Youth killed on GreenWay

SANFORD — A young man was killed Wednesday night as he walked along the Central Florida GreenWay south of Sanford.

The unidentified man was reportedly walking with a friend on the toll road about 7:30 p.m. just north of the Lake Jessup toll plaza. State trooper said the man was hit by at least two vehicles.

The two men had reportedly left Teen Challenge of Sanford and were headed toward Daytona Beach.

No other information was available from the Florida Highway Patrol.

A new mayor will be selected from commission members Iris Benson, Annamaria Vacca, Ron Sargent, Jim Carrico and Bill Winston. Carrico defeated Miller for the district 3 seat Tuesday. Winston was elected without opposition. Both men were elected to three year terms. The remaining three commissioners have each served one year of their first term.

Historic fire truck fund

Historic fire truck fund

Tomorrow is the deadline for confirming the purchase of the 1921 fire truck. With the purchase price of $8,500 needed, the actual money obtained by Sanford Fire Chief Tom Hickson as of this morning is $7,610.29. "Several people have promised more money," Hickson said, "and if everyone comes through we will have enough."

Among the latest donations was a $50 gift from Lake Mary Fire Chief Duane Mehl and his wife Loretta. Other donations, at $25 each, were received from Raymond and Mary Larsen, Sanford Garden Club Jacaranda Circle, Henry and Debra Bowlin, Stella Oritt, and Joseph and Carol Dennison.

"I hope now that we have apparently reached the purchase price goal," Hickson said, "that people won hold back on planned donations, because we will still be needing more money for the refurbishing of the truck."

The date of November 11 for the final purchase agreement is exactly, to the date, 73 years from time the fire truck first arrived in Sanford, on Nov. 11, 1921.

Community rallies for jailed teen

LAKE MARY — A community touched by a young man's kindness, is shocked by his arrest and refuses to doubt his innocence.

"He just couldn't have done it," said Harriett Mixon. "He's just the nicest boy you could ever meet."

On Sunday morning, Jamie Swinehart was arrested by Volusia County sheriff's deputies and charged with one count of aggravated child abuse in connection with the death of his girlfriend's seven-month-old son.

Friends and neighbors say he was just in the wrong place at the wrong time when officers knocked on the door.

Neighbor Robin Stern, who said he has watched Jamie grow up "since he was a toddler eating dirt in the front yard," can not believe Jamie would be capable of harming someone.

"He's always bringing injured animals to Harriett (Mixon) to see if she can make them better," he said. Mixon is known in the area for her care of injured animals, especially squirrels.

"And he's a very responsible kid," Stern continued. "He'd take care of the kids, friends, family, neighbors all the time. Sometimes he'd take care of nieces and nephews for a whole weekend all by himself. Everyone knew he could be trusted."

Kirby Swinehart breaks down in tears occasionally when he talks about his son.

"This is tearing him (Jamie) up," the father said. "He is devastated. He wouldn't hurt a fly, but he loved that child and he wouldn't harm him for anything.

The child, Jose Anthony Trinidad, was not his own, but his father said that he had loved him since he had met his mother Angie Broomfield of Winter Park a few months ago.

A friend, who asked not to be identified, said that Jamie had been concerned about bruises on Jose's body on several occasions.

Kirby Swinehart said Angie had told Jamie that the child had fallen while learning how to walk.

"Jamie has no personal knowledge of child abuse," he said, "so he believed her. I mean, it's plausible."

Though he dropped out of high school to work more hours at Food Lion in Sanford, Jamie had gone on his own to complete work and earn his GED.

"He knew if he was going to get anywhere, he'd have to do it," Stern said. "No one told him to do it, he just got off his butt and did it on his own."

Jamie Swinehart

How county voted

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — The dominant vote Tuesday was for Republicans, although Democrats fared well in many precincts throughout Seminole County.

An analysis of precinct turnout Tuesday shows Sanford area voters favored incumbent governor Lawton Chiles, a Democrat, over his GOP challenger Jeb Bush. Most Sanford voters favored Democrat Larry Furlong for the District 4 county commission seat over winner Winfield Adams.

Furlong fared well in other portions of the county. The one term incumbent edged ahead of Adams in 49 of the 128 active precincts, a 38 percent showing. Furlong carried 47.6 percent of the total vote in the county, trailing Adams' 52.4 percent.

The county elections office released a precinct-by-precinct breakdown of voting Wednesday.

Although the county as a whole gave 55.6 percent of the vote to the Bush candidacy, pockets of the county favored the incumbent Democrat. The 15 Sanford area precincts gave Chiles a 3,547-to-3,195 edge over Bush. The showing was due to the higher concentration of Democrats in San-

New judge irked, says win slammed

SANFORD — After a long, grueling and successful two-county campaign to win a seat on the Eighteenth Judicial Circuit Court, one judge-elect is upset over a newspaper story he feels slams his win.

Gene Stephenson, who was elected Tuesday to the circuit court in Seminole County, said an Orlando newspaper's story today seemed to criticize the two candidates who won judgeships in the circuit because their winning vote margins came not from their home counties, but the

Cuba gets new migration lottery

MIAMI — A new lottery has been set up in Cuba to allow even those Cubans who do not have relatives living in the United States the opportunity for legal migration. U.S. officials announced Wednesday.

Cubans who are at least 18 years old are eligible to apply for the 5,000 annual visas. Applications will be selected four times a year, said Valerie Blake, deputy director of the Department of Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The 32,000 Cubans held in U.S. camps will not be eligible for the program unless they return to Cuba, she said.

To apply, eligible Cubans must send or drop off an envelope to the U.S. Interest Section in Havana between Nov. 15 and Dec. 31. They must write on it their name, Cuban identification number, marital status and number of unmarried children under 21.

Those selected will be interviewed and must qualify under two of five criteria: secondary education or higher; three years' work experience; job skills; family ties in the United States — or an interest in migrating to the United States before Oct. 1, 1994.

Feds nab wrong man

JUPITER — A highway breakdown turned into a five-day nightmare for a motorist mistaken for a federal fugitive.

A Palm Beach County Sheriff's computer check listed George "Tony" Frison on a federal warrant as a bank robber who escaped from a Philadelphia halfway house in August.

"The problem was everything matched," said deputy Darleen Lapaglia, a backup officer on the arrest. "The name, the date of birth, the height, even his Social Security number."

Unluckily enough, Frison, 36, of West Palm Beach was originally from Philadelphia.

He insisted deputies had the wrong man, but Lapaglia said federal marshals refused to provide fingerprints or a photograph to check his story. U.S. Marshals Service spokesman Stephen Quinn in Philadelphia refused to comment on the mix-up.

Frison was taken into custody Oct. 24 and sent to a federal detention center in Miami. He called his landlady from custody, and she called Frison's boss, Roy McMillan, at the Tequesta Kmart store. McMillan told marshals Frison couldn't be the escapee because he has been at Kmart for five years.

Lots of calls later, Frison was freed Oct. 28.

Audubon Society to convene in Florida

FORT MYERS — The region where the first Audubon wardens came to protect wading birds from plume hunters will host a convention of the National Audubon Society.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt is to speak Saturday and former President Carter will be given the Audubon Medal, the society's highest award, on Sunday for longstanding commitment to the environment.

Carter will be recognized in large part for protecting 104 million acres in Alaska, "more open land and more resources than any single action that government had taken," said Audubon President Peter Berle. "That alone would make him worthy of the medal."

The future of the nearby Everglades will be the focus of Saturday's session, with the Clinton administration's perspective, Audubon's prescription for restoration, ecosystem and sanctuary management, the impact of wetlands-cripping population growth and political coalition building.

Proving they aren't just a bunch of bird watchers, the society will offer a guide to the CompuServe on-line computer network.

More than 1,000 people are expected to attend the five-day biennial convention, opening Friday.

COW DNA used to nab cattle rustlers

COCOA — When a couple of cattle rustlers shot a purebred cow, butchered it, then sold the meat, they might have thought they were off the hook.

But the slain cow left a DNA trail: a calf and a pot roast.

Brevard County sheriff's detectives milked information from a confidential informant to find a man who bought cuts from the purebred Angus, which was slaughtered Aug. 4 at the Desert Ranch in Ocala County.

The man, who didn't know the meat he'd bought was stolen, offered shortly after he bought the meat to help find the rustlers. Brevard sheriff's spokeswoman Joan Heller said Wednesday.

"He said, 'I'll do anything to cooperate.' And we said, 'Can we have your roast?'"

The man handed over the pot roast, which was uncooked. The cut was then sent to a DNA lab in Utah which specializes in valuable livestock.

