

GREATER PROSPERITY TO ATTEND THIS SECTION IF GROWERS WILL ACT TOGETHER, SAYS MR. BROOKS

MUST BE ORGANIZED TO GET BEST RESULTS

SHOULD ADVERTISE

And Let the United States Know More About Sanford and Seminole County Products

More than one hundred and twenty-five growers and shippers heard Mr. Brooks, of the State Department of Agriculture, when he spoke here Thursday night. Mr. Brooks declared that greater prosperity will follow consistent co-operation among the growers of this section.

"The principles of co-operative marketing have been tested and found correct," he said. "It is desirable, practical and must come."

The speaker declared that the local association must be willing to meet the requirements that comply with the conditions and carry out the principle.

Mr. Brooks' address was as follows: "As I understand it, the principle of co-operative marketing has been tested and found correct; found efficient and found to be practical, and that it is growing rapidly. If that is true, it means this old method of doing things is inadequate to new conditions and these must be changed or suffer loss.

"If the principle of co-operative marketing is correct, and desirable, and practical, and must come, then as to whether or not you, who are here in this association tonight, will make a failure or a success depends not upon the methods, but upon you; as to whether or not you are willing to meet the requirements that comply with the conditions and carry out the principle, that is where the problem lies.

"Now, if you will pardon, I would like to draw a line of distinction on the ordinary independent corporate methods of doing things. If you go out to organize an ordinary old-time corporation, your purpose is to make profits for the stockholders and promoters of that corporation, who may not have any personal interest in the production of the thing, but the prime object of the ordinary corporation is to make profits for the stockholder as an investor.

"Now, the prime object of a Co-operative Association, whether it is capitalized or not, is not to make money for the stockholders, but to furnish a business machine that can do a certain class of business for its members better than the individual member can do it himself.

"You take an ordinary shoe cobbler; he makes the shoe; he has a little shop; he makes the shoe from first to last; he has his own purchasing agent; he bought the leather, tacks, machinery and tools, and was his own salesman, and did the whole thing and whatever there was to it was his, but he did not reach out far in the world to find a customer. He waited for the customer to come to him.

"Since industrialism has come into vogue, the factory produces the shoes. The stockholders in that concern neither buy material or sell the output, but the corporation, as a legal individual that can sue and be sued in the courts, employs the shrewdest brains that money can buy to sell that output to the world.

"There is no reason why the farmer cannot take that simple lesson home and do it likewise. It is possible in this age of the world for him to market his products advantageously. He must group his entire output and put someone in charge to be the salesman and find the market.

"Eleven years ago, the first time a man went before a Committee of Congress, and asked that marketing news be distributed by a Federal Bureau, it was done by 'your humble servant.' I went before the Committee of Interstate Commerce and advocated a Bureau of Markets to furnish market information free to the farmers. That is in operation now. The marketing quotations may not be of so much use to you here because you have your own wires, but the information you have been listening to here tonight, is gathered by a Federal Bureau and wired out to you to keep this information at your service for your advantage.

"You have got to regulate; in order to affect the price you have got to know where the demand is, and no individual can pay the expense of having a private wire in his kitchen

LETTUCE GRADING IS EXPLAINED BY THE DEPARTMENT

Various Grades of Lettuce and Popular Terms Defined by Department of Agriculture

Frank W. Talbot, business manager of the Florida Vegetable Corporation, received a letter this morning from the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., outlining in detail the various standards of grades as applied to lettuce.

Mr. Talbot stated that the organization which he represents, has decided to use Government inspection on all shipments going forward from this district; and that Government inspectors were now on the ground and have handled with a great deal of satisfaction to the growers of his organization, the several cars that have already gone forward.

Mr. P. D. Rupert is in charge of the local inspection service and now has with him two assistants. Mr. Rupert states that just as soon as the tonnage increases, additional men will be added to his force and that he will be in a position to give quick and efficient inspecting service at each loading track in the Sanford district.

The plan of inspection is to take samples from each load as delivered to cars. The packages are opened and careful inspection of each head of lettuce is made and the question of whether the carload of lettuce meets the grade is figured in a percentage basis. A tolerance of 10 per cent is allowed for irregularities such as soft heads, tip burn, black heart, etc., therefore crates containing 32 heads could contain 3 heads of any of aforementioned irregularities and yet pass the United States Number 1 Grade.

The following is a complete text of the grades of lettuce as outlined by the United States Department of Agriculture.

U. S. No 1 shall consist of heads of lettuce of similar varietal characteristics which are fresh, well trimmed and fairly firm; which are not wilted, decayed or burst, and which

Three Greatest Needs of Sanford

BY SUSAN B. WIGHT

1. A thoroughly equipped playground with trained supervision all year round, under a Playground Commission to be created by the City Commission.
2. The beginning of an art gallery in connection with our beautiful new library.
3. The creation of a strong civic consciousness of the importance of law enforcement; and a realization that no act of wickedness is quite so demoralizing to the youth of our city, as the knowledge of evasion of law, on the part of those who should stand for everything that is good and right.

MUCH PHOSPHATE MINED THIS YEAR

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Nov. 24.—Phosphate to the value of $175,097,242 has been mined in Florida since the beginning of the business in 1888 to the close of 1922, according to statistics compiled by Herman Gunter, state geologist. The total tonnage for that period was 44,078,519 long tons.

Phosphate easily assumes first place in the mineral resources of the state, says Mr. Gunter in regard to the 35-year record. In 1922 there were sold in Florida 2,058,593 long tons of phosphate rock which amounted to 85 per cent of the total sold in the United States.

In recent years three types of phosphate have been produced in the state, known commercially as the hard-rock, the land pebble and the soft rock. Of these the land pebble variety commands first place, since it constituted 91 per cent of the total production last year.

The hard rock deposits lie along the western side of the peninsula, extending in a north-south direction for a distance of about 100 miles. The land pebble deposits occur further south, principally in Polk and Hillsborough counties, says M. Gunter, while the soft rock is found in association with the two varieties mentioned, being mined mainly in the hard-rock region.

