Wyoming gets winter in July

WILMINGTON, Wyo. — Meteorologists had a snowball's chance in July of predicting the weather near the northern Wyoming border Saturday.

Most Wyoming residents began the holiday weekend with sunny skies and warm weather, but people in northern Wyoming scrambled for their snowsuits.

The foot of new snow was reported in parts of Grand Teton National Park and heavy snow also fell at lower elevations of the park.

The National Weather Service had predicted thunderstorms across northern Wyoming for Saturday. But heavy rains combined with a cold front over the Tetons to produce snow.

Rangers in the park's backcountry, at an elevation of about 11,000 feet, reported 12 inches of new snow on Saturday, accompanied by winds of 65 mph, park spokeswoman Linda Olson said.

"So we've got full winter conditions," she said. "It's pretty crazy. I wish it were 98 degrees again."

Judge rewards good Samaritan

EAST ALTON, Ill. — Only one person in a crowded courtroom rushed to help a man who had a fatal heart attack, and a judge rewarded the good Samaritan by dismissing charges against him.

William Kerlovich, 68, slumped over in his seat in a Madison County courtroom soon after pleading guilty to petty theft of a pack of cigarettes.

Of about 60 people in the courtroom, only Gregory J. Lett, who had just pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct, attempted to resuscitate Kerlovich.

His guy didn't hesitate. He just did it, prosecutor Todd Lupton said.

The judge dismissed the charge against Lett Jan. 26.

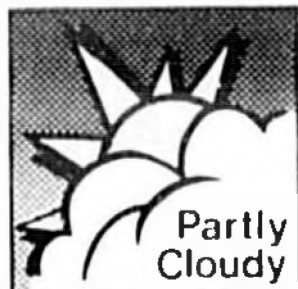

Lupton said that was the equivalent of community service. Madison County Associate Judge Lewis Mallon said Friday.

Sanford man charged with firing shot at car during traffic dispute

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A July 24 arraignment has been set for a Sanford man charged with firing a shot at a car in Lake Mary Friday.

Michael Ray Cunningham, 42, was released from jail Saturday after posting $4,000 bond. He faces charges of aggravated assault and aggravated battery after allegedly firing a pistol at a car driven by Lance McCabe, 2431 S. Lake Avenue, Sanford. His brother, Travis, of the same address was a passenger.

The brothers told police they were involved in an altercation with Cunningham at the intersection of Lake Mary Boulevard and Longwood Lake Mary Road. The McCabe's claim while driving Cunningham out them off. They said they made a thumb finger gesture toward him which he returned. The McCabe's said all parties remained in their cars. The McCabe's continued down the boulevard and onto country club road.

The McCabe's Pontiac Grand Prix was struck in the right front fender by a bullet from a black 9 mm pistol allegedly fired by Cunningham. The brothers said two shots were fired, with one striking their car.

Cunningham, who was driving a Honda Civic, told investigators the problem began when he and the McCabe car made a simultaneous lane change on Lake Mary Boulevard. The thumb finger gestures were exchanged. At a red light at the Longwood Lake Mary Road intersection, Cunningham told Lake Mary Police, the brothers exited their car and came up to his car and hit it SANFORD — Area residents are expected to flock to the lakefront Sunday night for the annual Fourth of July celebration.

Special operations officer Lt. Doug Bishop says residents should arrive early to find a parking space. Ample parking is available in the numerous lots near the lake and along the downtown streets. Close parental supervision of children, especially if they are playing with sparklers or other fireworks, will also reduce accidents and injuries, Bishop said.

Parking time limits will not be enforced Sunday night in the municipal lots or along the streets. Bishop encourages revelers to park downtown and walk the short distance to observe the SANFORD — Recycling collections dropped last month from the record matching level reached in April.

A total of 7.6 million lbs. of yard waste, aluminum cans and other recyclable materials were collected throughout the county in May according to the monthly report released by the Seminole County Solid Waste Division in April '96.

Festival of arts grows, changes

By SARABECCA ROSIER

HEATHROW — More artists than ever have come forward early this year to participate in the Lake Mary Heathrow Festival of the Arts.

Not only will this seventh art festival have more artists than last year, 330 compared to last year's 260, but the 1993 festival will include 80 fine crafts people. These artists are from around the world and will be competing for $15,000 in prizes.

Organizers decided the crafts people would be an asset to the festival. To get a feel for them, Joanne Lupas, chairman, along with DeLores Lash, a vice chairman, and Suzanne Stanford began attending art festivals across the country. They visited the Mount Dora Festival (280 artists), the Coconut Grove Festival, and St. Stephens Festival (580 artists), the Miami Art Festival (300 artists) and million lbs. were collected, a record first set in June 1992.

In the unincorporated areas of the county, about 1.2 million lbs. of recyclable household garbage was collected from curbsides, a tad less than the 1.3 million lbs. collected in April.

Local city recycling collections increased. In Sanford, curbside recycling collections increased from 143,000 lbs. to 163,300 lbs. In Lake Mary, collections also increased, from 49,499 lbs. to 55,813 lbs. In Longwood, the collections increased from 91,511 lbs. to 97,023 lbs.

County curb yard waste collections decreased from 855,691 lbs. in April to 418,679 lbs. last month.

Newspapers accounted for more than half the recyclable material collected from city and county curbside bins. Of the approximately 2 million lbs. of recyclable garbage collected, newspapers represented 1.2 million lbs. Glass represented the second-highest amount, with 543,644 lbs. and plastic was third with 134,439 lbs.

Sanford yard waste collections dropped from more than 1 million lbs. in April to 662,480 lbs. in May. Lake Mary yard waste collections dropped from 80,960 lbs. in April to 61,560 lbs. Longwood collections dropped from 547,860 lbs. to 181,920 lbs. Much of the April collections were storm debris, officials there said.

Changes in service may require changes in contracts; changes which could increase program costs to residents.

certainly been answered. Overwhelmingly, the residents of Seminole County have embraced their recycling program as no one imagined.

In a short span of time, the recycling rate in Seminole County has climbed from 1 percent in 1989, to 7 percent in 1990, to 23 percent in 1992. Another fiscal year ends in June, so the recycling rate will again be calculated. By late 1994, Seminole County must meet the state mandated 30 percent recycling rate.

Since the recycling program has grown, the timely question has now become "Why can't we recycle more items?" The answer to the question is two-fold: the collection system currently in place and the processing (including marketing) system currently in place for curbside recycling. Both the collection and processing are contracted out to private companies.

Collection system

The collection system currently in place is a curbside sort. This means residents place all recyclables in one bin. The driver of the recycling vehicle must sort each item into a separate bin in the truck. There are separate bins for each color of glass (green, brown & clear). There is a separate bin for metal cans (aluminum & steel). There is a separate bin for plastic beverage containers (HDPE & PETE). There is also a separate bin for newspapers.

The collection system is part of the franchise contract with the hauling companies. Major changes, such as adding more items for collection, may require re-negotiating this contract before the expiration date.

Processing system

The processing system for the curbside recycling program is contracted through Southeast Recycling in Longwood. This contract itemizes the recyclables Southeast Recycling will accept from the curbside recycling program and also specifies the method of delivery to their facility.

The recyclables listed were based on the availability of markets for those recyclables when the contract was signed in 1990. No material is "recycled" without a market. Seminole County did not want to be in a position of collecting any item that had no market, and end up landfilling the material.

This processing (including marketing) contract with Southeast Recycling expires in the fall of 1993, but does include two one-year extensions.

All curbside recyclables in the cities and the unincorporated county go to Southeast Recycling for processing, with the exception of the city of Sanford who markets their own recyclables.

Since 1990 markets for recyclables have traveled a bumpy road. Overall, the trend for marketing recyclables from 1990 through 1992 was downward. But, markets have rebounded in 1993.

Locating markets and receiving revenue for the materials has been a challenge. Since nearly all county recycling programs in the state of Florida began at the same time, the marketplace was saturated with material. The basic force of supply and demand became the dominant factor in all recycling programs. Too much material arriving at the marketplace resulted in less demand (and less revenue) for the recyclables.

Throughout the past three (3) years, Seminole County and Southeast Recycling have researched markets for additional items for the curbside recycling program. Currently, two items are under review for addition to the recycling program.

So, when you ask "why can't we add more items to the curbside recycling program," remember the recycling program was developed and initiated through contracts with private companies to provide specific services. Changes in service may require changes in contracts; changes which could increase program costs to residents.

Johns Committee

Klan got off easy in secret legislative group's hunts

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Investigators for a secret Florida legislative committee apparently believed Ku Klux Klan claims that it really was a peaceful organization engaged in charitable works.

Long-hidden files of the Johns Committee show that Klansmen had knowledge of bombings and whippings during the late 1950s and early 1960s, but investigators recommended no formal hearings into the KKK.

Instead, following a series of interviews with KKK members, investigators decided simply to turn the information over to police.

"There is nothing in the background information on the KKK incorporated in our report sent you several weeks ago that would require a hearing," the committee's investigators wrote.

But they indicated that giving the interviews to police might help the Johns Committee deal with criticism that it was focusing too much attention on allegations of communists among the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"This action would meet the requirements of our mandate, and also avoid publicity which might indicate a one-sided approach to the problems current in Florida," the investigators wrote.

The files of the Florida Legislative Investigation Committee — called the Johns Committee for its longtime chairman, Sen. Charley Johns of Starke — were opened Thursday for the first time because of a new open records constitutional amendment.

The committee operated in secret from 1956-65, focusing on communists and homosexuals but also investigating civil rights activists, the Klan and whiskey bootleggers, among others. The names were deleted from most records.

The KKK members told investigators repeatedly that their group was a peaceful fraternal society engaged in charitable works. One Klansman took pains to point out that his group had a ladies' auxiliary much like a church organization.

Lead investigator R.J. Strickland wrote after interviewing several Klansmen that the group could be considered a "fact-finding" organization intending to "expose certain elements which could be contrary to the form of democratic government we have today."

Workers' comp game: Judges are hostages

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — As Florida's governor, business, labor, lawyers and doctors fight to influence workers' compensation reform, judges who hear injured workers' claims say they're hostages in the summer's top political power game.

Since February 1992, Gov. Lawton Chiles has quietly refused to grant new terms for workers' compensation claims judges, forcing those whose terms expire to serve in limbo like apartment dwellers on a month-to-month lease.

"We're all pawns in this," said Michael Demarko of Pensacola, a compensation claims judge for 17 years. He's one of more than a half-dozen recommended for another term who haven't received new commissions from the governor.

Industry and labor groups tried in the regular legislative session to put the 32 claims judges under control of a labor-management board that the governor would name, and say they'll try again in an expected fall special session on workers' compensation reform.

The judges are currently nominated and recommended for retention by a 15-member commission with five members named by the Florida Bar, five by the governor and five chosen by those 10.

Lawyers guarding their part in the system cite scandals more than 20 years ago in blasting what they say would be a return to political patronage under Chiles' plan.

Industry representatives argue that judges beholden to a lawyers' panel are more likely to let cases drag and benefits build, increasing attorneys' fees.

"That's putting the fox in the henhouse," said Jon Shebel, president of the state's largest industry lobbying group, Associated Industries of Florida. "They're too cosy, too close."

Two girls allowed in tourney after Little League lawsuit

By The Associated Press

TAMPA — Two girls will be allowed to suit up for an all-star softball tournament after winning a suit against Little League Baseball Inc., which tried to bar them because of membership in another league.

"As the words to the national pastime say: These two young ladies can 'play ball,'" Hillsborough Circuit Judge Guy Spicola told Erin Hicks, 11, and Dana Burkhorn, 12, during a hearing Friday.

They had been barred from all-star competition because they joined another softball league after their Little League regular season ended in late May.

The two girls, through their mothers, sued Little League Baseball to keep the organization from preventing their participation in the all-star tournament.

Both girls had signed on to play on American Softball Association (ASA) teams. Both Little League and the American Softball Association believe most girls 12 and younger are neither physically nor mentally mature to play in several leagues simultaneously, said Little League attorney John Jaszczak.