Since the slain cow was a purebred, careful records had been kept of its blood — and of its offspring. Investigators found the cow's orphaned calf and sent a sample of its blood with the roast.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Citizen Bush speaks out:

'It's only a matter of time before we're in control'

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Jeb Bush spent more than a year talking about his plans for Florida if he became governor. Now, he isn't in the mood to talk much about returning to life as a private citizen.

"It's over. I lost and I'll go on to the next part of my life," the second son of former President George Bush said Wednesday in a telephone interview. "There's nothing I could tell you that would sound like anything but sour grapes."

Then the 41-year-old businessman drove by the busy intersection in Miami where Gov. Lawton Chiles was greeting voters Wednesday and stopped to congratulate the 64-year-old winner. Then Bush left quickly.

Bush refused to answer questions. "You don't ask me anything," he told a throng of reporters. "Talk to the governor."

Bush, who has the genteel manner of his father, had pledged early in the race he would campaign on the issues and always think about "how will I explain this to my children or grandchildren."

And he stuck to his pledge for much of the race, praising Chiles as "an honorable man" whose ideas have grown stale.

But under a withering assault of negative Chiles ads about his business dealings and inexperience, Bush joined in the mudslinging. Bush released a much-criticized ad featuring a mother accusing Chiles of doing nothing to speed up the execution of her daughter's murderer. The campaign became one of the nastiest in Florida in recent memory.

The defeat was stinging for Bush and his supporters, who thought their get-out-the-vote operation would salvage a victory in the close race.

The Republican said his top priority now is to "stay with my family and decompress."

"Whatever lessons there are will become clear over time," Bush said. "I thought we were going to win."

State GOP Chairman Tom Slade said he talked to Bush Tuesday night and "there's not any question this has got to be a real downer."

"I have never seen a campaign that had as many true believers," Slade said. "It was an enormously painful experience for a lot of high-ideals young people."

While Bush's concession speech late Tuesday night caught some by surprise, Bush said it was obvious from the vote reports in Democrat-rich Palm Beach and Broward counties that Chiles' lead would be insurmountable.

He was heartened somewhat by the victory of his older brother, George W., over Gov. Ann Richards of Texas.

"I talked to him last night," said Bush. "I congratulated him and I'm very proud of him."

Bush, who left his commercial real estate partnership in Miami with Armando Cedina to run for governor, said he's made no decision on what he'll do next or whether he'll run for office again. But he was happy with the GOP's success Tuesday, which included gains in Florida.

"I'm delighted with the Republican trend, especially about my brother," he said. "It's a question of time before we're in control."

New faces will greet Chiles

Two Democrat incumbents keep their seats

By Associated Press

Four new faces join the Florida Cabinet in January. Two Democrats, Attorney General Bob Butterworth and Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford, keep their seats. New members are:

Education Commissioner — Frank Brogan

Brogan, 41, is the first Republican education commissioner. Brogan has had experience as a principal, teacher and school superintendent and is currently superintendent of Martin County schools. He argued that current accountability and decentralization reforms known as Blueprint 2000 haven't lived up to intended local control. He defeated appointed Democratic Education Commissioner Doug Jamerson, who had sought to become the first elected black Cabinet member.

Comptroller — Bob Milligan

Milligan, 61, a retired Marine Corps three-star general, won the Cabinet post in his first bid for public office. He said he sought another avenue of service after retiring and moving to Panama City three years ago. Born in Teaneck, N.J., Milligan was a 1956 graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and holds a master's in business administration from the University of Rochester. He served two tours of duty in Vietnam, was commander of U.S. Forces Caribbean based in Key West, and commanding general of Fleet Marine Forces Pacific. He ousted five-term Democratic incumbent Comptroller Gerald Lewis.

Treasurer — Bill Nelson

Nelson, 52, served three terms in the Florida House from 1972-78 and six as a U.S. congressman, from 1978 to 1990. As a leading booster of the space program, he flew on a space shuttle flight in January 1980. He has been a private attorney in Melbourne since losing the Democratic nomination for governor to Lawton Chiles in 1990. He holds a bachelor's degree from Yale and law degree from the University of Virginia. Nelson defeated state Rep. Tim Ireland, R-Fort Myers.

Secretary of State — Sandy Barringer Mortham

Mortham, 43, is a financial consultant and Republican state lawmaker from Largo. She was a Largo city commissioner from 1982-86 and vice mayor from 1985-86. Mortham was elected to the state House in 1986 and re-elected subsequently. She became House Republican leader in 1992. She holds an associate's degree from St. Petersburg Junior College and a bachelor's degree from Eckerd College. She defeated state Rep. Ron Saunders, D-Key West, for the post vacated by Republican Jim Smith.

Simpson jury selection grinds on

By MICHAEL FREEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — It was among Superior Court Judge Lance Ito's toughest calls: a prospective alternate juror who thought O.J. Simpson was innocent but insisted he could put those views aside and judge the case on the facts.

"I don't mean this to be a sexist comment," the judge said, "but man-to-man: Are you being straight with me on this?"

"Yes," the man said. "I am." And so he stayed. Ito turned down a prosecution request to dismiss the man for cause and allowed him — and five others who made the cut Wednesday — to return Dec. 5 for peremptory challenges, when a final panel of 15 alternates probably will be picked. Two prospects were dismissed.

The one-on-one questioning ended the truncated court week, which will resume Monday after a break for Veterans Day.

Having finished the grueling task of seating 12 jurors last week — but with opening statements still two months away — the lawyers and judge are in the early stages of picking alternates from a pool of about 100 people to hear the case against Simpson, who is charged with murdering his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

The questioning has been long and tiring. Everyone in the courtroom was getting punchy Wednesday, despite its limiting each side's questioning of each prospect to 15 minutes.

Ito followed his serious "man-to-man" question with a considerably lighter query of the same man, who said he didn't think Simpson was guilty because he could have easily fled to Canada when he was in Chicago the morning after the killings.

"Have you ever had the life experience that things aren't always as they seem?" the judge asked.

The man said he had. "Do you know who Milli Vanilli is?" the judge asked, a reference to the disgraced lip-synching pop group.

"No," the man said. "Too bad," said the judge.

Earlier, while Ito was questioning a telephone receptionist, the subject of the woman's Doberman pinscher came up. The judge offered that he, too, has a Doberman, which he named Gillis after the old TV character Dobie Gillis.

"Get it?" he asked to laughter in the courtroom.

Meanwhile, District Attorney Gil Garcetti told reporters he was appointing Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden to the prosecution team, bringing its total to seven lawyers — the largest in the office's history.

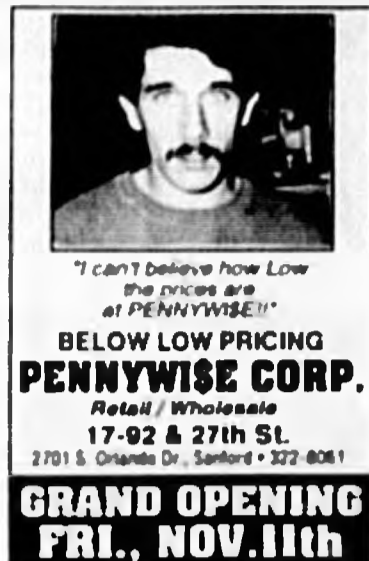

Darden, a 13-year veteran, is the first black person on the team. Garcetti denied charges that Darden was appointed to gain sympathy with the jurors, eight of 12 of whom are black.

he's black? The answer is obviously no."

Garcetti said Darden was added to ease the burden on lead prosecutors Marcia Clark and William Hodgman, who "have literally been killing themselves" on the case.

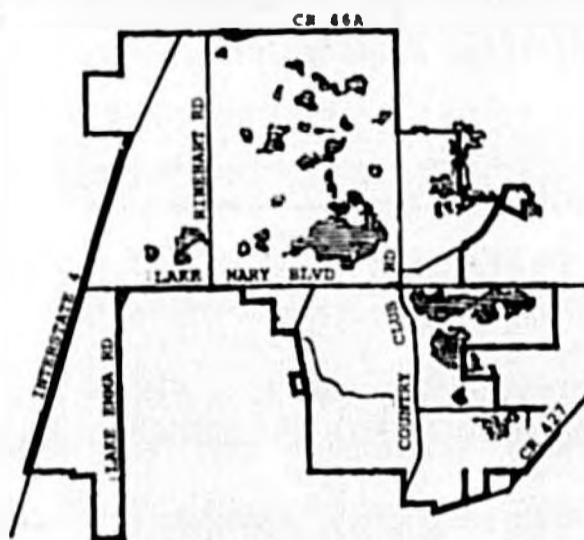

Until this week, Darden headed the investigation of Simpson's friend Al Cowling, who drove the Ford Bronco during the slow-speed pursuit that ended in Simpson's arrest. Garcetti decided not to charge Cowling.

