Boy crushed to death

NEW YORK — A 13-year-old boy helping his father crush cardboard boxes at a South Bronx supermarket tumbled into a compactor Monday and was crushed to death, police said.

Andre Duran Jr.'s horrified father, manager of the C-Town Supermarket, freed the child from the compactor and drove him to Lincoln Hospital, where the boy was pronounced dead, said Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell, a police spokesman.

The child, of Brooklyn, was stuffing cardboard boxes into the compactor when he became trapped. The compactor crushed his chest, broke one arm and severed the other before he was freed, O'Donnell said.

Masks malfunctioned in jet

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Passengers complain that some oxygen masks did not work properly when a 14-inch hole blew open in the rear of an Atlanta-bound Eastern Airlines jet a 31,000-foot, causing cabin decompression and forcing the jet to land in Charleston.

Some of the 140 people aboard the Boeing 727 were injured in Monday's mishap, and the jet landed safely, officials said. Investigators planned to inspect the hole in the jet's fuselage Tuesday in an effort to determine what caused it.

Passengers were forced to breathe through emergency oxygen masks when the cabin lost pressure about an hour out of Rochester, N.Y., officials said. The jet landed at Reagan Airport in D.Rain.

Several passengers complained that the oxygen masks failed to work properly.

My daughter was sitting with me, she was sitting in front of me, said passenger Elaine Davis. When the oxygen tank came down they didn't work for the children and that's what was scary.

They worked for a couple seconds, reported young passenger Corey McVey. Only a couple were working. There were a lot of complaints about that.

The cabin decompression occurred when the plane was cruising at 31,000 feet, and the pilot took the plane down to an altitude of 10,000 feet, Eastern Airlines spokesman Wayne Kransak said in Miami, where the airline is based.

Vikings beat Rams 28-17

MINNEAPOLIS — Los Angeles Rams' QB John Robinson has his himself to blame. After all, he converted Billy Brown to a defensive back.

It looked like they had the ball more than some of our wide receivers, said Robinson after Brown's defensive plays Monday keyed the Vikings' 28-17 wild-card playoff victory against the Rams.

I think he's the best player in all of football. I love John Robinson like a father, said Brown, who played for the Rams coach as a collegian at Southern Cal. But then business is business. There's no more of that rah-rah stuff now. We're both professionals now.

Brown intercepted two passes that the Viking turned into 14 first-quarter points. Sacked Rams quarterback Jim Everett for a 12-yard loss, made seven tackles and recovered Los Angeles' desperation onside kick attempt in the closing minutes.

Shoppers at Wal-Mart stood in line Monday to return their gifts.

Gift-returners mob stores

By LAURA J. SULLIVAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Yesterday, shoppers crowded area stores to return items that didn't fit or please, and to take advantage of Christmas bargains.

The gift-giving came full circle for many as gifts were returned to the stores where they were purchased within 24 hours after the wrappings were shed.

Stores like Wal-Mart were mobbed with customers wanting to return gifts. Most of the customers stood in line at special gift return tables set up in the aisles of Wal-Mart.

Elsewhere in the county, as in the rest of the area, stores reported brisk business Monday after Christmas, as bargain hunters and gift-exchangers tried malls and shops on their day off. And while shoppers in Sanford County browsed among shirts and jackets, midwest stores crowded to make Monday the first in a streak of store-closing days.

In Sanford, at the Seminole County Mall, by Long Valley and other shopping centers, gift returns and exchanges were a major attraction. Many stores, however, had limited the store's merchandise being accepted for return.

Martinez vows to balance budget without tax hike

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — The passage of Governor Martinez's budget bill appears to have established a period of political stability in Florida, despite new state spending plans that could increase the demand for services.

Gov. Bob Martinez said Monday he would challenge the state's budget, which includes a 10 percent increase in state spending, but he would not raise the state's tax burden.

The budget bill, which also includes a 10 percent increase in state spending, was passed by the Legislature Monday.

The budget bill also includes a 10 percent increase in state spending, but he would not raise the state's tax burden.

The budget bill also includes a 10 percent increase in state spending, but he would not raise the state's tax burden.

Several bills that would raise state taxes are needed to balance the state's budget, Martinez said. He is the governor of Florida, and he is responsible for the state's budget.

Although the state's budget is balanced, Martinez said, the state's economy is still growing rapidly, and the state's tax base is still expanding.

Don't get mad—take 'em to dispute court

By SUSAN LOEEN
Herald Staff Writer

AN ANTI-MAD—SOUNDING—program is being offered to help resolve disputes between neighbors and community groups. The program is being offered by the Seminole County Bar Association.

Since 1987, the Seminole County Bar Association Citizens Dispute Resolution Program has been helping to resolve disputes between neighbors and community groups.

The program is for lawyer Lawson, who arranges for a representative from a list of 15 volunteer lawyers to hear and mediate these disputes.

It also, she said, gives the complainant and the respondent a chance to tell their sides of a dispute without shouting and cursing, and to have someone else decide the party possibly tried to reach a resolution without taking the case to court.

The lawyers who hear the disputes, Lawson said, do not act as attorneys for either party, nor do they pass judgment. Instead, they listen to both sides, try to reach a point of understanding by all involved of the real issues, and come to a resolution that all agree to abide with on a voluntary basis.

It doesn't work in all cases, such as one recent case where a former employee claimed the employer was liable for an injury on the job. That case, Lawson said, will probably go on to small claims court.

These cases if not settled in dispute court, end up in small claims court after about a six-month wait for a hearing date, and with court costs added, Lawson said.

Weather superstation to help measure storms

United Press International

METEOROLOGICAL — A futuristic weather superstation that is the first of its kind in Florida and only the second in the nation is under construction here and is scheduled to go into operation in the spring of 1990.

It is expected to save lives by helping forecasters identify and measure the intensity of storms and wind shear.

The superstation will be part of a $300 million network of 114 high-tech posts expected to blanket Florida and the nation by the late 1990s, said meteorologist Paul Hebert, area manager for the National Weather Service in Florida.

This is going to be a whole new way of doing business, Hebert said.

Hopefully, we will be able to tell people planning activities in the short-term, greater detail about what's going on in smaller areas, he said. But we still won't be able to tell someone for certain if it's going to rain on his house at 4 p.m. tomorrow.

The centerpiece and first part of the superstation scheduled to be installed is the high-tech Doppler NEXRAD or next generation radar.

I-4 segment in Seminole County to be expanded

MORE THAN $200 million is expected to be spent this year to expand State roads 440 and 144 in Seminole County. That's the reason enough say officials of the Florida Department of Transportation to start the new year with a five-month project to six-year, this segment of highway.

It comes next Monday the project begins.

According to DOT contractor C. A. Meyer Paving Co., Orlando must maintain two lanes of traffic in each direction during daylight hours. Traffic will occasionally be restricted to one lane in each direction between the hours of 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. The first of these lane restriction periods will begin the evening of Jan. 2 and continue throughout the first 100 weeks of construction.

Meyer, which was awarded a $1.5 million contract last September, has been asked to work a six-day week to speed up the process.

According to DOT, the road project also includes construction of a storm water retention area on the east side of the highway. Material excavated for the reten-

Breakfast ignites fire station

HALLANDALE — Two firefighters preparing breakfast thought the other turned the stove off before they went on a rescue run, resulting in a fire that caused $10,000 in damages to the station, officials said.

"If it can happen to us, it can happen to anybody," said Acting Battalion Chief Martin McMahon. "We all come from the human race. We make mistakes."

The fire Christmas morning started when a pot of oil was left heating on an electric stove while the six people at the station went on a rescue call about 9:30 a.m. EST. McMahon said the pot was for potatoes being cooked for breakfast.

A businessman next door, Arturo Muniz, said he was passing by when he saw flames through the window of the dormitory. "I ran to the garage and looked inside. The two trucks were already on a call."

Just then a lifeguard on Hallandale Beach, Freddy Morales, walked by.

"I said to Freddy, 'Call the fire department,'" Muniz said Sunday. They laughed over the irony.

Morales got a fire extinguisher and Muniz broke a window at the back of the station. He sprayed the flames, just as firefighters had taught him a month ago, but cut himself on glass.

McMahon said the two cooks thought the other turned off the stove.

"We do tell people not to do that kind of stuff," McMahon said. Afterward, he reiterated the advice firefighters have given for years. "Never leave a pot on the stove when you leave. Never leave any cooking unattended."

McMahon said the fire caused about $10,000 worth of damage. The station cannot be used for a week or two.

"It was one of these careless things that are inexcusable, but it happens," said Hallandale Mayor Arthur "Sonny" Rosenberg.

"In the first place, we tell all the homeowners to take things off the stove before leaving home... We're going to put it in the union contract that they have to turn off the stove before they go out on a call."

Community fears navy base closing

MILTON — Community leaders in northwest Florida are waiting with bated breath this week to see if an airfield that trains naval aviators will be on a list of military facilities recommended for closing.

Some fear economic problems if Whiting Field Naval Air Station closes, while others see the closing either as unlikely or offering a challenge to the community.

The Washington Post reported Monday that the panel charged with choosing the bases is expected to recommend closing at least 24 U.S. military installations, a move aimed at saving $2 billion a year.

The Commission on Base Realignment and Closure is scheduled to release its list Thursday, the Post reported. The Secretary of Defense and Congress can be either accept or reject the list in its entirety.

Reports in other publications this month mentioned Whiting as a target. The base, which has 4,000 workers and pumps $190 million into the local economy, gives basic flight training to helicopter and fixed-wing aviators.

The possibility of a closing renewed speculation that training at Whiting might be consolidated with similar Army training at Fort Rucker, Ala., even though both bases support a high volume of flights.

The Pensacola News Journal reported that Whiting averages a takeoff or landing every eight seconds, or nearly 2.5 million flights annually. Fort Rucker had 4.25 million flight operations in 1987, the paper said.

"If that base closes, I think it's going to be devastation. It will have an immediate effect and I don't think the community is in a position to handle it," said Tom Boltz, owner of an auto dealership.

Milton city councilman Guy Thompson, director of Santa Rosa County's United Way, told the News Journal that closing Whiting would be a "big step backward for the city and county."

He said the impact would be "tremendous." He said that for United Way, nearly 20 percent of its budget comes from contributions made through Whiting Field.

But even if it does close, not everyone expects economic ruin. "Whiting is certainly an important part of the county's economy, but it's not as big an input as the agricultural mix. We have a lot of diverse industry here," said Art Potter, executive vice president of the chamber of commerce.

Potter went through base closings in Rhode Island and said residents in both towns thought the world was coming to an end. But he said neither community lost a step.

"In one place, business came in and took over the base. In the other they've built a tremendous tourist attraction," Potter said.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Business not hurt by lottery

United Press International

MIAMI — Despite fears that the Florida lottery would eat into other business' profits and deplete family savings, officials say dire predictions have not come true and overall spending on lottery tickets remains small.

Spending on lottery tickets is less than 1 percent of Floridians' $206 billion in annual personal income — "peanuts compared to the flows of economic activity in this state" — said John Godfrey, the chief economist for Barnett Banks.

Some feared the lottery, which started in January, would lure overzealous players into betting family savings, and that consumers would pass up higher profit items in favor of the low-profit lottery tickets. But statistics do not appear to bear that out.

"Sales are slightly down, and I'd like to blame that damn lottery," said Marcia Stapleton, co-owner of Pink Cottage Candies of Mount Dora. "But it probably has more to do with our salesman who hasn't been on the road as much as he should be."

Court officials said they do not see a rise in the number of personal bankruptcy petitions because of the lottery. State administrators say the welfare caseloads remain about the same and church collections are steady.

In addition, a survey done for the Lottery Department in October found those who play the lottery come from all income and ethnic groups. The survey discounted some people's thoughts by showing that low-income lottery players tended to buy somewhat fewer tickets each week than higher income people.

Parl-mutuels, however, are looking for tax relief and blame the lottery for some of their ills.

For the first 10 months of the year, attendance at horse races dropped 21 percent compared

New Year's Eve Lotto jackpot rises to estimated $27 million

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Nobody picked all six numbers in the Christmas Eve drawing for the Florida lottery, boosting the New Year's Eve jackpot to an estimated $27 million, officials said Monday.

The numbers draw Saturday were 1, 6, 28, 29, 38 and 47. It was the second week in a row that nobody chose all six numbers.

But lottery officials said 172 players matched five numbers and won $7,477.50. Another 12,852 players won $146.50 by matching four numbers and 277,442 tickets with three correct numbers are worth $6.50 each.

The next drawing is Saturday at 11 p.m. EST with the same period last year, while the handle — or total betting — decreased 2.7 percent.

Jai-alai attendance during the period was down 24 percent and the total handle decreased 23 percent, although an industry lobbyist admitted the players strike could weaken the argument that the drop is related to the lottery.