Hicks sued June 25 to keep from being disqualified as an all star. Burkhorn joined her Friday, because Little League already had disqualified her.

Karen Taylor, who coaches Northwest Little League in Tampa, called the rule barring participation in more than one league "ridiculous."

"These kids could be doing much worse," Ms. Taylor said. "They could be out on the streets. Or they could be home watching TV."

Little League Baseball operates under two sets of rules: one for the regular season and another for tournament play, said Erin's attorney, Martin Garcia.

Tournament rules for Little League require only a girl meet the age restriction and have played a half-season, Garcia said. Regular season rules don't allow girls to play in another league during the season, he said.

Neither of the girls had done that.

Nuclear weapons tests suspended

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton today announced a suspension of nuclear weapons testing and called on the world's other nuclear powers to do the same.

In remarks taped for his weekly radio address, Clinton said the United States would not test its nuclear warheads at least until Oct. 1, 1994 — as long as other nuclear powers don't either.

"If these nations join us in observing this moratorium, we will be in the strongest possible position to negotiate a comprehensive test ban and to discourage other nations from developing their own nuclear arsenals," Clinton said.

Clinton noted that during his election campaign he pledged a "wholehearted commitment" to achieving a ban on nuclear testing worldwide.

He stopped short of saying he would now seek such a ban, although Russian President Boris Yeltsin said Thursday that he had spoken with Clinton by phone and that the president had promised to work with Russia for a Comprehensive Test Ban treaty.

The issue is expected to come up in Clinton's talks with Yeltsin at next week's economic summit in Tokyo.

An administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Clinton was prepared to send envoys to Britain, France, China and Russia to start discussions about negotiations on a test-ban treaty. All five nuclear powers have been observing a testing moratorium since last year.

"If, however, this moratorium is broken by another nation," Clinton warned, "I will direct the Department of Energy to prepare to conduct additional tests" and seek approval from Congress.

Clinton directed the Energy Department to maintain its capability to conduct nuclear tests, saying that at the same time his administration would find ways to ensure the safety of the nuclear arsenal without actual nuclear detonations once a test ban goes into effect.

That would entail computer simulations and explosions of non-nuclear materials, experts say.

Clinton noted that when Congress imposed a nine-month moratorium on testing last October, it also allowed for 15 nuclear tests to be conducted until a comprehensive ban was achieved. It directed the president to work toward such an agreement with the other nuclear powers by Oct. 1, 1996.

Clinton said the administration had originally considered conducting more tests until 1996. But "after a thorough review, my administration has determined that the nuclear weapons in the United States arsenal are safe and reliable."

He also said that renewed testing now, after a nine-month suspension, would undercut U.S. efforts to stop the spread of nuclear weapons and would prompt other nuclear powers to resume testing, too.

The president will decide next year whether to extend the moratorium further, depending on the willingness of the world's other four nuclear powers to progress toward a test-ban treaty, according to a Pentagon memo obtained Friday.

Clinton's decision comes after months of fiery debates within the administration among advocates and opponents of testing. Growing opposition to testing from Congress finally tipped the balance.

Testing foes argued that renewed testing would make it hard for the United States to achieve its goal of renewing the worldwide Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, which comes up for review by its 157 signatories in January 1995.

Rep. Mike Kopetski, D-Ore., one of the architects of the moratorium law, said that "all previous negotiations on arms control ... pale in comparison to the magnitude of this step. We are now rushing headlong forward on the path to peace."

Corporations wine, dine Florida sheriffs groups

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Ethical concerns have been raised over the Florida Sheriffs Association policy of soliciting parties and banquets from corporations, despite bans on gifts at most sheriff's departments.

The social events are part of the association's winter and summer conferences, and they're underwritten by businesses trying to sell their crime-fighting equipment or services. The Tampa Tribune reported Saturday.

The goods marketed range from guns and flashlights to boats, helicopters and multimillion-dollar contracts for computer systems and medical-care services.

One Tallahassee law firm that holds the contract to oversee insurance funds from sheriff's departments puts on a $1,000 golf tournament that opens each conference. In January, a Texas computer company put up $500 for a four-hour Super Bowl Party at a Clearwater conference.

Other companies have paid for banquets, fashion shows for the sheriffs' wives and entertainment for their children.

The gifts are accepted by the sheriffs, although each of the officials has imposed policies in their departments discouraging employees from taking favors as part of their official duties.

But J.M. "Buddy" Phillips Jr., the executive director of the Sheriff's Association, says he doesn't believe there is an ethical conflict because the sheriffs technically don't accept the gifts, the association does.

"We certainly don't want to have a conflict with the law, and we don't want to put our sheriffs in that situation," Phillips said. Government watchdog groups say whenever public officials are the recipients of special favors from people seeking business, there are ethical concerns.

Phillips said the organization is asking the Florida Commission on Ethics for an interpretation of the gifts law to determine if the sheriffs, who are elected officials, should disclose the perks.

Stricter than state law are the policies each of the 67 sheriffs have implemented at their own departments. The policies differ in the degrees but clearly indicate law enforcement officers shouldn't solicit or accept anything of value.

"Thus, they should be firm in refusing gifts, favors or gratuities, large or small, which can, in the public mind, be interpreted as capable of influencing his judgment in the discharge of his duties," reads the policy at the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office.

The corporations pay about $500 to display their wares at conference trade shows. The association then sends out letters asking for donations, Phillips said.

Bill Jones, executive director of the government watchdog group Common Cause of Florida, said the sheriffs are venturing into a murky area of improper lobbying.

The companies who pay for the events say it is no secret it's good for business.

Stephen Yeich, a spokesman for Printrak International, a California company that produces a fingerprint identification system, said a corporation that depends on law enforcement needs to be visible at conferences. Printrak was one of six companies that paid for a country western "hoedown" barbecue at the Clearwater conference.

"That's a good place to get in front of sheriffs and chiefs of police, who are the decision makers," he said. "It is money well spent."

July 4: Time to join together

Forget our differences and join together. Those words helped inspire the signing of the Declaration of Independence 217 years ago. They should be today's motto as well.

We often overlook problems faced by the founding fathers of our nation. They were not united in seeking independence from England. They were faced with differences in religions, heritage, and what they felt were the needs of their particular states.

Yet they eventually came together in finalizing a document which has been the guideline for our nation for over two centuries.

Today, we are faced with many problems which also cause differences between our people. The operation of governmental bodies, taxation methods, personal rights and many others are all problems which may have a tendency to cause people to feel as though they were not free and independent.

On this day, more than any other, we should be united as one nation; we should pay tribute to our service personnel who protect us; we need to display the flag of our country; each person should accept the role of having brothers and sisters who live under that flag.

Each year, we celebrate other memorable days: Memorial day, Veterans Day, Armed Forces day, and various religious holidays. They each have their place in helping establish unity.

July 4th however, should be a special day of brotherhood on behalf of all Americans, regardless of their beliefs.

There are many events scheduled today. We urge families and individuals to become

For those who will be watching fireworks displays which have become traditional, we suggest recalling the pride expressed by Francis Scott Key in penning the words to what has become our National Anthem.

He was elated that our flag remained strong, despite the trials and tribulations of the attack against Fort McHenry in 1814.

Today, and in the future, our flag will continue to serve as the banner of unity and expression of freedom under which we dwell.

Commissioner Lon Howell's residency

This is sad, first it was the drugs you could buy in the park, then it was some buddy hanging laundry on the fence, now we come to the million dollar question? Where does he (Sanford City Commissioner Lon Howell) live?

I'm sure we can all answer that. It's a downright shame when a commissioner has a job to perform and is either out of town or can't remember or puts the blame on someone else.

You're taught to read before signing anything and he can't recall the statement he signed for his son's school. In reading the articles in the Herald, Mr. Howell would be in trouble if there isn't anyone to blame.

Also, in the June 15, 1993 Herald you stated you were available to the people of your district. How could you be if you were out of town a great deal? (Your words, not mine.)

As it seems, it doesn't make any difference where you live because you have other things to take care of.

So the right thing for you to do is resign and let someone else in to do the job right and give us the commissioner we deserve. We need someone who has a good memory and knows where he lives.

"I got out of lemonade and into information. Want some?"

School psychologists air complaint

Organizational theory suggests that open lines of communication is an important aspect of a successful managerial style. Management by objectives calls for the participation of persons directly involved in attaining the objective. In planning for reaching the objective. Additionally, change is not unilaterally decreed from above, rather communication in preparation for change flows both ways.

The current situation involving Dr. Paul Hagerty and the Florida Association of School Psychologists (FASP) could have been prevented. The Florida Association of School Psychologists reviewed documentation relating to services to children and ethical practices in Seminole County. Prior to contacting the Florida Department of Education, FASP wrote the superintendent about their concerns that were rebuffed. Thus, FASP concluded that an investigation by the State Department of Education was in order.

FASP is the state association of school psychologists and is conversant with practices throughout the state. FASP is affiliated with the National Association of School Psychologists and are aware of standards nationwide. Consequently, FASP's entry into the fray is to insure that children in Seminole County are permitted to receive the repertoire of services psychologists are capable of providing.

Among the concerns delineated in FASP's

SEMINOLE OPINION

letter to the Department of Education are: school psychologists are not permitted to select the test they deem necessary in assessing a child; only one area of exceptionality may be assessed; interpretation of data is limited to a form (checklist) and written recommendations are not permitted.

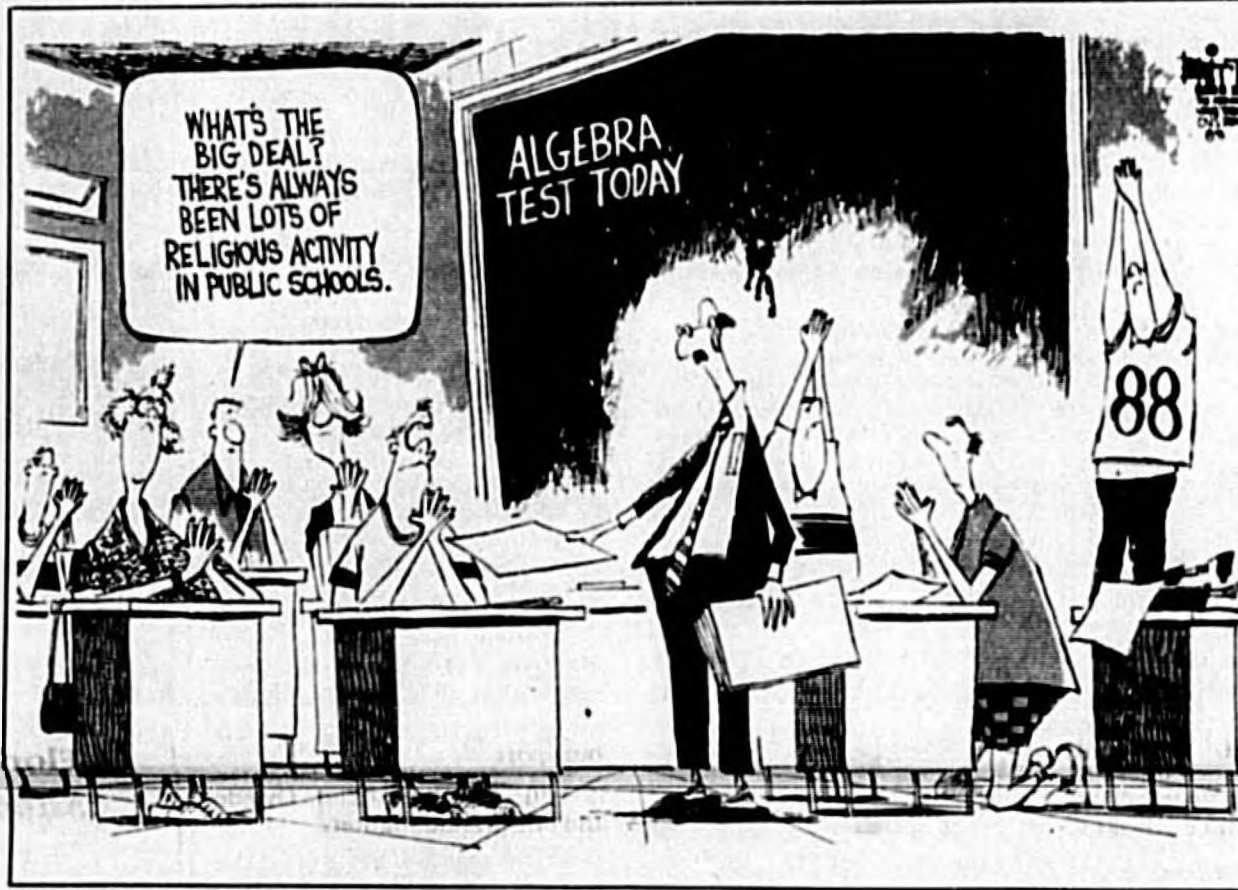

FASP's letter prompted the Florida Department of Education to send two staff persons to Seminole County this week to investigate the situation. Everyone connected with the school system should have one common objective, providing the best educational service to children. United by this common objective they should be able to work together to achieve the objective.

