Tornadoes Bounce Across North Florida

By United Press International
Tornadoes hopped across sections of north and central Florida late Thursday and early today, ripping the roofs off buildings, overturning signs and damaging cars and power lines in the flying debris.
There were no immediate reports of injuries in any of the twisters, officials said.
The National Weather Service had a tornado watch in effect — meaning conditions were favorable for the formation of tornadoes — for much of north Florida until 9 a.m. EST.
Another tornado was reported by citizens to have touched down near Zellwood in Orange County, but the sheriff's department said that report never was confirmed.
But a few sheds under construction and some greenhouses sustained minor wind damage when the squall moved through northwest Orange County, said sheriff's spokesman Jim Solomons.

A tornado warning posted today for much of central Florida was reduced to a tornado watch about 9:30 a.m., meaning conditions were right for a tornado but chances were not so severe as earlier.
Clifton Reynolds, a University of Florida sophomore, was washing his car outside his mobile home when a twister hit. He said the section of the roof was blown into a wooded area about 50 yards away from the trailer.
"All of a sudden, I heard a loud whooshing, roaring noise and saw the funnel right next to me and the mobile home just started shaking," Reynolds said. "I thought the whole thing was going to blow up. Then I saw part of the roof blow away."
Spencer Mann, a spokesman for the Alachua County sheriff's office, said several signs from area businesses were toppled in the whirling dervish and some cars in the Reynolds' mobile home parking lot were damaged when hit by flying debris.

The Lake County sheriff's office was unable to confirm today "several" sightings of tornadoes reported to the National Weather Service by the public. Deputies were checking for signs that twisters actually had touched down.
The apparent sightings were near Leesburg and further north in Lake County.
Mann said a shopping center in northeast Gainesville was hit by another twister early today that tore down several power lines and did structural damage.
"Northgate Plaza got hit this morning," Mann said. "There was some damage — mostly blown-out windows, torn-off roofing and downed power lines. Both of the tornadoes seemed to hit real fast and light, compared to others that we've had. We were very lucky."

Line-On

A power line across the hood of a car causes some concern Thursday as Sanford officers investigate a one-car accident at U.S. Highway 17-92 and 27th St. Police say Michael W. DeGroat, 20, of 1001 Elm St., Sanford, was northbound on 17-92 when he lost control of his 1966 Oldsmobile while trying to stop and skidded into a city-owned light pole. The line later proved not electrified. Damage to the pole was estimated at $2,500. No charges were filed.

Fired For Challenging Supervisor

Probation Officer To Keep Job If Personnel Board Has Way

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County's probation office will institute tighter control of supervision money paid to it, and a probation officer fired for publicly confronting her supervisor will continue as a Seminole County employee if the county commission goes along with a personnel board recommendation.

The money-handling decision came out of a 4½-hour hearing Thursday in which probation officer Marian S. Lewis, 53, of Winter Springs, appealed her firing. Her dismissal was prompted by her posting a letter on an office bulletin board in which she dissented with her supervisor, Donna Haerich, on her handling of an investigation into allegations of theft within the department.

Introduced as exhibits at the hearing were several articles published by the Evening Herald about the department's money-handling policies, hiring policies and grand theft charges against a probation officer who resigned.

The personnel board, with one member absent, voted 4-0 to recommend to the Seminole County Commission that Ms. Lewis be "involuntarily transferred" from the probation department to another county position of equal pay and that the time she spends without pay until her tentative reinstatement is acted on by sufficient discipline. If a suitable position cannot be found, the board recommends she continue working as a probation officer, but be put on employment probation for six months.

The board's recommendation that she be transferred but not fired is scheduled to be considered by the Seminole County Commission no later than April 22. The commissioners can accept the decision, modify it, or uphold the dismissal.

"I'm very glad that I got my job back, but I feel more testimony about inter-departmental concerns should have been allowed, and I am hopeful some sort of internal investigation will follow," Ms. Lewis said. She declined to elaborate.

"I thought the decision (of the board) was responsible," said Christine M. Alber, attorney for Ms. Lewis. She said she hopes the Seminole County Commission goes along with the recommendation.

Sitting as the personnel board were Robert Sturm and Fred Streetman, county commissioners; Richard Landry, a road foreman for the county's public works department; and JoAnn Blackmon, the county's purchasing director. Absent from the meeting was board member and County Administrator Ken Hooper.

Representing Mrs. Haerich was

David V. Kornreich.

"This is really a simple case, a case of outrageous conduct... It is a letter begging to be fired... There is a line of decency and good sense that cannot be transcended," he said during an opening statement. Kornreich made most of his comments before the board, but during one break did talk in the hallway about personalities with a board member who later voted against his client by not upholding the firing of Ms. Lewis. That hallway conversation halted when Ms. Lewis' attorney investigated the tete-a-tete.

Ms. Alber said the case against her client was not a simple one. She said Ms. Lewis, angered by the events in the office and a news report of one incident "acted out of outrage and out of anger."

She said her client felt there had been "a breach of public trust... dishonesty that had to be exposed for the good of the citizens and the county," she said.

Halley's Nucleus Caught In Detail

DARMSTADT, West Germany (UPI) — Europe's Giotto spacecraft flashed back the first detailed pictures of the nucleus of Halley's comet today before a "wall of dust" knocked out its camera and interrupted communications with Earth.

The half-ton European Space Agency probe raced within an estimated 325 miles of the peanut-shaped frozen core of the famous comet, 89 million miles from Earth, in a smashing success for European space technology.

The Soviet Union's Vega 2 spacecraft came within about 5,000 miles of the comet Sunday, and pictures from it and the Vega 1 three days earlier helped ESA controllers to navigate so close to the cosmic wanderer.

The high-velocity dust barrage apparently disturbed the probe's antenna alignment, and communications between Giotto and the

Seminole Women Nabbed In Prostitution Crackdown

At least three Seminole County women and nine other women working for three dating services located in the county were arrested Thursday during an Orange County prostitution crackdown.

The arrests were the latest move in a 16-week investigation into prostitution among escort services. The names of some women arrested early today were not available at press time. More arrests are expected.

"This was a cut above usual OBT prostitution," said Bill Lutz, director of the Metropolitan Bureau of Investigation referring to the Orange Blossom Trail section in Orlando, known for its street walkers.

"All you had to do was look in a telephone book. Some (escort services) have employees who do prostitution."

Historic Board Bothered By Missing Bank Plaques

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

A mailing which details the Sanford Historic Preservation Board's objectives and procedures will be sent to the approximately 100 property owners in the city's Historic District early next week. One of these owners, whose headquarters is in North Carolina, will also be informed that a modification it recently made to the West 1st Street Atlantic Bank was in violation of a board regulation.

Union Bank, which recently merged with Atlantic, apparently authorized the removal of two 1930's exterior bronze plaques that contained Atlantic's name and the date of the building's construction. Historic board member W.E. "Duke" Adamson said he spotted workers removing the plaques last week and said their efforts resulted in "holes" in the side of the building. The board said it would mail a letter to inform Union that the removals were in violation of the city's historic district ordinance.

The board will also take steps to assist historic district property owners' compliance with its mandates by looking into the possibility of securing a grant from the state Department of Preservation.

The state's Main Street program can provide property owners with funding to assist their rehabilitative efforts and also offer them free planning assistance, according to Beth Chave of the Orlando Preservation Board.

Ms. Chave described the state program as "a great freebie" during her meeting Thursday with the Sanford Historic Preservation Board. In addition to describing the state program to her Sanford colleagues, she presented a slide show to accompany her discussion of federal historic development and rehabilitation standards and guidelines.

She said the "broad guidelines" benefit cities by offering them "a lot of room for interpretation and application within their own community."

Three proposed Sanford historic district projects received board approval Thursday when the board judged they met its review criteria. At the Seminole County owned Roumillat Building, 97 windows will be installed; Harry's Bar at 114 S. Park Avenue will attach a new sign and two spotlights to its exterior; and a rear parking canopy and new front door will be installed at 112 S. Park Avenue.

