Story Of Harding's Nomination Told To Lobby Investigators

Testimony Of Grundy Explodes Theory Of Penrose's Dictation During Conference

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(INS)—An intimate, close-up picture of the nomination of Warren G. Harding for the presidency in 1920 by one who sat in the conference "in the little smoke-filled room" in the Congress Hotel in Chicago was given the Senate lobby investigation committee today.

The member of that historic conference was Joseph R. Grundy, whose lobbying activities in favor of higher tariff rates have had him on the witness stand here for several days. Grundy was there what night in Chicago, and under instant questioning from senators today he gave his version of it.

Grundy denied at the somewhat popular theory that the late Boise Penrose "dictated" the nomination of Harding from his sickbed in Philadelphia. On the other hand he gave the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge credit for proposing Harding's name to the gathering in the hotel.

Grundy listed the conferees as George Harvey, late ambassador to England; Senator James E. Watson, Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah; the late Senator Medill McCormick of Ill.; the late Senator Frank B. Brandegee, of Conn.; former Senator James E. Wadsworth and former Senator William R. Calder of New York and himself.

"Was King there?" referring to the late John T. King, national Committeeman from Connecticut. "No."

"You and Harvey were the only men there not senators?"

"Why were you so honored?" "Only because I came from Pennsylvania."

"Did they know you were accustomed to raising large funds?"

"They didn't mention it."

"What was the business of this conference?"

"Well, Senator Lodge opened the proceedings and stated that as the presiding officer of the convention he had watched the proceedings with great interest," said Grundy. "He said he had come there in the interest of Leonard Wood and that developments around the convention had convinced him that the nomination of Leonard Wood would be ill-advised. He said he felt the nomination of Gov. Frank O. Lowman would likewise be ill-advised."

NEW ENTRANTS IN HERALD CONTEST ARE ANNOUNCED

Advertisement Shows Views Of Ship That Will Carry Winner

Of interest to new contestants in the Steamship Tour Campaign and to the general public will be the advertisement in today's issue in which are number of views, both exterior and interior, of the latest and most imposing steamship of the Clyde Line coast-wise fleet. Famous for its excellent service, the Clyde Line offers the last word in coastwise steamship travel, and throngs of northern winter visitors to Florida each year choose this means of transportation in preference to all others.

Two new workers, Miss Ira B. Wathen and Miss Hattie Lessing, were enrolled in the campaign the early part of the week and have already demonstrated that they are out to win by their preliminary efforts and the support pledged them and their relatives. Several additional entrants will also be announced before the end of the week.

The grand capital award in the Steamship Tour Campaign consists of 3 all-expense tours to New York City via the Clyde Line. The tour also includes meals and hotel accommodations while there. This liberal plan affords the winner a companion while enjoying the many attractions of the world's greatest metropolis.

The Hotel Manger, which will accommodate the winner and companion, is located in the very heart of the theatre and shopping districts and is conveniently situated to all important transportation facilities. The Manger, up-to-date in every respect, is one of the leading hotels of New York.

The advertisement today also stresses the fact that the competition is but three days old and that there is ample time for anyone to enter and win. No contest has a lead that cannot be easily overcome and one thinking of entering the competition should not form the opinion that those already enrolled have piled up big leads. As a matter of fact, entries are expected to be received all this week and in all probability, the early part of next week.

Those desiring to participate in the distribution of the prizes are asked to telephone or call at the Herald office, where the campaign manager will be glad to explain the details.

Boy Scout Official Addresses Rotary Club At Luncheon

Bressing the importance of the Boy Scout organization, G. M. Wakeford, resident of Orlando and Boy Scout executive of this district addressed the members of the Sanford Rotary Club yesterday at its weekly luncheon at the Yacht Club Tea Room, and called attention to the fact that the Boy Scout movement was the only one of its kind ever to have been successful.

Following Mr. Wakeford's talk, S. O. Shisholser, chairman of the vocational service committee, and H. R. Stevens, chairman of the county service committee, engaged in a debate upon the subject "Resolved that my committee be the host," the result being decided a tie.

Because of the approach of Armistice Day the next Rotary meeting will be of a patriotic nature, it was announced.

TIME LIMIT IS EXTENDED FOR TAX PAYMENT

City Commission Votes To Make Saturday Last Day In Which To Pay Poll Taxes

At a special meeting of the City Commission yesterday afternoon a resolution was adopted extending the time limit for the payment of poll taxes through next Saturday, and the City Attorney was authorized to institute suit immediately against the Forrest Lake Hotel for the collection of delinquent paving assessments, taxes and water bills amounting to $32,753.43. The Commission also decided to notify the Sanford Gas Company that it must repair city streets damaged in the laying or repairing of gas pipes.