The concerns voiced by about half of Seminole

County's school psychologists have emanated from the fact that their services to children have been drastically curtailed. The concept of considering the whole child is a cardinal principle when endeavoring to determine a child's specific problem area. This approach has been abandoned for a piecemeal approach that does not speedily identify the problem area and devise programmatic remedies.

The helping professions, counselors, social workers and school psychologists have been professionally trained to address each child's individual needs in a systematic fashion, all variables that might interfere with a child's ability to learn. Generally, a first step in the process is to request that parents have the child examined physically. If the child's vision, hearing and general health are not contributing factors, then the psychological realm may be explored. Limiting this assessment to a single test to determine eligibility or ineligibility is questionable.

Managers in Seminole County schools responsible for working with school psychologists need to revisit their management techniques. Working together to achieve the common objective of providing quality service to children means involving the school psychologists in the change process. It also means listening to employees' legitimate professional concerns.

Here's a summer reading list

BOSTON — Have you tried flying lately without taking John Grisham or Michael Crichton along? Were the people to the right of you reading "The Client" and the people to the left of you reading "Jurassic Park"? Did you feel like an unaccompanied minor?

These days, Grisham and Crichton together have seven books on the best-seller lists. It's enough to make even an agnostic on Rush Limbaugh wonder if that's "The Way Things Ought to Be."

Indeed the teeny pantheon of authors at the top — add Barbara Bradford, Sue Grafton, Scott Turow, Robert Ludlum, and mix — confirms the mild paranoia of an author friend who believes that there's a pyramid scheme of publishing. No matter how many authors are published, the same hundred appear in every bookstore.

But this is no time of year to get cranky. Summer is not just a season after all. It's an adjective. So in honor of Summer Reading, I again offer a Grisham-and-Crichton-free, entirely quirky, and thoroughly personal list of books that I just plain liked over the past months. Don't leave home without one.

First of all, two novels written on the intimate scale of living rooms, not 767s. "Before and After," is Rosellen Brown's unflinching tragedy about what happens when a safe, even smug family is divided into its parts and members are tested according to values as different as loyalty and justice. When the fateful doorbell rings at the Reiser home it's to announce that their son may have killed a young girl in their small New Hampshire town. Suddenly, the father knows instinctively "our life as a family, our single life as an eight-legged graceful animal alive under a single pelt, was over."

Sue Miller's "For Love" is a love story for the second act, when people come with children and ghosts, baggage and hopes. Lottie Gardner is a woman in the first year of an uneasy second marriage, with a 20-year-old son, a mother in a nursing home, and a brother in the throes of a love affair. This is the summer that she — and we — explore romance and excess, illusions and real love-life.

In contrast to this modern angst, a trip down "The Road to Wellville" may be just what the doctor ordered. T. Coraghessan Boyle has written a delicious and nutritious historic tale about turn-of-the-century Battle Creek, Mich., when John Harvey Kellogg rode the crest of the health craze. It's a terrific antidote to the current oatbran brigade. We've been there before.

We've also been through the Fifties and I am not at all sure that I welcome the return. But they're back. For serious readers, David Halberstam's trek through the decade, "The Fifties," stands as a reference book to read from the back — the index — forward.

But for the feel of the time, I would choose Calvin Trillin's elegant memoir, essay, reflection — all of the above — called "Remembering Denny." Trillin "remembers" the golden, smiling Yale classmate who was "a Rhodes scholar, of course," a man whose classic "unfulfilled promise" ended in suicide at age 55. In some ways this careful, evocative and elegant book is both an exploration and an example of the Fifties generation's painful, don't-get-too-close restraint.

Repression is a better word for the stifling atmosphere of Jeffrey Eugenides' Seventies suburb in his novel "The Virgin Suicides." The narrators are middle-aged men still haunted by the suicides of the five Lisbon girls in a house that gradually "receded behind its mists of youth being choked off."

Eugenides draws a spell in creating the atmosphere of near-madness around these young girls. But Susanna Kaysen breaks just such a spell. "Girl, Interrupted" is not a confessional book or an accusatory book. It is a literary work about the three years Kaysen spent in a private mental hospital. It's about hospital life and its keepers. "As for finders," she writes "well, we had to be our own finders."

If you want to spend this summer reading ahead, Paul Kennedy's book, "Preparing for the 21st Century" offers up some fairly sober food for advance thought. For personal preparation, however, I finally caught up with John Allen Paulos' "Innumeracy" — a 1988 book that offers even the mathphobic a motive and method for learning her numbers. And if Bosnia, Somalia, Iraq are models, the world is likely to offer even more reason to read Michael Walzer's classic work, "Just and Unjust Wars."

Finally, about "Possessing the Secret of Joy." I had something akin to approach-avoidance to this Alice Walker novel. It took me a year to get past the theme — genital mutilation — and open up the cover. Well, it's tough, it's powerful and deeply poetic. As one character said, "They do not want to hear what their children suffer. They've made the telling of suffering itself taboo." Writing at its best, and Alice Walker at her best, breaks taboos.

So in honor of Summer Reading, I offer a Grisham and Crichton free list of books that I just plain liked.

No bedside phones for VA patients

WASHINGTON — At the height of World War II, Joseph O'Connell spent 10 months confined as a prisoner of war in Nazi Germany. Half a century later, O'Connell spent the week leading up to Independence Day isolated once again — in a Washington, D.C., Veterans Affairs hospital.

The scars on his right arm still reveal the path of shell fragments from the explosion that left him temporarily paralyzed in his face and right arm. But there are other scars that are less visible, such as the loneliness of life for O'Connell and other bedridden vets who don't have access to bedside phones.

While $15 billion a year is spent on caring for those who served their country, American vets continue to cope without one of the most basic lifelines of non-vet hospitals: the telephone.

O'Connell, however, counts himself as relatively fortunate because he's well enough to be wheeled to a pay phone. Others are sentenced to their beds by their conditions and have no direct access to the outside world. The vets may enjoy state-of-the-art medical technology, but they have to suffer limited communication.

The government estimates that it would cost about $187 million to have all VA hospital rooms wired for phone service. A VA spokesperson told us that finding those funds would require a "trade-off" with medical services. Of the 172 veterans hospitals, the VA has only wired one with bedside telephones. A handful of others have had phones installed by volunteer groups that donated the equipment.

Even government bean counters, however, might find the logic compelling for installing telephones. Congressional investigators found that nurses at one VA hospital were spending 1,600 hours per year helping patients with the telephone or taking messages — even though they are already overstretched providing primary care.

One VA nurse told our associate Andrew Conte that the benefits of getting patients access to phones are often worth the effort. "Just (a family member's) voice itself is helpful," said Norma Roque, nursing coordinator at the VA Medical Center in New York. "(The benefit) has a lot to do in terms of (the patient's) spirits and in their determination to get well — you can tell a difference in their faces if they talked to their families."

Lawrence Kendal, a patient at the New York VA hospital, describes the precision planning vets invest attempting to talk to their families. In Kendal's case, his mother serves as an intermediary with his three children. A specific time is arranged for the children to place the call to a hospital pay phone. But all the planning is for naught if it turns out another patient is using the phone at that time.

Lately, Kendal is feeling lucky. Earlier this year he was confined to a bed and couldn't even play the odds with the hospital pay phone. "It was pathetic because I wanted to talk to someone other than the nurses, someone on the outside," he says. "Having a phone would have made a big difference."

There are many bedridden vets who would add an "amen" to that.

There are other scars such as the loneliness of life for bedridden vets who don't have access to bedside phones.

family came to Sanford in 1958. I was nine years old. My father was transferred here by the Navy. My parents were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. LaFollette and they fell in love with Sanford. They decided to retire here as did many Navy families.

"My father left the service and worked for the City of Sanford's water department until his untimely death in 1972. My mother served as a cafeteria manager at both Southside Elementary and Lakeview Middle Schools. She passed away in 1984. Obviously I don't consider myself an old timer quite yet. But by practically spending my whole life in Sanford I'll become an old timer sooner than I think.

"But I'm writing to you this July 4th about an incident that happened shortly after my family arrived in Sanford in 1958. At the same time it might honor a hero who has apparently been forgotten. I was reminded about this after the recent spectacular air show at the local airport.

"It was early in 1959, while visiting the Sanford Naval Air Station one Saturday morning to get a hair cut at the Navy Exchange. When we entered the installation there was a large, new sign at the main entrance next to the Marine Guard House which read:

WELCOME
RAMEY FIELD
SANFORD NAVAL AIR STATION

SANFORD, FLORIDA
"Upon noticing the sign for the first time I asked my father why the base was now called 'Ramey Field?'"

He related to me how a lieutenant commander by the name of James Ramey in June 1958 had flown his malfunctioning aircraft over a number of homes surrounding the base and rode the plane down until it crashed. It cost him his own life. But it spared the lives of an untold number of people in doing so.

"The airfield had been renamed by the Navy in memory of Commander Ramey. He is buried in Oaklawn Cemetery in Lake Mary. According to the marker he was a native Floridian, a veteran of World War II and Korea. He was awarded the distinguished Flying Cross for his heroic action. He would have been 73 years old last April 5.

"I never knew the officer. But I'm very proud of him. I frequently visit his grave.

"During the some 35 years I've lived in Sanford not once have I ever heard any mention of this event other than the story my father passed on to me. I would like to see if former Navy people still living in this area might from time to time conduct a brief memorial service and perhaps the Central Florida Regional Airport Authority could erect a plaque to honor Commander Ramey in some way."

The letter is signed: "Duane J. LaFollette."

I don't know about you but I recall reading about this event in the Herald even though I was living in California at the time. And, I agree! This flyer's memory should not be forgotten, especially when he gave his own life to save the lives of others.

I'm going to make every effort to maintain this Navy man's memory. You will hear more about this later. Meanwhile, we owe Duane a debt of gratitude for bringing this matter to our attention. And, I'll wager a lot of retired Navy people in this area will agree with me.

Recently, while I was hospitalized, my Sunday column about the bugle call "Taps" got "messed up." When I got the first call that morning I knew something had gone wrong. It was not the fault of the Herald. Its editors, nor the exceptionally nice young lady who sets the type each week on a word processor. The fault was mine.

But sometimes I'm like the fellow who falls into the septic tank and comes up smelling like a rose. That "messed up" column about "Taps" has produced more information about how the bugle call came about than you can shake a stick at. And, it's downright interesting and most informative. In fact, it's so interesting the Herald's editors have agreed to use it in November of this year when our nation celebrates Armistice Day (or what we now call Veterans Day).

So bear with us folks. This column tries to be educational and informative. And, I can tell you this: When you read the story of "Taps" you will learn something you will never forget.

fireworks. By parking and walking, Bishop said people would relieve traffic congestion and avoid delays in leaving the area. Seminole Boulevard from Sanford Avenue to San Juan will be closed for the fireworks.

