State potato crop at risk from late blight

By SANDRA ELLIOTT Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — With apologies to Gen. Douglas McArthur...old fungus never die, they just fade away. sometimes returning with a ven-

Late blight, the disease that caused the Irish potato famine 150 years ago, has developed aggressive strains resistant to the usual fungicides, such as metalaxyl. That has prompted the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to grant emergency exemption section 18s to Florida and 15 other states allowing the use of American Cyanamid's ACROBAT MZ fungleide during the 1995 season.

Unlike other fungicides which Inhibit fungal development, ACRO-BAT MZ destroys the cell wall, resulting in the death of the fungal cell. It is active against all stages in the life cycle of the pointo late blight fungus where active growth occurs.

Other states receiving section 18s include: Delaware, Georgia, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Virginia and Wisconsin.

Since 1992, potato producing regions of the U.S. have experienced outbreaks of an aggressive metalaxyl-resistant late blight strain of the fungus, in some cases resulting in total crop loss. Currently most potato producing states are at risk of infection from late blight and devastating yield loss can result. Pointoes are raised in Seminole Late blight is caused by the lungus, Phytophthora infestans. When late blight made its dramatic appearance in western Europe in 1845, the fungus was unknown to scientists, and the discipline of plant pathology did not exist.

In less than three months, the disease spread unchecked through the Netherlands, Belgium, France, Brillan and Ireland where almost half the staple food supply was lost. The following year, late blight reappeared in Ireland and by August 1846, the entire Irish potato crop was destroyed. Considered one

HMO contract falls through

TALLAHASSEE — A key state lawmaker who made $500,000 doing business with a Miami HMO last year tried to negotiate a $685,000 consulting contract with another HMO but the deal fell through.

Sen. Alberto Gutman, a Miami Republican who chairs the Senate Health Care Committee, was paid $500,000 in August 1994 by Max-A-Med Health Plans for arranging the sale of the health maintenance organization to a subsidiary of HMO giant

The second deal, with St. John Medical Plan, was never completed. The Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale reported

Gutman said in the Max-A-Med case his involvement was cleared by a Senate attorney. In the St. John's case, he said he talked to the firm about brokering its sale, no agreement was ever signed or any payment made.

Cardiologist pleads gullty

MIAMI — A cardiologist has pleaded guilty to a federal conspiracy charge for taking part in a Medicare-fraud scheme that netted two clinics some 54 million.

Under his plea agreement, Dr. Jaime Vergel agreed Thursday to teetify against fellow defendants and cooperate with investigators and grand jurors. He could receive up to five years at his sentencing Oct. 2.

Prosecutors say Vergel, Maria Lourdes Prohies, 48, and Roberto Bacaccae, 53, were involved in an elaborate scheme where they billed the government for bogus allergy teets and other unneeded or unperformed medical treatments.

Prosecutors say they paid recruiters who brought in patients.

The Army announced Thursday that no disciplinary action — legal or administrative — would be taken in the case, which drew international attention when North Korea shot down the chopper and balked at returning the surviving pilot.

The co-pilot. David Hilemon, of Clarksville, Tenn., was killed when a North Korean missile brought down the UH-56A sircraft on Dec. 17, 1994. The pilot, Chief Warrant Officer Bobby Hall, of Brooksville, Fla., was contured by the North Koreans and released two weeks later after tense negotiations.

ian ecstatic after fire halts cru

MIAMI — Passengers who endured two days aboard a stalled ocean liner with little food, no air conditioning and overflowing tollets told their vacation horror stories when they returned to dry land.

The 1,759 passengers stranded on the Carnival Cruise Lines ship Celebration returned Thursday aboard another ship, the Ecstasy, sent Monday to rescue them.

"It was traumatic and at times frightening. Bu left that we were very well taken care of," eaid Anthony Scantlen, a journalism professor at Northern Illinois University in DeRaib, whose 14-year-old daughter celebrated her birthday Thursday. The fire Sunday in the control room of the Celebration destroyed an electronic panel, knocking out the ship's power and propulsion and leaving it adrift in the Bahamas.

"It was pure hell." said Michelle Falco, 23, of Jersey City, N.J. "I am so glad to be on dry land." Carnival transferred the passengers on Tuesday from the crippied Celebration to the Ecstaey. The line treated them to a free open bar on a short cruise through the Bahamas, giving them a small tasts of what their weeklong cruise to San Juan. St. Thomas and St. Martin might have been like.