The board has also taken steps to call attention to the efforts Sanford has undertaken to revitalize and perpetuate its historic district. A request has been made to the state Department of Transportation for the installation of a Sanford historic district sign at the State Road 436 exit of Interstate 4. The marker would tell motorists of the district's location in downtown Sanford, boundaries of which are Myrtle Avenue on the west, Sanford Avenue on the east, Fulton and Commercial Streets on the north and Third Street on the south, with the addition of the old Montezuma Hotel, which is located on Magnolia Avenue, south of Third Street.

League Drops Fight Against Sewer Plant Expansion

By Sarah Fischer
Herald Staff Writer

The South Central Seminole County League of Homeowners Associations has dismissed its lawsuit against the county over the expansion of the Consumer's sewage treatment plant in return for a greater voice in a project.

The residents brought the lawsuit against the county after the county commission approved a special exception for the wastewater facility construction last November.

The homeowners filed an appeal in circuit court, saying they felt the expansion was premature and would impact the growth, traffic and schools in the area, Association spokesman Dan Bushrul said.

The Consumer's plant is located in the Tuskawilla area at the intersection of Dike and Dodd Roads.

To settle the matter, the county has approved an agreement which will allow residents of the Springview, Howell Estates, Garden Lake Estates and Amberwood to serve on a Consumer site plan review committee.

According to the agreement, the committee will provide input on aesthetic aspects of the facilities including masonry walls, landscaping and effluent pond disposal.

The residents will also serve on a county-wide utility steering committee and attend meetings of the county's development review committee, which studies proposed development's for compliance with county policies.

The one million gallons per day expansion of the wastewater facilities is planned for two phases, County Environmental Services Director Jim Bible said.

As part of the special exception process, the county agreed to install a six-foot high, 1,300-foot long brick wall, which will screen the plant from the roadway, he said.

The $5 million project is slated to get underway within the next three to four months, with the county completing final design of the construction, Bible said.

Bushrul said today the matter which was once "very heated" cooled down after residents as members of the Ad Hoc Committee for Controlled Growth, representing some 17 subdivisions, sat down with county representatives to discuss the project.

The residents, who now feel the improvements are "quite needed," agreed to work with the county under the proposed settlement, he said.

Thief Has Reached Out And Touched 3 Phones

Seminole County sheriff's deputies are investigating the vandalism of a pay telephone from which about $200 was reportedly stolen on Monday or Tuesday.

Sanford police are also investigating a similar crime, which Police Chief Steve Harriett said occurred between 11 p.m. Monday and 6 a.m. Tuesday at the Phillips 66 station, 1201 Airport Blvd.

The sheriff's case involves a pay phone at the Lil' Champ, 2752 Country Club Road.

The telephones were apparently opened with a blow torch and damage to the one at the Lil' Champ was estimated at about $900, the report said.

Harriett said two phones were damaged in the Phillips 66 case, but the change box was entered in only one phone. Loss in that case was about $200 in change and $1,600 damage to the two phones, Harriett said.

The incidents were reported by Richard F. Mulvaney, 43, of Sanford, a representative of Southern Bell, owner of the phones.

DRUG DEAL ARRESTS
City/County Investigation Bureau agents reported arresting two alleged illegal drug dealers.

Agents reported the men charged met agents at the suspects' home at about 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. One suspect allegedly agreed to sell 1/2 ounce of marijuana to an agent for $55. That suspect was given $55 in serialized cash by the agent and the agent accompanied the pair to a home in Casselberry where one man reportedly went inside and came out with the offered pot.

"Robert Bernardo," 20, and Michael Wayne Abernathy, 19, both of 341 Pinesong Drive, Casselberry, were arrested at 8:35 p.m. Wednesday at their home. They have been charged with sale of marijuana and conspiracy to sell marijuana and cocaine. Bernardo, who agents said had not been positively identified, was being held in lieu of $2,000 bond and Abernathy has been released on $2,000 bond to appear in court March 31.

RAMMED CAR
A 56-year-old Sanford woman has been charged with aggravated assault with a vehicle, willful and wanton reckless driving and having an unassigned tag on her car after she allegedly rammed another vehicle from behind with her car.

Sanford police reported the woman's vehicle struck a car driven by Willie James Nelms several times as the two vehicles traveled from Seventh Street to 1200 Albright Avenue in Sanford.

Rosa Lee Mingo of 2020 Alexander Road was arrested at 5:35 p.m. Wednesday at 1200 Albright Road. She has been released on $1,000 bond to appear in court March 31.

The police report didn't give a motive for the alleged assault.

LOOKING IN WRONG PLACE
When pounding on his front door awoke David Loughton of Altamonte Springs at about 9 a.m. Tuesday he went to his livingroom and saw two men there, one ran and the other said he was "looking for someone" and then fled, police said.

Altamonte Springs police began looking for the suspects and determining that no force had been used to enter Loughton's home and that perhaps a stolen apartment complex master key had been used to gain entry, police said.

Police were tipped to a possible suspect Wednesday and Loughton was shown a photo lineup from which he reportedly identified a suspect.

Richard Leroy Poore, 22, of 2903 Oak Lane, Fern Park, was charged with burglary to an occupied dwelling at the Seminole County Jail at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday. He was being held in lieu of $2,000 bond.

STOLEN GUN
Sanford police, who determined a man they confronted at the Gypsy Cab Company in Sanford was wanted on California charges, reported searching the man and finding a .25-caliber handgun reported stolen in Sanford between Feb. 28 and March 1.

The loss of the gun had been reported by Calvin Day, manager of Park Avenue Trailer Park, 2545 Park Ave. Cash had also been taken from Day's office, but not recovered, police said.

Joseph Allen Jones, 21, of 2810 Magnolia Ave., Sanford, was jailed at 9:12 a.m. Wednesday. He was being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

to a burglar on March 8. His American Express Card was also stolen.

That card was reportedly used to buy a $241 aquarium at a pet store, and records of that purchase helped lead to a suspect, Altamonte Springs police reported.

Jerry Douglas Kerns, 25, of 2309 Oak Lane, Fern Park, was charged with grand theft, forgery, burglary and uttering a forged instrument at 11:31 p.m. Wednesday at his home. He was being held in lieu of $3,500 bond.

TRAFFIC STOP ARREST
A man whose car was stopped by Sanford police in a driver license check was charged for having no driver's license, having an unassigned tag on his vehicle and for allegedly having a marijuana cigarette in his car.

He was booked into the Seminole County Jail as "John Doe," and early Thursday, following a 9:49 p.m. Wednesday arrest, the man had still not been identified, jail officials said. He was arrested on Olive Avenue in Sanford and was being held in lieu of $500 bond.

BURGLARIES & THEFTS
A $200 shotgun, a $175 bow, and a $600 set of speakers were stolen from the home of Robert Wayne Lemen, 32, of 1221 Mullet Lake Park Road, Oviedo, Wednesday, a sheriff's report said.

Emmett O. Davis, 26, of 3049 Bungalow Blvd., Sanford, reported to sheriff's deputies a thief took a .38-caliber handgun, a watch, two rings and a pair of sneakers with a total value of $660 from his home Wednesday.

William Repass of Winter Park, reported to sheriff's deputies that a $214 microwave oven was stolen from a home being built by General Homes of Winter Park at 731 Rosalee Way, Casselberry. The theft occurred between March 6 and Tuesday.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies reported seeing a suspect leave the home of Michael Craig Kinck, 26, of 1410 Oakway, Sanford, Wednesday. The man had reportedly stolen a .357-magnum handgun worth $350, a sheriff's report said.

A $300 air compressor was stolen from a fenced compound at Futrell Pools, 4081 W. First St., Sanford, according to a report owner Terry D. Futrell, 42, of Sanford, filed with sheriff's deputies.

About 80 plants with a combined value of about $350 were stolen from the yard of Donald Kinn, 39, of 3117 Foxwood Drive, Apopka, between March 6 and Saturday, a sheriff's report said.

James Hampton of 2940 Walker Road, Oviedo, reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies his $100 hog was stolen from its pen Saturday. Deputies have the name of a possible suspect.