Some of the parking lots available are: city hall, courthouse, downtown banks, the civic center and chamber of commerce building. Parking will not be permitted in the post office lot.

Bishop said 18 to 20 officers will be assigned to the event. Although no parking is permitted on the grassy area along the lake, Bishop said it will be nearly impossible to prevent it Sunday night. However, the police will enforce no parking on the median strips near French Avenue and Seminole Boulevard because of potential damage to the landscape plantings and sprinkler system. Bishop said, "We are going to try to keep people out of there by roping off the area."

Following a number of events Sunday, including the late addition of Tiger's Eye Production exotic animal show, the People's Fireworks display is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m. along the lakefront near Fort Mellon Park, sponsored by the Sanford-Seminole Jaycees.

many others. They spoke to 2,400 artists asking for their opinions and recommendations to make the Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts the largest and best ever.

This weekend, while you are reading this, the Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts committee will be representing the Sunshine Artist magazine while visiting the third annual Cherry Creek Festival in Denver, Colo. In only its third year, the Cherry Creek Arts Festival is ranked as one of the top six outdoor juried art events in the U.S. by the Harris-Rhodes List. This publication rates juried art shows throughout the United States. In addition, the event received "The art event of the year" recognition by The Denver Post in 1991. Lucas and her committee are going to try to find out what they are doing right and bring it home to Lake Mary-Heathrow's festival.

Another difference this year is that the art festivals are now working together as a whole; they are learning the value of viewing past mistakes and learning from them and being supportive of each other in a cohesive manner.

Lucas said this year "we hope to increase the scholarship funding from $15,000 to $25,000 to be awarded to graduating high school students, the amount to be determined by the success of the festival." She continued, "We feel that Seminole County as a whole and all the chambers of commerce and many civic groups have been very supportive."

Art teachers from all Seminole schools will participate in the "children's area" and cash awards will be presented to their classroom. Two thousand elementary students will present their art, and cash prizes will be awarded to four student artists.

Lucas says, "For the past seven years my approach to this festival was as a business challenge, as my background is as a successful business woman, and my motives were less than altruistic. However, this year when I presented the scholarships to students that otherwise couldn't attend college and they cried in my arms when they received these scholarships, I suddenly changed my viewpoints drastically."

The seventh annual Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts will be held Oct. 2, 3, 1993, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday. The festival is held on L&L Acres Ranch, situated on 50 acres of gently rolling hills and beautiful trees adjoining the picturesque lake, Exit 50 on I-4.

Local artist Alice Bach Hyde was chosen to design the poster for this year's arts festival. This Longwood artist works with watercolors and pastels and received the 1992 Merit Award from the Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts. She designed the poster that year with two horses grazing on the L&L Ranch. This year's poster is a beautiful and vividly colored scene from St. Augustine's picturesque city.

The festival needs volunteers for all areas and should you desire to volunteer, contact the festival committee: Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts, 365 Saddleworth Place, Heathrow, FL 32746 (Telephone: 407-333-1570 or 333-2357) (Fax: 407-333-0151).

with something. Cunningham sped away, pursued by the McCabes and turned onto Country Club Road.

As the McCabe car pulled next to his vehicle, Cunningham claims he was hit in the face by an ice-filled soft drink cup tossed from the pursuing car, nearly blinding him.

The police report states: "He (Cunningham) fearing for his life pointed his pistol out the window at the moving vehicle next to him and fired one round at the street. This stopped the subjects (McCabes) and he was able to escape from them."

The investigation into the incident is continuing. Sanford Police arrested Cunningham at his home. He was booked into the John E. Polk Correctional Facility late Friday afternoon.

Let's

Regard school as your job

By PAT SOUTHWARD
Special to the Herald

What do you say when your teenager comes home and says, "I want to get a job?"

Most of us would say, "Great! Do it!" Inside, we're thinking, "Now he's going to find out what real life is like!" Or maybe, "Wait'll she has to deal with a real boss!"

For a lot of us, the financial help will be a relief. Teenage expenses are endless. If they don't need shoes because they've outgrown the old ones, they want them because some sports star endorses them, and that's just the beginning. There's movies, there's fast food, there's field trips and club dues. Senior year is incredibly expensive — the student buys the cap and gown these days, and the pressure is turned up high to buy engraved name cards, invitations, class rings. Then there's Grad Night at Disney, Prom, the senior gift...and the beat goes on.

What a relief to be able to say, "Have fun. It's your money."

A few parents will say something about not letting it interfere with schoolwork, but by the time the evidence is in, both parent and student are spoiled to the extra income. Very few take a really hard look. But a hard look should be taken.

An after-school job these days isn't a couple of hours delivering papers — too often it's 25, 30 or even more hours per week, and no kid can spend that much time on the job and not have it affect his/her schoolwork.

Since most teen jobs start at minimum wage and edge slowly up to maybe a dollar more, there's no way we can be talking about any big money (especially after Social Security) until the student starts putting in major hours.

So let's have a look: Are these kids selling their birthright, an education, for a few dollars? Are we letting them? What is it costing to earn that $50, $80, $100 a week? Is that cost too high?

The question really came to life for me last fall as I was assisting in a pre-algebra class in high school. Algebra I is a "gateway" course: a student simply has to get through it to move ahead to technical training or college and to the better-paying jobs. Top students start taking pre-algebra in the seventh grade and are done with Algebra I before they start high school.

Pat Southward visits Seminole High, where she formerly served as president of the PTSA.

but some of the students in my class were in the 11th grade. In other words, this was their last chance.

And they were falling asleep. Or not making it to school at all. I asked one boy, who was clearly bright enough to pass with only a little effort, why he wasn't doing his homework, not paying attention in class, not able to remember a skill from one day to the next.

"Well," he told me, "I just don't have time for this stuff. I have to put in at least 35 hours a week to make my car payments and insurance, and even if I don't go out with my friends at all, I just don't have time."

This boy had made a decision at age 16 or 17 that is going to shape the rest of his life: to put his car ahead of his opportunity for a better future. He'll regret it by the time he's 30 and he'll be a candidate for some training or re-training program, probably at taxpayers' expense.

And that's not the only way teenage jobs cost us. There's been a lot of attention lately to violence in the schools. Violence ends with guns and knives but it begins with lost tempers and fights. People who are chronically short of sleep are usually grumpy, short-tempered, out of patience as well as inattentive and careless.

Let's look at careless. There's plenty of evidence that fatigue is an important factor in causing accidents because it impairs judgment, affects reflexes, and magnifies the effects of alcohol. Teens have a hideous traffic accident record that should scare everyone.

Put school first!

Most health authorities say teenagers need at least eight hours per night sleep and more if possible during this final growth period. Cutting short sleep, like cutting short nutrition at this vital developmental stage, carries costs that may not be seen until later in life.

In Seminole County, high school classes start at 7:25 a.m. and dismissal is at 2:25 p.m. The day includes six 60-minute classes plus class change time plus lunch. Study halls are history; there's little hope for getting homework done on school time.

So, seven hours on campus plus travel time — say, eight hours before homework. Then add an average of 30 minutes homework per class (remember, there's both reading and written work) brings the total to 11 hours per day for schoolwork.

Talk to any high school teacher or coach. Most will confirm it — teens put their jobs way ahead of schoolwork and it shows.

But, the awful truth is, teenagers working suits a lot of people. In our modern "service economy" there are a lot of low-paying jobs whose unattractive features, such as night hours, fit into high schoolers' needs like a hand in a glove.

The manager who schedules a high school kid to close at 1 a.m. isn't thinking about that employee as a student who has to be sitting in class 8½ hours later.

All of us should be thinking about it however — society, I mean. Gallons of ink have been spilled explaining why the Japanese educational system seems to be doing so well, with their whole economy following closely.

How about this: their kids go to school full time. School is regarded as a full-time job, and schoolwork is respected as real work just as much as an outside job for pay. Check the Top Ten students at any school. Only a few will have been working and those few will have kept their hours down to maybe 10 per week.

Far from being lazy and having to be coerced into getting a job, most kids want to work to have money of their own. Paying your own way equals independence. You don't have to "ask." It's the earmark of the adulthood they've been struggling for.

For those of us who are already adults, our job in this as in all else related to teens, is keeping things in perspective. Don't let the students you are involved with as a parent, an employer, a friend, a customer, a neighbor or whatever, lose sight of his or her "real" job: equipping him/herself to earn a decent living and become a valuable contributor to our nation and our world.

In other words: Put school FIRST!

Ask Teena

DEAR TEENA:

I can't stand my little sister. My parents decided to have another kid after 15 years, but they expect me to be the full time baby sitter.

She's a nice kid and all, but I don't want to have a kid all the time with me at the movies or whatever and I don't want to stay home with her all the time either.

What should I do?

FRUSTRATED, SANFORD

alternative activities for her. What do you like to do? Go to the movies? Go to the beach? Go hiking? Make some suggestions.

Tell her that you don't mind going shopping all the time, but that you think there are other ways to have fun that don't involve going to the store and then show her a good time some place else.

Who knows. She may discover a hidden love for dancing or something.

DEAR FRUSTRATED:

First of all, don't resent your sister because your parents have asked you to assume the duties of full time baby sitter...it's not her fault.

But do talk to your parents about this.

Tell them that you don't mind taking care of your sister from time to time, but that you would like to have some freedom to choose to want to do your own things as well.

It isn't fair for them to expect you to care for your sister all the time, but you do have an obligation to take part in family chores...whatever they are.

I think that if you talk to your folks they'll understand.

DEAR TEENA:

My girlfriend is making me go shopping.

I don't mind going with her to the store once in a while, but she wants to go every day. I think it's boring, but she acts like it's an exciting treasure hunt.

And it's her own money she's spending, so I'm not upset because she's making me broke. I'm just bored.

What's the big deal with girls and shopping anyhow?

SHOPPED OUT, SANFORD

DEAR SHOPPED:

Maybe you need to suggest some

DEAR TEENA:

I need some help convincing my parents to let me go to college out of state.

They think I should go to school near here so I can stay at home.

But I have been accepted at a school in another state where I can study architecture. I think I should be able to go to school there.

ANGRY, LAKE MARY

DEAR ANGRY:

You didn't explain why your parents want you to stay home.

Are they being over-protective or are there financial considerations or is it something else?

If they are being protective, tell them that you are an adult (or practically one) and this is a good opportunity for you to prove how capable you are of acting like one.

If the consideration is purely a financial one, you are going to have to be willing and able to take on a job to pay the difference between what they can afford to pay and the cost of attending the out-of-state school.

Decide how committed you are and make some decisions about what you're willing to do and then go talk to them.

Magic donation benefits children

The Orlando Magic Youth Foundation donated $15,000 to fund a summer day camp program for developmentally disabled children at Camp Thunderbird in Apopka. (The program was implemented with United Way funding.)

Scholarship monies are currently available for mentally retarded children who would like to attend Camp Thunderbird day sessions this summer. The camp is located on 17 wooded acres of Wekiwa State Park 20 miles NW of Orlando. Children can enjoy swimming lessons, games and sports, crafts, nature trails and canoeing on surrounding Lake Pevatt.

First aid, CPR classes revised

In the excitement of an emergency, many may be frightened or confused about what to do. Stay calm, you can help.

The emergency action steps taught in the newly revised American Red Cross First Aid and CPR courses will show you how, according to Beth Chandler, a Red Cross representative. These steps, check the scene and the victim, call 911 or the local emergency number, and care for the victim represent the latest recommendations from the conference on CPR and Emergency Cardiac Care.

The Central Florida Chapter, American Red Cross is pleased to announce the release of the new program. The program includes five courses for the layperson and one public education booklet. The development of the program has been a joint effort with the Mosby Year Book publishing company and is now available to the general public.

"The courses are designed for people of all ages who've never had any experience responding to medical emergencies," says Beth Chandler, director of Health Services. "Our instructors are trained to help ease concerns about learning, and dealing with an emergency when one does occur."

