Supreme Court Ruling 'Bad': Herring

By BOB LLOYD Herald Staff Writer

Seminole-Brevard State Atty. Abbott Herring today said he hopes the press and electronic news media in Central Florida won't take advantage of a "bad ruling" by the U.S. Supreme Court and publicize the names of rape victims.

The high court ruled Monday that newspapers and broadcasting stations have a constitutional right to identify rape victims who are named in court or in public records.

The ruling struck down a Georgia law against publishing the identity of girls or women who had been raped.

At the same time, the President vetoed a Democratic-sponsored bill that would have delayed for 90 days all three steps of the special trial.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee was to hold hearings today on the House passed, $21.3-billion tax cut bill.

"There should be something sacred," Herring said, "in a person's body that is ravished by a rapist and that should not be publicized."

"This ruling allows victims of sex crimes to be held up to public ridicule. How would you like to be the victim of rape and have people whisper and point you out as you walk down the street?"

Herring said the ruling may deter some false reports of rape where suspects are arrested but he fears it may cause even more victims of sex crimes not to report the attacks.

Some authorities say even with the laws against publishing rape victims' names an estimated 70 per cent of rape victims fail to report the crimes.

"I hope the media recognizes the extreme problem to people who are the victims of sexual brutality and will voluntarily withhold their identities," Herring said.

The rape victim case went to the Supreme Court after an Atlanta television station broadcast the name of a 17-year-old rape victim in a story about court proceedings for six high school boys charged with the crime.

The station wasn't prosecuted for violating the state law but the girl's father used it as the basis for a damage suit charging the family's right to privacy had been violated.

It was the first time the court had considered a head-on confrontation between the right of privacy and the right of the news media to report information accurately. In earlier cases, the plaintiffs contended the reports were incorrect.

The court declined, however, to answer the question of whether right of privacy suits may ever be permitted on the basis of truthful information.

Instead, in an opinion by Justice Byron White, it said that "the interests in privacy fade when the information involved already appears on the public record."

Justice White said that "the interests in privacy fade when the information involved already appears on the public record."

Midway Man Convicted Of Sexual Battery

A six-man jury last night convicted Lexie Lorenzo Martin, 22, of Midway, of sexual battery in the Jan. 1 rape of a 12-year-old Sanford girl at her home.

Circuit Court Judge A. J. Hosemann told Martin, "I'd like to sentence you right now, but I must follow the law."

Martin, who has no prior felony convictions, had requested immediate sentencing. The court ordered him held in county jail pending a pre-sentencing investigation (PSI) as required by state law for persons convicted for the first time of a felony.

"I don't want no pre-sentencing investigation (PSI)," Martin told the court, but defense attorney David Porter quickly injected, "He's emotionally upset your honor, and I request the PSI."

Martin faces possible 30 year or life prison sentences on the first-degree felony conviction. Martin took the witness stand in his own defense and stoutly denied that he raped the 12-year-old girl. "She's just a child," he told the jury. "Why should I rape her when I made love a couple of hours before with her sister?"

The defendant called Sanford Police detective L. William Lykens "a liar" and denied he told Lykens in a tape-recorded statement that the juvenile victim had been wearing "hotpants" and that he "couldn't control his manhood."

The girl testified that Martin was the man who strangled her and assaulted her in her own bed after he had been watching television at her home. She said that she had some blue jeans and Martin held her by the throat so she couldn't scream for help.

Martin, whose Nov. 1973 trial in the rape of an 18-year-old New York woman at Sanford ended in a mistrial when a jury couldn't reach a verdict, also denied telling Lykens that he thought he was being "framed" in the rape of the 12-year-old.

Judge Hosemann allowed portions of the tape recording Lykens made of Martin's statement to be heard by the jury as state rebuttal testimony after Martin took the stand. But the recording was mostly inaudible because batteries in Lykens' pocket-size recorder apparently were depleted when the tape was played in proffered testimony minutes before, out of the presence of the jury.

In the tape recording Martin referred to himself at one point as "sexie Lexie."

Porter argued to the jury that two or three other men, who the state didn't put on the witness stand, could have raped the girl.

Prosecutor Claude Van Hook thundered in response that "somebody had sex with the victim and that's the man (pointing to Martin). It's as simple as that."

Turner Hearing Scheduled By Judge

Circuit Court Judge Richard Muldrew is scheduled to hear arguments tomorrow afternoon in extradition proceedings against super salesman Glenn Turner.

The New York papers, forwarded to Seminole County by Gov. Reubin Askew's office, don't show that Turner had done any of these.