The discussion over the poll tax question arose when Commissioner R. A. Newman said that a number of citizens had come to him with the statement that they were unqualified to vote in the coming primary because they did not know that poll taxes had to be paid 10 days before the election.

He said that in his opinion a large number of Sanford citizens would be disfranchised, as far as this primary is concerned, unless the Commission extended the time limit.

Judge George G. Herring, who happened to be present at the meeting, declared that a rigid enforcement of the poll tax laws would be palpably unfair to the citizens at this time since very few of them were familiar with the change in the City Charter providing for qualification 10 days before an election, and especially since there was a fine point of law involved as to whether the amendment actually applied to primaries or only to general elections. Mr. Herring further stated that nothing could be gained by a rigid enforcement of the poll tax laws since the City did not receive any part of the funds derived from poll taxes, and since the popular vote would necessarily be greatly decreased.

City Attorney Fred H. Wilson expressed the opinion that the City Commissioners could legally extend the time for the payment of poll taxes, and Commissioner Newman moved that a resolution be adopted extending the limit until Nov. 2. The motion carried.

Commissioner Newman called to the attention of the Commission the fact that the Sanford Gas Company had in several instances removed parts of the City's streets in laying or repairing gas pipes and had failed to leave these streets in their proper condition. The Commissioners voted to notify the gas company that it must have a permit from the City and must agree to return the streets to their original condition before suffering from exposure and in-

Miss Ione Ord States She Is Going To Tell All About Kraft's Death At Hearing

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 30.—(INS)—"Tomorrow I am going to tell just what happened when Jack Kraft met his death. I am not afraid to tell just what happened when Jack met his death. There will be no frills. I will tell the truth."

Questioned concerning her identification yesterday as Gloris Outer, a former student of St. Marks College, Southboro, Mass., Miss Ord admitted she had once used that name.

"I am Ione Ord, although when I was traveling abroad I used the name of Gloris Outer for effect," she said. "I told Taylor that was my name."

"But my real name is Ione Ord and I live in New York. But where, try and find out. That's my little red wagon," she said defiantly.

John McDoubrick, second officer of the steamer Creole, charged with the murder of Kraft, yesterday by photographs and a small medal he had won for pro-

LOST AIRLINER FIGHTS STORM, LANDS SAFELY

Multi-Motored Transport Plane With 4 Persons Aboard Had Been Missing 2 Days

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 30.—(INS)—Pilot James E. Dales today had beaten a two-day blizzard on the continental divide of New Mexico to bring his Western Air Express liner safe into port.

Dales landed his ship with two passengers and two other crew members aboard in a small snow-covered field near Treachado, N. M., Monday to save the ship and five lives.

After more than 24 hours of isolation during an intensely cold and ground search was begun to locate the powerful trimotored ship into the air and land it two hours later at Albuquerque, N. M.

By this time, Dales kept intact a record for safe flying for his company. The passengers were Dr. Abraham Ward, San Francisco dental surgeon and official of the Commercial Alloys Corporation and W. E. Merle, former big league baseball pitcher, now a New York buyer of woolen fabrics.

Dales flew into a blinding snow storm soon after leaving Holbrook on a scheduled trip to Albuquerque, en route to Kansas City. He turned to dodge the storm, and when it closed in about him, he made what he called a "precautionary landing" in the field.

He was 45 miles from a telegraph and five miles from the nearest house.

During a freezing day and night the crew and passengers took refuge in an abandoned house. During the second day of their wait, the plane's occupants were visited by a woman who had seen the ship come down, and walked five miles through the snow to offer aid.

At that time, however, Dales knew that a search was in progress, determined to get back to the air. After digging snow from around the giant liner's landing wheels, he made a perfect take-off.

Two hours later he was at the Albuquerque airport of the Western Air Express.

Dales said: "I could see down below not a very large place but it looked safe and I got down there and got down quick."

"We thought then that the storm would clear and so we waited at the ship with the idea of taking off later in the afternoon (Monday)."

"I found an old vacant house and we moved over there."

"By this time the snow was more than a foot deep on the ground."

"I built a fire then, but we like to freeze to death. Our food and water were gone."

"We stuck there until 1:30 P. M. (Mountain Standard Time)."

"It was just starting to snow again when we took off."

"The weather appeared impossible, and so I set the ship down at the first safe place I could find."

"I would have telephoned as I have avoided worry to relatives and friends, of those who were with us, but there was no telephone within many miles of where we were."

Mers was returning from a world-encompassing trip Dr. Ward was enroute from San Francisco to Fort Worth, Tex., to address a convention of 600 delegates of a dental society.