"Once we got on the Ecstasy, things were great," Falco said. "They treated us really, really well to make up for it.

The passengers had their first chance to speak publicly about their ordeal Thursday. First came smoke and darkness as the ship lost power, they said. Then confusion among rightened passengers.

Several criticised the way the Celebration's crew of 800 handled the tense moments after the fire. The worst part, they said, was not knowing the serioueness of the situation.

"I don't think this crew had a plan to deal with this kind of emergency," said May Chin of San Francisco, who was with her husband and two children. "The officer sounded very panicky in his voice when he came on the speakers. That ween't dood for the kids who are were still the wasn't good for the kids who are very sensitive to that kind of thing."

Carnival officials who met the Ecstasy when it docked downplayed the passengers' criticism.

that," and Carnival President Bob Dickinson. "The general performance of the crew was exemplary."

Dickinson said the company would look into the passengers' complaints, including claims that some weren't told of the fire for up to an hour after they amelled smoke. He also dismissed reports from some passengers that crew members were seen drinking after the fire was put out. saying they were off-duty casino workers, not essential personnel. Jodi Green, of San Francisco, waited outside the room where Dickinson was briefing reporters. "I just wanted to hear what he was saying because he was lying," Green said. "We weren't told anything. There were no lights, no food. It was horrible."

Carnival said government safety inspectors began investigating the cause of the fire and the failure of the Celebration's safety systems after the ship arrived Thursday in Presport, Bahamas, for repairs. Carnival officials estimate the fire. repairs and compensation to passengers will cost it $14 million.

Thunderstorms delay Atlantis launch

AF Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL -

Thunderstorms today delayed the launch of space shuttle Atlantis and its historic trip to the Russian space station Mir.

NASA never even got to fuel Atlantis for this evening's liftoff. Lightning and driving rain pounded Rennedy Space Center throughout the morning, preventing the launch team from loading a half-million gallone of fuel into the shuttle tank.

Only slightly better weather was expected this weekend. NASA nonetheless planned to try again Saturday; launch time would be 4:45 p.m. EDT.

Despite the delay, emotions were running high for what will be the first visit to lift by an American shuttle. More than 50 Russians were on hand at Cape Canaveral, including Mir program directors.

"We are on the verge of a real historic moment in our lives," said Yuri Semenov, president of the Russian aerospace company RSC Energie.

Atlantic is supposed to deliver two Russian commonsuis to life and bring back NASA astronaut Norman Thagard and his two Russian crewmetes, who have been abourd the station since March. That means seven people will go up on Atlantis and eight will come down — a U.S. first.

It also will be the first docking by U.S. and Russian spacecraft in 30 years, and NASA's 100th human space fight.

If the weather stays bad this weekend, NASA can keep trying to launch Atlantis over the next several weeks.

Dancing at its best

Some people walk in rather slowly. Occasionally, a few require canes with which to navigate. Yet once they are inside and get involved, they act as if they are young again and fit as a fiddle.

This is the view at the entrance to the Sanford Civic Center every Wednesday af-ternoon as folks gather for two hours of dancing.

The Over 50 Dance Club has been sponsoring regular Wednesday dances for 20 years. The attendance is always good, and there are never any problems. People come to enjoy themselves, and that's exactly what

With music supplied by the Deltonians, a 12-piece Big Band era organization, couples dance the walts, fox trot, rhumba and others. For many, some without partners, there are line dances in which to become involved.

People who participate say it is a fun time. It's entertaining, and often brings back fond memories of days gone by.

At the same time, it is invigorating and provides more exercise than some of the participants may have for the rest of the entire week.

The Over 50 Dance Club isn't just for local people. People come from throughout Seminole County, and from their homes in Volusia and Orange counties. The sole purpose of the club is to dance and have fun.

The cost of admission to the civic center dances is only $2 per person. A reasonable, sum, which helps defray costs involved in the weekly event.

mian'ith a shame similar events can't be held for the younger generation? Seriainly persons over 50 aren't the only ones who like to dance. Does it take advanced years before people learn how to conduct themselves and attend a function without eventually heading down the wrong path?