Defense attorneys for Turner said he wasn't present in New York and was sentenced in absentia without benefit of a trial.

Florida's extradition statute reads that a state seeking to extradite a person must show the person escaped confinement, jumped bail or broke parole or probation.

Two men have been sentenced in circuit court at Sanford after entering guilty pleas in drug cases.

Circuit Court Judge A. J. Hosemann sentenced Eugene Terrell, 23, to two years probation after he pleaded guilty yesterday to the lesser and included offense of possession of less than five grams of marijuana. Terrell could have received a maximum one-year sentence. He was originally charged with a felony — delivery of a controlled substance (marijuana).

The court said Terrell, a migrant worker, will be allowed to travel from state-to-state under supervised probation to earn a living.

Circuit Court Judge Joe A. Cowart sentenced 20-year-old Raymond Warren Siebel to 40 months in prison after he pleaded guilty and admitted prior involvement with illegal drugs. Siebel was charged with attempting to obtain a controlled substance by fraud.

Both Terrell and Siebel had been docketed for trial the week in circuit court at Sanford.

Dekle, Boyd Begin Impeachment Defense

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Supreme Court Justices Hal Dekle and Joseph Boyd present their defenses today to a House impeachment committee that has opened new and major areas of investigation.

O'Malley May Plead

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Treasurer Thomas O'Malley is expected to file written pleas of innocent today at his arraignment on charges of misconduct, perjury and accepting unauthorized compensation.

O'Malley also faces a hearing today on a motion by Asst. State Atty. Robert Willis of Jacksonville, a special prosecutor, to bring him to trial by April 7.

Meanwhile, a House committee on impeachment of O'Malley has subpoenaed Tallahassee lobbyist Horace Drew, an alleged O'Malley partner in a purchase of a Fort Walton Beach shopping center, as a witness at hearings next week.

The names of other subpoenaed witnesses should soon be made public.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — An unemployed electrician who says previous jury service taught him to "quit listening to gossip" was among 11 prospective jurors still unopposed today in the bribery-conspiracy trial of former Republican Sen. Edward Gurney and four others.

Quinn Kelly, who spent 20 years in the Navy, is among the five men and six women who have withstood challenges in the tedious jury selection, now in its eighth day.

The 11 could still be excused, but in what might be a hint that the selection is near an end, U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman Tuesday told four prospective jurors to return on Thursday.

JURY TO RECOMMEND SENTENCE

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A circuit-court jury recovers today to recommend death or life in prison for two of four black men convicted of killing a white youth, a slaying claimed as the start of a racial revolution.

The jury of 10 whites and two blacks convicted Jacob John Dougan Jr., 27, and Elwood Clark Barclay, 21, of first degree murder Tuesday in the slaying of Stephen Anthony Orlando, 18.

The panel also convicted Brad W. Evans, 21, and Dwayne Crittendon, 21, on second degree murder charges.

Arab Money Deals Disturbing Many

For the sake of recycling petrodollars, investment by Arab nations in the economies of industrial countries needs to be encouraged. It will help the oil-consuming nations maintain their international balance of payments and prevent a breakdown in the world monetary system.

Recycling is heading for trouble, however, if the Arabs try to use these investments as an extension of their "oil weapon" which has the state of Israel as its target. There are indications that some Arab investors are doing just that.

European banking sources have listed seven financial deals in recent months in which Arab states, mainly Kuwait and Libya, have demanded that Jewish-owned banks be excluded. The government of France apparently has bowed to Arab pressure to rule out Jewish banks from participation in a syndicate set up to draw on Arab funds for $50 million in loans to the government-operated airline Air France and some French public utilities.

This is a disturbing extension of a policy maintained by Arab states for the last 30 years, under which they tried to encourage a trade boycott of the state of Israel. The target of the new maneuver is not the state of Israel, but businesses with owners or officers who happen to be of the Jewish faith. Instead of a politically-inspired boycott, the tactic thus becomes a case of religious discrimination.

The Arabs have gone to great lengths to seek more understanding for their case against Israel as one involving justice for displaced Palestinians and the recovery of territory taken by force. Whatever success they might be having in that direction is going to be undercut if they resort to pressure against Jews in Europe and America simply because they are Jews. Suspicion that such pressure might result surely lies behind the resistance of some American firms to offers of investment capital from the Arab world.

A generation ago the world paid a horrible price when anti-Semitism gained the backing of political power in Germany. We are now seeing considerable economic power accumulate in the Arab world. Any attempt to use it to spread the infection of anti-Semitism must not be tolerated.

