Drug Abuse Prevention Group Gears For Future

Families Together Reaches Milestone

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

After three years, Families Together, Inc., a Seminole County grassroots drug abuse prevention organization, will have its first full-time paid executive director.

Maggie Thomas, formerly coordinator for Project TYKE (Teach Young Kids Effectively) at the Seminole Community Mental Health Center, will begin work for Families Together Tuesday.

"With the hiring of an executive director, we've reached a milestone," said Barbara Dean, president and founder of the group. "I'm extremely excited about the growth potential for Families Together through the innovative ideas that Maggie is bringing to us. We are looking forward to having additional staff by Jan. 1."

One of Ms. Thomas' first tasks will be to, with Mrs. Dean, map out the group's program for the year including the annual membership drive to be held in October.

A welcoming party will be held in the office in Suite 206 in Sweetwater Square, on Fox Valley Drive (off Wekiva Road) west of Longwood, 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Mrs. Dean is inviting the public to come by and meet Ms. Thomas. Starting Tuesday the office will be open 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. Volunteers are needed to help staff the office.

Ms. Thomas has also worked at the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services providing employment counseling for disabled individuals. While with Project TYKE, she organized volunteers and helped parents through an outreach program. She was also district intake coordinator for HRS in Orlando investigating alleged charges of child abuse and neglect and counseling families and children.

Ms. Thomas has a master's degree in social science education from the University of Central Florida and is affiliated with the American Staff Training and Development, and is a member of the Seminole County Child Abuse Task Force.

Mrs. Dean reflected on the progress of Families Together.

Quake Rattles Eastern Europe

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI)

— A strong earthquake jolted Eastern Europe Sunday, toppling chimneys, rattling chandeliers and furniture and cracking walls and windows. No major damage or deaths were reported.

The quake, which struck at 12:29 a.m., measured 6.9 on the open-ended Richter scale and was centered 110 miles northeast of Bucharest, Romania, the U.S. Geological Survey said in Washington.

It lasted about 20 seconds and also rattled Belgrade, the Bulgarian capital of Sofia, eastern Poland and parts of the Soviet Union, including Moscow.

The quake's center was in Vrancea, the Romanian gas and oil center south of the Transylvanian Alps where a 7.2 earthquake in March 1977 killed an estimated 1,500 people. Sunday's quake was Romania's strongest since the 1977 disaster.

"There were no remarkable damages," said the Seismological Center of Romania, which reported in the official news agency Agerpress the quake measured 6.5 on the Richterscale.

"The whole house was shaking," said U.S. Embassy spokesman Frank Strovas in Bucharest. "It was very scary. We were scrambling to get outside."

Thousands of Bucharest residents spent part of the night in the open, afraid to return to their homes. Romanian officials said the quake toppled chimneys, knocked down bricks and tiles, broke windows and cracked walls.

Strovas said the earthquake knocked the facing off one building and cracked his house, but he saw no major damage in his neighborhood.

"We just went and sat outside for an hour or so," Strovas said. "It was a short time but it was very strong. Everybody came out of the buildings. People were getting in cars and leaving town. Nobody was panicking."

In the Soviet Union, the official Tass news agency said, "Individual buildings in Moldavia were damaged and there were casualties."

In the past, the use of the term "casualties" has meant deaths but Radio Moscow only said "people were injured" and mentioned no fatalities.

Tass reported the quake measured 3 to 4 degrees on the 12-point Mercalli scale in Moscow, 4 degrees in the Black Sea area and 7 to 8 degrees in the Moldavian capital of Kishinev.

Reports from Sofia said the quake caused slight damage and caused a short blackout in the Bulgarian capital where thousands of people left their homes.

Residents of high-rise buildings in Belgrade also fled into the open. In Yugoslavia, the quake was most prominent in the east along the Romanian border, but it was felt as far inland as Zagreb.

In the Yugoslav town of Zaječar, close to the Bulgarian and Romanian borders, the tremor shattered glass in a sports hall where 4,000 people were attending a rock concert, cutting the program short. No injuries were reported.

The Polish news agency PAP said the quake caused chandeliers to swing, furniture to move and flower pots to come crashing down in Lublin. But, PAP said, "the strength of the quake was small and caused no (major) damage."

40 Percent Voter Turnout Expected

County elections officials are forecasting "a good turn-out" of voters for Tuesday's primary. More than 500 workers are set to help in gathering the vote, from 93 precincts, the most ever in county elections history.

Two weeks ago, the election's office was scrambling to replace a half-dozen polling places when six churches backed out of agreements to serve as voting locations because of state lottery campaigning on church property.

The campaigning is legal, since a state statute change allows campaigning as close as 50 feet from the polling place.

County elections supervisor Sandra Goard said by the end of that week, all six polling places had been replaced, and the other 87 polling places were confirmed.

Ms. Goard projects that 36,086 — 39 percent — of the county's 92,529 eligible voters will go to the polls Tuesday.

A Division of Elections official in Tallahassee offered a near-mirror state-wide projection.

"We're expecting a 40 percent turn-out of eligible voters across the state," Dorothy Glisson, a deputy secretary for elections said.

She said state-wide, more than 5.5 million voters are eligible to cast ballots Tuesday, and that projections from her office indicate about 2.2 million will go to the polls.

State-wide, there are 730 candidates, according to Ms. Glisson, who added that answering candidate questions has been "a good bit of work."

"It's been a busy time," she said. Of the expected number of county residents going to the polls, Seminole elections office manager Caylon Cohen said, "That's a pretty good turn-out for a primary election."

She said the projection compares with the 1984 primary when 20 percent of 85,321 eligible voted, and the 1982 primary when 20.9 percent of 74,457 voted.

She also said this is the first primary where 93 precincts will be used. The 1982 and 1984 races included 72 precincts.

Due to increases in population, new precincts have been developed, Ms. Goard said.

The election is expected to cost between $50,000 and $60,000, according to Ms. Cohen. She said more than 500 workers will help get the job done throughout the day Tuesday, and into the tabulation period after polls close at 7 p.m.

"We've hired 374 poll workers, some clerks, inspectors, 93 elections deputies who will be at each site to assure everything is done according to the law, and another 45-50 to work at the central office election night," Ms. Cohen said.

She said results may start to be known as early as 9:30 p.m. Tuesday.

During the final two weeks prior to the vote, an estimated 800 people cast absentee ballots, which will be the first to be counted after the polls close, Ms. Cohen said.

The ballots were filled out both at the county elections office, as well as by mail. The absentee ballot filing period ended Friday at 5 p.m., but those received by mail in the County Services Building, Sanford, by 7 p.m. will be valid, she said.

Tests were conducted on the elections office vote tabulation equipment Friday to assure the equipment is functioning properly. The tests were done in front of the press, and open to the public as required by law.

"The tests are a usual procedure," Ms. Cohen said. The tests were completed successfully.

Death Toll At 72 In Air Crash

Many Residents Still Missing

CERRITOS, Calif. (UPI) — An Aeromexico DC-9 jetliner and a single-engine plane collided in a clear sky Sunday and hurtled into a suburban Los Angeles residential area, killing all 67 people aboard the planes and at least five people on the ground.

A wall of flame and burning debris howled through the placid subdivision 20 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles. The planes crashed just 8 miles from Disneyland and 3 miles from the Knott's Berry Farm amusement park.

One resident burned to death trying to save his $170,000 house with a garden hose. Parts of the two planes rained down for 10 minutes after the midday collision.

Authorities said the planes were between 6,000 and 7,000 feet high, and visibility extended 14 miles, when they collided. The Federal Aviation Administration would not comment on how they came to be in the same airspace but one airport official said he understood the small plane "had every right to be there."

Part of the fuselage of Aeromexico Flight 498 came to rest on Carmenita Avenue after hurtling through a concrete retaining wall. Another section protruded from the rubble of a house. They were the only recognizable pieces of the DC-9 to be seen.

Parts of bodies littered the manicured lawns and emergency workers rushed about covering them with yellow plastic bags.

They did not begin gathering the dead until sundown.

"Our people are working in teams out there and it'll be sometime tomorrow afternoon before we finish our search and have everything collected," said Bill Gold, a spokesman for the coroner's office. "You might have a wallet near a man's body and a handbag near a woman's body. We're being careful about moving things until we've had a chance to examine the connections."

The death toll on the ground could rise. "We have numerous people unaccounted for," said Sheriff's Deputy Lynda Evans. Highway Patrol spokesman Lyle Whitten said five were known dead.

The airliner's flight recorder, which contains flight data and recordings of cockpit conversation, was recovered in a back yard on Holmes Street, authorities said. They also reported late Sunday night that they had arrested two people for looting — one they said was robbing a damaged house and another who was picking up pieces of the airliner.

An Aeromexico official said there were 58 passengers and

Casselberry Man Critical Following Head-On Crash

A Casselberry man was reported in critical condition today following a head-on collision at the intersection of County Road 15 and Evansdale, Lake Mary, Sunday night.

Bobby F. Multari, 1131 Galahad Drive, was reportedly extricated from his automobile and transported by air to Orlando Regional Medical Center. Exploratory surgery reportedly was conducted at 11:30 p.m. Sunday and there are possible head injuries, Lake Mary police said.

No information was available early Monday concerning passengers in the other vehicle.

The accident is under investigation.

Early Sunday, an Orlando man was killed when he was thrown from his vehicle when it flipped on Interstate 4 near Deltona. His death was added to the holiday traffic death toll in Florida which early today stood at 17.

Darrell Boucher, 25, died when he was ejected from his 1984 Bronco of which he lost control of while driving west-bound on the Interstate.

IN BRIEF

FAA To Begin Drug Tests For Workers Responsible For Safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the Federal Aviation Administration, confident the agency does not have "a lot of drug users," says it will begin drug tests for federal employees responsible for ensuring airline safety.

President Reagan has urged all federal employees to submit voluntarily to drug tests and recently a number of air traffic controllers were suspended because of allegations of drug use.

Asked if the FAA tests every controller now, Engen said: "We do not now, but I have had a plan in being for the last year and a half."

"I didn't have the money earlier this year," he said. "I do now, and we're implementing that plan this year. It will test everyone who comes into the FAA who will fly an airplane... who will work on an airplane, who will control an airplane and then annually he will take a drug test."

Engen said FAA employees will be tested for drugs "at their next annual physical."

"Car Wars" Breaks Out

Hordes of potential buyers swarmed new-car showrooms in pursuit of the magic numbers — 2.4 and 2.9.

General Motors started the great car rush Thursday by offering a financing rate of a mere 2.9 percent on three-year loans. Chrysler followed Friday with 2.4 percent for two-year deals and Ford matched GM's plan.

A random sampling showed cars being sold at twice the normal pace at many dealerships and the "traffic" — the industry term for customers in the showroom — was too great for some sales forces.

The low rates, combined with end-of-the-model-year prices, brought in the curious and bargain hunters who didn't necessarily need a new car.

The programs can mean a savings of $400 to $1,500 for buyers willing to take the higher payments that come with a two-year, low-financing deal, as opposed to more traditional four-year loans.

Halting Nudity Causes Riot

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Police and hordes of beach-goers clashed on the sand Sunday in a riot sparked when officers tried to remove several young women who were sunbathing in public.

Hundreds of beach-goers charged at police, overturning two squad cars and set them ablaze near the pier at Main and Ocean street about 2:45 p.m., Lt. Jack Reinholtz said.

According to Reinholtz, four-to-five women were either sunbathing or being sunbathed in front of a crowd of spectators when police tried to halt the activity.

It was then that the crowd charged at police and a riot erupted.

At least two police cars were gutted. Several lifeguard vehicles were destroyed or damaged by the crowd.

Tropical Depression Moves Westerly As Forecasters Watch

MIAMI (UPI) — A strengthening tropical depression moved westward over the Atlantic Ocean today and forecasters waited to see if it would turn into the fourth tropical storm of the peaking hurricane season.

"This is the time of the year — when winter has not set in and the water has had a lot of time to heat up to maintain a tropical storm — when the highest number of storms will occur," said Andrew Stern, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center.

At 6 a.m. the storm was centered about 1,100 miles east of the Lesser Antilles and 2,400 miles southeast of Miami, at latitude 14.0 north, longitude 43.5 west. Carrying winds of nearly 35 mph, the depression was moving westward at about 15 mph.

Forecasters said the depression could reach tropical storm strength by tonight. If its winds reach 39 mph, it will be classified as a tropical storm and named Danielle.

The storm swept off the African coast several days ago. Its chances of becoming Danielle will depend on a low pressure system in its path, Stern said.

Spacelab Missions Canceled

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — In a devastating blow for space science, NASA will cancel 15 to 18 shuttle Spacelab missions planned over the next five years as a direct result of the Challenger disaster, an aerospace magazine reported today.

"There is no point in us putting any funding now into any mission that will have no flight activity in five years, so those missions have been canceled," Samuel Keller, deputy associate administrator for space science and applications, told Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine.

Aviation Week said the space agency now plans to launch just two or three Spacelab missions before 1990.

GOP Hopes Primary Prelude To Its Legislative Gains

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Republican strategists say Tuesday's primary election is the first step on their road to greater representation in the Legislature — but Democratic spokesmen say the GOP is basing its hopes on "smoke and mirrors" and will make minimal gains at best.

Republicans, long the minority in the Legislature, currently hold 11 of the 40 Senate seats and 46 of 120 House spots. They hope a surge of conservative Latinos immigrating from the south and retiring Republicans moving in from the north will give them the votes they need to add to gains made on Ronald Reagan's coattails in 1984.