This shouldn't be the case. Surely there are those in their teens, 20s, 30s and 40s who would enjoy participating in a time of fun and entertainment if it were offered, (especially if the cost was only $2). Unfortunately, we have too many who would see this as an opportune time to imbibe in alcohol and/or drugs. Let's admit it. For some people, the consumption of drugs or alcohol is the only way they are capable of having a good time.

In fact, it has become so common, that even if someone does try to offer such an event for the younger age, people immediately expect the worst. As a result, the attempt fails.

We can't condemn everyone. It's just a few rotten apples who are clearly ruining things for the majority.

We commend the leadership and members of the Over 50 Dance Club for holding these dances each Wednesday.

As of this past Wednesday, the dances have ended for the summer. They will however, resume on September 13. We hope the participants will keep their dancing shoes at the ready for this fall. the ready for this fall.

For the others, until we see a complete turn-around in our society and its views on drugs and alcohol, we hope they will live until they are old enough to join a similar club in the years ahead, and dance to the music they

This may be a harsh approach, but it's unfortunately a fact of life.

Budget: Fourist fairest forests

President Clinton has decided, once again, that he's for balancing the budget, this time in 10 years, not in the Republican seven. Which brings Washington's budget-spinners back in the spotlight; seven years, 10 years, feel the pain, get to zero, it's not really a cut it's slower growth, the Clinton assumptions are wrong, bite the bullet, be fair -- don't do it on the backs of the poor, or the elderly, or the middle class. But balance it, get to zero.

There seem to be four ways of looking at the

1) Deficit hawks say we have to cut the deficit. because there is a deficit, that it's gone on too long, that if we don't cut it now, it will be harder to cut later and might grow to a ruinous proportion of the economy.

2) Liberals say don't cut it so much, don't cut it so fast, don't cut it in any way that will hurt non-rich people.

3) Some conservatives say cut it because everything in the federal budget pertains to government and most of what government does is inherently bad. Their motto: Starve the tumor.

4) There are those who say cut the budget here and there because what the government is doing here and there isn't working well, or even worse, is hurting us.

permutations of these positions and many players subscribe to aspects of all of the above. It's a question of emphasis, and I emphasize item four, which makes me a Fourist. It's been more than 60 years since big government arrived to combat the Great Depression. It's been about 30 years since Lyndon Johnson's Great Society provided a boost phase. By the late 1970s there was a growing view, often bipartisan, that it was time to review orbit in the early 1980s, the emphasis changed, from "What to cut and why" to "How much to cut and when."

We are now almost 15 years into that somewhat sterile debate. It's not only a bore, but it has stolen the emphasis from the What-Why argument the nation needs, and might even find interesting. Too bad: What-Why is the best way to solve How-Much-How-Soon.

As a Fourist, I recommend Dr. Hippocrates' oath: "First, do no harm." That's good, but it's only prospective. We need some retrospectivity: "Undo past harm, gently but firmly."

Another stilly idea has crept into the debate:
Cut whole agencies. And so, the current plan to eliminate the independence of the United States information Agency and put it under the smothering wing of the State Department has gained mindless support. It would blunt a critical tool of "public diplomacy," including the "Voice of America," at a time when putting forth America's voice should be a central part of our Deficit hawks can't see the trees for the forest.

Too bad. It's better to take down some trees and

Dole auditions as bully pulpiteer

BOSTON — What should we call the latest sequel? Terminate Hollywood IV? Die Hollywood with a Vengeance?

The script doesn't change much from one release to the next. Sometimes it's hard to tell the story lines apart. But the audience is building.

In last January's version, the leading part was played by Bill Clinton. The line that got the most public approval in his State of the Union address was one talking about the damage that "comes from the incessant. repetitive, mindless violence and irresponsible conduct that permeate our media all the time."

Now Bob Dole is trying out for the role of bully pulpiteer. As he campaigns from the heart of Hollywood darkness, the candidate is saying that "a line has been crossed — not just of taste, but of human dignity and decency. It's crossed every time ... Hollywood's dream factories turn out nightmares of depravity."

unbleeped and bleeding movies, at rape rhymes and video violence has become so universal that you can't tell which lines come from which political sector without consulting it's even made soul mates out of such unlikely folks as "Book of Virtues" Bill Bennett and Dr. DeLores Tucker of the National Political Congress of Black Women. Together they had the lyrics of a Nine Inch Nails song "

"Shoot, shoot, shoot, shoot, aboot, I'm going to ... all over you ... me, and my (expletive) gun, me and my (expletive) gun'' — read aloud at a meeting of wary executives at Time Warner.

