Earthquake rocks California

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A moderate earthquake rocked an enormous area of Northern and Central California Wednesday night, causing minor damage but no injuries.

At the San Francisco Airport, shaken passengers arriving from far-away spots were greeted over the public address system by a booming voice that said: "Welcome to California."

Experts disagreed on the magnitude of the quake.

Fire erupts on oil tanker

LONDON — Rescue ships and aircraft raced toward a British-owned oil tanker today that broke in half and caught fire in heavy seas of the North Atlantic. There was no word on the fate of the vessel's 27 crewmembers.

A distress call from the 65,000-ton Odyssey, which is British-owned but registered in Liberia, was picked up by a Soviet weather ship about 10:45 p.m. EST Wednesday, said Roger Lowes of the Lloyd's shipping intelligence unit in London.

Dead candidate wins election

LOS ANGELES — Mike Davis, who was trounced in the election for a seat in the California Assembly, said a Republican apparently can't win in his predominately black district — even if he is "the only living candidate in the race."

Democrat Curtis Tucker Sr., defeated Davis 71 percent to 28 percent on Tuesday, even though Tucker died last month.

Mack holds slight edge

Senate contest still undecided

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Rep. Connie Mack held a 4,900-vote lead over Rep. Kenneth "Buddy" MacKay in Florida's U.S. Senate race, but it appeared likely the 3.96 million votes cast in the race would have to be recounted.

"I sincerely believe there will be a recount," state Election Secretary Dot Joyce said Wednesday as returns from the final absentee ballots in the hotly contested race trickled in from across the state.

Joyce said she hoped to have all absentee ballots counted Wednesday and then would make a decision about whether to call for a recount.

At 5 p.m. EST Wednesday, the unofficial count showed Mack, the GOP candidate with 1,982,760 votes and Democratic challenger MacKay with 1,977,824.

Mack's lead, should it hold up, would not be enough under Florida law to stop a mandatory statewide recount. The statute requires a recount if the winning margin is less than one-half of 1 percent.

With over 3.96 million votes already cast in the Political roundup on Page 8B

U.S. Senate election and absentee ballots still outstanding in 17 counties — including the Miami area — Joyce said a recount would be required unless the winning margin exceeded about 18,600 votes.

Joyce said even if all outstanding absentee ballots were counted by Thursday, the mandated recount could stretch over the weekend because of the Veterans Day holiday Friday.

She said if the recount was ordered Thursday, local elections boards would have until next Tuesday to tally the ballots again.

105-year-old Edger Smith brought his own fan section to hoop contest.

SANFORD — So, maybe it wasn't the Harlem Globetrotters, but the Golden Age Games basketball event on Wednesday turned out lots of bright stars.

It was the fourth day of competition in the week-long 14th annual games. More than 2,000 people over 55 years of age from Florida and elsewhere have registered to participate.

One of Wednesday's stars was 105-year-old Edger Smith, who dropped balls through the hoop with the best of them. Most of Smith's underhand shots hit the backboard or looped around the rim. But, when two of his 20 shots made it straight through the hoop, a huge smile lit up his face as his personal cheering section from Senior Meadows Retirement Residence in Lakeland encouraged him.

"We came to cheer him on," Alice Timmins, a fellow resident said.

Green, the only person in the 90 and up age category for free-throw basketball, walked off with a gold medal for his efforts.

Green said the game moved too fast and the ball was too heavy.

"It's the first time I ever had a hold of a basketball that heavy," Green said.

Lois Sims, activity director at the retirement residence, said that Green plays ball at the facility, but uses a softer ball which weighs less.

Green described himself as "dazed," said he can't hear and is blind in his left eye. But his

Local offices to close for Veterans Day

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald city editor

SANFORD — America's military veterans will be honored with a parade and memorial services Friday, and federal, state and county offices will be closed. Sanford city offices will remain open.

There will be no mail delivery and all postal facilities will be closed except for the main post office near the International Airport in Orlando. Special delivery and express mail services will be in operation.

The county administration building and all county offices will be closed. All branches of the county library will be closed Friday.

Financial institutions will also be closed but most retail stores will remain open.

The annual Veterans Day parade will begin about 10:30 a.m. at the Sanford Armory and travel down First Street to Park Avenue, and thus to Memorial Park opposite City Hall on Lake Monroe.

John Clark, commander of American Legion Post 53 and chairman of the Sanford Area Veterans Advisory Council, will be grand marshal of the parade. The parade will be made up of 18 units, including local veterans organizations and auxiliaries, and the Seminole High School Band.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. in Memorial Park. Bob Sturm, Seminole County Commissioner, will be master of ceremonies, and Command Master Chief Fred M. Holmes Jr. of the Orlando Naval Training Center, will be featured speaker.

Precinct totals announced

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole County voted overwhelmingly in favor of Vice President George Bush on Tuesday, granting Democrat Gov. Michael Dukakis a majority in only four of the county's 95 precincts.

The four precincts — 3, 21, 29 and 62 — are among the 21 in the county with registered Democrats in the majority. The four also have a majority of black registered voters.

The Seminole County Supervisor of Elections Office released the precinct tallies Wednesday.

Countywide, Bush received 60,328 votes to Dukakis' 22,627. The Bush support appears to include Democratic cross-over votes because there are only 59,926 registered Republicans in the county.

The total county voter turnout was 78.2 percent.

In the U.S. Senate race, Democrat Buddy MacKay fared a little better in the county than Dukakis, picking up a majority in the same four Dukakis precincts and

Bush states Florida R&R

GULF STREAM — President-elect George Bush planned to head for south Florida Thursday night to unwind from the long campaign and begin to plan his transition, aides said. Bush plans mostly to relax and do some deep sea fishing, but aides said there will be some discussion of the transition between the Reagan administration and his own. Four staff members planned to accompany Bush and his wife, Barbara, on the visit, which begins with the arrival of Air Force Two at Palm Beach International Airport at 9 p.m. The press will be headquartered at the Park Place Suite Hotel in Boca Raton, and daily news briefings will be held. Bush is expected to stay until Monday at the beachfront home of friend William Farish III in Gulf Stream, a south Palm Beach County town of 540 residents. Bush may also visit his mother, Dorothy, at her Jupiter Island home during the stay. Security preparations were kept secret, although it was disclosed that two Coast Guard vessels will patrol in front of the Farish home and a 41-foot patrol boat was assigned to accompany Bush when he goes fishing.

No work during parties

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Movie stars are welcome, but they have to leave their work behind when the party season starts Nov. 15. The Palm Beach Town Council, seeking to avoid traffic jams and disruption to the lives of the rich and famous, voted preliminarily to forbid movie-making on the island from Nov. 15 to April 15. That's when the international jet set flies in to attend one of at least 100 balls and luncheons scheduled over the five months. The ban could cramp plans for filming the new Burt Reynolds TV show, "B.L. Stryker," said producer Alan Barnette.

The ABC detective series stars Reynolds as a burned-out New Orleans policeman who retires to West Palm Beach. In the show, the character's ex-wife lives on the island and the Palm Beach police chief is a regular in the series. Series producers received permission from the Town Council last month to film parts of the show, but Barnette said a ban, if approved next month, could prompt him "to sit down and consider our options." There are five more episodes to shoot. Council members also voted Monday to forbid filming outside governmental buildings. They would ban filming on any road that is less than 30 feet wide and require producers to ask permission to shoot at least 30 days before a council meeting.

Husband charged in honeymoon murder

LARGO — A 22-year-old Youngstown, Ohio, man was held without bond in Pinellas County jail Wednesday, charged with first-degree murder of his wife while they were on their honeymoon. Kareem Abbas was charged Tuesday night after leading deputies to the body of Cynthia Lowe Abbas, 26, also of Youngstown. Sheriff's Lt. John Bocchichio said Abbas contacted the FBI Tuesday and told agents he had killed his wife, then led an agent and a deputy to the body in northwest Hernando County where he had dumped it in a thicket of dense palmetto bushes. Abbas said he shot the woman several times during an argument in Pinellas County Saturday afternoon, drove to Hernando County to dump the body, then drove to Mexico City where he contacted officials at the U.S. Embassy and told them he had committed a murder in Florida. Embassy officials said no charges had been filed against Abbas and he could not be extradited, but he returned to Tampa and turned himself in. Bocchichio said Abbas told detectives he told his wife he was financially secure in order to convince her to marry him last week. But when they arrived in Pinellas County on their honeymoon, she learned he was not as financially well off as he had said and she became angry and an argument ensued.

Engine fire ends cruise ship trip

MIAMI — The Song of America was scheduled to return to Miami late today after an engine fire forced the trip to end early, a spokesman for Royal Caribbean Cruise Line said. The cruise ship arrived in Cozumel, Mexico, Wednesday after one of four main engines malfunctioned. Rich Steck, a spokesman for the cruise line based in Miami said the engine room fire was quickly contained and there were no reports of injuries among the 1,366 passengers or 500 crew members aboard the ship. The accident happened between 7:30 and 8 p.m. EST Tuesday in the western Caribbean, several hours after the ship left Cozumel for Grand Cayman Island, Steck said. Passengers aboard the seven-day cruise from Miami were summoned to their lifeboat stations, but were not evacuated, he said.

Democrats keep House control Conservative coalition to mount take-over try

United Press International
TALLAHASSEE — Democratic legislators, stung by the defeat of House leader Rep. Sam Bell, said Wednesday they still have the votes to block a takeover attempt by a conservative Democrat-Republican coalition. Republicans had hoped to gain enough House seats to give the speakership to Rep. Carl Carpenter, D-Plant City. But they netted only one new House seat, far short of their ambitious projection of up to 10 seats. That left the speakership battle fairly much as it was before the elections — uncertain. "There's nothing Carl Carpenter can say or do that is going to move any one of those (Democratic) members off Tom Gustafson and the Democratic Party's legitimate candidate," said Gustafson loyalist Rep. Mike Abram, D-North Miami Beach. "All Carl Carpenter and (Minority Leader) Dale Patchett will be left with is their empty rumors and all the patronage they promised (that) no one was interested in," Abram said. Rep. Ron Johnson, Carpenter's right-hand man, said the defeat of Bell, D-Ormond Beach, would make it easier to elect Carpenter. He said Democrats who had been backing Gustafson out of loyalty to the popular Bell would be free to change their votes. "Bell's loss really opens the speakership race up," said

Johnson, D-Panama City. "With (Republicans) and what we have, we can win this race." Gustafson scheduled a Democratic caucus for Thursday afternoon to formalize their support for him. Johnson noted the caucus would be non-binding, and the only speakership election that would count would be the Nov. 22 vote by the full House. Bell's defeat by Republican Dick Graham was by far the most important outcome of Tuesday's elections. Bell was one of the most influential Democrats in state government and had been slated to become speaker in 1990. Bell was also an outspoken critic of Gov. Bob Martinez. As House Appropriations chairman, Bell and the governor battled often during the last two sessions. "He had become a statewide representative and probably had forgot his district," Martinez said of Bell. "When that happens, you become vulnerable — and he was vulnerable." Overall, the Republicans gained three House seats and lost two. Democrats retained a strong 64-46 majority. As expected, Rep. Bill Bankhead, R-Jacksonville, won the District 9 senate seat held by retiring Sen. Mattox Hair, D-Jacksonville. That left the Democrats with a 23-17 majority. In other races across the state: — Apparently being a football star is not enough. Former Miami Dolphin Dick Anderson lost his bid for the District 40 senate seat to Rep. Javier Souto, R-Miami, while former University of Florida and Tampa Bay Bandits quarterback John Reaves was defeated in the House District 45 race by Democrat Tom Mims.

Leaders cite GOP growth earned wins

United Press International
Arrogance by the incumbent and increased registration allowed Florida Republicans, long the No. 2 party, to win at least one open House seat and possibly unseat 10-term Rep. Bill Chappell, GOP leaders said Wednesday. Motel and restaurant owner Clifford B. Stearns of Ocala, 47, a political newcomer, upset Florida House Speaker Jon Mills for the 6th District seat vacated by Senate candidate Kenneth "Buddy" MacKay.

"He took the race for granted because of his high stature as speaker of the House," Austin said. "He just kind of strutted around saying 'I'm the speaker of the House.' In politics, lesson number one is never take anything for granted." The Democrats entered Tuesday's race with a 12-7 advantage. There were seven unopposed candidates and three seats left open by politicians running for other offices. With Stearns' win the lead was cut to at least 1-8. A victory by James could cut the Democrats' majority to one.

In northeast Florida, DeLand lawyer Craig James trailed the 66-year-old Chappell by 1,166 votes, although about 16,500 absentee ballots had yet to be counted late Wednesday and a mandatory recount appeared certain. "We ran a race on the issues, straight up," said the apparently contrite Mills, who lost by more than 18,000 votes. "I thought it would be a close race, and really did for the whole time." But Jeanie Austin, the state GOP leader, said it was arrogance that doomed the 10-year Florida House veteran.

Several races were bitter and attracted state and national contributions. All but one incumbent — Chappell, who is saddled with allegations of improper ties to the defense industry — won easily. Democratic Rep. Charles E. Bennett of Jacksonville, who ran unopposed and has served in the House since 1948, said Florida voters are becoming more conservative, though not necessarily Republican. GOP Senate candidate Connie Mack's seat was won by Republican Porter J. Goss.