FLEEING GLANCED
A man in a maroon jogging suit entered a Park Avenue home through a second floor window, ran past a woman emerging from a bathroom, down a flight of stairs and out the kitchen door with the woman's pocketbook early Tuesday morning, according to a Sanford police report.

After receiving a 2:11 a.m. call from Cynthia Backstrom, 45, police found a ladder propped up against her house and the screen of a second floor window pried open. Ms. Backstrom told police the pocket book contained cash and checks worth $726. She reported nothing else taken during the incident.

FIRE CALLS

Sanford firefighters have responded to the following calls:

WEDNESDAY
—12:34 p.m., 301 West 7th Street playground, rescue. A 9 year old girl fell and cut her forehead. Ice packs were applied and firemen recommended the girl's mother take her to a doctor.

THURSDAY
—5:08 a.m., 1300 West 7th Street, rescue. A 69 year old man suffered a possible cardiac arrest. He was transported to the hospital.

CLEAN GETAWAY

A washer, a dryer and several folding chairs were taken from an unoccupied apartment at 226 Loch Low Drive sometime between Tuesday and Feb. 3, when the last tenants moved out, according to the apartment's manager.

Bernadette Chin told police of the theft and suggested possible suspects, a Sanford police report said. The merchandise taken is worth $1,000, the report said.

CLUBS TAKEN
Two sets of golf clubs valued at $1,045 were taken from the 2529 Oak Avenue apartment of Barbara Williams, 30, on Tuesday afternoon, a Sanford police report said.

TWO STRIKES AND OUT OF THERE

A Chevy truck parked at Flea World, 1300 French Avenue, early Tuesday morning, was allegedly assaulted twice by a brown van that hit it at 1:10 a.m., sped off and then returned an hour later to ram it again, according to a Sanford police report.

The first incident, which was reported to police by a night watchman, resulted in $500 damage, the report said. After patrolmen left the scene, the van allegedly returned, hit the truck again and caused an additional $1,000 damage to it before fleeing, the report said. The nightwatchman saw the brown van leaving the premises, according to the report.

A heavy rock was used to shatter a plate glass window at the Sanford Westside Recreation Center and provide entry a person or persons unknown early Wednesday morning, a Sanford police report said. Once inside, the persons pried a lock off a storage door and rummaged through it, although nothing was reported taken, the report said.

The incident was discovered by custodian Jeffrey Stanley at 9 a.m., Wednesday, the report said.

DRYER TAKEN

A portable dryer worth $309 was taken from a storage shed behind 700 Magnolia Avenue between 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7:30 a.m. Wednesday, a Sanford police report said.

Cover The Medicare Gap

When Dr. Otis Bowen was selected to head the Department of Health and Human Services, he promised that his first priority would be to devise a catastrophic insurance plan for the nation's elderly. Accordingly, President Reagan has directed Secretary Bowen to produce such a comprehensive plan by year's end not only for the elderly, but also for the general population.

Dr. Bowen, a former general practitioner, has already suggested some sensible revisions of the $71.4 billion Medicare program that covers approximately 30 million persons.

Prior to assuming his HHS duties, he published a two-part plan in the Federation of American Hospitals Review. He would extend Medicare financing of hospital stays beyond the current 150-day limit to a full year. He would also provide coverage against chronic illnesses such as Alzheimer's disease that require indefinite custodial care. The cost of both reforms would be financed in large part by patient contributions.

The Bowen plan would not change the $492 deductible the patient presently pays for the first day of hospitalization. It would, however, cover the $123 daily co-insurance payment for the 61st through the 90th day and the $246 daily co-payment for the next 60 days.

The additional $14.25 monthly premium for physician's services would not be a problem for most Medicare recipients, because 75 percent of them already buy so-called medigap policies to cover the difference. The selling point is that such premiums would be substantially less than the recipients are paying for private insurance coverage.

By paying $160 more per year in Medicare premiums, the elderly could insure themselves for unlimited hospital stays and limit their personal liability to an additional $350 a year. The savings are possible because those increases would be spread among 30 million Medicare recipients, most of whom do not require extended, costly hospital care. As an adjunct of Medicare, the administrative costs of the plan would be marginal.

The most vexing medical insurance problem is that which confronts those elderly patients confined in nursing homes. Medicare does not pay nursing-home expenses and less than 1 percent of nearly 2 million patients requiring such care are covered by private insurance. Medicaid coverage begins only after a family's finances are essentially wiped out by these staggering costs. Even so, those costs consume nearly half of Medicaid's budget.

Dr. Bowen has no short-term solution to the nursing home cost crisis, but he has a promising alternative for the future. He would have the government encourage middle-aged persons to establish Individual Medical Accounts modeled after the successful Individual Retirement Accounts. The money invested in these IMAs would be sheltered from all taxes and would only be available for extended care. If the investor died before or at 65, his total contributions, plus interest, would be inherited by his family. This program would be voluntary and those persons not enrolled could still rely on Medicaid.

Although the decreased federal revenues are yet to be calculated by HHS, the long-term benefits to those needing constant care could well be the deciding factor as to whether the IMA plan flies. If this program catches on, the elderly could be spared the tragedy of seeing their life's savings decimated by prolonged illnesses.

Unfortunately, Congress has been unable to reach a consensus on how best to provide comprehensive insurance coverage for extended medical care. The chances of achieving a congressional consensus, at least for Medicare recipients, seem much improved now that the Reagan administration has such a determined advocate in Dr. Otis Bowen.

BERRY'S WORLD

DICK WEST

Going From The Cradle To The Dugout

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth predicts that in the year 2010 the oldest player in the major leagues will be 55.

Of more interest to me, considering his recent disciplinary action against baseball players accused of using narcotics, was the commissioner's reaction to the prospective introduction of anti-aging drugs.

In a quiz published in the current issue of Omni magazine, Ueberroth passed up an opportunity to forecast that the use of anti-aging drugs will be prohibited in baseball by 2010. Makes one wonder who will be commissioner 24 years from now.

Some current players, as we know, have agreed to drug testing, doing community service and other penalties imposed by Ueberroth, such as collecting $900,000 for the season instead of the million-dollar salary to which they are so justly entitled.

In 2010, will Ueberroth or a successor be dealing with 90-year-old players who, thanks to anti-aging drugs, will be able to pass for 55? It could happen.

Although Phil Niekro, a pitcher for the New York Yankees, was only 46 when he won his 300th game, you can imagine at what age he might still be pitching if he took anti-aging drugs.

According to Omni, "Experts predict that soon anti-aging drugs will improve older athletes' reflexes and increase their stamina."

Yet, at the 55 age cutoff predicted by Ueberroth, Niekro wouldn't even last until the turn of the century, much less until 2010.

I am told that certain players, not necessarily pitchers, believe their performance on the diamond is improved by a few puffs of marijuana or a little cocaine before a game.

Will 90-year-olds seriously believe they can play better if they feel 55? Now is the time for baseball's hierarchy to start fielding such questions.

If they wait until anti-aging drugs are as plentiful and as readily available as pot and coke are now, it will be too late. Some 90-year-old will have stolen all the bases.

The impact on society at large, as the non-playing public also is known, may be even more severe.

It is common knowledge that most street crimes today are committed by young men, mostly in their teens, who can outrun even 55-year-old pedestrians. What will the streets be like in 2010 if muggers start taking anti-aging drugs and still feel larcenous at age 90?

Small wonder that President Reagan's Commission on Organized Crime recommended last week, ala Ueberroth, that federal employees, like certain baseball stars, be required to take drug tests.

The commission, in a 455-page report, said illegal drug use has become this country's most widespread criminal activity and the source of many other crime-related problems.

Its proposed remedies, in some cases, such as authorizing the military to conduct "airborne, amphibious and overland" raids against drug dealers, went even beyond those imposed by the baseball commissioner.

Nuke 'em back to the bullpen, I say.

Church On Wrong Road...

The increasing emphasis in many churches on social, economic and political goals — on radical reconstruction of the U.S. economy, on "peace" in terms of unilateral disarmament, and on defense of the Nicaraguan regime — is causing profound distress among church people. Many of them feel that their churches have been taken away from them and are being used to advance causes that have little or nothing to do with religion.