Frankly as a critic, I find Bob Dole wildy miscast in this heroic part. This elder seems more comfortable playing statesman than culture watcher, talking about Bosnia than Cannibal Corpse. There is something strained in his performance as a veteran politician trying to attract hie younger generation in his party by talking their anti-cultural language.

Distribes against capitalism don't trip off Boh Pole's tongue lightly. It's hard to imagine

Bob Dole's tongue lightly. It's hard to imagine him asking some other group of executives, "Must you debase our nation and threaten our children for the sake of corporate profits?"

Moreover, anybody who is against violence in the movies and in favor of assault weapons in the movies and in layor of assault weapons in real life leaves himself open to all sorts of charges, the least of which is hypocrisy. So does anyone who bravely "names the names" of Democratic supporters like Oliver Stone while omitting the names of Republican supporters like Bruce Willis. Let alone anyone who criticizes the crassness of commercial culture while defunding PBS.

But in this case, Dole's hypocrisy is matched by Hollywood's. With utter predictability, the producers, stars and midlevel mogule trot out the same responses at every attack, suggesting that the critics are closet censors. They seem unwilling to distinguish between a call for responsibility and a blacklist.

Oliver stone called Dole's attack "a '90s form of McCarthyism." Actor James Woods compared the current opponents of violent movies to the folk who wanted to ban "Catcher in the Rye" or "Ulysses" when he was young. There was the usual heady talk abut "artistic expression" and "the creative process" by people who plug songs about "hos." And of course, there was the all-purpose excuse that parents should be monitoring their children's entertainment.

But Dole's message, if not the messenger, is one that resonates with Americans. "There was once a time." he said, in a line that appears in every such script, "when parents felt the community of sdults was on their side.

Frankly as a critic, I find Bob Dole wildy miscast in this heroic part.

Now they feel surrounded by forces assault-ing their children and their code of values."

When Hollywood markets the worst and tells parents to do their best, it's like shooting holes in the samily boat and telling us to keep plugging. There's a point at which you just sink.

Parents, who have reached this level, are looking for the nearest life raft. Whether we are talking about hate radio or gangsta rap, about Oklahoma City or Hollywood, there is a growing understanding that ideas, words and images matter, especially in raising children.

With that understanding comes an insistence across the political spectrum — not for a ban or government censorship — but for some courage and self-restraint from the vast and varied media world. Bill Bennett called it "a sense of shame, if you will, or embarrassment that says there is a line and we will not to below it." not go below it."

But just two days after Dole's speech, Variety reported that Bruce Willis is about to sign up for another violent movie called "Gundown:" His own price tag? $16 million.

Wealthy lobbyists can skirt reforms

WASHINGTON - On Capitol Hill - as in the rest of the country — the gulf between the privileged and the poor continues to widen.

Under the guise of "reform," House Republicans have ended the long-standing practice of allowing lobbyists into areas of the Capitol building that are off-limits to the general public. It was billed as a way to restrict the influence of special interests, whose representatives often prowl the Capitol corridors seeking to make their case to lawmakers.

The new policy is the handiwork of Rep. Jim Nusele, R. lowa, a pugnacious third-term lawmaker who was one of the chief lieutenants of the Republican revolt har year! Mussle first made headlines as an unheralded freshman by donning a paper Nussle has created a policy which can be called reform in name only. The new rules will do little to disrupt the lobbyists who wear Gucci losfers and bear campaign contributions. Such lobbyists, whose entrances are often greased by campaign contributions, do their jobs in the privacy of a member's office. But for the less fortunate — those who represent grassroots organizations that are funded by citizens, not his business — life. funded by citizens, not big business — life just became a bit more difficult.

just became a bit more difficult.

"One of the things public interest lobbyists do it buttonhole members as they walk in and get their point of view across," says Gene Karpinski, executive director of the U.S. Public Interest Research Group. "We try to bump into them as they walk in (to committee meetings). We don't have the same kind of access that money buys."

Nor will the policy affect former members of Congress, some 100 of whom have returned to their old stomping grounds as registered.