Religious leaders observe anniversary

United Press International
MIAMI — Religious leaders met on the 50th anniversary of anti-Jewish riots in Germany and Austria, warning that a similar tragedy could have happened to any minority — and would happen again. About a dozen men held the bi-monthly meeting Wednesday to observe the Kristallnacht pogrom of their contribution to help prevent a tragedy like the Holocaust from recurring. Archbishop Edward A. McCarthy of the Catholic Archdiocese of Miami called the Holocaust a "dreadful, shameful act of man's inhumanity to man." Rev. T. Luther Jones, president of the Metropolitan Fellowship of Churches, said the church needed to help recruit people to the "brotherhood and support for people of all persuasions, races and beliefs." "The world is always one generation from paganism," away from another Holocaust." The Nuremberg Laws of 1935 stripped Jews of their German citizenship and more than 50,000 Polish Jews were deported, but refused entry by Polish authorities. Caught between countries, the Jews were forced to camp out in makeshift shelters. On Nov. 7, 1938, upon learning that his family was trapped, 17-year-old Hershel Grynszpan, a student in Paris, shot Ernst Von Rath, the third secretary of the German Embassy who he mistook for the ambassador. The anti-Jewish riots erupted when Von Rath died Nov. 9. On Nov. 10, 1938, Reinhard Heydrich, head of the Reich Main Security Office which oversaw the Gestapo, police and SD operations, sent a teletype telegram to his leaders throughout Austria and Germany with instructions to initiate anti-Semitic plans. "The observance was held in

Report: Anxiety, stress, pain hazardous

United Press International
GAINESVILLE — Anxiety, stress and pain can make existing health problems worse and hinder recovery from illnesses, a psychologist at the University of Florida College of Health Related Professions said Wednesday. "There's a new realization today that the mind and the body work in tandem," said Dr. Barbara Melamed, a professor in the department of clinical and health psychology. "Physicians, dentists and other health-care professionals are beginning to better understand the relationship between such things as anxiety, stress and pain and the severity of a disease or the speed of a patient's recovery." Much of this new understanding is a direct result of research conducted by graduate and post-graduate students in UF's Behavioral Research Training Program in Dentistry and Behavioral Medicine, which Melamed co-directs. Co-sponsored by the colleges of Health Related Professions and Dentistry, the program is supported through funding from the National Institute of Dental Research, and recently was awarded nearly $2.1 million in new funding for five years. Established in 1981, the program has supported and trained new clinical researchers in dentistry, medicine, psychology and other fields. Top-flight doctoral and post-doctoral students are recruited internationally to work closely with UF scientists in exploring how pain, stress and anxiety relate to and affect disease and healing. Some of the behavioral research training program's research projects have had immediate, tangible benefits. "In many cases, the parents of children undergoing surgery at Shands Hospital at UF are now encouraged to be with their children in the recovery room as soon as the child is out of anesthesia," said Melamed. "Our research found this approach often reduces stress and may decrease a young patient's need for medication and nursing care. "We've also conducted studies in which young dental patients see videos of other youngsters undergoing treatment procedures," she said. "In one example, a child narrator explains how to relax when a dentist is about to inject anesthetic. We've found that if the child is encouraged to actively practice relaxation techniques along with the video, dentists find they are more cooperative and require less aftercare. "These techniques are now being used in the UF pediatric dental clinic when a child is known to have difficulty dealing with injections."

POLICE BRIEFS

Man accused of forging check

SANFORD — A man accused of stealing and forging a check cashed at 1st Union Bank, downtown Sanford, on Nov. 2, was arrested.

Mark Steven Munger, 28, of 134 Haya Drive, Sanford, was arrested Tuesday on 20th Street at Chase Avenue by Sanford police. The $200 check was drawn on the account of Steve's Alignment Service, police said. Munger is charged with forgery, uttering a forged instrument and petty theft. Bond is $1,000.

Robber may have hit again

SANFORD — A robber using the same method as one who apparently hit three area convenience stores before midnight Tuesday possibly struck again Wednesday night.

A gunman entered the Circle K store, S. Sanford Avenue, Sanford, at about 9:56 p.m. Wednesday. He brandished a silver colored handgun, demanded cash and ordered the clerk to the floor before fleeing.

The same man may have hit the Little Champ, 2990 S. Sanford Ave., Sanford, at 9:55 p.m. Tuesday, and the Handy Way, 905 N. State Road 434, Altamonte Springs, at 11:30 p.m., as well as a Cumberland Farms in Deltona at midnight.

Meanwhile, another accused convenience store robber who is jailed for a similar string of weekend robberies had charges added against him in two more cases.

Ricardo Lopez Johnson, 22, of 1006 Mangoustine Ave., Sanford, who was jailed Sunday in a Sanford convenience store robbery, had charges filed Wednesday against him in a Lake Mary and a Seminole County convenience store robberies. The latest charges are two counts of armed robbery and one count of aggravated assault. Johnson was in jail when the second string of robberies began.

Suspected cocaine dealer arrested

WINTER SPRINGS — After the reported sale of $40 worth of cocaine to an informant, a Winter Springs man was arrested by City County Investigative Bureau agents at about 9 p.m. Wednesday.

The sale was made in the North Street area of rural Altamonte Springs. Wayne Roger Akoon, of 403 Boxwood Circle, was arrested at 209 Birchwood Terrace. He is charged with the sale and delivery of cocaine and possession of cocaine. A charge of possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana was added when he was booked into jail and contraband was reportedly found in a search. Bond is $2,000.

Trooper fondled, suspect arrested

LONGWOOD — A man, who touched the groin of an undercover, male Florida Highway Patrol trooper as the two talked in a picnic area of a rural Longwood Interstate 4 rest area, is charged with committing an unnatural or lascivious act, the trooper reported.

James Blaine Chick, 50, of Daytona Beach, was arrested at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. Bond is $500.

Purse search brings arrest

OVIDO — Ovido police, who searched a woman's purse after they asked her to identify herself, charged her with possession of cocaine and drug paraphernalia.

Police said they found a pipe with cocaine residue in the purse of Michelle Rene Pilger, 18, of Orlando. She was confronted and arrested as she left Smitty's Grille, Boston Court, at about 7:24 p.m. Wednesday. Bond is $2,000.

Theft suspect accused of biting

SANFORD — A Winn-Dixie employee who stopped a suspected shoplifter as she tried to leave the Airport Boulevard store, Sanford, with $96 in stolen goods, is accused of biting that man on the finger.

Annette Knight, 24, of 138 Carver St., Sanford, who was held for police by store workers, was arrested on charges of retail theft and battery at the store Wednesday afternoon. Bond is $600.

Boy threatened, wife battered

LONGWOOD — A man who is accused of calling a school and threatening his wife's son was arrested on charges of battery-spouse abuse after the boy was taken from the home Wednesday, Seminole County sheriff's deputies reported.

State officials took the boy and deputies arrested Troy Jay Milheron, 28, of 184 Charles St., rural Longwood, after his wife told deputies her husband had beaten her on Sunday. Deputies said Michele Milheron, 26, was bruised.

Milheron was arrested at home at about 9 p.m.

Several arrested on DUI charges

SANFORD — The following persons face a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County:

- Dean James Ruslay, 21, of 624 Montgomery Road, Altamonte Springs, was arrested at 11:16 p.m. Wednesday after his pickup truck was seen weaving on State Road 436, Altamonte Springs.

Tie goes to the drinker

MARBLE, Colo. — The issue of prohibition drew what probably was the best voter turnout in Colorado, and the final tally couldn't have been closer.

There are 32 permanent adult residents in Marble, an old mountain mining town southwest of Aspen, and all but two of them cast ballots Tuesday on a proposal to prohibit the sale of beer, wine and liquor in town. And they were equally divided, with 15 voting for prohibition and 15 against.

The tie vote means the town will remain wet, although the only watering hole in Marble had to start looking Wednesday for a supply of liquor to sell. The Mountain View Inn hadn't sold any booze since September because of the controversy over the issue.

One longtime resident, artist Thanos Johnson, said he wished the proposal had passed because too many out-of-towners were driving to Marble, getting drunk and having car wrecks.

"We have to go and rescue drunk drivers who end up in the river," Johnson said.

Sanford voters rejected new county charter

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The Seminole County charter, which was passed countywide Tuesday, was rejected by a majority of voters in Sanford.

Thirteen of the county seat's 15 precincts voted against the charter, a form of county constitution. In some precincts the margins were less than 10 votes.

A total of 77 precincts countywide favored the charter, passing it with a 58 to 42 percent margin.

The county's other six cities all favored the charter, including Casselberry, where councilmen actively opposed the document that they said would allow the county to gain more control over the city government.

Of the other five precincts voting against the charter, Precinct 88 was the unincorporated Sanford-area Sanford Heights neighborhood. Other precincts voting against the charter included Precinct 2, the Lake Sylvan area, Precinct 3 Midway, Precinct 23, the unincorporated Prairie Lake area, and Precinct 43, unincorporated south

Seminole County.

Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith, although an opponent of the charter, said she was uncertain as to why Sanford voters did not favor the charter, although she said the majority of city commissioners opposed the charter, fearing the potential it might be used to gain more control over cities in the future.

Resistance to drug probe

Sanford police investigated a possible narcotics sale while behind Higgins Terrace, Third Street Wednesday afternoon. Although no narcotics were found, a 17-year-old boy who ran from police was captured and charged with resisting. Police said the boy had $575. Vincent Gerade Fudge, 23, of 19 Higgins Terrace, was also charged with resisting after reportedly trying to interfere in the capture of the boy.

Watchdog group calls for block of Texaco sale

United Procs International

WASHINGTON — A consumer watchdog group called on the Reagan administration Thursday to block Texaco Inc.'s proposed sale of a 50 percent stake in three U.S. refineries and access to more than 11,000 U.S. service stations to OPEC leader Saudi Arabia.

The deal could net Texaco $2 billion. The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition said the proposed sale poses a threat to oil industry competition and to U.S. energy security.

Texaco, headquartered in White Plains, N.Y., agreed in June to sell to the oil-rich Middle East kingdom a 50 percent interest in a new joint venture that will own three major U.S. oil refineries and a distribution network of 10,000 Texaco service stations in 23 eastern and Gulf Coast states.

Under the terms of the deal, the Saudis will contribute $800 million and 30 million barrels of crude oil to the joint venture, which also will own 49 distribution terminals and 1,450 company-owned or leased service stations.

Industry reports that could not be confirmed said the deal was completed Tuesday in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. A Texaco spokesman, however, said the company had made no announcement on the signing of the deal.

Saudi Arabia is the world's largest oil-exporting nation and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' principal producer.

In a letter to three Reagan cabinet officials, the energy coalition's assistant director, Edwin Rothschild, said the deal would hurt consumers, undermine national security and hinder pollution-reduction efforts.

The letter said the arrangement would hurt consumers by reducing competition because Texaco, the third-largest U.S. oil company, would be guaranteed a supply of crude oil.

It charged that tying significant U.S. refining and marketing assets "directly to the most politically unstable area of the world ... will force the United States to increase its military commitment to the region."

Finally, it said the deal would encourage major oil companies "drive to sell more petroleum products and 'promote increased U.S. consumption of imported oil at a time when, particularly for environmental reasons, foreign oil dependency must be sharply and quickly reduced."

Texaco had no comment on the energy coalition's charges.

The energy coalition said approval of the Texaco-Saudi deal would set a "fragile" precedent.

"It will broadcast to foreign governments that the United States is willing to put its energy security at risk and is willing to forego the enforcement of antitrust laws since foreign governments are considered beyond their jurisdiction," the letter said.

The letter urged the administration to block the transaction until the new Congress and administration "can review and evaluate these critical issues and can make a determination as to whether or not such deals are in the interests of the United States."

Building permits ahead of last year, funds still lag

SANFORD — Sanford's building department let 107 more building and mechanical permits in October, bringing the total so far this year to 1,986 — 349 more than a year ago at this time.

However, the total value of work represented by the permits still lags behind last year's, $17.5 million to $819.2 million.

Seven more permits for single-family homes were issued during October, bringing the year's total to 162, compared to 114 last year at this time. Total value of permits for the homes was $237,752, for an average value of each home of $33,965.

The average value of all homes for which construction permits were let so far this year is $36,929 compared to $33,311 at this time a year ago.

Permits were let last month to demolish two homes in Sanford, for a total of six this year.

The building department also issued three permits for new commercial buildings totaling $332,000.

Other permits issued were for accessory buildings, additions and repairs, signs and electrical, plumbing or mechanical work.

Golden Age Games: A proud tradition

Golden Age Game competitors, nearly 3,000 strong, are in Sanford this week for the 14th renewal of the annual games which attract seniors from throughout the nation.

These are not ordinary games, and these are not ordinary competitors. When watching the Seoul Olympics in August, commentators repeatedly cited individuals as "old" who were actually in their 20's. One cited term as the best age group for gymnasts. Well, the Golden Ages are beyond 20s, 30s or even 40s. A competitor must be a minimum of 55 years of age and there's not a maximum. The sight of an octogenarian paddling a canoe or running with the best of them is not unusual.

These games are a tribute to the participants who compete for the sheer love of their sports. They are able to compete due to commitment to personal health and fitness. They truly are role models and inspirations to "take care of yourself." Watch for expressions of sheer joy as they join their peers in the games.