Three Persons Hurt When Train Wrecks

NEW ENGLAND, Oct. 30.—(INS)—Three persons were recovering today from injuries sustained yesterday when a southbound Alabama and Great Northern passenger train was wrecked killing the fireman and demolishing two coaches. The fireman, Forrest Adcock, of Birmingham, was crushed to death when buried beneath the coal in the tender. The wreck was due to a "split switch," railroad men said. The engine, a pullman car, two day coaches and a baggage car were derailed.

Those injured included West Daniels, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., the engineer, and C. L. Bryant, of Chattanooga, Tenn., baggage master.

Carl Mays Relieved

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 30.—(INS)—Revelation of a poison murder plot, through which two women met their death 13 years ago, loomed as a possibility today with the exhumation of Anderson, N. C., yesterday of the body of Mrs. Connie Garrison Tucker, former wealthy Atlantan.

According to Sam Murrell, Atlanta attorney, who secured the court order for Mrs. Tucker's disinterment and is having her vital organs analyzed for traces of poison by the South Carolina state chemist, Mrs. Tucker died here 13 years ago under highly mysterious circumstances which were not solved at the time of her death.

Mrs. Tucker, who left an estate with no direct heirs, said to be valued at $300,000, died suddenly within three days after an unnamed woman spent the night in the house in which she lived alone.

The woman became violent ill in the spring and died in a local sanitarium where it was said her death certificate has become lost. No investigation was made then.

Less than two months later, according to Murrell, the woman who spent the night at Mrs. Tucker's home died suddenly also under like circumstances.

Recently, Murrell said, he came into definite information that Mrs. Tucker died as a result of poison. He refused to divulge the source of his information and said at the same time he would accuse no persons of being implicated in her death until the chemical analysis is completed tomorrow.

STOCK PRICES SHOW ADVANCE IN DAY'S TRADE

Investment Buying Is Having Beneficial Effect On Market Which Cracked Open

By W. S. Cousins
International News Service
Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—All sections of the stock market showed the benefit of investment buying by powerful investment trusts, bankers and bullish traders today.

The back of the "bear drive" against the market was definitely broken, and, with confidence restored, the bulls set about building up the shattered positions which had been pulled down by the terrific crash in prices.

Stock trading was still carried on in enormous volume, the total sales approximating 4,000,000 shares up to the noon hour except for the weakness in a number of the motors and specialties.

Then they had gathered in a cut-in investigation of Washington liquor traffic.

The Times has been daily printing an exposé of vice conditions in the Capital, and the three reporters, Gorman, M. Hendricks, John E. Nevin, Jr., and Linton Burkett, have conducted the investigation upon which the articles were written.

All of the evidence gathered by the reporters was turned over to the grand jury, then the district attorney insisted upon their reporter revealing the sources of their information, which they declined to do on the ground of professional ethics.

Justice Peyton Gordon declined to admit them to bail, pending appeal of their sentences, and ordered them immediately into the custody of the United States marshal.

The Times announced that habeas corpus proceedings will be undertaken to obtain the liberty of the reporters.

The reporters might have stood on their constitutional rights and refused to testify on grounds of self-incrimination, but they waived their immunity on those grounds and elected to stand on the right of newspaper men to protect their sources of information.

They further informed their stand by declaring that if they testified "stool pigeons" and divulged sources of their information they would lose their positions, be unable to obtain employment on other newspapers and would be "forever held up to public disdain, scorn, ridicule and contempt."

Justice Gordon took a contrary view. "It is the duty of every private citizen," said the court, "when they know a crime has been committed to give testimony before the grand jury to enable the government to prosecute the criminal, and it is also your duty to respond as a witness to those questions."

Several Hurt When Tornado Hits City

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 30.—(INS)—Five persons were known to have been injured, one perhaps fatally, by a tornado which swept through the suburbs of Houston today. Property damage was heavy, with houses wrecked and numerous roofs lifted. R. B. Works, who sustained internal injuries, was the most seriously hurt. His wife and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Martin sustained numerous cuts and bruises and Edwin Kover was slightly injured. The Works home was destroyed, as was the Martin home, parts of which were carried for more than 600 feet.

45 DAYS GIVEN 3 SCRIBES CHARGED WITH CONTEMPT

Washington Times Reporters Refuse To betray Confidences

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(INS)

Three reporters for the Washington Times were adjudged guilty of contempt of court and each sentenced to 45 days in jail today because of their refusal to disclose to a District of Columbia grand jury confidential information.

Stock trading was still carried on in enormous volume, the total sales approximating 4,000,000 shares up to the noon hour except for the weakness in a number of the motors and specialties.