Former members will still enjoy their lifetime floor privileges, as well as the right to enter the cloakroom and other newly restricted areas. On the day the policy was announced, however. Unfortunately, the GOP's definition of equality seems to have changed somewhat aince the November elections. It was only last fall that Gingrich led a successful uprising against a bipartisan lobby reform bill which would have slapped new restrictions and disclosure requirements on special interests. Ironically, the bill was expected to pass handily until Christian activists complained that it would have a "chilling" effect on the ability of grassroots groups to lobby Congress.

In 10 hours of deliberations Thursday, the independent panel recommended closing fewer than half the bases it considered. That left more than 100 Navy and Army bases to consider when the eight-member commission resumed its work today.

Even if the panel closed all the bases recommended by the Clinton administration, the reductions over the past decade in airfields, tank ranges, head-quarters and other property would lag far behind cuts in the defense budget and the overall force during the same period.

The military is carrying overhead it can't afford, said the commission chairman, former sen. Alan Dixon, D-III. On several votes, he was in the minority seeking to close a base.

Two of the commissioners leading the charge to spare major incilities were retired officers: Army Maj. Gen. Josue Robies Jr. and Air Force Gen. J.B. Davis.

Simmons said the grant was prepared and filed by Sanford police Investigator Mike Horan. "He did an excellent job in preparing the paperwork for this," Simmons said, "and deserves much of the credit for us getting approved."

He indicated the grant money amounted to $109,758, and would be received for the next flacal year, beginning October 1, 1996. It would have to be used in keeping with a statewide program which obtains money out of the motor vehicle trust fund.

"This is part of a three-year grant," Investigator Horan said. "Of course after the first year, we will have to re-apply in order to have it continued. We would have to prove how the money was used and the programs we have established in keeping with the state edict."

Horan said if approved again for the second er, the grant amount might be for possibly half of this first year.

He explained that the money would be used to hire one additional police officer (for a one-year period), including all uniforms and other costs, plus money to hire a crime analyst, supplying him with computer equipment, and purchasing two additional lap-top computers for other connected uses.

"We also plan an additional $40,000 worth of surveillance equipment, and a number of additional projects," Horan added.

Among them are planned public railies to teach how to etch in a VIN (Vehicle Identification Number) into the glass of a vehicle, and the establishment of a BAAT project.

He explained that BAAT stands for "Businesses Against Auto Theft." It would have attickers placed on vehicles allowing police to stop them without cause, for example, between 3 s.m. and 5 s.m., (peak times for auto thefts), to find out why they were on the streets.

In this way, Horan expects to reduct the number of vehicular thefts in the area.

Most dramatically in play are the roles of race and religion in American public life. Conservative decisions on affirmative action and school desegregation are already in, and liberals fear still more setbacks.

is yes - when at least four others join in.

White House will battle GOP plan

WASHINGTON — The White House is vowing to battle a compromise Republican plan for balancing the budget and cutting taxes that the GOP says shrinks government and lets cutting taxes that the GOP says shrinks government and lets Americans keep more of the money they earn.

House and Senate Republican leaders announced agreement late Thursday on an outline for eliminating the deficit by 2002, chiefly by carving savings out of Medicare, Medicaid, welfare and other domestic programs.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said they expected final congressional approval of the blueprint next week, probably Thursday.

After three weeks of bargaining, the two chambers split the difference on most issues, including the most contentious, taxes, which would be cut by $245 billion for many families, businesses and property owners. Over seven years, deficit reduction would total $963 billion, Republicans said.

Senate OKs highway spending bill

WASHINGTON — Balancing states' rights and safety concerns, the Senate is sending the House a $13 billion highway spending bill that ends federal rules on car speed limits and motorcycle helmets but preserves seat belt use as the law of the land.

"It was half a victory, if you would, half a loss," said Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee that sent the bill to the floor.

Senate approval came on a voice vote late Thursday, sending the measure to the House, where consideration was expected to begin by mid-July. Under a 1991 law action must be completed by Sept. 30 or the highway aid money will be withheld from the states.

"This is a bill that will keep America moving, moving ahead with progress," said Sen. John Warner, R-Va. And Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., declared: "This is a critical bill for our states. ... It means jobs. it means growth."

Negotiations no closer to resolution

GENEVA — With a deadline for harsh U.S. trade sanctions just five days away, American and Japanese negotiators are no closer to resolving their bitter dispute over auto sales as another round of talks begins today.