The games are also a tribute to the sponsors. The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, the duo of Jack Horner and Vic Arnett, the two spark plugs who helped launch this successful venture who served as this year's torch bearers, and Jim Jernigan, the longtime chairman of the event.

Games such as this do not just materialize each year. They require careful planning and a committed cadre of volunteer workers and the cooperation of area businesses and institutions. The schools support the games through the use of facilities and local merchants aid through sponsorships and time.

The Golden Age Games truly are a community effort.

The games also offer residents an opportunity to engage in America's favorite sport: "Spectatoring." Watch the running competition, the swimming and diving, the bicycling. Or, if you wish a slower pace, there's dominos, checkers and bridge. Or, dancing. And watching is entertaining and truly inspirational.

The honorary chairman for this year's games, Dr. Sammy Lee, is an Olympic diving champion of the 1948 and 1952 games. He has maintained his interest in athletics and his commitment to the elevation of sports performance and ethics to a higher plane. He is, indeed, a welcome guest in Sanford, and an inspiration to participants and residents alike.

The Herald welcomes the participants and sponsors who help make this athletic jewel a vital part of Sanford's crown.

Keep special prosecutors for Congress

Attorney General Richard Thornburgh is in serious peril of disregarding the Dangerfield Doctrine, so called because it was first enunciated by the well known stand-up comic who gets no respect. "Look out for Number One." It counsels, "and don't step in Number Two."

Thornburgh, whom President Reagan appointed in August to succeed the retiring Ed Meese, is a well-regarded former governor of Pennsylvania, and has the added merit of being a longtime friend and supporter of George Bush. His politics are more or less moderate by Republican standards, which is par for the course in Pennsylvania. But he has a sharp ear for things that are unbearably offensive to conservatives, as he demonstrated by resigning from the American Civil Liberties Union back in 1968, when that organization began its long march to the left that recently got Michael Dukakis into such trouble.

The problem is that one of the last official acts of outgoing Attorney General Ed Meese was to promulgate a new rule for the Justice Department, under which investigations of possible criminality on the part of members of Congress would be turned over to independent "special prosecutors," analogous to those that are currently used to investigate alleged malfeasances in the executive branch.

Given the American people's recent habit of awarding the executive branch to one party and Congress to the other, battles between these two branches of the federal government are absolutely guaranteed. By passing a law providing that investigations of high officials or former officials of the executive branch must be conducted by independent counsel (rather than by the Justice Department, which is itself a part of that branch and hence might be thought prejudiced), Congress landed a heavy blow squarely on the solar plexus of its adversary.

Turning a prosecutorial inquiry over to a specially appointed outside attorney — who is provided with office space, a huge battery of investigators and junior lawyers, and millions of dollars with which to pursue the matter — virtually guarantees that some crime will be alleged and prosecuted. The result has been that, merely by raising a hullabaloo (with the loyal help of their media cronies) over President Reagan's closest aides — Lynn Nofziger, Michael Deaver and Meese himself — the Democratic bosses of Congress have been able to entangle them in constant and debilitating battles to save their personal honor and stay out of jail.

The significance of Meese's new regulation is that it subjects members of Congress to the same treatment, and thereby restores a modicum of balance between the branches.

Naturally the Meese ruling is highly unpopular with the Congress, and pressure on Thornburgh to rescind it has been heavy. The ultra-liberal New York Times columnist Anthony Lewis obtained an early interview with the new attorney general and reported, with a broad wink, that Thornburgh was reconsidering its desirability. Subsequent leaks from the Justice Department seem to confirm this.

I hope, for Thornburgh's own sake and the sake of a reasonable balance between frequently hostile branches of government, that he permits the new regulation to stand. Conservatives will be watching his decision carefully, as an important index to his general attitude.

Pill may put end to protests

BOSTON—In my town, there is a women's health clinic. To go there, whether you need a pap smear or pregnancy counseling, you have to run a gauntlet of anti-abortion picketers.

I have something in common with that crew. I would also like to close down the abortion business of that clinic, send their vacuum aspirators and surgical tools to some museum of medical history.

In my fantasy, the abortions would be phased out because every pregnancy was a welcome one. But in the real world of imperfect and sometimes desperate human experience, I put my hopes on a new pill to replace the surgery. The pill called RU-486.

These are two distinct ways to close an abortion clinic. Make it illegal or make it unnecessary. And right now they are in a conflict that is generating extraordinary heat.

In the course of one dramatic day last week, the pill RU-486 was abruptly taken off the world market by its European drug maker, Roussel-Uclaf did this under intense pressure from anti-abortion groups. The very next day, it was ordered back on the market by the French government. The official called it the moral property of the women of France. On the day after that, in the United States, pro-lifers by the hundreds targeted clinics all over the country in a planned protest against abortion.

If the international conflict over the pill was explosive, if the sidewalk demonstrations in America were especially intense, it is no wonder. The abortion debate is now in a new and climactic phase of conflict, revolving around technology and law. Can a law stop the technology from spreading? Can the technology make an end run around any law?

RU-486 and its look-alike drugs make abortion as private as a prescription pad, as personal as swallowing a pill. For this reason, Faye Wattleton, the president of Planned Parenthood, says: "The right-to-lifers are fighting the last gasp. If these drugs get to the market it is really all over."

Chemically, this pill prevents the cells in the lining of the uterus from getting progesterone. Without progesterone the wall of the uterus breaks down just the way it does for menstruation. RU-486 can prevent a fertilized egg from ever implanting in the uterus, or it can ensure that an implanted egg sloughs off. And it can do this in the earliest days and weeks of pregnancy, before a surgical abortion is possible, before a fetus is even formed.

In short, the drug makes abortion easier, safer, less traumatic, less expensive. To some, there is good and bad news buried in that simplicity: RU-486 could also increase the number of women using abortion as birth control. But the doctors who created a storm of protests over the brief banning of RU-486, reminded the world that 200,000 women die every year from botched abortions in countries where doctors are few and facilities are far between. In addition, this pill may be used in treating breast cancer and ectopic pregnancies.

But today, RU-486 is unavailable in the United States. The large American drug companies that aren't intimidated by "controversy" are terrified by liability suits. Anything to do with reproduction sends them skittering. Inevitably though, a small drug company will ask to market this drug. When that happens, we will see the last major battle over reproductive rights.

This fall, almost against the candidates' will, abortion became a campaign issue. In the aftermath of the first debate, we learned the Bush way to close an abortion clinic: by making criminals out of doctors, though not their female "victims."

What would be the effect of the new technology on this old argument? Once the abortion pill is available in the black market, could we still call the woman who buys and takes these pills a "victim" or would she be a criminal? What of the mother who smuggles a pill in to that 12-year-old? What of the 12-year-old?

The right-to-lifers know that the abortion pill is their most potent enemy. That is the reason behind the pressure on the drug companies. Once there are no clinics to protest, no fetuses to photograph, no clinic staffs to blame, abortion is most obviously, most completely, a private matter. The right-to-lifers don't want abortion to be easy, or painless, or a choice.

But even if this opposition manages a legal ban, the abortion pill will become available. These pills are what they call in the trade "bathtub" drugs: they are easy to make. You can get such pills over a drug counter in Thailand today. Anyone who believes we could control their import hasn't checked the cocaine business recently.

The drug makes abortion easier, safer, less traumatic, less expensive.

Ex-officials retain papers

WASHINGTON — The full truth about the Watergate scandal may not be told until after the turn of the century.

One reason: It could take almost that long for the courts to settle the legal battles being fought by Richard Nixon to retain possession of his papers. He has blocked the release of thousands of the documents on the grounds of personal privacy and his purported need to protect privileged communications with aides.

Another reason: Henry Kissinger, who was Nixon's national security adviser and secretary of state, and Alexander Haig, the former president's chief of staff, managed to retain control of most of their papers. They gave the public their versions of those papers in the form of memoirs that earned them sizable chunks of money.

Put another way, they "privatized" many of the documents they accumulated at public expense and profited on them. Their actions were, in the words of University of Wisconsin history professor Stanley Kutler, "outrageous and arrogant." Kutler will publish a history of the Watergate era next year.

Because they have sole authority over the disposition of their papers, Kissinger and Haig can lay before the public a version of their activities during the turbulent Watergate years which cannot be challenged. Take the case of Elias Demetrapoulos, then a Greek exile leader in the United States.

There is considerable evidence that U.S. government officials were involved in two plots in the early 1970s to return Demetrapoulos forcibly to Athens where he faced possible execution by the military junta that was then ruling Greece. During an exhaustive investigation of the matter, Demetrapoulos discovered a cryptic reference to National Security Council files concerning "Mr. Demetrapoulos' death in an Athens prison."

Since Kissinger has copies of all his "personal" papers and copies of NSC documents generated during his tenure as national security chief, Demetrapoulos asked Kissinger to help resolve the mystery. He flatly refused.

Prior to the Nixon years, prominent government figures routinely took with them the papers they accumulated during their terms of office, usually with no questions asked. According to retired Washington, D.C., publisher Maurice Schnapper, a recognized expert on the privatization of public papers, "It always comes down to the fact that government officials, including Supreme Court justices, have often just made off with their papers."

Because the Nixon administration papers could turn out to be needed in numerous court cases, Congress passed a law in 1974 which ordered that all Nixon documents be turned over to the National Archives for processing and eventual public release. But before the law took effect, Kissinger and Haig took personal possession of their papers.

In late October 1976, Kissinger had his papers trucked to Nelson Rockefeller's estate in Pocantico Hills, N.Y. Two months later, Kissinger donated his papers to the Library of Congress, on the condition that only he or his appointed assistants have access to them until the year 2001, or until his death, whichever was later. His attorney freely admits Kissinger retained copies of everything.

 Latimer also cited comments made by Martin Feldstein, president and chief executive of the Bureau of Economic Research, who said the dollar needed to fall 10 to 20 percent in the next three years if the United States were to redress its trade imbalance and keep economic recovery going.

GTE wins point in HSN suit

United Press International
TAMPA — GTE Florida Inc. said it won a major legal point when a Pinellas County circuit judge granted a motion to strike a $1 billion punitive damages claim sought by Home Shopping Network Inc.
 But Home Shopping Network characterized Wednesday's ruling by Judge Howard P. Rives as a "routine procedure" and said the ruling leaves the company free to resubmit its claim at a later date.
 Home Shopping filed a $1.5 billion lawsuit against GTE Florida in September 1987, claiming that poor telephone service and equipment provided by GTE caused Home Shopping to lose about $500 million in sales in fiscal 1987.
 GTE Florida, a subsidiary of GTE Corp. of Stamford, Conn., filed a countersuit against Home Shopping last week, accusing the shop-at-home television retailer of business libel and slander.

 "We're gratified by the judge's decision," James Carideo, general counsel of GTE Florida, said in a statement.
 "In our view, GTE's statement about the judge's ruling is completely misleading," countered Nando DiFilippo Jr., general counsel for Home Shopping Network.

Researchers split on source of schizophrenia

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — Separate studies of families with a high rate of schizophrenia provide new evidence the personality disorder is inherited through a defective gene, but researchers disagree on how the disease is passed along from one generation to the next.

 Both sets of findings, reported Wednesday in the current issue of the British journal Nature, are based on extensive study of the chromosome makeup of families with an unusually high incidence of the disorder, characterized by wild mood swings and a split among the functions of thought, behavior and emotion.

 One study by British scientists of two English and five Icelandic families suggests that a defective gene is the cause of at least one form of schizophrenia. There were 39 cases of schizophrenia among the 104 members of the seven families.

 picking up a majority in five others. Republican Connie Mack was the candidate who received the largest vote in the county: 50,679 to MacKay's 34,197.
 In the state Senate District 17 cliffhanger, Republican Lori Wilson received 37 more votes than Democrat Bud Gardner, although she won the majority in 55 of the 95 precincts. That majority, however, was by less than 10 votes in some precincts. As of this morning, districtwide totals had not been tabulated by state elections officials.
 In the countywide local races, Democratic sheriff's candidate Patrick Wilson won three predicts, 3, 21 and 29 — all showing predominantly Democratic registration. Republican Sheriff John Polk, himself a former Democrat, handily won the race for his re-election by a vote of 60,141 to 21,472.

 Democrats Karen Richardson, Warren Keiner and Art Davis each pulled slightly better than one third the vote in their races, again getting a majority in the predominantly Democratic precincts.
 Richardson lost the tax collector's bid to Republican Ray Valdes, 50,468 to 27,570. Keiner lost to incumbent District 3 county commissioner Fred Streetman 52,674 to 25,529.
 Davis lost to Republican Jennifer Kelley in the District 5 county commission race, 51,188 to 28,132, although Davis had substantial support in Sanford.

 Incumbents school board superintendent Bob Hughes and District 2 school board member Nancy Warren each carried a majority vote in all 95 precincts. Incumbent District 3 school board member Joe Williams, though winning re-election, lost 34 precincts to challenger Wes Pennington.
 Hughes gained 48,590 votes to superintendent challenger Duane Doddington's 23,559. Warren received 49,551 votes to Ellis' 20,084. Williams received 36,133 votes and Pennington received 33,450.