Athletes flip over pancakes

By NICK PPEIFAUP
 Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Several dozen people had pancakes just before lunch Wednesday. They weren't eating them however, they were flipping them up into the air while running.

The Golden Age Games has featured the pancake race for many years, at Fort Mellon Park. It not only draws participants, but onlookers as well.

This year, the event, scheduled to begin at 11 a.m., began 10 minutes late. The pancakes were late in arriving.

They had just been baked however, by Edith Avenel, a member of the Sanford Pilot Club who has been preparing the pancakes for the flipping contest for many years.

During the competition, four persons at a time run out and back on a relatively short course. They are required to flip the pancake at the start, then before crossing the middle line, before crossing the end line, then before crossing the middle line on the way back, and for the final time before crossing the finish line, a total of five flips. In giving instructions to the flippers, Golden Age Games co-chairwoman Lisa Jones told them, "Remember, if you drop the pancake, pick it up and shake the dirt off of it before you continue."

She also jokingly told them not to try eating the pancakes.

During several runs, a number of the pancakes did manage to land on the ground, but they were generally replaced at the conclusion of that heat.

Betsy Robinson was one of the participants in the very first race. After finishing last she laid on the ground for a few moments to catch her breath.

Meanwhile, several other prospective pancake flippers were jogging near the area to get themselves in shape.

Although winners are based on age categories, the categories were mixed during several races. Women ran in the first heats, with the men competing in the finals.

At the conclusion of one race, one of the participants told an onlooker, "These would have flipped better if we had some cooking oil in the pan. That's what I'm used to having."

The pans used in the flipping competition were standard frying pans, approximately 14 inches in diameter. The pancakes averaged about five inches in diameter.

People who participated, as well as friends and supporters, said they really flipped over this race. And what winner wouldn't be proud to say, "I won this medal flipping a pancake."

Spirit of games bright in woman, 101

By NICK PFEIPAUP
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Peggy Richards only enters one competitive event per year in Sanford's Golden Age Games. Lately, she has won first place every time in her age category.

Peggy is 101 years old, is legally blind and has lost most of her hearing. She walks with the assistance of two canes.

Yet Wednesday morning, she participated as a regular and popular contestant in the canoe sprint races at Lake Carolla in Fort Mellon Park. Being the only entrant in her age category, and having completed the entire circular course, she was declared first place winner.

Sanford Recreation Supervisor Jim Schaefer led the applause as Richards finished making the single round on the lake, circumnavigating a course of buoys. Throughout the entire sprint, applause and cheers were in abundance from onlookers and other contestants.

"She's the only one in that age group," Schaefer said, "but her being in this event is what these games are about, giving people an opportunity to become involved in activities."

Peggy Richards has lived with her daughter, Moggie Murr, in Enterprise for the past 41 years, and has participated in the Sanford games for the past 10 years.

"My mother has always been quick and strong," daughter Moggie commented. "I remember when I was young and we would go shopping. I had all I could do to keep up with her walking through the stores."

Moggie said her mother's pride in the many trophies she has won in the Golden Age Games in Sanford.

In order to make the sprint run on the lake, as was the case in the previous few years, she had to be helped into the canoe. Katie Moncrief, of Katie's Landing, which supplied the canoes for the race, paddled in front of Peggy, wearing a bright yellow lifejacket.

Although blind, Peggy was able to see the jacket, and follow it around the course. Other canoes were also standing at the ready in case of difficulties.

There were no problems however, except that at the end of the lap, she continued paddling, and ran aground at the end of the lake, rather than returning to the starting line area.

Peggy was the last of the women who entered the canoe sprint races. The men then took over, zipping around the course as if they were raised in a canoe. Some admitted the only canoe they paddled during the year is at the Sanford games, while others say they use canoes for exercise as well as enjoyment.

A time to remember

Tomorrow is Veterans' Day. It is dedicated to honor people who have served in the various military services in our nation's wars and armed conflicts. Those who served in peacetime are also to be saluted.

Several events will be held in Central Florida, the most local being the annual Veterans' Day parade and ceremony. The parade will begin at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce parking lot at 10:30, and be at Memorial Park at the lakefront by 11 a.m., the official time for this memorial observance.

Judging from past years, only a small number of people may turn out. Mostly, those who will be on hand are former military personnel, some who retired after lengthy terms of service and others who were only in for a specific two, three or four year enlistment.

These remarks therefore, are for the people who will not be attending any official observance.

There is probably no family which hasn't had some member serve in the uniform of our country. As such, tomorrow should contain at least a few moments of recollection about the family veterans.

Those who bother to research their family trees often know of long-gone relatives who served in the Revolutionary War, Civil War, World War I and II. As afterthought, students of these conflicts often have both pro and con opinions over whether or not the war should have occurred.

Yet each of these wars are part of our nation's heritage. Consider for a moment if any one of them had never occurred. Our nation, our very lives would be changed. For the better or worse? We will never know for certain.

Each of these wars however, as in recent conflicts such as Viet Nam, Korea, Desert Storm, have helped the United States prove, time and time again, that our people value their freedom above all else, including their very lives.

In this modern age, people complain about our government, our political leaders, crime on the streets, and what are seen as other problems.

But we have the freedom to complain, to object, to react. People can run for office, support others who do, help organizations which try to make our lives better. We can do that because of our freedoms.

The Declaration of Independence, Constitution of the United States, and all other historical documents may have led the way initially, but it is our military service personnel who have maintained the freedom these documents called for.

If there are former service men and women in your family, give them some thought tomorrow. They gave a lot. Each of us has benefited from what they did.

Veterans' Day, 1995. Don't just let it pass. At least give a few moments for those who gave so much more.

LETTER

Horrors of GATT

Lame Duck Congress to convene on Nov. 30. First to debate on waiving the budget rules to add the 31 billion dollars lost on GATT to the national debt, to make up for lost tariffs. Then if approved, vote on GATT by the Senate.

The House to convene in November and vote on GATT the 29th. This will be GATT's final round and America's last gasp. The first round of GATT went into effect in 1980 under Jimmy Carter and has done tremendous damage to the U.S. economy in lost factories and jobs. It has also made a mockery of the expression "free trade."

Those who will not return to Congress after Jan. 3, 1995 are free to vent their spleen by voting for GATT and/or sell their vote to the highest bidder, in this case, Clinton, who will intone his famous "The store is open."

It will not matter how Congressmen have voted on the Second Amendment as GATT will take your guns anyway, because GATT negates the Constitution.

As an added attraction, another little goody has been added to this bill in the form of lower interest rates on series E U.S. savings bonds. So much for the widows and orphans.

Implications of IQ on ethnic groups

Every society has its taboos, and one of America's biggest is against open discussion of possible genetic differences in the average intelligence of various ethnic groups. So Charles Murray and the late Richard Herrnstein must have known they were walking into a buzz-saw when they wrote "The Bell Curve."

The book's most controversial contentions are: (1) that some portion of every individual's "intelligence quotient" (the authors estimate it at 60 percent) is genetic in origin and therefore heritable; (2) that a person's IQ is "predictive of many educational, economic and social outcomes"; (3) that America's blacks score, on average, 15 points lower than whites on standard IQ tests, while Asians score higher than whites and Ashkenazi Jews from Eastern Europe score highest of all; (4) that it is unlikely that non-genetic factors such as the environment can account for the whole of these group differences; and (5) that therefore efforts to reduce the blacks' group IQ deficit and its socioeconomic consequences by making purely environmental improvements must, to some large extent, fail.

In addition to the inherently unpalatable nature of such a contention, it flies in the face of one of liberalism's oldest and most cherished convictions: that human nature is infinitely malleable and hence capable of unlimited improvement. Moreover, at a grimly practical level it threatens to reduce the expenditure of government funds on projects designed to improve the black population's environment for the aforesaid purposes — expenditures that may not help the 11 nominal beneficiaries much, but which assuredly benefit all sorts of people, from Congressmen to teachers and social workers, who are involved in (and profit from) their delivery.

So the furor the book has caused is understandable. It has included hysterical attacks on the two scholarly authors as "racists," flat denials that there is any such thing as "intelligence," or that, if there is, it can be measured, or that genes play any part in intelligence whatever, and — contradictorily — that much or all that the authors assert has long been known and hence isn't "news."