These concerns of the man and woman in the pew have been articulated at a very high level in a new book Churches On The Wrong Road published by Regnery Gateway and edited by Bishop Stanley Atkins of the Episcopal Church and the Rev. Theodore McConnell.

Contributors to this important volume including leading churchmen and scholars, including Dr. John Howard, president of the Rockford Institute; Dr. Russell Kirk, the noted author and scholar; Rev. James V. Schall, S.J., of Georgetown University.

In his introduction, Edmund Fuller, former book review editor of The Wall Street Journal, observes that "One sure warning that a church is on the wrong road is the assumption that that church can and should speak automatically on secular issues about which, especially in a democratic society, committed Christians may have drastically varying opinions in good conscience. Beware of an implied dictate: Follow our political line, vote as we vote, support a specific moral issue or program of ours, resolve some complex moral issue exactly as we do, or you are not a good Christian and we will read you out of the church."

Dr. Stephen Tonsor of the University of Michigan notes that in the current form of the religion of works, those new works often are not "the constructive works of culture, of charity and religion but the works of violence, hatred, class warfare and Promethian pride."

Father Schall expresses concern the "movement of politics to the center of theology and Christian life, wherein bishops write letters about nuclear weapons" but seldom teach about spiritual matters.

Anyone who studies the church periodicals available in a seminary or theological school is bound to be startled and dismayed by the political orientation of many of the journals.

Plastic Pistols Ban Considered

By Jack Anderson
And
Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — We stirred up a tempest of alarm, denial and malicious innuendo when we reported recently that Libyan dictator Muammar Khadafy, the terrorists' friend, was dickering to buy a quantity of Austrian-made, semi-plastic pistols that are difficult or impossible for airport security measures to detect.

The pistol is the Glock 17, invented by an Austrian, Gaston Glock, and manufactured at a plant outside Vienna. Our intelligence sources told us Khadafy was trying to buy 100 to 300 of the handguns.

We also reported that a Pentagon security expert had succeeded twice in carrying a dismantled Glock 17 through the human and mechanical weapons detectors at Washington's National Airport.

After our January report, Glock and the Austrian government began issuing refutations in press releases and telegrams to major publica-

JEFFREY HART

Sacco-Vanzetti Case

The historian Francis Russell has been pursuing the truth about the Sacco and Vanzetti case for years and has written a book and numerous articles about it. With his new book "Sacco and Vanzetti: The Case Resolved," due out in April, he appears to have entirely cleared up all doubts about the case.

The case of Sacco's guilt was overwhelming at the time of the trial, and has now been added to. Sacco was a violent revolutionist willing to kill and also die for the revolutionary cause. Vanzetti was another matter. He was equally committed to the cause, but in a non-violent way. He was never convincingly placed at the scene of the payroll guard's murder. Russell concludes that Vanzetti was innocent, but that the anarchist committee running the defense denied him permission to sever his case from that of Sacco because so doing would "ruin the cause." The committee thus committed judicial murder against Vanzetti.

The defense attorney Fred Moore, a radical and a cocaine addict, at first believed in the innocence of the two men and began on his own an intensive investigation to find the "real" murderers. After following many trails that turned out to be false, he began to uncover evidence that appeared to lead to the two anarchists themselves. Eugene Lyons, the original publicity director of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, informed Russell that when Moore "got near the end of the trail, the Italian anarchist members of the Defense Committee called him in and ordered him to 'lay off.' They wouldn't say why, but the inference is that they feared his line of investigation." Emilio Coda, the violent head of the committee, warned him that if he continued on that line, he, Coda, would personally kill him.

Moore subsequently left the case. Shortly after the execution, he spent an evening with the socialist novelist and reformer Upton Sinclair and disclosed his conviction that Sacco was certainly guilty and that Vanzetti had possibly been guilty. Sinclair kept this information to himself for 25 years before publishing it in an obscure journal. When he confided the fact to a communist friend named Robert Minor, the communist phoned him in a panic: "Upton, you must not say it, you must not say it! You will ruin the movement! It will be treason!"

Francis Russell recalls that after his first book on the case, "Tragedy in Dedham," appeared, he happened to be talking about Sacco and Vanzetti with a young woman who was an instructor in creative writing at an Ivy League college.

"Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent," she proclaimed.

"Have you read my book?" Russell asked.

"No," she said, "but they HAD to be innocent."

The historian Arthur Schlesinger, Jr. probably no longer believes in the innocence of Sacco, but as recently as his early book "The Vital Center (1949) — which is firmly anti-communist — he was firmly in the grip of the myth: "Sacco and Vanzetti, shoemaker and fish-peddler, falling afoul of a prejudiced judge and an inflamed public opinion, were assassinated by the Commonwealth

DON GRAFF

Inside Managua Jailhouse

"...Lights are left on continually, or turned on only at mealtimes or when prisoners are to bathe... water or food is withheld, or extra meals provided — apparently to make prisoners believe more time had passed. Deprivation of sleep has been reported, with prisoners required to shout 'present' as guards tap on the iron doors of their cells at 10-minute intervals. Punishments reported have included forced callisthenics and forced standing during prolonged interrogation periods..."

There's more, but that gives you the basic idea of "El Chipote," a detention facility in downtown Managua and the first stop for political prisoners in the journey through Sandinista Nicaragua's system of justice.

It is described in "Nicaragua: The Human Rights Record," a report by Amnesty International detailing transgressions of both the Sandinista government and its contra opponents in the country's civil conflict. With whichever side one's sympathies may lie, it makes grim reading.

Take Sandinista justice again. Amnesty finds "a pattern of intimidation and harassment" that includes frequent arrests and incommunicado detention. Habeas corpus can be a sometime right, depending upon the whim of authorities. Where suspects are eventually brought to trial, it may be under summary procedures that severely hamper the defense. By law, their lawyers may have only two days to prepare the case.

Political cases are the preserve of the State Security Service, headquartered in El Chipote. An arm of the Ministry of Interior, it operates "largely unrestricted by the judiciary or any other civil authority."

It is able to do so under a "Law for the Maintenance of Public Order and Security." Repressive provisions are necessitated, the Sandinistas say, by the contra threat.

Both sides are held responsible for indiscriminate killings in Indian villages along the Coco River border with Honduras in the early '80s. The Sandinistas subsequently forcibly resettled the Indians farther inland.

Its investigation, Amnesty reports, determined that the relocation "was carried out in an abrupt and peremptory manner and involved hardship and suffering..." But there was no evidence of deliberate brutality. Large numbers of Indians have since been permitted to return to their homes.

this twice with a dismantled Glock 17.

In fact, Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., settled the matter beyond any nipping. One of his aides hand-carried the most recognizable part of a Glock 17 — its plastic, pistol-shaped frame — through a Capitol Hill metal detector without having it spotted. The rest of the pistol's parts, mostly metal, were in his briefcase and went through the scanner without being identified.

Meanwhile, both the Federal Aviation Administration and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms suddenly decided the problem of plastic handguns deserved attention. The aviation agency has since learned of a U.S.-made, all-plastic pistol, which is not yet on the market but which would be undetectable by a metal-scanning device.

Biaggi has introduced a bill, H.R. 4223, that would require federal security testing of all non-metal firearms, whether imported or made in the United States. If a weapon failed to be detected by standard scanning equipment, it would be outlawed, with a few minor exceptions.

How serious is the problem of a gun that can beat the airport security machines? Some FAA figures should make clear that it's deadly serious. Since mandatory screening procedures went into effect at U.S. airports in 1973, more than 33,000 firearms have been detected and almost 14,000 related arrests have been made. Officials estimate that at least 113 hijackings have been prevented.

Footnote: Glock told us he has never sold his pistols to Libya, and has no ongoing negotiations to do so. But other sources told us that, without Glock's knowledge, Khadafy was trying to buy the guns through intermediaries in Austria. It would be interesting to know if the salesmen have told Khadafy about Glock's claim that the pistol is easily detectable by airport security scanners.