 Joyce said the last time the mandated recount was triggered was in the 1980 state Attorney General's race, but that no one could remember a recount in a U.S. Senate race in Florida.
 Both candidates met reporters Wednesday, with Mack declaring his confidence in victory when all ballots are counted and MacKay vowing to remain a Democrat despite some problems with the party's vision.
 MacKay, speaking to reporters in Ocala, said he thought the Mack campaign ads that called him a "liberal" cost him some votes.
 "I believe that label caused some people to harden their position against me, people who might otherwise have given me a second look," he said.
 He also dismissed the idea that he would become a "Republican Democrat" to broaden his base of support in Florida, saying he would rather "fight than switch."
 He said the Democratic Party was having problems, but it was nothing that could not be resolved.

 "The problem today is the Democratic vision is not clear," MacKay said. "We're having an internal dispute about what it means to be a Democrat."
 Mack said he thought he would win because the outstanding absentee ballots were in areas where he did well — the Florida Panhandle, the Jacksonville area and portions of Central Florida.
 "I feel quite confident we will be victorious," he said in Tampa. "We may have to wait until tomorrow (Thursday)."
 Mack said he did not ride on the coattails of president-elect George Bush. "This is a race that was between Connie Mack and Buddy MacKay," he said. "There was a fundamental choice."
 MacKay captured 35 of the state's counties, including Dade, Broward and Palm Beach in voter-rich south Florida and Pinellas and Hillsborough counties in the Tampa area.
 Mack won 32 counties, easily winning Duval in the northeast and Escambia in the Florida Panhandle, along with his home county of Lee near Fort Myers.

 bright, blue eyes and youthful stature contradicted this.
 Originally an Illinois farmer, one of the first things Green related is how he shucked 3,900 bushels of corn in 37 days.
 His son, Elmer, who was accompanied by his wife, Mary, said his father also started the first pasteurized milk plant there. Green lived with his son and daughter-in-law for eight years before moving into the retirement residence.
 When asked about sinking the two balls, Green modestly said, "That's a wonder. I'm 105 years old. I'm just a little stiff," he says.
 Green has outlived two children and two wives.
 In 1965, his first wife passed away.
 "If she would have lived two months longer, we would have been married 60 years," he says of his first wife. Green remarried on his 84th birthday, and his wife lived only six years.

 Green attributes his longevity to a clean, Christian lifestyle. He said strong faith in God saved his and his first wife's lives. When he lived in Illinois, a train going 75 m.p.h. hit the front of his car and dragged it 30 or 40 feet. Green said neither he nor his wife received a scratch and there was not a broken piece of glass.
 He said once he had sugar diabetes so bad that he lost 30 pounds in three weeks.
 "I asked God what to do and he said to lay off the sweet stuff," Green said. "I've tried to go to church all the time. The Lord has been with me all my life."
 Green has participated in the Golden Age Games for the past five years.
 When asked whether he would be on the basketball court next year for the Golden Age Games he replied, "If I'm a-lyin' I will"

John Mitchell dead at 75

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Former Attorney General John Mitchell, dead of a heart attack at 75, wanted to be "a fat and prosperous Wall Street lawyer" but wound up a disbarred common criminal jailed in President Nixon's Watergate scandal.
 Mitchell died Wednesday at 8:27 p.m. EST, about an hour after he was admitted to George Washington University Medical Center in cardiac arrest, according to hospital spokeswoman Claudia Dominitz.
 Mitchell was walking home in the fashionable Georgetown section of the nation's capital when he collapsed on the street. A passerby, Robert Hilger of Boston, administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation until an ambulance arrived.
 A Washington television station reported Wednesday night that a breakdown in radio communications prevented the media treating Mitchell from letting the hospital know they were on the way.

 WUSA-TV said it took four calls before the media were able to get through to the hospital and by that time the ambulance was at the emergency room. Such communication difficulties have been a recurring problem, WUSA noted, but it was not known whether the incident contributed to Mitchell's death.
 Mitchell became the first attorney general ever to serve a prison term — for Watergate crimes he said he never committed as a top adviser to Richard Nixon.
 The pipe-smoking Republican was found to be the man who pulled the strings that led to the June 17, 1972, break-in at the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate complex. He then participated in the Byzantine cover up that tried to distance the Oval Office from the burglars.

 During the next two years, the scandal exploded with revelations from legal and congressional investigations. In the end, 25 defendants were jailed for Watergate crimes; Nixon resigned in disgrace Aug. 9, 1974, and was pardoned one month later by President Gerald Ford.
 Mitchell, convicted of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury, was sentenced to two to eight years in prison by Judge John Sirica. It was upheld on appeal and he arrived in June 1977 at the federal minimum security facility in Montgomery, Ala. He was released 19 months later, Jan. 19, 1979.
 Mitchell spent his final years in the city of his downfall as a consultant for Global Research Inc., a public policy institute.
 Former Watergate prosecutor Jim Neal said Wednesday in Nashville, Tenn., that he was saddened by Mitchell's death.
 "John Mitchell committed an offense and I prosecuted him," Neal said. "But he was a very pleasant human being. He was not bitter about what happened to him. ... There was no bitterness between John Mitchell and me."
 The White House issued a statement Wednesday night saying, "President and Mrs. Reagan are deeply saddened by the news of John Mitchell's death and extend their sympathy and prayers to his family."

Robert Nelson

81-year-old philosopher still kicking

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — Robert Nelson is 81-years-old, but he says he is just getting started on his life.

Last year, on his 80th birthday, he decided wasn't going to be like his friends who'd died. He was going to enjoy his own wake.

"So I got up that morning, played nine holes of golf, a few games of tennis, swam 100 meters and sailed on my catamaran," he said Wednesday, puffing out his chest. "Then, I got together with my friends and got pleasantly plastered."

He contends that the party, held at the Swimming Hall of Fame in Ft. Lauderdale, where he had worked for a dozen years, is something he'll be laughing at for years to come.

These days, Nelson is a self-proclaimed octogenarian philosopher. His secret to a long, happy life is simple: first keep a sense of humor and roll with the punches; and never worry about something you can't do anything about.

Though he is participating in several events at the Golden Age Games, including badminton on Wednesday, tennis on Monday, and sailing on Sunday, his first love has always been swimming. "I grew up swimming with Johnny Weissmuller and Buster Crabbe in New York, so I knew good competition," he said.

Though he swam with the future world class talents as a boy, it wasn't until he was 69 that he bested Crabbe in the water. In the 1977 Golden Age Games he defeated the former Olympian in the 50 yard free-style. He says that was his biggest victory as an athlete.

Nelson joked that he is immortal. He became convinced of that fact when he smashed up a convertible in 1937.

"They tell me I should have been killed in that car," he said, "so every day I've had since then is gravy."

He says he also knew at a very young age that he would never be a champion at any sport, so he decided to participate in as many as he could and to have fun at all of them.

His fun-loving attitude has made him a rolling stone, unwilling (and occasionally unable) to stay with one thing for an extended period of time.

"I've had 54 jobs, 83 automobiles and 24 boats," he said.

Though he earned a bachelor's degree in physical education from Springfield (Mass.) College in 1941, he jokes that he's done everything from train fighters to working for a gas company, but he's never been a husband. Having had two marriage proposals turned down, "I wouldn't have made a very good husband. I'm not very committed," he settled happily into the bachelor life with no regrets.

"I never had to be like so many of the boys and ask my wife if I could do something. I just got up and went," he said.

Last year, Nelson moved to the U.S. Naval Home in Gulfport, Mississippi.

SANFORD — At times, the Golden Ages Games dance contest held at the civic center Wednesday afternoon seemed more like a gala ball than a contest.

Ladies' dresses ranged from elaborate, elegant evening attire to full-skirted square dance outfits. Men wore tuxes and casual wear. Everyone enjoyed themselves.

The Sanford Sertnaders struck up the band and participants coupled off to participate in the contests while others came simply to dance.

There were several dance categories which included the jitterbug, rumba, polka, alley-cat, cha-cha, waltz, tango and fox trot and the Golden-Agers demonstrated exceptional dancing technique. In fact, they were good.

Tanned faces and lithe bodies strutted across the dance floor. Couples twirled, cha-chaed and waltzed the afternoon away. Most had done it before.

For Edna and Eric Holt of Daytona Beach, it was their second year to enter in the dance contest. The Hols, who are English, escape bitter Montreal winters to come to Florida.

Beads of perspiration clung to Mrs. Holt's freckled, youthful face a few minutes after the couple garnered first-place gold medals in the cha-cha contest. Last year they said they won two silver medals, in tango and rumba. They said they would go on to compete in three more dance categories.

In the alley-cat contest, many were out of step, some were out of rhythm but none were without partners. After a lot of high-stepping, clapping and fancy footwork, they received spirited applause from the audience.

Special guest was Dr. Sammy Lee, Olympic gold medal diver and coach. Lee didn't dance but sat watching with his wife, Kaz, while many people came to shake his hand.

"I've read about him for 50 years, and this is the first time I'm meeting him," said one man as he gave Lee a strong handshake.

Lee said he had been invited to the Golden Age Games four times before but this year was the first he took the 3,000 mile trip from his home in Huntington Beach, Calif.

Another couple who stood out from the crowd was Dr. William Maine and Viola Kastner. Maine who had collected 95 medals in previous years for swimming, track and field and other athletic events, said since the Golden Age Games started Monday, he has captured 13 more.

Maine and his partner won medals in several of the dance categories before the afternoon was through. Another twist to the already social event was the reunion of Maine and a son's schoolteacher. Both are from Youngstown, Ohio.

He and Kastner struck up their most dramatic poses while newspapers, friends and interested parties snapped cameras.

Maine said he and his wife who died in 1965 used to be champion dancers in the Fred Astaire dance chain held at the Astor Hotel in New York City.

Maine was confident that he would collect several more medals in the games throughout the week.

"I'll have a lot more by the time I get through," he said.

William Maine, 64, of Youngstown, Ohio, and Viola Kastner, 83, of Sanford, ham it up for the cameras after Wednesday's dance contest at the Sanford Civic Center. The couple finished in third place in the Cha Cha competition.

'Snowbird' athlete still going strong

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — Dorothy Spillman cocks her head to the side and studies the billiard table before she makes a shot. She takes it and misses but is unbothered. She smiles and watches as her opponent goes on to take the game away from her.

"It's OK," she smiled, "this isn't really my sport."

Spillman, who describes herself as a "snowbird," and her husband Robert live half the year in Columbus, Ohio and the other half in Sebring, Florida. They were in Sanford for the Golden Age Games.

The former physical education instructor and recreation director turned 58-years-old on Wednesday and shows no signs of slowing down.

She was recently licensed as a massage therapist in Ohio and volunteers her time teaching infant massage to parents in their homes. In addition, she also teaches "easy stretching" at the local recreation center.

In her spare time, Spillman, who used to own a bicycle repair shop, rides her bike all over the state.

"I never had a chance to ride much when I had my store," she admits, "but I've really gotten active in the last couple of years."

Last year, she was the oldest woman to participate in the 210 mile Tour of the Santa River Valley race. She intends to repeat that feat this year.

Dorothy Spillman takes her best shot although she admits that pool isn't her sport.

Spillman has been a vegetarian since 1972. She said that she worked in a hamburger shop in high school and it was her prediction at the time that she would have seen the world in her traveling hamburger stand.

Reminded of that at her 40th class reunion, she realized she'd accomplished the goal in a more healthful way when she began serving as a bicycle tour host to foreign exchange students.

While she bicycles and plays billiards actively, she has discovered a new sport which she feels may be her best. Shuffleboard.

While many think of it as an leisurely game, she says that at the national and international level the competition can be intense.

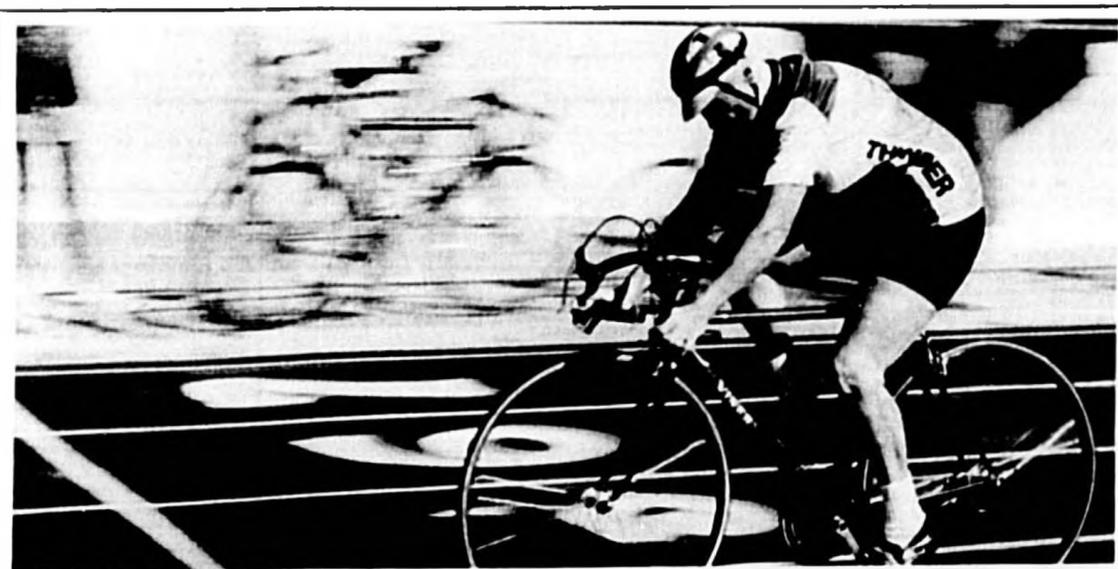

She's only been playing for two years and says it will take her at least another decade to make attain her goal of becoming a member of the international team and competing in Australia.