With a little luck, GOP political director R.J. Johnson says, the party will pick up as many as 10 new seats in the House and five in the Senate.

"The fact that now a Republican can win, that mentality, has brought out very qualified candidates," said Johnson. "We used to have to twist arms to get people to run — now they are crawling out of the woodwork."

Johnson happily points to party registration figures showing Republican gains of more than 91,000 voters since summer 1984. At the same time, the Democrats lost 143,000 voters, a pro-GOP swing of more than 234,000 votes.

Johnson also cites a recent Mason-Dixon poll that found 39 percent of Floridians identify with the Republican philosophy, regardless of registration.

"We have probably the most powerful state party in history in terms of what we can provide our candidates in technical assistance and financial support," Johnson said. "It's ours to win or lose."

Florida Democratic Party Executive Director Mike Hamby thinks the registration figures that so please Johnson are misleading. He said the Democratic decline was due to a purge of outdated voter rolls, and not to any great disenchantment with the party.

Hamby predicted that, without the bonus of Ronald Reagan heading up this year's ballot, the GOP will probably break even in seats won and lost. And that, Hamby said, would be a victory for the Democrats.

"If we can maintain the majority we have now, we would be pleased," Hamby said. "The bottom line is, we still have 22 percent more Democrats than Republicans."

That bottom line won't be finalized until after the November 2 general election. In the meantime, both parties are looking to Tuesday's primary to set the stage for the fall showdown.

Both parties see the GOP's best opportunity to gain in seats vacated by Democrats seeking higher office. In the Senate alone, Democrats Frank Mann, Harry Johnston, Joe Gersten, Ed Dunn and Betty Castor have left to seek statewide offices.

The ballot Tuesday features primary elections in 13 of 22 Senate races and 49 of 120 House elections. Races of interest races include:

—Senate District 15, where four Republicans are fighting for the right to take on incumbent Sen. Jeanne Malchon, D-St. Petersburg. Malchon, who narrowly won in 1982, is one of a handful of incumbent senators the GOP has targeted as beatable.

—Senate District 40, where Carlos Dominguez and Rep. Dexter Lehtinen, R-Perrine, are fighting for the right to run against Sen. Roberta Fox, D-Miami. Fox, also on the GOP hit list, is a liberal-to-moderate Democrat whose district has been flooded with conservative Republican Latin Americans since she last ran.

—Senate District 34, where two Democrats and two Republicans hope to replace attorney general candidate Sen. Joe Gersten, D-Miami. One of those Republicans is Rep. Ileana Roe-Lehtinen, who married

Rep. Dexter Lehtinen and persuaded him to change parties last year. If both are elected, the political pair would continue their habit of living half a year in each district.

—House District 5, where seven Democrats and two Republicans hope to replace Rep. James Ward, D-Fort Walton Beach. Among the Republican challengers is Robert Harden, who narrowly lost a disputed election to Ward in 1984 when election officials failed to include his name on two voting machines in Harden's home precinct.

—House District 9, where three Democratic challengers will try to unseat incumbent Al Lawson, D-Tallahassee, the only black legislator between Pensacola and Jacksonville.

—House District 10, where four Democrats, including two former Tallahassee commission members, hope to replace retiring House strongman Herb Morgan, D-Tallahassee.

—House District 16, where three Democrats challenge incumbent Rep. John Thomas, D-Jacksonville. Thomas was formally censured by his House colleagues this spring after his conviction on four felony counts of falsifying a 1980 Small Business Administration loan application.

—House District 34, where incumbent Carl Selph, R-Casselberry, faces a tough challenge from Republican Frank Stone. Selph pleaded no contest to charges of failing to report an accident and careless driving following a late-night accident in Tallahassee this spring. He pleaded not guilty to additional charges of drunken driving and filing a false police report, and still faces trial on those charges.

—House District 65, where incumbent Elvin Martinez, D-Tampa, is challenged by fellow Democrat Joel Epperson. Martinez is awaiting a hearing on four charges he lied to a grand jury about whether or not he received drugs earlier this year.

Incumbents Tough To Beat In Cabinet Races

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Democratic incumbents in four Cabinet races go into Tuesday's primary with history on their side — no Republican has won a Cabinet seat in Florida since Reconstruction.

Up for re-election are Treasurer-Commissioner of Insurance Bill Gunter, Commissioner of Agriculture Doyle Conner, Comptroller Gerald Lewis and Secretary of State George Firestone. Of the four, only Gunter faces primary opposition.

Gunter, 51, is challenged on the Democratic side by Raphael Herman, a Miami Beach real estate agent and former Israeli soldier. Herman, who has run a very low-profile campaign on a shoestring budget, may be this year's equivalent of David versus Goliath. Gunter has widespread name recognition, one of the best political networks in the state and ten years experience as commissioner.

Herman, 39, also faces an overwhelming financial disadvantage — according to his August 8 financial report, he had raised $8,217. Gunter had raised more than $1,845,000.

Gunter has tried to downplay an ongoing investigation of his office. He has been accused of favoring attorneys who contribute to his campaigns when hiring lawyers for department cases. Gunter's office has been under investigation by the FBI in connection with those charges.

On the Republican side, former state Sen. Van Poole seems a good bet to be the nominee. Even if longshot newcomer Tim Keegan should upset Poole, he faces a serious legal problem. Keegan is 24. The state constitution requires a minimum age of 30 for Cabinet officials. State attorneys have said they won't challenge Keegan's candidacy — but any one else is free to, including Poole or the eventual Democratic nominee.

Poole has raised about $332,000; Keegan about $3,700.

Poole, 51, and Gunter are diametrically opposed in their views on controlling high insurance rates. Poole believes the industry needs less regulation and limits on damage awards in lawsuits. Gunter spent this spring successfully promoting a bill that greatly increases the state's regulatory power.

Incumbent Commissioner of Agriculture Doyle Conner has held his post since 1980, and has not faced a primary opponent in 24 years. Republican Party chairman Jeanie Austin has promised to make Conner a special target, and to supply the party nominee with plenty of financial support.

Hoping to win that support are Brevard County rancher Charles Bronson and Joseph Smith, a Fort Lauderdale chiropractor. Bronson, 37, says his agricultural education and experience make him the obvious nominee, while Smith, 33, has criticized Bronson for his recent conversion from the Democratic to the GOP party.

Bronson has gathered about $32,000 in campaign contributions, while most of Smith's $11,000 has come in the form of loans from himself. Both Republicans are far behind Conner, who has raised $263,000, most of which he has held in reserve for the general election.

Comptroller Gerald Lewis has also been the target of an investigation, and a pair of GOP opponents have already taken shots at him over it. Lewis, 52, is under investigation by a federal grand jury checking allegations he shook down bankers for campaign contributions when he won his third term in 1982. At Lewis' request, those allegations are also under review by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

Republican Craig Kiser, a blind lawyer who twice served as Lewis' general counsel, has repeatedly blasted Lewis over the allegations.

Bomb Rips South African Supermarket

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A bomb ripped through a supermarket near Durban today, wounding five people in the 17th bomb attack in South Africa since the state of emergency began June 12.

Government authorities today also reported two deaths elsewhere, pushing to 290 the death toll in racial unrest under emergency conditions imposed by President Pieter Botha.

The explosion ripped through a Pick 'n Pay supermarket in Mont Clair, about 10 miles from the East Coast port of Durban, at 1:05 p.m., a police spokesman said.

An ambulance official said five people were treated for serious injuries and would be transferred to the nearby King Edward Hospital.

A reporter who tried to reach the site said he was stopped by armed police who cordoned off the area and patrolled with dogs.

A January bombing blamed by the government on the outlawed African National Congress, which is fighting to overthrow the white-led government and its policies of racial separation, killed five women and wounded 49 people in Durban. There was no indication of responsibility for today's blast.

Others bombings in Johannesburg, Pretoria, rural towns and the northern enclave of Walvis Bay have claimed seven lives and injured about 150 people under the state of emergency.

In Pretoria, the government Bureau for Information today reported a 12-year-old black girl was killed and two women wounded Sunday in a gasoline-bomb attack on a house near Grahamstown. The bureau said a man was killed by a burning car-tire "necklace," often used by radical blacks to kill more moderate ones, in the Johannesburg township of Soweto.

In Johannesburg, Leah Tutu said she and her husband, Bishop Desmond Tutu, would leave today for Cape Town for a church ceremony Wednesday in which he will be made archbishop of Cape Town and the first black leader of the nation's 2 million Anglicans. His public enthronement follows Sept. 7.

On Sunday, the 1984 Nobel peace laureate preached his last sermon as bishop of Johannesburg to a congregation of white and black Anglicans in the township of Soweto, his home since 1978.

"Despite all that the powers of the world might do, we are going to be free," Tutu told the Soweto congregation of about 1,000 white and black Anglicans. "The price we have paid already is a heavy price. We will go on, paying yet more in lives."

More than 100 policemen blocked roads in Soweto and barred reporters as about 300 blacks marched to the funeral of a schoolboy killed 10 days ago in a clash with security forces at a township school.

"The place is crawling with cops," said a Soweto resident reached by telephone after reporters were ordered out of the area. "There has been no trouble, but I think the heavy police presence has kept many mourners away from the burial."

Another funeral in Soweto — for one of 20 people shot by police in clashes Tuesday — was halted by radical black youths who insisted that all the victims be buried together.

It was not clear if police would allow the mass funeral, tentatively scheduled for Thursday.

Tuesday's clashes, which followed the eviction of Soweto families supporting an anti-apartheid rent boycott, were among the worst in two years of political violence that has claimed more than 2,250 lives.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: Labor Day weekend brought thunderstorms, a flash flood that killed one woman in Texas and low temperatures "unheard of" in the South, meteorologists said. A flash flood watch was in effect early today for parts of central and north Texas. Between 2 and 4 inches of rain fell on much of the southern Plains Sunday, and a flash flood killed one woman near Big Spring, Texas. Raging water washed a pickup truck off of a bridge after the Comanche Lake, swollen by 7 inches of rainfall in three hours, took a 30-foot chunk out of an earthen dam.

"The breach washed out about 30 feet of the dam, letting loose a wall of water about 7 feet deep," Police Sgt. Bobby Armstrong said. Mary Sosa Gutierrez, 44, died in the flooding. "She was found about 300 yards east of the bridge where she was washed off," said Police Lt. Jerry Edwards. "Her husband and son both grabbed onto a tree limb and pulled themselves out. She grabbed but she couldn't hold on." "The water's pretty well subsided," Edwards said Sunday. "It's still running pretty fast but it's not deep." Cool air in the Northeast, which has broken more than 100 low temperature records during the past four days, dropped readings into the 40s and 50s across the region early Sunday, the National Weather Service said. The low temperature record for the fourth-straight day was broken in Baltimore, while Shreveport and Monroe, La., set record lows for the third consecutive day.

Heavy cloud cover kept temperatures low in the Southeast, and highs in several cities were only in the 60s. "That's almost unheard of for this time of year," said Scott Tansy of the National Weather Service. The high in Atlanta was only 63, and in Birmingham, Ala., it was 69. Tornadoes touched down in Florida near Zephyrhills and Ellenton Sunday afternoon, blowing the roof off one house and downing fences and trees.

No injuries were reported. In Utah, a tornado was seen at Canyonlands National Park and thunderstorms produced heavy rain and marble-size hail at Sigurd. Four inches of hail accumulated in the Black Forest area. Sunny skies and cool temperatures were reported over much of the Plateau and along the Pacific Coast.

Shuttle Salvage Plans Taught NASA Lessons

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — NASA's initial plans for a shuttle search and salvage operation were "vastly underrated," the director of the search says, but in the Challenger aftermath new techniques were developed to ensure effective action in the event of another disaster.

Air Force Col. Edward O'Connor, who was in charge of the search for Challenger's broken remains, said the seven-month salvage operation that ended Thursday was the most extensive in history.

About 93,000 square miles of ocean surface was searched and up to 8,000 people and 22 ships were involved at the high point of activities in February.

In the end, 45 percent of Challenger was recovered, 50 percent of its two solid-fuel boosters, 50 percent of its external fuel tank and most of its payload.

O'Connor said carrying off an operation of that magnitude was a daunting challenge.

"I think one thing that jumped out at us was that the contingency recovery plans were not adequate for the complexity of the job," he said in an interview.

"No one had postulated that this kind of scenario would ever happen, that the (boosters) would still be propulsive or that it would spread over this much territory. So the scope of the operation was vastly underrated."

As a result, he said new plans are being developed that will improve NASA's response if the unthinkable happens again.

"I think we've learned a lot; we've learned how to use radar data more effectively, we've learned underwater search methodology that's better, we've developed new instrumentation," O'Connor said.

"NASA has been renowned for its technology fallout for years and even out of a disaster like this there are things we are learning and are going to be made available to the public and may assist other people doing other things."

For example, he said, engineers developed several new devices specifically for the search operation.

"We have developed some new technology and we are probably going to be applying for some patents for new devices, underwater metal detectors, things like that," he said.

"We have captured the techniques that the Navy demonstrated. We have now equipped the NASA and the Air Force recovery vessel with people who know how to conduct a search like this as well as some of the special equipment that's needed."

The Challenger salvage operation found more than just shuttle debris on the murky seabed. A DC-3 airplane was located by sonar along with other aircraft debris.

O'Connor said in one case, salvage crews found a propeller sticking up out of the bottom hooked to an engine.