State records show that for the first 10 months of 1988, the handle at Florida's 18 dog tracks increased 0.5 percent, and the tracks took in $863.7 million.

Prehistoric cemetery discovered

United Press International

ENGLEWOOD — A site in a plush seaside community that was initially thought to be a crime scene has been identified as one of the most important archaeological finds in southwest Florida, archaeologists said Monday.

A Florida State University team of researchers, led by archaeologist Wilburn "Sonny" Cockrell, has unearthed remains of more than 22 coastal Indians. They are believed to be 800 to 1,400 years old.

"This is one of the only prehistoric cemeteries from this era," Cockrell said of the south Sarasota County dig. "This will be a significant contribution to the understanding of prehistoric people in this region."

The first bones were found Dec. 15 by a construction crew that thought they might be those of a murder victim. The area was cordoned off and deputies began combing the site.

All the bodies are curled in a fetal position. One of the deputies, Skip Wood, has a master's degree in archaeology and recognized the position of the bones as similar to the Indian style of burial.

The find in the well-to-do community was confirmed by Cockrell, and the state's Historical Resources Division designated it the Manasota Key Burial Site, halting all construction work until the excavation could be completed.

Cockrell said he was unsure how long work will be stopped.

"I said seven days three hours ago and since then they've found four more (skeletons). I came here to take out two people, and now we've got 20," said Cockrell about how long the dig will take.

The positions of the bones are sketched on graph paper as they are excavated. Each new find is roped off with twine and marked with flags and displaced dirt is run through sifters that catch small fragments.

Archaeologist Bill Burger said the remains will be subjected to carbon-14 testing to determine their age. But other evidence, like pottery, also provides clues.

Only a couple of pieces of crude shell hammers have been found at the site, indicating the Indians may have been from a pre-ceramic culture.

"They're probably prehistoric more than 500 years because there have been no modern implements found with them," said Jim Miller of the Historical Resources Division.

Poisoners described as sad and bitter recluses

United Press International

TAMPA — Those who slip poison into food and medicine sold to the public often are loners nursing grudges, seeking revenge or attempting to assert self-worth, psychological experts say.

Dr. Martin Symonds, a New York forensic psychiatrist, said tamperers tend to be middle-aged or older because young people who may be wronged lack enough life experience to become bitter.

"The tamperer is a barren person," Symonds told The Tampa Tribune Monday. "If there are a lot of things in your life, then you don't let barrenness be the solar system of your life. All of us have injustices, but you don't carry it with you."

The quest to get even is consuming, said Symonds. He said tamperers are not strong, confrontational people, but rather people who resort to an anonymous, roundabout way of harming the source of the perceived injustice.

Psychologists say random tamperers usually have certain characteristics, including alienation, secretiveness and a tendency to dwell on real or imagined slights. They tamper to rectify feelings of inadequacy.

Dr. Martin Reiser, a forensic psychologist and director of Behavioral Science Services at the Los Angeles Police Department, said tamperers may be paranoids who feel wronged by the manufacturer, the store that sells the product or even an individual he identifies with the product or store.

"It's a covert way of getting back at the company," he said. "It's more than mean-spirited. In our experience, there is a more specific connection, some conscious association with the product."

Dr. Stanton Samenow, a forensic psychologist in Alexandria, Va., and author of "Inside the Criminal Mind," said the tamperer with delusions of superiority may want to demonstrate it by committing an original crime.

The tamperer has little empathy with his potential victims.

Undelivered baby survives mother's random killing

United Press International

DANIA — A newborn baby was in critical condition at Memorial Hospital in Hollywood Monday, a day after his mother was killed by a bullet fired randomly into a crowd and he was delivered by Caesarean section.

Samantha McHellen, 20, arrived home after shopping late Christmas Eve, Ruth Payne, a longtime family friend, said McHellen was in the parking lot of her Dania apartment chatting with friends before preparing Christmas for her 3-year-old son.

Broward sheriff's deputies said three men in a car drove through the parking lot and confronted residents. Witnesses told authorities the car slowed down. One man fired into the air then aimed a single round into the crowd before the car sped off.

Just before 2 a.m. EST Christmas Day, McHellen died from massive head injuries and the 3-pound, 6-ounce baby was delivered by emergency Caesarean section.

The delivery was eight weeks early. "The mother was kept alive on life support until the baby could be delivered," almost two hours after she was shot, said Dr. Richard Auerbach, the doctor who treated the infant Sunday.

A spokesman at Memorial Hospital said the baby was in critical condition Monday with neurological problems.

"The baby's major problem is the prematurity," Auerbach said. "In any baby born under these conditions, you run the risk that the blood supply may have been interrupted or the oxygen supply may have been interrupted. These are some unknowns, and we will not know this for several days."

Willie Miller, who said he was the newborn's father, said the baby would be named Willie Anthony Miller.

Donal McHellen said his sister was considering putting on a Christmas show for the kids in the area, as she did every Christmas.

"That was supposed to be (Sunday)," he said, tears streaming down his cheeks. "They were just shooting at anybody. They do it all the time. Nobody does anything about it."

A Broward County sheriff's department spokesman said Monday there were no suspects.

POLICE BRIEFS

Window smashed during dispute

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man accused of brandishing a screwdriver and throwing part of a cinder block at a man during a fight, is also accused of throwing part of a block through a window of the victim's house after the victim fled inside.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies charged Michael Snell, 31, of no address, with aggravated assault and throwing a deadly missile into a dwelling at 2:13 a.m. Sunday at 625 Encino Way, Altamonte Springs.

Gregory Hicks, of that address, told deputies Snell had attacked him and they scuffled, before Hicks went inside his house and the block was thrown through the window.

Accused lookout refused to cooperate

SANFORD — A man nabbed as a lookout at the scene of a Dec. 15 auto burglary in Sanford, refused when questioned by police Monday, to name two other men implicated in the case by witnesses.

That led to a charge of being a principal in the first degree to an auto burglary being filed against Andre Hernandez, 21, of Deltona. Hernandez was arrested at 10 a.m. Monday at the Sanford police station. Bond is $2,000.

Hernandez was caught at the scene of the 2:10 a.m. Dec. 15 suspected burglary of the car of Todd Smith at 107 Edgewater Circle.

Smith told police he heard his car burglary alarm and spotted a man inside his car. That man and a second waiting in another car fled, leaving Hernandez chasing the getaway car, before Smith captured him, police said.

Hernandez reportedly told Smith he had just gotten out of prison and couldn't afford to be in trouble. When questioned further Monday, Sanford police said, Hernandez refused to name the two other suspects and was arrested.

Man arrested on DUI charge

SANFORD — The following person faces a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County:

• Ronald Patrick Walker, 26, of 279 Lake View Drive, Sanford, who was arrested at 11:37 p.m. Monday after Sanford police said they pursued his speeding car from the scene of a dispute at Taco Bell, U.S. Highway 17-92.

Police said when Walker braked his car in front of them the northbound car spun around and was traveling south in the northbound lane of U.S. Highway 17-92.

LAKE MARY — Once again, aesthetic-conscious Lake Mary officials are looking to improve the look of the city.

If commissioners pass two ordinances by Jan. 19, 1989, billboards and off-premise signs will be slated to be torn down.

This means about 23 billboards within Lake Mary City limits will be removed. Planner Matt West said today.

West said this has been under consideration for more than six months.

"The city commission is concerned with the aesthetics of the area especially along Interstate 4 and 17-92," he said.

There are 18 billboards along I-4, two on 17-92, one on Lake Mary Boulevard and two on Rinehart Road, according to West.

West said they need to come down because they mar the look of the environment.

The ordinances have yet to be passed, but Lake Mary is not the first city in Seminole County to turn its attention to billboards.

Altamonte Springs is also concerned with them.

"We have a moratorium on billboards right now. We don't permit any new ones," Land Management Coordinator Paul Platt said.

Traffic-citation arrest ends in hospitalization

LONGWOOD — A Sanford man ended up at Florida Hospital/Orlando after being arrested about 6 a.m. this morning in Longwood.

Police Capt. Terry Baker said that Officer Robert Ladoczky arrested Nathaniel Way, 58, of Tangerine Avenue, for driving on a suspended driver's license and took him to the police station.

Way was issued three traffic citations, according to Baker. They were for the violations of habitual traffic offender, attaching a tag not assigned, and having an expired tag.

During the booking procedure, Way complained of chest pains and said he felt like he was having a heart attack, Baker said.

The rescue squad transported him to Florida Hospital/Orlando where he was placed in the Progressive Care Unit. He was reported this morning to be in serious condition.

Baker said Way was released from police custody but was given a court appearance date before he left for the hospital.

Three of 38 holiday traffic deaths occur in Seminole County

SANFORD — Three persons died in Seminole County traffic accidents over the holiday weekend. Early today the names of two of those victims were still being withheld by lawmen.

A 15-year-old boy was killed at 2:55 a.m. Saturday on State Road 434, Longwood, when the driver of the car he was riding in fell asleep and lost control of the vehicle.

That boy has not been named by Longwood police. The Florida Highway Patrol has also not identified a woman killed in a 2:10 a.m. Friday head-on collision on U.S. Highway 17-92, near Longwood. Lawmen said the next of kin have not been notified.

The FHP Friday identified Christopher Cybulski, 20, of Orlando, as the motorcyclist who was killed when he lost control of his speeding cycle on Winter Springs Boulevard and was thrown from the bike at 12:55 a.m. Friday.

TKThe Seminole County accidents were among those that caused 38 deaths on Florida's highways during the four-day Christmas holiday weekend, according to United Press International.

That total was more than the FHP had projected.

Trees cleared for pit before permit issued

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — A borrow pit operator began clearing a site on South Sanford Avenue last week before he received a county permit to clear the trees and county officials say they won't do anything about it.

Officials say it was an oversight not to issue the county-required arbor permit, but it will have to be issued because county commissioners approved the borrow pit permit. The permit was issued later that day.

Mike Hattaway, a former county commissioner, was issued a county borrow permit Dec. 13 and began clearing a site nearly 24 acres in size on the east side of South Sanford Avenue adjacent to the Atlantic Coast Line tracks. A bulldozer was in the densely-wooded site this week pushing down scrub oak trees several inches in diameter.

The county land development code requires the arbor permit before clearing of any tree trunks greater than three inches in diameter measured at a height three feet above the ground.

"It was just an oversight," said John Dwyer, county arbor inspector. "It was probably a little bit of our fault and little bit of his."

Dwyer said Friday he issued the permit Wednesday after speaking with the Sanford Herald. He said he received an anonymous complaint earlier in the week about the clearing, although it was not Roberta Andrews, a critic of the borrow pit.

Hattaway said only, "We have the permit."

Hattaway did say any problem about the permit was caused by area residents who have been trying to "harrass" him throughout his efforts to develop the borrow pit. He did not name the people involved.

Dwyer said the county simply issued the permit and would take no enforcement action against Hattaway. He said when Hattaway develops the property, he will be required to submit a tree plan to replace some of the trees cut.

"We have to issue the arbor permit because the board approved the borrow pit permit," Dwyer said.

Deputy county attorney Bob McMillan said the county has no fine or other remedial authority to punish someone who clears trees without a permit, although the county building code states no construction can be begun unless the permit is issued.

County commissioners approved the borrow pit on Nov. 22 to the protest of several residents who said smoke from the burning trees would cause breathing problems.

The county code doesn't indicate a review is required to determine the need for arbor permits.

To The Citizens Of The City Of Sanford

In the recently completed City Commission District I campaign, between Mr. Lon Howell and me, my reputation has suffered and my integrity has been questioned. This was the result of the personal and tasteless attacks of my opponent. Although the election is concluded, the nature and extent of the innuendos and rumors that arose because of Mr. Howell's actions oblige me to publicly release the results of my drug test. The results were negative and copies will be available at the local papers. I submitted to the drug test Monday 12/19/88 and the results became available Wednesday 12/21/88. This action should eliminate all suspicion of my possible drug involvement.

The City Commission held a special meeting December 21, 1988. Commissioner John Mercer urged the Commissioners to have a hand recount of the election in view of the fact the election was won by eight (8) absentee ballots and ten (10) votes were not counted by the voting machines. If the Commission had agreed to a recount as proposed by Commissioner John Mercer and supported by Commissioner Robert Thomas court action would be unnecessary. The Commissions certification of the election by a three to two vote leaves me no recourse but to consider going to court.

I would like to give a special thanks to those citizens who voted for me. Words cannot properly convey my respect and admiration for my campaign workers and their efforts. I am exceedingly proud of what we accomplished. My loss only becomes more difficult to accept when I consider the sacrifices you made on my behalf. In recognition of your contributions, I pledge to continue to fight to make Sanford the city that we believe it could be.

Finally I wish all of the citizens of Sanford, Seminole County, the United States a very special New Year. I would remind everyone that the only way to protect a democracy is to participate, please register and vote.