The banner year in the state's phosphate industry was 1920, the period following the world war, when there was such a pronounced worldwide scarcity of the product. In that twelve-month period 3,369,384 tons were mined and sold for $19,494,362. The following year, 1921, the tonnage dropped to 1,780,028, the income from which amounted to $10,131,642. Last year's production 2,058,593, brought 8,347,52.

PRESIDENT WILL AID GOOD ROADS

Tenders His Heart Support and Cooperation in All Road Building Movements

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—In an address today to delegates attending the convention of the National Motorists Association, President Coolidge made it clear that he is in complete sympathy with efforts of American automobilists to secure better roads throughout the country and an equitable method of taxation.

"I doubt if the people in general realize the great importance of the motor industry, or the great contribution that it is making to human welfare," the president said. "It has raised the people up and given them an entire new outlook on life. It is very difficult to conceive, any longer, of a shut-in population. The motor car takes people abroad, so that they may see not only those things with which they are ordinary engaged, but they came into contact with all new and novel scenes. It is a great method of education, but in order that it may reach its best fulfillment, it is necessary that it be served by good roads. It is necessary, also, that reasonable rules and regulations be made and care taken so that safety to the greatest possible extent may be preserved.

"It is desirable moreover, to see that the great enterprise and this great activity have an equitable method of taxation, and in all of these activities and desires on your part, I want to tender you my most hearty cooperation and support."

U. S. Population to Double. Our nation has just passed its three-hundredth birthday, an infant compared with other nations of the earth. In 1790, when our first census was taken, we boasted less than 3,000,000 people; in 1820, at the close of our second century, we had less than 10,000,000 population. In the century just passed we have increased almost 100,000,000 as against the 10,000,000 for the entire two centuries before. Statisticians have estimated that our population at the close of the present century should be more than 220,000,000.—McClure's Magazine for October.

MEANS DEEP AND LASTING EFFECT ON EUROPE

CABINET FORMED

By Von Kardoff of the People Party if He Accepts Request of Elbert Report Says

(By The Associated Press) LONDON, Nov. 24.—President Ebert has invited Herr Von Kardoff, member of German People's party in Reichstag to form a new German cabinet, says a News Agency dispatch from Berlin this afternoon. It is anticipated that he will accept, the message states.

The downfall of the Stresemann government is viewed here as an event of utmost significance, possibly involving departments destined to have a deep and lasting effect on all Europe. The Times calling attention to loss of the Rhur which is, says, "was torn from Reich and will remain separated for a generation or more," and asserted that a new Europe is being shaped at our doors. "France has had her way," the paper declares. "Her curiously systematic and coldly logical effort is nearing its goal. A new political and economic entity is making its appearance in Europe molded and dominated by France.

Stresemann Resigns.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—Dr. Gustave Stresemann last night resigned as chancellor when the reichstag by a vote of 230 to 165 denied his rump cabinet a vote of confidence. Seven deputies abstained from casting their ballots. After the ballot was taken Dr. Stresemann tendered the resignation of himself and the members of his cabinet, which President Ebert accepted. The president immediately sent for Paul Luebe, president of the Reichstag, with whom he held a conference. Who will head the new government remained a mystery last night. Herr Ebert has requested Stresemann to carry on current business until his successor is appointed.

Debt Status Outlined.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Germany today before the allied reparations commission was permitted through Dr. Fischer, under-secretary of the treasury for the Reichstag, to outline her present situation with regard to the fulfillment of her reparations obligations.

Germany Warned.

Citizenship Membership in F. E. A. to Provide Survey School System

Funds derived from citizenship memberships in the Florida Educational Association will be used in making a thorough survey of the public school system, according to T. W. Lawton, secretary and superintendent of the Department of Public Instruction of Seminole County.

A campaign is being made by the teachers of the city schools. Membership costs but a dollar and every loyal citizen is ordered to do his part in helping along this great work.

Mr. Lawton issued the following appeal this morning:

"If you are interested in our schools, take advantage of the opportunity offered you this week to become members, at a cost of one dollar, of the Florida Education Association, the greatest organization in the state for the promotion of the cause of education, for the advancement of our public schools, for the success and happiness of your boys and girls. Let us give these boys and girls an opportunity that is equal to, or better than, that offered the boys and girls of any state in the Union. Are you not impressed with the necessity of more concerted action when you ponder on the following facts:

"Ninety-nine per cent of the Florida teachers have not had normal school training.
 "Fifty-two per cent of our rural school teachers have had less than two years training beyond the elementary school.

"Florida ranks 47th down the list of states, in teacher-training facilities.

"Florida ranks 44th down the list of states, in length of school year.

"Florida ranks 41st down the list of states, in teachers' salaries.

"Florida ranks 11th down the list of states, in illiteracy—one out of ten adults in our state can neither read nor write.

"These deplorable conditions can and must be eliminated, and the hearty co-operation and sympathetic interest of the citizens will help more than any other factor in overcoming our handicap and placing education in Florida where it belongs,—at the head of the list.

"Every member of the Florida Education Association will receive monthly the F. E. A. Journal, bringing news of progress throughout not only Florida, but the whole country.

"The funds derived from citizenship memberships will be used in making a thorough survey of our school system, and thereby ascertaining some of the causes of our condition and finding remedies for its improvement."

If you would be sure you are beginning right, begin to save at the Seminole County Bank.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN'S WEEKLY BIBLE TALK

ARE REVIVALS NECESSARY? Test of Today's Bible Talk by My (Acts 1:4, 5, 6, 7, 8)

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

Luke tells us in the Acts of the Apostles that on the first day of Pentecost following the crucifixion of Christ, the disciples were all together in one place and that suddenly "there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting."

