyway — to her own reasoning, which says that for now, sex isn't for her. "I've given up on sex," she says. "All of the things that could happen — pregnancy, AIDS, staring at the ceiling one more time and asking, 'Why did I do that?' "It's just not worth it."

Yuck. Sex is disgusting. I have no one in my life I want to do it with.

Orphanage idea inspires fear

WASHINGTON — Recent comments by House Speaker-elect Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., about re-opening orphanages for children of broken homes are apparently hitting home this Christmas season.

Based on phone calls to the office of Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., there is evidence that Gingrich's facile rhetoric struck fear among an often voiceless constituency — children. Consider these notes of phone messages taken recently by McDermott staffers from mothers on public assistance:

— "Daughter did not want to go to school. Afraid that teacher would put her in an orphanage."

— "My kindergarten son was watching Hillary Clinton on TV (responding to Gingrich). He did not want to go to school because he was afraid that when he came home his mother would be gone and he would be sent to an orphanage."

— "Daughter was told by classmates that her mother would be thrown in jail."

McDermott, who was a child psychiatrist before entering politics, may be the only member of the House who has ever testified as an expert court witness on child deprivation cases, treated young abuse victims or had to recommend that children be removed from dangerous living environments. Having seen the problems of abused and exploited children firsthand, he agrees with Gingrich that children must, as a last resort, be protected from unfit parents even if it means separating mother and child.

Gingrich, however, offers up an absurdly false choice between orphanages and "dumpsters" for unwanted kids, referring to publicized cases of infants who are dumped by parents. Little attention is paid to attacking the root causes of poverty: drug abuse, teenage pregnancy and inner-city unemployment. Gingrich's grenade about orphanages stands out from his other recent allegations about drug use at the White House and the first family's "counter-culture" values because it preys on the fears of some of the most vulnerable members of society.

"He's (Gingrich) playing with the psychological stability of children and people in poverty," McDermott told us. "I don't mind if you pick on adults because they can take care of themselves. When you pick on kids for political gain you are scraping."

McDermott and others believe that orphanages are merely a symbol of how children are getting "picked on" by the new GOP majority. In the name of welfare reform, Republicans seem ready to punish poor children for the sins of their parents. The GOP speaks about ending onerous unfunded mandates to the states, but there's deafening silence about moral mandates for poor children.

Already more than one in five children under age 18 lives in a family with income below the federal poverty level. About 44 percent of African-American children and 36 percent of Hispanic children are poor.

A recent report by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities estimates that more than 5 million children would be denied welfare benefits if the Republican "Contract With America" is enacted. Moreover, the report alleges that simply the fear of losing a child could cause a poor parent to act irrationally.

"While many parents may ultimately be forced to relinquish their children on either a temporary or permanent basis, it is also important to recognize that parents could frequently take extreme measures to keep their families together," the report says.

Gingrich is playing with the psychological stability of children and people in poverty.

eat," she said. "Mom is out trying to make enough money to get us stuff we need. I gotta cook."

Carla said the overriding factor in selecting what she will cook is simplicity.

"I just want to make something that's easy," she said. "And if it tastes good, that's good too."

Carla said she and her siblings usually eat hot dogs, french fries (sometimes still frozen) and some sort of chocolate treat.

Mark, 12, said his parents don't get home from work until after 6:30 p.m.

"That's too late for me to eat. I think, so I usually make my own dinner," he said.

Mark said his diet consists mostly of "something I can put in the microwave," like burritos or pot pies.

Staniqua, 16, makes dinner for herself, her mother and stepfather each night.

"They don't care about anything except that it tastes good and that it's ready when they get home," she said.

Most of the youngsters said they never read nutrition labels.

Why should I? asked Laurie, 16, who says she cooks some meals at her house for her father and brother. "All I care is if it tastes good."

Debbie, 14, said she can't be bothered to "try and figure out the labels" and the nutritional pros and cons of foods.

"It's too hard to figure all that out," she said.

Valmarie, 15, said she was very careful about what kinds of food she ate.

"I won't eat more than 20 grams of fat per day and I try to keep my sodium intake to a minimum. Mostly, I eat a lot of fruits and vegetables," she said.

"And I never eat anything with processed sugars."

She said that she has tried to educate her parents in proper nutritional habits, but they have steadfastly refused to change their ways. As a result she cooks most of her own meals.

"I won't let their bad habits kill me," she said.

Felice, 13, turned up her nose at the idea of eating healthy meals.

"Give me a burger, soda and fries and I'm happy," she said.

Yeltsin: it's time to end the fighting in Chechnya

By LARRY RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin offered today to pull back Russian troops from the outskirts of the Chechen capital and said it was time to end Moscow's military campaign in the breakaway Russian republic.

Yeltsin's move appeared to be an invitation for Chechen leaders to resume peace talks — although they have so far rejected his demands that they disarm their supporters and abandon their drive for independence.

He clearly was not forsaking his intention to rein in the Chechens, who declared independence from Russia in 1991. While calling for an end to the military campaign, he indicated Russia would move to restore its administrative control over the province.

Yeltsin said the army could be withdrawn to temporary points on the borders of the Chechen republic, but said he had no plans to take them all the way out of Chechnya.

"It is our republic and troops will be present there permanently," he said. "However, it will be the job of the police to restore order to Grozny and other areas of Chechnya."

Yeltsin's comments to his hawkish Security Council were reported by the Interfax news agency. The council has been a major force behind the military operation.

His offer, made two weeks after he sent up to 40,000 soldiers into Chechnya, came amid sharp disagreements within the military, the parliament and the Kremlin itself over his decision to use military force.

Good for more than just kisses

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — The powers of mistletoe, it seems, may go beyond a simple yuletide kiss.

Doctors at Desert Hospital say the plant's medicinal properties are effective in treating advanced cases of lung cancer.

"It is the least toxic and most effective agent that we have right now for lung cancer," said oncologist Sanford J. Kempin, medical director at Desert Hospital's Comprehensive Cancer Center.

If approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, Navelbine would be the first new drug for lung cancer treatment approved in the United States in 20 years, according to BurroughsWellcome.

Lung cancer kills about 150,000 people a year in the United States.

number of events in the Orlando area, but the community in Sanford has not yet brought it out of the home into the streets.

Born of the Civil Rights struggle in this country, the festival celebrates the importance of unity, cooperation, family and self-determination.

There is also a strong emphasis on the simplicity and creativity that makes the event accessible to all who want to participate.

In Orlando, there are a variety of activities to help educate the community on the celebration and the values it tries to promote.

"But, I really haven't heard of anything happening here," said Meta Brooks, who celebrates the festival in her home.