Many critics seem willing to concede, however reluctantly, that the 15-point disparity is real, but challenge the alleged genetic component of the lower average black score and stress instead its supposed environmental origins. But this effort is fatally undermined when one considers its implications for the high end of the IQ curve.

If poor prenatal care (for example) is, as some argue, a major reason for blacks' group deficit in IQ, must we conclude that Asians' prenatal care is necessarily better than that of whites, and that East European Jews enjoy the best prenatal care of all?

Commentators such as Harvard's Glenn Loury, who wonder whether these delicate matters ought to be discussed publicly at all, raise a legitimate point. But in a democracy, which depends on an informed citizenry, I see no alternative. Certainly we can never hope to reach valid policy decisions if we deliberately blind ourselves to the facts upon which such decisions should be based.

Many critics seem willing to concede, however reluctantly, that the 15-point disparity is real.

JACK ANDERSON

Slow information superhighway

WASHINGTON — The fact that Congress stalled progress on the "information superhighway" in the final stretch of the 103rd Congress gives new meaning to the term gridlock.

In early 1993, Democrats and Republicans agreed that the time had come for an overhaul of telecommunications law. Much of the industry — from the largest telephone companies to the smallest cable providers — was also clamoring for an overhaul. Washington had a historic opportunity to prepare for a revolution that would fundamentally alter the way Americans communicate and receive information. But as so often happens here in the gridlock capital, the devil was in the details.

Communications experts have long foreseen a day when consumers can receive all their electronic communication through any one of four media: the telephone wire, the electric utility wire, the cable wire or satellites. But under the current laws, almost nobody but the Baby Bells is allowed to carry local telephone service. Conversely, the Baby Bells are forbidden to deliver cable television, while municipalities have given the cable companies incredible monopolies that jack up the price of service while offering consumers no other choices.

Two separate bills designed to lift these barriers passed the House in June with overwhelming bipartisan support. Two months later, the key Senate committee — Commerce, Science and Transportation — passed a related measure that also had bipartisan support. Although the bills differed, it seemed a sure bet at the time that a compromise bill would pass by the end of the year. But three months later, a group of obstructionist Republicans bent on political gain, and three greedy regional telephone companies, managed to kill any chance for a vote this year.

This was the kind of law, though highly technical in its language and provisions, that would have had a direct impact on the pocketbooks of millions of consumers. The lack of a compromise means less competition between cable and phone companies, which would have reduced prices in both industries.

The failure to compromise means domestic communications firms are now more likely to look for foreign partners — instead of American firms — for the superior products America could have been producing after an industry shake-up. According to one economic forecasting firm, the WEFA Group, industry deregulation would have created some 3.6 million more jobs between 1995 and 2003.

In 1982, the Justice Department wrapped up an eight-year antitrust suit against AT&T with a "consent decree" that ended AT&T's monopoly on local telephone service, leaving them to compete primarily as a long-distance company. Local telephone service was turned over to the seven regional "Baby Bells," which were given a telephone monopoly in their zone but were barred from selling long-distance service. The companies were also prohibited from manufacturing telephone equipment.

Most companies were happy with this deal until emerging technologies began to revolutionize the industry a few years ago. Suddenly, global pressure was forcing American companies to compete in a new world, where telephone technology was evolving exponentially. It presented a golden opportunity for American business, as U.S. companies have traditionally been leaders in emerging technologies.

But as so often happens here in the gridlock capital, the devil was in the details.

Your right to health care

You've gotta right! I've gotta right! We've all gotta right! Shurrree you! We do! We've all got rights. We've also got lefts, ups, downs, fronts and rears too. Have any of you good folks out there in Lalaland noticed what has not been listed in that bunch and a half of "gotta's"? Go ahead reread this first paragraph — see what's not there.

Aw! Come on! Don't tell me you can't see what's not there. What's the matter, have you got eye trouble? Or is it simply a case that you don't "want" to see what's not there? Oh I see! You see it, but you're not about to admit you recognized immediately what isn't there. What's the matter—ashamed? Troubled that you don't have the guts to own up to it? Go ahead—pronounce "that" word.

Oh my! Really? Well, honestly, you don't have to swear up such a storm on such a sunny day. Here—let me help you—It's pronounced r-e-s-p-o-n-s-i-b-i-l-i-t-y. There! Now, that really didn't hurt all that much, did it? Oh! It did! Well—t-o-u-g-h! And therein lies the fly-in-the-ointment. Everybody demands his/her "rights" while flatly rejecting his/her corresponding responsibilities.

I feel full well that the vast majority of you demand "each and every one" of what you think is your "rights" while rejecting "each and every" corresponding responsibility. They do, you know, go hand in hand. Trouble is, for years now, you've been "scarfing-up" right-after-right-after-right, and at the same time, demanding that someone else pick up the tab. Well, folks, the "tab picker" is getting his/her fill.

You do have a "right to own and drive a Lincoln Town Car-ONLY if you can pay for and maintain it. Don't ask the rest of us to do it for you.

You do have a "right" to own and operate a private airplane, yacht, or fleet of limos-ONLY if you can pay for and maintain them. Don't ask the rest of us to do it for you.

You do have a "right" to acquire every beautiful, wonderful, and desirable thing that mankind and nature has created, if-and "ONLY IF", you have the legal means to do so. Don't ask the rest of us to acquire them for you and hand them to you on a silver platter. You do have a "right" to have everything under the sun that you can "afford" and not 2 lousy nickels worth more.

That very same right also applies to grab your hats—as well as your socks, 'cause you're not going to like what follows—the fiasco of "health care". There's been so much contradicting "homogenized hefferdust" spilling all over the landscape—out of D.C.—that most of you have been 'spoon fed' that "it's your right" to universal health care. Not so! Never was! Never will be! No-Way.

SEMINOLE OPINION

Healthcare is-right now—available to all those folks who wish to allocate that portion of their available funds to that particular "purchasable item". The very same also applies to Peas, Beans, Corn, as well as T-Bone steaks, Porterhouse steaks and Prime Ribs. If you can afford to eat "top shelf", then you buy that's like in "purchase" top shelf. If not "top shelf", then you lower your sights a smidge or two and eat a bit lower.

Unfortunately, the same applies to health care. Top shelf health care is truly expensive. Like airplanes, yachts, and fleets of limos. It is available only to those with the means to afford it. Most of us (please note the use of "us") simply cannot afford it—no—we buy (purchase) the best health care plan that we can for the level of funds that we are willing to allocate for that item.

You...and I... have no more "right" to top-shelf health care than we do to airplanes, yachts, fleets of limos, as well as T-Bone steaks, Porterhouse steaks and Prime Ribs. We do, however, have the right to "strive to acquire" those items—by all legal means possible—but not a single nickel's worth more. Like it or not—it is NOT a governmental function to "burp us and change us and nurture us" from the cradle to the grave. Listen-up! That's "our" job! Let's get to it!

Go ahead and chew away on that one. Don't bite your tongue. You'll need... "healthcare"... and tongue surgeons are quite expensive... maybe "Tooood" expensive. So...my good friends out there in Never-Never-Land, have a grand and glorious day, be good to yourselves and kind to others.

Newlyweds' kidney transplant completed without a hitch

By ERNEST BANDER
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO — Victoria Ingram-Curlee has finally made good on her wedding promise to her husband.

In two 2½-hour operations Wednesday, four doctors removed one of her kidneys and implanted it in Randall Curlee.

"The operations, both of them, were quite successful," said Dr. Robert Mendez. "Victoria gave a beautiful kidney to Randy, and after we were able to implant it and hook it up, it looked just beautiful, just as it did when it came out of her."

Husband and wife were recuperating today in separate rooms at Sharp Memorial Hospital, where they were married

Oct. 11. They should be able to go home as early as next week, doctors said.

Randall, whose kidneys were ruined by diabetes, isn't completely out of the woods — 15 percent of kidney transplants fail. But if his recovery is successful, he'll have more energy and be able to produce children, the doctors said.

His bride's recovery will be easier.

"Although it is an insult to her body temporarily, she'll respond rather dramatically and rapidly and will feel pretty normal in a day or two," said Mendez.

Shortly after the couple got engaged in February, Curlee, 46, learned that he would die without a transplant. He gave Victoria a chance to back out of the marriage, but she offered to be a donor and doctors were surprised when tests indicated she was a good match.

Doctors had to scuttle three previous transplant attempts because of last-minute complications.