For now, she trains strenuously with her husband Robert and competes in tournaments around Florida and Ohio. Last year she entered the national championships. She didn't place, but isn't discouraged as she still has a lot to learn.

She and Robert both also will play in the Golden Age Games shuffleboard competition.

"I'm having a lot of fun," she smiled as she grabs her baseball cap and runs to the door to meet her husband for her birthday celebration.

Against the wind

Nora Young, age 71, of Canada, leans into the wind and gives it one final hard push on the pedals as she heads for the finish line.

She finished in first place in the first women's quarter-mile heat in bicycle racing.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

10 inmates hurt in race riot

EL CAJON, Calif. — At least 10 inmates were hurt, two critically, in what sheriff's deputies said was a racially motivated riot that raged for nearly an hour Wednesday night at an overcrowded jail, authorities said.

Several inmates were stabbed and one fell from a cell block balcony during the violence that erupted about 8:25 p.m. at the El Cajon Detention Facility, Lt. Bob Trevino said.

Sheriff's officials said about a dozen deputies on duty at the jail regained control about 9:30 p.m. None of the deputies was hurt.

Initial reports indicated as many as 17 injuries. About 10 inmates, two with critical injuries, were taken by helicopter or ambulance under guard to local hospitals for treatment.

The facility currently holds 777 inmates, several times its ideal capacity of 120, but it was not immediately known how many prisoners were involved in the violence that stemmed from racial tensions in one floor of the jail, Trevino said.

After deputies restored control, a number of inmates involved in the riot were moved to another county facility in an attempt to diffuse tension, Trevino said.

Governor vows to uphold gay rights

SALEM, Ore. — Gov. Neil Goldschmidt said Wednesday he would fire state managers who discriminate against homosexuals despite passage of an anti-gay rights ballot measure.

"I do not interpret the vote on Measure 8 as a license to discriminate," Goldschmidt said in a post-mortem news conference to talk about the results of the 1988 general election.

Later in Portland, 18 people were arrested when they blocked traffic on the Burnside Bridge to protest passage of Measure 8, which revokes Goldschmidt's order barring state government from discriminating against homosexuals.

Portland police said the protesters were cited for interfering with vehicular traffic and released.

Goldschmidt said the vote is an indication of the "level of discomfort" Americans have with the issue of homosexuality.

The measure passed Tuesday by a margin of 53 percent to 47 percent.

Chief sponsor of the measure was the Oregon Citizens Alliance, a conservative political action group that grew out of the ruins of Baptist minister Joe Lutz's unsuccessful campaign to unseat Republican Sen. Bob Packwood in 1984.

Leaders of the group said the order granted special rights to homosexuals and was a political payoff by Goldschmidt for gay support in his 1986 campaign for governor.

Key NASA contractor saves 1,300 jobs

FRONT ROYAL, Va. — Winning long-term aerospace contracts helped save the jobs of 1,300 workers abruptly laid off last week by the Avtex Fibers Inc. plant, which supplies vital booster material for NASA's space shuttle program.

John Gregg, Avtex chairman and chief executive officer, announced Wednesday that the company, encouraged by NASA and the Department of Defense, "was able to negotiate a long-term contract with certain aerospace industrial companies that will allow the plant to return to full production."

The company planned to begin notifying fired employees today that they would be called back to work.

The Washington Post reported today that an aerospace industry official close to the negotiations, who was not identified, said the funding to reopen Avtex was a "short-term solution" and more money will be needed for the company to survive in the long run.

Avtex is the world's largest manufacturer of rayon, and company officials blamed foreign competition for its closing. It has been operating on a limited basis with a sharply reduced workforce.

"Avtex has dedicated considerable resources over the last several years to the research and development of specialty fibers," Gregg said. "Were it not for the specialty fibers produced by Avtex, we would not have been successful in reopening the plant on a long-term basis."

Avtex will continue to focus on expanding its business in the specialty fibers market," Gregg said. "In doing so it will limit its vulnerability to competition from foreign-owned competitors."

The reopening of the plant is good news for NASA because Avtex is its only domestic supplier of special rayon fibers for space shuttle boosters. NASA officials said last week they had enough of fiber on hand for "11 or 12" launches, or through April 1990.

About 5 percent of the company's production involves material for the boosters.

American artists command big bucks

NEW YORK — Works by 15 contemporary American artists fetched record prices at auction Wednesday, with the top price a $7 million bid for Jasper Johns' "White Flag," a monochromatic piece that is among the artist's most radical works.

Other sales marking the highest prices ever paid for works by these individual artists included $5.72 million for Jackson Pollock's monumental "Frieze," a culmination of Pollock's long, horizontal paintings, and $2.75 million for Mark Rothko's "Number 8," a brilliantly colored oil on canvas.

The auction of 32 works from the Tremaine Collection at Christie's gallery in Manhattan brought a total of $25.8 million, said Dana Micucci, a spokeswoman for the gallery.

Other records for works by individual artists included $2.31 million for Franz Kline's "Lehigh," an oil on canvas that marks the midpoint of Kline's series of large, imposing black and white paintings, and $2.1 million for Roy Lichtenstein's "I Can See the Whole Room," and "There's Nobody in It," an oil and graphite on canvas that is one of the artist's earliest cartoon images.

The Tremaine Collection, built by Burton Tremaine and his wife, Emily, over four decades, is widely viewed as one of the country's most distinguished collections of works by major postwar American artists.

Aide: Myerson said to mislead reporter

NEW YORK — Bess Myerson instructed her aide to mislead a reporter about hiring the daughter of a judge handling her boyfriend's divorce case, the aide testified during the former Miss America's divorce fixing trial.

Richard Bruno testified Wednesday how he believed Myerson manipulated him once she learned New York Post reporter Richard Johnson had asked about the hiring of Sukhreet Gabel in October 1983.

Bruno said that at Myerson's behest, he told the reporter Gabel "was the outstanding candidate" among several, even though Gabel was the only one interviewed for the job.

Testimony in the case was to resume today in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

Myerson, 64, is on trial on charges she hired the younger Gabel to influence state Supreme Court Justice Hortense Gabel's handling of the divorce case of her boyfriend, Carl "Andy" Capasso, 43.

At the time of Gabel's hiring, Myerson was the city's commissioner of cultural affairs, and Bruno was the assistant commissioner.

"Commissioner Myerson became very angry and said that it was outrageous that Mrs. Capasso and her lawyer waded this at the press," said Bruno, referring to Capasso's ex-wife, whom Myers "felt leaked the story."

Crash grounds B-1B bomber fleet

United Press International

ABILENE, Texas — As investigators interviewed people who witnessed a fiery B-1B bomber crash, Air Force mechanics worked to complete safety inspections on the grounded planes and get the strategic bombers back in the air.

The Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Neb., temporarily grounded the nuclear bomb-carrying planes Wednesday and said each B-1B would undergo a safety inspection as a result of Tuesday's crash near Dyess Air Force Base. Witnesses reported flames shooting from the plane before its four crew members ejected safely.

"This is a normal precaution following any similar incident," the SAC statement said.

It said it will take a day or two for instructions on what items are to be inspected to arrive at

B-1B bases around the country. In the meantime, "B-1B flying operations have been suspended," the statement said.

The SAC estimated the inspections would take three hours for each aircraft. As each of the 98 remaining bombers is inspected it will be returned to flying status, the SAC statement said. Officials said some bombers will remain on alert for emergency use in case of a nuclear crisis.

Master Sgt. Al Dostal said inspections were completed on some of the planes at Dyess Wednesday.

At a news conference Wednesday afternoon, Col. Albert "Don" Jensen, commander of the 96th Bombardment Wing at Dyess, commended the crew of the B-1B.

"They performed by the book and as they should," Jensen said. He said he still has great confidence in the B-1B, which he described as "the best bomber in the world."

A routine training mission involving two B-1Bs was held Wednesday night, and Jensen was scheduled to fly on one of the bombers himself today morning, Dostal said.

Jensen said he expected the four crew members who ejected from the craft to resume flying in the next few days.

The crew of the four-engine bomber was practicing approach maneuvers when the aircraft went down about 5 miles north of Dyess Tuesday afternoon near the town of Tyr, about 10 miles west of Abilene, Air Force officials said.

Witnesses said it appeared the pilot had managed to steer the plane clear of populated areas before the crew ejected and parachuted to safety. Witnesses also reported seeing flames pouring from an engine on the bomber's left side before it went down.

An investigative team headed by Air Force Col. David C. Dill, vice commander of the 28th Bombardment Wing at Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D., was on the scene Wednesday.

Playground said investigators were interviewing witnesses to the crash.

The crew members assigned to the 337th Bombardment Squadron remained in good condition at the base hospital Wednesday, where they were admitted for observation, said Sgt. Penny Jorgensen.

They were identified as Capt. Michael E. Waters, 29, of New Bern, N.C., the plane's commander; Capt. George M. Guber, 31, of San Diego; the pilot, Capt. Charles M. Za, 37, of Hialeah, Fla.; offensive systems operator and first Lt. Anton Eret Jr., 26, of Northglenn, Colo.; defensive systems operator

Government picks site for supercollider

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary John Herrington called a news conference today to end a frenzied competition among job-hungry states for the world's largest atom smasher, touted as the biggest scientific project in history.

Seven finalist states awaited word on which would be the "preferred" site for the superconducting super collider, a huge federal research facility expected to create about 9,500 jobs in its peak construction year and 3,000 permanent jobs along with $1 billion in related contracts and spin-off enterprises.

When the competition began last year, 25 states submitted 35 sites to the government for consideration. The list was narrowed to locations in Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina, Texas and Tennessee.

In recent weeks, governors of most of the finalist states came to Washington for one more round of lobbying. Herrington, underlining the stakes involved in snaring the estimated $4.4 billion project.

Late Wednesday, Harden Wiedemann of the North Texas Commission, which worked to sell Herrington on a site in Waxahatchie, said "The Texas team" has been checking sources and its network here and in other states that are finalists, and the signals are all coming up Texas.

State officials have salivated over the economic bonanza the project would bring, and high energy physics researchers are eager for scientific advances it will make possible once its seven-to-10-year construction is complete.

The super collider, an oval-shaped, 53-mile-long, 10-foot-wide underground tunnel, is expected to be the largest particle accelerator — or atom smasher — in the world. The tunnel will cover an area 17 miles long and 15 miles wide and will contain 10,000 huge superconducting magnets.

The device will send beams of protons racing in opposite directions around the underground track at nearly the speed of light. The payoff comes when the beams collide, releasing a shower of subatomic particles that scientists will study to learn more about the nature of energy and matter.

The supercollider will be 20 times more powerful than the largest existing particle accelerator, Fermilab in Illinois.

Energy Department officials said Herrington would pick his favored site on the basis of numerous factors, including land acquisition costs, availability of skilled workers, geological considerations and transportation, housing and other "social infrastructure" resources.

Herrington insisted political considerations would not play a role in which site was picked, and he scheduled his announcement after Election Day in order to quell such concerns.

Herrington's choice must be submitted to President Reagan, who is expected to designate a site formally before leaving office Jan. 20. But while Congress appropriated $100 million this year for research on the project, legislators still must decide whether the country can afford to proceed with construction of the gigantic project at a time of record federal budget deficits.

120,000 homeless after Chinese quake

BEIJING — About 120,000 people were left homeless or suffered property losses in the area hardest hit by a major earthquake in southwest China that claimed more than 1,000 lives, Chinese news reports said today.

The government, worried that relief crews have still been unable to reach some quake victims in the remote mountain region, planned to drop more emergency supplies into isolated areas by airplane, the official Xinhua news agency said.

In its first detailed account of the quake, which struck last Sunday in southwest Yunnan Province, the People's Daily, the Communist Party newspaper, said nearly 1,700 people were severely injured and that one village had been virtually wiped out.

The tremor, measuring 7.6 on the Richter scale and the worst in China since 1976, rumbled through the area Sunday night, collapsing thousands of homes and buildings and killing more than 1,000 people, according to reports from the region.

Pirates plague Straits of Singapore

SINGAPORE — Shipping officials, alarmed by the abduction of a cargo vessel captain by knife-wielding pirates on speedboats, appealed Thursday to other Southeast Asian countries to beef up anti-pirate surveillance.

An extensive search of the South China Sea area where pirates boarded the ship heading from Singapore to Jakarta has not turned up any trace of Tsui Hung Ting, the 55-year-old captain from Hong Kong.

Fu said there have been no ransom demands or any other communication from the band of 12 men who caught up to the Hai Hui in speedboats Friday and boarded the ship with long knives.

A duty seaman spotted the group and tried to alert the rest of the crew. By the time they reached Tsui's cabin, it was ransacked and deserted.

Chinese official to visit Moscow Dec. 1

BEIJING — China's foreign minister will begin a long-awaited visit to Moscow on Dec. 1 for high-level talks on improving Sino-Soviet relations and a possible summit, the Soviet ambassador to China said today.

Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky cautioned, however, that while a summit between Chinese leaders and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is likely, it was "not certain" and will depend on the meetings between the Chinese and Soviet foreign ministers.