Now in Jerusalem at that time were "devout men out of every nation under heaven." When they heard the simple Galileans who had followed Jesus speaking the languages of the earth, they were amazed, and as they listened to Peter tell of Christ risen, they asked, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

His reply has been repeated countless times in the ensuing 1900 years: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

So forceful and convincing was Peter's exhortation that about three thousand souls were added to the followers of Christ.

Making the World Christian There were about one hundred and twenty outspoken believers there at the beginning of the day of Pentecost; the addition of three thousand multiplied their number by twenty-five. Today the number of Christians would have to be multiplied only three times to bring all the population of the world to the foot of the cross.

Many Pentecostals periods have occurred since then, and as the very phrase "day of Pentecost" has come to be used as a synonym for a period of revival, the revival and the revivalist would seem to furnish the most appropriate theme for today. What lessons can we draw from our text, setting forth, as it does, the first great revival effort of the Christian church?

There is a wide difference of opinion among Christians—even among preachers—as to the value of revivals. Some express doubts as to the permanence of the work of revivals. Some look with disfavor upon all seasons of revival, calling them "religious spasms."

Fear of Back Sliding The objections may be divided into three general kinds: first, some fear that converts professing religion under the influences that attend a religious awakening may grow lukewarm and be harder to reach than they were before.

It must be admitted that one who "backslides," so to speak, may be more difficult to reclaim, if he loses his faith, than he was to gain before he made a profession of religion. But this is a risk that must be taken no matter under what circumstances one is converted.

It may likewise be said that one who deliberately rejects the gospel after hearing it is likely to be hardened by the mere fact of rejection, but shall believers refrain from presenting Christ's message for fear some may sin more grievously in spite of the light than they would have sinned without light.

The second objection is that a change of heart is a serious matter and ought to take place under quiet and sobering influences.

It is true that some may be hastened into the acceptance of Christ without fully realizing the far-reaching consequences of the decision, but it is impossible to divert life of its emotional side or to eliminate the experiences that force rapid thinking and sudden conclusions. The emotion is as much a part of man as the reason—"out of the heart are the issues of life."

Turning Points in Life Many of the turning points in life are reached amid excitement or result from abnormal experiences; this may be true of any decision and is often true of the most important resolves that man makes. It only requires a moment for the making of a decision, whether it be to steal, to kill, to ruin a life, or to say, "I will arise and go to my father."

It would be an unkind God who would make sin easy and repentance difficult. Sincere conversion and a permanent change in life often come as the result of some tragic experience, like the death of a parent or child or life companion—sometimes as the result of experiences like that through which the prodigal son passed.

A systematic search for souls by joint effort, such as is put forth in revivals, is not at all consistent with the extending of a continuing invitation as a part of the regular work of the church. When the results of indifference to religion are so disastrous here and hereafter we are justified in utilizing the quickening atmosphere which a revival stimulates, as well as calm and continuous persuasion.

Change of Heart It is hardly necessary to answer the third objection, based upon doubt as to the possibility of a change of heart.

If there are any who, like Nicodemus, do not understand how one can be born again, they will not be changed by argument; only experience in their own hearts or actual knowledge of this miraculous change in the hearts of others will persuade them. But there are enough of these changes to convince the open minded. There are many conversions which are as sudden, if not as dramatic, as the conversion of Paul, and remained permanent.

Religion is not unreasonable; on the contrary, while the reason does not lead in religious matters—"Canst thou by searching find out God?"—still the reason verifies and vindicates the action of the heart when the heart discovers God.

No just objection can be made to any method that results in bringing one into communion with the Almighty, but for every person led into the church by purely intellectual process many are won by the appeals to the heart which are more earnest and sustaining during the ordinary exercises of the church.

Evangelists Liable to Error In like manner, the objections may be classified. Some are made to all evangelists—these are answered in the answer to objection to revivals; some are made to the methods employed by revivalists. When sincere, these should be definitely stated and considered on their merits.

Those who believe in revivals ought to be the first to purge the revival of anything objectionable. Evangelists are human beings and are liable to err, and allowance must be made for honest differences of opinion.

But all other objections are more easily dealt with than objections to particular evangelists. Judgments differ so widely in regard to persons that discussion of such differences is usually fruitless. Three rules may be suggested for harmonizing differences of opinion among those who are anxious for the extension of Christ's kingdom on earth and for the elimination of those who cloak a general hostility to revivals under criticism of particular men and their methods.

History's Answer First, is the revival a legitimate part of the church's work? History gives an affirmative answer; revivals have added tremendously to the number of members and to the effectiveness of church work from the day of Pentecost down to the present day.

Second, is a revival needed now? Yes, there is scarcely a community that is not in need of active, earnest, co-operative evangelistic effort. Special meetings bring within the gospel those who do not attend regular service. Men who devote their entire time to evangelistic work acquire an effectiveness which is scarcely possible among those who are occupied in preparing a multitude of sermons on a multitude of subjects. The evangelist can concentrate his energies upon large themes—the channel is deep because narrow—and, besides, he gathers illustrations from one revival that can be used in other revivals. The specialist has his place in religion as well as in business.

Selecting an Evangelist How should an evangelist for a particular community be selected? By agreement among those who are responsible for the selection, each recognizing the right of the majority to decide where unanimity is not possible. There is no more cause for obstinacy and self-will among church members than among the members of business corporations. Spirituality is not always measured by positiveness of opinion; it may be

GREATER PROSPERITY TO ATTEND THIS OBJECTION IF GROWERS WILL ACT TOGETHER SAYS MR. BROOKS

Continued from page 1. They are incorporated like other corporations and have absolute control of its officers and they ship their stuff through it and get whatever the markets will pay and all the profits are theirs. If there is no profit, no one suffers but them, and if there are any benefits, the man who produces it gets it. No one can say, "I was broken by trying to serve the public."

"Co-operative marketing is not very old. It is comparatively new, but today we have approximately twenty thousand (20,000) Co-operative Associations in the United States, with a volume of business of two billions annually, which is not so bad for a start. Some people say, "Oh, well, that sounds all right but it is not suited for a big business," but I want to tell you that big business is done that way.