It is surprising that the Arabs would be so clumsy and insensitive to the tradition of tolerance in Western society to think that they could be welcomed as investors with such a repugnant policy.

Unexpected Shock

Still another round of hearings is under way by a federal agency to determine how tough the bumpers should be on our automobiles.

Since the government ordered that cars carry bumpers which can withstand a collision at five miles per hour, it has been discovered that the extra weight cuts a quarter of a mile off the mileage which can be obtained from each gallon of gas, and is adding more than $100 to the cost of a new car. When energy use and inflation are twin problems, that's a doubtful bargain for a limited improvement in safety.

It took years of investigation and tests for the bureaucracy to mandate the bigger bumpers. We hope it doesn't take as long to decide whether they are a mistake.

Pride, Postmarks

Ever since the U.S. Postal Service began dropping the names of cities and towns from postmarks, some traditionalists have felt offended. Now the Postal Service, which has more than its share of public relations problems, is considering a restoration of the town-name postmark on some types of mail from which it had been removed.

Seeing the name of our community on a postmark is fine for local pride, but if the Postal Service has to go to additional expense or delay the processing of mail in order to apply it, then we think that local pride should take a back seat. Anything the Postal Service can do to spend less and get the mail through sooner ought to be done.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Did Mrs. Rabbit leave home because she felt her marriage was stifling her personal growth?"

Around The Clock

I was apprehensive while driving from my home to MC last night's cooking school at the Civic Center. Little gnawing voices kept on asking, "What are you going to say to all those empty seats, John?"

Another more optimistic "voice" reassured me there would be maybe five or six hundred people there — MAYBE!

As I approached the area while driving south on First Street, and seeing lines of cars unable to make a turn onto Sanford Avenue towards the Civic Center, I had an idea there just might be a bigger crowd than anyone truly expected.

However, when I finally did make it to the corner of First Street and Sanford Avenue, well, I just couldn't believe my eyes.

There was a line of people — two abreast — from the entrance to the building, all along Sanford Avenue and wrapping itself around the Chamber of Commerce Building at the corner of First Street and Sanford Avenue.

According to city personnel working the Civic Center since its erection many years ago, they said it was by far the biggest crowd ever jammed into the building.

There were upwards of 2,000 spectators — filling all of the vacant chairs, sitting in the aisles, standing along the walls... wall-to-wall people!

These folks came to see a cooking school, fashion show, and hopefully win some of the 60-plus door prizes.

They weren't disappointed in either case. Carolyn Lewis and Pat Lawrence were outstanding home economists; our local models were "whistle-bait" for the men (who made up about 25 per cent of the audience); and the participating merchants, especially those with displays at the center did a tremendous amount of business — plus gain innumerable leads.

For those of you who missed it, don't despair. There's always next year, eh?

All-in-all, it was a pleasure for me to take a small part in the presentation. (Someone said it was only appropriate that since I "roast" so many in this column that I at least learn how to do the cooking properly, and that's why I was invited to MC!)

I'm ready to say next year's will be bigger and better — and that's not quite possible, really. Unless it were extended for two days or so.

Be that as it may, we do thank all of you who took the time to attend the show. And a special thank you to the merchants who co-sponsored the event.

A good time was had by all (especially those of us who "sampled" the cooking backstage.)

For those of you who missed it, don't despair. There's always next year, eh?

RAY CROMLEY Lawmakers Never Dark On Budgets

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Like so many abused children Congressmen incessantly complain they have no way of checking the President's mammoth budgets.

They cry excessively over defense, foreign aid, space and atomic energy, health, education and welfare.

I can sympathize with a freshman Senator or Representative. There's no excuse for anyone with two years' service, however.

The budget is not snapped in Congressional faces overnight. The lawmakers toy with the figures for eight months, which is why the budget year is being shifted from July 1 to October 1.

Every item goes through two committees. Every member has access to a copy of the full budget for those eight months. So does every news office in town, for free and every citizen who wishes to buy a copy.

Congress has access to three research staffs, its own and those of the General Accounting Office and the Library of Congress. If these are inefficient or too small, the Senate and House have the power to expand them to any level they choose. Congress has been more interested in raising its own pay.

Congressmen further could improve the staff work of their own committees by eliminating political favoritism.

Each member of Congress can inquire of any government department — Defense, State, Interior or whatever — any time during the year and demand answers to any budget questions. He can do this repeatedly. He has access to a number of research institutions, such as Brookings, each with its own staff, and get analyses of major budget items. These academic and semi-academic groups range from the far liberal to far conservative.

There are, in addition, a vast panoply of special-interest groups, some attacking and some defending the defense, foreign affairs, economic welfare and other specific sections of the budget in detail.