Sincerely
James Sweeting III, Esquire

The time is now to battle nature

As its days dwindle down to the paltry few, it's tempting to give 1988 a label. Will history remember this year as the beginning of the George Bush era? The end of the Cold War? Or, will 1988 be the year in which the world began to comprehend that the environment is under siege?

We would not be surprised by the latter. Environmental prophets have been proclaiming for decades that calamity is at hand; this year, their warnings seem to have taken hold.

Several factors may account for this shift in perception. Last summer's recordbreaking heat is one. It underscored scientists' warnings about a global warming trend and depletion of the earth's protective ozone layer. Beaches littered with infectious medical waste, rampaging forest fires in the West and recent stories about the dangers of nuclear waste all contribute to the public's increasing awareness that SpaceShip Earth is in serious difficulty.

Getting it fixed will depend in great measure on the willingness of the world's industrial nations to take the lead in fashioning a coordinated strategy. The United States, in particular, must take a major share of the responsibility. We are the biggest user of the world's resources. We are the biggest producer of gases creating the greenhouse effect. We are the nation with the most influence over other nations and over such international agencies as the World Bank and the United Nations.

Among the problems — acid rain, nuclear wastes, radon, hazardous wastes, ozone depletion, air pollution — one stands out. The consensus in the scientific community seems to be that our most urgent environmental problem is global overheating — the greenhouse effect. The potential damage is enormous.

A recent report from the Environmental Protection Agency points out what could happen in California. Higher temperatures would increase demand for electricity, make urban ozone pollution even worse and increase demand for already scarce water resources. As the polar ice cap melts and the sea level rises, San Francisco Bay would spread. That would push salt water farther upstream in Sacramento-San Joaquin River Delta and destroy one of the most productive agricultural regions in the world.

We are talking about global calamity, of course, not just California. "The ultimate effects will last for centuries and will be irreversible," the EPA report concludes. "Strategies to reverse such impacts on natural ecosystems are not currently available."

We still have time to slow the warming trend. The best way to do that is to increase energy efficiency. According to the World Resources Institute, the United States spends 11 percent of its gross domestic product on energy; Japan and West Germany spend just 5 percent. Using energy more wisely not only would combat the greenhouse effect. It would work to reduce acid rain and urban air pollution.

The question for the Bush administration is not whether to encourage environmental protection measures, but how.

Democrats gear up for next campaign

WASHINGTON — The Election Day smoke has barely cleared, George Bush is still organizing his administration, but the Democrats' 1992 campaign has already begun.

Major fights are already underway over what faction will control the party machinery, and about changes in how the party will nominate its standard bearer in 1992. A meeting of the Democratic National Committee slated for early February will be 1992's first battleground.

Because of the resignation of Paul Kirk, the DNC will have to choose a new chairman. One early favorite is Ron Brown, a Washington lawyer and former DNC deputy chairman who was Jesse Jackson's convention manager last year. He is supported by Jackson, Sen. Edward Kennedy — whose campaign he helped run in 1980 — and by former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

That support might be his downfall. Even though he had to be talked into leaving the DNC to join the Jackson campaign, he is now seen as the Jackson candidate for chairman. He is being bitterly opposed by Southern party chairmen who think that the choice of a black liberal as party chairman will only help the GOP solidify its hold in their region.

Many would be more comfortable with former Oklahoma Rep. James R. Jones, who has thrown his hat into the ring. Jones' selection, it is argued, would send a clear message that the Democratic Party is "centrist" and will not be dominated by "Eastern liberals."

Because of Democratic successes in recent congressional elections, many in the party see power shifting to Democrats serving in the Senate and the House. They have a candidate for chairman in former Maryland Rep. Michael Barnes, who was a high-level adviser to the Dukakis campaign — one of the few untainted by the end result.

Former Rep. James Stanton of Ohio is seen by many as big-labor's entry into the sweepstakes for chairman. But labor got a black eye among many Democratic insiders for its failure to deliver in November, and Stanton is not seen as a serious contender.

Finally, there is a compromise candidate Michigan state chairman Richard Wiener. Many in the party had urged Kirk to serve another term to avoid a potential blood-letting in choosing a successor. When he could not be convinced, Wiener was put forward.

Potentially as important as the chairman's selection will be a fight over new rules about how the 1992 primaries and convention will be run. They were demanded by Jesse Jackson as part of the price for his support of Michael Dukakis after the Democratic convention.

Jackson insisted in Atlanta that the 1992 primaries not be winner-take-all and also demanded that there be far fewer "Super Delegates" — DNC members, other party officials and elected office-holders.

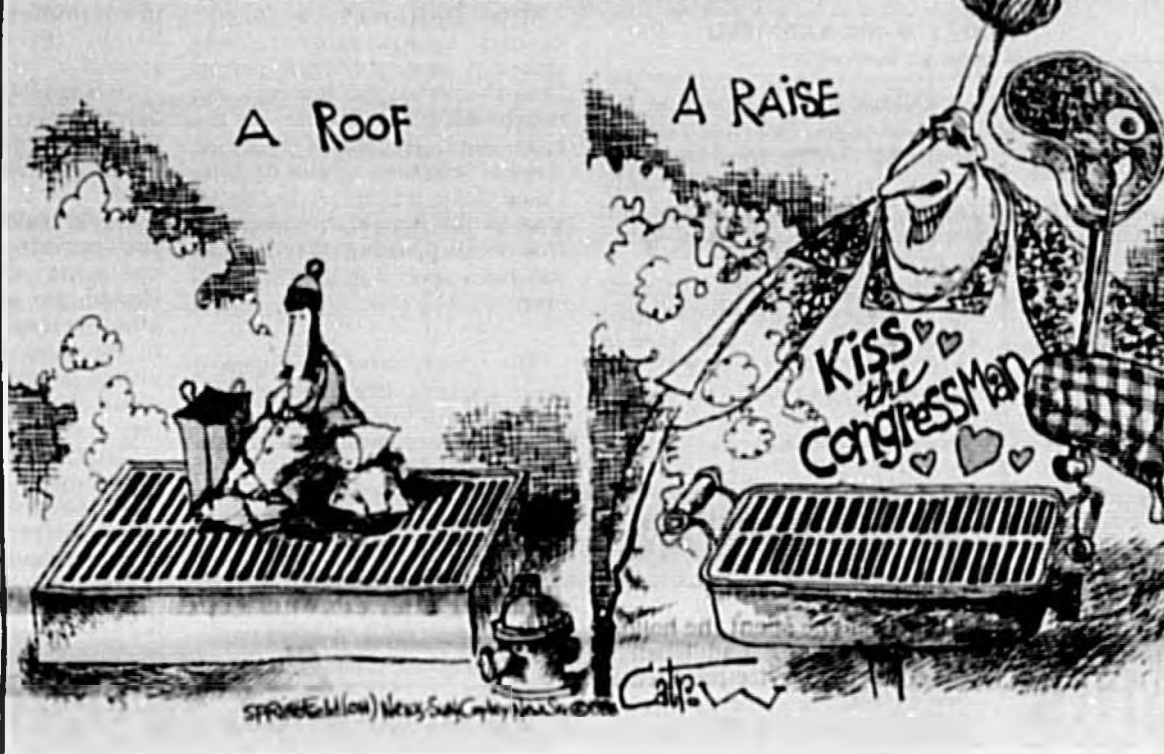

A move is under way to undo the Jackson agreement. Many party insiders believe they must gain more control over the choice of nominee in order to insure a viable candidate. Jackson and his forces, who see the changes as key to their hopes in 1992, will fight to keep the new rules.

Bush has picked an establishment staff

As it is now shaping up, the Bush administration looks to be one of high quality, but of consolidation rather than innovation. Its top appointments are going to men of experience and substance, but who lack any hint of plans for dramatic change. This is thus more like the Eisenhower administration than the Reagan first term. It is also something quite different from what we would be getting from Jack Kemp or Pete DuPont. But the Bush people do have an eye on the huge social entitlements.

Bush's first and one of his most important appointments, James Baker, is a case in point. Baker, an aristocratic Texan out of Princeton who has run three presidential campaigns, is a thoroughly admirable person. He has been Reagan's White House chief of staff — where he was an effective operator, especially with Congress. He has served to general praise as secretary of the treasury and thoroughly understands international finance. He is a superb negotiator.

The next step for him was virtually inevitable: secretary of state. He is imaginable some day as president.

His successor at Treasury, Nicholas Brady, is another Ivy Leaguer who is well connected in the financial world. He has been a senator from New Jersey and is a long-time Bush intimate. When Baker took over the Bush campaign, Brady took over at Treasury. No one doubts his solid establishment credentials or his competence.

Brent Scowcroft, who will be national security adviser, is almost over-qualified to be God. After West Point he entered the Air Force and won his wings. In 1949, however, a flying accident injured his back and put an end to his days as a military pilot. Instead, he took an M.A. in international relations at Columbia, taught Russian history for four years at West Point, served as an attache in Belgrade, became head of the political science department at the Air Force Academy, and received a Ph.D. in international relations from Columbia.

After some Pentagon posts, he moved to the White House as military aide to President Nixon, accompanied Nixon to Beijing, and did the advance work for the presidential visit to the USSR.

As Henry Kissinger's assistant at the NSC, he was hard-working and stayed out of the media. Since 1982, he has been with Kissinger at Kissinger Associates. He headed the Scowcroft Commission set up by Reagan to analyze our strategic forces.

There's a lot to say in favor of a man like this. You can bet that if you had suggested selling arms to the Ayatollah he would have thrown you out of his office. General Scowcroft is definitely not Col. Oliver North.

Richard Darman at OMB and Michael Boskin, to be chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, have impeccable credentials and much government experience. Bush was smart to retain the charming Marvin Fitzwater as spokesman to the press.

Governor John Sununu is the only major appointment, as chief of staff, who does not fit the establishment pattern of the above. He has been a hard-working and very intelligent executive, however, and is a longtime Bush loyalist. Sununu has a Ph.D. and probably knows more about nuclear matters than anyone this side of the Livermore Laboratory. Great appointment.

Disappointingly, Bush, honoring an earlier commitment, is keeping Cavazos on at Education. Lauro Cavazos is a gentleman, a former university president, and was a useful campaign symbol as a Hispanic. So far, his utterances amount to the boilerplate of the National Education Association. He is not of leadership caliber.

But to cap off the impression of overall excellence, Bush himself is now clearly himself at last — relaxed, bantering with the press, taking reporters on a tour of Kennebunkport, going out to dinner when he feels like it. His own man and relaxed, he makes no verbal slips anymore, has thrown away his pork rinds and his hard hats, and has taken out his tennis rackets.

In sum, this may be a good, steady, very distinguished government.

Native Hawaiians face sad centennial

HALEIWA, Hawaii — The 100th anniversary of one of the most pivotal events in Hawaii's history is rapidly approaching, but nobody in the country is planning a centennial commemoration.

That is understandable because the event was among the tawdriest episodes in the nation's history — the unlawful use of military force to overthrow the government of a peaceful, sovereign nation.

Hawaii originally was settled by Polynesians from other Pacific islands. They established an independent kingdom long before the first Europeans arrived in the late 1700s.

By the late 1800s, however, settlers from this country constituted a white elite of sugar growers and merchants who controlled four-fifths of Hawaii's arable land, dominated its economy and wielded extraordinary political influence.

The incentives for a grower-organized military coup d'etat was provided by an 1891 U.S. law that offered a subsidy for domestically produced sugar and Queen Liliuokalani's plans for a new constitution that would grant voting rights to Polynesian Hawaiians only.

Acting in concert with the U.S. minister to the Kingdom of Hawaii — but without the approval of his superiors — the businessmen arranged for four shiploads of Navy and Marine units to come ashore in a show of force on the island of Oahu in January 1893.

The following day, the haoles (the Hawaiian word for mainland whites) "seized the government building, demanded the queen's abdication and declared martial law," notes the book, "Hawaii Pono," written by Brandeis University professor Lawrence H. Fuchs.

"The United States government, through its minister, gave immediate diplomatic recognition to the rebel group, which then proclaimed the abrogation of the monarchy, forced the resignation of the ... queen and launched the American flag where the Hawaiian pennant had flown," adds Fuchs' book.

When the news belatedly reached Washington, President Grover Cleveland denounced "the lawless occupation of Hawaii under false pretense by United States forces" and called for the restoration of the Hawaiian nation.

By then, however, Queen Liliuokalani had voluntarily relinquished her throne and a haole-organized provisional government had assumed control of the islands. Only one year later, in 1894, the Republic of Hawaii was established. The islands were annexed by the United States in 1898, designated a territory in 1900 and granted statehood in 1959.

Today, almost 96 years after their queen was toppled, Hawaii's natives have lost much of their language, their religion and other crucial elements of their culture — but many of those proud people continue to press for the restoration of the land and self-governance wrongfully taken from them.