"They tried to lift it to get some identification," he said. "I think the Navy challenged us and thought, gee, I sure would like to get that prop for the O (officers') club. But they were never able to get it free from the bottom so we don't know what that is."

In addition, O'Connor said his team was approached by "every galleon searcher in the country."

No Spanish treasure ships were found but several shipwrecks were detected, including a small boat that apparently sank six or seven years ago in a storm.

"You could see the anchor chain going to the ship, strung way out," O'Connor said. "It was obvious he was in heavy weather out there, dropped his anchor to try to stabilize himself and eventually got swamped and sank."

He said divers had no problems with sharks but on one occasion, a huge grouper "a little bit larger than a Volkswagen" gave one frogman a scare.

"We had one funny one where there was a big grouper out there that was around 400 pounds. The diver was diving out there on a piece of the shuttle wreckage and he felt these pulsations in the water and didn't know what it was so he swam around and looked around the corner and here was this fish that was bigger than he was. He decided he would come up."

Bad weather frequently disrupted search operations and boredom would set in. A crew member aboard the salvage vessel PL-3 used a new .22 pistol for target practice on empty Pepsi cans. At least one NASA photograph of shuttle wreckage on the seabed shows a holed Pepsi can in the foreground.

Of all the ships involved in the salvage operation, duty aboard the Stena Workhorse, a Swedish vessel working under contract to NASA, apparently was the most pleasant for shuttle engineers because it was the only ship with women crew members.

"They had some very attractive young ladies on board the vessel and they had the typical Scandinavian attitude toward clothing," O'Connor said, laughing. "I was wondering why no one was complaining about the amount of time they spent on that ship."

"When they came into port one time I went out there and I saw. They'd sunbathe topless up there and the food was outstanding with some of the best food in the world coming out of the Scandinavian countries."

REPUBLICAN - FLORIDA HOUSE 34th DIST.

INTEGRITY
DEDICATION

Dear Neighbor,

My name is Frank Stone, and I am running for the Florida House of Representatives here in District 34. My family and I have lived in Casselberry since 1977; this is our home.

Over the past four years, I have become increasingly concerned with the quality of our representation in Tallahassee. My concern grows each time I pick up the newspaper and read about Mr. Selph's latest encounter with the authorities. I question the effectiveness of a legislator who repeatedly breaks the law.

I feel the people of District 34 deserve better. Honesty and integrity are qualities that should never be compromised. It is time for a positive change!

Together, we can make that change. With your help, we can provide an honest, responsible form of representation for District 34.

In the near future, you will likely receive several pieces of mail from Mr. Selph in an attempt to gloss over his current difficulties. Keeping in mind the reasons behind those difficulties, I am confident you will make the right choice on September 2nd.

Sincerely,

Frank

FRANK STONE: DISTRICT 34

The Orlando Sentinel endorses Frank Stone for the District 34 legislative seat.

In the District 34 state House race, one issue overrides all others: Rep. Carl Selph's accident in Tallahassee in the early morning of May 13. The problem is that Mr. Selph refuses to say what happened that night after his car hit a parked car outside the Tallahassee Hilton and then he left the scene.

We agree that everyone has lapses of judgment. But this case appears far more serious than that. There have been conflicting stories since the accident, which was followed by a party at the Hilton attended by Mr. Selph and some fellow legislators. In fact, there have been conflicting stories from Mr. Selph himself.

First he said he wasn't driving the car, then he said he was. Now he won't say anything, saying his attorney has advised him to keep mum until the Sept. 2 trial. He is charged with drunken driving and filing a false police report.

It's unfortunate that Mr. Selph won't come forth to try to clear up this mess by the Sept. 2 Republican primary, which will decide this race because there is no Democratic opposition. Selph faces former Casselberry councilman Frank Stone in the primary. It's unfortunate because the incident brings Mr. Selph's integrity into serious question. Should a legislator be leaving the scene of an accident? Should he be giving conflicting stories about who was driving his car? Did he go to the hotel room to evade police?

Simply put, Mr. Selph does not deserve to be re-elected. There are too many unanswered questions.

Mr. Stone has the qualifications to be elected from this district, which includes southeast Seminole County and parts of Orange and Brevard counties.

In his two terms on the Casselberry council, Mr. Stone has exhibited the kind of leadership needed in Tallahassee. He has pushed for impact fees on new developments and has successfully prodded the council to do away with duplication of some services, especially in fire protection. He also has shown an admirable grasp of state issues, including the need for a stronger education system and the commitment to pay for it.

TRANSPORTATION — Frank Stone approved a transportation management program to assure the most effective use of tax dollars. He has been a leader in support of computerized traffic lights. A man of Frank's background will find a solution to our traffic problem.

GROWTH MANAGEMENT — Frank Stone believes in using a comprehensive plan for growth management. Frank supports both residential neighborhoods and agricultural districts. The distinctive character of each should not be destroyed by over-zealous growth.

COMMUNITY SERVICE — Frank Stone is involved in his family, church, city, and in the protection of child rights. He is a Vice President of the Greater Orlando SIDS Support Network, Inc. Frank has served two terms on the Casselberry City Council.

Multiple Front For Drug War

We applaud the Reagan administration's major new law-enforcement effort to combat drug smuggling across the Mexican border.

At the same time, we're aware of its limitations — limitations growing out of the fact that drug use is burgeoning in this country, and many Americans are making millions.

There's only so much that any law-enforcement effort can accomplish against such a pervasive enemy.

The Reagan effort, called Operation Alliance, will cost some $800 million and will involve the participation of 20 federal agencies as well as state and local law-enforcement officials in California, New Mexico, Arizona and Texas.

Attorney General Edwin Meese said that Operation Alliance "will be bigger and more complex" than any narcotics operation ever conducted along the border.

About 1,000 Border Patrol officers will be given new authority to search for drugs and arrest suspected drug traffickers.

An unspecified number of Customs Service personnel will be given the same authority as agents of the Drug Enforcement Administration to investigate drug trafficking.

The Customs Service will hire 350 new employees, including 110 who will be stationed along the border in Southern California.

About 500 law-enforcement officials from the FBI, Internal Revenue Service and Customs Service will be reassigned to the Southwest border.

Military equipment, including radar balloons, spy planes, sophisticated communications devices and transport helicopters, will be deployed.

Operation Alliance should have an effect, though it's important to remember that a war on drugs must be waged on more than one front.

Drug abuse in this country is something more profound — and more troubling — than a simple breakdown in law enforcement.

As Vice President George Bush noted the other day, "All the law enforcement in the world will not cure the drug plague as long as it's kept alive by public acquiescence."

Solutions to the "drug plague" are as elusive as the small cocaine-laden planes ferrying the lucrative substance across our border.

But solutions must begin with demand. The problem will not diminish unless the demand for drugs is reduced.

Energetic law-enforcement efforts are important, but along with those efforts, we need new and more imaginative drug education and rehabilitation programs.

We need more research into the question of why this society is the world's largest market for illicit drugs.

We need a greater degree of cooperation among local schools, community organizations, state agencies and private corporations in a broad-based effort to get Americans to kick the habit.

There's no guarantee that any education effort will be effective, just as there's no guarantee that Operation Alliance will choke off the flow of drugs into the country.

Still, we have to make the effort.

Nothing less than the health of the nation is at stake.

How Much Wood Would Woodcarver Carve...?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — You might be wondering how the United States could be running up huge international trade deficits in view of the worldwide demand for Japanese woodcuts. I know I am.

I spend about half my time wondering about such things.

Japan is America's biggest customer for forest product exports and, ironically, turns out more Japanese woodcuts than any other nation on the face of the earth, or wherever carved. Yet, that country is responsible for more than its share of our trade imbalance.

Part of the explanation may perhaps be found in a U.S. foreign agriculture publication. It reports that about 80 percent of the American wood Japan imports is "in the raw material form of logs and chips."

I don't blame the American processed wood industry for seeking greater access to foreign markets. Yet, one questions whether building a three-story modern house in Tokyo, using donated U.S. wood products, is the way to go about countering unfair trade practices.

A more sensible approach might be to eliminate tariff barriers on veneers, laminated items and panel products.

It also might help our trade situation to encourage the traditional method of carving masterpieces out of pine blocks.

Apparently, some Japanese woodcarvers have started chiseling plywood logs.

Everyone knows that Japan, a small country with a big woodcarver population, can't grow enough pine trees to meet its needs.

It is true the first woodcuts were made in Europe during the Middle Ages. But by the 1700s, the emphasis switched to Japan.

Degas, Manet and Toulouse-Lautrec were among the French artists influenced by the Japanese. They and other Europeans were said to have admired the "bold, flat shapes of brilliant color" in Japanese woodcuts.

That color is something to keep in mind.

Several pine blocks may be used to create colored woodcuts.

"Each block has a portion of the picture," says one reference book I consulted. "The artist must cut the blocks so they are in exactly the correct relationship to each other in the completed woodcut."

As for the demonstration project, that was described as an effort to convince the Japanese that American wood "can offer high-quality, energy-efficient houses at more affordable prices than steel and masonry construction."

More affordable than paper, which, judging from the movies, must be the chief native housing material in Japan?

What, you might well ask, is the difference between woodcuts and etchings? Well, most etching is done on metal plates, as opposed to pine, with acid making the necessary indentations.

That is something to bear in mind the next time when inviting someone of the opposite sex to your place to see your etchings.

If you can get her, or him, interested in seeing your woodcuts, half the trade battle will be won.

Some Changes Ahead

By Clay F. Richards
UPI Political Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Regardless of who wins in the November elections, there will be a major shake-up in the country's state-houses next year.

When the nation's governors met last week at Hilton Head, S.C., a lot of faces showed up that won't be there the next time. There are 18 lame duck governors going out of office this year — many of them because their state constitutions bar them from running again.

In addition, Gov. Bill Sheffield, D-Alaska, was defeated in last Tuesday's primaries and he probably won't be the only incumbent ousted by the voters this year.

Govs. Mark White, D-Texas, Dick Celeste, D-Ohio, James Blanchard, D-Mich., and Terry Branstad, R-Iowa, are running for their political lives. Some big-state governors, especially Mario Cuomo, D-N.Y., and George Deukmajian, R-Calif., are in no trouble.

The fact that three of the four governors in most serious trouble are Democrats is significant. The Democrats now hold a 34-18 edge among the governors, and that majority likely will not be so lopsided after Election Day.

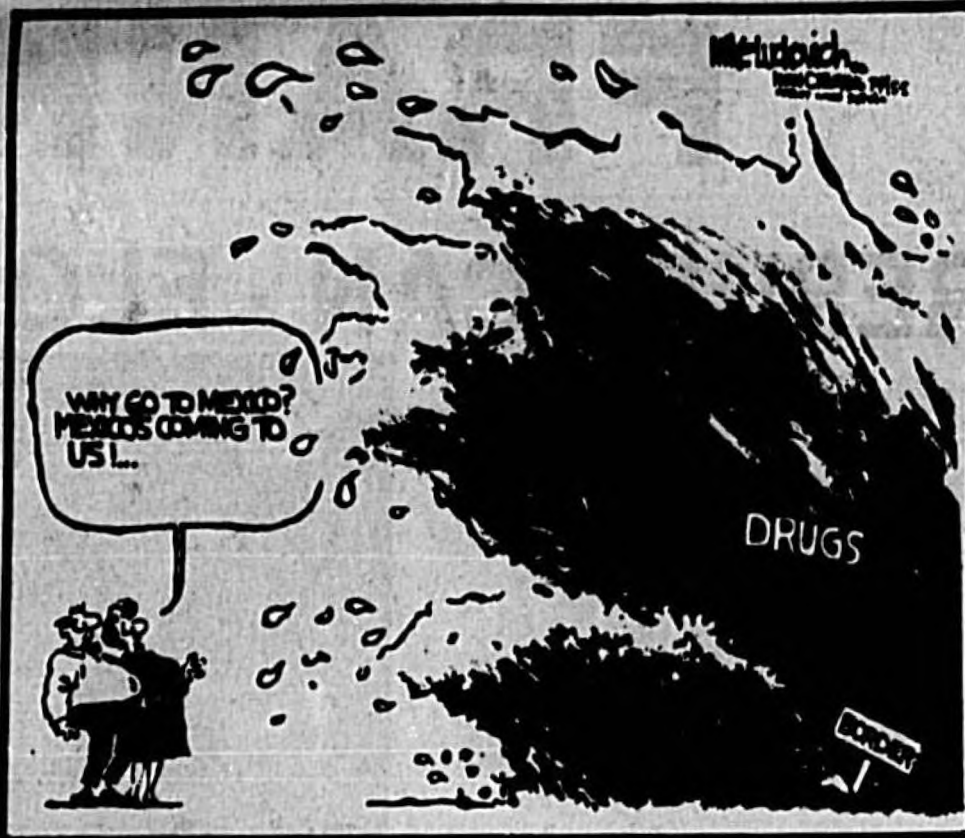

There are a number of open races, where the outgoing incumbent is a Democrat, that Republicans have an excellent chance of picking up, especially in the Rocky Mountain states where President Reagan got 60 percent or more of the vote in 1984.

Gov. John Sununu, R-N.H., the new vice chairman of the National Governors' Association, told reporters at Hilton Head the GOP will make a net gain of at least six in the elections. Gov. Richard Thornburgh, R-Pa., chairman of the Republican governors campaign committee, put the number at 10.