No individual Congressman need look up these associations and their studies. The Library of Congress will do this searching on request. And make easily read synopses.

To top it all, the budget is not that difficult for any Senator or Representative who has been around awhile. Though distressingly large, $50 billion for fiscal 1976, some 90 to 95 per cent of the money goes for old programs, usually only a slightly modified for inflation. Thus if a Congressman has once gotten a handle on the budget, or the part which interests him, he normally must dig only into the changes in order to understand what is going on. He will not have to search for "secrets," for he will be given tips aplenty by proponents and opponents of the new programs.

Remember, too, that Congressmen, by choice and by appointment, divide up the work. No man by himself must study the whole of the budget. He can call on colleagues in whom he has faith to fill him in on those areas which have not been his prime concern.

Wasteland, who was dressed in a red-green plaid blazer, orange pants, sandals and white socks, said he is currently looking for a vehicle for Connie Stevens, something along the lines of a policeman who used to be a nuclear physicist but now spends most of her time bleaching her hair.

"There are some stars, you know," he said, "that you can count on to be pretty crummy no matter what you do with them. But they don't make 'em like Tab Hunter anymore."

Wasteland said that if he ever gets tired of television, he would like to go into candidate selecting in politics but added he's too busy to think about that.

"This job keeps you on the run all the time, telephoning, contacting writers, eating egg salad sandwiches, take a minute! What an idea for a series. We'll call it 'Hold the Pickle' and it will be about a top-maker, played by maybe David Cassidy, who will be the adopted son of Zsa Zsa Gabor and Fess Parker, and his hobbies will be consulting would-be suicides and tire-changing and..."

There is always room for a "better" and marketing experts came up with a number of them when recently asked by the National Enquirer, "What inventions are needed today?"

For example, Stephen Traube of Lawrence Associates in New York suggested these novel ideas:

An attachment to electric outlets that would tell people how much it costs them to run a certain appliance. It might encourage them to use less electricity and at the same time help the energy problem.

Happy Flopper Confesses

Some people think it is just a dismal coincidence that so many atrocious and unbearable programs show up on television. But there is actually a group of specialists called flop agents (called floppers, of course), whose job it is to think up shows so terrible they will inevitably fail, thereby giving the illusion of change to the television even when it is groveling around in the same old rut.

One of the most successfully unsuccessful floppers around is, of course, the legendary 300-pound Grover T. "Vast" Wasteland.

"Come right in and close the door," Wasteland told a recent visitor to his tastefully furnished chateau office. "Hey! Wait a minute here. I think I've just had an idea for a new series called 'Open Door' about an Oriental doctor who moonlights selling sparklers and keeps running into these open doors with special guest stars Barbara Bush and Cesar Romero behind them. Couldn't last more than two episodes."

Wasteland's secretary buzzed him at that point and he picked up his phone. "What? Him again? No, look, tell Keeffe Brasselle nothing has come in for him yet. I'm not sure even I could do that to America."

Wasteland added, however, that he really is saving Brasselle for the right spot.

"Maybe a series about a tap-dancing baby doctor and undercover punda salesmen from the Old West — we could call it 'Frontier Pediatrician.'" he mused. "Of course it would have to be pretty bad to live down to some of my other great flops. 'Oh, Susanna,' 'Adventures in Paradise,' 'Sugarfoot,' 'Bridget Loves Bernie,' 'Archer,' 'Klan,' and 'I'm trying pretty hard on...'"

Wasteland said that if he ever gets tired of television, he would like to go into candidate selecting in politics but added he's too busy to think about that.

"This job keeps you on the run all the time, telephoning, contacting writers, eating egg salad sandwiches, take a minute! What an idea for a series. DON OAKLEY Citizens Say 'No' To Arms Peddling

If one opinion poll doth a national consensus make, Americans are fed up with being arms peddlers to the world.

The American public votes a resounding "No" to continuation of U.S. military aid not only to South Vietnam (three to one against) and the Arab countries (eight to one against) but even to Israel (two to one against).

Such were the results of a national telephone poll conducted by Opinion Research, Corp., of Princeton, N.J., among a national probability sample of 1,000 adults aged 18 and over.

The anti-aid sentiment cut across all income levels and all lines of political affiliation, say the researchers.

Just how much this poll, which did not go into any depth, is representative of true American attitudes is open to question. Surely not many people are happy about the prospect of South Vietnam going under to the Communists. Even fewer would wish to abandon Israel to her enemies.