The courses and training materials are easy to follow and are even fun to learn whether you're 16 or 60. Videos provide vivid examples of emergency situations and step-by-step demonstrations of techniques. Changes have been made to make techniques easier to learn and remember without sacrificing effectiveness.

The most comprehensive course, Community First Aid and Safety teaches participants how to recognize and care for breathing and cardiac emergencies in adult, infants, and children as well as how to care for bleeding, how to care for shock, injuries to the bones, muscles, and joints, and sudden illnesses such as poisonings and heat emergencies. Other courses such as Adult CPR provide techniques specific to victim above the age eight. "Til Help Arrives", a 16 page full color booklet, provides a handy reference on how to recognize an emergency, how to phone for help, and what to do in certain emergencies until help arrives.

The Central Florida Chapter will have a flexible schedule of weekend and evening classes available. Special courses and class schedules can be arranged for groups and businesses. Don't wait until an emergency has happened to learn what could have been done. Learn what to do today!

Study finds placebo effect has remarkable healing power

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — Call it the power of suggestion, but a study of the placebo effect says people with certain diseases get better 70 percent of the time even when they receive worthless treatment.

"Even if a treatment is not effective, large numbers of people will feel they've been helped if both the therapist and the patient believe in its effectiveness," said Alan H. Roberts, principal author of the study being published today in Clinical Psychology Review.

The findings suggest doctors and patients may be too quick to use promising experimental treatments that eventually prove ineffective, said Roberts, chief psychologist at Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in La Jolla.

He said the research also indicates people seek unconventional, unproven therapies because they often seem to be helped by them, but that they would do even better with scientifically proven treatments.

William Jarvis, a medicine professor and president of the National Council Against Health Fraud, called the research an ingenious

"landmark study." He said doctors have known about the placebo effect but that the new study documents it better than ever.

Doctors describe the placebo effect as the improvement patients get from inert drugs or ineffective treatments purely because of belief the treatments will work.

Roberts and colleagues at San Diego State University and the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, analyzed dozens of old studies on five treatments that were medically accepted in the 1960s or 1970s but later found ineffective.

The treatments were glomectomy, an asthma-relief surgery; briefly freezing the stomach lining in an attempt to treat peptic ulcers; and three drugs applied to herpes simplex sores.

Of the 6,931 patients treated in the old studies, the outcome was excellent for 40 percent, good for 30 percent and poor for 30 percent.

"The study is important" and carefully performed, said Seymour Fisher, a psychology professor at the State University of New York Health Science Center in Syracuse.

"It tells us the placebo effect is pervasive and as powerful as any known drug," Fisher said. "There are drugs that are more powerful for a specific ailment, but none that is as powerful for such a wide range of ailments."

CDC uses King, Malcolm X to target black smokers

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — The federal government is using the images of slain civil rights leaders to bring a stark message to black Americans who smoke: You're dying for nothing.

The nationwide campaign, called "Legends," is an attempt by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to fight the influence of tobacco industry advertising that targets blacks.

"It contrasts heroic lives with the needless deaths caused by smoking," said Dr. William Roper, who unveiled the program Wednesday, his last day as CDC's director.

The centerpiece of the program is a sobering TV commercial that compares slain civil rights activists with dead black smokers.

It shows pictures of Martin Luther King Jr., Malcolm X and James Chaney Jr., whose 1964 death was a topic of the film "Mississippi Burning."

"These people died for their beliefs," a narrator says.

Then pictures of dead smokers appear. "These people also died for their beliefs," the narrator continues. "Were their beliefs worth dying for?"

"This is a very powerful message for the African-American community," said the CDC's Dr. Robert Robinson said. "It is very responsive to certain values like struggle and overcoming, and that's what the (civil rights) leaders embody."

There are about 7 million black smokers in the United States. CDC studies show their number is rising: About 29 percent of black Americans smoked in 1991, up from 26 percent the previous year. They also have the nation's highest incidence of lung cancer.

The program's stop-smoking guide tells blacks they are being unfairly targeted. For example, it says there are four times as many tobacco billboards in black neighborhoods as in white ones.

AROUND THE NATION

Marshall to go to Oilers

HOUSTON — Three months of trade rumors ended Monday when NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman announced the Oilers had acquired defenseman Marshall from the Boston Bruins.

The Oilers traded defenseman Marshall to the Bruins for defenseman Mike Milbury. The Bruins also acquired defenseman Mike Milbury from the Oilers. The Oilers also acquired defenseman Marshall from the Bruins. The Oilers also acquired defenseman Marshall from the Bruins.

Marshall, 27, is a right-handed defenseman who has played for the Oilers and Bruins. He has played in 100 NHL games and has scored 10 goals and 20 assists.

The Oilers are looking to improve their defense and Marshall is expected to be a key player for them.

Auburn ends inquest

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Auburn charged with paying football players ended a three-day hearing Monday before the NCAA ethics committee.

Former player Eric Ramsey triggered the investigation when he said he was given cash and other prohibited benefits by assistant coach Steve Dennis and former coach Tommy Bowden. Ramsey said he was given $10,000 in cash and a car.

The NCAA said it was not clear if the tapes made secretly by Ramsey were played at the hearing. Ramsey's lawyer, Donald Williams, told Auburn officials that the tapes last month at the NCAA hearing.

Ramsey accused Bowden of knowing of the payments and helping him obtain an interest-free loan of $10,000 from a bank where he was a director.

The NCAA accused Auburn of failing to report cash payments and failing to disclose payments in program. Auburn faces possible sanctions, including probation, and being barred from national television.

Ehlo signs with Hawks

ATLANTA — Craig Ehlo, an unrestricted free agent, signed a three-year contract with the Atlanta Hawks.

Ehlo, who spent seven seasons with Cleveland, will join Lenny Wilkens, his former coach, at the helm of the Hawks.

Ehlo, 30, has 100 seasons, averaged 11.1 points, 2.2 rebounds, and 1.1 assists per game. He shot a career high 49 percent from the field and was 21st in 3-point shooting at 18.1 percent. His career average is 8.8 points.

AROUND THE WORLD

Novotna can't hold off Graf

WIMBLEDON, England — Steffi Graf didn't easily grab her fifth Wimbledon championship Sunday. Novotna handed her the silver platter as a 2-1 set with one of the worst chokes in Grand Slam history.

Novotna barely required more help than she did Saturday when she drifted aimlessly through the set and set and she never got more than a 2-1 set in the third set to lose 7-6(8) 1-6 6-4.

Novotna double faulted as she served needing a point for a 5-1 lead in that final set. And Graf, who cracked an easy forehand volley long and crossed the net on the next two points, broke back that made it 4-2.

Novotna again blew two break points in Graf's first service game, and three more double faults broke her 4-4.

In the final game she slapped an easy backhand volley wide on the first point and Graf hit an easy backhand 10 feet long and Novotna never met a backhand approach to set a double fault match point.

Novotna only needed one as she drilled an easy forehand into an open court, tossed her racket, and raised her arms as she did in 1997 in four of the past five years. At 24, it was her third straight on Centre Court and her fourth Grand Slam title. Since 1982, no one has won Wimbledon except Graf and Navratilova.

Metcalf, offense shine as Oviedo advances

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — Impressive that's the only way to describe the 10-0 victory by the Oviedo Marlins over the Longwood Marlins in the first round of the NABF National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament on Saturday.

The Marlins, coached by Bob Metcalf, won the game in the fourth inning when Mike Metcalf hit a home run off pitcher David Martin.

Mike Metcalf, who has been a standout player for Oviedo, hit a home run in the fourth inning to give the Marlins a 1-0 lead. He also had a double in the seventh inning.

David Martin pitched a complete game for the Longwood Marlins, allowing one run, two hits, and one walk. He struck out seven batters.

Mike Metcalf was named MVP of the tournament. He was the only player to hit a home run in the tournament.

Marlins surprise at half-way mark

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Approaching the halfway point of its first season, Florida's expansion team has managed to stay out of last place and within one winning streak of .500.

Behold Miami's mid-season miracle: the mediocre Marlins. "We've surprised some of the writers who said we wouldn't do anything," closer Bryan Harvey said.

"The fans are overwhelmed at how great we're doing," center fielder Chuck Carr said. "We've surprised a lot of people, including the rest of the National League," first baseman Orestes DeStrade said.

If the Marlins sound giddy about being in sixth place, who can blame them? They're better than the Colorado Rockies and New York Mets. Half of the teams in baseball would trade pitching staffs with them. Their shortstop, third baseman and closer might play in the All-Star Game.

"It's starting to look like, hey, we're not even an expansion team," Carr said. "The performance of Florida's starting rotation has been astonishing. The Marlins play their 81st game Monday — the midway mark in the season — and they're one of three teams in the majors to use only five starters all year."

"In spring training, nobody knew what the rotation would be," Harvey said. "That's where most of the question marks were."

Jack Armstrong, Luis Aquino, Ryan Bowen and Chris Hammond have provided answers, each posting an ERA lower than his career figure. And 45-year-old Charlie Hough has anchored the staff despite a misleading 4.8 record.

As anticipated, the bullpen has been the team's strength, primarily because of Harvey. He went into the weekend with an ERA of 1.56 and 23 saves in 25 opportunities. The relief corps also includes rookie Matt Turner (1.66 ERA) and Richie Lewis (2.19 with a 4-0 record).

"We haven't scored a whole lot of runs, but we've won some games because our pitching staff has kept them close," shortstop

Walt Weiss said. "At times it's taken just a couple of hits to win a game, because our pitchers have done so well."

The defense has been solid, except on balls hit to right fielder Junior Felix. Now that he's with Triple-A Edmonton, the Marlins look like an expansion team only when they step to the plate.

The Marlins began July last in the majors in runs and home runs. They were 9-17 in one-run games and had been shut out eight times.

"We've had some problems as far as run production," manager Rene Lachemann said. "We're asking a lot out of our pitching."

The acquisition of NL batting champion Gary Sheffield should help. In his first week with the Marlins, Sheffield hit .333 and scored five runs.

"We could use a little more pop in the lineup," Weiss said. "Getting Sheffield has really upgraded that situation, but before he was here, it seemed like there were times we had to get four hits to score a run."

Power was supposed to come from DeStrade, a home run champion the past three years in Japan, and left fielder Jeff Conine. The duo began the weekend with a feeble ratio of 12 home runs to 125 strikeouts. Four-time All-Star catcher Benito Santiago (.237 and 53 strikeouts) is also struggling.

Nonetheless, in recent weeks the Marlins have been closer to second place than to last place, fueling speculation that the expanded postseason format could make them a playoff contender as early as next season.

Some Florida fans insist their team is just one or two starting pitchers away from contention. "Give me a healthy Clemens and somebody else like that, and I then you can say that," Lachemann said.

But barring the acquisition of Roger Clemens and Steve Avery, the Marlins likely will remain mediocre until their offense improves. "You have to have some guys like the Giants," Harvey said. "When you take a look at their lineup, you've got Barry Bonds, Matt Williams and Will Clark. "We've got to have guys in the lineup like that, and I don't think we're close to that."

Florida Flames compete and consist of players selected from Youth Hockey Teams from the Central Florida area. The boys are from Casselberry, Oviedo, Orlando, DeLand, Kissimmee, Tampa, Englewood, and Oldsmar.

The Seminole County trio all play for Orlando Youth Hockey. Wayne Bomstad, 17, has just graduated from Lake Howell High School and is planning to attend the University of Florida in five years as well as maintained his grades for admittance in the Honors Program in Gainesville.

Wayne, who was born in Winter Park, has excelled in math, science and physics earning local and national awards in those same subjects. He has also been working extra jobs to earn money for the trip.

Kevin Castline, 18, is a junior at Lyman High School and has played hockey since he was five years old.

Michael Izbicki, 15, is a sophomore at Oviedo High School and has lived in Oviedo for three years. He moved here from Massachusetts where he learned to play hockey at the age of five.