At the center of the Kwanzaa celebration are seven basic principles:

- Umoja: the unity of the family, the community and the world;
- Kujichagulia: the right and the importance of self-determination;
- Ujima: collective work and responsibility to build and maintain the community and to solve the problems of the community together;

• Ujamaa: cooperative economics to share in the work as well as in the wealth;

• Nia: purpose, to build and develop the community in order to "restore our people to their traditional greatness";

• Kuumba: creativity to do as much as possible to leave the community more beautiful than before.

• Imani: faith "to believe with all our heart in our creator, our people, our parents, our teachers and our leaders in the righteousness and victory of our struggle."

The celebration was conceived by the African-American community, though people of other races have taken to the celebration of family, creativity, faith and community.

"I think it is a beautiful way to wrap up the old year and prepare for the new year," said Myndi Keller, who is white.

"Some of my black friends introduced me to the celebration and I think it crosses all racial boundaries and is just a simple, wonderful celebration of family and community."

Kwanzaa is a non-denominational festival that is often celebrated by people who celebrate Christmas as well.

The week-long festival will conclude at New Year's.

Right said initial damage reports to the home ranged between $45,000 and $50,000.

Firefighters reportedly managed to prevent many of the Christmas gifts in the home from going up in flames. The family is presently living with grandparents Carol and Bob Berry, and went to a nearby neighbor's home where Neal Cashner (Santa in photo) tried to cheer them up.

According to a witness during the Christmas festivities with the boys, 6-year-old Jonathan had a difficult time coming up with a smile, despite the many holiday gifts.

Nutrition

"In most homes, the parents work and the kids are on their own or there's a lot of microwaving and fast food going on out there," he said. "People get home and they just don't want to cook."

He said Crawford's survey is an indicator of what young people are and are not eating, and offers suggestions on what schools can do to try to influence their nutritional choices at school.

"But what about outside of school?" Andrews asked.

Children won't learn to eat right, he said, until the adults around them also eat well.

The food guide pyramid, developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, has been around for about three years.

"I'd estimate that 80 percent of the adults out there don't know what it is," Andrews said. "And of the 20 percent who do, only about three percent follow it."

He believes that education will help, however. The youngsters who have been learning about the right way to eat may be better eaters by the time they are teens.

"But we can't force them to eat anything and they have to do this on their own," Andrews said.

"Now would I lie to you about our Low Prices at Pennywise?"

Modelers

An active membership of 84. The group, which originally used the Sanford airport for all of its flying activities, has functioned as "nomads" without a home field for three years. Because of the nature of the hobby/sport of aero modeling and radio-controlled flying, a permanent field for use by club members is important so Dargue has spearheaded a campaign to build a field which will bear his name, operated and maintained by the local club, thus giving them a permanent home and the opportunity to expand their membership to approximately 110.

There are approximately a dozen model airplane clubs in the central Florida area with an estimated membership of 1,600 individuals. The types of airplanes flown and the skill levels range from control line to model jets that reach speeds of up to 200 miles per hour. A flying field must be accessible to club members without having impact on the environment or its neighbors.

Dargue said many "renegade" fliers, those who do not belong to a club, use parking lots of office complexes such as Maitland Center which can be dangerous for the flier as well as for the buildings in the area.

SAMs goal, with the development of the new field is to provide a facility devoted to the hobby/sport of model aviation.

Beyond the obvious benefits to the club, there are benefits to the community according to Dargue. The new facility will provide utilization of public land for recreational use in a controlled manner with no impact to the environment. When the facility is completed the group will be in a position to sponsor local, regional and national contests adding visibility of the area to yet another group of enthusiasts for whom Sanford will become a destination impacting commerce in a positive manner. A model jet rally similar to one that could be held at the new model flight facility is scheduled for DeLand in January. More than 200 participants are pre-registered, including 70 entrants from foreign countries, for a three-day event.

And, because of SAMs membership in the Academy of Model Aeronautics, which is the largest sport aviation group in the United States, each member of the club uses the field will be insured for $2.5 million and the group will have an additional $2.5 million for any event it sponsors.

But there have been hurdles to be jumped to get to the point the field is at. The field is on part of Site 10, which is 1,800 acres scattered with wetlands, abutting Lake Jessup. "They (Sanford) offered us one little parcel that is all by itself and it has a retention pond it," Dargue said, "and of course we took it. But that was just the beginning."

Although the club has a long term lease with the city of Sanford and all of the club's plans were okayed by the city in July, the property is in the county and county approval of the site plan had to be obtained. Ten sets of plans were submitted to all of the county agencies involved and three departments raised objections to certain areas, these being parking, buffer zone and eagles. The questions on the parking and buffer zones were raised because the plans did not specifically show what the county required. On the other concern, eagles had been observed in the area, and the group was asked to add a statement to the field's flight policy designating a no-flight zone beyond 1,000 feet from the field to protect the eagles. With all of the objections answered to the county's satisfaction, the work of preparing the field for use could begin.

The site had previously been a network of ditches to channel whatever water was not immediately absorbed into the ground. The ditches have to be filled and the ground leveled. The club will install a Bermuda grass field with an irrigation system. There will be a 100 foot wide by 400 foot long runway, three control line courts and a dirt track for radio-controlled cars. The retention pond is currently being used for RC sailboats and could be used for model seaplanes. The club also wants to eventually install pavilions, permanent restroom facilities and provide storage space for club equipment. In order to meet the requirements of future usage such as contests, the club will have to plan on installing a turn lane on S.R. 46.

But each of these plans will have to be accomplished one step at a time as budget allows. The non-profit organization depends on club dues to support the biggest part of the work. The first phase which includes all of the dirt work, drainage and seeding will cost $12,000. The treasury currently has half of that. The new fiscal year begins in January and the club anticipates another $8,000 that will allow them to install an irrigation system in the spring. In the meantime, they have been doing fund-raising activities.

One benevolent benefactor did step forward to aid the club. Club member and local businessman Bob Violett, who owns a model airplane manufacturing business in Winter Springs, donated a model jet kit to the club valued at $1,000. The club has sold chances on the jet kit at several contests, area hobby shops and at the Sanford air show. The group was able to raise $2,000 with that campaign. They plan to raffie two more models at the DeLand contest in January.

Dargue anticipates the club being able to use the facility by February.

Anyone with an interest in model building and radio-control model operation is welcome to join SAM. Dues are $100 per year with an additional $42 per year payable to the AMA. Membership in the AMA is required by the club because of the insurance requirements. Beginners must take flight training similar to receiving a pilot's license. They will also receive instruction and helpful hints on model building from fellow club members. Dargue said all levels of skill are represented in the club, including members who build and fly scale model jets, worth thousands of dollars and able to fly at speeds of nearly 200 miles per hour. The kit that was donated by Bob Violett Models is an original creation of the company, the BVM Maverick. It is 67 inches in length and has 60 inch wingspan with a weight of 12 to 13 pounds. While it is powered by one internal combustion jet engine, some modelers choose electronic engines for their planes and some jet fliers install two engines in their models. Model aviation includes helicopters and gliders and some hobbyists build scale models of real airplanes and jets. The average kits start at $300 to $350.