But superficial and simplistic as it may be, the poll does express the growing disenchantment of Americans with our policy, however much that policy has been forced upon us, of involving ourselves in every squabble and rivalry in every part of the world — sometimes even to the point of arming both sides, as for examples, India and Pakistan, Greece and Turkey.

Last fiscal year, the United States, far and away the world's leading merchant of arms, sold $3.3 billion worth of military equipment. Where once it was obsolete, second-hand stuff, today our clients sometimes receive the latest weapons of war before our own services are equipped.

To instruct in the use of his weapons, U.S. military assistance teams, both government and private under contract, are in no less than 34 countries.

Most recently, Ethiopia, running out of bullets in its fight against Arab-backed, Soviet-armed secessionist guerrillas in Eritrea province, asked the United States for an emergency airlift of $30-million worth of ammunition.

Which put the State Department in a quandary: Whether to supply the ammunition and jeopardize relations with the Arabs, who are starting to spend beaucoup petrodollars on U.S. weapons, or not supply it and risk a break with Ethiopia.

It is not easy being the Arsenal of Democracy.

There is always room for a "better" and marketing experts came up with a number of them when recently asked by the National Enquirer, "What inventions are needed today?"

For example, Stephen Traube of Lawrence Associates in New York suggested these novel ideas:

WORLD IN BRIEF

Hostaged Berlin Politician Lorenz Is Freed Unharm

BERLIN (AP) — West Berlin politician Peter Lorenz was freed unharmed during the night, and police began a massive hunt for eight persons suspected of having a part in his kidnaping. The 52-year-old head of West Berlin's Christian Democratic party was released after a former mayor of the city returned from Aden and broadcast a message to the kidnapers. He said that the government of South Yemen had given unrestricted asylum to five anarchists. Lorenz, who had been threatened with death, was freed at midnight in the Wilmersdorf district and telephoned his wife from a public phone booth. Police Chief Hübner said he was exhausted but apparently in good condition otherwise.

Subway Toll Reaches 41

LONDON (AP) — Recovery crews dragged the mutilated body of the engineer from his crushed driver's cab during the night, bringing the final death toll in London's worst subway disaster to 41, London Transport officials said.

Fifteen other bodies were removed from the train earlier Tuesday. The first three coaches of the train were derailed when it ran past a station in the financial district last Friday and slammed into a stone wall. Eighty other passengers were injured, five of them seriously.

Forensic experts began examining the body of 58-year-old Leslie Newton, who was driving the train packed with commuters. One theory was that he "fereed a heart attack. But if he did, the train should have been stopped by the "dead man's handle," which is mounted on a spring and snaps into the braking position if the driver takes his hand from it.

Transport officials said drivers could neutralize this spring action to avoid the strain of constantly holding the handle in position. But they said there was no evidence Newton did this.

Workers took photographs of the driving controls and other equipment to be used in the investigation into the cause of the crash.

Rockets Halt Air Flights

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Rocket attacks halted all commercial flights at Phnom Penh's airport today, but the American airlift of rice, ammunition and gasoline continued unchecked. Sources at the airport said the Khmer Rouge gunners were intensifying their shelling as the American cargo planes circled high over the city before coming in at a sharp angle. But the shells were hitting at least 300 yards from the area in which the DC-8s and C-130s were unloading. American military spokesmen in Bangkok said the airlift delivered 565 tons of ammunition and other military supplies, more than 600 tons of rice and about 100 tons of petroleum products on Tuesday. Military sources said more than 40 100mm rockets hit on and around the airport between dawn and noon today. Although no serious casualties or damage were reported by the Cambodian airline halted operations because ground workers refused to leave their protective bunkers to service the planes. Foreign airlines suspended flights to and from Phnom Penh in mid-January because of the daily rocket attacks.

Leaders Behind Closed Doors

ALGIERS (AP) — Leaders of the major oil-exporting states meet behind closed doors today to complete a "solemn declaration" of principles they think should govern long-term relations with their customers. The summit conference of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) may modify the declaration to include some of the points made by Algeria's President Houari Boumedienne in a hardlining speech opening the conference on Tuesday. The Algerian leader proposed a freeze in the "real" price of oil until 1980 provided the industrialized countries take part in a massive program of aid for the developing nations. He also proposed a special OPEC fund of $10-15 billion dollars to help countries in economic difficulties pay their sharply increased bills.

Altamonte Donates $1,000 To Zoo

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Altamonte Springs last night voted unanimously to appropriate and donate $1,000 to the Central Florida Zoo.

The action was taken after City Atty. Joe Davis in an opinion called "stipendous" by Commissioner Cal DeVonye said the decision on whether a donation should be made was up to the commissioners.