The Times has been daily printing an exposé of vice conditions in the Capital, and the three reporters, Gorman, M. Hendricks, John E. Nevin, Jr., and Linton Burkett, have conducted the investigation upon which the articles were written.

Justice Peyton Gordon declined to admit them to bail, pending appeal of their sentences, and ordered them immediately into the custody of the United States marshal.

The opening of the exchange next Monday will be at the usual hour. This announcement came at a time when the market was stagnating a splendid come-back from the recent disastrous slump in prices of the reporters.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., "the grand old man of oil," who retired from business to public life in Dec. 4, 1911, took cognizance of the situation in Wall Street by coming forth with a statement on market conditions—a wholly unexpected procedure.

Like other prominent Americans, Mr. Rockefeller pointed out that "the fundamental conditions in the country are sound." The former "oil king" sees nothing to

Washington Editor Is Cited For Contempt

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (INS) — Dan E. O'Connell, city editor of the Washington Times, was cited for contempt of court yesterday by a District of Columbia grand jury because he refused to give the grand jury the sources of his information concerning crime conditions in the Capital. The Times has been exposing vice conditions in its daily issues for seven weeks.

O'Connell went before the grand jury with a long list of places where liquor is alleged to be sold openly. The grand jury declined to permit him to testify until he revealed the source of his information. Upon the editor's refusal to do this he was cited.

SANFORD LOSES FOOTBALL GAME TO DELAND BOYS CONVERGING METEORS!

By Burris Jenkins Jr.

Adults, Too, Prefer "No Dosing" for Colds

Millions Adopt External Remedy Made Famous As Treatment For Children's Colds

A generation ago, when Vick's VapoRub was originated, the idea of treating colds with "dosing" was almost unheard of. Today, the whole trend of medicine is away from needless "dosing."

Mother's of young children especially have been quick to appreciate this better external method of treating colds, because there's nothing to swallow and, of course, nothing to upset little ones' delicate stomachs. Year by year more and more adults, too, have found Vick's equally good for their own colds. Just rubbed on, Vick's absorbs through the skin like a poultice or plaster, and, at the same time, it relaxes medicated vapors which are inhaled direct to inflamed air-passages.

Increasing demand for the better method of treating colds is shown in the familiar Vick slogan, made famous when Vick reached "17 Million Jars Used Yearly," later raised to "21 Million"—there are now "Over 2 Million Jars Used Yearly."

SURPRISED AT WAY IT HELPED

Cardui Taken By a Missouri Lady Who Had Been Weak, Nervous.

Poplar Bluff, Mo.—"My health has been much better since I began taking Cardui," declares Miss Kate Orisham, 544 Maple Street, this city. Miss Orisham tells below how she has suffered:

"I was weak and nervous, felt tired and achey all the time. My back and limbs ached so badly I could hardly stay on my feet long enough to cook a meal.

"I spent most of my time resting and trying to get enough energy to do my work.

"I would go along, trying first one thing and then another. I seemed to get no better.

"One day I read about Cardui and thought I would try it. I got a bottle and was surprised the way it helped me. I got another bottle. My strength began to come back and I gained in weight. I am pleased to say I can do my work and no longer feel those tired, aching pains."

Cardui is a reconstructive tonic, extracted from herbs of long-known medicinal value.

STOCK PRICES SHOW ADVANCE IN DAY'S TRADE

It was the first time in years that Mr. Rockefeller had felt it necessary to inject his personality into a business crisis. Wall Street reacted with enthusiasm to the statement.

"My friends and I are all buying stocks. The list is now filled with bargains," John J. Raskin, political and industrial leader, made this assertion today.

"Nearly all the Standard railroads stocks are cheap," he added. He expressed the opinion that the recent decline will have only a temporary effect on general business conditions.

Baskin declared that prudent investors are now buying stocks in large quantities, and that they will profit handsomely when this hysteria is over.

Regardless of regrettable speculative uncertainties, the industrial and commercial structure of the nation is sound," he revealed today. Guggenheim is scheduled to leave for Havana in two weeks.

Upon this statement, bidders to a financially nervous country night by Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, the government apparently decided to stand today. Plodding his personal fortune of millions, Julius Rosenwald has guaranteed the stock market accounts of 40,000 employees Sears, Roebuck & Company, according to a copyright story today in the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Rosenwald's action was to protect his employees from the danger of having their savings swept away by present market tendencies, according to the story.

The announcement was welcomed today as a "bull" factor which may assist in ending the present slump and help with an upward trend in trading here.

The accounts are guaranteed regardless of what stocks are represented, according to the Rosenwald's plan. The millionaire executive of Sears, Roebuck & Company formulated the plan after the disastrous plunge of prices last Thursday.