Ask Dermatologist About Facial Hair

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a problem, and although I have had treatment, I am worried sick that it may still be with me. I am 78, and a year ago found out I had syphilis in the latent stage. This would go back to sometime during my marriage 31 years ago to a playboy I should have never lived with. My question is, are my two children at risk? Should I tell them so they can be tested? What can I expect for my own future? Could the disease be causing the crawling, burning sensation I have in my lower legs?

"There are no lesions, so there can't be anything wrong." Occasionally I take tetracycline. I eat a well-balanced diet, although I can't tolerate milk. I can't believe it's just "nerves."
DEAR READER — See a competent gynecologist. I agree that your vaginitis is not due to nervousness. You may have a low-grade infection from yeast (a common complication of tetracycline therapy) or you may have a hormonal imbalance, the type that is common in women after menopause. Both conditions are treatable.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, Ohio 44101.

DEAR READER — The fact that you have had treatment for your disease means that your leg sensations are probably not due to the latent syphilis. Ask your doctor about this.

Your children were at risk when they were born, and they should be checked with blood tests. If they have married, they undoubtedly had appropriate blood tests before they could obtain their marriage licenses. You and your children should be safe at this point.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm a 74-year-old woman, have a slight heart condition and am diabetic. I feel fine, but with these diseases I could be hospitalized at any time. My problem is that I have to shave every day, sometimes twice. Can you imagine waking up in a hospital and needing a shave? Neither my family nor my doctor know. Maybe I'm too proud, but what can I do about this problem?

DEAR READER — The cause of your embarrassing hair growth may be a hormone imbalance that should be medically investigated. I think you will be best served by "coming clean" with your doctor. If that option is unacceptable, see a dermatologist for advice. I am sure that getting help for your problem would be more productive solution than the constant fear and worry that someone may discover your secret.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 65, and for more than a year I have had uncontrollable vaginal itching. I've been to two doctors, and both just sort of grinned and said, "Just your nerves" and

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Today's deal, played in the Life Master Pairs of a recent national tournament, provides another example of the fine art of deceptive play. On the lead of the diamond 10, declarer played low from dummy and East overtook the 10 with his jack. Without hesitation he fired back the club seven. Declarer won with his ace, cashed his heart ace, ruffed a heart in dummy and drew trumps. Declarer could now settle for a sure 10 tricks: six spades, the heart ace, a ruff in dummy and the A-K of clubs. Since this was a matchpoint event, who could blame declarer for going for that all-important overtrick by taking the "marked" club finesse? Declarer led his last club to dummy's jack, only to see — horror of horrors — East producing the winning queen. The defenders now cashed two heart tricks, setting the contract by one trick for a top score.

At nearly every other table the opening lead was the same, but at trick two most players sitting East played the diamond king. South can now ruff high, cash the heart ace, ruff a heart in dummy and draw trumps. Now declarer cashes his club ace and, with his last entry to dummy, takes the club king. When East's doubleton queen falls, dummy's jack and 10 of clubs provide two overtricks.

No rubber bridge player would jeopardize a vulnerable game for a 30-point overtrick. But what duplicate player wouldn't?

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY MARCH 15, 1986
 More travel for pleasure may be in the offing for you in the year ahead. Your trips will be memorable experiences and you'll make lots of new friends.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your greatest asset today is your ability to think fast. You'll be able to make beneficial moves while others are still sitting through the facts. Major changes are ahead for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) This could turn out to be a very profitable day for you. You may not be aware of things now stirring behind the scenes until it's time to go to the bank.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll be treated with the consideration and respect to which you're entitled by people who have clout and influence. Deal with the big shots today.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) An important objective will be achieved today. Although you will derive the greatest benefits it will be carried out by others.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your ideas and suggestions have extra impact today. You'll be especially effective if you have to impress a group.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In a joint venture where something of material value is at stake, it's going to be up to you to be the prime mover. You'll make it succeed.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Harmony will be restored in a valued relationship that has been rather rocky lately. Previous disagreements will be resolved.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If a successful friend comes to you with an investment proposal today, be sure to hear him out. What's offered could be a winner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You are far more popular than you may realize. Today a close friend will tell you some of the nice things others are saying about you.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This can be an extremely productive day for you if you apply yourself. Work you've been brushing aside can now be completed to your satisfaction.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It will be difficult for you to avoid the spotlight today — and you shouldn't. Regardless of what you do, you'll attract favorable attention.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Lady Luck tends to favor you today, especially in situations that could contribute to your material security. Make hay while the sun shines.

Gardening

Tropical Cannas Will Add Splash Of Color To Your Summer Garden

If you have a bright, sunny garden spot that needs some summer color, why not try cannas this season? These tropical flowering perennials are very easy to grow. You've probably seen them growing somewhere. They have showy, tropical-looking foliage with leaves resembling those of a banana tree. The bright, large flowers come in a wide variety of colors, including ivory, yellow, rose, salmon and red. Plants may reach a height of 10 feet, depending on the variety you choose.

Even the foliage is attractive, with colors ranging from green or greenish-blue to copper, purple or ruby. Some varieties are variegated with green leaves with white stripes. If you're interested in adding some cannas to your landscape, you should know that the plants are classified in two ways — by flower type and growth habit.

Cannas come in two basic flowering types. Gladiolus-flowering cannas have wide flower petals on flower spikes spread closely on long stalks. Orchid-flowering cannas are more loosely spaced, and they have narrow petals.

By growth habit, cannas are classified as tall-growing, low-growing, and dwarfs. The tall-growing plants need quite a bit of room. They should be spaced about two feet apart. Most of the tall-growing types will reach a height of four to six feet. They bear very large spikes and huge, satiny flowers.

Low-growing cannas shouldn't ever get larger than three feet high. They make a nice addition to small gardens, terraces and in other areas where space is limited. The low-growing cannas have green leaves and large, well-proportioned flowers.

Dwarf cannas grow from 18 to 18 inches tall. They're used most often as accents in front of shrubs, or in mixed flower bed plantings.

Like most garden plants, cannas grow best in well-drained soil that's rich in organic material and plant nutrients. They will, however, grow in most soils without extra amendments, as long as they get enough fertilizer and water.

No matter what kind of soil they're planted in, cannas like plenty of plant food. The more they get, the more they bloom. Fertilize your cannas at least once a month with a complete 6-6-6 fertilizer. Broadcast about two pounds per 100 square feet of garden area.

Cannas can be grown in the garden in two ways. First, they can be grown in containers. Four- or 5-gallon plastic pots are ideal. To get them started, fill the pots with good organic soil and plant the cannas. Then, space the pots out and set them in the ground. Make sure the soil in the pots is about level or slightly shallower than the surrounding soil. Add a layer of mulch and no one will ever guess that the plants are growing in containers.

This method may sound like a lot of extra work, but it has advantages that make it worthwhile. For one thing, it's easier to be sure the plants have enough fertilizer when the root systems are in pots ... and, since there's practically no leaching, you'll get good results with less fertilizer. The plastic pots cut down on soil-borne insects and nematodes, too. Finally, cannas growing in pots usually need less water, because the organic soil holds more moisture than the sandy soils so common in our landscapes.

As you know or soon will, cannas grow from rhizomes — special food-storing roots. You can also plant the rhizomes directly in the flower beds. Mix about a third of a cup of a complete 6-6-6 fertilizer into the soil for each rhizome you plant. Cannas planted this way usually won't flower as soon as those rooted ahead of time in pots. Be careful pruning. You can keep cannas blooming all summer. As soon as the first flowers wither, remove the part of the stem that bore them. Usually there will be a second flower shoot growing from the joint just below the top flower of the first shoot. Just continue this process, removing each stem as the flowers wither. Finally, when all the flowering shoots finish blooming, cut the entire stem at or just above the ground level.

After the blooming system, cannas should be dug and stored until the next spring. Clean off any sand or organic material clinging to the roots. Separate them and throw away any rhizomes without "eyes." Cut off the remaining stems, and let the rhizomes dry for a week or so in a cool area. Cut off all the dried roots, put the rhizomes in a flat wooden box, cover them with a dry peat moss, and store them under cool conditions. Do not refrigerate them, though — they will deteriorate at temperatures of 45° F. and below.