"You asked for an opinion," Davis said, "but if you really wanted to make a donation, you should have gone ahead and done it."

Davis in opinions to both Altamonte Springs and Longwood on several occasions ruled in the past the use of city tax funds for charitable contributions was questionable legally and unauthorized by either city's charters or the state constitution.

He reaffirmed his position last night, adding a request for an opinion from Attorney General Robert Shevin's office on a similar matter for the City of Longwood two years ago had "got so critical" that he brought an informal response, leaving the question of legality up to Davis.

"You cannot use a wide brush concerning the use of the public's money," Davis said. He said recent opinions from Shevin's office concerning the use of public money for charitable contributions were "liberal interpretations."

The key must be whether the money is being used for a public purpose, he said, adding the city commission, to determine legality of the contribution to the zoo, must answer three questions: Is the city authorized to operate a zoo? Is it a public purpose? and Would it be in the citizens' benefit?

He continued if the city commissioners answered the questions affirmatively, they should cover their actions further by requiring that the city receive some type publicity either through a plaque being placed at the zoo in the city's name or by having one of the animals named in the city's honor.

Industrial Park Zoning Request Is Denied.

By BILL BELLEVILLE
Herald Staff Writer

County commissioners last night postponed action on a request from Dr. J. W. Hickman that would have allowed an industrial park next to the Midland Plaza Market on U. S. Highway 17, so they could get more specific information on Hickman's promised commitments to the Board.

Hickman could "firm up" his commitments to the Board, Kimbrough said that Hickman's promises were too "ambiguous," and told the developer he needed specifics on fences, lighting, and a proposed beam for the land.

Commissioner Harry Kwiatkowski moved to grant the rezoning request, but the motion died without support from the other Board members.

Hickman had told the Board at the hearing he would "voluntarily" donate money for fire protection, control lighting and property, and construct adequate buffering on the land. He also said he would not use the property for the proposed industrial park until an access road paved to county standards is completed on the land.

Commissioner John Kimbrough suggested a continuance of the request, until the property, and construct adequate buffering on the land. He also said he would not use the property for the proposed industrial park until an access road paved to county standards is completed on the land.

Several surrounding property owners turned out in protest of the requested rezoning. The request if approved will change agriculture (A-1) to Very Light Industrial (M1A) for the property. The hearing was continued to March 25.

But County Pollution Control Director Langley Adair recommended against the filling of the natural pond. "We're opposed to the filling of small lakes anywhere in the county except where they should be filled," Adair said. If filling of the smaller lakes continue, "all that will be left in a few years is the larger lakes in Seminole." In addition to filling the two-acre lake with concrete and dirt, Adair asked permission to fill more dirt to "shape it."

but would now agree to "shaping" the shoreline that remained. "Granted a dredge and fill permit to the City of Altamonte Springs at the request of Public Works Director Don Bundy for utility easements along the Little Wekiva—Commissioners were assured that "all environmentally protected measures will be taken to keep turbidity down in the rest of the river." John Kimbrough moved to approve the request, "based on the reputation of the city of Altamonte Springs."

The Woodlands Civic Association is spearheading the opposition to the request by Vernon W. Midgett to rezone to neighborhood commercial A-7 acre site on the north side of E. E. Williamson Road for the convenience store.

"The protection of the general welfare and safety of school children, who will be walking to the Woodlands School is our primary concern," said Robert J. Sturm, president of the Woodlands Civic Association. "Commercialization of this area in any form would increase hazardous auto and commercial traffic through and around our residential area and most importantly near a school attended by small children."

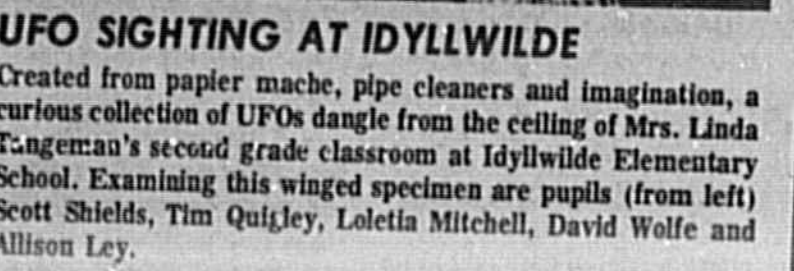

Other areas mobilizing a petition drive in opposition, Sturm said, include Devonshire, Shadow Hill, Longwood Groves and the Highlands.