All the new faces will give the governors a different look. Gone will be many familiar faces: George Wallace of Alabama, Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, Richard Lamm of Colorado, Bob Graham of Florida, Lamar Alexander of Tennessee and Thornburgh.

This generation of governors, who were the leaders of the states during much of the cutback or hold the line years of the Carter and Reagan administrations, were voices of moderation. They accepted that Washington would give them less, and made adjustment at home.

After eight years in the back seat, the governors are going to want to be a driving force in the next few years.

How Many Illiterates?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — For more than a decade there has been fierce debate among academics, educators, interest groups and government experts over the extent of illiteracy in this country. Recently the federal government came out with a new study that it hoped would put the matter to rest. However, it has only intensified the debate, with the new government numbers being attacked as both too high and too low.

For years the accepted study on the subject was one published by the University of Texas in 1975. It attempted to examine adult performance levels in terms of "functional competency," including skills in communication, computation and problem solving. Using this method, it found that almost 20 percent of American adults were unable to perform everyday tasks. Another 34 percent could perform them, but not well.

Then in 1979 the Census Bureau weighed in with a count that was much more reassuring to a nation that prides itself on its educational system. The agency estimated that only 0.5 percent of adult Americans over age 14 couldn't read. To arrive at this rosy conclusion, the study assumed that anyone who had finished five years or more of formal education could read well enough to function in society. This notion was dismissed by most experts.

Then, last May, the Census Bureau released a new estimate of U.S. illiteracy. Rather than the 0.5 percent it found in 1979, it now estimated that 13 percent of American adults — approximately 23 million people — are illiterate. It based this estimate not on a survey of educational attainment, but on a 26-question literacy test given to 3,400 people in 1982.

One major problem in quantifying the extent of illiteracy in this country is defining it. Most everyone in the field now accepts a definition that is not linked to grade attainment in school and is instead tied to the ability to function successfully in society — a concept that covers more than reading and writing.

Others challenged the arbitrary standards that testers set up for literacy. If a person answered 21 of 26 questions correctly, he or she was literate; 20 or less, illiterate. If the testers had demanded that just one more question — for a total of 22 out of 26 — be correct, the number of "illiterates" would have been significantly higher.

One major problem in quantifying the extent of illiteracy in this country is defining it. Most everyone in the field now accepts a definition that is not linked to grade attainment in school and is instead tied to the ability to function successfully in society — a concept that covers more than reading and writing.

Working On Space Problems

By Al Rosenthal Jr.
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Significant problems with cosmonauts flying in space for months at a time have forced Soviet space officials to pay extra attention to making space stations more liveable and crews happier, an American psychologist says.

"The crews were becoming fatigued, they were becoming irritated, they were making errors, they were becoming unreliable, they were screwing up the experiments, they were wrecking the equipment," said B. J. Bluth. "It wasn't working well."

Bluth, working in the space station office at NASA headquarters, said her counterparts in the Soviet Union have been "quite open" about the problems cosmonauts have had on Salyut space station missions of increasing duration.

"They don't tell everything but they are open about the fact that they do have psychological and sociological problems with these crews," she said.

The longest Soviet spaceflight to date has lasted 237 days in orbit. In contrast, one American Skylab flight lasted 84 days, one lasted 59 days and one was 27 days long. Skylab was much roomier than the Soviet Salyuts and the extra space helped the Americans adjust to the confines of spaceflight.

NASA is now designing a space station with modules smaller than Skylab to be assembled in orbit in 1994.

Bluth discussed the Soviet space program at a recent meeting of the American Psychological Association and said the basic core module of Russia's new Mir space station is about 14 feet in diameter and 40 feet long — not much bigger than an average motor home.

"Imagine that they select two of the most technically competent people where you work and you're the third person and we put all three of you in this moderately sized motor home and we lock the door," Bluth said.

"You don't get to drive because the thing drives itself. You're allowed to look out the windows and we provide all the food. Imagine being in there for 237 days. I'm thinking of the guy who never cleans his coffee cup. Imagine looking at that for 237 days."

"You can't go out and walk around and kick the tires. So it's very hard. It's a true dangerous, isolated, confined environment."

She said the Soviets have a Group for Social and Psychological Support, whose researchers play a key role in designing the space stations.

Feds To Rescue More Small Banks

By Jack Anderson
And
Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — When federal bank regulators announced last month they would spend $130 million to keep afloat the failing Bank of Oklahoma, it marked only the eighth time in more than half a century that they have come to the rescue of a struggling bank instead of allowing it to fold.

We have learned, in fact, that the action marks a shift in policy. For various reasons, fewer banks will expire in the future because the feds will be giving more transfusions.

In the case of the Bank of Oklahoma, officials of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the key banking regulatory agency, were concerned about the entire regional economy. The banking community in the Southwest has been teetering on the brink of disaster for months because too many loans are dependent on the sagging oil and farm markets. Allowing a major Oklahoma bank to shut its doors could panic skittish depositors and investors, thereby creating a run on deposits in banks throughout the state.

Another reason more banks will be bailed out in the future is that regulators have decided it is time to "democratize" the system, to give the small institutions the same guarantees of survival that the big banks have always had.

There are only two ways for the feds to handle a bank failure — pay off insured depositors and let the bank die, or repair it and merge it with a healthier institution. The regulators will always opt for saving the big banks because they simply cannot afford to make good on the insured accounts, and because such a failure would be too disruptive to the economy. It has been unwritten policy for years: The big banks are fail-safe.

All this has now been conceded — on the record and for the first time — by one of the nation's top bank regulators, William Seidman, in a recent interview with our associate Michael Binstein.

Although Seidman has been chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. for almost a year, he is a maverick in some respects. His candor demonstrates it, as does his sartorial bent: He eschews pinstripes in favor of Western boots and belts. He founded the business school at the University of Arizona and worked in the Gerald Ford White House, where he was one of the architects of the banking deregulation movement.

In his talk with our associate, Seidman openly discussed some of the most provocative issues confronting the banking industry today. He conceded, for example, that regulators have had a double standard in dealing with bank failures. Big banks often get bailed out or merged with another institution, thereby protecting both insured and uninsured depositors and creditors. Small banks, on the other hand, are shut down and the uninsured are left holding the bag.

As Seidman put it: "At the present time, we don't have a way technically of closing down a very major bank without freezing a huge amount of money in the system."

He was referring to banking's role in the nation's payments systems — the clearing of checks, wire transfers, automated payment arrangements and securities clearances. The quick and efficient operation of this conveyor belt of credit — which carries more than a trillion dollars a day in transactions — is crucial to the whole economy.

Nipping Cranberry Juice Lands Sanford Man In Jail

A Sanford man was arrested on a charge of retail theft after he took a drink of cranberry juice from a bottle, then refused to pay for it.

A 7-Eleven clerk said the man entered the store, took a swig of cranberry juice from a previously unopened bottle, then returned it to the shelf. The incident occurred around 9:30 p.m. Friday.

When the clerk asked him to pay for it he refused, according to a Sanford police report.

The man reportedly offered no resistance when arrested. The juice was valued at $2.15.

Charged with retail theft was Tony Young, 21, 3 Higgins Terrace. He was being held on $100 in the Seminole County jail.

TIPSY MOTORCYCLIST
A Longwood man was arrested after he reportedly drove his motorcycle erratically past a motorcycle officer, missing the police man by about 5 feet.

After the man passed the officer on State Road 436, the officer followed and stopped the man at Park Place, according to a police report. The incident occurred around 2:30 a.m. Saturday.

The man stopped his motorcycle in the median. He reportedly could barely stand up and smelled strongly of alcohol. After refusing to participate in a road-side sobriety test, he reportedly shoved the officer. Another officer grabbed the man and the three of them scuffled on the ground until the man was handcuffed.

Charged with battery on an officer and driving under the influence was Donn Morris Durham, 21, of 108 Kilkenny Ct. He was being held on $1,000 bond.

YELLER JAILED
A man who was told not to return to a crowd three times and yelled at officers was arrested late Friday on a charge of disorderly conduct.

According to an arrest report, officers went to the west end area of Hornbeam Drive near Altamonte Springs where about 200 people were fighting and yelling, according to police. The incident occurred around midnight Friday.

One man was told to leave the area three times while he yelled at the officers. He then reportedly threw a beer can and then was arrested.

Charged with disorderly conduct was David Lee Prince, of 514 Mansfield Dr., Altamonte Springs. He was being held on $100 bond.

GROUNDING BY POT
A Longwood man was arrested on a possession of marijuana charge after an officer saw some fall from him after an accident.

A Lake Mary officer was at the scene of an accident at County Road 15 and the railroad tracks when a man in a passenger seat of a car said he was the car driver at the time of the accident. When he got out of the car, a bag of marijuana fell on the ground, according to police. The incident occurred around 2:41 a.m. Saturday.

Charged with possession of marijuana and driving without a license was Tracey Lewis White, 30, of 229 Acorn Lane, Longwood. He was being held on $500 bond.

—2:37 a.m., 1200 French Ave., The Barn, fight. A man, no age or address given, was reportedly cut on the head. He was transported to the hospital.

—2:49 a.m., 410 E. 10th Street, assault. A 21-year-old woman declined hospital transport after being surveyed for cuts and bruises. Sanford police are investigating the incident.

VERBAL ASSAULT
The son of a state representative told police that a man threatened him when he stopped him from throwing firecrackers in the area of small children.

Artie Grindle Jr., of Longwood, and son of Rep. Art Grindle, R-Altamonte Springs, said he asked a man around 8 or 9 p.m. Friday on Menasha Ct. in Longwood to stop throwing firecrackers in the vicinity of toddlers and other small kids.

He said the man, described as 6-feet tall and in his middle 40s, exchanged words with him and threatened him before leaving.

HEADLIGHT TO COCAINE
An Altamonte Springs man was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine and paraphernalia after police stopped his vehicle reportedly because it had a headlight out.

During the traffic stop, the man reached into the vehicle and got a pack of cigarettes and a small plastic container. When the deputy asked the man what he had, he began to back away and then threw the container away. The incident occurred around 3 a.m. Saturday at North and Station streets in Altamonte Springs.

The man was detained and the container located. It contained two pieces of crack cocaine, according to the deputy. Two small, gold tubes believed to be used in the inhalation of cocaine were also reportedly found in the vehicle.

Charged with possession of cocaine and paraphernalia was William Charles Fugate Jr., of 105 Station St. He was being held on $1,000 bond.

MARKSVILLE, La. (NEA) — Carlton Andrews, who is 65 years old, likes to think he has had a reasonably good life. He has married, raised eight children, held a number of steady jobs, made a coterie of long-time companions, and, best of all: "I ain't never done nothing wrong to no one no way."

Still, he says there's been something missing. He has suffered a hollow in the core of his being. "I never had education," he says, sticking his hands deep in his pockets, "and that's no good. I always wanted to be able to take a piece of paper and sign my name, just like everyone else."

Andrews is illiterate. He is one of up to 30 million or more American adults who are said to lack the skills to take a full part in the information society. Worse, he is one of perhaps 4 million to 6 million over the age of 18 who can not read, write or do arithmetic calculations at all.

That is to say he's never browsed through a book. He's never written a letter. He has never had a bank account, he's never registered to vote, he's never known the grace of Percy Shelley or the dispositions of Thomas More, and he has not in six decades been able to record his name with a pen.

"Well, I can make out C's," he says, grinning uncomfortably, "because that is the first letter of my name. And I can scribble some too, if I take my time and don't get hurried. Nobody can read it, understand, and I don't guess I know what it says myself, but I learned how to scribble in school."

That's about all he learned. Andrews says he was born at a time when children in rural Louisiana had other concerns than education. His father was an impoverished dirt farmer, for one thing, trying to scratch a

'We, The People...'

Historians say that when the Constitution of the United States was written there were a good many people in the country who had to have it read to them. Now, with the document's 200th anniversary coming next year, there are millions of Americans who still can not read it for themselves.

Some of them are friends and neighbors of Carlton Andrews of Marksville, La. A copy of the Constitution was recently shown to 25 people in and around the bayou community — to blacks and whites, to young people and older — and the majority had difficulty either reading or comprehending the words.

Nine of the 25 could not read the document at all. Five others read it with hesitation and virtually no understanding. Four read it more or less accurately, but did not know what it was, and only seven of the 25 residents read it without error, understood it and knew it as the law of the land.

Like millions of other Americans who can't read or write, Carlton Andrews, 65, of Marksville, La., about 150 miles northwest of New Orleans, knows the hardships of illiteracy.

living from 18 acres of corn, and young Andrews was expected to join the struggle.

That was fine with the boy. He did not like school anyway. He had to walk two miles to get there, then sit all day and be quiet; when he was called on to stand and recite, he couldn't make out anything but C's, and the girls would giggle, the boys would shout and the teacher would get angry.

Andrews says he quit in the second grade. He claims his father got sick, and the rest of the family had to take over the farm. He thus grew up suddenly at the age of 7, in every way except intellectually, and he has spent the rest of his life as a sort of derelict in the literate community.

It's not been easy. Illiteracy cripples capacity. Andrews says he lives in the world of the handicapped. He has never driven a car, for instance, because he can not pass the driving examination, and he can't read the hands on a clock, except that he has learned to divide time into rough segments.

What's more, he has been limited in employment. He says he would have liked to have owned a shop or run a company, but he couldn't even fill out an application. He says he worked in a series of mills, always as a roustabout; he earned 50 cents a day when he started, and never more than $3 an hour.

