

The Deaths Of Six Teen-Agers

By GEOFFREY POUNDS Herald Staff Writer

How did it happen? How did six Orlando teen-agers come to die on a dark stretch of highway south of Oviedo Saturday? The answers to those questions will not be available for days, the Florida Highway Patrol reports. Investigators said they are still sifting through dozens of eyewitness statements and numerous bits of information surrounding the early morning tragedy. "There is so much confusion and so many different statements that it's awfully hard to put it all together. It's difficult to determine what is factual information and what is emotional information," said corporal M.W. Sanders of the FHP.

Although no charges have been filed against either

Missing are the hired gunslingers — all the other ingredients for a range war now exist along a pleasant stretch of residential property southeast of Casselberry. The dispute started two years ago when Bill and Marion Eggers, 2806 Lake Howell Lane, decided they wanted to put a mobile home in the middle of their seven and onehalf acre lot. Eggers, 58, operates a butcher's supply business from his home. He also has a worm farm on his property. He said he needs the trailer so his son can live earby and help with the businesses.

The neighbors, most of whom live in large-lot homes ranging in price from $150,000 to $500,000, considered the nstallation of a mobile home in their ranch-like environment to be the act of modern day sodbusters. "We want to be good neighbors, but we don't want this area turning into a trailer park," said one of the opponents, "property here sells for $18,000 an acre." According to the Eggers, opponents to their trailer mobilized behind their back and did so for reasons other than annovance over the trailer itself. "We don't belong to the coffee klatch set. I don't sit in on aid Mrs. Eggers, 51. During the first formal hearing on the matter in 1977, the county board of adjustment denied the Eggers request for a special permit which would have allowed them to nstall the mobile home on the agriculturally-zoned roperty. The board rejected the request after opposition was expressed in five letters from neighboring residents. "We went to all the neighbors and told them what we wanted to do and asked if they objected. Nobody did. When we went to the hearing we found there were all those etters of objection. We were totally stunned," said Mrs.

Tom Drake, whose home bordered the Eggers in 1977, aid he and other neighbors were not approached by the Eggers prior to the hearing.

"We don't want this thing to get personal," said Drake, "but there is a lack of communication." The foud between the Eggers and their neighbors remained a cold stand-off for a year, but heated up again his year when the Eggers re-applied for a special permit.

The new permit request stated that Eggers needed the railer due to medical reasons. "We didn't mention my medical problems the first time secause I don't like to use that as a crutch," said Eggers. Eggers said he suffered a heart attack in 1973 and had needs some help."

Mrs. Eggers said her husband's medical problems cost in excess of $15,000 and wiped out their entire savings. But the protesting neighbors doubt the couple's claim of hardship. They say the use of medical diabilities on the part of Eggers is a ploy to gain sympathy. A group of the neighbors have hired an attorney to present an appeal to the board of adjustment's ruling to the Seminole Board of County Commissioners. The appeal has been scheduled for Sept. 25.

"We don't believe those medical excuses. We've seen him up on his ladder painting his house. We've seen him playing volleyball in the back yard. Would someone unable to work be able to do those things?" questioned one skeptical neighbor.

The Eggers said they are not surprised by anything their neighbors say about them. Since the pool in Ft. Mellon Park in Sanford closed in 1965, Mrs. Eggers, a Red Cross swimming instructor. volunteered to teach swimming and water safety to county youngsters in the pool at her home. She said about 300 to 400 youngsters come to her pool for lessons each summer and the neighbors object to the practice. "They say we create traffic problems because of the lessons, but they never complain about the man who has a model train in his yard. From September to May there is a steady stream of school buses going down the road taking kids to see the train. That's OK with them; but what I do is

Rebecca Ann Wagoner, 23, or Robert Jeffrey Wray, 26, Sanders said the results of the FHP investigation will be turned over to the Orange County State's Attorney's office for review. He said any decision to prosecute the drivers of the two cars that slammed into the crowd of teen-agers on state Route 420, will be made by the state'attorney's office. Both Wray and Miss Wagoner

In addition to the six vouths who died as a result of the accident, two other Orlando teens remain hospitalized at Winter Park Hospital. Bernard Finnigar, 19, is listed in serious condition today. Eighteen-year-old Mark Edward James is listed in satisfactory condition. He suffered a broken right leg and extensive abrasions over his body "I don't remember much. I didn't see what hit me, all I remember is waking up in the hospital. The paramedic said he found me under one of the cars," said James today from his hospital bed. According to James, there were only 20 to 30 teens present at the scene. One early report had as many as 50 youths there. But James confirmed the group had gathered to watch drag races.