"There is one concern in Europe that does an annual turnover of a billion dollars, co-operatively. Most of the money handled by farmers in Europe before the war broke out, was through co-operative banks. I had the pleasure of going through Europe with the American Commission in 1913, and I know that these things were being done and that they can be done here.

"Last March a law was passed in the United States providing for intermediate banking, intermediate credit and short term rural credit. Of course, as yet, it has not gotten very far, but I drop this suggestion that you write to your congressman and ask for a copy of that law and that you read it over. You are paying him to wait on you and that is what he is there for.

"Get a copy and study it so that you can put it into effect in your marketing system. Have your financing separate from that of your selling. Your association now has to do some financing for itself and for the members, but if it is possible to arrange it, it is better for the financing to be done by independent methods, so that if anything goes wrong with one it doesn't wreck the other. While I am mentioning that, I wish to drop this suggestion also.

"If farmers want to function in a public way in law-making, they have to be organized. The law which I mentioned was brought about by organized farmers pressing the thing day by day, week by week, month by month and year by year on Congress until they passed it. The long term way. The law that permits you to organize co-operatively, lawfully is a very recent law and was put through Congress by organized farmers. Before this was passed it was actually a violation to do exactly what you are doing; you became a law-breaker until that law was provided, because as a class, you would be breaking the Sherman anti-trust law.

"The matter of co-operative business is a democratization of business and it takes authority away from many and puts it in the hands of the individual. Now, does democracy control the un-co-operative business machine. The ordinary corporation is a rather autocratic concern; very often it is strictly autocratic.

The people of the United States are demanding more and more of the things that Florida can make. It would not have been possible fifty years ago for Florida to have the citrus and trucking industry it has measured by willingness to make concessions in the interest of harmony and the public weal. How shall relative superiority among evangelists be determined? How better than by the number bought to repentance and conversion? If God gives an evangelist "souls for his hire," on what ground can his power be questioned?

Each minister has his own way of presenting the message that God gives through him—no one can successfully imitate another, and it takes all kinds of preaching to reach all kinds of people. Let each one speak as God gives him speech and employ the methods which are suggested to him in answer to prayer.

A Large Vineyard But one should be modest about the condemnation of the methods of another unless his own methods have proved more effective in the bringing of sinners to Christ. Even the most successful evangelist should not be boastful for minor evangelists may reach some hearts that are closed to more successful preachers.

God's vineyard is large and there is work enough for pastor and evangelist, preacher and layman, men, women, and children. All should unite for the advancement of the kingdom of God and for the hastening of the reign of Christ, putting to the largest possible use both seasons of revival and the times intervening between the days of Pentecost.

today. You have cultivated the taste of the people for the things you produce and you did it by advertising, and the individual cannot do that. You must do this collectively. Why, as things are now, we only produce two oranges per month for every citizen in the United States, both in California and Florida together, and yet that is a great deal more than used to be eaten because the people were not trained to it.

"How few people, comparatively speaking, eat celery today; yet the physicians tell us that it is a great nerve tonic. It is good food and good for the health.

"Advertising in the Press of the day plays a good part in the game. How often do you read signs in grocery stores and shop windows, "Have You Had Your Iron Today." That means, have you had your package of raisins from California, and today they are selling at ten cents per pound—just five times the amount at which they used to sell before raisins were advertised so extensively. I remember the time when they sold for 2 cents per pound. Teach the people to want what you have and you can only teach them by advertising and you cannot advertise individually; you must advertise the products of your association by pooling your interests.

"Another thing, you know insurance is rather popular,—that is judging by results; it is simply a question of equalization. The pooling feature of your shipping is a big feature to cooperative marketing. You equalize your risk by that method with the other fellow, though he may happen to hit a high mark today and law tomorrow. You give every fellow a square deal on a quality basis. It encourages better classification and grading, in fact, it demands it. People buy on character; people borrow money on character as well as on their assets, and they buy material and hardware on character and when you have a brand with a character behind it they don't mind buying it. We all do it. When classification and grading are demanded, forced and stood behind by your association, your productions create a better market.

"What is the biggest draw back to successful cooperation? It used to be the inability to hold the membership to an agreement; to an understanding. You know when you join an association you sign a contract, but how long does that contract last. Do you know how many years a contract lasts in European countries—Denmark for instance—I'll tell you, it is for life and that is no joke either. Is there a man here from Denmark who can verify that statement, one who knows?

"Most of the states of this Union did not have a law of that character, under which you could make a contract that would hold, until Co-operative marketing came into vogue. In most of the states of the Union there is a law no wof that character, that is forcing people to make good their contracts.

"In Kentucky, for instance, they organized a tobacco association whose members signed up for seven years. The people used to say "How can we deliver something that is not in existence?" So a law was passed to force the people to make good their contract. We now have twenty-six states that have passed a cooperative law, especially for the benefit of this character of business.

"I had some experience in trying to organize farmers in the cotton region I was raised there and we organized a cotton concern, and we were going to turn it over without any contract ever being thought of. We thought folks would do what they said they would, and some of them did. We were doing business in Jackson, Miss. Mr. Hightower was president of the association. I visited him one day and said: "I am certainly glad to see things going along, but you had better make a change here or when the season is over close it. He answered by saying, "What do you mean." I said, "Some day as you are a nervous temperament, you are going to commit suicide; some day you are going to sell cotton and you'll not be able to deliver it, and then you'll go up in the air because folks will not let you have it.

"Make them sign a contract that when the goods are in your warehouse they have absolutely no control of them. The man who raises it has no right whatever to sell it,—that is your business." Well, shortly after that he resigned and the man who took his place failed in four months. He didn't have any contract with the grower and when he would go to deliver goods sold the man who owned it would say "I don't think I will sell," and so he couldn't deliver.