During the afternoon bridge progressions were enjoyed by the guests and later scores were added and prizes awarded. High scores were an iridescent vase, won by Mrs. George Herbst, while low score prize, a deck of playing cards was presented to Mrs. John Zerfner.

Norris Will Run For Re-Election To Defy Hoover

(Continued From Page One) will be substituted for him. For more than a quarter of a century Norris has been a consistent and outstanding insurgent in Congress. With the late "Hoover-Falstaff" he shared the leadership in virtually every revolt against the party, much more than was taken place in that time, beginning with the overthrow of "Cannonism." In the House 20 years ago, and continuing down to today when he is opposing administration policy in tariff and methods of farm relief.

"I offer no apology for the course I have pursued," said the Nebraskan, after a lengthy review of his record of opposition. "And the only promise I now make is that if I am re-elected I will continue to pursue it. If it is the judgment of the people of Nebraska that my course has been wrong—if they want a senator who cares more for party regularity than should select some one else to take my place."

The whole insurgent group of the Senate, which numbers vary only from eight to 12 and includes such figures as Borgh (R) of Idaho, LaFollette (D) of Wisconsin, probably will come to the aid of the veteran Nebraskan for personal as well as political reasons.

When Not to Make Up

She was sunburned, sallow, pale and peaches & cream. A perfect example of what happens to an overconscientious lady with a big job and an overexacting chief.

"Heydays," Madge, why do you use some rouge and lipstick?" demanded her best woman friend. "Really, you look awful!"

"Well, rouge and lipstick would only make me look awfully right now!"

"Nonsense," quoth the best friend. "Rouges and lipsticks were made to make people look better."

"Yes, when they already look good. Wait till I get dressed up and begin looking human again. Then I'll go back to the make-up."

And Madge was right. At least she thinks the Beauty Shop. Not so short of an artist can make up a sallow face and pale, anemic lips well enough for them to deceive the eye of the average beginner. Look around you, dandies. Which are the women with the most subtle, most enviable face decoration? Of course, the ones with the background of a healthy skin and healthy lips.

"Oh, but they don't need makeup," you may say. All out they do for starters. Otherwise, it's the sophisticated stage of ours, one looks like a dairymaid fresh from the hills. Pretty enough in a peasant costume against the pastoral background, but not so good at the opera, among the rare orchids that bloom in big cities.

What a lot of beauties we'd see if all the sallow, tired ones would think as Madge thinks—and do as she is doing right now. Keeping regular hours, eating lots of head-frying vegetables, swimming and walking, taking life easily in a word, getting her skin and lips and eyes ready for the luxury of makeup!

It is so easy to do all the wrong things to ourselves and then cover up our misadventures with a coat of powder and rouge. But do we get away with it? Not where there are keen eyes and this decent sort of light. Madge eyes are eagle eyes when it comes to makeup, because of old prejudices, to be sure. But if we are healthy-skinned and clever even they can be deceived. As witnesses they are deceived by those agreeable ladies who care for themselves within and without.

Maybe we have said it here too often, but the fact remains. Make-up is not a substitute for a good complexion. In, it is the accent to a good complexion. The right sort of finishing touches rightly applied make good-looking people better looking people and beautiful people irresistible.

10-Year-Old Prodigy Gives Inquiring Reporter Merry Ha-Ha In Short Interview

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(INS) Probably the most sophisticated kid in kidland is 10-year-old Ben Jack. He came from Germany with his father, Arthur Mundstuk, a chemist, a year and a half ago, to make fame and fortune for himself in the movies.

When little Ben arrived in America, he could speak German, French, Russian, Polish and Spanish—but no English. Today he speaks English like a professor and taught his father to talk it. Ben also speaks American as you shall hear.

Ben dropped in on me from Hollywood where he has already appeared in a number of pictures.

Using my best kiddie psychology I started on Ben with:

"Do you like ice cream?"

Ben, who has a hair bob like Jackie Coogan used to have plus a Gretchen touch, looked at me pitiably out of his lustrous brown eyes.

"Ha-ha-ha," he screamed. "Did you hear that, pa?"

I switched to another question as quickly as I could.

"What toys do you like?" I asked.

"Ha-ha-ha," laughed Ben, almost going into hysterics. "Do you hear what he's asking me, pa? What toys do I like?"

He was doubled up in merriment sufficient to cause his adult bow tie to scrape the cuffs of his long creased trousers.

"What are you—crazy or just a detective?" he finally demanded of me. "I don't like ice cream and hate candy. I like a drink of wine every so often, and don't believe in prohibition. But I never get drunk."

"I like to play chess and go to museums. The only toys I have are some playguns and when I grow up a little more I'll have real guns to play with, won't I, pa?"

"You don't like to play games?"