After their first day of last-ditch negotiations on Wednesday, the two sides reported no progress and would say only that they will keep trying today.

Washington wants to open the Japanese auto market to more competition. But Tokyo accuses the United States of violating global trade rules with its threatened 100 percent tax on 13 Japanese luxury cars — the toughest sanctions in U.S. history.

The vehicles had sales of $6.9 billion in the United States last years as braties.

The tariffs would virtually make it impossible to sell these cars made by Toyota, Honda, Nissan and Mazda. An automobile now selling for $55,000 would cost well over

Better educated also much healthler

Control Proce Writer

WASHINGTON - Caution:

Dropping out of school may be hasardous to your health.

That message was delivered Thursday in the government's annual report charting the nation's health.

The National Center for Health Statistics said the death rate among adults ages 25 to 64 who failed to finish high school was 30 percent higher than those who got their diplomas, and more than double those who attended college for at least one

That has held true for years, but the gap has widened re-cently, the center said in the 307-page book, "Health, United States, 1994."

"We see better health outcomes for the more educated right from the start," said Dr. Philip R. Lee, the assistant secretary for health and head of the Public Health Service.

There were 561 deaths per 100,000 adults among the dropouts, compared with 433 among those with 12 years of education, and 249 among those with 13 or more years of chooling.

dropouts were eight, affine ise likely to smoke during pregnancy as college graduates. Women without a high school degree also were less likely to get mammograms.
But the book of charts and tables also points to some notasuccesses on the health

As the center has reported previously, the infant mortality rate fell to a record low of 8.5 deaths per 1,000 births in 1982, and provisional figures for 1983 indicate a further drop to 8.3 deaths.

Overall life expectancy at birth also reached a record in 1992 of 75.7 years, a gain of almost five years since 1970. But the center's provisional figures point to a dip in life expectancy in 1993 to 75 in terms. to 75.5 years.

The average American who turns 65 can look forward to 17.5 more years of life, and the average 75-year-old to 11-plus

Other medical markers of note: -The vaccination rate for toddiers under 3 rose to 79 percent for polio vaccine and 88 percent for diptheria-tetanus-pertussis vaccine in 1993.

-Sixty percent of women 50 and older in 1993 had had a mammogram in the past two years, more than double the rate back in 1967.

-Patients spent just 5.9 days in the hospital on average in 1993, an 8 percent decline from 1966.

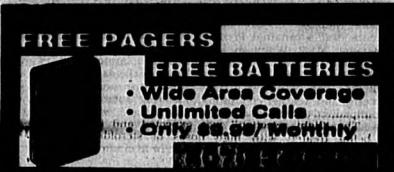

-The nation has 591,017 practicing physicians, 153,800 dentists, 165,300 pharmacists, 1,893,400 registered nurses, 27,000 optometrists and 12,500 podiatrists. Employment in the health services industry rose 16 percent between 1969 and 1965.

—Private employers' health insurance costs rose 24 percent between 1991 and 1964 to 61.14 per employee for each hour worked.

—The nation's total health bill came to 6684 billion, or $5,399 per person, in 1993, That was up 7.8 percent over 1992, the smallest increase since 1966.

Behind Foster's loss

AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON - Using boldfaced type to emphasize their points, the Christian Coali-tion and the National Right to Life Committee served notice in "Dear Senator" letters this week that it wasn't enough to oppose Dr. Henry Foster. What counted. the letters said, was a procedural tactic that would keep Foster's nomination from ever coming to a final vote.

What mattered most was "cloture" - a vote to limit debate.

"Cloture will be scored in the Christian Coalition scorecard that is distributed to millions of homes nationwide," the Christian Coalition letter warned. Said the Right to Life Committee: "The NRLC, representing about 3,000 local pro-life organizations, will report to its mem-bership ONLY the votes on cloture."

The letters were among the final pieces of the successful campaign to derail Foster, President Clinton's choice for surgeon general, in the first dramatic nomination clash since Re-publicans seized control of Congress in January.

Foster's nomination effectively was killed Thursday when, for the second time, supporters falled by three votes, 57-43, to Invoke cloture and end debate.