A July operation was canceled when tests raised questions about Curlee's heart surviving the surgery. It was rescheduled for September, but Curlee turned out to be iron-deficient. Then last month, a doctor nicked part of Victoria's kidney during pre-operation, requiring another postponement.

About 20,000 people in the United States are waiting for new kidneys; only about 8,000 are donated each year.

Riding in sparkling convertibles and dressed in their Sunday best (or Thursday best, as the case may be), the 10 candidates for king and the 10 for queen will be celebrities du jour, accepting the cheers of the crowd.

Football players, in their black and orange, will bring more adoring cheers from the crowd.

Each club at the school has the opportunity to create a float that represents the theme "Build 'em up, just to beat 'em down." There will be exciting, colorful floats built on trailer beds. Others will decorate their cars and trucks.

"They use a lot of imagination," Jackson said.

Local dignitaries, including members of the school board; Sanford Police Chief Ralph Russell; Sheriff Don Eslinger; Mayor Betty Smith and members of the Sanford City Commission, have been invited to take part in the parade.

Bands from Midway, Goldsboro and Hamilton elementary schools, Sanford and Lakeview Middle School and, of course, Seminole High School will be performing in the parade.

Attendance for the annual parade has been growing steadily since it was revived several years ago.

The parade, once a city-wide extravaganza, fell by the wayside in the 1960s. For years the parades dwindled in size and then the school stopped scheduling them.

In the late 1980s, the parade was reintroduced after students and some faculty asked for it.

The parade will begin in front of the New Tribes Mission and travel west along First Street to the Magnolia Mall where there will be a brief pep rally.

According to Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire of the Sanford Police Department, First Street will be closed for the duration of the parade and cross streets will be closed as the parade passes by.

"The whole thing will take maybe 20 minutes and then the pep rally will take another 15 or 20 minutes so it won't be too long," Whitmire said. "But it will be at 5 so everything in downtown is pretty much shut down by then."

The Seminole High Homecoming Parade is free and open to the public, organizers said. Everyone is invited to line the streets and cheer on the hometown students.

Astronauts aim solar monitors at sun

By MARCIA DUNN

CAPE CANAVERAL — For the third time in nearly a week, Atlantis' astronauts aimed solar energy monitors at the sun Wednesday for clues about the dwindling ozone layer and global warming.

The only way to understand humans' impact on the atmosphere is to track the subtle, naturally occurring changes in solar energy, said NASA scientist Ernest Hilsenrath, who's in charge of an ozone monitor flying on Atlantis.

Hilsenrath stressed that it's a tedious process with little fanfare.

"There aren't any real discoveries," he said. "We haven't learned anything new about the sun. The sun is not going out. We haven't found anything new about the Antarctic ozone hole."

"What we're doing now is providing a baseline for measurements for the future. — I call it a legacy for environmental investigators in the next century."

Over 40 military and civilian units are expected to participate.

The one-hour program is free and open to the public, and will conclude with a flyover by the Valiant Air Command.

An event sponsored by the 50th Anniversary of World War II Commemorative Committee will be held on Nov. 11 beginning at 10:45 a.m. at Woodlawn Memorial Park and Funeral Home located off Old Winter Garden Road, between Orlando and Winter Garden.

This year during the annual event, special recognition will be given to Vietnam War Veterans. Guest speaker is Dr. J. Howard Edington, Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Orlando.

Female service personnel are also urged to attend the event.

An estimated 85 veteran and patriotic organizations have been invited.

A conscientious worker, his father said he used his first call after he was arrested to call his supervisor at work to tell him he would not be in that day.

Holy Cross Lutheran Church in Lake Mary has established a fund to pay for Jamie's legal defense at the First Seminole Bank in Lake Mary.

Neighbors have been giving money, but much more is needed.

"These people are giving $100 each," Kirby Swinehart said, fighting back the tears. "We're just average people. A hundred dollars is a lot of money for us. I can't believe they're doing this for us."

In addition to the financial support, neighbors have been bringing food to the house every night and offering comforting words, hugs and other assistance.

"It's like a block party," Kirby Swinehart said. "But, right now, the only block party I want to have is one where I'm welcoming my son home."

Meanwhile, Volusia County sheriff's officials said Jamie remains in the Volusia County jail on $500,000 bond while the investigation continues. He is on suicide watch.

"We know he didn't do it," said friend Sue Mohr. "We'll support him however we can."

Donations to the defense fund may be sent to First Seminole Bank, 3505 W. Lake Mary Blvd., Lake Mary, Fla. 32746.

Judge

where the judges will serve did not give the winning judges the majority vote.

The circuit is comprised of Seminole and Brevard counties. The circuit was formed in the late 1960s and judges traveled the "circuit" to preside in cases.

There are about twice the number of registered voters in Brevard County than there are in Seminole County but voters from both counties vote on judge candidates. The story in question noted voters in the counties almost a tie. That's not fair to overlook that."

The Sanford Herald endorsed Stephenson for election although a larger area newspaper endorsed Bravo.

Before the election, both Stephenson and Bravo noted the difficulty in campaigning in an area equivalent to a congressional district for the judgeship.

"I agree we need to look at changing this circuit. I definitely agree with that," Stephenson remarked. "But to be critical of the winning participants because they campaigned hard and won is not fair." If a single county comprised a circuit, candidates could concentrate all their campaign efforts in their home county.

Stephenson also noted he received nearly 4,500 more votes in Brevard County than either of the two judge candidates from there.

Stephenson said the investiture ceremony may be the first week in January.

ford than any other community in the county.

Chiles edged out Bush in seven of the Sanford-area precincts and 23 of the precincts throughout the county. Chiles also soared ahead of Bush in the predominantly-Democratic Midway, where he took 78.9 percent of that community's vote.

Furlong fared well in Sanford. Ten Sanford-area precincts favored him over Adams. Sanfordites favored their Republican neighbor Randall Morris of Lake Mary for the District 2 county commission seat over Longwood Democrat Adrienne Perry. Morris received 3,688 of the Sanford-area votes, compared to the Perry's 2,685 vote.

Furlong also topped Adams in northern precincts taking in Lake Monroe, Midway and Geneva. Perry carried only Midway and just 11 of the precincts in the county.

In Lake Mary, local voters liked their former mayor, giving Morris a 2-1 edge over Perry. Morris received 2,451 of the Lake Mary-area votes and Perry received 1,120 votes there. Lake Mary also supported Bush over Chiles by a wide margin and Adams over Furlong by a 54.5 to 45.5 margin.

Perry did poorly in her home community. Of the six Longwood-area precincts, she edged past Morris in only one. Precinct 113.

In that precinct, Perry received seven votes, Morris took six. Longwood also favored Bush and Adams.

The Comeback Kid Clinton has two years to earn the title again

By WALTER R. MEARS
An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON — "They used to call me the Comeback Kid," President Clinton said before the Republican torrent swept the nation. Now he's got two years, with an opposition Congress confronting him, to earn the title for a second term campaign.

Actually, that comeback label was his own in the first place, a ploy to ease the impact of defeat in his first presidential primary election in 1992.

Now, any Clinton comeback is going to have to be real, not just the cover story for a temporary setback. Not after the tidal wave that carried the GOP to control of the House and Senate and to dominance in the nation's statehouses.

Come 1996 there will be Republican governors in eight of the nine biggest electoral vote states, the ones that spell victory or defeat.

The president's options are narrowed now: whatever he gets done in Congress will have to be gained by compromise. He said so Wednesday at a subdued, conciliatory White House news conference, not really changing his proposals so much as his tone, to stress cooperation, bipartisanship, common ground ideas for the new Congress.

Clinton said he'd take his share of the blame for Tuesday's Democratic drubbing. He said the voters don't like what they see when they watch Washington at work, and they held the Democrats accountable because they were the party in charge.

"They sent us a clear message. I got it, and I'm going to redouble my efforts," he said, to deliver the governance people want, and to work in tandem with Republicans.

But there was a certain familiarity in the message. It seemed to be that what voters punished was not so much performance as what they'd heard about it. He said he'd spent too much time trying to pass bills to spend enough reassuring Americans that they were part of the process.

"They still believe that government is more often the problem than the solution," Clinton said, in a line echoing Ronald Reagan's texts. Now he's got to convince a majority that he can deliver solutions they want.

To do that, there's no option but bipartisanship, of course, with a Republican Senate, an astoundingly Republican House, Republican governors dominant in the states that are crucial in presidential elections.