As shown in this artist's concept, the finished field will be multi-purpose in use.

Dargue would like everyone to know that SAM and similar clubs are dedicated to increasing the awareness by the general public of the hobby/sport of aero modeling. The models SAM members fly are not toys and the safety of the flier and the surrounding environment is a concern of the club. They participate in events such as Airshow Orlando as well as participation in Boy Scout camporees, D.A.R.E. and Seminole County Teach-In. "We're trying to orient this to a family-type operation," Dargue said.

Shopping

A few stores are even planning to be open earlier and stay open later in the evening, at least for the next few days.

The Sanford J. C. Penney Store, 1180 State St., opened one hour earlier this morning just to handle the shoppers. According to Assistant Manager Nancy Gilbert, after today, the store will return to normal hours of 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. "This is traditionally a big shopping time," Gilbert said. "It's our annual after-Christmas sale and clearance, and people know that's what we are doing, so they try to get here as early as possible and get in on the bargains."

At the Lake Mary Kmart, 3639 Lake Emma Road, Manager Wayne Wheeler said the shoppers were coming in this morning for double duty. "In addition to the people getting these after-holiday sales items," he said, "we have a lot of Christmas returns as well."

Wheeler said Kmart is offering 50 percent off on all leftover Christmas items.

At Wal-Mart, 3653 S. Orlando Drive in Sanford, manager Theresa Trotter said store traffic was extremely heavy this morning. "We always have our after-Christmas sales starting on this date," she said, "and while we are really packed this morning, it's not unusual because we are known for these sales." She said the sale will continue, "until everything on sale is gone."

Sexual harassment

Sitcoms make light of a most serious problem

By JAMES HANNAN
Associated Press Writer

DAYTON, Ohio — Lewd remarks, suggestive touches and other forms of sexual harassment can trigger lawsuits in the real world. But a research team has found that it's routine in the world of sitcoms.

University of Dayton researchers who studied prime-time situation comedies on ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox in 1990 said 40 percent of the sexual behavior they saw amounted to sexual harassment.

"We were very surprised to discover there is a good deal of sexual harassment on television," said Thomas Skill, an associate professor of communications at the private, Catholic university.

"More importantly, it is presented in such a way to make it seem acceptable."

All four networks declined to comment on the study.

Some of the examples of harassment documented by Skill, associate professor James Robison and graduate student Colleen Kinella.

— "Married ... With Children" (Fox): Bud approaches a female model at a car show and says: "Excuse me, I couldn't help but notice you undressing me with your eyes. How would you like to hear my recipe for a love cocktail — one cup of you, two cups of me, put it to a boil and serve while hot." The model rejects him, saying: "I'll let you touch my hair if you go away and leave me alone."

Shows that consistently portray "sexual harassment as humorous, prime-time situation comedies — distort, minimize and misrepresent the seriousness" of such behavior, the study concluded.

The researchers based their findings on a legal definition of sexual harassment: Unwelcome sexual behavior.

They defined sexual behavior as sexual remarks, looks and gestures: kissing, touching or grabbing in a sexual manner; date requests and violations of personal space.

Of 307 sexual behaviors that were identified, 124 — 40 percent — were not welcomed by the recipient. The researchers said 36 percent of the targets of sexual harassment welcomed the behavior, and 24 percent had no visible reaction.

Male characters initiated 68 percent of the incidents; women accounted for 32 percent.

Skill said the behavior was reinforced by laugh tracks and by the lack of consequences for characters who harassed. "We were really amazed to find that nobody was ever sanctioned or told that they were out of line," he said.

Jay Dover, program director for the Center for Media Literacy, doubts that television writers deliberately wrote sexual harassment into scripts. The Los Angeles-based advocacy group works to teach children how to interpret sex and violence in the media.

"I'm wondering if that is really sexual harassment or that is stereotypes," said Dover. "Sitcoms rely on stereotypical images of men and women to generate laughs."

Dover said it could be harmful if the sitcoms suggest sexual harassment is funny. "The problem is, where's the line?"

"Where's the line between wanted and unwanted sexual advances? The line is so smeared, so distorted by the comedy element, by the unrealistic situations," Dover said.

Ellen Bravo, executive director of Nine to Five, an advocacy group for working women, said sexual remarks outside the workplace do not constitute sexual harassment.

Is it worse to kick a woman or a cat?

OKLAHOMA CITY — Beating up a woman in Oklahoma could bring 90 days in jail. Kicking a cat is an entirely different matter: that's a felony that could mean years behind bars.

"It's absurd," said George Rasco of the Oklahoma Coalition on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault.

Kicking a cat "is horrendous and I'm disgusted by that," Rasco said, "but as a woman's advocate on domestic violence, it angers me we don't get the same response judicially when he goes out and kicks his girlfriend."

The disparity emerged recently in two cases involving Oklahoma City police officers.

Sgt. Aaron G. Watson is accused of slamming his girlfriend's head into a wall, dragging her by the hair, handcuffing her and kicking her. He was charged with misdemeanor assault and battery, punishable by up to 90 days in jail.

Sgt. Wayne M. Hlinicky is accused of maliciously kicking a cat at the airport. He's charged with animal cruelty — a felony. If convicted, he could be sentenced to up to five years in prison and fined up to $5,000.

Prosecutors say there's little they can do. There are no misdemeanor statutes in Oklahoma for animal cruelty, so any such charge has to be filed as a felony. Assistant District Attorney Richard Wintory said.

Assault and battery, on the other hand, is generally a misdemeanor unless a dangerous weapon was used or the victim's injuries were severe enough. The woman allegedly assaulted by Watson suffered a ruptured ear drum.

"We don't get to a felony until we get to maiming," prosecutor Gary Ackley said.

There's another disparity involved in the cases: Hlinicky would be automatically discharged from the department on a felony conviction. A misdemeanor conviction would not be automatic grounds to dismiss Watson.

— "Roseanne" (ABC): A man in a bar is discussing his conquest of women. Another man responds: "While you're getting your car washed, you might as well get the hot wax, right?"

— "Murphy Brown" (CBS): Murphy retaliates in kind to a group of construction workers who verbally sexually harass her.

— "Wings" (NBC): A policewoman yells at a male character, "Hey, sugar buns. Move it along."

Yale historian dies of AIDS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — John E. Boswell, the Yale historian who found evidence that priests in the Middle Ages united same-sex couples in ceremonies much like weddings, has died of AIDS.

"I regard him as one of the major innovative figures in gay and lesbian scholarship," said Martin Duberman, founder and executive director of the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies at the City University of New York.