Since cannas can grow quite large, they should be used with care in the average landscape. A few plants might be fine, but too many in the same area could be disastrous. Try some cannas this season. They'll brighten up your spring and summer landscape. Happy gardening!

Rev. and Mrs. Israel Black Celebrate 50th Anniversary

Happy Golden Anniversary To Local Pastor And Wife

February 22, 1936 began fifty years of happiness for the Rev. and Mrs. Israel Black Sr. The Blacks' children, Israel Jr., Ann Deese and Betty J. Dotman, hosted a lovely anniversary dinner in the fellowship hall of the Hickory Avenue Church of God. Family, friends and guests gathered to help the Blacks celebrate 50 years of wedded bliss. Israel Black Jr. was toastmaster for the occasion and he gave words of welcome to the many friends and family members. The prayer was given by the Rev. U. Harris. Musical tributes were rendered by the grandchildren Benny Deese and Kisha Brown. Tributes of love from the Blacks' children were shared through music and poetic presentations. Words of congratulations from family and friends were given by Mother Carrie Bryant, Ruth Hatch, and Mrs. Theodore Martin. The Reverend Israel Black Sr. has pastored churches from Rochester, New York, to Florida.

He is presently the pastor of Church of God, Eustis. Members and friends from his church shared in the golden anniversary, and presentations were made by guests and children. The family tree of the Rev. Israel and Nina Black are the following branches: Israel Jr., Ann, Jean, Gwen, Bennie, Jeff, Lynne, Kisha, Bonnye, Brent, Robin, Israel III, Allison and Aunt Mattie. The family and friends of the Rev. and Mrs. Israel Black Sr. wish many more years of happiness and spiritual blessings for them. The guests enjoyed a dinner of ham, chicken, fruit and potato salads, string beans, rolls, punch and cake.

A special musical program will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at St. Matthew Missionary Baptist Church, Main Street, Midway. All proceeds will go to benefit the Aretha Riggins Fund. Aretha was a very active sports participant at Seminole High School until stricken by the rare disease Guillain Barre Syndrome. The community is invited to support this benefit sponsored by the Women's Community Club of Sanford. Susan Bookhard, president.

The University of Florida Gospel Choir will give a concert at 7 p.m. Saturday at New Mount Calvary Missionary Baptist Church, West 12th Street, Sanford. This popular gospel group from Gainesville is sponsored by Evergreen Masonic Lodge No. 23 and Rebecca Chapter No. 83 Order of Eastern Star; Willie King, Worshipful Master.

Zion Hope Missionary Baptist Church will observe its annual Men's Day Service at 11 a.m. March 16. The Reverend Roosevelt Green and congregation will lead. Deacon Joseph Caldwell is chairman and the Rev. J.L. Brooks is pastor.

Happy Birthday wishes to Marva D. Banks, Martha H. Doctor, and Darrell Barber.

'Friendly Divorce' Means Lost Heirlooms

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Distressed," whose son and daughter-in-law, after a three-year marriage, are working out a "friendly divorce." Meanwhile, the daughter-in-law has not returned the diamond engagement ring — a family heirloom.

With approximately half the marriages ending in divorce, may I suggest we revive the old tradition of handing down significant pieces of jewelry to daughters only. This will ensure that heirloom pieces remain in the family.

My husband and I have one daughter and two sons. All heirloom jewelry will be given to our daughter. When our sons marry, their wives will be given new pieces, equal in value to the heirloom pieces.

This may be no consolation to "Distressed," but it may help other families with sentimental heirlooms to keep them in the family.

FIFTH GENERATION NEW ORLEANS

DEAR FIFTH: Heirloom jewelry should be given to whomever the give wishes to give it, and the recipient should be free to give it to whomever he or she wishes to have it. Not all heirs have the same sentimental feelings about grandmother's pearls when they come with strings attached.

A son is as much entitled to grandfather's watch as his sister, and he'd find it more useful. And if there are no daughters in the family, then what?

DEAR ABBY: What would you give a man who has everything?

FREDA

DEAR FREDA: An audit.
DEAR ABBY: Please settle a

Dear Abby

family dispute. Our daughter, a professional woman of 30, shares our house. It works out well, as she helps my wife around the house some, but mainly we each have our own quarters.

She pays room and board of $75 a week, which includes everything — laundry and ironing done, etc. She makes over $20,000 a year. She has an MG car (paid for), and has about $15,000 in funds. She recently was laid off work and has run out of unemployment compensation. She feels we should not charge her any money at this time. We feel that if she were living in an apartment building, she would pay much more. She could use some of her savings. We do not need the money, but she needs to know responsibility. Maybe we should cut it in half?

The atmosphere here has grown very chilly — and I am not talking about the climate. What should we do? Thanks.

OLD-FASHIONED DAD

DEAR DAD: If she were my daughter, I'd say she has already learned responsibility and doesn't need the lesson. But she's yours, not mine, so compromise, and cut the cost in half.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this letter to let the public know that they should never, never watch a person welding metal. I never realized the danger to your eyes. I was looking out my kitchen window at a worker about 30 feet away, for just a short time, and I burned my eyes badly.

It didn't start to hurt until three or four hours later. At first I thought I had something in my eye. During the night it got progressively worse — itching, pain, swelling of the eyelids and watering. I could not see clearly; everything was fuzzy. When I finally fell asleep, my eyelids got stuck together, and three times I had to get up and wash them and put eye drops in to be able to open them again.

I still wasn't sure what had caused all this until I called the welder to ask if that could be the problem. He said it was.

Please get the message out to help people. I'd hate to see a child or elderly person do damage to his eyes by watching a welder for a longer period of time than I did. Thank you.

CONNIE IN MASS.

DEAR CONNIE: Thanks for caring enough to write.

*Glittering But Gaudy...
Flashy But Fashionable*

Jewelry With Panache

By Susan Loden
Herald Feature Writer
Photographs By Tommy Vincent

Glittering and gaudy, flashy but fashionable, costume jewelry set with rainbow colored cut stones has caught today's eye. New pieces mimicking those of the post-Victorian era draw top dollars, but some lovers of this glitzy fashion say why buy the new when you can get your hands on the original?

And, as usual it seems, old, they say, is really better than new.

"All of it's handmade," Sanford's Brenda Vaughn said of the old stuff. "Everything that's made now is made by machine and a lot of it is paste. The older jewelry is all glass. A lot of it was handblown, handcut and handset. If you really take the time to look you will see this.

"The foil glass has a layer of foil, different colors, then glass blown over it in another color, and then cut into different shapes. The manpower alone that it took to make one piece! A lot of this old jewelry was made by Tiffany — designer jewelry that if you bought it new now you would pay into the thousands of dollars for it. I mean this is not junk. It's very beautiful. A lot of it was made with semi-precious and precious stones, gold and silver.

"See, what happened," Ms. Vaughn, who has collected vintage jewelry and clothing for 15 years, said. "was up until about the Victorian age the common man did not have jewelry, because everything was gold and they just couldn't afford it. Along about the Victorian time they started making this, so the common man could afford it. It's very collectible.

"I got interested because of the different shapes, the different colors. Things that were really wild looking. I loved it. A lot of it is a fad to some people, but for people like me, and there are hundreds and hundreds of thousands of us who over the years have collected it, it's just the history behind it, and the beauty behind it."

Both old and young are drawn to these sparkling baubles. Connie Davis, a high school student who assists Ms. Vaughn with her collection and has started her own said she "loves the styles and that it's old, with a story. To know that somebody else has worn it. I like to think a story goes with it."

"I think most people like it because it's stunning and they never realized it," Ms. Vaughn said. "I've had so many people come up (to her weekend flea market display south of Sanford) and say 'I threw all of this away.' Or, 'I gave it away.' Or, 'Gosh, I'm going to go home and look in my grandmother's closet,' because they don't realize what it is until they see it like this. I try to display in a way that will show people how to put outfits together with the jewelry.