"Now, don't start anyone here at the head of this organization and have him shoot himself. Start him out to sell what is in his possession and let him have full control of it and don't imagine you are signing away your individual rights as an American citizen. You are just pooling your rights to make them more powerful; you are not eliminating your prestige; you are strengthening them. You are not doing the thing more than the business world has been doing all the while. By doing that you are putting yourself in a position to have the same power over distribution that the people have whom you patronize.

"One trouble in the world today, and especially in it true of the United States is that organized labor says Living is high, we must have higher wages" and they get them. That puts up the cost of production of anything they are producing and it goes out to consumers at higher prices and everything gets higher. Then labor again comes back and says they must have more wages, and so it becomes an endless chain, but the farmer is not in that "chain". He gets the bad end of the deal in both ways. He buys at that high price and he sells raw material at the lowest price it has ever sold for. If he cannot get into the game and match conditions in order to meet the requirements, he simply must pay the penalty.

Farmers have got to do it or admit that they are incapable of keeping up with the progress of the day, and that will mean there will be more mortgages, fewer homes, and a drifting toward peasantry. The president of the department of agriculture says that the American farmer has got to decide whether he is going to be the Independent American Farmer he has been in the past, or whether he is to be a peasant. You have to organize to prevent the latter condition. There are more debts today, in larger amounts, hanging over the farmer than there has ever been in the history of the country. The business requirements are increasing as the years go by, and unless agriculture keeps up with those requirements they will go down, and if the farmer goes down this Republic is doomed.

"You are not only functioning as individuals, you have the preservation of civilization in your hands. What are you going to do with it. If you were to refuse the burden that is handed to you, you would become a peasant. I feel this way about it and believe it. I was born on a farm and held a plow handle for twenty years and have worked with and for farmers all my life, excepting ten years when I taught school, and even then I taught farmer boys the same stuff I am telling you here tonight. For six years I occupied the chair of markets in the agricultural college of Mississippi; that being the first institution in the world to establish a chair by that name.

"To be successful you must meet certain requirements. You know life as a whole is a question of meeting requirements. When you go to school you can never learn the lesson unless you meet requirements of study. We, as citizens, must meet the requirements of the day unless we want to go back to the days of the Indian in the Wigwam. Why, you cannot even get into the penitentiary unless you meet the requirements. They wouldn't let you stay there if you go there, unless you meet the requirements of the institution; and so it is with the celery growers, the lettuce growers, and other truck growers in this community—they cannot get what is coming to them unless they meet the requirements and these requirements are "Cooperation" and the following of "Specific Methods."

"You have every possible condition necessary for success. You have the community to raise the output; a railroad to take it to market—also boats—and you have a market for it. The only question is handling it with the least possible expense. You know the more people handle it the less you get out of it, and that doesn't mean anybody wants to take revenge on speculators. When Edison invented the electric light, when the steam engine was invented, also when the Linotype machine came out, people were kicking for fear somebody's job was going to be taken away from them. They didn't seem to realize that when they took one job away they made a dozen jobs of another kind. Somebody thought McCormick was a curse to the world when he invented the binder, but it was a wonderful thing for the good of the world when it was invented. Now it is the same with this business machine—the method of cooperation,—it may change a few people's methods of livelihood, but it adjusts the machinery of today to the demands of the hour, and it cannot be done otherwise.

"With efficient management you can get good results just as economically as anybody and you can hire just as good brains as the country affords—money is no respecter of persons. People will work for you as quickly as they will for anybody else. It is merely a question of judicious selection and if this selection doesn't carry, don't hesitate to say so; don't allow your personal regards for that fellow to get the better of you. Be a man. Change when a change is needed. Go to that fellow and say, "John I love you, but this is not your job." You must have the right man in the right place, or your whole scheme will fall to pieces. The best business in the world can be wrecked by wrong management.

"Now, friends, if it is worth while to have your meetings, and worth while organizing this association, carry the plan out. Support it. Don't be too easy and get frightened about something. That is the easiest thing in the world to do and you will then become dissatisfied. Of course, I know it is human nature to become dissatisfied—I've been dissatisfied all my life. The human mind is a peculiar thing,—never being content with any condition. It wants something different—that is the main-spring of progress. I have heard of a lot of folks in associations "flying the traces" and saying that it was no good because the management couldn't artificially create a market, because he was not selling for as high a price as they thought the association should.—They blamed it all on the management, not conditions.

If the management will keep on doing what was done here tonight; put down before you the facts of the condition of the markets throughout the country where it is available, then you will have a better way of knowing whether or not he has done the best he could. No man can artificially force condition; he has to abide by them. Of course, there are times when a supply is on hand, that if he forced it on the market anyhow, it would lower the price, when he could judiciously feed that market gradually he could get a better price.

"You have one advantage here in Sanford over other places. For instance, the wheat belt, in the great north west has got to compete with the entire world and not merely the United States. What you produce here in this community is consumed in the United States and the people who produce it are very few. And if you do some advertising and get more folks to wanting that particular kind of product, the market will take care of your production. That is the way they increased the market for those things raised in California, we hear so much about.

It would be very difficult to advertise to make the world use more cotton goods or things of that character, but you can do great things by advertising potatoes, celery, lettuce and beans, and any other product raised here. It is one of the functions of your association to be able to adjust its supply to the demand, but you do have a good advantage where there is a possibility of increasing the demand with the population, and that is impossible with wheat, cotton and other things.

I would like to have you take the time to study these things and investigate them a little and find out the relative prosperity in the different sections of the United States where they have permanently established co-operative marketing. You will find more money in the banks, more prosperity and less time credit going on in all communities that have co-operative marketing, than in those that haven't. That tells the story. If they didn't get any results at all they would not live as long as they have already lived.