Honolulu magazine calls the grassroots campaign to re-establish a native Hawaiian nation "the hottest political issue of the 1990s." A recent statewide conference of activists proclaimed political and economic independence to be native birthrights.

Obtaining that self-sufficiency is easier said than done. Indeed, a 1921 federal law that designated 200,000 acres as Hawaiian Home Lands to be returned to the natives has gone largely unenforced for almost seven decades.

Taxes

"We believe the needs — not the wants, the needs — are far greater than current resources," said Dominic Calabro, director of Florida TaxWatch, a business-supported research organization. Martinez has backtracked on the very notion of tax reform — which was the key to his agenda in his first year in office.

"We got into this whole thing in the early 1980s of putting a gloom and doom kind of rhetoric on government, using (population) growth as the engine for having to complete or expand everything," Martinez said.

"What I'm saying is, some of these things have to be questioned, whether it's as bad as they're saying, or whether government has to get involved."

"That's a stupid cliché, that all problems aren't solved by money. We're trying to solve the problems, and it takes money to do it," Gordon said.

"What we are seeing is a kind of political stagnation," said Calabro, who blamed the slow adjustment, of Democrats and emerging Republicans, to sharing power.

Gordon, too, predicted "sort of a stalemate year, and a buildup of the needs that will make it apparent they (the public) are going to have to pay more."

Last month the voters approved creation of a permanent tax study commission that could place tax reform and possible tax increases on the 1992 ballot.

In the meantime, legislative leaders are keeping a close eye on proposals at the federal level to increase fuel taxes — a move they say will make state gasoline tax increases politically impossible.

"The window of opportunity is 1989," Calabro said. Otherwise, "the feds will pre-empt us from addressing our own problems — especially if they increase the gas tax and use it for other than transportation purposes, which is what they are considering doing."

Some fee increases are likely in 1989, including a salt water fishing license fee. Residents also likely will be hit with "impact fees" such as highway tolls, and the price of new homes will be increased in many cases to cover costs of roads, schools and other services.

"Nothing to run government — simply to carry out a detail of government," said Martinez.

A bipartisan state commission has estimated the state and local governments will need around $54 billion by the turn of the century to meet the needs of the growing state population.

Some $25 billion of that need is in the pipeline, according to Calabro, with most of the shortfall in the area of transportation.

The voters approved a massive road bonding program last month, but the measure will trim only $2 billion from a $16 billion backlog. Calabro proposes increasing the state gasoline tax by up to 10 cents over the next decade to help erase the concrete and asphalt deficit.

Meanwhile, state agencies are clamoring for more money. The massive Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services wants an extra $1.2 billion next year, to boost its budget by 25 percent to $5.9 billion.

Giving each state agency every dollar it seeks would require a sales tax hike of at least 2 percent, Martinez said.

"The idea that every year you must expand programs or develop new initiatives is not something the public expects — nor are they willing to pay for it," the governor said firmly.

Dispute

will not independently communicate effectively with those with whom they disagree.

Communication is the key to resolving these problems, Lawson said. The settlement hearings provide an effective forum for that.

Once a request for a citizen, dispute settlement hearing is made, the case, she said, is heard and possibly resolved within about 10 days.

To date about six cases have been heard on Thursday nights at the Bar Association office on State Road 436, Altamonte Springs. Word is slow to spread about the program, with most referrals at this point coming from lawmen or animal control officials, Lawson said. Those who think they have a dispute that could be settled in this mediation forum can call Lawson at 834-0630. She said, if there is a need, a hearing could be held in the complainant's local area, such as Sanford.

The action starts, Lawson said, when a complainant files a report and names a respondent. The respondent is notified by letter of the complaint and offered an opportunity to participate in a hearing. If the respondent responds positively, a hearing will be scheduled. If the respondent doesn't respond, Lawson said, the complainant will have to seek another avenue for solution of the problem.

The program is based on an Orange County model, when has been active and successful since 1975, Lawson said. Volusia and Brevard have similar programs.

"Seminole County needs this because we didn't have anything like it," said Lawson, who gave up her past duties for Legal Aid, to organize the program.

Installation will begin the first week in January. District Five Secretary Ben Watts said the contractor has 155 calendar days to complete the job, with one day added for each work day lost due to stormy weather. However, Watts said, there is an incentive clause in the contract, which provides a bonus if work is finished early. Likewise, Meyer is subject to penalties if the job falls behind schedule.

Bush hunts quail in Texas

United Press International

BEEVILLE, Texas — President-elect George Bush, headed for a few days of secluded quail hunting, said Monday he was gratified that his son and grandson had carried Christmas wishes to Soviet earthquake victims.

Bush, speaking to reporters aboard Air Force II, also said his own Christmas was merry, although he and his wife, Barbara, corralled only one of 10 grandchildren for the holidays.

Bush, however, said he was deeply moved by the trip his son Jeb and 12-year-old grandson George made on Christmas Day to earthquake-stricken Armenia. "I just wish they could have gotten back in time," he said. "It was beautiful and it said what we feel — that we want to reach out to those other kids."

Arriving in the small town nearest the 10,000-acre Lazy F Ranch where he is staying, Bush said he talked to his son and grandson by telephone as they flew home.

He also said he spoke with Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin and that all he heard was gratitude.

Dubinin, Bush said, was overwhelmed by U.S. generosity and even brought up the name of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. "He told me that," Bush said. Earlier, Bush said the Soviets "were glad the trip took place too...so that made this Christmas very special for us... It was so moving and so right. I expect the boy will remember it for the rest of his life."

He also defended his hunting expedition, telling reporters "these aren't animals. These are wild quail. You've got to eat." But he added, "I don't think I could shoot a deer...quail, that's something else again... Tremendously exciting."

Bush said he spent the holiday weekend playing paddleball in the gym at the vice-presidential residence to "try and get back in shape. I've been feeling lousy the last nine days. I'm staging an athletic recovery program."

Vice president-elect Dan Quayle was in Vail, Colo.

Children who received cash for Christmas accounted for most of the new sales, she said.

Spec's Records and Tapes Manager Randall Johnson estimated 250 shoppers had visited the Sanford store in the first two and a half hours after it opened yesterday. "Luckily I had an extra employee or we would have been in trouble," he said.

Many customers were seeking refunds and exchanges or cashing in gift certificates, Johnson said, but many were just killing time on their day off.

For many store employees, worn out from working extra hours for several weeks, Monday represented the last mile in the Christmas season retail marathon.

"I've been working 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. since the day after Thanksgiving," said a weary Nicole Johnson, manager of Macy's outdoor section in Manhattan, explaining that everyone had been asked to put in extra hours.

"Now maybe I'll get some rest."

Stores in downtown Sanford were closed for the holiday.

Elsewhere, although Santa's heart may have been in the right place in his Christmas gift giving, he blew it on the size or the color of everything from sweaters to T-shirts.

Jane Griffith, manager of the Wimbledon Shop in East Towne Mall, Knoxville, Tenn., said most mall stores were running after-Christmas sales, but it appeared many of the shoppers coming to shop Monday were returning or exchanging gifts, rather than taking advantage of reduced prices.

"Things started off slow this morning, but it has picked up steadily since then," Griffith said. "Just about everyone I've seen come into the mall has a bag with them, though, so I figure they're here to return or exchange — at least that's their main purpose. I'm sure they'll be hooked by some of the sales."

A clerk at a suburban Atlanta mall said the day after Christmas can be entertaining as shoppers fabricate stories about why they are returning gifts.

"Women will tell you tales," said a manager at Cumberland Mall. "We ought to write a book about it. Their grandmother sent their cousins to buy it. I tell you, the stories are stranger than fiction."

weather surveillance radar system, Hebert said. The radar system can scan the skies for 250 miles and spot moisture particles moving through the air, before they condense into rain clouds.

"Current radar sends out signals which reflect a target, which in this case is rain," Hebert said. "What NEXRAD can do, because it can see particles moving, is also give you approximate wind directions and speeds coming toward you and going away from you."

Hebert said Congress virtually has assured the money for most of the superstations.

The Melbourne site was chosen because of its proximity to the Kennedy Space Center.

Other sites in Florida planned to have automated NEXRAD systems are Miami, Key West, the Tampa Bay area, Jacksonville, Tallahassee and the Panhandle near Eglin Air Force Base.

The superstations also will include an automated surface observing system and an automated weather interactive processor systems.

Hebert said the surface observing system is designed to provide 24-hour readouts of sky conditions and will replace the network of trained airport weather observers who work only during airport operating hours.

Former Chief Justice Burger hospitalized

WASHINGTON — Retired Chief Justice Warren Burger has been hospitalized, suffering from dehydration, exhaustion and a mild touch of pneumonia, a Supreme Court spokeswoman said Monday.

Burger, 81, was hospitalized at Sibley Memorial Hospital on Christmas morning, spokeswoman Toni House said.

House said Burger, the 15th chief justice, expects to be released from the hospital late Tuesday or Wednesday.

"I talked to him and he seems to be in good spirits," House said. "He describes his illness as a rare new disease — Bi-Centennial exhaustion."

Burger, who led his colleagues in a gradual shift away from many of the liberal trends of his predecessor, was named by President Richard Nixon to head the court in 1969, succeeding Earl Warren.

Burger stepped down from the bench in 1986 at age 79 to devote his energies to planning the following year's 200th anniversary of the Constitution, a document that perhaps meant more to him than other court members because it was signed on his birthday, Sept. 17.

Burger was succeeded by Justice William Rehnquist.

Flight instructor lands plane on freeway

PALO ALTO, Calif. — A flight instructor took over the controls of a crippled small plane and landed it safely on a freeway while an alert motorist helped block traffic with his car, officials said.

Bruce Croft, 24, a flying club instructor, landed the single-engine Cessna 152 in the middle lane of northbound Interstate 280 Monday and taxied onto a shoulder after the engine began coughing and losing power, the California Highway Patrol said.

Traffic was sparse due to the holiday and Croft, who was training a student pilot, found a gap in traffic wide enough to pick a landing spot, Croft said.

A motorist who saw the craft descending at about 70 miles an hour swerved his car back and forth on the freeway to slow traffic so the plane could touch down, Croft said.

"I don't know who that was but I'd like to thank him for getting things under control behind me," Croft said.

The plane had taken off from the Palo Alto airport with student pilot Ken Dias, 29, at the controls, at around 10 a.m. Monday, Croft said. When the engine began losing power, he took over and tried to return to the airport.

Michael Jackson's brother arrested

LOS ANGELES — A younger brother of entertainer Michael Jackson was arrested Monday when police who stopped his Rolls-Royce for a traffic violation discovered an outstanding arrest warrant for a prior violation, police said.

Steven Randall "Randy" Jackson, 27, of Beverly Hills, was held nearly four hours until he posted $262 bail on the warrant for failing to appear in court on the unspecified traffic violation, Sgt. John Zrofsky said.

Jackson was driving a 1987 Rolls-Royce Corniche along Melrose Avenue in Hollywood about 5:30 p.m. when he failed to stop for pedestrians in a crosswalk.

Hole in jet forces landing

Passengers say some oxygen masks didn't work after cabin decompression

United Press International

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Passengers complained that some oxygen masks did not work properly when a 14-inch hole tore open in the rear of an Atlanta-bound Eastern Airlines jet at 31,000 feet, causing cabin decompression and forcing the jet to land in Charleston.

None of the 110 people aboard the Boeing 727 were injured in Monday's mishap, and the jet landed safely, officials said. Investigators planned to inspect the hole in the jet's fuselage Tuesday in an effort to determine what caused it.

Passengers were forced to breathe the though emergency oxygen masks when the cabin lost pressure about an hour out of Rochester, N.Y., officials said. The jet landed at Yeager Airport at 9:16 a.m.

Several passengers complained that the oxygen masks failed to work properly.

"My daughter wasn't sitting with me, she was sitting in front of me," said passenger Elaine Davis. "When the oxygen tank came down, they didn't work for the children and that's what was so scary."

"They worked for a couple seconds," agreed a young passenger, Corey Abelow. "Only a couple were working. There were a lot of complaints about that."

The cabin decompression occurred while the plane was cruising at 31,000 feet, and the pilot took the jetliner down to an altitude of 10,000 feet, Eastern airline spokeswoman Karen Ceremask said in Miami, where the airline is based.

"The pressure stabilized at that point, and (the pilot) went ahead and landed at Charleston," she said. "In the interim, the oxygen masks were deployed for the passengers."

"People did not panic. Everything went like clockwork," Barnette said.

Ceremask described the hole that caused the decompression as a 14-inch square rupture in the outer skin of the plane, which was built in the late 1960s. The tear is located in the top section of the fuselage, near the tail of the aircraft.

"From the interior of the plane you would not have seen the tear," Ceremask said.

But at least one passenger disputed that assertion.