I inquired meekly.

"I like to play baseball—I like seeking a baseball," he admitted confidentially.

"How do you find the American boys compared to German boys?" I suggested.

"The American boys are much fresher," Ben answered.

Then Ben showed me how he could sing.

He gave a Hollywood parody on a famous army song which would have driven the Society Against Cruelty to Children quite cuckoo.

Next he recited a tale of a little cattle who met a little mouse in a great big cellulite and made an appointment with the mouse so he could eat him at nine o'clock sharp.

The little mouse didn't show up so the little cattle sought the little

HARVARD YOUTH DRIVES CAR FROM COAST IN 5 DAYS

College Student Requires 79 Hours Running Time For Trip

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 30.—His feet approaching the accomplishments of professional endurance drivers, a 19-year-old college youth, returning to Harvard from California, drove his Marmon roadster from Berkeley, Calif., to Boston in 79 hours of actual running time.

Making but three stops for food and one for rest during the trip, the young man spent only $97 in making the 2,600-mile journey in total elapsed time of 128 hours.

This sum included food, tire replacements, gasoline and oil and all other incidentals, and discloses the remarkable average cost of only 2.6 cents per mile. Although a coudouloir in Utah and a 12 hour wait for the opening of a blocked road in Nebraska delayed the journey, an average speed of nearly 37 miles an hour was maintained during the 79 hours on the road.

Thirty miles of the journey was made in low gear through heavy mud, during which three sets of tire chains were used.

Women frequently buy a thousand cigarettes at a time in a variety of colors to match their different dresses.

"But, no, against the popularity of the cigarette, pipe manufacturers in France are declaring that they will have to close down unless women regain their love of the pipe."

Colored cigarettes, of the same shades as the smoker's dress, are pink, blue, yellow, green, black, introduction of cigarettes in red, the latest fad. This has led to the and other colors, the paper being dyed with non-injurious vegetable preparation.

Fashion also decrees that the cigarette holder, case and matchbox must harmonize with the woman's dress.

"Women frequently buy a thousand cigarettes at a time in a variety of colors to match their different dresses."

"But, no, against the popularity of the cigarette, pipe manufacturers in France are declaring that they will have to close down unless women regain their love of the pipe."

Most of the food eaten by this college youth on the trip and his principal sustenance was in the form of a large chocolate cake given him by a friend upon his departure from Berkeley. Nevertheless, he lost a total of 12 pounds on the journey.

No trouble whatever was encountered with the Marmon 7B during the long trip, the youth reported on his arrival in Boston, tired and sleepy but satisfied that he had had "a real ride."

"I'm so sorry, little cattle," finished Ben Jack, imitating the mouse. "I guess I was so drunk I didn't know what I was talking about."

Ben Jack, played one of the former boys with Vilma Bánky in "The Awakening". He said he wrote his own scenario for "The Little Beggar" which his father produced.

Ben Jack's favorite movie actor is Charlie Chaplin and his favorite actress is Lily Damita. He intends to be a great movie actor himself some day. He displayed one quality which may help him in his way.

"Where will the story about me be printed?" he insisted.

I told him in hundreds of international News Service papers perhaps.

"Oh-hay!" shouted Ben Jack.

German Siberia' Plan Suggested To Thwart Plotter

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—(INS)—"German Siberia", that is, one of several places of exile in Germany for political criminals, is advocated by the Socialist and Democratic parties want to incorporate it in a new Protection-of-the-People Law as punishment for offenders against the Republic.

The bill which meant to substitute the former Protection Law, accidentally repealed in the Reichstag by a slim majority in summer, will be introduced during the Fall session and parties as well as journalists are busy at present working out draft of the bill.

According to democratic sources, the main feature of the new bill is a severe punishment of persons or organizations insulting the Republic, the Republican colors the Reich President or active Reich and State Ministers. These provisions were also contained in the old Protection Law.

The outstanding new feature of the bill are provisions demanding that continuous offenders shall be exiled and interned in certain districts in Germany. Very likely, this provision will meet with much resistance from the nationalist and moderate liberals. Political activity aiming to undermine the Republican form of state, membership in organizations conspiring to overthrow the Republic, participation in plans or conspiracies to assassinate or to instigate to persons on account of their political convictions will be dealt with much more severely than heretofore.

SYNOPSIS

Through a heavy rain a Continental Express train is flying across Europe towards Paris. Three men, Ivan, a Russian; Armand, a Frenchman; and Emil, a German, all friends and members of the same Weilberg Student Corps, ride the conductor and obtain a private compartment. Holding a pistol, standing they invite him to a seat, which trying to carry as a bribe with her. They are interrupted by the conductor who asks her a priest. Outside the door are two Americans, Jim Travis and Al, seeing the recent places, call Travis and they step into the compartment.