He spoke of welfare reform as a common ground program, of lobbying and campaign finance reform, applying the laws to Congress that cover everybody else, the line item veto to curb spending. All those are in Republican programs, too.

The difference, and the discord, will be in the details.

That's doubly so on health care, where he said he remains committed to reform the system.

His choices are narrowed, his challenges greater. And this is a president with a lot of convincing to do. "We've got plenty of time to worry about the next election," he said. To be precise, four days short of two years. First the primaries, of course; New Hampshire's, probably on Feb. 20, 1996, is where Clinton produced his preemptive concession in 1992, calling defeat a comeback.

So the Democrats had better not wait long to start worrying about a way back. For nearly three decades, election upheavals like those of the Tuesday balloting — not a single Republican incumbent for Congress or governor lost, only Democrats — have been prefaces to presidential peril.

So it was in 1968, for example, the Republican revival that won the White House two years later. And in 1974, in favor of Democrats, the preface to Jimmy Carter's one-term presidency. Four years later, Republican gains foretold Reagan.

And these Democratic defeats dwarf any of those.

The last time such a midterm trend was totally reversed was in Harry Truman's 1948 upset of the century.

"I will do everything in my power to reach out," Clinton said amid the Democratic wreckage on Wednesday. "I want to work with them."

But he'll have to work against them, too. Would-be GOP challengers called the elections a total repudiation of his programs, a change order to the president, an anti-Clinton landslide.

And the president, asked whether he would have won had this been the presidential re-election year, said he'd like to think so. "I would have been a ferocious defender of what we have done," he said.

Good inflation news won't stop Fed from raising rates, economists say

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The news on inflation has been good lately, but that won't stop the Federal Reserve from increasing interest rates, economists are predicting.

Now that the congressional elections are over, the Federal Reserve is poised to come off the sidelines and boost interest rates for a sixth time this year, say economists who argue that it isn't a question of when the Fed raises interest rates, but how much.

Some analysts believe that today's inflation report, which will show price pressures at the wholesale level in October, will influence how large a rate increase to expect from the central bank next month.

If, as expected, the report on wholesale prices shows a modest increase, then it will strengthen the hand of those Fed policymakers who are arguing for only a moderate increase of around one-half percentage point, analysts said.

However, if the wholesale price report surprises with a worse than expected figure, it would provide ammunition to those on the Fed who are arguing for a dramatic move of a full percentage point or more.

"If the wholesale price report shows that inflation is still only in the pipeline, it will make it harder for the Fed to do a really bold number," said Robert Dederick, chief economist at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

But good inflation figures won't keep the Fed from tightening next week, analysts said, arguing that too many reports have shown the economy is still growing faster than the Fed would like as it seeks to slow business activity to a rate that will keep price pressures at bay next year.

"The Fed is going to tighten," said economist Stephen Roach of Morgan Stanley & Co. "There is still a risk that monetary policy has been too stimulative. They have to take that stimulation out of the economy."

The Fed has boosted its target for the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other on overnight loans, by 1.75 percentage points this year, taking it from 3 percent at the beginning of February to 4.75 percent now. The last increase was a half percentage point on Aug. 16.

Dederick said he was looking for the October report to show wholesale prices actually falling by 0.1 percent, although other analysts were looking for a slight increase of around 0.1 percent.

Prices fell by 0.5 percent in September, the biggest decline in more than a year.

Michael Niemira of Mitsubishi Bank in New York said the good inflation news would continue even though there will be some upward pressure from energy prices, which fell sharply in September. He said that a drop in new car prices should help hold down the overall rate.

Following material is embargoed until 3 a.m. EST.

A monthly survey of 50 top economists predicted that prices for this year will rise by 2.7 percent with inflation accelerating slightly to 3.4 percent in 1995.

The forecast released today by Blue Chip Economic Indicators of Sedona, Ariz., revised upward the outlook for overall economic growth to 3.8 percent this year, the best showing since 1988. For 1995, the economists forecast that the Fed's rate hikes will help to slow the economy to a 2.7 percent growth rate.

Blake earns AFC award

NEW YORK — Sanford's Jeff Blake was the AFC offensive player of the week for leading the Cincinnati Bengals to their first victory of the season.

The week's top special teams player was another Bengal, kicker Doug Jeffery, while New York Jets linebacker Mo Lewis was the best defensive player. It was announced Wednesday.

Blake completed 31 of 43 attempts for 387 yards in the Bengals' 20-17 overtime victory over Seattle on Sunday. Jeffery kicked six field goals, including the winner.

Magic top Hornets in OT

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Shaquille O'Neal scored 46 points and grabbed 20 rebounds and Nick Anderson's layup with 1.1 seconds left in overtime gave the Orlando Magic a 130-128 NBA victory over winless Charlotte Wednesday.

The Magic rallied from an 18-point deficit for the win and led by two points in overtime on five separate occasions. But the Hornets stayed even to the final second as Robert Parish hit two free throws with 22 seconds left.

Alonzo Mourning fired a desperation 30-footer at the buzzer, which fell short.

Mourning finished with 26 points in his season debut. He sat out the first two games of the season with a toe injury.

Lakers' Worthy to retire

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — James Worthy, the last link to the "Showtime" days of the Los Angeles Lakers, will retire Thursday.

The team said Wednesday night the retirement of the seven-time all-star and MVP of the 1988 NBA Finals will be announced at an afternoon news conference at the Forum.

Worthy, 33, started this season on the injured list because of tendinitis in his left knee and wasn't being counted on by new coach Del Harris as a prominent player.

Worthy played all 12 of his NBA seasons with the Lakers after being the No. 1 selection in the 1982 draft out of North Carolina.

Young Guns extend winning streak to 13 matches

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — There seems to be no stopping the Young Guns this season. Leaders of the Sanford Recreation Co-ed Power Volleyball League, the Young Guns continued to distance themselves from the other four teams in the circuit by winning all three of their matches Wednesday night at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium.

Included in the wins was a 15-15, 15-8, 15-11 victory over their nearest competitors, Tim's Team.

The Young Guns opened play Wednesday with a 15-10, 11-15, 15-13 decision over Bob Jones. Then, after battling past Tim's Team, the Young Guns capped the evening with a 15-11, 15-11 sweep of Kelly's Team.

Kelly's Team, which was also scheduled to play a tripleheader Wednesday, suffered a 15-2, 15-3 sweep at the hands of Tim's Team in the first round of matches, then lost 15-4, 15-5 to Team Beach Scene in the second round.

Bob Jones completed the evening's play by sweeping Team Beach Scene 16-14, 15-13.

Their three-match sweep extends the Young Guns' winning streak to 13 matches over the last six weeks.

The Young Guns' last loss was a 12-15, 15-10, 17-15 setback at the hands of Tim's Team in the second match on the night on Oct. 5.

Even though the Young Guns have defeated Tim's Team three times (including Wednesday night) since then, all three matches have gone three games. For the season, the Young Guns are 4-1 against Tim's Team.

Through seven weeks of play, the Young Guns (16-1) have built a four-game lead over Tim's Team (12-5), whose only other loss was a three-game upset last week to third-place Bob Jones (8-8).

Rounding out the standings are Team Beach Scene (4-13) and Kelly's Team (2-15).

Thompson's all-around title leads Brown's win

Special to the Herald

TAMPA — Caroline Thompson's victory in the Level VI all-around competition spearheaded the first-place finish of Brown's Central in the small-team competition at the Trick or Treat Invitational held Oct. 29 and 30.

Thompson's combined score of 37.50 in the 9-to-11 age group came on the strength of a first-place finish on the parallel bars (9.30), a third on the balance beam (9.10), fourth in the vault (9.35), and fifth in the floor exercise (9.30).

Brown's Central composite team score of 111.80 placed the locals ahead of Gemini-Clearwater (111.65), Laffeurs-Tampa (109.20), and Palm Beach Sports (104.75).

Carrie Brown finished second in the All-Around (36.40), turning in impressive performances in the floor exercise (9.35) and vault (9.30).

Allison Blain captured the balance beam championship with a score of 9.25. She also matched Brown's effort in the vault (9.30) on the way to finishing ninth in the all-around standings (35.75).

Macher runs league into three-way tie

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Don Macher's hustle on a ground ball gave Crazy Wings Florida Sport Wear a 7-6 win over Whelchel & Howard Wednesday night at Chase Park and threw the Sanford Recreation Wednesday Men's Slowpitch Softball League into a three-way tie.

Earlier in the evening, Wells Contracting thrashed F & AM No. 62 14-1 in a game stopped by the 12-run mercy rule after 4 1/2 innings.