At a meeting of the legislative delegation two weeks ago, County Atty. Tom Freeman, on behalf of the county commission, submitted proposed legislation to split off comptroller duties from the clerk of the circuit court's office, saying this would give the county commission better budgetary control.

Circuit Court Clerk Arthur H. Beckwith Jr. insisted, however, the creation of a new appointed office would increase costs and put the comptroller at the mercy of the county commission.

Altamonte Springs Mayor Norman Floyd will speak on double taxation—the levying of county taxes on city residents excluded from receiving certain county services.

Status report will be given on proposed funding to implement the Seminole Land Planning Act and the 911 emergency system.

Convenience Store Permit To Bring Longwood Protest

Property owners from five Longwood area subdivisions are expected to protest the proposed rezoning to permit construction of a convenience store near Woodlands school before the Seminole County Planning and Zoning Commission at 7:30 tonight at the courthouse.

Meanwhile in Casselberry at the same time tonight, the Seminole County Legislative Delegation will be considering proposed legislation on double taxation, an appointed comptroller for the county and bills to amend the expressway authority law and to require that five circuit judges reside in the county.

The Woodlands Civic Association is spearheading the opposition to the request by Vernon W. Midgett to rezone to neighborhood commercial A-7 acre site on the north side of E. E. Williamson Road for the convenience store.

Tucson Boys Chorus Offers Concert-Goers Varied Entertainment

'Ambassadors in Levis' is what these young staging cowboys from Tucson, Arizona, have been dubbed

Fine musical entertainment ranging from pre-Bach to post-Bacharach and spiked with a bit of boogie in the middle, is in store for Seminole Mutual Concert Association members, Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Sanford Civic Center.

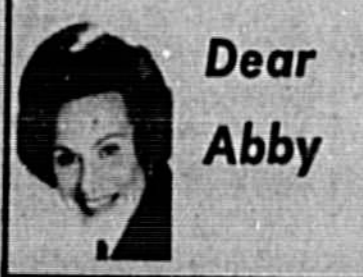

The most versatile choir of its type in the world, is how the Tucson Boys Chorus has been described. Founded in 1939, the Tucson Arizona Boys Chorus has also been called "Ambassadors in Levis" from the land of cactus and canyons.

Europe and Australia; has recorded best sellers under the Capitol, United Artists and its own labels; and has captivated televisioners coast-to-coast in a number of specials.

The group even gave a "command performance" for the late President Johnson in the 1963 White House Christmas tree-lighting ceremony.

Rabbi Rejects Sheet Idea

DEAR ABBY: I must comment on your answer: "Send me a sample, and I'll sleep on it," in regards to the letter from a reader who suggested printing the Ten Commandments on bed sheets and pillowcases.

Dear Abby

Speaking only of the Jewish faith, one is not permitted to sleep, lie, or even sit on the same bench with holy books unless the books are placed on something which is a handbreadth in height. It is also forbidden to place sacred books on the ground.

County Rejects Zone Bid

By BILL BELLEVILLE Herald Staff Writer A rezoning request that would have allowed E and J Homes to build moderate-priced homes on smaller sized lots than the present zoning laws was turned down by county commissioners last night, to the approval of the 20 surrounding property owners in attendance.

Surrounding property owners, who had sent various letters signed by the Board to commissioners, strongly opposed the zoning as a "hard to see through" to buffer the development from West Lake Brantley Road.

Nonsmokers Have Rights

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB DEAR DR. LAMB — In your column concerning emphysema you stated that one with the phisema should stay out of cigarette smoke and polluted air. Why not tobacco smoke instead of just cigarette smoke?

leg. Please say something about what should be done in a situation like this. DEAR READER — Almost everyone has some minor differences in the length of the legs and arms. When one leg is a half inch or more shorter it can be a contributing factor to constant poor alignment of the spine and continual muscle strain.

DEAR READER — Tobacco smoke, including pipes and cigars, in the air can be harmful to people with lung disease or with asthma and attacks of chest pain from heart disease. I am in general agreement that smoking should be banned in all public places.

While I agree that everyone has a right to decide whether he wants to smoke or not, I am not convinced that someone who wishes to smoke has the right to pollute the air that another person must breathe. It is really a question of whose rights are being violated, the smoker's by forbidding him to smoke in public places, or the nonsmoker's by forcing him to breathe tobacco smoke-polluted air or stay home.

This is a touchy area. I think those who feel strongly that smoking should be prohibited in public should try to form a national organization and see if they can get Congress to pass legislation that will meet at least some of their goals. This is the only way I can see that this could be brought about.