... Jewelry

"And we're using this glittering accessory perhaps with a bit more daring than its original owners," she said. "The real fancy, gaudy stuff came along in the '30s and '40s, mainly because people were tired of the Depression, tired of the war. They wanted something really glittering and flashing.

"The movie stars were dressing up in diamonds, so it became a real vogue, but it was worn mostly for evenings. But some colored pins, things like that were worn during the day for very dressy occasions. They weren't worn just commonly like they are now. Now you wear rhinestones with your blue jeans," Ms. Vaughn said.

And if you're wearing today's rhinestones, you're probably wearing paste that has been glued into a mounting. Not so with most of the older pieces. Although some were made of paste and the cheapest of the cheap glued in place, most old stones were real, either stone or crystal, and set in place with little metal prongs.

Margie Beine, who also deals in old costume jewelry in her downtown Sanford shop said the years will wash away from most old pieces if soaked in a mild solution of ammonia and water.

However, she cautions, costume jewelry with glue-set stones shouldn't be soaked, and she has a bag full of loose stones to prove her point. If a glued piece really has to be cleaned, Mrs. Beine suggests, a gentle wipe with a detergent soaked cloth.

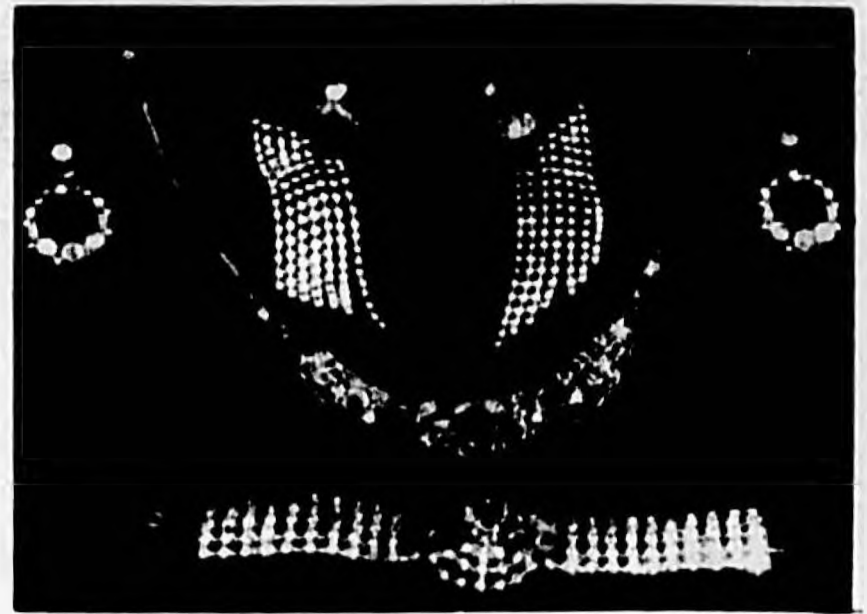

Trying to reset glued stones can be a painstaking process, she said.

"But most stones are prong-set and will last," Mrs. Beine said of the old jewelry, but not so, the new.

Although most who buy this flashy jewelry, either the old or the new, see it as a fun type thing, Ms. Vaughn said it should be looked on as a real investment. When she first started collecting she picked up pieces at bargain rates at yard sales and thrift shops.

But the demand for these goodies has drained many basic sources, she said, so you'll have to either buy from a dealer who has perhaps amassed a collection from across the country, or scout around hoping to dig out a find at a flea market or garage sale.

Depending on the style, an old pair of glass earrings may cost about $8, while a new pair would be double that or more. A bargain old necklace might be bought for the same $8, but most likely will be from about $15 up through, but usually less than, $100.

Contemporary pieces lead in price, but those willing to sift through junk piled on a flea market table just down the Isle from Ms. Vaughn's massive collection, might find a pair of blue crystal glass earrings with a silver mount for just 10-cents.

You just never know.

But Ms. Vaughn said, you should know that if you come up with a Tiffany designed piece of this glitzy jewelry, take it to an appraiser, because you have a find worth thousands of dollars.

And even if your find isn't a Tiffany, it can be fun, if you're flashy enough to flaunt it.

Barbara Walters Does The Reagans

By Mark Schwed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Barbara Walters is back with another television special and this time she delves into the minds of President Reagan and his wife, Nancy.

The one-hour glimpse of the great White House way airs March 24 at 8 p.m. EST, just before the Academy Awards telecast on ABC.

"We put our feet up and talked," Walters said.

Naturally, some of the talking was about movies, a subject

dear to the Reagans' hearts. We learn that the Reagans have seen 45 movies this year — 40 more than the average American — including every one that is up for an Oscar. Walters also discusses Nancy Reagan's worrying, the president's "Teflon Ron" image, their experience with cancer, and the new book by the president's daughter, Patti Davis, which, while billed as fiction, appears to paint an unflattering portrait of the presidential parents.

Although it is the first in-depth, one-on-one interview with the president since his re-election, very little of the interview deals with hard news subjects such as the budget, the deficit, the nuclear arms negotiations with the Soviets or the upheaval in the Philippines.

It is Walters' way to ask the offbeat and sidetrack the obvious, as when on one of her earlier specials she asked Barbra Streisand why she had not had a nose job.

Because of that, Walters expects to be roundly criticized by the press for her choice of subjects. But she believes the public will get what it wants.

"We may very well be criticized by the press but not by the public — why didn't they ask this and why didn't they ask that," Walters said in a telephone interview.

"However, I felt that they (the Reagans) are really such superstars now. We've had political people on in the past on these specials. People don't really want to see it. They click off. You can put the president on and they click off.

"This is, after all, the Academy Awards night. Our idea of even using President and Mrs. Reagan is very different. It's the prime time entertainment period. We've always done superstars. What we hope is you feel you have seen the person in a different way than before and perhaps gotten to know them better.

"It is not done so that we ask him what he thinks of Mrs. (Corazon) Aquino or the Nicaraguan problem."

Walters secured the interview by writing the Reagans and their White House staffers and telling them of her plan to air the interview right before the Academy Awards, which traditionally attracts one of the largest television audiences of the year.

Last year, 65 million people watched the movie superstars parade on stage to accept the Oscars.

The session was taped on the day Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos was fleeing his country. But instead of dwelling on a timely subject such as the problems in the Philippines — she had to keep in mind that the interview wouldn't air for a month — Walters preferred "the kinds of questions not being asked on the evening news."

How many movies had they seen? How do they feel about the president's brush with cancer and how it was handled? Why does he like old movies so much more than the ones being made today?

"On Academy Awards night people don't want to sit down at that point and hear a hard news interview," she said.

Walters hints that there will be revelations, but she doesn't want to give them away before the show. She said two questions were particularly "tough."

"There were two questions, one was about the children. I saved that until the end of the interview. I knew it was not something they wanted to talk about. I actually read from (Davis') book and asked how do you feel about this."

Then she tackled the subject of Reagan's IQ.

"I asked the president, I said, there are those who don't think you are very bright and you can't be in a room alone without a staff member. You're called the 'Teflon president.' Are you aware of it?" Reagan was.

We also learn how Nancy Reagan selects flowers and dinner menus for the White House and that she worries a lot.

She interviewed Reagan in the Oval Office. There also is a peek into the president's private study, the place where he watched the Challenger explosion and where he generally eats lunch alone — usually a bowl of soup.

There was one other revelation. Walters asked Reagan if there was anything he would change about the last year and a half since re-election and the president said, yes, there is one thing he would change.

"I don't want to tell you what it was," she said, saving it for the viewers.

Walters left the White House with some impressions about the place and the people who live there.

"I find him as charming as he is hard to penetrate," she said of Reagan. "He deflects everything with a smile and his easy way." As for his wife, "Everything reflects on her face. You know when you hit home."

Sanford's Hardy Rawls On All Three Networks

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

Hardy Rawls

Sanford actor Hardy "Buddy" Rawls is scheduled to appear in three network television programs.

First on the list for Rawls, who is a class of 1970 graduate of Seminole High School, is an appearance on The New Love American Style, scheduled to air March 21.