"I looked up and the roof panel had been sucked up against the fuselage, and the sun was shining through that side of the fuselage and was giving you an outline of the hole inside the plane," one passenger identified as David Moore said.

"It was like a wind coming in from the back of the plane," passenger Veronica Yaw recalled. "I never thought I was going to live."

R.C. Barnette, chief of police at the airport, said the plane was carrying 104 holiday travelers and a crew of six. The passengers were held in Charleston, which is not serviced by Eastern, for more than five hours before another plane carried them on to Georgia, he said.

Although there were no reports of injuries, officials said, many passengers complained of severe ear aches during the jet's rapid descent.

"We were about an hour out of Rochester when we heard a sudden bang," passenger Amy Fugimura said. "I looked up and saw the ceiling sort of vibrating and I knew we were in trouble."

"The oxygen masks did fall and they told us to put them on, but during that time we were falling quickly, and there was an excruciating pain in your ears," Fugimura recalled in an interview with Cable News Network.

Officials said they had no explanation for the hole in the plane, but the Federal Aviation Administration was investigating the incident.

"It will be sometime before we go over the records and inspect the aircraft to reach a conclusion" on the cause, Ceremask said. "We'll not fly it out of there until the repairs are made."

She said the section of the plane that ripped open during the flight was last inspected in September, following FAA guidelines that call for an inspection every 1,100 landings.

She said the pilot did not declare an emergency during the flight, but asked the Charleston tower for permission to make an unscheduled landing. No emergency equipment was deployed on the ground and the passengers exited the plane "normally," she said.

Ceremask called the incident "highly unusual."

"If any good can come from such a tragedy, we just hope others can learn a lesson from it."

We hear that sometimes after writing about an event we wish had never happened.

The world it is our obligation to cover isn't always the world we'd prefer to write about. The victims of circumstance are our neighbors, too.

Still, we owe you the complete truth — for only through knowing the whole story can a community learn from our mistakes, recognize problems that deserve our attention, appreciate human valor worthy of all our respect.

It's our job to honestly reflect all the news around us. And it's our duty to cover developments likely to affect you, even if some of those stories are unpleasant to photograph and share.

We claim no special privilege as your designated messenger of news — the bad as well as the good.

Yet we know this: Frequently the victims of tragedy are helped most as our community comes to know of their needs through newspaper stories and even some of those unpleasant pictures showing the victims of circumstance.

As we learn through such pictures, we know where to pitch in. And that produces human reactions we can share through more pleasant pictures: Such as this one, showing a volunteer helping move a flood victim to a Red Cross shelter.

Our assignment is clear: You count on your newspaper to reflect reality. Our responsibility is just as evident. You expect us to be factual in gathering this information.

Reasonable expectations.

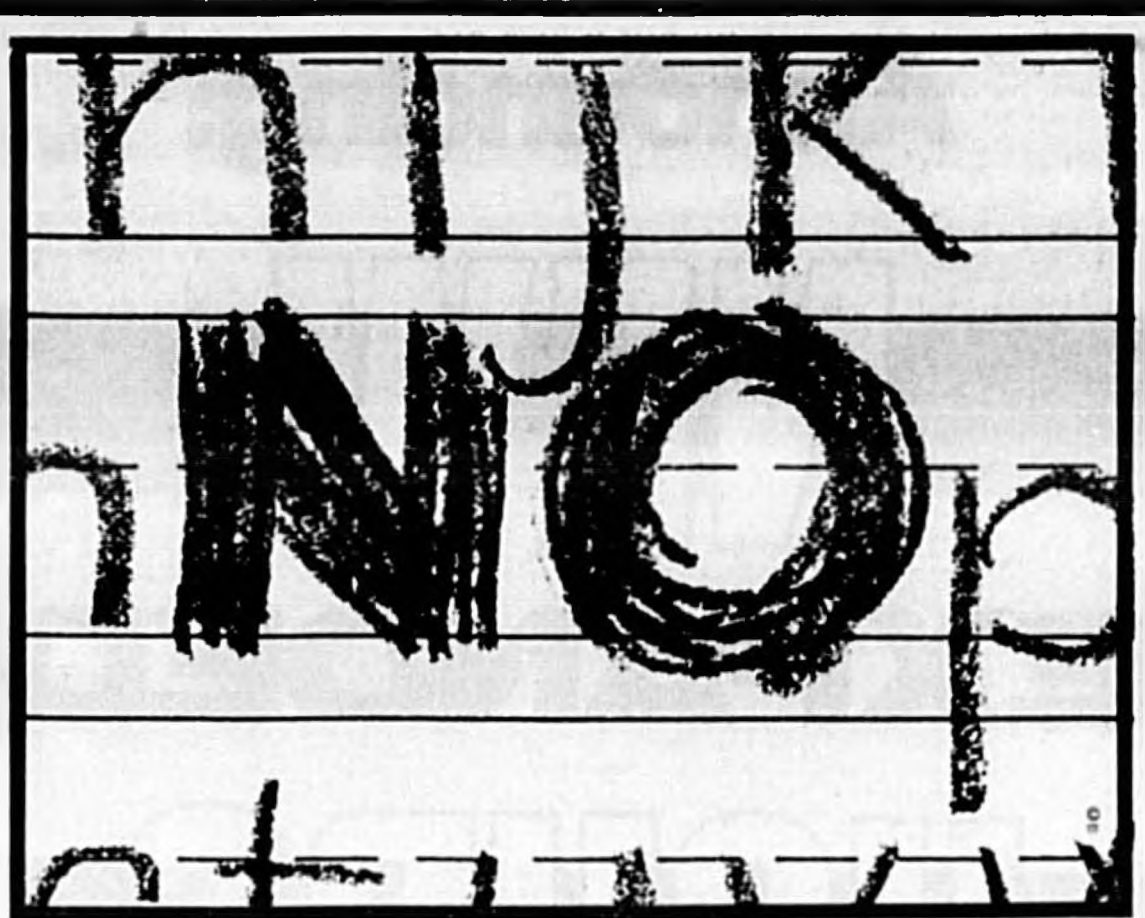

We respect your feelings in the stories we write, in the pictures we print and in our personal dealings. We're determined to remain sensitive, to the humans involved in the news and the audience we serve.

We're committed to earning your continued trust. No one should expect less from a good friend.

Craft docks with Soviet space station

MOSCOW — The Progress 39 cargo ship docked Tuesday with the orbiting Mir space station bringing three Soviet cosmonauts food, other essentials and New Year's gifts, the Tass news agency said.

The Progress 39 is the latest in a series of non-reusable space cargo ferries that service the Mir space station and previously the Salyut stations of the 1970 and early 1980s.

Progress cargo ferries are launched to the station about every two months to supply the cosmonauts with necessities, such as food, as well as new scientific experiments to be conducted aboard the space station.

Along with food, Progress 39 brought fuel, mail and New Year's gifts from friends and family to the cosmonauts on board the Mir, the news agency said.

Aboard are cosmonauts Alexander Volkov and Sergei Krikalev, who were launched into space Nov. 26, and Dr. Valery Polyakov, who was launched Aug. 29.

At the Star City space headquarters near Moscow, record-breaking cosmonauts Vladimir Titov and Musa Manarov, who returned home Dec. 21 after 366 days in space, have started a special exercise program to help them readjust to Earth's gravity, Radio Moscow said.

Titov and Manarov broke the space endurance record of 326 days set by fellow Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Romanenko in 1987. By comparison, the longest U.S. manned flight is 84 days aboard the Skylab in 1974.

Titov and Manarov returned to Earth last week with French cosmonaut Jean-Loup Chretien, who completed his second space flight.

Officials foiled assassination

KHARTOUM, Sudan — Authorities who foiled a recent coup plot to assassinate Prime Minister Sadiq al Mahdi have detained 16 people for questioning, nine of them active or retired military men, the official Sudan News Agency reported Monday.

The thwarted coup, which led to a declaration of emergency in Khartoum last week, was believed linked to Sadiq's attempts to end the civil war in southern Sudan, where troops and civilians are trapped in garrison cities and dying daily of starvation.

SUNA, quoting military sources, said the plotters had planned a two-pronged uprising, with half of them assigned to assassinate Sadiq and other political leaders, while the other conspirators captured key installations, including Khartoum's main radio station, post office and army headquarters.

The plotters had originally scheduled their uprising for May 15, but delayed it believing they were under surveillance, the official news agency said.

SUNA identified the coup leader as Lt. Col. Hassan Mohammed Ahmed Naur, and said he contacted his fellow conspirators Dec. 7 to tell them "the zero hour" was the following day, but again was forced to wait until the plotters could find fuel for their vehicles.

An initial round of six arrests was reported Dec. 8, with several others following the declaration of emergency Dec. 20.

SUNA said authorities are holding and interrogating nine active or retired military men and seven civilians. An army first lieutenant named Mohammed Suleiman was being sought.

Most of the accused plotters have been linked to former President Jaafar Numeiry, who was overthrown in 1985, and are believed to oppose the government's moves to establish a cease-fire with the rebel Sudan People's Liberation Army.

UAE president backs Egypt's return

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates — United Arab Emirates President Sheikh Zayed Bin Sultan Al Nahyan, the first Arab leader to restore relations with Egypt last year, called Tuesday for the return of Cairo to the Arab League.

Egypt, with its "international strategic weight," should be allowed to give its support to Arab causes through its return to the league, Nahyan said in a policy speech to parliament.

Egypt's membership in the 21-member league has been frozen since the 1978 signing of the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace accords with Israel. In response, most Arab countries broke all relations with Cairo.

In November 1987, Nahyan led most Arab countries in restoring ties, citing the "nationalistic stances" of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Gulf-based diplomats said Saudi Arabia and Jordan were spearheading efforts to arrange a mini-summit between Mubarak and his arch-rival President Hafez Assad of Syria before convening a full summit of the Arab League heads of state to consider rejoining Egypt's membership.

Syria, Libya and Lebanon stand alone among Arab nations as having no relations with Egypt.

Fate of French girls a mystery

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A Palestinian extremist group has claimed it freed two children held for more than a year with their French mother and several other foreigners, but family lawyers said the girls' whereabouts remained a mystery.

The father, grandmother and uncle of Marie-Laure Betille, 7, and Virginie Betille, 6, returned to France late Monday afternoon from Lebanon after their initial attempts failed to bring the two girls home with them.

Hours after the three relatives left Beirut, an official of the radical Palestinian group holding the girls said the two had been released and were heading to France.

"We freed the two French girls, and they will arrive in Paris aboard a plane during the coming few hours," the Voice of The Nation Radio quoted Fatah Revolutionary Council spokesman Walid Khaled as saying.

Khaled refused to elaborate, and the whereabouts of the girls was not immediately known. They had not arrived in Paris late Monday.

"I was not aware of the statements (about the girls' release)," their uncle, Andre Metral, said on arrival in France. "When we left Beirut, we no longer believed the little girls would be freed. I thought we had just been used for the purposes of pro-Palestinian propaganda."

Jacques Miquel, a lawyer for the mother's family, and Yves Eric Massiani, a lawyer for the girls' father, said after meeting with top officials at the French Foreign Ministry late Monday, the girls' release still was in limbo.

The ministry said in a statement Monday evening that the French government "maintains hope for a rapid liberation and is pursuing its efforts in this direction."

The Fatah Revolutionary Council (FRC) led by Abu Nidal, abducted the girls with their mother, Jacqueline Valente, and five Belgians from a yacht off the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip in November 1987.

The FRC accused the captives, all of whom hold joint Israeli-French or Israeli-Belgian citizenship, of being Israeli spies, but said the girls would be freed in response to an appeal Saturday by Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi.

The group — a radical faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization — has said the French woman gave birth shortly after she was kidnapped, and that she again was pregnant.

Valente is estranged from her husband, Pascal Betille, who is the girls' father. She is believed pregnant by Fernand Houdekens, one of the Belgian captives.

Khaled said after meeting Sunday with the relatives at the Palestinian refugee camp of Mar Elias in southern Beirut that headway was made in releasing the girls.

Sunday, Khaled released separate videotapes, one showing the French woman and the other showing the Belgian nationals, Emmanuel Houdekens, his wife Godelieve Kets, their two children, Laurent and Valerie, and Houdekens' brother, Fernand.

Valente appeared to be pregnant in the videotape Khaled gave to her relatives, which he described as a "gift for the children of the world on the season holiday."

Suitcase may hold clues to plane crash

United Press International

LOCKERBIE, Scotland — Officials investigating the crash of Pan American Flight 103 zeroed in on a single suitcase that authorities say could shed light on the theory the aircraft was destroyed by a bomb.

The suitcase and several fragments from the Boeing 747 were taken to an explosives analysis laboratory in southern England Monday in the clearest sign to date that investigators have reason to suspect the aircraft may have been sabotaged.