Boswell died Friday at the Yale infirmary, said his friend Jerry Hart.

In June, Boswell provoked debate with his book "Same-Sex Unions in Premodern Europe," based on the study of more than 60 manuscripts from the eighth to the 16th century.

Boswell wrote that the ceremony of same-sex union was by the 12th century "unmistakably a voluntary, emotional union of two persons." The ceremony was "closely related" to heterosexual marriage, he said, "no matter how much some readers may be discomfited by this."

Some scholars and theologians have disputed Boswell's findings.

James Brundage, a professor of history and law at the University of Kansas, said last summer that "the mainstream reaction was that he raised some interesting questions, but hadn't proved his case."

Boswell gained wide notice in 1990 with the publication of "Christianity, Social Tolerance and Homosexuality: Gay People in Western Europe From the Beginning of the Christian Era to the Fourteenth Century."

The book won the American Book Award for history in 1991.

One major aim, Boswell wrote, was "to rebut the common idea that religious belief — Christian or other — has been the cause of intolerance in regard to gay people."

Colleagues said Boswell was influential and a role model without being an activist.

Many doors still shut to disabled

By JONATHAN VENKIN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — Almost five years after Congress passed a sweeping law to open government doors to the disabled, many public buildings still don't have elevators, modified bathroom stalls or doorways wide enough for wheelchairs.

And most cities won't have the mandated improvements in place by next month's deadline.

"There's no city or town on the face of this Earth that's going to be 100 percent fully in compliance," says Lowell Haynes, a planner for Newton, Mass., which has a schedule of projects going into 1997.

The 1990 Americans with Disabilities Act has been hailed as the most significant civil rights legislation since the 1964 law prohibiting racial discrimination.

It bans discrimination against the disabled in job opportunities, public accommodations, transportation and telecommunications. About 49 million Americans have disabilities.

Under the law, local governments have until Jan. 26 to make structural changes ensuring that disabled people have access to their services. Governments that miss the deadline can be fined up to $50,000 for the first violation and $100,000 for subsequent violations.

"Frankly, we've found just in the last two or three months there seems to be a scramble on by cities and towns to get something in the works so they can plead not guilty," said Bob Williams, president of The Access Group, a consulting firm in Woburn, Mass.

Hamilton Brown, an expert on the law for the National Association of Towns and Townships, said many governments haven't evaluated the accessibility of their services — a step that was required two years ago.

Of those that have done the evaluations, he estimated only about half have made the necessary structural changes.

In Grand Rapids, Mich., the city expects to comply with the law for its most heavily used public buildings. But other jobs remain, such as curb cuts to make sidewalks accessible to wheelchairs at intersections.

In Massachusetts, a recent legislative report found nearly one-third of the police departments in the state don't comply with the federal law.

The town of Swampscott, north of Boston, was recently ordered to move public meetings out of its historic town hall because people in wheelchairs couldn't get inside the building.

"I think there's a long ways to go," said Raymond S. Davis, acting director of the National Council on Disability. "From what I'm hearing, cities and towns are late getting into the game."

Many officials say the cost of refurbishing buildings is prohibitive. The U.S. Conference of Mayors has estimated the law will cost cities more than $2 billion through 1998.

The Justice Department has sought to allay fears by telling communities that if they can't alter a building, they can find alternate ways to accommodate people with disabilities.

For example, an agency that is inaccessible on a second-floor can make arrangements to serve disabled people on the ground floor.

But Attorney General Janet Reno has made it clear that the department plans to enforce compliance.

"Too many have taken a wait-and-see attitude to determine whether the Justice Department is serious about forcing compliance," Reno said in July. "I have just one answer: We are serious."

Some advocates for the disabled say legal action might be needed to prod some communities into action.

"The notice was sent out in 1990, so they have had time," Davis said. "If they are just getting started in the last few months, it tells me they are not going to do anything until they are forced."

The Justice Department's toll-free number for advice on the act is: 1-800-514-0301 or (TDD) 1-800-514-0383. Its hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. EST Monday through Friday, except Thursdays, 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Spanish language information is available.

Musical mission for needy

By CAROLYN THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Ada and Erna Showers and Irene and Lillian Haydt aren't playing their trumpets and keyboards on the street to make a quick buck or pay their way through college.

The petite, gray-haired women share their music with the passing public with a different mission in mind — the Grace and Hope Mission.

Ranging from age 76 to 84, they play the streets of Providence year round, all dressed in black and often bundled against the wind or with snow at their feet. They sit on folding chairs they haul around in a station wagon.

The donations they receive — about $25 for every two hours — help pay mission bills and for food baskets they distribute to the needy in their rough-and-tumble south Providence neighborhood.

Playing "brings joy to me," said Ada, the youngest of the four. "People come and say, 'I was so depressed, you really cheered me up.'"

The two sets of sisters devoted their lives to missionary work as teen-agers and young adults in Pennsylvania around the Depression. Each learned to play at least one instrument: Erna plays keyboards and trumpet, Irene plays piano and trumpet, Ada plays trumpet, and Lillian also played the trombone until a heart attack at the age of 75, about four years ago.

The women never married. All live upstairs at the mission, which they have run alone since 1965, holding religious services and providing food and clothing to the needy.

For nearly 20 years, they have taken turns at two-hour music sessions on the street — sometimes with mixed results.

Take the time a teen-ager threw a box of chocolate cake mix from above, covering Ada with powder.

"It even went down in my bosom," she said.

Someone else flew a paper airplane at the women with a message to "shut up." And a passerby stopped just long enough one day to grab the $25 in loose change and bills Ada and a partner had collected from their performance.

But the women don't hold grudges, and say they are not bothered by the danger in their neighborhood.

"People tell us we are in one of the worst areas of the city," Irene wrote in a mission newsletter. "We feel secure because of this great promise: knowing He watches over us and cares for us at all times."

Congregation deals with pastor's death

By MICHAEL SCHNEIDER
Associated Press Writer

ESSEX, Md. — His congregants say the Rev. Samuel Nathaniel Booth would give the last dollar in his wallet to a person in need, and was always feeding people who couldn't get a meal elsewhere.

On Sunday, one of the people that Booth had helped was charged with murdering him.

Police said James Thomas Wood confessed to robbing Booth and stabbing him to death Christmas Eve in the pastor's trailer residence behind the chapelard church.

Wood, 24, told police he stole $77 in cash and $40 worth of crack cocaine. He was held without bail.

About 50 people inside Christian Faith Tabernacle Church bypassed their traditional Christmas service Sunday morning and held a tearful service in Booth's memory instead.

"I just need to know that Jesus is celebrating his birthday today and because of Jesus, Reverend Booth is in heaven," said church member Michele Ferrera. "I just need to know that he didn't suffer."