He will play Mickey Gilley's boss on a construction site in that program, which airs at 11:30 a.m. weekdays on WFTV-Channel 9.

Next will be an appearance on Foley Square, now in the CBS, WCPX-Channel 6 lineup on Tuesdays at 8:30 p.m. In the March 25 episode Rawls is cast as "Mr. Martin," an angry father whose son was victim of a hit-and-run accident.

Also, Rawls is set to appear with Valerie Harper on Valerie, which currently runs at 8:30 p.m. Mondays on NBC. WESH-Channel 2. The date for that appearance has not been listed, but Rawls said he plays an "obnoxious coach."

Rawls' burly "all-American" looks and ever present plaid shirt and baseball cap have singled him out for many similar roles as coaches, construction workers and policemen. Most of his work has been in television commercials, but 33-year-old Rawls landed the role of a coach in the feature film D.A.R.Y.L., while visiting his mother Eva Belle Rawls in Sanford. Parts of that movie were filmed in Sanford and Orlando in January 1985.

In recent months, Rawls has also appeared on The New Twilight Zone and Alfred Hitchcock Presents. He also has stage and other television appearances, including a slot on All My Children, in his list of credits.

Time slots for the programs Rawls is scheduled to appear in are subject to change.

New NBC shows do well

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two new NBC series featuring old TV friends, "You Again?" and "Valerie," premiered to high numbers in the weekly ratings game, adding more depth to NBC's all-star bullpen, ratings showed this week.

In the winner's corner, "Valerie," the classy new series starring Valerie Harper of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "Rhoda," tied at No. 10 with "Miami Vice," according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Will The Russians Ever View 'Peter'?

Dear Dick — We have enjoyed the TV miniseries "Peter the Great." Can you tell us if this series has been, or will be, seen in Russia? If so, how will the language barrier be handled? — M. and M.P., Houston.

When the deal to shoot the miniseries in Russia was arranged — it was so complicated it was officially called a "treaty" — one of the clauses was that NBC agreed to give the Russian authorities a finished copy of the film. They have done that. Now it is up to the Soviet government as to whether or not it will be shown on Russian TV. If they do show it, presumably they will either dub it into Russian or have subtitles. But, as of the moment, as far as NBC knows, it has not been seen there.

Dear Dick — Is Margaret Ladd the daughter of June Lockhart? I've been wondering ever since I saw her on "Falcon Crest." — M.M., Hollywood, Fla.

No, June has a couple of daughters, including actress Anne Lockhart, but Margaret is not among them.

Dear Dick — The answer to this question is important. My uncle claims that the lady who starred in "Masterpiece of Murder" was Barbara Eden. My mother, a friend and I say that it was not her. Who's right? — S.W., Nixa, Mo.

You, your mother and your friend are right. The starring ladies in that film were Jayne Meadows,

Ask Dick Kleiner

Yvonne DeCarlo, Anne Lloyd Francis and Stella Stevens. On a fuzzy day, Stella might be confused with Barbara — same size and coloring.

Dear Dick — A few years back, William Devane played a returning serviceman in a TV movie. The town gave him a silver dollar for each day he was a prisoner of war. Some thugs saw it on TV and robbed him and raped and killed his wife. He and an Indian pal tracked the thugs down. Do you know the name of this movie and when it came out? — D.H., Madison, Wis.

I asked Bill Devane for that answer, since I couldn't find it listed. He identified the film as "Rolling Thunder." It was released in 1977. Devane's co-star was Tommy Lee Jones (today they are polo-playing buddies).

Dear Dick — Is the girl who plays Alex on "Foley Square" the same girl who played Margo Hughes on "As the World Turns"? She was terrific in that role and it seems she will be just as hot on the new series. — A.S., Rio Rancho, N.M.

Yes, Margaret Colin played Margo for three years on "As the World Turns." It is doubtful if she will have that long a run on "Foley Square." In the recent ratings, it was 52nd out of 60 shows.

Dear Dick — Whatever happened to Frances Langford? — J.S., Altoona, Pa.

Good fortune happened to her. In case you youngsters don't know who Frances Langford is, she was one of the top vocalists in the 1930s and 1940s, who appeared in several movies in that era. She married Ralph Evinrude, of the outboard motor Evinrude, and retired. She is living happily in Florida.

Dear Dick — Recently I became involved in a heated discussion regarding credits. The TV Guide and the Kalamazoo Gazette listed "Blood Alley" and had Lauren Bacall as the leading lady. Yet, I was on location where this movie was shot to see a friend, Mike Mazurki, and he introduced me to Miss Anita Ekberg, who played the lead. Will you let me know what's what? — A., Paw Paw, Mich.

There can be more than one actress in a movie. Both Anita and Lauren are in "Blood Alley." The official credits go this way: "Blood Alley" with John Wayne, Lauren Bacall, Paul Fix, Mike Mazurki and Anita Ekberg.

Will The Russians Ever View 'Peter'?

Dear Dick — We have enjoyed the TV miniseries "Peter the Great." Can you tell us if this series has been, or will be, seen in Russia? If so, how will the language barrier be handled? — M. and M.F., Houston.

When the deal to shoot the miniseries in Russia was arranged — it was so complicated it was officially called a "treaty" — one of the clauses was that NBC agreed to give the Russian authorities a finished copy of the film. They have done that. Now it is up to the Soviet government as to whether or not it will be shown on Russian TV. If they do show it, presumably they will either dub it into Russian or have subtitles. But, as of the moment, as far as NBC knows, it has not been seen there.

Dear Dick — Is Margaret Ladd the daughter of June Lockhart? I've been wondering ever since I saw her on "Falcon Crest." — M.M., Hollywood, Fla.

No. June has a couple of daughters, including actress Anne Lockhart, but Margaret is not among them.

Dear Dick — The answer to this question is important. My uncle claims that the lady who starred in "Masterpiece of Murder" was Barbara Eden. My mother, a friend and I say that it was not her. Who's right? — S.W., Nixa, Mo.

You, your mother and your friend are right. The starring ladies in that film were Jayne Meadows,

Ask Dick Kleiner

Yvonne DeCarlo, Anne Lloyd Francis and Stella Stevens. On a fuzzy day, Stella might be confused with Barbara — same size and coloring.

Dear Dick — A few years back, William Devane played a returning serviceman in a TV movie. The town gave him a silver dollar for each day he was a prisoner of war. Some thugs saw it on TV and robbed him and raped and killed his wife. He and an Indian pal tracked the thugs down. Do you know the name of this movie and when it came out? — D.H., Madison, Wis.

I asked Bill Devane for that answer, since I couldn't find it listed. He identified the film as "Rolling Thunder." It was released in 1977. Devane's co-star was Tommy Lee Jones (today they are polo-playing buddies).

Dear Dick — Is the girl who plays Alex on "Foley Square" the same girl who played Margo Hughes on "As the World Turns"? She was terrific in that role and it seems she will be just as hot on the new series. — A.S., Rio Rancho, N.M.

Yes, Margaret Colin played Margo for three years on "As the World Turns." It is doubtful if she will have that long a run on "Foley Square." In the recent ratings, it was 52nd out of 60 shows.

Dear Dick — Whatever happened to Frances Langford? — J.S., Altoona, Pa.

Good fortune happened to her. In case you youngsters don't know who Frances Langford is, she was one of the top vocalists in the 1930s and 1940s, who appeared in several movies in that era. She married Ralph Evinrude, of the outboard motor Evinrudes, and retired. She is living happily in Florida.

Dear Dick — Recently I became involved in a heated discussion regarding credits. The TV Guide and the Kalamazoo Gazette listed "Blood Alley" and had Lauren Bacall as the leading lady. Yet, I was on location where this movie was shot to see a friend, Mike Mazurki, and he introduced me to Miss Anita Ekberg, who played the lead. Will you let me know what's what? — A., Paw Paw, Mich.

There can be more than one actress in a movie. Both Anita and Lauren are in "Blood Alley." The official credits go this way: "Blood Alley" with John Wayne, Lauren Bacall, Paul Fix, Mike Mazurki and Anita Ekberg.