At least he thinks he earned $3 an hour. He operated on trust in this respect. He could not read his paychecks when he got them at the plant, and he could not count the return when he cashed them at the stores. "I just took what they gave me," he sighs, "I think I got cheated sometimes."

He adds that he seldom called the cheats, though. Because he could not prove the charges. And it would be embarrassing to try. He says someone took money from him in a bar once, but nobody paid attention when he complained, and he wound up in fist fight over simple mathematics.

Andrews says he's had other fights like that. But he's too old anymore to defend himself from ridicule. He says he retired from the mills a few years ago, his children are gone and he is divorced from his wife, and he now lives in a two-room shack, not far from his birthplace, on the edge of town.

He says that after a lifetime of work he can not afford a car, a television or a radio. And he damn well doesn't while away the time at the library. He says he goes down to the W.W. Lounge for something to do and sits outside until it opens, with friends, most of whom are illiterate too.

He also says he would still like to be able to sign his name on paper. But not enough to do what is required to learn. "I heard they got a school at the old folks home in Alexandria," he says, "but I don't know nothing about it. That's the trouble. I don't know nothing about nothing."

Check that. It happens that Carlton Andrews knows French. He says his mother was a Cajun, she carried on in the dialect as a matter of course, and he is proud to say, nay he insists on announcing, that he is fully bilingual. Unfortunately, he can neither read nor write that language either.

Lady Hawks Cruise To Jamboree Win Lake Howell's Martha Fonseca Beats Blistering Heat For 40-Second Victory

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

The humidity was practically unbearable and the rains the day before made the course like one big sponge, but that didn't stop the Lake Howell Lady Silver Hawks from displaying what has the potential to be a powerful cross country team.

With senior Martha Fonseca blazing away in the blistering heat, and senior Lisa Samocki showing she's on her way back from a fractured tibia during track season, the Lady Hawks "A" team compiled a score of 37 to take first place in the annual Summertime Seminole Jamboree Saturday at Seminole Community College.

Seminole County didn't fare as well in the boys division mainly because none of the teams had their entire squad on hand. The Toenails, out of Melbourne Palm Bay, took first place with a score of 70 led by individual champion Angelo Bonarrigo who finished the three-mile course in 16:01.5. The top Seminole County finisher was Lyman's Robin Rogers who, competing for the Old Timers team, finished fifth at 16:19.6.

Martha Fonseca looked in excellent form as she cruised to the 14-18, two-mile race individual title with a time of 12:30.2, putting 40 seconds between her and Samocki who was second at 13:10.8.

Lake Howell made it a clean sweep of the top three when sophomore Jenny Bolt took third at 13:15.5.

"One week in a season means nothing, but I love the Jamboree because it gives us a chance to see where we stand and it gets the first race jitters out of the way," said Hammontree. "We have a lot of unanswered questions still and I'm hoping we can get them taken care of before the peak of the season."

Hammontree said Samocki has seen limited action in practice and has been brought along slowly since her injury last season.

"I'm pleased with her performance," Hammontree said. "She ran as well as I expected her to this early with the workouts she's had. It's important that she tested the waters to give her an opportunity to see where she is. She wasn't pleased, but any good athlete will always see room for improvement."

One runner on the Lady Silver Hawk squad who couldn't have done much better Saturday was Martha Fonseca who left the entire field in the distance.

"Martha ran an intelligent race as well as a competitive race," Hammontree said. "She went out and said, 'if your going to beat me, come do it.' I'm very please with the entire team's effort. Times are not relevant right now but I was very surprised with her (Martha) running 12:30. SCC has a history of being slow plus the fact it was very humid and wet."

Behind the 1-2-3 finish for the Lady Hawks, senior Mary Fonseca was 10th with a time of 13:43.3. Another runner who performed well was sophomore Tammy Bolt who, in her first cross country race, finished 13th with a time of 14:00.9.

Another County coach pleased with her team's performance was Seminole High coach Cindy Brannum.

Junior Shownda Martin led the way as she took seventh place with a time of 13:35.2.

"I can't complain at all for the way the girls ran with only one week of practice," said Brannum. "I was very pleased with Shownda Martin's effort. The girls are mostly sprinters and I'm trying to put distance running in their minds.

"Viola Pooley fell on the course during the race causing her to lose some ground in the race," added Brannum. "We will be looking to have a strong middle season when I get the whole team in shape and in town." Brannum said a few of the Lady Tribe runners were on vacation and missed Saturday's meet.

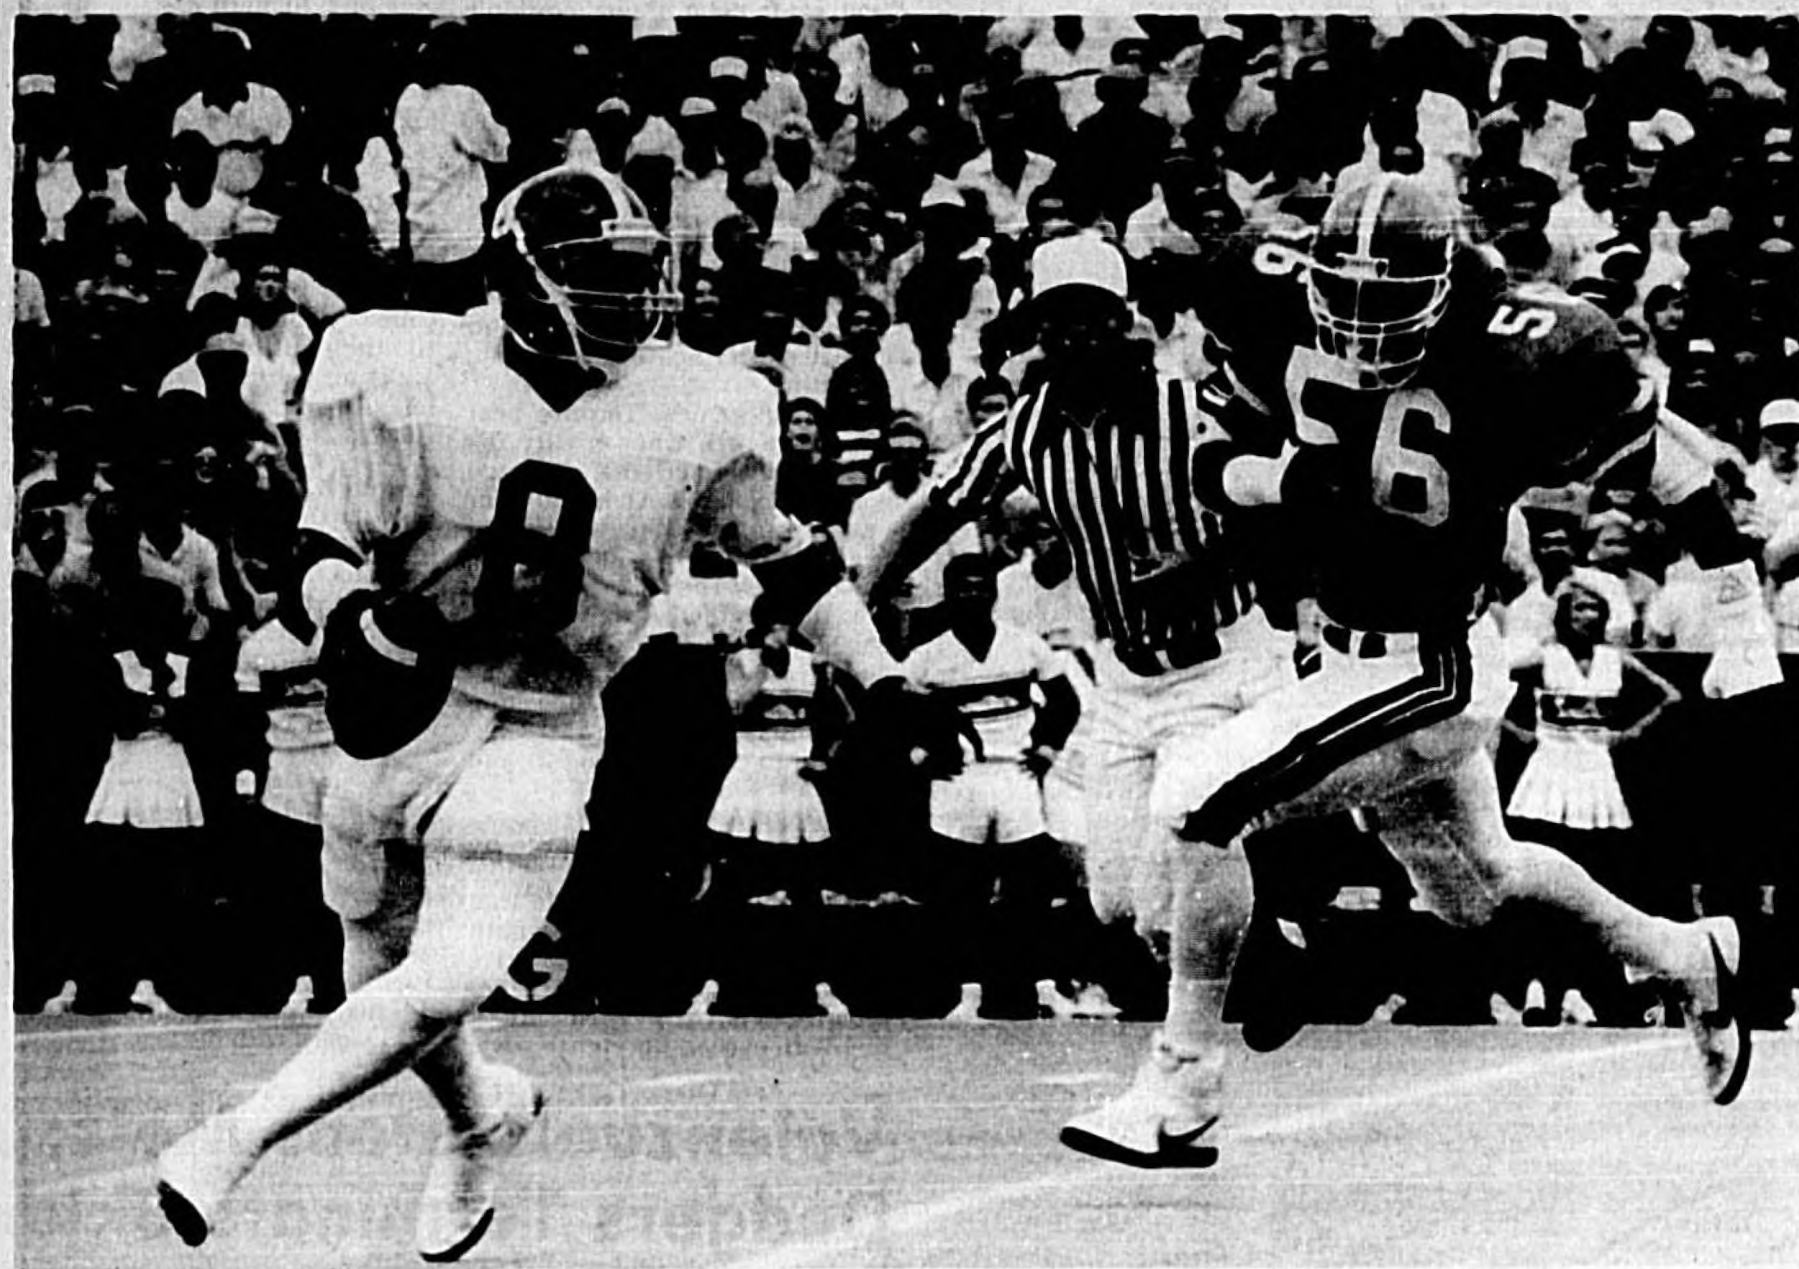

Lake Mary coach Mike Gibson didn't have a team Saturday but was happy with the efforts of the girls who showed. Gibson also saw the return of Sue Kingsbury who is coming off an injury and running in her first race since her sophomore year. Gibson was pleased with the return performance as Kingsbury finished 11th.

"She (Kingsbury) has her confidence back now," Gibson said. "She knows of the competition in the area and that she will have to work hard to establish her old form."

Gators Swat Pesky GSU; 'Canes Next

By Scott Sander
Herald Sports Writer

GAINESVILLE — After subduing pesky Georgia Southern, 38-14, in its college football season opener Saturday, one would expect the University of Florida locker room to be a very happy place.

But the Gator locker room was devoid of smiles and laughter. True, the Gators were happy to defeat the defending I-AA National Champion Eagles, but they were not entirely satisfied with their performance. Coach Galen Hall said his Gators played inconsistently on offense and defense.

Inconsistent or not, Heisman Trophy candidate Kerwin Bell turned in a stellar performance. The 6-3 junior passed for three touchdowns and ran 16 yards for another before 74,221 drenched fans at Florida Field. The crowd was the fifth largest in Florida football history. It went home wet but satisfied as three quarters of the contest was played in a steady downpour making the conditions poor.

"I was happy that we won the game but I'm not sure if we played all that well this afternoon," Florida head coach Galen Hall said. "At times we looked good, at other times we looked bad. We have definitely got some work to do before next week."

Next Saturday the Gators will play host to another Heisman hopeful in quarterback Vinny Testaverde and the Miami Hurricanes. "We will have to play better than we did today in order to beat some of the tougher teams," Hall said. "We have a lot of room to improve."

The Hurricanes, ranked third in the country, crushed South Carolina, 34-14, in their opener Saturday. Testaverde was 17 for 30 for 231 yards and one TD. Melvin Braxton scored three times and rushed for 105 yards in just 10 carries.