Other members of the Flames from the Orlando area are James Guido, Orlando, DeLand, Englewood, and Oldsmar.

When the team returns from Russia, it will compete in a tournament in Oldsmar in December that will attract over 40 international teams from countries such as Russia, Finland, Canada, Great Britain and other European countries.

The young men are still in need of major sponsors for their trip. They have been busy practicing on weekends, working miscellaneous jobs, participating in car washes, rummage sales, selling raffle tickets and even skating in a skate-a-thon. If you would be willing to help, please contact any of the following people for further information: Henrietta Bomstad (699-6841), Marcel Castline (699-7546), Paula Guido (876-1907) or Carol Izbicki (365-3444).

has won all three finals in which the two have met.

The two Americans reached the final by eliminating former champions in the semifinals. Sampras downed three-time titlist Boris Becker in straight sets and Courier rallied from a set and 0-2 down to beat two-time champion Stefan Edberg.

Sampras and Courier have won other Grand Slam titles but neither had previously made it to the Wimbledon final. Sampras won the U.S. Open in 1990 and Courier has collected two French Open and two Australian Open titles.

But Sampras said this final will have a different feeling for him.

"The difference is that you are one match away from winning the biggest tournament in the world," Sampras said. "I don't know how I'm going to feel (on the day). I haven't been in this situation before."

Sampras and Courier are friends but said the result won't affect their friendship.

"We've had our tough battles in the past and it's just a game," Courier said. "There are more important things in life. It should be fun."

Courier's mother, Linda, said, "Friendship goes out the window. He is going to fight."

The last time two Americans met in the final was when McEnroe downed Jimmy Connors in 1984. The two occasions when Americans met for the title on July 4 were in 1947, when Jack Kramer beat Tom Brown, and in 1982 when Connors downed McEnroe.

After trying and failing to qualify for the race on Friday in the second round of time trials, Schrader used one of his two allowable provisional starts to begin the 400-mile race from the last spot in the 41-car field.

His white Chevy sliced through the thick traffic in the early going and quickly made its presence felt as Schrader, who now has four top-five finishes in his last five starts, was ninth by lap 27, moved to fourth on lap 44, got to second on lap 51 and led lap 64.

But Earnhardt's black Lumina was the class of the field as he held the lead for the final 29 laps.

Also contributing were Ted Brown (one run scored, one RBI), Chris Walker (one RBI), Mike Martinez (two runs scored) and Carlos Martinez, John Salas and Tim Slavik (one run scored each).

Doing the damage for Bates Sporting Goods were Pterzynski (two singles, one run scored) and Garrido (one double, one RBI).

How would you like to own a NASCAR race team?

By DAVID DROSCAK
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH — NASCAR fans in three states are now able to get closer to the action — make that the financial action — of stock car racing.

A former crew chief and 22-year veteran of the sport said Monday that his Charlotte-based American Motor Racing Inc. will be NASCAR's first publicly-owned Winston Cup racing team.

"Any investor can clearly see the potential involved in this thing," said company president Travis Carter, who has been crew chief for 37 Winston Cup wins.

American Motor Racing recently began selling its stock at $7.50 per share, in Florida and Georgia, and North Carolina investors will be able to purchase the stock starting today. "This isn't just for race fans," Carter said. "It's for any business investor."

NASCAR has become big business in the past decade, from $5 million sponsors to apparel with driver's pictures plastered on T-shirts and jackets.

Carter says most NASCAR teams spend more than $3 million a year to run the 30-race slate. He believes his company might be the financial wave of the future in the sport.

"It requires deep funding. People are going to have to generate ways to create that funding," he said. "Some people have it in their pockets and some don't. To keep a racing team going, the capital investment is tremendous."

H.A. "Humpy" Wheeler, president of Charlotte Motor Speedway and one of the innovators of the sport, said he's intrigued by the idea.

"It proves one thing — that there is so much money coming into stock car racing that the power of the growth curve is spinning all kind of new twists and this is one of the more clever ones."

"While there are a lot of people laughing about this, it really is not a bad idea if he (Carter) can find the right sponsor and if he could put the right driver in the car."

The company will soon be selling its stock in New York, but it will take several months of Securities Exchange Commission scrutiny before the stock will become available in all 50 states.

A stockholder must purchase a minimum of 50 shares, which would be a $375 investment.

The company, which hopes to start racing in 1994, will attempt to sell a minimum of 260,667 shares, with a maximum of 1.5 million.

A prospectus to potential investors does list several risks associated with NASCAR, including the dangers of auto racing, competition, a possible decline in popularity and regulation.

Carter said the team still would try to secure sponsorship like most teams on the Winston Cup circuit do. He also said he's talked to several well-known drivers about racing for the team, but he declined to name them.

It's unclear if such a novel venture could attract a top driver, but Wheeler thinks it can.

"The drivers will be interested in who the crew chief will be and who is building the engines," Wheeler said. "They are like any other athletes — they are going to go to a team that would put them up at the front. Travis is a well-respected person in racing who has had his share of success."

Orlando was not only winner in NBA draft

By MIKE NADEL

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Magic has landed the next Magic.

When Earvin Johnson entered the NBA in 1979, he revolutionized the pro game. Every team began searching for a tall point guard who could drive, pass, shoot, defend, think and make his teammates better.

Johnson retired two years ago, and the league kept waiting for the next Magic.

There have been many pretenders over the years. But not until Wednesday, when the Orlando Magic maneuvered to get Anfernee Hardaway in the draft, has a real candidate emerged.

True, Hardaway has not yet bounced an NBA ball or launched an NBA 3-pointer. He hasn't tried to navigate the NBA lane or taken an NBA elbow to the throat.

He's no Earvin Johnson because there was only one Earvin Johnson.

But this marvelous 6-foot-7 guard from Memphis State may be as close as the league gets to rekindling Magic.

Johnson said so himself. Hardaway was on the team of collegians that worked out with last summer's Olympic Dream Team, captained by Johnson.

Magic was so impressed that he paid Hardaway the ultimate compliment:

"It was like looking in the mirror and playing against myself."

There's nothing Hardaway

can't do. He's a better leaper, outside shooter and defender than Johnson was at this stage of his career. While no one will duplicate the tremendous instincts, savvy and court vision that made Magic the pre-eminent floor general, Hardaway is not lacking. And Hardaway definitely has the ability to make those around him better.

In his first year of college ball, he took a marginally talented Memphis State team to the final eight of the NCAA tournament. Last year, with an even less-talented team, Hardaway again reached the tourney.

"Every so often a player comes along that has a special label on him," said Brian Hill, who on Wednesday replaced Orlando coach Milt Guokas. "I think Anfernee Hardaway is one of those players."

And Orlando got him — and three future No. 1 draft choices as a bonus.

Under a pre-draft arrangement with Golden State, the Magic made Michigan forward Chris Webber the first pick. After Philadelphia chose 7-6 center Shawn Bradley, the Warriors took Hardaway. Golden State, desperate for a big man, then swapped Hardaway for Webber and threw in first rounders that Orlando can exercise in 1996, 1998 and 2000.

Orlando wasn't the draft's only winner.

And though Webber, a muscular 6-9, needs work on his offensive game, he will be an immediate presence on defense and the boards. And he was the only big man available who can keep pace with the fast-breaking Warriors.

Philadelphia doesn't feel it gambled, even though Bradley has been a Mormon missionary for two years and hasn't played competitively since he was a BYU freshman in 1990-91. A fine athlete, Bradley should be a defensive stopper as a rookie as the rest of his game develops.

Dallas, 11-71 last year, needed help everywhere. The Mavericks got Kentucky forward Jamal Mashburn at fourth overall and then took highly regarded Long Beach State guard Lucious Harris in the second round.

Minnesota, the NBA's second-worst team in 1992-93, got the best natural scorer in the draft, UNLV guard J.R. Rider. And Washington, the third-worst, picked Indiana forward Calbert Cheaney to replace departed Harvey Grant.

The Los Angeles Lakers, coming off their first losing season since 1975-76, took solid North Carolina forward George Lynch in Round 1 and were surprised to find Cincinnati guard Nick Van Exel in Round 2.

Teams not taring as well: New Jersey, which drafted Kansas guard Rex Walters 16th overall and then admitted that he's not good enough to start; Utah, which added bulk but little else; San Antonio, which didn't pick until late in the second round, and New York, which had no selections at all.

Hardaway wants to earn tag as the next "Magic"

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO — Flattery doesn't get you far with Anfernee Hardaway. He won't place much stock in all those comparisons to Magic Johnson until he's helped the Orlando Magic win an NBA title.

"Those are big shoes to fill," said Hardaway, whose size, ballhandling and playmaking ability once even moved Johnson to gush: "At times I thought I was looking in a mirror, he reminds me of myself so much."

Quite a compliment. Hardaway wants to prove he's worthy.

"Magic won five championships and a gold medal," the former Memphis State star said.

"The things I try to do to emulate him are trying to get everybody involved and keep everyone happy. The things I will bring to the NBA (like Johnson) are a lot of showtime, a lot of team leadership and a lot of crowd-pleasing plays."

Orlando feels so strongly about Hardaway's potential that it traded the rights to Chris Webber, the No. 1 pick in last week's draft, to the Golden State Warriors for the 6-foot-7 point guard and three future first-round selections.

The logic and beauty of the deal, the Magic argued, was this: They wound up with the player they really wanted and also received Golden State's first-round draft picks in 1996, 1998 and 2000 and gives the Magic 11 first-round selections over the next seven years. That provides a lot of flexibility in finding help for O'Neal and Hardaway the rest of the decade.

An added bonus were the financial implications of the trade.

Orlando is already $3.5 million over the projected league salary cap of $15 million for next season and there was concern the team wouldn't be able to sign Webber without breaking up the nucleus of a team that barely missed the playoffs this spring.

"I think we could have signed Chris, but I question what our roster would look like," said Bob Vander Welde, the team's vice president of basketball operations. "We would have had to perform major surgery."

Coach Brian Hill, who replaced Guokas only four hours before the draft, defended the decision.

"I think Chris Webber, away from Shaquille O'Neal, will have a great career," said Brian Hill, promoted to head coach just four hours before the draft.

"A lot of people will say we made a mistake. But I'm not sure he'd have the same kind of career alongside Shaquille. We might not be able to use him the way some other teams would."

Hardaway apparently convinced the Magic he was their man during a second workout for player personnel director John Gabriel, general manager Pat Williams and new coach Brian Hill on Tuesday.

"He'd been saying he should be the No. 1 pick and he basically came in here and laid it all out there for us," Williams said after acquiring the rights to the 6-foot-7 point guard whose style of play has been likened to that of Magic Johnson.

"He was incredible, just incredible and we came away from that workout convinced he was the best player in the draft for us," Williams said. "I've been in this league 26 years and I saw some things that were just unbelievable."

Fans attending a draft party at Orlando Arena booed the move, but general manager Pat Williams stood his ground and promised a bright future with the flashy rookie, who dazzled Magic officials during a workout last Tuesday.

"You're upset tonight," Williams, holding a life-size cardboard cutout of Hardaway, told the crowd of more than 8,000. "But when you return in November, your jeers will turn to cheers."

With alligators around, precautions should be taken

Although alligators seldom attack humans, and fatalities from such attacks are extremely rare, confrontations of various types between the human and alligator populations are increasing. The current influx of hundreds of new Florida residents per day results in ever-decreasing habitat for wildlife. As alligators are crowded out of their natural habitat, they become more likely to wander into residential and commercial districts in search of food and nesting space.

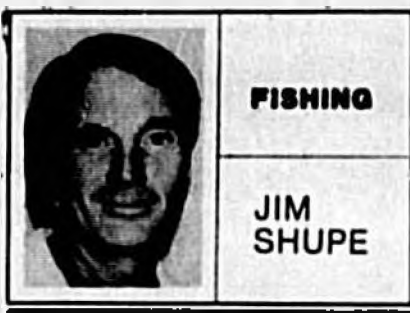

Since 1948, the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission has documented 171 unprovoked alligator attacks on humans (as of June 23, 1993). Six of these attacks resulted in human fatalities. Four other cases involved individuals who may have been dead before their bodies were attacked. These figures do not include cases in which alligators attacked humans in self-defense.