"A suitcase and pieces of wreckage from the doomed plane have been sent for detailed examination to determine whether they exhibit any evidence of a pre-impact explosion," said Mick Charles, the Department of Transport's top investigator at Lockerbie.

Charles declined to say where the items were found but said explosives experts at the Royal Armaments Research and Development Establishment in Kent were making a detailed examination of the baggage and plane parts for evidence of a bomb.

Five days after the Boeing 747 crashed on a flight from London to New York killing all 259 people aboard and at least one person on the ground, the cause of the disaster has not been established. Ten other residents of the area still are listed as missing.

Investigators said they believe either sabotage or structural failure caused the jumbo jet to break apart at 31,000 feet and crash into and around the Scottish farming town of Lockerbie Wednesday night. No evidence of structural failure has been found.

Department of Transport spokeswoman Penny Russell-Smith would give no details of where or how the suitcase had been found or describe the baggage.

"It and pieces of wreckage exhibit characteristics that merit further examination," she said. "I have no (further) information to give you."

Takeshita reorganizes cabinet

United Press International

TOKYO — Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita reorganized his cabinet Tuesday in an effort to revive public confidence in his 13-month-old administration shaken by the worst government scandal in more than a decade.

The reorganization follows parliamentary approval of a sweeping tax reform, a major victory for Takeshita, who had staked his political career on its enactment. However, public sentiment for the legislation for the most part has been negative, further eroding Takeshita's support among the people.

In the reorganization, Takeshita retained Foreign Minister Sosuke Uno, his official spokesman Keizo Obuchi and three other key ministers while replacing 15 other portfolios.

Takashi Hasegawa, 76, a follower of his rival Shintaro Abe, was appointed Justice Minister. Hasegawa will supervise investigations into the scandal, which involves sales of stock shares to selected political and business leaders before they were offered to the public.

Abe, currently secretary general of the LDP, is regarded as the leading contender to succeed Takeshita as head of the party and prime minister.

Train carrying 300 derails in Colorado, none injured

United Press International

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Colo. — An Amtrak train carrying about 300 holiday travelers derailed Christmas Day in heavy snow in the Colorado Rockies, causing no injuries but stranding them overnight until a work train rescued them Monday.

All 15 cars and two of the three locomotives of the popular California Zephyr, en route from Chicago to Salt Lake City and Los Angeles, derailed at 9:11 p.m., 13 miles east of Glenwood Springs, said Amtrak spokesman John Jacobsen in Washington, D.C.

The work train arrived at about 6:30 a.m. Monday to pick up the sleepy travelers, Jacobsen said. The derailment occurred in scenic Glenwood Canyon, where the tracks are flanked by a sheer mountain wall on one side and the Colorado River on the other.

"Everyone is safe," Amtrak's Denver supervisor Mimi Earley said in Glenwood Springs. "There were no injuries. We are busing the passengers this morning to Salt Lake City and Denver.

"There were no problems," she said. "The heat stayed on, the diner was operating and the passengers could sleep on the train." Temperatures dropped into the teens overnight, the National Weather Service said.

None of the cars overturned and the 294 passengers and crew of 15 to 18 were rescued by a work train, Jacobsen said.

"They were comfortable," he said. "Most of them probably slept through much of it."

He said the train was moving at 31 mph when it derailed.

Jacobsen said the cause of the accident was being investigated with officials looking at the condition of the tracks and equipment and whether the weather played a role.

"It was snowing pretty good at the time and it was right in the middle of the mountains," said a dispatcher with the Garfield County Sheriff's Department.

Sgt. Vern Soucie of the Sheriff's Department said the snow "very likely contributed" to the accident.

Another spokesman for the Sheriff's Department said there was 9 or 10 inches of snow on the ground and it was still snowing Monday morning.

One couple on the train complained about the crew's performance.

"I got the distinct impression they were lacking training," said Bob Rilling, 35, of Boulder, Colo.

He said the train was going smoothly until the ride turned bumpy and the train stopped.

Rilling said no conductor came by to inform passengers what was wrong and they did not know it had derailed until a voice came on the intercom and said, "This here train is off the rail."

Rilling's wife, Barb, 34, said she and her husband were the first ones off the train at 3:30 a.m. and the passengers had nothing to eat or drink while they were stranded. She also said the train had started seven hours late out of Denver.

"If it's an airplane, when things go wrong they are so accommodating," she said.

Jacobsen said the lights also continued to function on the derailed train as the passengers awaited rescue.

"There was no safer place to be than aboard that train," Jacobsen said, adding that the crew probably would have insisted that none of the passengers leave the train before help arrived.

Six stranded travelers checked into the Colorado Hotel in Glenwood Springs, known for its hot springs, about 4:30 a.m. Monday, according to hotel manager Art Reina.

"They were glad to get here," he said. "They had reservations. We had coffee prepared for them and they went into their room. They were just tired."

Israel looking for 'new ideas'

UPI report

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's office said Monday the Israeli leader was studying "new ideas" to advance the Middle East peace process based on the 1978 Camp David Accords, which have failed to resolve the Palestinian problem.

Shamir touched off widespread speculation when he discussed the peace process Sunday with Israel Television's Arabic-language service and indicated a willingness to meet with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

"Mr. Shamir is now working on new ideas on how to further the peace process, ideas which he has not specified yet," said Avi Pazner, the prime minister's spokesman. "So I think those ideas will be ready sometime, he hasn't said exactly."

Pazner and Yosi Achimeier, another Shamir spokesman, both said the prime minister's new ideas would be based on the 1978 Camp David Accords between Egypt and Israel. Negotiations based on the accords, which Shamir has long insisted should be the starting point for peace talks, broke down in 1982.

"I would not say that it is a new peace initiative. It is the old good wine, which is the Camp David plan," Achimeier said. "On this basis, the prime minister is ready to suggest some new ideas in order to promote peace in the Middle East."

The peace accords signed by Egypt and Israel at Camp David on Sept. 17, 1978, called for negotiations on setting up a "self-governing authority" for Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, with Palestinian councils eventually replacing the existing Israeli administration.

Shamir's spokesman denied his announcement was part of a public relations offensive to offset gains made by the Palestine Liberation Organization after the declaration of an independent Palestinian state in the occupied territories and the decision of the United States to open talks with the PLO.

"Shamir is not one who is famous with his public relations and his public relations maneuvers. His deeds are honest and that is why his declarations are so honest," Achimeier said. "He is serious about it. If he didn't have something in mind, he would not declare it."

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering told a news conference that Shamir appeared to be working on the new Israeli government's approach to the peace process.

"We have clear signals ... from the prime minister that he is working on the subject, that he has ideas he wants to put forward," Pickering said. "At this stage ... the government needs a time in which to carefully examine all of the various possibilities and then decide, hopefully in consultation with the United States and perhaps others."

Shamir's announcement came one day after Mubarak told a Kuwaiti newspaper he would be willing to visit Israel if it would "lead to a solution of the (Palestinian) problem and to the realization of a just peace."

Israeli soldiers kill three near Lebanese border

United Press International

JERUSALEM — Israeli soldiers on patrol in southern Lebanon early Monday killed three armed guerrillas near the fence separating the two countries, the army said.

In a separate incident, Lebanese police said a small boat carrying Palestinian guerrillas on a possible mission to attack Israel crashed into rocks on the Mediterranean coast south of Beirut, killing at least one guerrilla.

No Israeli soldiers were wounded during the confrontation between Israeli soldiers and guerrillas in the central area of Israel's self-declared security zone in southern Lebanon, an army spokesman said.

The Israeli patrol encountered the squad early Monday morning near Meiss el Jebel in southern Lebanon, less than 6 miles southwest of the town of Kiryat Shemona, in the northernmost section of Israel between Lebanon and Syria.

The soldiers opened fire at close range on the three guerrillas and killed them, the spokesman said. The clash took place several yards from the border fence, the spokesman said.

Near the guerrillas' bodies, Israeli soldiers found Soviet-made Kalashnikov rifles, ammunition, combat jackets, an anti-tank rocket launchers and leaflets. The spokesman declined to release details on the leaflets.

The pro-Syrian National Resistance Front said in a statement from Beirut its guerrillas clashed with an Israeli patrol using rockets and machine guns. The coalition of leftist factions, which has made similar claims in the past, did not elaborate on the clash.

The radical Fatah Revolutionary Council of Abu Nidal also claimed responsibility for the clash with the Israeli patrol. The group said its guerrillas were on their way to attack the Israeli settlement of Manara in northern Israel when they were involved in a fierce battle with Israeli troops. The statement did not mention casualties.

In Beirut, police sources said a motorboat carrying four Palestinian guerrillas slammed into rocks on the Mediterranean coast.

IN BRIEF

HOCKEY

Deal pays immediate dividends

The New York Rangers and Hartford Whalers swung a deal in the morning and dividends began to show for both clubs before the day was done.

The key to a four-player deal between the Rangers and Whalers center Carey Wilson set up three goals Monday afternoon, including two by star goalie Tommas Sandstrom, to split New York out of the New Jersey Devils.

The Whalers lost 4-1 in overtime to the Pittsburgh Penguins Monday night, but before they were acquired, winger Don Maloney scored one goal and set up another for Hartford winless in its last seven games (0-7-1).

Elsewhere Monday, Buffalo edged Boston, 3-2, the New York Islanders topped Toronto, 4-2, St. Louis snuffed out Chicago, 4-1, Minnesota crushed Winnipeg, 3-1, and Calgary shocked Vancouver, 4-2 in overtime.

BASKETBALL

Ferry is ACC player of week

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. — Duke forward Danny Ferry, who scored 22 points and had nine rebounds in Duke's victory over Wake Forest last week, was tapped Monday as the Atlantic Coast Conference player of the week.

Ferry was picked by the Atlantic Coast Writers Association following his performance in Duke's 89-80 victory over the visiting Tigers in Durham, Wednesday night, and in the game in which he led the team to a 77-67 victory.

It was the second time in three weeks that Ferry has won the award.

The 6-10 forward for Duke is a 50.0 percent shooter, including three three-pointers, during the game. He also made good on eight of 12 attempts from the free-throw line. Ferry also had nine assists and five rebounds.

INDOOR SOCCER

Sockers win third straight

SAVANNAH, Ga. — The Sockers won their third straight game Monday night in a 1-0 victory over the Jacksonville Jaguars in the first round of the World Indoor Soccer Cup. The Sockers, coached by Bob Schuchman, were led by captain Steve Schuchman.

Schuchman scored the game-winning goal in the 11th minute of the match. The Jaguars, coached by Bob Schuchman, were led by captain Steve Schuchman.

In the only other game played Monday in the seven-team MISL, the Los Angeles Blast defeated the Wichita Wings, 2-1.

BASEBALL

McReynolds, Mets sign pact

NEW YORK — Mets pitcher Mike McReynolds has signed a one-year contract with the New York Mets. The deal marks the end of negotiations by both sides, the team's chief scout, Larry Schuler, said.

The 30-year-old right-hander is entering his eighth year in the major leagues. He had been a free agent since leaving his previous team, the Los Angeles Angels.

This was the smoothest negotiation in Mets history, according to Schuler. The deal is a one-year contract with a $1 million base salary and a $250,000 bonus.

McReynolds pitched in 1981 for the Mets, going 11-10 with a 3.00 ERA. He pitched in 1980 for the Mets, going 11-10 with a 3.00 ERA.

The Mets have said they will not honor guaranteed contracts.

Now it's the boys' turn

Last week 16 girls soccer teams participated in the Burger King Classic. This week the boys take the field to decide the Pizza Hut Invitational being played this year at Bishop Moore and Orlando Boone high schools. Last year the tournament was won by Tallahassee Leon, who beat Lake Mary 2-1 on penalty kicks in the finals.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
The aggressively bid slam was cold against any lead but a diamond. West attacked in diamonds since he felt that a passive lead would let declarer set up clubs for discards. This was good thinking. When your opponents have shown they have a suit they can use for discards, it is often right to lead away from a king or queen, hoping to set up a trick in time to use it. This is true even against a slam.
The bidding itself was a simple value sequence. North showed a good club suit plus spade support. South felt he had enough extra values to shout out the slam and did so directly.
With West's well-judged diamond lead, South no longer had time to set up the clubs. Fortunately South had one last chance. After winning the diamond lead and drawing two rounds of trumps, South led the queen of hearts from dummy. East was obliged to cover, and South won the ace. Next came the 10 of hearts. This time it was West's turn to cover in the hope that East had the nine of hearts. But not so. South ruffed and returned to his hand with a trump. The heart nine was good for a diamond discard, so South was then able to concede a club loser and make six spades. Even though South's play risked going down an extra trick, it was a very reasonable risk. Given that West had found the killing lead, it behooved South to try to salvage his contract. "I would never have bid the slam without the nine of hearts," South jested.

Child dreamed of adoption

DEAR ABBY: For years I have been writing this letter "in my head" — now it's time to put it on paper.