Crazy Wings Florida Sport Wear, Whelchel & Howard, and Wells Contracting end the regular season locked in a three-way tie at 6-3. F & AM No. 62 finishes the season at 0-0.

While there was no official word, the three teams will probably come together next Wednesday to decide the league championship with a two-game playoff.

Don Baati's two-run single in the bottom of the second inning gave Crazy Wings Florida Sport Wear a 2-0 lead that lasted until Whelchel & Howard scored three runs in the top of the third.

Crazy Wings Florida Sport Wear regained the lead, 4-3, by scoring twice in the fourth, but Whelchel & Howard tied the score with a run in the fifth, then took a 6-4 lead by

Trust puts Buccaneers up for sale; team could be sold before end of '94

Associated Press

TAMPA — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers, who have worst record in NFL history, are for sale.

The three-member trust running the team since fabled owner Hugh Culverhouse's death last August is putting the Bucs on the market immediately, team officials said Wednesday.

The team could be sold before the end of the 1994 season, The Tampa Tribune reported today, quoting an unidentified source.

"The Bucs are for sale," confirmed General Manager Richard McKay. "An announcement will be forthcoming." Dwindling revenues and fan support, and the Culverhouse family's desire to sell prompted the decision, team officials said. Financial World Magazine estimated the franchise's value around $142 million.

The trustees want to find investors interested in keeping the team in Tampa Bay. The St. Petersburg

• Baltimore Orioles owner Peter Angelos, who reportedly offered $200 million in February and planned to move the team;

• All three groups trying to put a team in a new stadium in St. Louis;

• Chicago real estate magnate Bruce Frye, who has talked about forming an investor group that would offer between $135 million and $145 million and keep the Bucs in Tampa;

• Socrates Babacas, a Springfield, Mass., real estate developer, who has said he and two partners with citrus holdings in Central Florida would make a $175 million offer and keep the Bucs in Tampa.

Another night, another track, another win for Balough

By PAUL MARSEGLIA
Special to the Herald

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — Gary "Hot Shoe" Balough started the 1994-95 Florida Association of Stock Car Automobile Racing (FASCAR) season the way he ended the 1993-94 points season: with complete domination.

In Saturday evening's racing action at New Smyrna Speedway, Balough outran some stiff competition in winning the Late Model feature event.

Having started the race from the 10th position, Balough was in second place by the third lap, fixed on the rear bumper of early race leader Robbie Thompson. After two laps of wheel-to-wheel racing with Thompson, Balough grabbed the lead and waved goodbye to the rest of the field.

Balough, who also won the Late Model feature Friday night at Orlando Speedworld, took the checkers about 10 car lengths in front of Thompson. Trailing the lead duo across the finish line were Wayne Anderson, Tony Ponder, and Bill Coody.

"The car was perfect, no problems whatsoever," said Balough. "This is the way to start a new season, two races and two wins."

Edgewater's Jeremy Fitch survived some fender-banging, close-quarters racing to win the Bomber main event.

After several laps of paint-swapping racing, Chuck Vola spun Fitch out going into turn four with six laps to the checkers. Despite being put at the tail end of the pack with Vola for the restart, Fitch worked his way back through traffic to score the victory.

In tow behind Fitch were Jim Sterch, Jerry Schredel, Vola, and Emil Elzler.

Tony Newsome held off a hard-charging Allen Rhodes to win the Limited Late Model feature. Newsome, who led every lap on his way to victory lane, crossed the stripe two car lengths ahead of Rhodes.

Completing the top five were, in order of finish, Danny Bancroft, Glen Carter, and Tommie Elliott.

Barbara Pierce and Ray Baker raced side by side out of turn four of the Limited Modified headliner, Pierce edging Baker at the flag stand by less than a car length to take the victory.

Following the lead duo to victory lane were Ray Fulford, Dale Clouser, and Nelson Baigron.

With five laps to the checkered flag in the Mini-Stock finale, Conrad Grenier got around Jared Allison to take the lead. On the following lap, Bob Doxie slipped to the inside of Allison for second place.

Grenier raced unchallenged to take the win with Doxie, Allison, Keith French, and Steve Rigby in tow.

Wrey Shaffer survived a first-lap pile-up to win the 35-lap Modified headliner. Rounding out the top five were Wayne Parker, Billy Gast, Dave Savicki, and Kenny Heckle.

The pile-up was created when Balough blew a cap on the valve cover shortly after taking the green flag and dumped oil on the track. Five cars were collected in the melee, but all were able to continue racing.

After a lengthy pit stop, Balough also resumed the race.

Matt Raucher was the winner of the Run-About feature.

Couple shamed for too many showers

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a shower for a couple who were married only eight months ago. Two months after their wedding, the house they were renting burned to the ground, and they lost everything they owned. The people in the community, as well as their co-workers, family and friends, responded immediately with money, food and clothing. Following the fire, they had moved into her parents' home with no expenses whatsoever.

They have been given two "replacement showers" to replace the gifts they had received from the four or five showers prior to their wedding. (I had attended one.)

I recently learned that they were fully insured and have been compensated for everything they lost.

Now they are preparing to

ADVICE

move into a very expensive home they're building. I'll probably be invited to a house-warming next and most likely to one of the many baby showers for the child they are expecting in four months.

I don't mind helping people in time of need, but don't you think these "replacement showers" were tacky and a bit much to ask of people who had already given and done so much?

APPALLED DOWN SOUTH

DEAR APPALLED: It was indeed tacky for the couple to have accepted two "replacement showers," knowing that their losses were completely covered by insurance. Shame on them.

When the news of their reimbursement gets out (and it will), many others will be "appalled Down South."

DEAR ABBY: Regarding that letter from Earl Brown who complained about canned laughter on TV. Thank the good Lord! I was beginning to think maybe I was the only one who was irritated by it.

I wrote to NBC, ABC and CBS. Only NBC answered my letter, but apparently they have no intentions of changing their policy.

I have been trying to organize a group who will band together and change that policy. I would call it HALT (Humans Against Laugh Tracks), but I don't know how to go about it. I can't afford a lawyer, but maybe if I could get on one of those TV talk shows, I could rally enough support to get somewhere.

It seems to me, with all the marvelous technology we have today, we should be able to get rid of those annoying LAUGH TRACKS WITHOUT THROWING THE TV against the wall.

I know I am not alone. Maybe I should address my complaints to the sponsors.

DANIEL RISCH, NEWPORT, KY

DEAR DANIEL RISCH: You could try. It may not help—but as my sainted grandmother used to say, "It couldn't hurt."

Veterans plan vintage cars, planes, dance, golf, food

DELAND — A hangar dance, Airfest 94, featuring a 22-piece big band will be held Friday, Nov. 11, from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m., at the DeLand Aviation Hangar. Tickets are $10 per person, and tables can be reserved for parties of 10 for $150.

The third annual dance and display of airplanes and vintage automobiles is held at the former DeLand Naval Air Station to celebrate the World War II era.

Other highlights of the weekend include a veterans' reunion Saturday night, Nov. 12, and a charity golf tournament Sunday, Nov. 13, at Southridge public golf course, with a $10,000 hole-in-one prize.

The Saturday, Nov. 12 schedule at DeLand Municipal Airport includes a display of historic and modern military aircraft; airplane, balloon, and helicopter rides, skydiving and radio-controlled airplane exhibitions, and arts, crafts, and commercial displays.

The reunion of former personnel stationed at the DeLand Naval Air Station between 1942 and 1946, and all other war veterans will be held at the Holiday Inn, 350 International Speedway Drive, on Nov. 12 from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. The cost is $17.50 per person.

The charity golf tournament will cost $60 per person, and proceeds go to offset the costs of restoring an airport building which has been designated the DeLand Naval Air Station Museum. A barbecue will be held at Southridge following the golf tournament. Cost is $7.50 per person.

More home crafts going high-tech for holidays

By VIVIAN MARINO
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — This holiday season, crafty gift-givers will be stringing beads, arranging silk flowers, painting shirts, sewing ornaments — and importing their favorite fonts and icons into their multimegabyte art programs.

There's nothing wrong with this homey picture. The age-old tradition of crafting is taking a more high-tech approach with software for the creative person who also owns a personal computer.

There are computer-generated greeting cards, gift wrapping paper, calendars, address labels and decoupage flowers to be made. One program even lets the home artisan concoct almost any kind of design for gift items that can be ordered within seconds.

Are artisans worried about mixing silk screens with PC screens? Nah.