Al started into the compartment, followed by his friend. But Ivan, realizing the invasion about to take place, jumped to his feet and stepped forward, facing the intruders.

"Pardon me, but this is a private compartment," he said, drawing himself up in dignified manner, speaking in perfect Russian.

"Aw, keep your shirt on!" Al, not understanding, looked blank. Then an idea descended—an idea born of various experiences in Europe. He reached into his pocket, drew out a two franc piece, and deposited it unmercifully in Ivan's hand and sat down beside Armand.

The Russian, furious, yet amazed, stared at the coin, and then, as its significance penetrated his mind, threw it onto the floor and sank back into his seat, disgusted.

The light by the window had, for the first time since the entrance of the priest, turned around. She appraised the two new arrivals, then her gaze rested on Travis. Suddenly she smiled faintly yet slyly.

The three sat down together.

pathetically, and the man, feeling that at least here was one person who seemed to have no objection to sharing this compartment with himself and Al, started to cross towards the small space that remained between her and the priest.

Jealously, Armand, Emil and Ivan watched the American's tactics. As he sat down they smiled at the girl as though they had some common interest. But she merely returned the smile with a formal nod, again stared out of the window, and to the infinite satisfaction of the three primary cognitores, Travis, however, was still untaught. He felt that with due encouragement the girl might easily become interested, and there were yet many long hours of travel ahead. A companion who proved agreeable would not be at all amiss, and this companion was especially easy on the eyes, he decided.

He realized that others were watching him with hostile curiosity, so he determined to get the best of the situation. Finally, after a silent discussion with himself as to the most effective way in which to proceed, he extracted a cigarette case from his pocket and opened it. He extended it towards the girl. She turned, surveyed the offering as a satisfied cat might look upon a platter of old milk and shook her head, returning almost at once to her contemplation of the dark sea.

Disappointed, Travis snatched the case shut. But another idea struck him. Perhaps the girl had refused because the compartment was already stuffy and filled with smoke. Perhaps she would like to have the window opened. Attracting her attention again, he waved his hand through the hazy blue air to indicate the condition. Then he pointed to the window. The girl made no response. Whereupon he leaned over and, grasping the strap, lowered the glass.

A blast of wind and rain swept through the enclosure. The girl caught her cloak about her, trying to shield herself from the insinuating storm, and in so doing fell into the arms of the man beside her.

RUSSIAN TIPPING SYSTEM REMAINS DEEPLY ROOTED

Hotel Clerks Refuse To Do Anything Unless Given Extra

By Edward L. Deuss
International News Service

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

MOSCOW Oct. 30—Tourists who come to Moscow expecting to find themselves free of the tipping system, are still deeply rooted. At the frontier station porters are forbidden to accept tips, but the first tilt with a porter at the Moscow station puts an end to the dream of a tipless country. The porter who carries one's bags from the train to a taxi looks deeply grieved if he is given less than two rubles (40).

Unless the traveller is fortunate enough to get a state taxi with a meter, the ride from the station to the hotel, a matter of fifteen minutes, will cost anywhere from three to five dollars. But it is at the hotel where the real tipping begins.

Hotel Service

"Try not tipping in the Grand Hotel and see how far it gets you," said a priest, active in a Moscow newspaper, which calls the hotel, the center of Moscow tourist life, "a relic of pre-revolutionary days, where the employees won't turn away without a tip."

There are other reasons why Americans are inclined to consider the hotel's "pre-war"—from three to five dollars a day for rooms frequently without even running water, insufficient service, expensive and none too palatable food, red tape and frequent impertinence on the part of the clerks, all contribute to the impression. Ask a hotel clerk how to reach even a well known part of the city, and nine times out of ten he will misdirect you; ask him when the trains leave for any point, except perhaps Leningrad and Warsaw, and he will be unable to tell you; he will be too busy to look it up in the rail-road guide.

Women's Experience

Two American women recently arrived in Moscow hotels, when they discovered, well after midnight that they had locked themselves out of their apartments. The hotel clerk not only refused to give them a room, because in the first place they had a room in the city, and the law, according to him, forbade their staying in a hotel, and in the second place, didn't have their passports within them, but actually turned them out of the hotel, to ride around the town most of the night in a trolley.

The hotel clerk's parting shot was that two women in the streets of Moscow after midnight without documents identifying them were very likely to be arrested and he looked pleased at the prospect.

It was an accident. Please pardon me," he said.

"You are pardoned, certainly," the priest smiled gently, half closing his book and marking his place with his forefinger. "It is the Master's command that always we forgive one another."