Distraught worshippers hugged and cried throughout the 2½-hour ceremony. They sang Booth's favorite hymns "Jesus is My Savior" and "O I Want to See Him."

Church members described Booth, 55, as a warm, loving man who dedicated his life to his Pentecostal church and the congregation he founded 14 years ago in the blue-collar community about five miles northeast of downtown Baltimore.

"His only interest was doing what God wanted him to do," said Dan Woodward. "The church was his life."

Cpl. Kevin Novak, a Baltimore County police spokesman, said Booth and Wood were acquaintances. A church member said Booth had fed Wood several times in his trailer and once had let him stay there.

"He has always taken people in and fed them," said Kitty Garcia, who publishes the church newsletter. "He was always helping people."

Booth had recently moved to the small trailer after living with his mother. About a month ago, he came home to find a burglar, who ran away into nearby woods, said Mrs. Garcia.

"He was frightened out here," she said. "It's a good way off the road here."

It was a bad year for psychics

By JIMMY GOLEN
Associated Press Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. — It was the year that wasn't.

Cindy Crawford and Richard Gere did not have triplets. Hillary Rodham Clinton did not plead guilty to shoplifting lipstick. Charles Manson did not get a sex-change operation.

There were some of the way out — and, ultimately, way off — predictions from the tabloid psychics for 1994.

A 1995 prediction from the folks at the Skeptical Inquirer: The psychics will be wrong again next year.

"I can't think of any specific predictions that have come true," said Barry Karr, spokesman for the Buffalo-based publication that puts together a scorecard each year to hold the fortune tellers accountable. "And I can't see the success rate improving in 1995."

Various psychics already have predicted that in 1995, singer Whitney Houston and boxer Mike Tyson will marry, a plant that grows in northern Florida will cure AIDS and volcanic eruptions in August will create a new land mass joining Cuba with the rest of North America.

"Don't hold your breath," said George Emery, who has been watching the seers since the '70s.

Among the predictions for 1994, and what actually happened:

— Prediction: "Sister Act" star Whoopi Goldberg will give up acting to join a convent. Reality: Unfunny "Sister Act" sequel mistaken by audiences for a documentary.

— Prediction: Icon namesake Madonna will marry semi-androgynous '80s pop star Boy George. Reality: Icon namesake Lisa Marie Presley marries semi-androgynous '80s pop star Michael Jackson.

— Prediction: Office workers would flee from the Sears Tower in Chicago after it begins to lean like the Leaning Tower of Pisa. Reality: Perfectly vertical Sears Tower sold to group from Boston, where they have pizza.

— Prediction: "The Untouchables" would be canceled. Reality: "The Untouchables" was canceled.

— Prediction: "Sister Act" star Whoopi Goldberg will give up acting to join a convent. Reality: Unfunny "Sister Act" sequel mistaken by audiences for a documentary.

— Prediction: The Dow Jones would rise to 5,000, that a national lottery would cut taxes in half and that a teenager would build and accidentally detonate a nuclear bomb in Pageland, South Carolina, he said.

Other predictions from 1994 that haven't come to pass yet (although there's still almost a week left):

— Scientists will perfect a car that would run on tap water.

— Jay Leno will quit "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno."

— Madonna will marry a Middle Eastern sheik and become a "totally traditional wife," complete with long robes and veil.

IN BRIEF

LOCALLY

Calliguri to give clinic

ORLANDO — Paul Calliguri, a former member of the United States World Cup soccer team, will give a free one-hour clinic beginning at 10 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 27, at Edgewater High School.

The clinic, which is sponsored by Pizza Hut, will kickoff this year's Pizza Hut Invitational high school boys' soccer tournament.

Calliguri will be teaching players of all ages techniques and drills as well as a few "trade" secrets he's used in World Cup play.

For more information, call 898-0798.

Adult flag football at YMCA

LAKE MARY — The Seminole Family YMCA is in the process of forming an adult flag football league that will play its games on Saturdays at Winter Springs Central Winds Park.

Registration is being taken through Monday, Jan. 16, at the YMCA, located on Longwood-Lake Mary Road. League fees are $325 a team, which must have a minimum of seven players on the roster and a maximum of 14.

Call 321-8944 for details.

Sanford offers 3-on-3 hoops

SANFORD — A 3-on-3 basketball league for adults is being planned by the Sanford Recreation Department. The league, which will begin the week of Jan. 17, will play its games at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium.

Registration fee is $75 per team.

For information, call 330-5697.

Lake Mary polar softball

LAKE MARY — The City of Lake Mary will be conducting a Polar Bear Softball season at the Lake Mary Sports Complex. The 10-week leagues will begin the week of Jan. 23.

Registration will be taken at City Hall, Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Packets can be picked up at City Hall.

AROUND THE STATE

Dolphins give Shula record

MIAMI — Miami's Don Shula broke a tie with the late George Halas for first place on the NFL's regular-season victory list Sunday night.

Shula, still wearing a cast following Achilles tendon surgery, presided over the Dolphins' 27-20 victory over Detroit from a motorized scooter. He is 319-149-6 in 32 seasons with Miami and Baltimore.

Halas was 318-148-31 in 40 seasons with the Chicago Bears.

With the victory, the Dolphins clinched the American Football Conference Eastern Division title and a home game in the first round of the playoffs next weekend.

AROUND THE NATION

Owners' finances examined

NEW YORK — Baseball owners lost $105 million during the strike-shortened 1991 season and $208 million more in the following four years, according to management documents obtained by The Associated Press.

While the industry lost money from 1975 through 1985, it had operating profits from 1986 to 1993, according to the documents. Baseball's overall revenues rose from $182.6 million in 1975 to $1.879 billion in 1993.

Documents of baseball's finances from 1975 through 1991 were released Thursday by the House Judiciary Committee, which has been examining baseball's antitrust exemption. Figures for 1992 were obtained by the AP from management sources and 1993 estimates were provided by the owners' Player Relations Committee. No estimates for 1994 are available yet.

NHL season on the line

The fate of the NHL season could be decided this week.

No firm date for cancelling the season has been set, although commissioner Gary Bettman has the authority to shut it down if it becomes impossible to play a 50-game schedule and four rounds of playoffs by July 1.

That would seem to indicate the necessity starting before Jan. 15. Since the owners have said a two-week training camp is needed, that means the lockout would have to end this week.

Despite the urgency, negotiations between the NHL and NHL Players Association will not occur until Tuesday at the earliest.

Offensive linemen top Seminole County selections

From Staff Reports

JACKSONVILLE — Three offensive linemen — led by Seminole High School's Thomas Wilk — were Seminole County's top representatives in the Florida Sports Writers' Association's All-State football teams released over the weekend.