Bell surprised GSU with his running ability and also threw the ball well despite the rain. He was 14 for 23 good for 160 yards. Bell opened up the scoring just 1:27 into the game when he scrambled in from the 16-yard line.

"Kerwin has worked hard over the off-season trying to get physically stronger," Hall said. "I wouldn't be surprised if we see more scrambling from him this season."

Despite his splendid day, Bell said that the offensive unit has to get more consistent. "We were not very consistent today," Bell said. "We moved the ball when we had to but we can play much better than we did today. We will have to in order to defeat Miami."

The Gators offense moved the ball well racking up 418 total yards. The Gators' ground attack proved to be very potent as a number of different running backs rushed for a total of 258 yards.

"Our running game was pretty good today," Hall said. "We have a new backfield and I think that they are better than most people expected them to be."

Sophomore runningback Wayne Williams led the Gators with 93 yards, including an eight-yard touchdown run. Freshman back Octavius Gould chipped in a big way as he ran for 71 yards.

Bell used a versatile passing attack that had seven different receivers catching passes. Senior wide-out Ricky Nattiel hauled in a 28-yard touchdown pass. Senior Eric Hodges snagged a 10-yard touchdown pass while Darrell Woulard caught a one-yard ally-oop touchdown.

"I think that we proved that we have some other good receivers besides Ricky," Bell said. "It felt good to get so many different people involved."

Much of the passing success that Bell had can be attributed to the tremendous pass protection of the offensive line. "I was very happy with the way our offensive line pass protected today," Hall said. "I think that we will have better pass protection than last year."

Offensive tackle Jeff Zimmerman, who played his high school football at Orlando Evans, said he thinks that the team will need to improve quickly in the next week. "We have got a really tough schedule," Zimmerman said. "We will need to put a much better effort in than we did today if we expect to beat Miami."

Zimmerman said there is a lot of pressure on him this season as he is a senior and is the leader of the offensive line. Zimmerman is projected to be an All-American this season.

"I just go out there and play," Zimmerman said. "I realize that I a leadership role to fill and I am trying very hard to fill that role."

The Gator defense was tough for the first three quarters but the allowed Georgia Southern to score a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns. "We had a mental letdown towards the end," Hall said. "We can't afford that to happen in the next few games."

Senior Defensive back Adrian White was upset that Southern scored the touchdowns. "We should have shut them out," White said. "We played well today (the Gators held the Eagles to 271 total yards) but we can't expect to play well for three quarters and win. We need to play well for the entire game in order to win."

The defense will receive a severe test from Testaverde and Miami Saturday. Things won't get easier for Florida as it will host David Shula and the Alabama Crimson Tide the following week.

One aspect of the game that Hall was particularly upset with was the penalties. Florida was flagged 11 times for 70 yards with many of the fouls being mental errors.

Miami Tunes Up — FSU Survives 6 Turnovers

United Press International

Seventh-ranked Miami tuned up for its showdown with Florida next week with an impressive 34-14 win over South Carolina and its new run-and-shoot offense, while the Gators and 11th-ranked Florida State struggled a bit in winning their season openers.

The Seminoles overcame six turnovers to top Toledo 24-0, and Florida defeated Division I-AA Georgia Southern 38-14. Bethune-Cookman, Central Florida and Florida A&M open the season next weekend.

The Hurricanes dominated the Gamecocks, and showed future opponents that Heisman Trophy candidate Vinny Testaverde is not the only big gun on offense. Halfback Melvin Bratton rushed for 105 yards and three touchdowns to lead Miami's rushing attack. Testaverde completed 17-of-30 passes for 231 yards and a touchdown.

The Hurricanes scored on runs of 34, 11 and 2 yards by Bratton, a 17-yard yard pass from Testaverde to Alonzo Highsmith, and field goals of 49 and 45 yards by Mark Seelig.

At Doak Campbell Stadium in Tallahassee, the Seminoles tuned up for next week's game at Nebraska by posting their first shutout since a 37-0 blanking of Tennessee-Chattanooga in 1984. The Seminoles got sensational scoring runs from Dayne Williams and David Palmer, a 12-yard scoring pass from Peter Tom Willis to Herb Galner, and a 24-yard field goal by Derek Schmidt.

Williams appeared to be tackled just beyond the line of scrimmage when he spun out of the grasp of a tackler and rambled 36 yards for a score. Palmer also appeared to be stopped when he ran into a wall of Rocket tacklers, but escaped for a 7-yard scoring jaunt.

In other games on the first weekend of college football, it was: Florida St. 24, Toledo 0; Miami 34, South Carolina 14; Kansas St. 35, Western Ill. 7 and Air Force 24, Hawaii 17. No. 20 Maryland plays at Pittsburgh Monday.

Also, it was: Appalachian St. 17, W. Carolina 13; Delaware St. 21, Southern 14; Ball St. 20, Northern Illinois 10; Illinois State 23, Eastern Illinois 20; Arkansas St. 22, Southern Illinois 7.

Open Exit: Witsken Shocks Connors

NEW YORK (UPI) — For more than a decade at the U.S. Open, Jimmy Connors has been as reliable as noisy crowds and traffic jams. The crowds and traffic still remain at the 1986 Open, but Connors is gone.

Unknown Todd Witsken shocked Connors 6-2, 6-4, 7-5 in a third-round match Sunday, marking the earliest Open exit since 1972 for the five-time champion. Connors, who turns 34 Tuesday, dismissed talk that his career is almost over.

"Every athlete goes through a period of rising and falling and maybe they rise again," the sixth-seeded Connors said. "My whole career has been like a roller-coaster ride. I've fought through all my valleys to where I would rise again."

The 22-year-old Witsken connected on 70 percent of his first serves and was successful on the occasions he attacked the net in carving out the victory. Witsken blew five match-point chances in the final game before Connors was long with a backhand approach shot.

"Obviously, he's at the end of his game and I'm just starting," said Witsken, who is playing in his first Open.

Another seeded player, No. 13 Anders Jarryd of Sweden, was also dumped by an unknown in third-round play. American Gary Donnelly, ranked 211th in the world, stunned Jarryd with a 6-3, 5-7, 6-1, 6-3 victory.

Among the other men's seeds, No. 2 Mats Wilander of Sweden beat Christo van Rensburg of South Africa 5-7, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4; No. 3 Boris Becker stopped Sergio Casal of Spain 7-5, 6-4, 6-2; No. 7 Joakim Nystrom of Sweden beat Eric Jelen of West Germany 5-7, 4-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-2; and No. 16 Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia topped Eddie Edwards of South Africa 6-0, 6-3, 6-3.

All the seeded women in action Sunday advanced. No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd beat Mary Joe Fernandez 6-4, 6-2; No. 4 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia defeated South African Elna Reinach 6-4, 6-2; No. 6 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany stopped Jo Durie of Britain 6-2, 6-3; No. 7 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia beat Lisa Bonder 6-2, 6-0; and No. 9 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria topped Camille Benjamin 7-6 (7-3), 6-3.

Also winning were No. 12 Zina Garrison and No. 14 Catarina Lindquist of Sweden.

Men's seeds playing their fourth-round matches today will be top-seeded Ivan Lendl. No. 4 seed Stefan Edberg of Sweden, No. 8 Henri Leconte of France and No. 15 Brad Gilbert.

Top-seeded Martina Navratilova, Evert Lloyd, No. 3 Steffi Graf of West Germany and Mandlikova will all be in action in the women's draw.

Connors, who lost in the first round of Wimbledon this year to unheralded Robert Seguso, had a simple explanation for his uninspired performance against Witsken.

"Flat as day-old beer," Connors said. "My game was flat. My zest for the game was flat and I was flat. It all equaled flat."

Connors had little praise for Witsken, an Indiana native who has risen almost 600 places in the computer rankings in two years.

"All he did was keep a few balls in play," Connors said. "He was doing his best to give (the match) to me and I was doing my best not to take it."

Richmond Captures Southern

DARLINGTON, S.C. (UPI) — Tim Richmond has finally earned the NASCAR victory he wanted.

"This was my favorite race-track prior to this race and it still is today," Richmond said Sunday after overtaking Bill Elliott in the final laps to win the rain-delayed Southern 500.

Richmond, 31, of Ashland, Ohio, had never won the Southern 500. He averaged 121.068 mph in his Chevrolet to cross the finish line 2.3 seconds ahead of Bobby Allison and win $60,055. Elliott finished third.

"This is the granddaddy," Richmond said of the 37-year-old event. "This is what every driver wants to win — the Southern 500."

Elliott, driving a Ford, moved far ahead of the field about 24 laps before the finish, but scraped the wall on the second turn of the 1.56-mile track and Richmond maneuvered into the lead.

Following Elliott was Morgan Shepherd in fourth place. Darrell Waltrip finished fifth.

"The car was doing fine. It felt good and ran well all day. Then going into the first turn, it just got loose," Elliott said. "I'd been playing catch-up all day, but I felt we had a good chance to win until I hit the wall."

The race took nearly 1 1/2 hours to complete, largely because of a rain delay. Action had been underway only 14 laps before a thundershower forced a 2-hour, 16-minute delay.

The lead changed 16 times among nine drivers. The race was delayed by 12 caution flags over 79 laps, with one of the delays caused by a light rain.

Richmond noticed a light drizzle in the final part of the race but said it had little effect on his driving.

"We ran so long with that real-fine mist that thoughts of that went away," said Richmond, who began the race in the pole position. "The race had kept the track dry, I really didn't see any problem with rain."

Dale Earnhardt and Geoff Bodine each held substantial leads in the final third of the race. But Earnhardt lost 12.7 seconds in a pit stop to change his right-side tires.

Bodine's car ran out of gas 14 laps from the finish. He had to stop in the pits 13.2 seconds to refuel.

Mears, who had dropped out after 49 laps when his car experienced engine problems, was standing in the first pit and turned in time to see Josele Garza's accident just past the main straightaway.

Garza, 24, of Mexico City, suffered a broken left leg in the accident, which came with leader and eventual winner Bobby Rahal on the 79th lap of the Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course.

"I saw him slide off the track but didn't see what started it," said Mears, a two-time Indianapolis 500 champion. "Josele hit the guardrail nose-first, and the back of his car slapped around and hit the rail again."

"Then he flew up and hit the bank of Turn One, and that impact made him spiral like a football and cartwheel at the same time. He came down by the guardrail and bounced."

Garza was taken by helicopter to St. Vincent's Charity Hospital in Cleveland for initial X-rays and an examination. A hospital spokesman said the driver will be taken to Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis, and will undergo surgery today.

Rahal, the local favorite from Dublin, Ohio, did not celebrate his victory until told of Garza's condition.

"Thank God," he muttered, wiping his forehead. "Something like this takes all the fun out of it. I'm very grateful Josele wasn't badly hurt."

Rahal, of Dublin, Ohio, slipped past Danny Sullivan with 10 laps to go and held off Roberto Guerrero of Colombia to win the race also known as the Escort Radar Warning 200.

On that 79th lap, Garza's Schaefer-Machinists' Union March-Cosworth rubbed the left front tire of Randy Lewis' car as they converged just before the straightaway blends into the first turn.

Lewis' Raychem-Raynor March-Cosworth was undamaged.

"Man, my heart just stopped," Lewis said. "I'm not exactly sure what happened. All of a sudden, Josele was airborne."

IN BRIEF

Alexander Is Better Golfer Than Sleeper In Amateur Win

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Stewart Alexander was a better golfer than sleeper this weekend. Alexander, the 33-year-old golf coach at Louisiana State University, beat Chris Kite 5-3 Sunday at Shoal Creek to win the U.S. Amateur Championship.

"I didn't sleep very well last night, figuring it might be a blowout in the other direction," Alexander said. "When Chris got two-up, I thought 'Gosh, don't let this happen.' Then he didn't play very well on the back nine and I made some putts to get back in the match," Alexander said.

Alexander birdied six of the last 10 holes, including four of the last five, to close out Kite at the 15th hole.

"It was a lot more exciting in the afternoon," Kite said. "Even though I lost, I enjoyed it. I gave it my best and he responded well. He deserved to win."

Among Alexander's birdies was a 30-foot bunker shot he sank at the par-four 12th. Kite, however, sank a 15-foot birdie putt on that hole.

"The shot out of the bunker at 12 was the crusher," Kite said of Alexander's 30-footer. "There has to be a winner and there has to be a loser. Today I didn't win."

Cram Retains 1,500 Crown

STUTTGART, West Germany (UPI) — Steve Cram of Britain retained his European 1,500 meters title Sunday by beating compatriot Sebastian Coe on the last day of the European Track and Field Championships.

He made his kick with 300 meters to go and Coe had to settle for the silver medal. Han Kulker of Holland took the bronze.

Cram was timed in a relatively slow 3 minutes 41.09 seconds, ahead of Coe's 3:41.67 and Kulker's 3:42.11.

Ravilla Agdelinova of the Soviet Union won the women's 1,500 meters, beating compatriot Tatiana Samolenko and Romania's Doina Melinte. Britain's Zola Budd was in the pack on the final lap as the powerful Eastern European women stormed through.

Britain's Jack Buckner was the surprise winner of the 5,000 meters, finishing ahead of Italy's Stefano Mei and Britain's Tim Hutchings. Steve Ovett, suffering from a cold, pulled out with five laps to run.