Troyanovsky also said at a lunch with foreign reporters that this week's talks in Paris on a settlement in Cambodia — currently the major obstacle in improving Beijing-Moscow ties — had made some progress.

Soviet diplomats said Shevardnadze is expected to make a return visit to Beijing in late January to continue groundwork for a summit. Gorbachev and Chinese leaders have repeatedly expressed interest in such a meeting.

Iran, Iraq to exchange wounded POWs

GENEVA — Despite a new agreement to exchange sick and wounded prisoners, U.N. mediator Jan Eliasson says Iran and Iraq remain divided on all other issues blocking a permanent peace settlement in the Persian Gulf war.

Officials said Wednesday the two sides had agreed to allow the International Red Cross to begin exchanging all 1,526 registered sick and wounded prisoners of war on Nov. 20.

But Eliasson told a news conference the two sides were still far apart on all other issues.

He said the key unresolved issues were the withdrawal of forces to recognized borders, the repatriation of all POWs and the drafting of a permanent settlement.

The adversaries also agreed that wounded POWs who have not been accounted for will be registered and repatriated by Dec. 11. The two sides took about 100,000 prisoners during their eight-year war that ended Aug. 20 with a U.N.-brokered cease-fire.

'Kristallnacht' remembered with candles

Candles flickered through the night in synagogues across the nation and white light bathed the Empire State Building to mark the 50th anniversary of Kristallnacht, the "night of shattered glass," when Nazi stormtroopers torched temples and terrorized Jews in a haunting prelude to the Holocaust.

Jews in every synagogue in the United States lit candles Wednesday that glowed into today's dawn to symbolize Jewish survival of the Holocaust, and church congregations in many cities tolled bells at 7 p.m. to mark the onset of Adolf Hitler's 1938 attack.

But in the New York City borough of Staten Island Wednesday, vandals defaced the outside of an ice cream parlor owned by a Jewish man, an act police deemed a crime motivated by bias.

Fifty years ago Wednesday, hundreds of brown-shirted Germans working under official orders stormed through Germany, destroying 200 synagogues and 7,500 Jewish shops and arresting 20,000 Jews. By some estimates as many as 1,000 Jews were murdered in the first official pogrom of the Holocaust.

New York's Empire State Building tower, ordinarily lit in red and yellow during autumn, was aglow in white light through the night.

Skip killed 191, heading to Danang

United Press International

MANILA, Philippines — Typhoon Skip roared toward the Vietnamese port of Danang today after a devastating rampage across the Philippines that left 191 people dead, 161 missing and more than 1 million homeless.

The Manila Weather Bureau located Skip at mid-afternoon in the South China Sea about 200 miles east of Danang. The storm was moving west at 10 mph and was expected to touch land early Friday with reduced center winds of 75 mph, the bureau said.

The death toll compiled from Philippine relief agencies and the military climbed to 191 today, including 20 killed by tidal waves spawned by Skip's 110 mph winds when it struck Samar and Leyte islands Monday.

Another 39 deaths were reported earlier today on the remote island of Romblon, 170 miles south of Manila.

The Coast Guard meanwhile reported it had found poorly trained and incompetent crews working on vessels owned by Sulpicio Lines, operators of the ferry Dona Marilyn that sank with 501 people aboard during Typhoon Ruby Oct. 24.

The sketchy reports to the military Office of Civil Defense from Romblon were the first from the area since Skip roared from the Pacific Ocean across the central Visayan region. Skip left the country Wednesday and headed into the South China Sea.

The Department of Social Welfare and Development said another 37 people, mostly drowning victims, were reported to have died on the southwestern island of Palawan, where 121 people were reported missing. The Office of Civil Defense said 40 people were missing elsewhere in the country.

There were 26 people killed in the Bicol peninsula, 200 miles southeast of Manila, most of them buried by rain-induced mudslides that crushed a small village at the height of the storm.

Another 41 people were drowned by rampaging floodwaters, hit by flying projectiles or battered to death by fallen trees in other parts of the country, relief officials said.

DSWD spokesperson Lulu Villasin said more than 1 million people fled to churches and school buildings set up as evacuation centers. Property damage was estimated at $33.3 million, a civil defense spokesman said.

Skip aggravated the havoc caused two weeks earlier by Typhoon Ruby, which took the lives of at least 300 people including 150 found dead after the sinking of the Dona Marilyn.

Coast Guard spokesman Lt. Francisco Mendoza said an inspection of vessels run by Sulpicio Lines showed the ships were seaworthy but the crews were "incompetent."

Mendoza said the crews responded inadequately to simulated emergency situations during the inspection by an interagency committee. "They should undergo further training," he said.

Survivors said the captain was among the first to flee the sinking ship in a life raft.

Workers fired after ending Gdansk strike

United Press International

WARSAW, Poland — Authorities fired several workers who participated in brief wildcat strikes at two Gdansk shipyards after Solidarity leader Lech Walesa made a personal appeal for an end to the unrest.

Scores of secret police Wednesday pushed workers out of the Gdansk Repair Shipyard as they ended the wildcat protest sparked by a government decision to close the neighboring Lenin shipyard.

As 150 workers in the Gdansk Repair Shipyard and another 40 in an adjacent yacht-building facility, the Wisla yard, ended their 24-hour protest, about 1,000 students at Warsaw University staged a rally demanding the Lenin shipyard remain open.

The government's announced closure of the Lenin shipyard, the cradle of Solidarity, shocked the whole of Poland and pitted the overwhelming majority of Poles against Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski's decision.

Angry workers at the two other Gdansk shipyards had refused to heed a request by Walesa to refrain from taking any immediate strike action. Walesa said Solidarity had to determine first whether workers elsewhere in the country would support a nationwide strike.

The wildcat strikers conceded defeat Wednesday on the second day of their stoppage, and then several were fired from their jobs. "No one joined us. No one supported us, so the strike committee decided to end the strike," one participant said.

Walesa, who had sent one of his lieutenants to the yard to persuade the workers to end their strike, took credit for the development at a news conference.

"I thank the strikers for obeying me and ending the strike," he said. "I hope we shall struggle together once more (in the future)."

One striker who requested anonymity said more than 100 secret police and shipyard guards pushed the strikers out of the repair shipyard when they finished the protest. "All 40 who were on strike in the Wisla yard were fired by the director," the striker said.

Polish television said "an unspecified number" of workers were also fired from the repair shipyard. A spokesman for the strike committee, Lech Kosciak, said perhaps 70 were fired.

When the protest was over in Gdansk, students in Warsaw condemned Rakowski's decision and called on other enterprises and institutions to stage protests across the country.

Solidarity activist Mieczyslaw Jankowski described Rakowski's decision to close the Lenin shipyard beginning Dec. 1 as "a war declared on the Polish workers."

Troops ordered to shoot rebels in Sri Lanka

United Press International

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Thousands of foreign tourists were being evacuated from Sri Lanka, where the government ordered troops to shoot on sight demonstrators backing a crippling strike led by radical nationalists.

With public services severely disrupted and the political crisis expanding rapidly, the first wave of an estimated 7,000 foreign tourists boarded chartered planes Wednesday to begin a government-ordered evacuation of visitors to the Indian Ocean island nation.

Military personnel were pressed into duty Wednesday to keep public services operating after telephone and telex lines were cut and public transportation and gasoline supplies disrupted.

Official sources said President Junius Jayewardene also is considering granting security forces indemnity from prosecution to give them wider latitude against the strike leaders, extremists of the Janatha Vimukti Peramuna, or People's Liberation Front.

The radical front includes ultranationalists of the ethnic Sinhalese majority, who are enraged at Jayewardene for signing a July 1987 accord with India that was designed to end a war for independence by rebels of the country's Tamil minority.

The Sinhalese extremists oppose concessions granted the Tamil guerrillas and Jayewardene's invitation to India to deploy troops to enforce the accord. They have demanded Jayewardene appoint a caretaker government.

Acid rain causes Soviet children to lose hair

United Press International

MOSCOW — Soviet specialists believe that acid rain from across the Polish and Romanian borders may be responsible for a mysterious illness that has caused 113 children in the city of Chernovtsy to lose their hair, Soviet newspapers said today.

The Communist Party daily newspaper Pravda, quoting Health Minister Yevgeny Chazov, said the strange disease that affects the central nervous system and causes shedding of hair has struck mostly fair-haired blue-eyed children between the ages of six months and 14 years in the Ukrainian city.

Hallucinations and irritability are other symptoms of the disease. Most of the children are being treated in hospitals in Kiev, the Ukrainian capital and in Moscow.

Trud, the official newspaper of the nation's trade unions, said the situation is deteriorating with at least 16 new cases reported last week among the city's 37,000 children under 14 years of age.

Both Trud and Pravda said initial suspicions that the disease was caused by residual fallout from the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear power station disaster in the Ukraine some 400 miles to the east has been dismissed by doctors and scientists.

IN BRIEF

HOCKEY

No joke, Sabres top Flames

A total of 12 shots on goal in three periods? Laughable... especially when they're enough to win.

"If it took 12 shots or 200, we just wanted to come out with some points," Sabres Coach Ted Sator said after his team's 3-2 victory over the Calgary Flames at Buffalo, despite their franchise-low shots total. "Sometimes we have to have Lady Luck smiling on us, and maybe she smiled our way tonight."

The Sabres had not been held to so few shots since totaling 14 in their inaugural game, Oct. 15, 1970.

In the face of the ridiculous loss, Flames Coach Terry Crisp laughed himself.

"I think the Buffalo forwards should give our defensemen hell their paychecks," he said jokingly, "because on two of their goals they took it off our defensemen's sticks and poot it was in the net."

TENNIS

Navratilova, Evert advance

CHICAGO — Defending champion Martina Navratilova and second seed Chris Evert Wednesday advanced to the quarterfinals of the $250,000 Virginia Slims of Chicago.

Navratilova, the top seed, easily won her first round match Wednesday night against unseeded Amy Frazier, 6-0, 6-3.

Evert, who was making her first appearance in the Chicago tournament in eight years, gained automatic entry into Thursday's quarterfinal round when unseeded Stephanie Rehe withdrew because of an injury.

No. 3 seed Gabriela Sabatini advanced with a 6-0, 6-2 victory over unseeded Kathy Rinaldi, and No. 5 Helena Sukova advanced by defeating unseeded Robin White, 6-4, 6-4.

In other matches Wednesday, unseeded Lori McNeil, who upset eighth-seeded Claudia Kohde-Kilsch Tuesday night, became an upset victim herself, falling to Romalyn Fairbank. McNeil is ranked 13th in the world while Fairbank is No. 42.

FOOTBALL

Bills' Garner suspended

NEW YORK — Buffalo linebacker Hal Garner and Oilers nose tackle Doug Smith were suspended for 30 days by the NFL for substance abuse, the league announced Wednesday.

Smith was in the middle of his finest season with 32 tackles, three sacks, one interception, one fumble recovery and three deflected passes. He was one reason the Oilers' defense had steadily improved, and he had strong performances against Washington and Cleveland the past two weeks.

Because of NFL rules, we're not allowed to make any comments whatsoever. Oilers Coach Jerry Glavinie said after practice Wednesday in Houston. "I'm not trying to avoid anything. The bottom line is I talked to the league and the only people who are legally allowed to answer any questions is the league office."

BASEBALL

Astros want to keep Ryan

HOUSTON — Astros General Manager Bill Wood has turned his attention to signing free-agent pitcher Nolan Ryan now that Art Howe has been named the team's new manager.

In addition to trying to get Ryan signed, Wood also must decide which free agents he wants to re-sign, study possible trades and hire managers at the Class AAA and A levels.

All those decisions must be made before Houston's April 4 season opener against Atlanta.

Wood said he and Ryan talked briefly Monday, agreeing to put off further discussions until the aftermath of the Howe signing. Meanwhile, Ryan also has been contacted by the California Angels, the American League team for which he pitched from 1972 until 1979.

Seminole Community College will have its hands full this season as it lacks the size of most of the state's teams.

Control key word for SCC

Small but talented Raiders hope to contend for league title

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

Seminole Community College coach Bill Taylor is looking for his team to play control basketball this season and make up for its lack of size. The Raiders must play intelligently, and take advantage of every opportunity they get.

SCC, which has reached the state semifinals the past two seasons, is in somewhat of a rebuilding year and for the first time in three years without a true big man.

The Raiders though, will try to compensate for the absence of bulk in the paint with a number of players who will have to dominate for them to be successful.

"I think it's going to be a very, very long year," Taylor said. "We're small and we're not going to play off someone's game, and we will hurt as well.

Another problem starting Seminole in the late fall is lack of experience. Only four players return from last year's team that nearly upset Miami Dade South in the semifinals. Those four should all start this season and will have to play a major part for SCC to be successful.

Leading the Raiders' 2-0 start this season is Terrell Barnes who has scored 49 points in two games. Barnes has also been a force on the boards in the early going and must continue to do so throughout the season. Barnes, a 6-3 sophomore forward, is the top scorer returning from last year's team and was one of the top freshmen in the Mid-Florida Conference a year ago.

Vincent Emerson is another Raider who must contribute, both offensively and defensively, for SCC to stay in the race for the MFC title. Emerson, 4-10, 160, averaged just under 10 points a game last season but led the state in shooting percentage.

Guard Robert Thomas will have to be the outside threat for Seminole this season. Thomas played brilliantly at the end of last season and is hoping to pick up where he left off. Thomas, 5-10, will have to fill the shoes of the sharpshooting Malcolm Houston, who led the state in three-point field goals made and attempted for the past two seasons.