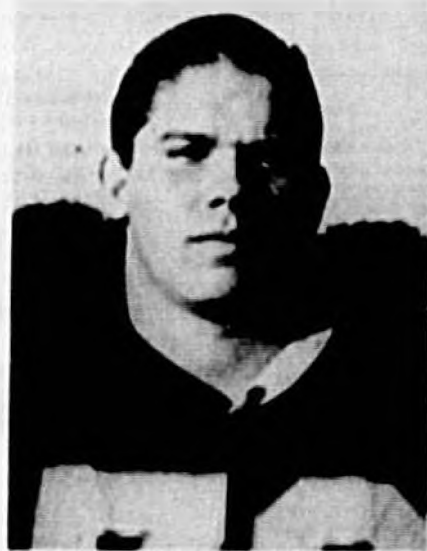

Wilk, a 5-foot, 10-inch, 245-pound senior, was named to the second team of the FSWA's Class 5A All-State Team.

In Class 6A, Oviedo senior Jason Watts (6-3, 245) and Lake Mary senior Scott Bryan (6-5, 265) were both named on the third team offensive line.

Class 5A is for schools with total enrollments between 958 and 1,340 in the upper three grades while Class 6A is for schools with total enrollments in the upper three grades of more than 1,340.

Along with Wilk, Watts, and Bryan, four other Seminole County athletes were honorable mention selections in their classification.

Wilk's teammates, junior defensive lineman Ron Moore (6-2, Wilk, Watts, Bryan, Moore, Ritenour, and Brown were first-team selections on the 1994 Sanford Herald All-County team.

Last Tuesday, three Trinity Preparatory School players were named to the Class 2A (football-playing schools with enrollments under 219) All-State team.

Senior defensive back Mike Villanueva (5-9, 150) and senior kicker Bill Torrey (5-10, 170) were third-team picks while Greg Stone was an honorable mention choice.

AF III 5th in Rotary Classic; Rams claim 2nd

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Writer

OVIEDO — Necessity is the mother of invention.

Midway through the third quarter of Seminole's fifth place battle with Oviedo in the Oviedo Rotary Central Florida Classic Friday night, Arrow Force III coach Bob Traina found himself with a dilemma — protecting a narrow lead with almost 12 minutes left in the game and no center.

Starting center Chuck Smith was already out with an injury suffered against Lake Brantley on Thursday. Reggie Holloway and Jeff Merthie were on the bench saddled with four fouls each.

So Traina put his son Brad, normally a point guard, into the post position. The 6-foot-5 senior responded down the stretch, scoring nine of his team-high 17 points as Seminole held off the Lions, 48-46.

In the other final round games at Oviedo High School on Friday, Oak Ridge (9-5) built an 18-point lead early in the third quarter and survived a Lake Mary (7-5) rally to win the championship, 74-63, and Edgewater (6-4) nipped Evans (6-4) for third place, 49-46.

Arrow Force III (9-3) led virtually the whole game, but constant foul trouble and a tremendous all-around game by Brian Buchanan allowed Oviedo (8-5) to stay in the game right to the final horn.

The Lions' defensive pressure and a pair of Trailing by 12 points at halftime, Tyson Hinshaw (No. 12) and the Lake Mary Rams attempted to come back in the second half against Oak Ridge in Friday's finals of the Oviedo Rotary Central Florida Classic. But the Rams' rally was snuffed out by Cedric Thomas (No. 44) and the Pioneers.

Gifts come in all forms throughout the year

"So this is Christmas..." I've been sitting here this evening, listening to the Miami Dolphins try to give a game to the Detroit Lions and the American Football Conference Eastern Division championship to the New England Patriots and contemplating the circumstances that have me sitting behind a terminal on Christmas night.

It's not as bad as it sounds. As I'm fond of saying, it beats working for a living, especially when you consider how other people were spending their holiday.

On my way in tonight, I passed law enforcement officials, fire fighters, and other emergency personnel — people we expect to be on duty regardless of the time of day or season of the year — making their appointed rounds. God bless them.

The lights were on at the area hospitals, vital islands of activity in otherwise dark neighborhoods. God bless the men and women who were away from their families on perhaps the single most family-oriented day of the year.

SPORTS

TONY DeSORMIER

It helps me keep my professional life in perspective and, by extension, my personal life... take your work seriously, but don't take yourself seriously.

Also, I consider it a blessing to be able to play with words for a living, especially about sports. While the hours leave something to be desired, there's no heavy lifting and the only callouses I have are on my... well, this is a family newspaper.

If you'll permit me a slight theological digression on what is, after all, a religious holiday, I consider athletic competition to be a blessing in and of itself, a positive expression of the human desire to strive and test one's limits.

If you wish to follow me further off the deep end into a Jedi Knight kind of division of our existence into counterbalancing positives and negatives — love and hate, honest labor and crime, chocolate and tofu — athletics is the very positive alternative to war, our species' primary forms of competition.

Save your protestations on the evils of competition born of a win-at-any-cost mentality that says "good guys finish last" (which, for the purists in the audience, I know is an oft-repeated misquote of Leo Durocher's original statement).

Those evils are not intrinsic to athletic competition, but are evils that we, in our human imperfection, bring to competition. Stripped of our emotional baggage, sports are both play and a healthy test of abilities, a unique blend of recreation and self-realization.

And I get paid to go watch and write about this blessed activity. Granted, it's passive participation, but there are countless worse ways to spend your time.

I mention this only because I have a tendency to forget (and I'm willing to bet I'm not the only one) how lucky I am to have this career, especially when there are so many who are faced with the daily prospect of not having a job to go to and don't know from where their next meal is coming.

In the daily deluge of distractions and irritations, it's easy to overlook the primary gifts that give our lives meaning — family, good health, a career. Beyond that, the simple blessings in our lives — a round of golf with a friend, a perfect meal — get lost in our daily clutter.

As you catalog the gifts you received this Christmas, remember the gifts you receive over the course of the year. How empty would your life be without them?

Now if you'll excuse me, I have to get back to work.

three-point shots by Buchanan nearly allowed the host school to pull off the win. With 3:30 remaining, Seminole was ahead 48-40, but after two five-second violations, Buchanan's bombs and a sideline turnover, Oviedo found itself with the ball, six seconds on the clock and a chance to tie. But the Lions were unable to get shot off against Arrow Force III's pressure. Brad Trains finished eight of 12 from the floor and also had seven rebounds, three assists, one steal, and one blocked shot. Also contributing for Seminole were Holloway (10 points, five rebounds), Nate Hall (nine points, 13 rebounds, two blocked shots, one charge taken, one steal, one assist) and Eric Roberts (six points, three rebounds, three steals, six assists). For Oviedo, Buchanan was seven-of-15 from the floor

(4-for-6 on threes) and six-of-seven from the free throw line for 24 points. He also had a team-high 11 rebounds and an added three steals. Joel Freund chipped in with 12 points (eight of 10 on free throws), Jeff Calim six steals and Spencer Munns six assists. Four Lake Mary players hit for double figures (Jason Junker 17, Shawn Newberry and Wealey Jackson 14 each and Matt Townsley 10), but tournament Most Valuable Player Thomas Cooper scored a game-high 19 points and Oak Ridge hit 15 of 20 free throws in the fourth quarter as the Pioneers claimed the title. Maxwell Joseph (13) and Sharrod Williams (12) were also in double figures for the winners.