The President of the United States has endorsed and sanctioned Co-operative Marketing, and Congress as well. Ten years from now if this association holds good, you will all thank your stars for having started it as soon as you did, but don't imagine that everything is going to be smooth sailing for it isn't. We hear so much about Co-operative Marketing in California that we imagine everything runs along smoothly, but we are wrong, they have their struggles. It was hard for them to get started. There is an inscription on the tomb-stone of a man out in California today, which reads "He died of a broken heart because of the ingratitude of the people for whom he worked." He was a man of wealth who devoted years of his life trying to organize the raisin growers of that state; he was unsuccessful and died disheartened and disgusted.

"Since his death they have organized and today that association is a tremendous success; so don't give up. The California Fruit Growers Exchange organized and went to pieces a half dozen times before it got on the right track to success, but it is now thirty years old and handles more business than any one Farmer's Organization in the country. They have had their struggles in every line and they gradually met them and built firmly on their present foundation.

"It was once the case that if oranges went up, railroads popped up their freight rates and absorbed all the profits, so the association went before the Interstate Commerce Commission and plead their case and they never failed to get a favorable ruling.

"You men should try to be present at sessions when laws are made; you don't have to be corrupt to do that, in fact, it is sometimes good business to be there and advise with them. You know most bills are made in committee rooms, and sometimes are passed on when the men passing them don't know a thing about them, and they are glad to get advice and will give you a hearing and they ought to and if you are not there you can take the consequences and that is what the farmer has been doing right along.

You have no right to complain—the farmer has no right to complain when he has the power in his hands to succeed, if he has not a mind to look after his own business, he just has to take the consequences. I have no crow to pick with anyone of a law-making body, for if I don't pay attention to what they are doing it is my lookout.

"The history of mankind is a struggle for freedom from pre-historic days up to now. We all love freedom and all crave to know things and to be able to do things and these things make for the progress of mankind. The conditions here are demanding a certain thing—these conditions make it possible for success to exist, and the only thing left to work on is the mind of the individual, and that mind has to do the work. All the human problems of whatever nature are simply problems of human thought, problems of psychology. Man has only his own mind to work on. Man is not as strong as a lion—he cannot jump as far as a greyhound—what is it he can do that cannot be done by some other animal—Nothing, except think—there he is king—you must think the way to success. The human mind is the one power that does not stop at physical forces—it looks upon the mountains filled with beauty; and, lo, iron monsters leap forth on tracks of steel, carrying the burden of the Commercial World.

Ram Laden Ships Off Coast of N. J.

(By The Associated Press) NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Coast guard officials reported to customs authorities today that eleven ram-carrying ships were anchored in various spots off the Highlands of New Jersey and the Long Island coast. They estimated that combined cargoes of the vessels to be 30,000 cases with a retail bottle value of about $1,500,000. Several of the vessels including two steamers and five schooners were said to have arrived from foreign shores within the last three days, most of them carrying small cargoes of about 2,500 cases, the ram skippers being loath to carry more because of early winter storms. A large steamer, said to be of British registry, was reported en route to the row with a cargo of 10,000 cases. The names and registry of the ships now lying outside of the harbor, were included in the report.

INADEQUACIES OF ARMY AIR SERVICE MADE PLAIN IN REPORT OF OFFICER

Critical Condition Exists as Regards to Major Items of Equipment, Says Major General Patrick

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—A frank statement of the "inadequacies" of the Army Air Service from a standpoint of personnel, finance, equipment and other essential factors was made today by Major General, Mason M. Patrick, chief of the Army's aviation forces, in his annual report to Secretary Weeks. "The peace organization of the Air Service," General Patrick said, "now bears no relation to the war requirements and affords little or no foundation upon which war requirements in either personnel or material can be built."

Big Crop Season

FORT DAUDERDALE—The big season yet enjoyed by Everglades vegetable farmers is predicted by Captain William Wellon, who operates the boat Edith L. between here and Glades point. He has just returned to this city with the season's first shipment of Everglades vegetables, consisting of beans and peppers. Captain Wellon said he did not feel that it was an exaggeration to say that there will be ten times as many vegetables brought out of the 'Glades this year as last. There is more dry land now than in January last, he stated.

"In this connection," the report continued, "attention must be again invited to the deplorable conditions which prevail at all air service stations. With the exception of a very few isolated permanent buildings the entire air service outlay was initiated during the war, pushed to hasty conclusion and designed to last from two to four years. These accommodations have now been in continual use since 1917 and while the maintenance costs mount higher and higher with each succeeding year, the living conditions become more and more unsatisfactory. Langley Field (Va.) is the only air service station with an appreciable amount of permanent construction and even Langley has no barracks for enlisted men except the one building which Congress recently authorized. A complete reconstruction program is imperative and nothing short of immediate and general relief can be relied upon to meet the situation."

One conclusion emphasized by General Patrick is that a program be adopted for the proper equipment of the air service.

"It is considered that the annual appropriations for the support of the air service since the world war have been inadequate," the report said. "In view of the rapid development of aviation the requirements of continued engineering and research work constitute an imperative need while the shortage of aircraft occasioned by the lack of funds for replacement will shortly present an extremely critical situation. It is therefore urgently recommended that a program be adopted and adhered to until this service is properly equipped and on an efficient operating basis."

"Emphasis must be placed on the critical condition which exists with regard to major items of equipment, viz: airplanes, airships and balloons."

"The great majority of the aircraft now on hand were produced during the war, are rapidly deteriorating and even when completely reconditioned, have but a very short life. Furthermore, 80 percent of the airplanes are of an obsolescent training type, unsuitable for combat purposes. It is absolutely essential that the purchase of new aircraft to replace that produced during the war and to offset the constantly increasing shortage, be undertaken immediately, since it requires about 18 months to secure delivery after a contract has been executed, it is apparent that no relief from the present situation can be expected before 1926. Appropriations now being made for the purchase of new aircraft are insufficient to meet the requirements of even the present inadequate peace-time establishment of the air service."

The aeronautical industry of the United States, the report added, is found lacking, and, "unless such an industry can be built up in time of peace, the wartime procurement program must fall far short of its goal. The solution of this problem lies in the development of commercial aviation through the timely enactment of suitable legislation and in the judicious expenditure of such funds as may be appropriated for the support of government aeronautical activities."