Ogygian Back To Face Groovy

ELMONT, N.Y. (UPI) — Ogygian, scratched from the Travers and Jim Dandy Stakes at Saratoga because of muddy tracks, returns Monday against sprint star Groovy and three others in the $217,700 Jerome Handicap at Belmont Park.

Ogygian, a winner of six of seven lifetime starts, and widely regarded as the most talented 3-year-old in training, has not raced since winning the Dwyer Stakes July 5.

Hulbert's Birdie Holds Off Sindelar

CORDOVA, Tenn. (UPI) — Mike Hulbert knew he needed a birdie on the final hole Sunday to win the St. Jude Golf Classic, so he stayed calm.

"Everything felt fine," said Hulbert, who sank a 2-foot putt to snuff a late charge by Joey Sindelar and pocket $109,064 for his first PGA Tour triumph.

"It was nice and short and then it was over," Hulbert said of the putt. "I was just real patient."

Hulbert, whose previous best finish was a tie for second at the Bay Hill Classic in March, fired a three-under 69 Sunday for a total of 8-under 280.

"I guess the turning point was No. 14," said Hulbert, who earned a par-4 on the hole. "That definitely kept my momentum and I hit some decent shots coming in."

"This is the biggest thrill of my life. It's just the greatest feeling in the world."

Sindelar, who shot final-round, 4-under 68, put his second shot on the 18th into a bunker. He fluffed his shot out of the sand and wound up 23 feet from the hole, before two-putting.

"I was in a position several times today not to finish in the top six or seven," Sindelar said. "So I can't feel too badly about what I did."

Sindelar's 7-under 281 earned him $65,438. Payne Stewart shot 6-under 282 to take third place. Larry Nelson was in fourth at 283 and Gary Koch and Larry Mize were tied for fifth with 4-under 284s.

Golf Roundup

Hulbert, who entered the final round in a four-way tie for the lead, toured the back nine with pars until the birdie on 18.

Sindelar challenged for the lead with a series of birdies, but lost the tourney with his par on the final hole.

Sindelar's second shot on the 18th landed in a bunker and his sand shot barely made the green. His attempt at a 23-foot birdie putt fell about three feet short and he tapped in for a par.

"On 18, I felt as if I were still pretty collected," Sindelar said. "I didn't start feeling nervous until the bunker shot. It was an easy shot and, if it had been a foot or two to the left, it would have been five times easier."

"It was all a matter of tee shots on 17 and 18," Sindelar said. "I hit some good ones and he (Hulbert) hit a fantastic one."

Proceeds from the tournament benefitted St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

BARBER BLOWS PUTT, TOURNAMENT
LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Miller Barber appeared to be coasting to a victory in the $200,000 Senior Golf Classic Sunday until he missed a 1 1/4-foot putt on the par-4 16th and took a bogey.

"It was so close I could have kicked it in," said Barber, who lost the tournament to Gene Littler on the third hole of a playoff. "It turned the whole tournament around."

Littler, who won in sudden-death with an 8-foot putt for par on the par-3 No. 17, took home $30,000 in his third Seniors Tour victory of the year.

Littler, who missed a 5-foot putt on the 18th, said Barber got careless when he missed the 1 1/2-footer that forced the tourney into a three-way playoff that included Bob Goalby, whose hole-in-one on the 13th catapulted him into a tie for the lead.

"I was a little disappointed there was a playoff," said Littler, 58. "But Miller led most of the way so he should have been the most disappointed."

Goalby was eliminated on the first hole of sudden-death when his tee shot on the par-3 17th sliced left, hit a spectator and rolled to the bottom of a steep hill.

Barber and Littler each parred the hole and the second playoff at par-5 No. 18. They failed to hit the green off the tee when the playoff returned to the 17, but Littler made his par and Barber fell short.

"I didn't do anything spectacular," Littler said. "but I didn't do anything badly. I just played steadily."

IN BRIEF

Bishop Tutu Bids Farewell To Soweto Followers

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Desmond Tutu delivered his last sermon as bishop of Johannesburg to a congregation of white and black Anglicans in the township of Soweto, saying South African blacks had paid a high price for opposing racial segregation.

The 1984 Nobel peace laureate's homily Sunday was the last he will give in Soweto, his home for the past eight years, before going to Cape Town for his enthronement next Sunday as the first black leader of the nation's 2 million Anglicans.

More than 100 policemen blocked roads in Soweto and barred reporters as about 300 blacks marched to the funeral of a schoolboy who was killed 10 days ago in a clash with security forces at a township school.

Another funeral in Soweto — for one of 20 people shot by police in clashes on Tuesday — was halted by radical black youths who insisted that all the victims should be buried together.

It was not clear whether police would allow the mass funeral, tentatively scheduled for Thursday.

Aid To Apartheid Foes Urged

HARARE, Zimbabwe (UPI) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, who becomes leader of the Non-Aligned Movement today, said the 101-member organization should grant military assistance to rebels fighting South Africa's white-led government.

Mugabe, speaking on state-run television Sunday on the eve of the opening of the Non-Aligned Movement's 25th anniversary summit in Harare, said immediate action must be taken against Pretoria, including economic sanctions and military assistance to opponents of the government.

The six-day summit opens today with a ceremony during which Mugabe will assume leadership of the organization from Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, who held the post for three years.

Officials in Zimbabwe — which spent $20 million preparing for the summit — have been disappointed by an expected turnout of about 50 heads of state, compared to their original forecast of 80. About 30 nations did not send a delegation at all.

Newsman's Release Sought

MOSCOW (UPI) — The owner of U.S. News & World Report flew to Moscow today to seek the release from jail of correspondent Nicholas Daniloff who was arrested by Soviet authorities on suspicion of spying.

Mortimer Zuckerman, the weekly magazine's owner and editor in chief, left New York's Kennedy Airport Sunday and was expected to arrive in Moscow today, editor David Gergen said in a statement in New York.

Gergen said he would spearhead efforts to obtain Daniloff's release through diplomatic and private channels in Washington, where the magazine is based.

Gergen said in New York, "Unless the Soviets quickly release Mr. Daniloff they will send a chilling message to the world" about Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's "commitment to greater cooperation in U.S.-Soviet relations."

Balloonists Pass Halfway Mark

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — Three Dutch adventurers trying to become the first Europeans to fly a balloon across the Atlantic passed the halfway mark today but increasing winds promised a bumpy landing on the continent.

The 15-story-high Dutch Viking was to touch down between the borders of France and Denmark early Tuesday, said a flight control center spokeswoman at Amsterdam's Schiphol airport.

A successful end to the 2,363-mile voyage would mark the first Atlantic balloon crossing by Europeans and the first by a woman. Capt. Henk Brink, 42, is flying the balloon with his wife, Evelyn, 30, and Maj. Willem Hageman, a 39-year-old F-16 squadron commander in the Royal Dutch Air Force.

More than 20,000 people watched as they ascended from a soccer field in the heart of St. John's, Newfoundland, just before 11 p.m. Saturday.

Study: 'Revolving Door' Still Spins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The problem of Pentagon officials passing through the "revolving door" from government to defense firms suggests they are being hired for "insider knowledge and for favors already rendered," a study says.

The General Accounting Office report showed 21 percent of former Pentagon workers now employed in the private sector work on the same projects they handled for the government and that 26 percent of the employees made decisions in the Pentagon that affected their current defense contractor employer.

12:25 a.m. A passenger in the vehicle, Boucher's brother David, received minor injuries and was treated and released from Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford.

According to David Boucher, his brother lost control of the vehicle trying to avoid cars that may have been stopped or slowing in front of them, the boys' father, Richard, said today.

Marriage In The Fast Lane

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (UPI) — Brent Walker did not have a great finish in the 15-mile Charleston Distance Run, but it's not easy to run and propose marriage at the same time.

Walker, who ran the race Saturday in 2 hours, 6 minutes and 9 seconds, stopped along the way to propose to his girlfriend of 1 1/2 years — Leslie Dawson, 24, of Greensboro, N.C.

Four miles into the race, Walker's father, Jerry, quietly slipped him the engagement ring.

Walker then moved down to Dawson, handed her the ring and popped the question: "Will you marry me?"

They were heading home from the beach when the accident occurred, the elder Boucher said.

The patrol has predicted that 29 people will die in Florida during the Labor Day weekend which ends midnight today. In 1985, 33 people died during the same holiday period. Sixteen of those fatalities were alcohol related. Sixteen victims were under age 33.

Nationwide the death toll early today stood at 254, according to law enforcement reports.

—Angela Woodhull, Deane Jordan

She said yes, and he told her he would see her 11 miles later. Dawson said the proposal-on-the-run surprised her.

"I was so shocked," she said. "After he left, I turned to my mother and asked her if I said yes. And she said, 'You took the ring like you did.'"

Walker is a senior hurdler and captain of the University of North Carolina track team. Dawson said she may now have to change the way she does her job. As a flight attendant, she points out the location of emergency exits on the airplane to passengers with her right hand.

"I want to flash my ring," she said. "I'm going to be using my left."

The Charm Of Distance Spurs Hot Competition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The court-ordered process allowing most consumers to choose a long-distance company ends today but that will not stop the fierce competition in the nation's $45 billion long-distance marketplace.

American Telephone & Telegraph, which won 75 percent of the customers in two years of balloting at the local Bell phone companies, plans an aggressive effort to take business away from MCI and U.S. Sprint, its closest competitors.

MCI has 15 percent of the market and U.S. Sprint has 4.5 percent.

In all, 475 companies nationwide now are vying for part of a business that once belonged exclusively to AT&T. The main target is the high-volume business phone customer, but competition and a series of Federal Communications Commission decisions already have sharply reduced all long-distance rates.

Since the selection process began, AT&T has dropped its rates more than 21 percent. MCI has adjusted its prices to stand 5 percent to 20 percent below AT&T's. U.S. Sprint says its average rates are 5 percent to 10 percent under AT&T and 2 percent to 3 percent lower than MCI.

The changeover has lowered AT&T's overhead and increased costs slightly for the other companies.

six crewmembers aboard Flight 498 from Mexico City, but a passenger list released late Sunday night did not indicate how many were U.S. citizens.

An official of the Mexican pilot's union said the captain of Flight 498, Arturo Valdez Prom, had flown 10,000 hours, compiling an "excellent record."

The airliner destroyed at least 10 houses and damaged 20 more. The Piper Tomahawk, with three people in it, fluttered to earth in a nearby schoolyard. A woman's legs protruded from a window.

"My neighbors are dead! My neighbors are dead!" screamed a hysterical woman roaming through the grisly wreckage. "My cat is dead! The planes, my God, they disintegrated. Look at the torso over there. Oh my God."

Eric Himes said he was watching a tennis match on television when Flight 498 smashed into the ground a few hundred feet away.

"There was a wall of flame," Himes said. "It was unbelievable. Bodies. Lots of bodies. Oh Christ. Have you ever been to Vietnam? That's the only thing I can equate it with."

"It was horrible," said Sugata Banerjee, who saw the crash from his back yard a block away. "I saw it falling, a spiral of orange and white."

Police Officer Phil Martinez said, "I thought it was a balloon coming down. Then it hit and erupted in yellow and orange fire and smoke. Then I saw a smaller tail coming down."

"I saw the jet swirling down without a tail," said resident Joseph Rodriguez. "I saw it nose-dive into the ground."

More than 200 law enforcement and emergency workers from Los Angeles and Orange counties were dispatched to the disaster. More than 50 federal investigators were ordered to the scene and Aeromexico was sending an investigation team.

John Rich, an investigator with the National Air Safety Board, said controllers at El Toro Marine Station handled the Aeromexico flight before handing it over to FAA controllers at Los Angeles International Airport three minutes before the crash.

Rich said investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board were en route to a command post near the crash to examine tapes and transcripts of communication between the Aeromexico pilots and controllers.

Rich said investigators do not yet know if the Piper was communicating with any controllers at the time of the accident. He said the plane departed Torrance Airport at 11 a.m. en route to Big Bear, Calif.

Witness David Powell said the planes collided just before noon.

"For some reason I decided to look up and I saw this little plane going straight toward the big plane and I thought, 'God, he's trying to commit suicide.'"

"Then the little plane hit the big plane and it was a loud boom like a sonic boom. And then the little plane came into a spin and came fluttering down, and the big plane went straight down."

Banerjee said he ran down the street and saw flames ignite a man clothes while he tried to wet his house with a garden hose. "He burned to death," he said. A woman in the area also said she saw the man die.

"I'm proud of where we have come to, but sometimes I think we are better known in the rest of the country than we are in Seminole County. We have been written up all over the country and get phone calls from as far away as New Mexico and California asking about our programs."

A VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) volunteer, Mrs. Dean and Families Together have received recognition and awards both locally and nationally, including the President's National Volunteer Award presented in Washington, D.C.

As a VISTA volunteer she receives a stipend that has enabled her to keep the drug prevention program going. She has just signed up for her second one-year commitment. ACTION, the National Volunteer Agency, awarded a VISTA grant to Florida Informed Parents, Inc., with which Families Together is affiliated, to encourage volunteerism in areas of social concern.

Families Together was the only parent group in the state to have three VISTA workers until Jane Lane and Susan Brandenburg completed their term and went on to other things. "We are looking for two new VISTA volunteers to take their place," Mrs. Dean said.

The office space, furniture and equipment are donated, as well as many services such as printing. Membership dues and donations are needed to pay the executive director's salary and other costs that are not underwritten, such as utilities.

Families Together has put together a "Crack Attack!" brochure for distribution to alert youth, parents and others to the dangers of using "crack" or "rock", a highly concentrated form of cocaine that is highly addictive. The drug is cheap, available in the community, and can result in physical and mental problems and even sudden death.