Robert Richardson is the final member returning from last year's team and will be called upon to hit the boards. Richardson, a tenacious strong forward center, is the wide body for the Raiders and will be called upon to stop opposing teams from dominating in the middle.

"Our game is in the middle and that's where we'll try to take it again this season," Taylor said. "We've been successful and I don't see

Brantley, Oviedo lead All-SAC

Lake Brantley's Dawn Gebhart and Oviedo's Liz Long lead the All-SAC First Team.

The First Team selections included Lake Brantley seniors Dawn Gebhart and Marianne Rodriguez, Oviedo seniors Anne Hollis and Suzanne Hughes, Seminole senior Liz Long and Lake Mary freshman Tara Lynn.

Gebhart is considered one of the best all-around players to ever suit up in Seminole County and has the potential to be an outstanding college player.

Rodriguez is the quiet leader of the Lady Patriots. Her performance as the team's setter has been instrumental in Brantley's climb to one of the top programs in the state.

Lake Brantley's Oviedo's Hollis is a superb all-around player, excelling in setting, serving and hitting.

Hughes has been a force at the net for Oviedo since her sophomore season and has been more dominating than ever in 1988. Hughes is hoping her senior season will include Oviedo's first ever state tournament berth.

Long had a brilliant season for Seminole High in 1988, leading the Lady Nobs to one of their most successful years ever.

Calvin made an immediate impact on the Lake Mary team and is the first freshman elected to the All-SAC First Team.

The All-SAC Second Team includes seniors Gretchen Mull and Dana Bush of Lake Brantley, senior Adrian Hillman of Seminole, senior Kerstin Colon of Oviedo, senior Leslie Barton of Lake Howell and junior Tammy Scott of Lake Mary.

Honorable Mention honorees include Bobbie Osborn and Kricket Snow of Seminole, Betsy Hughes and Serena Calderon of Oviedo, Fern Peters and Nina Lovstrand of Lake Mary, Heather Brann and Debbie McDonough of Lake Howell, Barb Billmeyer and Pam Wittig of Lake Brantley, Julia Callaman and Emily Rosenfield of Lyraux and Rene Bellamy of De Land.

Who's next?

Lake Brantley's Dawn Gebhart, seeing that her team is in control vs. Dr. Phillips, wonders who the next opponent for the Lady Patriots will be. Brantley will host the Sharks of Boca Raton Spanish River Friday night at 6 in the 4A-1 Section playoff. A berth in the state tournament is on the line.

Oviedo travels to Tampa Plant

Oviedo's Lady Lions hope to keep their impressive momentum going Friday when they travel to Tampa to take on Plant High's Lady Panthers. The match is set to start at 7:00 p.m. Oviedo, 22-2, trailed off 27 consecutive points in Tuesday's region match vs. Gainesville. Gainesville had built up a 9-3 lead in game one before the Lady Lion onslaught which resulted in a 15-9, 15-0 victory.

Viola gets AL Cy Young

By DAVID CORCORAN
Herald correspondent

WINNIE PARK — A press conference held at Sports Sports Bar Wednesday night, Frank Viola of the Minnesota Twins was named the 1988 American League's Cy Young Award winner by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Viola received 27 of 28 first place votes, easily outdistancing runner-up Dennis Eckersley of the American League champion Oakland A's with 148 points in Eckersley's 52.

Viola, 28, and a resident of Longwood, became the first Twins pitcher to win the award since Jim Perry won it in 1970.

Viola, the mainstay of the Twins pitching staff for the past several seasons, had an outstanding 1988, as he had a 24-7 win-loss record, a 2.64 ERA and 193 strikeouts in 255 innings pitched.

"I was on the golf course today, and I was a little lousy. I didn't know," said a very modest Viola, 1987's World Series MVP, and the winning pitcher in the 1988 All-Star game.

The event was a family affair for Viola as Frank was with his wife Jill, who's 8 1/2 months pregnant, his two children, Frank III, and daughter Brittany, Ann, ages 4 and 18 months, as well as brother Johnny, 24, sister Nancy, 22, and father Frank Sr. and mother Helen, as well as many of the Viola's Longwood neighbors.

Viola said he felt as good as he ever has about himself after his performance this season. "I was able to put the numbers on the board this year, and it was the best I could do. Then it was up to the voters at the end of the season. I didn't take anything for granted, and that's why it makes it much more enjoyable now to get the award."

Pay attention to drag setting

The average angler needs to pay more attention to the drag setting on his reels. A properly set drag will slip before the line breaks. Many factors, however, influence the amount of drag other than simply adjusting it. The drag setting. Your rod angle can increase or decrease drag. Both the amount of line on your reel and the amount of line that you have in the water also has an effect upon drag. Your drag washers will become warped if you do not release the drag after every fishing trip. Warped washers will also increase the drag and make it jerky.

Many experienced anglers opt for loose drag setting because of the many variables that effect drag other than the initial setting. A conservative drag setting for open water angling would be around 15 percent of the line's rated breaking strength. You can determine your drag setting by using a scale with your rod tip pointed directly at the scale.

their hands to increase the drag when needed. You can apply drag to a spinning reel by cupping your hand around the spool or by using your forefinger to "feather" the edge of the spool. You can add instant drag to a revolving spool reel by applying thumb pressure.

With a little practice the average angler can soon become skillful at applying extra pressure when needed simply by using his hands. In the long run, fishing with a looser drag setting and using your hands when needed will save you some trophy fish.

minnows. Bass are still a little slow, but Pussie Lake will pick up with dropping water levels.

Steve Gard at the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp said that the specks were going strong in Lake Meade and around the pilings of the new bridge. Bass fishing could be better, but definitely will improve with dropping water temperatures and falling water levels. Sunshines and strippers will also start to school in the near future.

The snook are still on a rampage at Sebastian Inlet with dozens being caught each night. One-ounce jigs are still the most popular offering, but Mirrolures and crankbaits will also do well. Most of the snook are running from 8-12 pounds, with an occasional fish in the 15-20 pound range.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports that offshore fishing is good when anglers can make it out. Dolphin and wahoo are being caught in good numbers from 90-240 feet of water. Bottom fish are moving in closer, and some nice catches have been made at Pelican Flats. Some nice king mackerel are being caught on inshore reefs and rock piles. Inside the Port, action is good with flounder and bluefish. Trout and reds are roaming the flats, of the Banana and Indian Rivers.

When using a drag, remember the bottom line—if your drag is too loose, you can always apply hand pressure to make your drag tighter. If your drag is already too tight, there is no way to compensate—something has to give, and it is usually your line.

Jordan's 52 sink Celtics

For NBA rookies like Brian Shaw, playing against Michael Jordan is something between a defensive challenge and a rite of passage.

Jordan scored 52 points, the most in the NBA this season, and set a Boston Garden record with nine steals to power the Bulls to a 110-104 victory over the Celtics. The triumph snapped Chicago's 12-game losing streak in Boston and was the first by a Central division team in 45 games at the Garden.

"I saw him on TV and he gives you all those moves and he looks spectacular," Shaw said. "But when you play against him you get a front row view, and that's what you find out that he's for real."

Jordan recorded a complete night. The NBA's defending Most Valuable Player connected on 18 of 33 shots from the floor, 14 of 16 from the free throw line and added three assists and two blocked shots to his array of spectacular baskets.

"I still haven't had any plays run for me this season," said Jordan. "So a lot of those baskets are coming off broken plays and second options. That shows you the patience of our offense."

With the 52-point showing, Jordan brought back memories of his personal playoff record 63-point game in Boston Garden April 20, 1986, a contest that Boston captured in double-overtime.

"Something about the Celtics brings out the best in me," said Jordan. "This is the first night of the season that I really got off to a good start."

Jordan's nine steals, eight coming in the first half, broke Larry Bird's Garden mark of eight set January 3, 1986 against New Jersey.

The win was the Bulls first in Boston after losing eight straight in the regular season and four in the playoffs. Chicago's last triumph in Boston was March 6, 1985.

"The 52 was surprising because I really didn't think he had that many at all," said Boston Larry Bird, who scored 18 points despite playing with Achilles' tendonitis in his right foot.

Boston starting guard Danny Ainge was sidelined with a sprained right knee.

Kevin McHale paced the Celtics with 27 points while rookie Shaw, making his first start, had 18.

Elsewhere, New York downed Washington 117-110. Cleveland crushed the Los Angeles Clippers 108-91. Detroit overcame Atlanta 101-95 in overtime. Milwaukee ripped Philadelphia 114-103. San Antonio drubbed Miami 117-93. Utah routed Sacramento 105-81. Phoenix topped Dallas 111-103. Golden State surprised Seattle 113-108 and the Los Angeles Lakers rolled over Denver 128-110.

any reason to change anything.

The top newcomers for Seminole will be 6-8 Nick Mikidalis, a transfer from Texas. Mikidalis will be playing both inside and outside for the Raiders as he can play with his back to the basket while possessing a fine shooting touch.

William "Wimpy" Woods will be the point guard for Seminole this season and it will be his responsibility to keep his team under control and avoid getting into a running game.

Lyman graduate T.J. Scaletta has also been playing well and should see some playing time throughout the season. Scaletta's hustle earned him a spot on the team and he has already sparked the Raiders several times this season.

"The guards have been playing real good defense," Payne said. "But they need to pick up their shooting, our entire team needs to start shooting better."

Two other players that figure to help the Raiders greatly this season are both from Kissimmee Osceola. Tommy Logan, a 6-3 guard forward who can shoot,

Ask for help to cure a urinary infection

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had my bladder removed and now I wear a bag. It seems very sour and I took antibiotics for an infection. My doctor said my urine caused the infection but seems unconcerned and never asked to see it. How should I care for it?

to be content with washing frequently with deodorant soap. Chlorophyll is useful only in absorbing the odor of bad breath; it will not affect body odor.

DEAR READER: Urine is normally sterile. Once it has been passed, however, it is easily contaminated by bacteria. Bacterial action on urinary components can lead to a foul odor. I suspect that the germs causing your problem came from the bag, not from the urine itself. The bag should be replaced or sterilized. Return to the urologist for an opinion and specific advice.

In addition, stoma therapists — professionals trained in helping patients with post-operative stomas — could be very useful in giving you guidance about how to take care of your troublesome problem. For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report, "Bladder and Urinary Tract Infections." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. DEAR GOTT: I have a terrible body odor. I don't eat onions or garlic. It's not underwear but all over. Would chlorophyll help?

DEAR READER: An unpleasant body odor can have many causes. Certain diseases, such as kidney failure, can produce this symptom. In addition, as we age, the constituents in our sweat change; we tend to become more "aromatic." Also, bacterial action on perspiration will release odors that are socially unacceptable. ## WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
Last summer, when Jim Mahaffey's team won the spingold team-of-four, Jim entered the ranks of sons who have won North American championships that their fathers had won earlier. Today's deal shows Jim making a full contribution to his team's victory by shrewd card-placing based on West's vulnerable overall.

South bid three diamonds on the way to four hearts to guide the defense if the opponents bid four spades. But West thought he could happily defend against four hearts with what looked like plenty of defensive tricks. He cashed the ace of spades, then the ace of clubs, and played a second club.

Mahaffey won the king of clubs and cashed the K of spades, throwing demands from his hand. It looks normal to now take a heart finesse. If it loses, return to dummy with the eight of hearts for a diamond finesse. But declarer thought it likely that West would have bid four spades if he held a singleton small heart or a heart void. And vulnerable overcalls are not loosely made at the championship level. To Jim Mahaffey, that spelled red kings in the West hand. So he ruffed dummy's third club with his nine of hearts and played ace and queen of hearts from his hand. That placed West on lead with no escape. A diamond would be into the A-Q, and a spade would allow declarer to ruff in dummy while shedding his losing queen of diamonds.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

Special Olympics athletes keep winning

LAKE MARY — The fact that everyone wins something in the Special Olympics makes it no less special. It is the participants, not the awards system, that makes the event memorable for the athletes and spectators alike.

At Seminole County's Special Olympics Indoor Games, held Saturday, Nov. 5, at Lake Mary High School, 143 athletes between the ages of 7 to adult turned out. All were mentally handicapped and all were fired with enthusiasm to do their best in their event.

Following an opening ceremony and parade of athletes—who were no less proud than their counterparts in Seoul, South Korea—contestants gave it their all in basketball, weightlifting, gymnastics and bowling.

The games is not an elimination event; all Seminole County athletes will advance to the District 7 Indoor Games on Nov. 19 at Colonial High School in Orlando, to compete with Brevard, Lake, Orange, Osceola and Volusia counties.

Tony Page, of Lake Mary High School, bench-presses 145 pounds during Seminole County's Special Olympics Indoor Games on Saturday at his high school. Page went on to dead-lift 225 pounds and win first place in the weightlifting competition.

Those who take first and second places in district games will proceed to the Area Indoor Games in January. Seminole County is guaranteed to have at least one representing athlete for the State Indoor Games in February in Tallahassee.

CORRECTION

Due to incorrect information given to the Herald, it was stated in the Oct. 30 edition that Elise Williams lived above a Goldsboro tavern in her childhood. Instead, Williams was raised in a house on 12th Street.