Sanford Grows at Her Dreamer's Will

"This I believe: we tend to grow our dreams No matter how remote fulfillment seems. It matters not the drought or storm that yields Small hope of promise for the harvest fields. Have we the faith amid the parching heat To glimpse the small, green blades upstanding sweet, And smile serene, through driving winds and hail, In simple trust, too deep of root to fall? Then I believe that somehow, soon or late, There comes reward to dreamer-souls that wait; To each who dared to hold the vision plain, There comes his golden fields of bending grain."

And beautiful, growing towns are dreams that are coming true.

In its first editorial this week, The Herald alluded to Sanford's dreamers—to Sanford's practical dreamers who are responsible for the many good things the brains and hands of men have created here. We are going to become well acquainted with many of these dreamers as the days go by, and are going to discover a few people nowandthen who are refusing to dream any dreams today.

There are people like that. There are people who never plan to do anything or to go anywhere or to have any possession that they don't expect to come in the natural course of things. The natural course of things to them is the course of least resistance, the deep, smooth rut along which they can slip with little effort and with a full certainty of coming to the perfectly proper burial place at the end.

Such people do not dream. They are not restless. They go through life, taking their blessings for granted, satisfied with moderate comforts, fearful of change or risk that might surround them with untried conditions or confront them with new problems.

The Herald feels that it will certainly make the acquaintance of a few such people in Sanford and Seminole county. They are found in every community. But until the Master of Dreams takes command of their souls, they are going to be merely the plodders or the drags—Sanford will have to go forward carrying their weight while it makes other men's dreams come true.

Sanford is a deep-water city, and yet it has none of the drawbacks of a coast town. It is in the midst of farming territory of unexcelled fertility. It has unsurpassed climatic advantages. It has ideal conditions for home-building. With all that for the frame work, no wonder a dream-maker can build real walls and plant real gardens here!

Already Sanford is being talked of as one of the fast-coming towns of Florida. In other sections of the state the traveler hears men talking of the extensive improvements underway here. They are beginning to say, "You ought to see Sanford," or "You ought to see those wonderful lettuce and celery fields" or "You ought to put a little money into Seminole county lands. They are getting ready to do big things over there."

And Seminole county and Sanford will do just as big things as their dreamers are capable of planning. Strangers, too, will come bringing good dreams and welcome co-operation. It is well to think that nothing is too good for Sanford, nothing beyond her aspirations.

"We tend to grow in our dreams," in other words, we can make our dreams come true by making our visions clear-cut and then working for their fulfillment with courage and energy and unflagging faith.

Every lovely garden in Sanford is somebody's dream come true. Ten years from now when Sanford is one of Florida's five largest cities, a thousand, yes ten thousand dreams will have come to pass that are now in the eager making. It is fine to make a dream and make that dream come true.

Florida and California Taxes

Associated Press Bulletin

Floridians who frequently are reminded of the relative merits of the climate of this state with that of California, and whose attention is directed to other comparisons between these two great commonwealths, probably will be interested in the tax problems of their sister state at the other side of the continent.

Only a few days ago the department of commerce announced that the per capita cost of running the Florida state government in 1922 was $11.18. In comparison with this cost, Californians paid at the rate of $19.02 each last year, at least during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922. The total cost of the state government for the Pacific coast state in that period was $69,297,848. In 1918 the per capita cost was $10.44, and in 1915, it was $11.82 the totals for these years being $33,521,281 and $34,119,473, respectively.

The per capita costs for 1922 consisted of expenses of general departments, $12.23; expenses of public service enterprises, $0.47; payments for interest, $0.56; and for outlays, $5.45, almost 89 per cent of which was for highways.

The total revenue receipts for 1922 were $59,064,414, or $16.36 per capita. For the fiscal year the per capita excess of governmental costs over revenue receipts was, therefore, $2.66. However, says the department of commerce in reporting on California, the revenue receipts exceeded the costs for ordinary operation and maintenance and the payments for interest, excluding outlays, by $2.80 per capita. This excess of per capita payments over revenue receipts is largely on account of permanent improvements, costs of which were met by issuance of debt obligations.

In California property and special taxes represented 23.7 per cent of the total revenue for 1922, 23.7 per cent for 1918, and 21.0 per cent for 1915. The per capita property and special taxes were $3.88 in 1922, $2.20 in 1918 and $2.64 in 1915. Earnings of general departments, or compensation for services rendered by state officials, represented 9.9 per cent of the total revenue for 1922, 10.3 per cent for 1918, and 8 per cent for 1915.

Business and non-business licenses constituted 49.6 per cent of the total revenue for 1922, 49 per cent for 1918 and 41.1 per cent for 1915. Receipts from business licenses consist chiefly of taxes exacted from insurance and other incorporated companies, while those from non-business comprise taxes on motor ve-

TRUST!

God never would send you the darkness
If He felt you could bear the light;
But you would not cling to His guiding hand
If the way were always bright;
And you would not care to walk by faith
Could you always walk by sight.

So He sends you the blinding darkness,
And the furnace of sevenfold heat;
'Tis the only way, believe me,
To keep you close to His feet;
For 'tis always so easy to wander
When our lives are glad and sweet.

Then nestle your hand in your Father's
And sing, if you can, as you go;
Your song may cheer someone behind you
Whose courage is sinking low.

Fay, Jr., and four children, Miss Sue Fay and Donald Fay, the latter being Dr. and Mrs. Fay's children and grandchildren. The occasion was a very happy one.

As D. L. Long was driving his horse and wagon home from town last Saturday evening, a Franklin car, driven by a colored man, came up behind him on Celery avenue, in front of Mr. Bledsoe's residence, and completely wrecked the wagon, throwing Mr. Long against the fence and injuring him badly. He has been confined to his home on Beardall avenue since that time. The horse was uninjured and went home safely. F. F. Dorner took Mr. Long and his load of supplies home.