I scream inside when I read letters in your column from grown adopted children who wonder about their "real" parents — what they look like, possible siblings, and agonizing over whether to try to find them.

My "real" parents raised me, and I wished they hadn't. Throughout my childhood, I used to dream that some loving family would adopt me and tell me that I was "chosen" by them. Abby, this is an open letter to an adopted child.

Dear Adopted Child: So you wonder about your birth parents and their families today? Your curiosity is normal, but I beg you, leave well enough alone. Your mother had a very good reason for entrusting your care to someone else. She did not "give you away" — she gave you opportunities she could not offer you. Allowing someone else to adopt and raise you was the most loving, unselfish act a mother can make.

If you had an average upbringing with your adoptive parents, praise God that your birth mother had the courage to surrender you. If your adoptive parents did not treat you well, I am sorry, but bear in mind, you might not have fared better with you biological parents. Blood ties do not automatically create loving relationships. I know. Here is my story:

I was one of several children born to a middle-class, blue-collar working man, and a gentle, obedient, hard-working rural

ADVICE

mother. Outwardly we appeared to be an average middle-class family. My father always worked steady, and my mother cooked and cared for her home and children. We attended church regularly. The children were polite, and turned out better than just brag. A "typical American family" — from outward appearances.

Now for the truth. My father was a devil to live with. I, along with my mother and sister, were subjected to every kind of abuse a child could experience, and I mean every kind — verbal, physical and sexual. I grew up with fear and shame. My mother's job was to protect us kids long enough to get us out of the house alive. In that she succeeded, we all sustained enormous psychological damage.

As a child I used to dream that someone would adopt me. The closest I came was having a childless aunt and uncle who agreed to adopt us if we should ever become orphaned. Unfortunately, my uncle — not my father — died prematurely. For a while we had a wonderful neighbor, "Leona," who befriended his battered, lonely child. We rolled pie crust and play games. Then she moved, and that was the end of my adoption fantasies.

Years of psychotherapy, divine guidance and commitment to survival have enabled me to overcome my battered childhood. I'm middle-aged now, but when I was born, I know there must have been a childless couple who were praying they could have a healthy baby daughter like me to love and raise.

Perhaps such a couple received you, Adopted Child. If they loved and cared for you, look at them closely, for they are as "real" as any parents can be.

WISH I'D BEEN ADOPTED

DEAR ABBY: I am a mother who did not teach her children to write thank-you notes. Why? Because my mother didn't teach me to write thank-you notes. I asked her why, and she said because most people didn't have money for stationery and postage during the Depression. A verbal thank-you was considered sufficient.

Where do the snobbish etiquette people get the idea that a written thank-you is better than a spoken one?

I disagree strongly with the grandmother who refused to give her grandchildren any more presents because they didn't write thank-you notes. If she wants to know if they received her present, she should phone them up and ask them. Then, if they didn't say thank you, she would have a legitimate complaint.

Jesus was not thanked by nine of the 10 lepers he healed. Did he stop healing lepers? No!

I give presents because I love people. I neither expect nor desire thanks. A written thank-you is a waste of time and money.

MIDWESTERN GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: The number of readers who agree with you surprised and dismayed me! As for the story about Jesus and the lepers, according to "Good News for Modern Man" (the New Testament in today's English) published by the American Bible Society: When Jesus healed 10 lepers and only one thanked him, he said, "There were 10 men made clean—where are the (other) nine?" so obviously Jesus kept track of those who thanked him and those who did not. Should a Midwestern grandmother do less?

CONFIDENTIAL TO J.L. IN BEND, ORE.: A very savvy man once said: "A beautiful woman is the one I notice. A charming woman is the one who notices me."

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol YOUR BIRTHDAY

December 28, 1988

In the year ahead you are likely to be shooting for several major objectives. Although each might not be attained, your most important goals will have good chances of being achieved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you might secretly resent having to do something for someone because you'll feel you're being imposed upon unfairly; yet you'll still comply without making a big deal about it. Capricorn, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

Be wary about getting involved in any form of romantic intrigue at this time because what you'll hope to keep secret will not go undetected.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be fair, but so be realistic if you have to negotiate a delicate agreement today. Don't be wishy-washy and say "yes" to terms you don't like just to be nice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Avoid taking minor chores today if your heart is not in them. You'll be much more effective doing the same tasks later when your mood changes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't let obsessiveness gain the upper hand today if someone you're very fond of appears to be paying more attention to someone other than you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Continue to be kind to others today, especially family members, even if they do not show proper appreciation for your gestures. Their minds could be on other things.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be extremely careful today that you do not treat others in a condescending fashion. If you are insincere or try to use flattery to gain your ends, it won't work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you have a Christmas gift to return today, don't exchange it for something impractical just because the packaging dazzled you. Look for substance, not flash.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try not to butt into situations today that do not directly concern you. Although your intentions will be good, they could be misunderstood and rejected.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone you like who has hurt your feelings recently could be completely unaware of your reaction. Bring it out into the open today, because it can be easily resolved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be selective regarding the types of outside activities you get involved with at this time. There's a possibility you might jump into something which is over your purse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22) If you are not willing to share the limelight today with a person who made a recent accomplishment possible, you might not get help the next time it is needed.

There's life after menopause

DEAR DR. GOTT: Everyone tells me something different about the change of life: I will/won't need hormones. I will/won't enjoy sex anymore.

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

Can you live straight?
DEAR READER: Filthy.

As women age, their ovaries produce less of the female hormone called estrogen. Eventually, the production of hormone falls to such a low level that women no longer ovulate or have menstruation. This is called menopause.

Many menopausal women experience no discomfort whatsoever when their menstrual period ceases. In fact, they may feel a sense of freedom and relief because they can no longer become pregnant. They don't require synthetic hormone supplements and they continue to enjoy active sex lives.

Unfortunately, this is not always the case. Some women's bodies react violently to the decrease in hormone secretion. They have uncontrollable flushing (hot flashes), experience extreme emotional instability and suffer from a general unwell feeling.

Because calcium-uptake in bones is dependent on estrogen, these women can develop soft and brittle bones, as calcium is "washed out" of them during menopause. They may notice that sexual intercourse is difficult or painful because of shrinkage and dryness of the vaginal lining.

Such women can be helped with supplemental hormones in pill, patch or cream forms. Each case must be individualized and a woman should work with a gynecologist to determine what her needs are and whether hormone therapy is advisable.

In short, menopause is not the end of a happy, healthful and sexual life; it is simply the culmination of a woman's fertility. Not all women need (or should have) hormone therapy.

However, for those women who would be helped by hormones, ample assistance is available. Although hormone treatment may improve a woman's sense of well-being and reduce bone calcium loss, the use of these medications is associated with some side effects — in particular, an increase in the incidence of uterine cancer. Check with your gynecologist to determine if you are a candidate for hormone replacement.

For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Menopause." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a very stubborn painful case of trigeminal neuralgia/neuritis. Is the drug Tegretol the only treatment?

DEAR READER: Trigeminal neuralgia (also known as tic douloureux) is a condition of the trigeminal facial nerve, marked by electrical shocklike pains that affect a portion of the face. It is caused by pressure on the nerve or by a poorly understood breakdown of the nerve. The pains can appear without warning or they can be triggered by touching the face, chewing or brushing the teeth. When severe, the discomfort is incapacitating.

Several treatments are effective.

Phenytoin (Dilantin, a drug used for seizures) is a safe medication that may reduce both the severity and the frequency of trigeminal attacks.

Tegretol is also an anti-convulsant that is frequently used to treat trigeminal neuralgia. However, it does have several side effects, including drowsiness, suppression of blood cell formation, jaundice and kidney damage.

Sometimes, surgery (to release pressure on the nerve or to cut parts of the nerve to relieve pain) is necessary.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Some time ago I read that an examination of the oil secretions produced on the base of the nose supplied considerable information about the individual under study. Could you explain?

DEAR READER: Scientists have long been fascinated by the idea that body functions and diseases can be studied and monitored by examining the secretions in perspiration. Although the analysis of skin oils could, in theory, provide information about a person I am not aware of any practical application of this technique. Therefore, I am not able to explain the material you read.

Big game hunters are a breed apart

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — When some 250 men met in early December in Newport Beach, Calif. to honor one of their own with an award for lifetime achievement, there was no doubt of their exclusive standing.

They were all big game hunter and vehemently proud of their pastime, despite traditional disputes with wildlife conservationists who claim they are bloodthirsty killers masquerading as sportsmen.

The hunters came from across the United States for the presentation of the 32nd annual Weatherby Big Game Trophy to Robert Kubick of Anchorage, Alaska.

The criteria for the award are rigorous. The winner must have record-setting species of several animals from all six continents. The lifetime total kill is critical. The difficulty in securing the specimen and its rarity are key considerations.

The award's sponsor said fewer than 20 men in the world might merit serious consideration for the award, while only six are nominated each year based upon their achievements.

By contrast, there are an estimated 18 million hunting licenses renewed annually in the United States. So the sphere of the serious big game hunter is truly microscopic.

But most experts agree that the total is far greater in 1988 than in 1887, when Theodore Roosevelt created a scoring system to evaluate big game and a foundation "to promote manly sport with a rifle (and) work for the preservation of the large game in this country."

"I think more people are able to (hunt big game) today, simply because there are more wealthy people," said Ed Weatherby, president of the company that bears the family name and manufactures some of the most elaborate firearms and scopes available.

"It's easier to get to Africa than it ever was in Theodore Roosevelt's day."

He said the largest body of worldwide hunters is the 20,000-member Safari Clubs International based in Tucson, Ariz. The organization has established its own scoring system to evaluate big game trophies and distributes a substantial portion of membership fees to wildlife conservation efforts.

But while other conservationists have had trouble digesting the hunters' philosophy ever since Roosevelt laid down his ideals, Weatherby said there is no hypocrisy in the creed.

"It might sound like a contradiction, but it's not," Weatherby said. "The hunter takes very few animals compared to the natural course of nature."

"To give one example, a lion or a leopard in Africa may kill an impala once every other day, and if you multiply that by all the lions over the course of a year, you realize that within the same block of land, there might be only half a dozen hunters who might take one animal each. So it is very controlled."

Hunters are also restricted in any given case to shooting only the largest animal, which Weatherby said is almost always the oldest and weakest of the breed.

The fees they must pay for bagging their trophies — which hunters surveyed said can run as high as $40,000 for some breeds of foreign bighorn sheep — are always channeled directly into wildlife conservation efforts.

The sheer expense of those fees, all involved with the sport agree, virtually act as a stopgap measure against the uncontrolled slaughter of game animals.

"I think we are witnessing a trend similar to what's been happening in Europe, where hunting has become a sport for those who have the time and the money to participate," Weatherby said.

Nevertheless, the backlash against hunters has been manifest in several ways.

C.J. McElroy, the president of Safari Clubs International and a former Weatherby trophy winner, was met by several hundred protesters in 1987 when he opened his own museum in Tucson built around the kills he had accumulated.

The harsh reaction surprised his guests, which included many of his hunting peers.

"I would say there were 300 of them, many of them calling out 'Murderers! Murderers!' at us," said Bruno Scherrer, 56, a Brentwood, Calif. businessman with more than four decades of his life devoted to hunting.

"I never expected there would be such backlash," Scherrer said. "Some of them were so angry, they started throwing rocks. It was frightening."

McElroy refused to comment about the incident or about his sport.

"I've received enough publicity," he said. "I have nothing left to say."

Meanwhile, confrontations continue and have extended into popular hunting grounds.

Along the eastern Mojave Desert in California, a running battle evolved in December between hunters of the local bighorn sheep and a group of 30 activists who called themselves the "Hunt Saboteurs."

The Saboteurs traveled to the border town of Baker from as far away as San Jose, Santa Cruz, San Diego and Los Angeles specifically to disrupt anyone setting aim on the sheep.

The hunters are annually licensed to pursue the sheep by the California Department of Fish and Game. But the Saboteurs claimed there was "corruption inherent in the (Department of Fish and Game) management structure" for allowing the practice.

"They say they are siphoning off the sick and the old (sheep)," said Rick Bernardi, a Saboteur from San Jose, Calif. "But trophy hunters always go for the strongest and most magnificent animal, not the weak."

Bernardi said that within a week of his group's arrival there were several showdowns with hunters, including one in which a hunter fired warning shots to keep the protesters away.

"They weren't shooting to kill," Bernardi said, "but they left no doubt of their intentions in scaring our members off."

Bernardi said he was chased by a helicopter and all-terrain vehicles to keep him separated from a hunting party.

Both the California Highway Patrol and Department of Fish and Game denied a helicopter was anywhere near the desert hunting ground when the Saboteur claimed he was chased.

"But last year was worse," Bernardi said. "Someone got punched and the hunters threatened to kill him."