Grandma's open hand leads to empty hands for thankless kids

DEAR ABBY: Please comment on a new idea about gift-giving that my mother-in-law just came up with.

On her grandchildren's birthdays, Christmas, etc., she is planning to send money to one of her favorite charities and notify the grandchildren that a gift was made in their name in the amount of $1, rather than sending a personal gift to each of them as she has done in the past. It seems the reason for this new plan is because she has not received thank you notes from them in the past, and hopes this will teach them a lesson.

Abby, I agree that children should write thank you notes for gifts, and I am all for giving money to charities, but I question her decision. What will this teach her grandchildren about giving? What is her motive for giving gifts in the first place? Whatever happened to the job of Christian giving, and expecting nothing in return? And what about the golden rule?

I probably should have expressed my opinion about her decision at the time it was made, but I was so surprised that I didn't know what to say.

DISAPPOINTED DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Children cannot be expected to know what they have not been taught. Parents should teach children early that they may not play with, wear, eat or otherwise enjoy a gift until they have thanked the giver. I do not recommend continuing to give gifts to a child of any age who has not acknowledged previous gifts. Say what you will about "the golden rule" and the joy of "Christian giving." If Grandma chooses to teach thankless grandchildren "a lesson" by sending money to her favorite charity in their name rather than giving them gifts, I'm on her side.

True, one should give for the joy of giving, but when the receiver lacks the courtesy to say "thank you" the giving loses much of its joy.

DEAR ABBY: I am presently pregnant and unmarried. I tried to tell the man responsible the lives in another state, but he refuses to see me. Because of his behavior, I have decided not to tell him. I do not want to share my child with someone who doesn't have the time of day for us now. At the same time, I do not want to deny my child a father, although I am not sure he would be a good father. (Maybe no father is better than a lousy one.)

I would like to hear the opinions of people who never knew who their fathers were. I would also like to hear from men who have fathered children out of wedlock. Would any prefer not knowing they were fathers?

ALONE IN MINNESOTA

DEAR ALONE: You need not be alone. Get in touch with a woman's advocate group to help you make some important decisions. The father of your child has certain legal responsibilities to face. He may even deny paternity, so be prepared for a legal battle.

ADVICE

Every child has the right to know who his or her father is. One's medical history is vital if there's a hereditary disease in the family. My advice: The father to be should be informed either by you or an attorney. It's also a man's right to know that he has fathered a child.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a poem titled "Equality Day," sent to you by Kris Cavosie, who had found it in a newsletter published by the Nebraska Coalition of Women. You stated that the author was unknown.

Well, I am the author. I wrote that poem in 1973 when I first became aware of the need for women's liberation. However, I've always felt that the quest for women's liberation is not anti-men—that men as well as women have much to gain.

I am happy to allow non-profit organizations to use my poem. All I ask is that I be credited as the author. Over the years, this poem has surfaced in many publications. It's been fascinating and rewarding to see the distance this "child" of mine has traveled, and now it's made "Dear Abby."

NANCY R. SMITH, MANSFIELD, MASS.

DEAR NANCY SMITH: Thank you for coming forward to claim the credit you deserve. You are unquestionably the author.

DEAR ABBY: What do divorced couples do with photos of their times together? I haven't seen my "ex" in more than 10 years. We were married for seven years. No children. He has since remarried and has children.

I thought maybe I would send him all these pictures anonymously. I can't just throw them out.

Abby, if you were in my place, what would you do?

Dukakis reflects on election lessons

United Press International

BOSTON — A sadder but perhaps wiser Michael Dukakis is back to being governor in the wake of his Election Day loss, warning that the ugliness of the year's presidential campaign bodes ill for American politics.

Dukakis conceded at a post-election news conference that his failure to react quickly to attacks by Republican George Bush may have scuttled his Democratic White House bid, but he appeared at least publicly in good spirits Wednesday.

Assessing the outcome of his 20-month effort, a matter-of-fact Dukakis said he learned the hard way how seriously he could be hurt by negative campaign jabs from the rival camp. Citing specific distortions of his record on crime and the environment, he said "I could go on" but the point should be clear.

"One of the lessons of this campaign is you have to respond and you have to respond quickly," he said. "That may mean you have greater difficulty defining yourself, why you are running, ... but certainly given my experience this time, it means you have to deal with those kind of attacks."

While denying any lasting hostility, the three-term governor pointedly warned that the voters — shown by polls to be disgusted at the tone of the campaign — may "live to regret" the success of Bush's tactics.

"I had hoped it would be possible to run a good, strong, positive campaign without having to respond to those kind of attacks," Dukakis said. "It was a campaign that distorted my record and I think it did not set high standards for the kind of campaign we want for the presidency."

In an otherwise conciliatory speech summarizing his feelings at the close of a last-ditch drive for the White House, Dukakis said he was disappointed but sustained by other Democratic victories showing the party to be "alive and well and very strong."

Brushing aside the question of another presidential bid, the candidate said he regretted not outting the Republicans this year because "it was winnable."

"I gave it my best shot," he declared.

Dukakis returned to work immediately Wednesday, arriving at the Statehouse bright and early in apparent unwillingness to be seen as a weakened leader. He pledged to work hard in his remaining two years in office and would not speak about his future beyond that.

He did not dwell on criticism of Bush or his campaign chairman James Baker, the former White House chief of staff and treasury secretary who spearheaded the Republican attack.

"I believe in the redemption of souls," he replied glibly to a question about Baker's prompt nomination as Bush's secretary of state.

Dukakis said he would like to think his candidacy moved Bush to moderation on several issues and he expressed pride in the level of support he achieved.

"All my political career I've stood for the kinds of things I talked about in the course of the campaign," he said. "and 40 million-plus people voted for that record, voted for that agenda. ... So in that sense, we did get through."

"I'm proud of what we've done. I'll be back in the fight, doing everything I can to make sure that we respond to the real concerns of the people of this country," he vowed.

He maintained he could not "see a mandate" in Bush's 40-state, 426-electoral vote victory.

Bush could get 'more than he bargained for' with congress

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Over at the White House, where Republicans rule, George Bush is appearing promptly for peace with Congress. But under the dome of the Capitol, where Democrats call the shots, that may be easier said than done.

Democratic leaders listened carefully Wednesday as the vice president they know well, now the president-elect, urged cooperation between the executive and legislative branches when he enters the Oval Office in just 10 weeks.

Bush sounded a note of conciliation as he sought to soothe hard feelings from the bitter campaign while asserting his own new political power.

"I want good and open and friendly relationships with the U.S. Congress. I don't want us to talk at each other (but) to each other," he told supporters who welcomed him back to the capital from his adopted home of Houston, where he watched himself defeat Democrat Michael Dukakis Tuesday night.

"I will try very hard," Bush promised, but as a former Texas congressman he acknowledged his inability to get "everything my way."

Democrats maintained their control of the House and Senate Tuesday, adding slightly to their numbers in each of the chambers. Bush knows that since regaining the Senate from GOP hands two years ago, they largely have pursued their own agenda and that trend is likely to continue.

There is no love between Bush and House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., one of three men vying to lead his party in the other chamber next year, delivered some advice of his own sort Wednesday.

"If he wants confrontation," Johnston said of Bush, "like he did in the campaign, he will get more than he bargained for."

Likely areas of conflict for Bush include dealing with the budget deficit and arranging priorities for future federal spending. The vice president also drew himself a line with his campaign vow of "no new taxes."

Norman Ornstein, a political analyst at the conservative

American Enterprise Institute, predicted Wednesday that Bush will have no honeymoon with Congress of the sort other presidents have enjoyed.

"All of a sudden George Bush is no longer a pretender," Ornstein said, "and I don't see anybody saying, 'Let's give this guy the benefit of the doubt. Let's help him out.'"

West Virginia Sen. Robert Byrd, who won easy re-election but is stepping down as the chamber's Democratic leader in order to run the powerful Appellate to keep pushing its own proposals.

Bush insisted he will be able to work with Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, who called Bush a liar in the campaign for the GOP nomination and blames the vice president for not working hard enough to elect senators.

Bush also said he will be able to work with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, the Democratic vice presidential candidate, who was returned for a fourth term and will continue as chairman of the Finance Committee.

As the last Senate cliffhanger awaited a winner Wednesday, Democrats had 55 seats to the GOP's 44, a gain of one from the end of the 100th Congress.

The House, which adjourned this year with three vacancies and a split of 255 Democrats to 177 Republicans, shaped up as at least a four-seat and possibly a five-seat gain for Democrats. With one race unsettled, the majority had won 261 seats to 173 for the GOP. Republican Rep. Denny Smith of Oregon trailed challenging state Rep. Mike Kopetaki by about 1,200 votes.

One unresolved question about the Senate is who will be appointed by retiring Republican Gov. Robert Orr of Indiana to replace Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., now the vice president-elect.

Among the names mentioned are Quayle's wife, Marilyn; Lt. Gov. John Mutz, who lost his bid Tuesday to succeed Orr; and Rep. Dan Coats, R-Ind., who replaced Quayle in the House when Quayle ousted Democratic Sen. Birch Bayh in 1980.

The power of incumbency showed in both the House and Senate this year.

Thirty-three seats were at stake in the Senate, and 15

Democrats and 12 Republicans sought re-election. In the House, 27 of the 435 districts were "open" from retirements, resignations and deaths.

Of the open Senate seats, excluding undecided Florida, the Democrats held Wisconsin and lost Mississippi while Republicans held Washington and Vermont but lost Virginia.

Three-term Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., two-term Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., and first-term Sen. David Karnes, R-Neb., and Chic Hecht, R-Nev., all were sent back to private life. Weicker will be replaced by state Attorney General Joseph Lieberman; Melcher, by former farm broadcaster Conrad Burns; Karnes, by former Gov. Bob Kerrey; and Hecht, by Gov. Richard Bryan.

The others by and large had little trouble, although ultra-conservative Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., escaped with just a 1,200-vote win.

In the House, exclusive of Smith's difficulty, the story was the same.

House Democrats got two open GOP seats: Hal Daub's in Nebraska and Beau Boulter's in Texas. They also ousted four incumbents: Jack Danz in Illinois, Joe DioGuardi in New York, Mac Sweeney in Texas and Pat Swindall in Georgia, who faces a federal perjury trial.

Republicans won a big one in turning out 28-year veteran Fernand St Germain of Rhode Island, the House Banking Committee chairman under an ethics cloud, and they picked up the open seat in Florida that MacKay gave up to make his Senate race against Mack.

St Germain's loss opens a prized committee leadership post, and next in line is Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, chiefly known on Capitol Hill for flamboyant suits and rambling oratory.

The election did not show any significant coalition effect for GOP candidates behind Bush's landslide Electoral College victory, in sharp contrast to 1980 when Ronald Reagan swept 12 Republicans into the Senate and changed history.

Democrats have controlled the House since the 1954 election and they held the Senate for the same period until Reagan gave the GOP control for six years.

Administration enters transition stage

United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, elated that George Bush will follow him to the Oval Office, called the Cabinet together today to begin the process of transferring power to the new administration.

Bush arrived at the White House upon returning from Texas Wednesday, one day after his victory in the presidential sweepstakes. Reagan welcomed his vice president at a Rose Garden ceremony and said he interpreted the vote as a vindication of the administration's conservative policies.

"I think the mandate has been unmistakably delivered," Reagan said, asserting that Bush had helped make "our change now a permanent feature of American government."

"This is not the end of an era, but a time to refresh and strengthen our new beginning," he said. "In fact, to those who sometimes flatter me with talk of a 'Reagan Revolution,' today my hope is this: You ain't seen nothing yet."

Appearing overwhelmed by his victory and somewhat subdued, Bush called Reagan a "giant" and said, "It's sinking in, the enormity of all that has happened."

After the ceremonial welcome, which included Vice President-elect Dan Quayle, his wife, Marilyn, and Barbara Bush, Reagan and Bush discussed plans for the transition period and Jan. 20 inauguration.

White House chief of staff Kenneth Duberstein, chosen to head the president's transition team, arranged a breakfast meeting today with the Cabinet to give them their instructions.

Later in the day, Reagan was to preside at a Cabinet session to thank his advisers for their support and to tell them their resignations are expected by Jan. 20 to give Bush a free hand to make his own appointments.

Meeting with Reagan for the first time since winning the presidency Tuesday, Bush was grateful for his boss for going "that extra mile" to campaign for him.

Once viewed as a political moderate, the vice president who wrapped himself in Reagan's conservative mantle said, "I don't believe there's a case in modern presidential politics where a president has worked so hard to help someone else achieve this office."

Reagan opened his remarks

wearing a wide grin. "If anyone wants to know how I feel, just read our smiles," he said, a variation on Bush's trademark line of the campaign: "Read my lips — no new taxes."

Reagan also offered his congratulations to the defeated Democratic ticket of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas. Speaking to all the candidates, he said, "Each of you is better for it, and so is the country."

The president indicated he knew the candidates were tired of politics, but he could not resist delivering a few partisan shots and saying Bush got a mandate on "critical matters" to carry on his legacy.

Quayle, the junior Indiana senator, said he was "delighted to be part of the team." But he left after the Rose Garden appearance while Reagan and Bush got down to work.

Before adjourning inside the White House, the president said he approved of Bush's first Cabinet choice of campaign chief James Baker as secretary of state. Baker, who was Reagan's chief of staff and treasury secretary, "has been fine in every job that he's had here in the administration," Reagan said.