"I see it as helping, not replacing many crafts," said Susan Brandt, assistant executive director of the Hobby Industry Association in Elmwood Park, N.J. "Ironically, a great many crafters are not really very talented. This can just make the things you make more professional looking."

Talent notwithstanding, Americans do love to create — whether they do it to relax, save money or make money — and they're doing so in increasing numbers.

Ninety percent of all U.S. households now have at least one person engaged in craft work, up from 82 percent two years ago and 64 percent in 1988, a recent HIA survey found. The trade group says 79 percent of home crafters gave their projects as gifts, while 49 percent used them for holiday decorating.

That can create some healthy revenue for sellers of raw materials and kits, considering that the average crafter makes between 11 and 23 purchases a year.

— Michaels Stores Inc., the nation's largest craft store chain, says sales jumped 50 percent from 1991 to 1993. For the whole industry, sales totaled $9.63 billion in 1993, up from $6.82 billion in 1991, according to HIA.

The popularity of home crafting hardly has gone unnoticed by software makers. They're rushing out programs to make creativity a little easier with advanced tools that manipulate text, photos, graphics, even sound.

"The computer gives you a new outlet for creativity," said David Tremblay, research director for the Software Publishers Association.

The SFA reports that sales on the wholesale level in the home creativity category, including art and craft programs, jumped 106 percent during the first half of the year.

While some programs are designed to help with a specific craft — such as creating stencils and needlework patterns or computing dimensions for woodworking — others act like mini-craft shops themselves when working with a printer (preferably color) and specialized paper.

For instance, Print Artist by Maxis lets you make personalized stationery and calendars, among other things. Print Shop Deluxe by Broderbund makes posters and decoupage flowers. MECC's TeselMania! has fancy patterns for gift wrapping, and Microsoft's Special Occasions DesignPack has dozens of special occasion greeting card designs.

Any good word-processing or art program can also produce such things as address labels, gift tags, business cards, place mats, coloring books or personalized storybooks. Each has its own fancy borders, picture "icons" or letter fonts that can be "imported," or shared with one another.

— Family PC magazine, which calls the computer "a crafter's dream," suggests using a simple drawing program to make redeemable home coupons. "Favors can range from bed-making chores to treating the recipient like a king or queen for a day," it says.

Maxis Corp., publisher of Print Artist, takes a more sophisticated approach. Its just-released Gift Maker program lets users put personalized designs, even photographs, on an assortment of merchandise, from $9.95 Christmas ornaments to $49.95 windbreaker jackets, using hundreds of design templates, canned graphics and special fonts.

The items, made by Artistic Greetings of Elmira, N.Y., can be ordered in seconds via computer modem or by mailing a floppy disk.

Teaming low-tech crafting with the latest in high technology may seem like an unlikely mix, but even some of the more traditional artisans are crossing the line.

"I came to it kicking and screaming," said Kenn Oberrecht, an avid woodworker from North Bend, Ore., and author of "How to Open and Operate a Home-Based Craft Business."

"Now I wonder why I didn't use it three or four years ago," he said.

Oberrecht says the $100 woodworking program he recently purchased cuts by 25 percent the time it takes to make his beloved wooden mug trees, planters, book cases or tables — items often given as gifts during the holidays. After plugging in dimensions for a desired project, the computer tells him where to cut on a block of wood and even what to do with leftover wood pieces in the future.

"The work isn't always fun. This takes away a lot of the tedium involved," he said, noting the availability of similar time-saving programs for other crafts often advertised in specialized publications.

For all its advantages, though, Oberrecht doesn't think the tools of the computer will ever match the human skill or the thrill of dreaming up creations and assembling them with your hands.

"It's like wondering if electronic newspapers will replace hard print," he said. "I still think people like to sit down with a newspaper. As far as crafts are concerned it's the same thing."

How heart disease affects breathing

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 67-year-old father has hypertension and aortic valve disease. He awakens every night out of breath. There is no chest pain and nothing unusual happens, but he worries constantly about this occurrence. Can anything lessen his fears?

DEAR READER: Yes, your father can be helped.

When the heart begins to beat inefficiently (from arteriosclerotic heart disease, hypertension and other causes), fluid that is normally excreted through the kidneys may be shunted to other tissues, leading to edema (swelling). This edema commonly affects the feet and lungs, where it causes puffy ankles and a peculiar disturbance in breathing called "paroxysmal nocturnal dyspnea."

In simple terms, the fluid backup in the lungs displaces air. Breathlessness and wheezing result. During the day, when the patient is erect, much of the fluid gravitates to the lower portions of the lungs and causes shortness of breath only during exertion. At night, however, when the patient is supine, the excess fluid spreads throughout the lungs and the patient may awaken with a feeling of suffocation. This breathing difficulty reflects a condition known as "congestive heart failure."

There are three basic techniques to treat CHF. First, drugs (such as digitalis) will strengthen the heartbeat and allow edema fluid to be extracted by the kidneys.

Second, ACE inhibitors (such as Capoten or Vasotec) reduce the work of the heart, as well as lowering blood pressure. Again, this permits fluid-release through the kidneys.

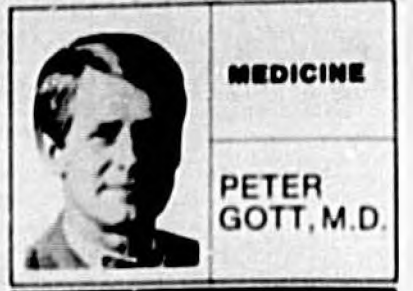

Third, diuretic medicine (kidney stimulants, such as Lasix) forces the kidneys to excrete more fluid than they ordinarily would, thereby lessening edema in the lungs.

In many cases, all three drugs are used simultaneously — and they work well together.

Hypertension and cardiac-valve disease increase the work of the heart and commonly cause CHF, of which paroxysmal nocturnal dyspnea is an early manifestation. Therefore, I believe that your father would be helped by taking one or more of these prescription medications.

He should address this situation with his family doctor, who may choose to enlist the services of a cardiologist. Your father should not delay because the CHF will progress, unless treated, and can lead to severe disability, even death.

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

No, the bidding diagram isn't a total misprint. All will be revealed in a moment.

It is 100 years since bridge in its original form was played at the Portland Club in London. To celebrate this centenary, a match was arranged between teams representing England and the Portland Club. The players had to use the 1894 rules, in which the dealer always declared the contract. Scoring was different, with spades worth two points, clubs four, diamonds six, hearts eight and no-trump 12. The points counted only for tricks won over six. There were various bonuses for honors; the number of doubles and redoubles was unrestricted; there was no vulnerability.

The dealer either selected the trump suit or said, "I pass it to you, partner." (Now you know where "Pass" came from.)

Some players understood the tactics better than others, as witnessed by this deal from the match.

When the Portland Club sat North-South, South passed; an error with an unbalanced hand. North went with spades, because that was the cheapest suit. East doubled happily. Best defense holds declarer to one trick, but South was allowed to win two tricks. England collected 24 points (5 x 2 x double 20 + 4 for honors).

The England dealer bid diamonds. East doubled, of course, and North found a well-timed redouble. Despite the trump attack, declarer won nine tricks: one spade, three hearts, four diamonds and one club ruff in the dummy. That gave England another 96 points (3 x 6 x redouble 20 + 24 for honors).

England won the match 384-214.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
 Nov. 11, 1994

In the year ahead, you might discover two ways to put your creativity to good use. If properly developed, these avenues will increase your earnings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Meet challenges resourcefully today. If you do things in a disinterested way, you aren't likely to get what you want. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have ample reserves of endurance, but instead of drawing from these today, you may squander your energy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you're putting together a social group today, select friends who get along well. One or two mismatches could spoil everyone's fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Have faith in your abilities today, because it could make your life easier. Conversely, if you don't feel you're hot, chances are you're not.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although your intentions are good, your actions may be misinterpreted today. Treat close friends extremely carefully.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your chances of gratifying your ambitious urges are good today, but try not to misuse persons whose assistance you need.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Bite the bullet and make concessions instead of complications today. If you refuse to yield, the other side isn't apt to back down either.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you're managing a situation for someone else today, be forewarned: You may get blamed for his/her previous mistakes. Take care not to let this happen.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today your financial footing may prove less sure than you suppose. Brace yourself and protect your interests.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your friends might bend over backwards to assist you today. However, not everyone is your friend. Watch out for those who try to block your path.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There's a possibility you might find yourself involved with people you resent. The problem is old, but the memory is fresh. Today, try to forgive and forget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Left to your own devices you could turn a profit today. Too much input from others, though, may unwind your efforts and leave you with a deficit.