James said he was on the side of the road when he was hit. He said he was watching the racers coming from the east when two cars coming from the west plowed into the crowd, most of whom he said were also on the side of the road and not in the road as early reports indicated. "We've only been going out there recently," James said of the blacktop road just south of the Seminole County border. "We used to go out to the old dump road." James said the teens moved their drag races to state Route 420 because it is less frequently patrolled by sheriff's deputies and Highway Patrol troopers. "It's hard to stop this kind of thing," corporal Sanders said, "We can go out there and see 20 kids along the side of the road, but unless we catch them in the act of racing, there's not much we can do. It's not against the law to stand along the side of the road." Sanders said the teens post guards on both ends of the highway to alert the racers to any oncoming patrol cars. A spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board from Atlanta said today investigators from his office are joining in the probe of the accident. Any findings, the spokesman said, will be relayed to state and local officials.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) - Panamanian strongman Gen. Omar Torrijos warned the United States that Panama expects the Panama Canal Zone to be turned over to his country as scheduled on Oct. 1, whether or not Congress approves funds to implement the canal treaty.

During a tour of Nicaragua, Torrijos said Panama would have the right under international law to "push" the Americans from the Canal Zone if the U.S. Senate does not pass legislation in time to implement the 1977 treaty. Torrijos said it was in the United States' interest to implement the treaties because inaction would "in effect, erase previous treaties."

Across-Board Tax Cut Prospects Dim

The Joint Economic Committee of Congress is warning that we will see a drastic decline in our standard of living in the 1980s if we do not improve our productivity - the output of goods and services measured against the hours of labor needed to produce them.

The lagging rate of growth of productivity in the United States has been worrying economists for vears. It is one of the major causes of inflation. It is frustrating efforts by American manufacturers to compete with Japan and other countries which have better productivity rates and can market their goods at lower prices.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, chairman of the joint committee, has made the productivity question pertinent to the debate on economic policy due to begin when Congress returns from its recess. With the chill of a recession running through the economy, congressional minds are turning toward the traditional response-a stimulative tax cut. The approach of the 1980 elections, of course, makes the idea all the more appealing.

"We need policies not just for next election, but for the long term," says Sen. Bentsen, pointing to the worrisome forecast for the 1980s. Jacob Javits of New York, the ranking Republican on the committee echoes this attitude, urging more attention to tax policies that go beyond an immediate stimulus of business to attack the underlying problem of productivity.

A general cut in federal income taxes would contribute to the latter goal if Americans put the extra money into savings or investments. This would enhance the pool of capital needed to modernize plants and tools and thus improve efficiency and productivity.

But we suspect taxpayers would see most of the benefit from such a tax cut going into a game of catch-up with rising prices, especially for gasoline and household fuel. In this respect, the tax cut actually works against the goal of energy conservation. Like it or not, the harder it is for us to pay higher fuel prices the more inclined we'll be to figure out ways to use less fuel.

Talk of an anti-recession tax cut comes as the inflation rate is running beyond 13 percent and the federal budget is heading into a deficit of $30 billion or more. Although Republicans subscribing to the Kemp-Roth theory can argue that a massive tax cut would bring the budget closer to balance rather than aggravate the deficit. it is not clear that a burst of consumer spending is what the economy needs most right now.

Sens. Bentsen and Javits seem to be hinting, as much as politicians dare, that a popular across-theboard tax cut could do the country more harm than good in the long run. They are verging toward the idea. perhaps hard to sell on the eve of national elections, that tax adjustments which contribute directly to capital formation and investment are the best prescription.

The capital gains tax would thus be a candidate for reduction. Congress also has before it a bill to encourage investment in new plants by allowing more rapid depreciation write-offs. This is a tax benefit that would be right on target for improving productivity.

As for the general taxpayer, Congress should acknowledge that the priority lies in protecting workers from those tax increases which result when cost-of-living pay increases put them in higher income tax brackets. Full indexing of the tax system for inflation might not be perceived as a "tax cut," but being spared an otherwise automatic tax increase on wages which provide no additional buying power would have the same

Approval of a plan to develop the third phase of the Interstate-4 Industrial Park west of Sanford would produce the potential for 1,000 new jobs, the Seminole Board of County Commissioners were told this week.

Spokesmen for Space Port, USA, developers of the industrial park. asked commissioners to approve a preliminary plan for the development of 135 acres north of state Route 46 along Hickman Drive. The spokesmen said the businesses at the park now average 24 employees each. If 41 new lots were developed and leased by new businesses, there would be a demand for about 1,000 jobs.

But the commissioners delayed for two weeks any decision on whether to okay the preliminary plan.

Lest The FBI Be Embarrassed

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) - If the Federal Bureau of Investigation has its way, citizens seeking to examine their dossiers in the FBI's files will soon need an elaborate calendar, an intuitive sense of timing and a very long nemory.