Hevy performs in Peach Bowl

Danielle Hevy, a senior at Seminole High School in Sanford and a squad leader on the nationally award-winning Dazzler Dance Team directed by Maureen Maguire, will be among 500 select NCA Performance Team members to perform in the 27th annual Peach Bowl on New Year's Day. The game will be nationally televised on ESPN at 8 p.m. EST.

Danielle Hevy

This will mark the NCA Performance Team's second appearance in the premier collegiate football bowl game. Danielle and other select participants were chosen by virtue of being nominated and/or selected to the NCA All-American or NCA DANCE All-American team. The NCA Performance Team will participate in the Peach Bowl Parade and perform during the pre-game and half-time festivities of the Peach Bowl. The choreographed routines that will be presented culminate five days of rehearsals in Atlanta where the participants meet for the first time as a group.

The NCA Performance Team is under the direction of Kevin Jones, Executive Director of NCA Special Events, and choreographers Cheryl Carter and Sheila Lambert. NCA Special Events is an operating division of National Cheerleaders Association. The NCA conducts summer camps throughout the United States where instructors teach the latest cheerleading, dance routines and techniques to junior high, high school and college-level students. This past summer more than 150,000 students participated in camps conducted in 48 states, Mexico and Japan.

Cool weather calls for fire

Do homework before buying load of firewood

The weather is finally beginning to cool — in fact, it feels downright cold to me. It is amazing how quickly one becomes spoiled in our tropical-like climate. If you are lucky enough to have a fireplace in your home, it's time to buy or gather firewood.

Do your homework before purchasing a "load" of firewood. In my experience education is always your best bargaining tool when purchasing anything! For instance, a load can mean anything, depending on the size of the conveyance, whether the wood is split or round, whether the wood is stacked or "thrown" in, and how high it is piled. Pound for pound all wood burns about the same. A pound of good dry hardwood will produce about 8,600 BTUs of heat energy when burned. Because of high resin content some pine wood may produce over 9,000 BTUs. Hardwood and some tropical woods are denser than pine, and on a volume basis contain more heat value.

Wood is almost always sold on a volume basis; that is, by the standard cord, load, rick or face cord. Since the "cord" measure is rather loosely applied you should determine what the seller means before you purchase. A standard cord contains 128 cubic feet of stacked wood and is assumed to be a stack of logs or bolts 4 feet x 4 feet x 8 feet.

Firewood is usually purchased split and cut to fit a fireplace or a stove. Commonly they are 2 feet or less in length. A stack of firewood 4 feet high and 8 feet long is called a face cord. The cubic foot volume of a face cord is determined by the length of the stick. A face cord of firewood cut 2 feet long contains only one-half of the volume of a standard cord. A rick is usually assumed to be the same as a face cord.

It has been suggested that weight would be a better measure for firewood, but all wood contains some water. Freshly cut green wood will contain more water than seasoned or dry wood. Seasoned wood may contain only 20 percent water. Purchasing by weight could mean that you are paying for unwanted water.

GARDENING

Florida has a large number of native trees and many introduced species have some potential for firewood. Although there are differences in wood density, some species are similar enough to be grouped together. Species with high density: live oak, hickory, white oaks, eucalyptus, Australian pine, red oaks (including water and scrub oaks), hophornbeam, blue beech and dogwood. Species with medium density: beech, ash, elm, sweetgum, cherry, sycamore, magnolia and red maple. Species of low density: willow, cottonwood, and tulip poplar. Since the denser (heavier) woods have the highest energy values you should choose from the high density group if they are available in your area. Density is only one consideration, however, since some woods are difficult or almost impossible to split. Others are difficult to dry and store. Some have unpleasant odors and some just don't burn well.

Personal preferences plays an important part in choice of firewood. Oaks, hickories, and ash are usually preferred. Live oak is one of the heavier woods. It burns well, stores well and is widely distributed, but is somewhat difficult to split. Red oaks are plentiful and easy to split. They often have a sour odor when freshly cut. Ash has often been called the best firewood. Blackjack and other scrub oaks are preferred by some almost to the exclusion of other woods. Soft maple is widely available on wet sites. The gums, in general, are difficult to split and store. Some hickories can be split without too much difficulty, however, pecan, which is a hickory, is difficult to split. Others difficult to split-species are persimmon, elm and sycamore and some of the tropical woods. If possible, cut only trees small enough to be used as round or chunk wood.

Firewood is advertised for sale in most areas of the state. Tree service companies usually have wood for sale year 'round. Seasonally the want ads usually list distributors. If you wish to cut your own firewood but do not own a wood lot, you can purchase a permit from the Ocala National Forest Service. A firewood cutting permit is $15. The permits are issued beginning the first week in October. The permit allows for cutting October through March only. A single permit allows you to cut up to 3 cords of wood. There are designated cutting areas and maps are issued along with the permit. Permits are available at the ranger station during regular business hours or by mail. Call (904)669-3153 for more information about firewood cutting permits.

If you plan to use scrap lumber for various projects around the house, use extreme caution! Most wood used for exterior construction, such as fences and decks, is treated with the toxic chemical preservative chromate copper arsenate. The chemicals are released when the wood is burned. Prolonged exposure to the fumes can cause eye irritation and other associated problems. Watch for and avoid lumber stamped or labeled to indicate chemical processing.

When gathering wood always remember to respect property belonging to others. Be particularly careful of gates, fences and roads. When felling trees watch for any tree or structure which might be damaged. Of course always have the owner's permission. Respect for others may gain you an invitation to return. And when you purchase firewood, "wow" the seller by asking, "What exactly do you mean by a 'load' of wood?"

Wedding a disaster, so was marriage

DEAR ABBY: On the topic of disastrous weddings, mine ranks right up there at the top! While I was walking down the aisle, someone stepped on my train, ripping it from the back of my gown. My aunt immediately sprang from her seat yelling, "I'll fix it!" The wedding then ground to a halt while she tried unsuccessfully again and again to reattach it. I finally proceeded down the aisle with one hand behind me gripping my ripped train, and while ascending the steps leading to the altar — I fell!

By then I was so distracted that when the rabbi reached the Hebrew portion of the ceremony, I couldn't follow what he was saying. The rabbi then exclaimed, "I'm stopping the ceremony because whatever the bride is repeating is gibberish, so I will begin again — this time in English!"