The effort offered a revealing look at internal GOP politics. from the tensions between presidential rivals Bob Dole and Phil Gramm to the festering abortion debate within the GOP ranks. It also was a telling test of Dole's power as the majority leader, as he used loyalty as a tool to win the final votes.

And in reaffirming the resurgence of social conservatives in the wake of the 1994 elections, the Foster fight demonstrated the shifting sands of abortion politics.

Question: Define the word."Church."

What does the word "church" mean to you? Today, the word "church" means different things to different people. To some, it is a simple country chapel. To others, the church is a massive building with great architectural designs. To others, the church is a group of men who decide religious policies and set rules about what people are to believe and do.

In the New Testament, the word "church" never refers to a building or a place. This is a recent application.

Modern usage of the term has evolved from a shortening of "church building,!" into "church." Hence, the structure that is used to house the Most believers know that the sanctuary, cathedral, chapel or building is not the same thing as the "church," but to the unbeliever the distinction may be lost,

In Scripture the word "church" refers to the believers, more accurately, the "called out" from the world. The church identifies all those who have committed their lives to Jesus Christ and who have obtained their lives to Jesus Christ and who have obtained the chartest to be seed to the committee the chartest of the chartest

Is surgery best for rectocele?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an S0-year-old female with a rectocele. The thought of surgery has me more than frightened. Is there anything I can do for relief without surgery?

DEAR READER: As women age — especially if they have borne children — the supporting structures that hold the uterus in the pelvis stretch and relax. As the uterus sags, it often in the pelvis stretch and relax. As the uterus sage, it often weakens the bladder opening, causing urinary incontinence. Or, because of anatomical changes in the vaginal wall, part of the rectum may actually protrude into the vagina during coughing or straining. This is called a rectocele.

In the first instance, a pessary (a round plastic device) can be inserted to re-suspend the uterus in its proper position. However, no such product will correct a rectocele, for which surgical repair is usually necessary.

Whether or not to have an operation depends on how troubled you are by this condition—which, although it is bothersome and can impede evacuation, does not constitute a health hazard.

At your age, all things being

At your age, all things being equal, you can probably forego surgery and simply put up with the rectocele. On the other hand, if the affliction is unacceptable, the reparative surgery is usually safe and effective. A gynecologist should be a good source for a second opinion.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I need your help or advice. I've been to four doctors, name of whom have given me any satisfaction, My doctor recommended cortisone for a redness around my eyes. When that didn't work, he sent me to a dermatologist who recommended cortisone. That did not help so I went to an ophthalmologist who recommended cortisone. The medication helps each time, but my eyes water constantly and no one is able to help with the watering. DEAR DR. GOTT: I need your watering.

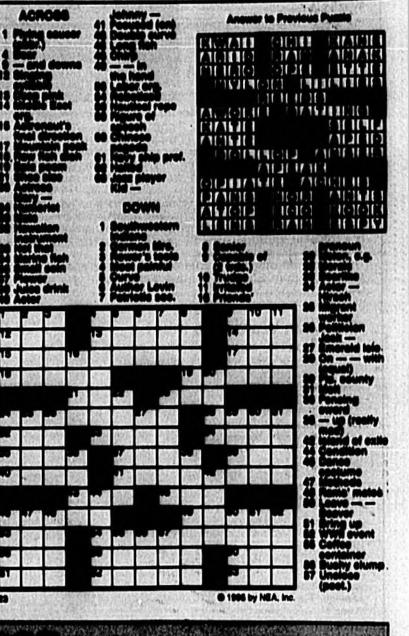

One physician recommended a specialist in tear ducts. He's a surgion and I'm not too happy about having my eyes cut. Do I remain on cortisone indefinitely for the redness and suffer forever with the tearing, or is there a Here's a third, via John Selden.

Here's a third, via John Selden, the English historian and antiquary: "Pleasure is nothing else but the intermission of pain."

The play technique in this deal reminded me of a musical intermesso, but I couldn't find a quotation with that word in it. A hunt for "interlude" was equally unproductive. And the quotation above was it for "intermission." above was it for "intermission." Such is life sometimes. Anyway, how would you play in six clubs against a heart lead?

This deal is based on one by South, of course, grumbled about his bad luck: trumps 3-1 and an incorrect guess in playing on spades rather than on diamonds.

"You missed the intermesso," commented North. "Before playing trumps, just cash dummy's spade ace and diamond ace. Then, whichever