Inordinate amounts of perseverance and determination already are required to pry information from the FBI's grasp, even though two federal laws ostensibly give every individual the right to examine his or her file maintained by any government department or agency.

The applicable statutes are the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act. When Congress amended the FOIA in 1974, it uthorized public access to federal investigative ecords for the first time in the nation's history Subsequent citizen requests for documents from the bureau's files produced evidence o widespread abuses of power and violations of fundamental constitutional rights by an overalous FBI.

There were numerous documented cases of SCIENCE WORLD unauthorized burglaries and break-ins known as without judicial approval and illegal wiretaps and other forms of electronic surveillance.

In late 1978 and early 1979, FBI Director William H. Webster began promoting a scheme to reduce those disclosures. In speeches to Rotarians, police chiefs, law students and advertising executives in South Carolina, Maryland, Rhode Island and Illinois, he suggested a 10-year morstorium between the closing of an investigative file and its reopening o fill an FOIA request.

Responding to those requests has been an fighting. overwhelming task for the FBI, Webster claims, The manager of a frozen food factory in The effects on the harvest are yet to be Houston, notes the trend. even though more than 300 bureau employees have been assigned to the job.

Cavanaugh: Three TD Passes In Two Minutes

By United Press International Steve Grogan isn't nervous about losing his job as the New England Patriots' No. 1 quarterback - but a few more performances similar to that of Matt Cavanaugh's on Sunday could cause him a few sleepless nights. Cavanaugh, who joined the

Welcome, Jack Renner!

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) - If you happen to be one of those golf nuts who follow the pros on the tube every week or even jump on a jet to catch a big tournament somewhere else in the country, you've probably been struck by the marked similarity among most of those young lions on the circuit.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, a guy with a sharp eye, has noticed it, too. "They all look the same," he says. By and large, he's absolutely

"Except for Jack Renner," Rodriguez goes on. "He's the only young guy out there with an identity. What gives him that identity with me is that he wears one of those white Ben Hogan caps. He's the only young guy who does that. I'm always pulling for him, God bless him. Why? Because he's skinny like me."

Today, Jack Renner has something more than merely a Ben Hogan-type cap to give him identity. The clean cut, boyish-looking 23-year-old from San Diego broke through for his first tour victory Sunday with a final round 69 that earned him $72,000 for winning the Westchester Classic with an artfully fashioned seven-under

Chi Chi Rodriguez, who finished with a 284 worth $5,413, made the remarks he did about Renner before the slender Californian pulled out of a fourway tie with PGA champ Dave Graham, Howard Twitty and an already-in-the-clubhouse Peter Oosterhuis to win, so he can't be accused of jumping on any bandwagon. To be sure, there are some characteristics about Renner which sort of remind you of Hogan. There's that white cap of his, for example, his almost complete dedication to golf since he was six and his continued efforts not to display any outward emotion. But there are many differences, also. To begin with, Renner, at six feet, is much taller than Hogan, he doesn't resemble "The Hawk" at all facially - looking far more like Ray Volpe, who heads the LPGA - and for all his devotion to purpose, he doesn't regard golf as the be all and end all the way Hogan did when he ruled the fairways. Jack Renner is purely and simply one of the better young golfers obviously ready to emerge from his developing cocoon and the kind of individual who will put other more important aspects of his life ahead of golf. You could tell that from some of the things he had to say after he birdied the 16th hole to take the lead by himself for the first time and then knocked in a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th to shake off the persistent Twitty, who had moved himself back into a tie with a birdie on the 16th also. The first thing Renner did when he came into the press tent was place his white cap under his right elbow where it wouldn't be so conspicuous.

He spoke about how excited he was winning his first tournament and answered a question about his sister, Jane, who plays on the LPGA tour.

"She's a lady, she's an awfully good sister and I don't care if she goes out there and shoots a hundred on the golf course," he said, solemnly

"I talked to my sister and Dad today over the telephone before I started and told them if I could hold on for one more day and not shoot a hundred, it would be a great tournament," he continued. "My Mom and Dad have sacrificed so my sister and I could play golf," Renner said, speaking much slower now. "I know they were much more nervous than I was on that last putt but they must be celebrating now." For just a split second, Jack Renner's voice broke there.

But he regained his composure quickly.

"I went to college two years, the College of the Desert (in Palm Springs, Calif.) and made good grades," he said, offering something of his background. "Golf has been almost my whole life since I was six. I decided to find out if I had what it took to make it on the tour. I've made $150,000 and I'm just turning 23 so I can't understand why everybody thought there was something wrong with me that I hadn't won before this.

"To me, winning isn't everything. You can play extraordinarily and still finish fifth. I've had a lotta good things happen to me but I still have a long way to go in my golf game."