UPSALA AND GRAPEVILLE

Mrs. Volie Williams and Mrs. Swanson were callers to see Mrs. Borell who has not been so well this week.

Mrs. Nora Swanson and Mrs. Elmer Lundquist spent Thursday of last week with Mr. and Mrs. August Swanson.

Miss Margaret Ericson is boarding in town at present to be near her work at the Western Union Telegraph Co., office.

Miss Francis Pierson is still the head bookkeeper at the Crown Paper Co., we are glad to hear while Miss Malm assists Mr. Tolar in his work, there as the work has increased.

Mr. and Mrs. Cheerzum invited Mr. and Mrs. Bertleson on a trip over to Coronado Beach where they all enjoyed a fish fry on the first Sunday in the month.

Mr. and Mrs. Noah Fry, Mrs. Bengtson and Miss Eunice Tynner were Sunday afternoon visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Tynner, from Windermere.

Mrs. Albert Cruse and their little two weeks old baby, Missouri Isabel who live near the pre-cooling plant on the East side, were callers on Monday to see Mrs. Westerdick.

Mrs. Andrew Bertleson and daughters, Clair and Martha, spent the afternoon Monday at the homes of Mrs. Lundquist and Mrs. Ballinger.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennet of Sanford were callers Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest West.

Mr. and Mrs. Ehrensperger have been going to Sanford to see their new grand children—a little son born to Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hodges and now a little daughter which was born last week at the Fernald-Laughton hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Trumond Bull. Mrs. John Eorell has also been in to see the little ones.

Mr. Hirschi has finished the carpenter work on the Pierson bungalow while Walfred has still some painting and varnishing to do and expects to build cement steps to this neat little cottage. Mr. Tolar's family and a good many others were in to admire it last Sunday.

Rev. O. C. Eckhardt will be here next Sunday at 3:30 and will preach at the Lutheran church in Swedish and in English, expecting then to go on to his home at Pierson for an evening service. We hear friends at the latter place recently treated him to a trip to Indiana where he heard a noted Swedish bishop who is here visiting our country.

Mr. and Mrs. Volie Williams are expecting Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Campbell and children of St. Augustine to be their guests over Thanksgiving. Mrs. Williams has been having a bad time with her teeth this fall, having to spend much time at the dentist to head off pythreah of the gums, and has been about all this week.

We are planning now on having a box supper on Thanksgiving at the church, a short program and a good sing at 5:00 o'clock. We hope to make it a thank-offering for what the church and Sunday school means to each. Rev. Clark and wife will try and be with us.

Miss Bable Saint, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent and friends of Sanford were Sunday callers at the West home.

SANFORD HIGH TO MEET MEMORIAL HIGH TIGERS THIS AFTERNOON IN ORLANDO

Locals Are in First Rate Shape For Fray, Great Battle Expected To Be Staged

Sanford's High's football warriors left the city this afternoon with a full force of rooters tagging along, prepared to literally skin and scalp the Tigers of Memorial High in Orlando. The game will be played on Tinker Field and will start promptly at 3:30. Large crowds of Sanford fans also left this afternoon to witness what is expected to be the greatest football clash that Orlando and Sanford have ever had.

Coach Wilkinson, in a lost minute interview with him by the Herald, stated that his team was in the pink of condition and that they expected to give the Tigers a good trimming. The local boys will probably fight harder this afternoon than they have ever done before as Orlando is an old rival—and to conquer them means much in the lives of the Celery-Feds. Orlando is of about the same opinion as the locals and they will probably put up a great battle. They will not be easy meat for the locals therefore. Though our boys are outweighed a little, they make up for it in speed and will on doubt give their heavier rivals a merry chase when they are in possession of the ole pigskin.

As the Herald stated before, Sanford has had a slightly better season than Orlando and as the game will be played in the Tiger's fair, the odds will be about even.

ORANGE AND BLUE STRUGGLING WITH MAROON TEAM IN JACKSONVILLE TODAY

Huge Crowd Watches 'Gator Team Battle With Foes From Mississippi For Southern Conference Championship

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 24.—Today is far from being an ordinary day. Above the South hangs a big question mark which asks: "Who will be champion?" The South is looking to Jacksonville for a partial answer to this interrogation. The University of Florida and Mississippi A. and M. will provide it.

On Title Threshold. Florida, wonder team of the season, must hurdle two obstacles to reach what never before has been within its grasp—the Southern gridiron crown. Its second barrier will be the University of Alabama on Thanksgiving. The immediate bar is the Mississippi A. and M. and being the first, it assumes the most importance.

Mississippi is here. Florida arrives at noon. Ted Arnold's puff into a whistle will send the two outfits charging at each other in Southside Park at 2:30 p. m. And an hour and one-half or two hours later, the possible answers to the Dixie title puzzle will be reduced in number.

Florida will or won't be a potential champion. Great Welcome Planned. One of the greatest welcomes ever accorded a football team in the South attended the arrival of the University of Florida contingent this morning when the Atlantic Coast Line Special pulled in at the union depot at 10:30 o'clock this morning. The special will carry James L. White, director of athletics at the University of Florida, Head Coach Van Fleet and his corps of assistants, the football squad, the famous university band and practically the entire student body of the state college. The Jacksonville committee of welcome was led by Mayor John Alsop, who had as his able lieutenant Fred Valz, member of the city commission, other city officials and the heads of all civic organizations.

Upon the arrival of the University of Florida football army a big parade was organized, starting at the depot. Local citizens and every dye-in-the-wool grid followers participated in the parade. It is believed that something like 3,500 or 4,000 people took part. The procession went its way through the business section.

Three big bands took part in the parade. Of chief interest to local people was the appearance of the University's famous fifty-two piece band, in their white trousers, orange and blue sweaters and white sailor hats. For two popular local musical organizations, Berry's and Ulsch's bands, have shown their progressive spirit by donating their services for the parade this morning.