Mrs. Dean said eight out of 10 of the drug users under 30 coming through her program have tried rock cocaine. She said the wide use of drugs is not only a problem for this generation but because so many drug abusers are having babies, they are being born addicted or with other physical, mental and emotional problems.

Mrs. Dean said the school system is already making plans for dealing with the projected influx of these children to the schools in 10 to 15 years.

The "Crack Attack!" brochure will be distributed first to high school students then to the middle school and elementary school pupils, Mrs. Dean said. She said she hopes to have an anti-drug teen rally.

More than 5,000 calls were received by the Families Together office last year, she said. Callers from Seminole County with drug problems were referred to The Grove for evaluation and the callers from Orange County were referred to The Door in Orange County.

"As far as I know," she said, "We are the only drug prevention and community resource center in Seminole, Orange and Osceola counties."

Some of the calls are from people who are contemplating suicide or have attempted to take their own life and when they call, Mrs. Dean tries to keep them talking while desperately trying to get help to them.

British Sculptor Henry Moore Dead At 88

LONDON (UPI) — Henry Moore, the son of an English miner who overcame harsh criticism of his early work to become one of the most acclaimed sculptors of the 20th century, has died. He was 88.

Moore, who suffered from arthritis and diabetes, died Sunday at his home of more than 40 years in Much Hadham, 30 miles north of London. He was frail and weak during much of the last three years of his life, a friend said.

Moore, born July 30, 1898, in the northern industrial city of Castleford, burst onto the British art scene during World War II with his sketches of Londoners sleeping in shelters during the German blitz.

The sketches, commissioned by the government when material for sculpting was scarce, earned Moore national acclaim.

Moore's early sculpture was angular and rough, strongly influenced by pre-Columbian art. About 1928, he evolved a more personal style that gained him an international reputation. The hallmarks of his sculpture were abstract representations of the human form. His favorite design was that of a female figure reclining, leaning on one arm with legs outstretched.

His early work was greeted with harsh criticism in Britain and after World War I, when Moore was gassed during a battle in France that left all but 52 of his 400-man unit dead, he was forced to teach to earn a living.

At his first exhibition in 1931, a British newspaper denounced his work as "objectionable examples of the deformity in which he specializes" and said he was corrupting the young. It apologized to its readers for publishing a photograph of "the least objectionable" of the works.

He intended almost all of his sculptures, done in wood, stone and concrete without clay models, to be seen as part of a landscape, relating to the space around them. They were often pierced by hollows.

"The first hole made through a piece of stone is a revelation," Moore said once, explaining the hollows. "The hole connects one side to the other, making it immediately three-dimensional. A hole can itself have as much meaning as a solid mass."

Recognition, when it came for Moore, came quickly. His work was displayed throughout the world in dozens of nations, including the United States, Italy, Israel, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Japan and Australia.

His good friend and admirer, British art authority Lord Clark, said Moore's work is abstract "but there is an underlying feeling for natural forms. Hence he will endure."

Moore was the seventh child of an English miner, and much of his early life was spent in poverty. Moore's father supplemented his small wages from the mines by mending shoes and his mother by cleaning homes.

Would-Be Fathers Give Boxers Nod Over Jockeys

DEAR ABBY: I just read an article in the Los Angeles Times stating that men who wear tight underwear greatly decrease their chances for fathering children. It rang a bell with me. I'm sure you wrote a whole column about this about five years ago. Please run it again. It was great.

Dear Abby

H.S. IN L.A.
DEAR H.S.: I did. And here it is.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from "Childless Couple," who were considering artificial insemination. This may help:

For four years my wife and I tried without success to have a child. We were both tested. She was fine, but the doctor said that because my sperm count was so low, my chances of fathering a child were slim. That's when we considered artificial insemination. I saw a fertility specialist. He asked me what kind of shorts I wore. I told him I had worn jockey shorts for years. He suggested that I switch to boxer shorts, the loose fitting kind. Instead of the snugly fitting jockey type. When he explained why, I thought he was crazy, but I took his suggestion, and four months later my wife conceived! Our baby is due in March. I'm signing my real name, but please don't use it. Just sign me...

FUTURE FATHER
DEAR FUTURE: When I read your letter, I laughed and threw it into my wastebasket. But I quit laughing (and quickly retrieved your letter) after reading several more bearing the same incredible message! Read on for a short story that may help some for whom pregnancy is inconceivable:

DEAR ABBY: I just hung up from a long-distance call that I must share with you. When I answered my phone, the fellow on the other end said, "Dick, I'm calling to thank you, my wife is pregnant!" I realized instantly what he meant. Early in February, while I was interviewing him for a story, I had asked routinely if he had any children. "No," he replied, "but my wife and I have been trying for a long time." So I quipped, "You have got to quit wearing jockey shorts."

That broke him up, of course, and after admitting that the did wear jockey shorts, he asked what his shorts had to do with it. I said he had obviously missed the Dear Abby column in which you stated that jockey shorts reduced a man's sperm count. I promised to send him a clip of your column, and he said that while it sounded a bit crazy, he and his wife were desperate enough to try almost anything. In his call today, he said that when his wife learned she was pregnant, they counted back and found that she conceived a month after he switched to boxer shorts! He also said if they have a baby girl, they may name her "Abby."

DICK ELLERS, REPORTER

DEAR ABBY: I recently read an article in a medical journal stating that if men continue to wear jockey shorts and tight jeans, the need for artificial insemination will increase drastically!

It stated: "The male anatomy was created so that the testicles draw close to the body in cold weather and drop in hot weather. It is a natural thermostat at work. Interference with this causes a serious drop in sperm." The article indicated that American men have increasingly lower sperm counts, and the problem is compounded by the wearing of tight clothing. For population control throughout the world, wouldn't it be a great idea to export tight jeans?

B. McG. IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY: May I comment on your men's underwear debate? We, in our brief-type Fruit-of-the-Looms remain fruitless, while our brothers in their boxer shorts remain "heir-conditioned."

Mexico, U.S. At Odds Over Drug Agents

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexico is countering the embarrassing publicity surrounding the detention and alleged torture of a U.S. drug agent by questioning the activities of American anti-narcotics forces in Mexico.

Mexican authorities Tuesday indicted 11 state policemen on minor charges for mistreating U.S. drug agent Victor Cortez, Jr. But, at the same time, they issued a strongly worded note justifying the detention.

The Foreign Ministry note, a reply to Washington's protest that policemen detained and allegedly tortured Cortez on Aug. 13, charged the Drug Enforcement Administration agent was in the car of an underworld informant who was carrying two illegal automatic weapons.

"The U.S. government, like the Mexican government, must be concerned that DEA agents, accredited in Mexico for exchanging information, are undertaking unauthorized activities," the statement said.

Nowhere did the note address the issue of whether Cortez was beaten and tortured with electric shocks and carbonated water forced up his nose as DEA administrator John Lawn has charged.

But it clearly warned Mexico would not tolerate unlawful activities by the estimated 30 DEA agents operating in the country.

The statement underscored the government's attempt to shift the focus of the issue from police brutality and the close ties between narcotics traffickers and corrupt police to questions over the activities of DEA agents in Mexico.

DEA agents working in Mexico gather information about drug production and smuggling, trade information with Mexican drug enforcement agents. While allowed to join Mexican police in drug busts, they cannot make arrests.

Some 42 percent of the heroin and 35 percent of the marijuana — both produced in Mexico — and a third of the South American cocaine now consumed in the United States flows across the porous 1,933-mile Mexican-U.S. border.

In Washington,

Reagan administration officials characterized the Mexican note as a "face-saving gesture" for President Miguel de la Madrid, who has been under attack by the left for caving into pressure from Washington.

"We are less concerned with the contents of the note than the tone of the note," said one observer of Mexican-U.S. relations. "It's going to cause problems in Washington because it fuels the fires of the Helms people," said the observer, who asked not to be identified.

Senate hearings on Mexico called by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in May were a forum for shrill charges by administration officials that Mexico's drug eradication program was riddled with corruption.

Anti-American feeling in Mexico, stirred by U.S. pressure over the 1985 kidnapping of DEA agent Enrique Camarena and the Helms hearings, have been fanned again by the Cortez incident.

Leftist parties are demanding an explanation of why foreign agents are allowed to operate in the country. When the Foreign Ministry said there was no formal treaty permitting DEA agents in Mexico, the U.S. Embassy hastily issued a statement saying "there are over 50 bilateral agreements between the United States and Mexico which provide for cooperative efforts to curb the illegal traffic of narcotics."

Even moderate voices in Mexico noted that the presence of DEA agents was certain to cause problems.

"Nothing has been achieved by permitting U.S. anti-narcotics police to operate in Mexico except to create a situation auspicious for friction between our two countries," Adrian Lajous, who has held a string of government posts, wrote in the influential newspaper Excelsior.

The Cortez incident, besides throwing a shadow over de la Madrid's official visit in Washington the same day, also came at a time when Mexico was receiving top marks from U.S. officials for its drug eradication efforts.

A comparison between the first six months of 1985 and this year, shows cocaine seizures nearly doubled, marijuana field eradication increased slightly and the number of heroin busts up 600 percent.

TMJ Dysfunction Can Be Treated

DEAR DR. GOTT — My jawbone is sore, and if either my doctor or dentist knows how to treat it, they sure don't act like it. They say it's temporomandibular joint dysfunction. What can you tell me about this problem?

DEAR READER — Temporomandibular joint (TMJ) dysfunction is a surprisingly common jaw ailment that causes headache, earache and clicking when the jaw is moved. The condition is thought to result from an instability of the joint where the jawbone (mandible) meets the cheek (temporal bone). There are many specialists who can help you with a TMJ problem; ask your dentist for a referral.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My daughter keeps her house very cool, but never covers her children when they nap. I always did, since I was told that small children should have their stomachs and chests covered. Is this an old wives' tale?

DEAR READER — I'm afraid so. When it comes to outer clothing, children's requirements are the same as adults.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My mother is 68. When she looks straight ahead, everything looks milky, but her side vision is good. What would cause this? Would glasses help?

DEAR READER — When peripheral vision is spared and central vision impaired, the patient may have a form of retinal degeneration. Your mother needs a thorough ophthalmological exam to determine the cause of her falling eyesight. Glasses will not help the condition, but surgery might.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had a complete hysterectomy last year due to bleeding fibroids and am on Cyclican, Premarin-Provera therapy. I've had severe hot flashes since the surgery, and the drugs don't help. Could my personal thermostat have been upset by the surgery?

DEAR READER — I think not. If your ovaries were removed along with your uterus, you may need more Premarin (estrogen) to make up for the hormones you are now lacking. Unfortunately, some women seem to experience a variety of symptoms after having a hysterectomy; drugs don't seem to help. No one understands why this happens. There is an organization called HERS Foundation (422 Bryn Mawr Ave., Bala Cynwyd, PA 19004) that can give you further information from an anti-surgery/female point of view.

Dr. Gott

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, Ohio 44101.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

It is not standard practice to raise partner's suit with only a doubleton honor. However, when partner has a strong two-bid in that suit, that can be the best way to express your positive values. Today, North responded with two diamonds as an artificial waiting bid after South's forcing two-club opening. When South showed his true colors with two hearts, North's raise made getting to slam easy. Once there, the question was how best to make it. Test yourself by covering the East and West hands and planning the play.

The spectacular approach is to take the ace of diamonds while pitching a high club honor from your hand. Then you can cash the A-K of clubs, play ace and king of hearts, and hope that the defender with the third heart has a club left. If that happens, he will helplessly follow suit as you pitch one spade on the jack of clubs. Then you will rid yourself of your final spade loser on the fourth club and let the defender take his high trump when he feels like it.

That is really not best. If one of the defenders has only a club or two, then most probably he is the defender with three hearts. The right play is to trump the opening king of diamonds lead and then play A-K of clubs. If all follow, continue with the club queen. If West trumps, you must hope that he started with three hearts. A-K of trumps will then pull all the opponents' teeth, and you can take two spade discards on dummy's top minor cards.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY SEPTEMBER 2, 1986

Persons whom you have helped will repay your good deeds in greater measure in the year ahead. Benefits are likely to accrue in both your career and your social life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Things should fall into place for you today without your having to expend undue effort. Don't buck the trends that Lady Luck is responsible for. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, PO Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Friends in key positions will not feel put upon if you request favors from them today, because they'll instinctively know you'll help them when they need you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't waste your time today on mundane goals that can be taken care of later. Today you will be luckier with truly meaningful objectives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something you've been hoping for is getting closer and closer. In fact, there's a chance that this wish may be fulfilled today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your possibilities for adding to your holdings look excellent today. Your best breaks are likely to be in areas where you're doing something in conjunction with another.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Usually it's unwise to let our hearts rule our heads, but this won't be true in your case today. The kinder you are, the more you'll receive.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) More opportunities than usual exist today where your work or career is concerned. They will develop through people who like you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Although you could not rely on certain people yesterday, the opposite will be true today. In fact, people will lend a hand without being asked.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A significant break is evolving in a situation that could help you and your family materially. Be both patient and positive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep in touch today with key people who figure prominently in your immediate plans. Welcome news could come your way from several directions at once.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Material conditions look especially favorable for you today. However, what you gain is not likely to come through channels that you customarily rely on.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you are an unattached Leo, this is a good day to get out and circulate. Your chances for meeting someone new who you'll like are very strong.