"The Master!" The big Russian broke into the conversation with a hard, cynical laugh. "The master of this world is Power—there is no other."

Armand, however, chuckled tightly. "Ah, no, my friend, I disagree. There are no masters at all in this world—there are only mistresses." He glanced at the girl by the window with a little, mocking smile.

"They are pugnacious, aren't they?" the priest smiled gently, half closing his book and marking his place with his forefinger. "It is the Master's command that always we forgive one another."

TARS, Oct. 30—Spaniards are coming to Paris this winter by way of the French dressmakers who have been influenced by contemporary and modern Spanish costume in the ones they are making for Madrid's Champs Elysées.

The itinerary for the first day, prepared by a committee of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, includes a visit to the White House, where they will be received by President Hoover; a meeting at the Department of Commerce, where they will be addressed by Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont and other officials of the department, and a gathering in the early evening at which the delegation will entertain senators and congressmen from New England, representatives of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

On the second day program is an address by Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, and a luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

A continuation of the police initiated by Charles E. Hughes, when he was secretary of state. It found expression in the separate treaty of peace with Germany, and in the official aloofness which this government maintained toward the Dawes plan, and toward the Young Plan which is now speeded up.

The policy of direct negotiations with Germany in the matter of these payments is, however, but the agreement will be embodied in treaty form and formally ratified by both governments.

The negotiations involve the payment by Germany of some $194,000,000 outstanding on the army of occupation costs and some $261,000,000 in mixed claims for damages to American nationals and property before and after America entered the war.

Secretary of State Stimson, while confirming the fact that negotiations are in progress, declined to give any details as to the proposed agreement.

The policy of direct negotiations with Germany in the matter of these payments is, however, but Fuchsia reds and pinks have been revived in dress silks and many of the new lame patterns seem to have been inspired by the Morish tracery on the walls of the Alhambra.

Now chiffon and velvet prints for winter show flowers which might well be suggested by the paintings on modern Spanish fans and there are gold cloths used for the richness of modern capes which recall the stiff patterned brocades worn by court ladies in Velasquez portraits. ### Political Police Of Russians Execute 18

MOSCOW, Oct. 30—(INS)

The ruthless campaign of the O. G. P. U. (Soviet political police) to stamp out all counter-revolutionary activity throughout Soviet Russia reached its high water mark today with the announcement of the execution of 18 persons in various parts of the country.

All of those executed—as nearly a score of others who were sentenced to exile, were sent back to their native districts with counter-revolutionary activity or espionage. Among those exiled were two women and four workers from the Russian church, now nearly extinct in Russia. The executions were carried out during the trials of 18 persons during the past week.

10-Year-Old Prodigy Gives Inquiring Reporter Merry Ha-Ha In Short Interview

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(INS)—Probably the most sophisticated lad in the world is 10-year-old Ben Hecht. He comes from Germany with his father, Arthur. Mendelsohn, a chemist, a year, and a half ago, to make fame and fortune for himself in the most cosmopolitan city in the world.

Ben, like his father, arrived in America, who speaks German, French, Russian, Polish and Spanish, too, English. Today, he speaks English like a native and taught his father to talk it. Ben also speaks American as you shall hear.

Ben has been dropped in on frameline, where he has already appeared in a number of pictures.

Using my best kiddie psychology I started on Ben with: "What's the matter, Ben?"

"I'm not feeling well," said Ben, who has a hair flip, like Jackie Coogan used to have, plus a Gretchen touch, making him all puffed up like a lustrous brown trout.

"Ha-ha-ha," he screamed, "Did you hear that, Ben?"

I switched to another question as quickly as I could.

"What do you like?" I asked.

"Ha-ha-ha," laughed Ben, almost going into hysterics. "Do you hear what he's asking me? What?

He was dressed in such a manner sufficient to cause his adult bow-tie to strangle the cuffs of his long-sleeved sweater.

"I'm not a man, or just a detective," he finally demanded of me. "I don't like ice cream and candy. I like the drink of wine, even though it's against my doctor's prohibition. But I never get drunk."

"I like to play chess, and go to museums. The only time I ever grow a little fatigued is when I grow up with, won't it?"

"You don't like to play games?" I inquired weakly.

"I like to play baseball! I like asking questions," he admitted confidentially.

"How do you find the American boys compared to German boys?"

"The American boys are much fresher," Ben answered.

Then Ben showed me how he could tie a knot.

He passed a Hollywood parody on a famous army song which would have driven the Devil himself to tears. "The Awakening" by Agnes Cruey to children quite choked. Now he's in New York, and a bit of a little cattle who has a look about the great big collects and needs no comparison with the use of "you could see him at a mile off, look sharp."

The little matador didn't notice the little cattle caught the little