"It can get dangerous out there, but a lot of us have the feeling that we are willing to risk our lives to save the sheep. They are willing to step

The Blair Agency wants to serve their customers

Blair Insurance Agency, known for many years for homeowners' insurance as well as dependable auto coverage, can now type and issue homeowners' insurance policies on the spot in the office.

Homeowners' policies are available immediately at Blair, which is an advantage if you are a homeowner and need a policy for closing to meet the requirements of the lender.

Blair offers a three-year price-protected policy with an A-rated company. They even insure frame houses up to 50 years old as well as mobile homes, motorcycles and RV's.

Blair Insurance Agency, located at 2510A Oak Ave., has been serving Sanford for 27 years.

They regard their clients as "family." They are not just numbers to Steve Blair, office manager, or his mother, Genie Blair, owner and founder of the agency.

With several different companies from which to draw, the Blair Agency is able to shop around for the best deals tailored to the needs of their customers, Steve said.

Genie founded the agency and remains actively involved in all aspects of its operation. Considered an expert in the insurance field, early in her career she was for a time the only woman licensed in both real estate and insurance in the state.

The Blair Agency sells personal injury protection insurance, but recommends liability insurance as well. PIP, as it is commonly called, is cheaper insurance, but is "self-centered protection which provides nothing for your fellow man," according to Steve.

Liability, which he said provides better coverage for all concerned in an accident situation, is made more affordable at Blair Agency.

Steve said he also specializes in helping drivers who have trouble getting insurance due to too many tickets or accidents. But drivers with tough records aren't the only ones who benefit from Blair Agency services. Drivers with clean records will also like the services and savings they get at Blair Agency.

They will like dealing with the Blair Agency staff, which is trained and educated to give clients the best of service.

Because Blair isn't a high-volume agency, Steve says, it treats each customer in a special way. "If I service my accounts honestly and properly, I don't have to worry about money. Being honest is my profit in the community. You're not going to find anybody more honest."

Blair Agency is open Monday through Friday at the corner of S. Park Avenue and Oak Avenue, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Call Blair and compare prices at 322-7710 or 323-3866.

Group trades teddy bears for war toys

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — More than a thousand children from across the nation have traded their war toys for teddy bears in the last year as part of a campaign to promote peace, an organizer said Monday.

Jerry Rubin, head of the Los Angeles chapter of the Alliance for Survival, a group active in anti-war and environmental issues, said in a telephone interview that hundreds of other children have sent letters of support.

Rubin, who is not related to the 1960s anti-war activist of the same name, read some of the letters the alliance has received.

"I don't want this gun. I got it at cancer camp to fight my leukemia. I want a teddy bear to love," wrote a 7-year-old boy named Ames from Tipton, Iowa.

"Toy guns for teddies are the best thing I've ever heard of. Keep it going!" wrote Sarah, a Massachusetts elementary school student.

And from Dorchester, Mass.,

David, 6, sent in his toy gun and wrote: "This is my last gun. My mom won't let me have any more. Please send me a teddy bear. I will give it to a homeless child."

Rubin, who in the last year has buried, melted, steamrolled and sent war toys aloft in a balloon to publicize the cause, said more than 1,000 children from 27 states have either mailed or delivered their toy guns, laser-firing robots and other violence-oriented toys to alliance offices, which have given the children teddy bears in return.

The bears are provided by Dakin Toys, a San Francisco company.

"What these kids are saying shows (that) we can change something negative into something positive," Rubin said.

Rubin, who has organized demonstrations outside Sylvester Stallone's mansion to protest the actor's "Rambo" movies, said the anti-war toy sentiment has picked up so much support that his group intends to continue the campaign next year.

"War toys are desensitizing children to the horrors of real war," Rubin said. "Studies have been done showing that children who play with war toys exhibit increasing violence levels, poor performance in school, are abusive to animals and there's even a possible correlation to criminal behavior in later years."

Due, in part, to the alliance's efforts, the Los Angeles Board of Education recently passed a resolution strongly urging parents to stop buying their children war toys.

Also, because of accidents in which police officers have shot children and teenagers playing with guns that appear authentic, the California Legislature passed a law that becomes effective Jan. 1 barring the sale, manufacture or distribution of replica toy guns.

Covenant House helps runaway teenagers cope

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The streets of Hollywood are brimming with them, runaway teenagers strung out on drugs and forced into a life of prostitution.

Most are victims of physical and emotional abuse, unable to escape the grip of their addictions yet desperate to somehow free themselves from a grim existence.

The fable of a sun splashed Los Angeles lures thousands of runaways — as many as 10,000, according to some estimates — to the city every year. Fleeing rejection in their own homes, they all too often fall into despair for lack of education or training.

Some eventually seek help through crisis intervention programs. Others, however, are turned away.

It is at that juncture where the people at Covenant House, a private social welfare agency, swing into action.

Founded some 20 years ago by Bruce Ritter, a Franciscan priest, Covenant House has rescued an estimated 100,000 street kids in New York, Toronto, Houston, Fort Lauderdale, New Orleans and Guatemala.

It has now come to Los Angeles, where on Dec. 10 a team of Covenant House workers embarked on what will be a nightly outreach program in Hollywood, driving up and down seedy boulevards in a van and offering hot cocoa, cold sandwiches and on-the-spot counseling to street children.

Anne Donahue, executive director of the agency, said that, in just the first few nights, the counselors encountered dozens of street children, including a teenage boy from Michigan who had turned to prostitution.

"He met a kid who told him about hustling and he ended up on Santa Monica Boulevard," she said.

Another prostitute, a 17-year-old girl, "literally snatched a sandwich out of (a counselor's) hand. She was in very, very bad shape," Donahue said.

The establishment of Covenant House in Los Angeles was announced Dec. 14 by former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, a Covenant House board member.

"We must build a future that holds out true hope for the kids that are forced to turn to the streets... for survival because they have no other place to turn," Simon said in a speech before the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce.

His goal is highly ambitious. Covenant House will provide runaways the "second chance to evolve from our society's refuse to its workers and managers," he said.

The street outreach program, funded by the Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce, will operate every night from 8 p.m. to 3 a.m. A second van is expected to begin operating in Anaheim and Long Beach next year.

Along with the outreach program, Covenant House has a nationwide hotline and is developing plans to open a crisis center and long-term residential program by 1990.

Hunters

between the gun and the sheep."

Hunters bristle at the suggestion they are indiscriminately destroying breeds of animals. The privilege of hunting — especially in foreign countries — is often granted out of necessity, said another past winner of the Weatherby trophy.

"Sure, there's controversy, but keep the hunter out of it," said Thornton Snider, 71, from Turlock, Calif. "Africa is practically a basket case, and those people, the only thing they've got to sell in many cases is the game."

"It's no different than the cattleman. They have nothing, and it's a source of great income for nations like Zambia, Tanzania, Ethiopia and Zimbabwe."

Snider said some of the more turbulent African nations, including the Sudan and Mozambique, are hurting on two different fronts because of political strife.

He said armed citizens of those countries are now slaughtering animals themselves without consideration of profits lost (on hunting licenses), or of random elimination of some species, including the female and the strongest of the young.

"There is no income and no control," Snider said. "It would be the same as taking all the game wardens out of the United States."

Scherrer said the layman's image of hunters also has been confused with those of poachers, who have scoured Africa for both elephant tusks and rhinoceros horns.

"I have heard there are no elephants left in Kenya," Scherrer said. "It was once the No. 1 safari country in the world, but they have stopped all hunting there since 1977."

"This is not because of the hunters. It is because of the poachers. And in the case of the black rhino, it is now on the endangered species list because they have sold horns to many Asian countries, where people believe the ground up horn is an aphrodisiac."

One clinical psychologist who is familiar with the standards and practices of big game hunters said she cannot agree with the sport's critics.

Dr. Marilyn Ruman, based in Encino, Calif., said she has seen the modus operandi of several hunters during her own photo safaris in Botswana, Zambia, Zimbabwe, Rwanda and Kenya. The charges made by groups like the Hunt Saboteurs, she said, are groundless.

"The big game hunter is a highly-competitive individual playing a game that is restricted to few people," Ruman said. "In fact, to play the game, this is a very select tribe, playing something of an intricate chess game."

"It's a game played by the same men who enjoy any game that is strategic and privileged. You are looking at men competing at the very highest level of competition, not just somebody who goes out and shoots game."

Ruman said she held the same prejudices against hunting until she saw the process actually carried out.

"The big game hunters make a very convenient target, but they... are the least threat," Ruman said. "Unfortunately, they make the biggest target, because many of them come off in a privileged way and don't make very good spokespeople for themselves. People don't have much sympathy for them."

"But if we engaged in war on the same basis that these men hunt animals, there would be very few people killed."

Castro chafes under Soviet pressure

United Press International

HAVANA, Cuba — Cuban President Fidel Castro has discovered to his chagrin that his revolutionary rhetoric is out of sync with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Last week's signing at the United Nations of the Angola-Namibia agreement, arranged by the United States, is the most prominent example of Cuban policy interests having to take a back seat to Gorbachev's desires to improve relations with the United States.

The Soviet Union's alliance with Cuba is the Kremlin's strongest tie to the Third World, but the relationship sometimes has been a volatile one marked by friction and compromise, largely because of differing global objectives.

But since Moscow bears the brunt of Cuba's bills, providing $5 billion a year in economic aid, Castro has had to toe Gorbachev's line, even if ever so lightly.

Cuba agreed to pull its 50,000 troops out of Angola, where it has buttressed the Marxist regime against a guerrilla movement supported by the United States and South Africa. The agreement was part of a deal under which South Africa will grant independence to neighboring Namibia, Africa's last colony.

The Cuban withdrawal by 1991 means Angola must make peace with the guerrillas of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola or fight on without Cuban help, while the United States can continue its support.

Cuban Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmerca Peoli demonstrated Havana's unhappiness, saying remarks by President Reagan supporting UNITA were "an affront against the spirit of peace." That angered Secretary of State George Shultz, marring what was supposed to be a celebratory occasion.

For a frustrated Castro, it is easier to lash out at the United States than at the Soviet Union, the real target of his unhappiness.

The thawing in U.S.-Soviet relations does not make for an international environment conducive to revolutionary activity. However, Castro, as a venerable Third World leader, cannot afford to appear inactive.

Consequently he has begun a diplomatic offensive toward Latin America, but shifting the emphasis from the political arena to economics. Earlier this month in Mexico City, he said the resolution of the region's economic crisis "is more important than a revolution in one or two countries."

Moscow, however, realizes there is a delicate balance in dealing with Castro, especially in Central America.

The test on how far the Soviets can push him may well come in the new Bush administration, which is expected to launch a new peace campaign over Nicaragua and could call on the Kremlin to lean on its ally.

It would not be the first time the Soviets nudged Castro over Central America.

After the 1962 Cuban missile crisis when Moscow removed missiles from the island under U.S. pressure, the Soviet Union cooled on Castro's revolutionary tactics in the Caribbean, cutting back aid and refusing to increase oil shipments.

With a foundering economy, he was forced to stop fomenting revolution in the region, and toned down his rhetoric.

DOE pessimistic about plant's tritium output
United Press International

NEW YORK — The Department of Energy is questioning whether three aging nuclear reactors at South Carolina's Savannah River Plant will ever be able to produce sufficient levels of tritium to meet the nation's needs. The New York Times reported Tuesday.

The department also is concerned that the three reactors, currently out of service while they undergo repair work, may not be operational until the end of 1989, the newspaper said, citing a new Department of Energy report.

The Savannah River plant, located in Aiken, S.C., is the nation's sole producer of tritium, a radioactive gas used to build modern thermonuclear warheads, the Times said.

NOTICE OF ADMINISTRATION
 TO ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS OR DEMANDS AGAINST THE ABOVE ESTATE AND ALL OTHER PERSONS INTERESTED IN THE ESTATE:

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that the administration of the estate of BALAS CHECHO, deceased, File Number 88-1046-CP is pending in the Circuit Court for Seminole County, Florida, Probate Division, of which is Seminole County Court House, North Park Avenue, Sanford, FL 32771. The name and address of the personal representative's attorney are set forth below:

All persons having claims or demands against the estate are required, WITHIN THREE MONTHS FROM THE DATE OF THE FIRST PUBLICATION OF THIS NOTICE, to file with the clerk of the above court a written statement of any claim or demand they may have. Each claim must be in writing and must indicate the basis for the claim, the name and address of the creditor or his agent or attorney, and the amount claimed. If the claim is not yet due, the date when it will become due shall be stated. If the claim is contingent or unliquidated, the nature of the uncertainty shall be stated. If the claim is secured, the security shall be described. The claimant shall deliver sufficient copies of the claim to the clerk to enable the clerk to mail one copy to each personal representative.

All persons interested in the estate to whom a copy of this Notice of Administration has been mailed are required,