When I was handed the goblet of wine, I drank it all, leaving none for the groom. Once more, the ceremony was stopped so more wine could be poured. I was so embarrassed.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, as we walked back up the aisle, the rabbi called out, "Your forgot your bridal bouquet!" Then I turned around and retrieved it.

That's not all. When we arrived at our reception, the chef rolled out the cart bearing our gorgeous "wedding" cake. It was decorated with "Happy Birthday," and someone else's name on it.

A.L., FORT LAUDERDALE
P.S. My marriage turned out just like my wedding — a total disaster!

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this letter because I have hit a stumbling block with my mother-in-law.

We have two daughters, but for some reason, she favors "Susie," the older daughter. She always buys Susie more expensive presents than "Becky." She tried to justify it by saying that Susie is bigger and more mature, but why should Becky get a raw deal because she is younger?

I have talked to my mother-in-law about this, but she just doesn't get it.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Becky's feelings are constantly being hurt, and she's getting old enough to realize what's going on. The favoritism is so obvious that I'm afraid Becky will grow to resent her grandmother — and her older sister, too.

Why can't she treat them equally, as we do, even though they are two very different children?

NO TOWN, PLEASE DEAR NO TOWN: If it will make you feel any better, this problem exists in many other families. The first grandchild in most families usually gets more attention than those who follow.

Tell Grandma that her partiality is noticeable, and ask her to please work harder at being evenhanded in matters concerning her granddaughters. The alternative to that would be restricting her access to the girls in order to avoid hurting the younger one.

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to the woman who was contemplating a Caesarian section in order to avoid the pain of childbirth. Believe me, you do not avoid pain with a Caesarian. I know. I had a normal delivery with my first child after 12 hours of painful delivery, and a Caesarian with my second child. If I had had the Caesarian first, I doubt that I would have had a second baby. While the pain of normal childbirth was no picnic, when it was over, it was over, and the recovery time was relatively short (about two weeks).

With the Caesarian, my recovery period was eight weeks, and I was much more incapacitated and in far more pain than I had been with my natural birth. Plus, I have an ugly eight-inch scar across my lower tummy that is sore — and itches from time to time.

Trust me. Natural is better.
HAD IT BOTH WAYS IN SCOTTSDALE, ARIZ.
DEAR HAD IT: I believe you. And I have a stack of letters on my desk reiterating your testimony.

Loss of sex drive probably treatable

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 60-year-old husband has lost his sex drive. I'm 50 and love him deeply. I miss the intimacy and while I am very attentive, nothing seems to turn him on. We were recently married and he doesn't even try - he just attributes it to old age.

DEAR READER: Loss of libido (sex drive) has many causes, some physical, others emotional. For example, your husband's interest in sex can be substantially reduced by alcohol, many prescription drugs, ill health, and an age-related deficiency of male hormone (testosterone). In addition, he may have lost interest in sex because of stress, depression and other psychological factors.

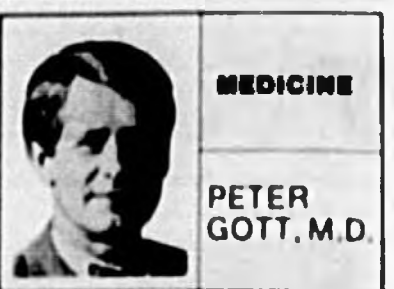

To discover the root of the problem, he should be examined by his family physician, who can subsequently enlist the aid of specialists - such as urologists or counselors - if appropriate. Your husband's lack of libido is probably treatable, once a diagnosis is made.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've just been released from the hospital after suffering for eight days with ischemic colitis. Do you have any information that would be helpful?

DEAR READER: Ischemic colitis, a dangerous medical condition, causes recurring diarrhea and internal bleeding. Unlike other forms of colitis, this variety is caused by arteriosclerosis. Progressive narrowing of the arteries feeding the colon leads to an inadequate blood supply and an eventual deterioration of the colonic lining. The diarrhea may be difficult to stop and the bleeding may be impossible to arrest.

The diagnosis is usually made by an arteriogram (a special X-ray), after other causes of colitis have been ruled out by appropriate testing, such as stool analysis, blood tests and colonoscopy. In some cases, bypass surgery (to re-establish arterial blood flow) is indicated.

However, in most instances, doctors and patients must be content to treat symptoms as

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

In the British Commonwealth, today is called Boxing Day because lords of the manor traditionally gave their serfs gifts in boxes. Nevertheless, one automatically conjures up a picture of pugilists in the ring. And as the Israeli statesman Abba Eban said, "History teaches us that men and nations behave wisely once they have exhausted all other alternatives."

At the bridge table, sometimes the right play is the last one you consider. However, if you make a habit of analyzing all the alternatives, you will eventually realize which is best and make the winning play. Today's deal is like that.

South opened four spades, of course. East doubled to show cards and West bid his best suit. After North's five spades, West was tempted to go to six diamonds but rightly resisted the temptation.

West cashed the heart king, then played a heart to his partner. What should East lead now?

Under different circumstances, the diamond jack would work well but it is clearly useless here. How about the club king? That can also achieve nothing. If South has a club loser, it isn't going anywhere. Here, this defense just helps South establish dummy's fifth club for a discard, using all three of dummy's trump entries in the process.

The killing defense is a trump switch, which uses up one of dummy's entries prematurely. South must lose a diamond at trick 13, for one down.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 27, 1994

If you want to test your entrepreneurial aptitude, the year ahead could be very much to your liking. Don't be afraid to take a calculated risk to better your lot in life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will have the diplomatic wherewithal today to settle an important matter between dissenting parties. If you're not asked to help, volunteer your services. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This could be a red letter day for you. Something you've worked long and hard on can be brought to a profitable conclusion today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Getting others to rally to your banner today will be easy if you lead by example. Show them firsthand that your way of doing things works well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Two important projects of yours can now be finalized satisfactorily. The conclusions of both projects will be slightly related.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Companions will listen attentively and heed what you say today. They'll instinctively know that your judgments are fair.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Rewards for your efforts will motivate you to fulfill your ambitious objectives today. Profit is not a dirty word.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Treat today's developments philosophically instead of fighting City Hall. An open mind could turn you into a winner without putting forth too much effort.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A relative might have a piece of advice for you today that could turn a problematical family issue into something resolvable. Hear him/her through.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something tough might need to be said today, but you'll find a diplomatic way of phrasing it. Others will be glad the burden of presentation fell on you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not hesitate to give vent to your financial ambitions today. Conditions are in your favor and you should be able to accomplish what you desire.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Challenge will bring out the best in you today. You need some type of involvement that offers a bit of friendly competition. Tennis, golf or bowling, anyone?