Alligators tend to feed mostly at dusk or during early evening. It is wise to avoid swimming in waters known to be inhabited by alligators during that time of day, particularly during summer months when alligators are most active.

Since dogs and cats are the size animals that alligators tend to favor as prey, swimmers should not allow their pets into the water if alligators are known to inhabit the area. In fact, a small animal on the shoreline is a tempting target for a hungry alligator and might draw the reptile's attention to a human swimmer nearby.

Also, cleaning fish and discarding the remains into the water is likely to attract alligators. Swimming or even dangling feet into the water where fish have been cleaned can be extremely dangerous.

FISHING

Alligators six feet or longer are the ones most likely to attack humans. Once an attack takes place, the best thing the victim can do is to fight the alligator to create as much noise and confusion as possible. Usually, the alligator will realize that it has made a mistake by attacking a large animal that it can't overpower easily and it will flee.

SHUPE'S SCOOP
Adults need to be particularly careful when children are near waters that are frequented by alligators. Adults are mature enough to be watchful, but children lack this wisdom and are often careless when playing and having a good time.

FISHING FORECAST
Fresh water fishing is getting tougher by the day as water temperatures continue to rise. Bream and catfish are the only species tough enough to bite all day long. Many serious bass anglers fish strictly at night, as bass become more nocturnal in order to avoid the heat and the bright sunlight.

Sebastian Inlet has been active with snook (season closed), redfish, tarpon, jack crevalle, ladyfish, and flounder. Live shrimp or finger mullet on the outgoing tide is the best combination for success.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports smooth seas and good offshore action with dolphin, king mackerel, and wahoo. Start in 90 feet of water and work out from there. Good action is also taking place at 8-A Reef and Pelican Flats. Sheepshead and jack crevalle are the primary fish hitting inside the Port. Reds are rated as good on the flats of the Indian and Banana rivers.

Ponce Inlet has been popular, with sheepshead, whiting, bluefish, drum, redfish, jack crevalle, flounder, and catfish.

Live or dead shrimp are the favorite baits. Back in the river, sheepshead are plentiful around bridge pilings and channel markers. Trout and redfish are hitting good in Mosquito Lagoons.

Target aims toward grand opening

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The new Target Store in Lake Mary is fast approaching its grand opening. The facility will be in operation by the end of the month.

Target Store team leader Ron Sargent is preparing for guests at the grand opening celebration on July 25. Sargent refers to customers as "guests" and says he plans to treat them as such.

During the next four weeks, training must be completed for over 170 employees, some one million pieces of merchandise will have to be set up, thousands of signs installed, and a hundred other projects will need to be completed.

"This is a tremendous experience to be in Lake Mary," Sargent said. "We have met some outstanding people and are really looking forward to being here."

He said he was also pleased with the type people who turned out for what he called the store's "job festival," which was the actual interviewing and hiring of the personnel who will staff the store.

The new store is located in Lake Mary at 3810 Greenwood Blvd., at the intersection of Lake Mary Blvd. When operational, it is expected to contribute over $200,000 annually to the local economy through the purchases of services and supplies from local businesses.

The Lake Mary facility is part of a coast-to-coast expansion of the Minneapolis-based company which hopes to operate 557 stores in 32 states by the end of this year.

Target generally allows 10 months for construction of each

The new Target Store in Lake Mary returns five percent of its profits to the community. Recently, a check was presented in the amount of $5,000 to the Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts. Left to right, Festival vice co-chairmen DeLores of its new stores, which is approximately the time required for the building of the Lake Mary operation. "We try to build our stores at the same times of the year," Sargent said. "And there will be several Target openings across the country during this same time period." It is the largest division of Dayton Hudson Corporation, one of the nation's leading retailers. Sargent, who will manage the Target Store, has been with the company for three years, most recently as a store team leader in Orlando. "Everything is going great," he said. "We are excited about our store and extremely happy to be nearing our opening date."

Sleek jets fill sky

Fiorenze pilot behind fleet of model aircraft

By ED KORGAN
Herald Correspondent

WINTER SPRINGS — Air Force Tower, this is Fiorenze flight. "Request Landing for a fleet of the most modern model jet fighter aircraft available today."

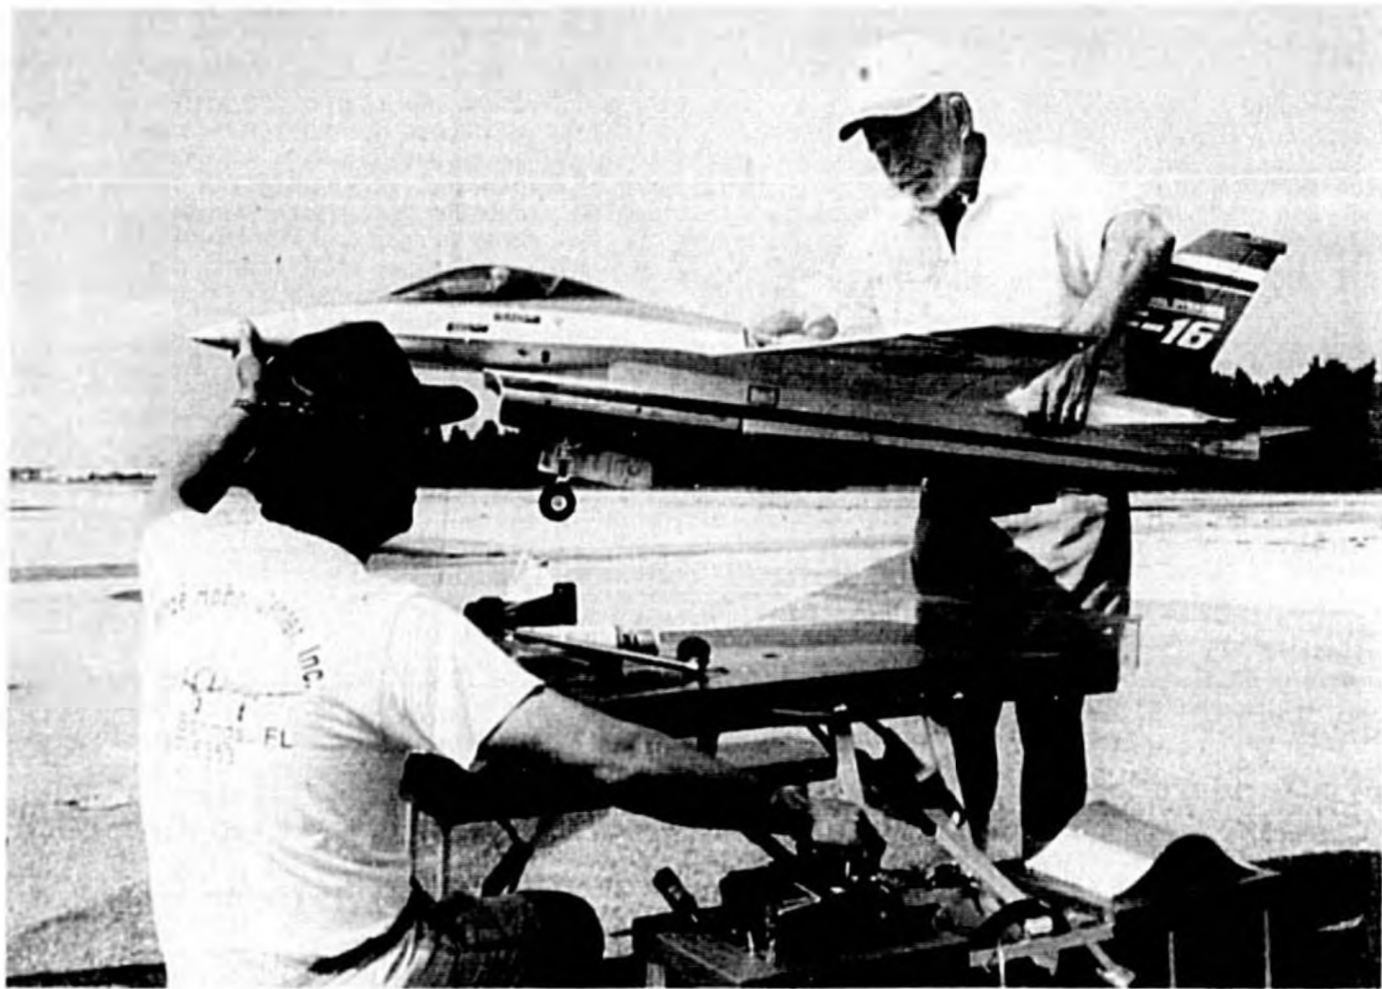

This is almost for real as is the fleet of modern Air Force and Navy model jets built and flown by Bob Fiorenze of Winter Springs. His flight includes such notable aircraft as the Air Force's F-16, F-18 and Stealth F-117 and the Navy's F-14 Tomcat, F-4 Phantom and F-11F. He has been flying model airplanes for the past 30 years.

Fiorenze is also internationally known as a master pilot and is the test pilot for Yellow Aircraft, the developer and builder of a majority of these model kits. Many times his airplanes and his flight skills have been featured articles in the numerous model airplane magazines. He has just completed the flight testing of the Stealth fighter in February and within the next three to six months the kit should be out for public purchase.

Along with his expertise in the flying of the airplanes he is also an expert in the detailing of the many different models he has. There is a possibility of models being built for two different reasons. Some flyers build for the sport of flying and others build for competition. There is a distinct difference in the way the two are built.

Fiorenze explained, "When you go to the National competitions you take the competition model because everything has to be just so. Every rivet, every panel line, every marking has to be in the exact position. Every competition there is an exact full-fledged model with that serial number, that squadron number and that amount of kills next to the windscreen. All the numbers have to be documented to the static judge."

He continued, "Half the work on a competition plane is all the documentation that you have to provide to the judge. You have to prove to the judges, in static judging, that the model does exist looking like this. You have to have drawings, photographs, and even written statements from the pilots to prove the authenticity of the aircraft."

Competition is what this is all about and he attends many of them, across the United States, as the test pilot for the manufacturer. The three most prestigious competitions attended annually by Fiorenze are the "Top Gun Invitational Tournament," "The United States Scale Masters Championships" and "The Academy of Model Aeronautics Nationals." These are national competitions, not regionals.

Scoring is done in the air, where you are given 10 specific maneuvers to fly, and on the ground. One hundred points are given in each scenario Fiorenze said, "The perfect score is 200, but this is just like bowling. You don't score 300 too many times and I have not seen a 200 score. In the high 180's is typical of a Master's type of win. My planes get somewhere between 180 and 192 total points."

There are usually 80 to 90 entries in each competition and all the entries are beautifully done. Fiorenze's models stand out here but blend in with the national entries.

Out of approximately 16 planes he owns, only three of them are competition models. All the others are sport models. He flies and tests them almost every weekend, in DeLand, when he is not at the competitions or fly-ins that are becoming so popular across the United States.

Mishaps do happen and he related one spectacular one that happened approximately six months ago in a DeLand meet. "Recently we flew two F-14 Tomcats in formation. When we were done my wingman broke off and extended his wings and he went into the traffic pattern to land. I didn't see him and came up from behind. I did an evasive action but it didn't work and we had a mid-air. My plane went down in flames. Since then I have repaired it and will put it back into the air shortly."

All the models he flies can be purchased at his shop, Fiorenze Hobby Center, in Winter Springs. He provides many of the services that are needed to support this increasingly popular hobby. Many times he has assisted in the rebuilding of models after they have had some type of mishap.

Music man takes helm in student transport

Dr. Joseph Wise is hoping to make sweet music with the transportation department of the Seminole County school district.

Wise, who for the last two years has been the transportation director in the Orange County schools, has taken over the position left vacant when Jerry Klein left Seminole County for the top spot in the Dade County school bus department.

"I'm looking forward to working in the community," he said. "It's going to be very exciting, I think."

Wise, 36, said he is experiencing some mixed emotions about leaving Orange County.

Sara celebrates 90; class gathers for 40th reunion

Valerie Weld, Jackie Caolo, Jacob Twilleager, Caroline Caolo, Michael Caolo, Miriam Doktor, Shelly Barbour and Lindsey von Weller gather for the prestigious Betty Williams Scholarship Foundation awards.

Sara Clark Albritton never looked better than on July 26 when she was guest of honor on her 90th birthday at a celebration given by a grandson and his wife, John and Pamela Tucker, at their home in Middleton Oaks.

Over 50 relatives and friends arrived bearing covered dishes for a dinner that began at 1 p.m. Following the meal all sang "Happy Birthday" to Sara when a large cake was served.

The guest of honor received a money tree as well as cards and other mementos. A number came from out-of-town including a niece from Arizona and a nephew from Wisconsin.

Born in Philadelphia on June 25, 1903, Sara married Louie Albritton in 1922. He spent most of his life as a cattleman with the Mid-Florida Livestock Association of which Sara was office manager at one time. WEDDING

Mrs. Harry G. (Stephanie Michale) Reid

Whitaker, Reid wed in double ring ceremony

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Stephanie Michale Whitaker and Harry (Ty) G. Reid IV were married July 3, at the First Baptist Church, Greensboro. The Rev. Marion T. Bullock performed the formal wedding ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of John Whitaker of Greensboro and Belinda Whitaker of Brown Summit, N.C.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Reid III of Lake Mary.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a formal white satin gown embellished with re-embroidered lace. The extra full chapel-length train was fashioned with cut-outs and appliques. The sweetheart neckline and fitted bodice were embellished with sequins and seed pearls. The long tapered sleeves were puffed at the shoulder with bows. Her headpiece, a lace tiara, decorated with sequins and seed pearls, held her shoulder-length illusion veil which was dotted with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of fuchsia tiger lilies with white roses.

Kimberly Whitaker, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a teal green brocade tea-length dress with sweetheart neckline and open back. She carried a cascading bouquet of mixed fuchsia and plum wildflowers.

Bridesmaids were Jackie Nelson, Christy Reid, Melissa Bunch, and Pamela McNeill. Their gowns, flowers and headpieces were identical to the honor attendant's.

Father of the groom, Harry Reid III, served as best man.

Groomsmen were Doug Allred, Mark Holland, Robert Moore, Billy Oakes and Kennon Quick.

Kyle Sloate and Michelle Howard served as flower girls and Phillip Sloate and A.J. Howard were ring bearers.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Fellowship Hall of First Baptist Church. Assisting at the reception were Debra Pegg, Jennifer Shively, Allison Poore and Carla Andrews.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the newlyweds are making their home in Hickory, N.C. The bride is a laboratory technician at Valdese General Hospital, Valdese, N.C., and the groom is a management trainee for Lowes Foods in Hickory.

Dedicated educator retires

When Sanford residents, central Floridians, and people throughout the nation hear from the many students who have come through the ivory walls of junior high schools such as, Starke, Crooms Academy, Crooms High, Seminole High and Seminole Community College, they will remember the name, Earl Everett Minott, educator, musician, Christian church worker and community activist.

His devotion, concern for education and a better life for the youth people of this community for the past 41 years, will leave thousands of memories in the minds of those he has touched in his brief span of teaching in the public schools of this county.

He began his desire for education in Miami where he was born. Minott was raised by his aunt, Joannah Moore, an educator and principal of Goldsboro Elementary School in Sanford. His concern for youth was instilled in him at an early age by his Aunt Joannah, who always reminded him of the necessity of getting an education.

His desire to succeed in life as an educator began when he was taught to play the piano. By the age of nine he was a musician for the Sunday school.

Minott's career as an educator began when he graduated from Crooms Academy, Sanford, in 1948. He continued his education at Florida A&M College. In 1953 he received a bachelor of arts degree in music. His first teaching job was in Starke, Bradford County, until 1956. His desire was to return to his hometown to teach and the opportunity to return home was given when he was hired in Seminole County to teach at Crooms, his alma mater, as choral director for grades 9-12. He also taught seventh and eighth grade English, math and science.

Feeling the need to further his education he returned to Florida A&M University, earning his master's degree in guidance in 1970. Minott remained at Crooms until 1970 when integration brought about a change. It meant the end of an era, the end of a great source of pride as the county's one black high school, Crooms Academy, was to die as a total high school institution.

Crooms became a ninth grade facility for both blacks and where he has remained until his retirement on June 30, under Principal Gretchen Schapker.

Minott has served his community well and never forgets to remember the youth of the community.

He is District Director of Education for the District and State Association of Elks. His duties entail coordinating the annual oratorical contest for high school students. Winners receive monetary help with scholarships and the opportunity to go on to the state and national competition at the state Elks' convention. The monetary donation is used toward the students attending a college of their choice.

He serves as treasurer of the Martin Luther King Celebration Committee for the city of Sanford. This organization also donates scholarships to youth in Seminole County schools. It also celebrates and observes Dr. King's birthday with a religious service, banquet, breakfast and student night.

He is a member of and past treasurer of the educational fraternity Phi Delta Kappa, Central Florida Chapter. He served as a member of SASA (Seminole Association of School Administrators). Minott has served several times as president, secretary and treasurer of the East/West Kiwanis Club. He serves as an officer and musician for the Elks of Sanford. He

40th class reunion

Back in 1953 Janice Reel Springfield was dubbed "Lieutenant Sweetheart of the Seminole High School Key Club, an all boys organization that is a subsidiary of Kiwanis. Next year she will become the first woman president of the Sanford Kiwanis Club. And now, 40 years later, Janice found herself chairman of the 40th class reunion held Jan. 25, 26, and 27.

Festivities got under way Friday night at a barbecue at Lake Golden for about 32 classmates and guests. Several vintage cars were on display to the delight of the crowd.

During the social hour, Joanne Moore Sanders and Joan Wright Ludwig conducted a Chinese Auction...lots of fun.

On Saturday, about 50 classmates and guests donned their Sunday best and gathered at the Country Club at Heathrow for a formal banquet.

Guest speaker was Julian Stenstrom who took the entourage back to the 50s with his clever and interesting commentary. He touched on the impact of what may have happened had the University of Central Florida located in Sanford which had been considered.

When the reunion notices were mailed out, classmates were asked to submit a brief autobiography of the past 40 years, including a funny incident that occurred during their high school days. These comments were read as classmates were introduced to record numerous hilarious moments.

Members of the Seminole High School Class of '53 gathered for some fond memories.

Copies of the "Celery Fed," the school newspaper, were distributed which included the Last Will and Testament. Jan Ratliff Cara and Joan Wright Ludwig gave these items back to the donors — also some funny moments. Sideburns were worn in 1953 and the two women returned the sideburns...a brown one and a gray one to the original donor.

Special awards were presented to Joe Pickens, a mirror, for having changed the least; Ed and Nancy Tison, a $5 gift certificate for gas, for having traveled the farthest from Newport News, Va.; a Seminole High School fan to Joe Brooks, a guest, for having a relative in Seminole High; and Dillworth Sheffield for having the youngest child.

High school sweethearts attending who were married upon graduation from college were attorney Sammy Jacobson and his wife, Dr. Judy Irvin Jacobson of Jacksonville. He was the class valedictorian and she was class salutatorian.

Also attending from Atlanta were Joe Hutchison and his wife, Diane.

At the conclusion of the memorable evening and prime rib feast, Linda Leonard O'Gara did the farewell honors.

Assisting Janice on the committee were Joan Ludwig, Edwin Tison, Hank McLaughlin, Joanne Sanders, Kitty Nix Corley, Margaret Morrison Hudgins and Barbara Flynt Ray. Ruth Lee and Linda O'Gara assisted with decorating.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 4, 1993

In the year ahead you could be luckier than usual where investments or joint ventures are concerned. If someone comes to you with a good proposition in these areas, study it thoroughly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Strive to be cooperative with others, especially in your social involvements today. If you persist upon having your own way, it could spoil everyone's fun, including your own. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you perform your work up to the best of your ability today, don't berate yourself later for not having done more. Be satisfied with what you accomplish.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll want to be involved with active friends today, but take care in selecting your companions. Don't include pals who do not mix well with one another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your probabilities for personal gain look very good today. However, if you think you're entitled to more than you get, you're going to be disenchanted with the results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to follow through on the plans you envision today. All should go smoothly, provided you don't alter your blueprint just because another questions your methods.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be fair in your business practices and financial dealings with others today. Don't give away more than you should, just because someone whines about the arrangement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to avoid individuals today who are wishy-washy and indecisive. If you feel you're in need of supporters, select pals who know what they want and aren't afraid to go after it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're pretty good at making is to be a doer not one who merely formulates ideas. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Conditions in general are rather favorable today, with the exception of making impulsive commitments which you may later have to rescind after thinking them over. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're quite adept today at helping others sort things out so that they profit or gain in some manner. However, you may not do as well for yourself in the process.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 5, 1993

Your chart indicates that in the year ahead you should be able to advantageously expand upon a promising situation you already initiated. This is a base on which you can build a good foundation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Regardless of what occurs today, Lady Luck is still apt to be steadfastly determined to tilt things in your favor. Trust your hopeful instincts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There's a chance you may not do all that is expected of you today. Fortunately, however, you might have a loyal friend somewhere behind you covering your tracks.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not shirk your duties today and yield to your frivolous impulses. Larger rewards than usual are possible if you're responsible and industrious.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If possible today disengage yourself from mundane routines that bind you to your household. Seek pleasurable outlets away from home that provide a change of pace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your chances for concluding critical situations to your satisfaction are remarkably good today if you use your abilities constructively. Make this day count.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Just because things might come easy for you today does not lessen their value or worth. You won't want to look back later and wonder way you didn't make the most of it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In your material affairs today, there is a possibility you might be quite a bit luckier than the persons with whom you're involved. Be very careful how you handle this development.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your greatest asset today is your ability to take your good ideas and the good ideas of others and provide them with a practical application that is mutually beneficial.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Friends who are not directly involved in your confidential affairs aren't entitled to a running account of the status of your operations. Be more secretive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your probabilities for realizing something for which you've been hoping are strong today. However, you could lessen your chances by being unduly forceful with persons whose help you need.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Objectives that may be unattainable for others today might not necessarily be as difficult for you. Don't let their negative thoughts stop you from trying yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to treat today's events philosophically rather than emotionally. If your logic prevails, you'll see things for what they are. If your feelings dominate, you won't.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Jean de la Bruyere wrote, "Even the best-intentioned of great men need a few scoundrels around them." In today's deal, the declarer had many great men - honors - but he fell to defeat because he didn't make the best use of his scoundrels - the spot-cards.

South picked up one of the strongest hands ever. North telephoned me to ask for advice, knowing I am the world's number one authority on Yarboroughs.

South opened with an artificial two clubs and rebid three clubs to show his suit. North wanted to pass, but I told him I had done that once and missed a laydown five clubs. North heeded my advice. Now South showed his second suit. Again North wanted to pass, but I insisted that he give preference. South passed, somehow having gathered that North held a very weak hand.

West led the heart king. Declarer ruffed, drew trumps and continued with the ace and another spade. East won with the jack and returned a heart. South ruffed and played another low spade. West cashed two tricks in the suit; one down.

"I had 25 points and only two losers. How could I go down?" lamented South.

North didn't need me at this point. "You overlooked the power of the eight and nine of spades," he explained. "If the spades are breaking 3-3, all plays work; so assume they are 4-2. Then you need an honor to be doubleton. Your play works if someone has king doubleton. But if you follow the spade ace with the spade queen, you win against either 10 doubleton or jack doubleton, a chance that is twice as likely."