Henry Kissinger Hatching Solution To Oil Price Crisis

ANALYSIS

By The Herald Staff

He may not be as well balanced as he looks sitting out there on top of the world. Certainly a growing number of American congressmen like the scent of his blood, and if a Republican victory in the elections next year starts to look unlikely Henry Kissinger may decide this summer to get out of office as Secretary of State before his President is shot electorally from under him.

For the rest of us that would be a pity. For inside the egg Kissinger is sitting on is the likely solution to the world's oil price crisis.

Kissinger flew back to Washington last week after six days in the Middle East and four in Europe; and if peace between the Arabs and Israel seems no closer as a result, peace between the producers and consumers of oil may be. There is, for a start, the creation of oil prices as Abu Dhabi hawks its unsold oil about, as the Tugline across Jordan, Syria and Lebanon drowns in Saudi oil, and as acres of sea are given over to mobilized super-tankers. But assuming the oil producers can remain proof against the glut they have created, which present betting is they can, then it is another sort of erosion of the oil price, without bitterness, that the West must aim for.

Two things have to be done if the producers and consumers of oil are to resolve their differences. The first is that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries should recognize that it cannot be the sole arbiter of the price of oil. Slowly, though by no means certainly, this may now be happening. The nominal price of oil — a bit under $11 a barrel as it leaves the Gulf — is the consuming countries hand over in return for that $11 barrel, has been gradually falling since the beginning of this year, when the Opec countries froze the nominal price for nine months despite the continuing inflation in the cost of the things they buy with their oil money.

But the real price, measured in terms of the goods and services

The central issue now is how long this freeze of the nominal price, and therefore the erosion of the real price, can be kept going.

Algeria's oil minister has suggested extending the freeze from nine months to a full year. Sheikh Yamani, his Saudi Arabian colleague, has gone even further; he says it might be prolonged into next year, and there is reason to think that he may be willing to try to persuade the rest of Opec to keep the freeze in operation until the end of 1976.

If it can be done (the snag is that Sheikh Yamani has been an unavailing optimist before) that would amount to a pretty dramatic fall in the real price of oil. Two years of world inflation, running at 15 per cent a year, would cut it by 24 per cent. What would still nominally be $11 oil would in fact cost about $8.50 a barrel by the yardstick of 1974 prices.

Saudi Arabia is the key country in this, because its combination of enormous reserves of oil and relatively few people to spend its oil money on gives it the necessary clout inside Opec. Oil producers with a lot of people, such as Iran, or with modest reserves of oil, such as Kuwait, will certainly not be anxious to prolong the price freeze beyond September.

Saudi Arabia's power to prevent prices rising, and to keep on rolling the real price downwards, comes from the fact that it is steadily expanding the amount of oil it is capable of producing over the above the amount it is actually producing at the moment.

If things come to a showdown inside Opec, the Saudis could threaten to switch on this surplus capacity, and break the cartel. It is far from certain that King Faisal and Sheikh Yamani are in fact prepared to face the row this would cause with their fellow-producers. But they might; some other Opec countries are convinced they would.

And there is no doubt about the main reason why King Faisal might be ready to take the risk. He has been persuaded by Kissinger that the inflationary consequences of the present price of oil are a danger to the political stability of western Europe. He is afraid of the opportunities that inflation may be opening up to the communist parties of Italy and France, and to half-Marxists in other European countries. The anti-communism in his bones is a powerful comfort for the consumers of oil.

But there is something else that the consumers can do to help the real-price-cutters in Opec, and this is where Kissinger's idea of a floor price for oil comes into the argument. The second part of a solution to the oil crisis is to agree on a price that both producers and consumers can accept. The producers will be more willing to prolong the freeze on the $11 nominal price, and thereby let the real price go on floating downwards, if they believe that the consumers are not trying to get back to the old days when the consumers alone set the price, and set it artificially low.

They have to be persuaded that, if the real price is allowed to keep on moving down, it will eventually flatten out into an agreed price which will be kept in line with the price of things they buy from the West.

These two things — a prolongation of the present fall in the real price of oil, and an attempt to convert the lower real price into an agreed floor price when the time is right — are the main elements of the hope of solving the great oil quarrel. The hope may yet be frustrated.

Ron Harris Wins Four Events In 'Off Meet'

By TOM KEYSER
Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD — "It was just one of those off meets," Ron Harris said. "I didn't do well at all."

True, Harris finished third in the high jump. He missed three times at six feet, and he jumped five-foot-10 inches on his third try.

After the third miss, he had time to jerk his body in disgust, muffle a "sh..." and hurry to the starting block for the 300-yard intermediate hurdles.

He won the 300s in 41.2, and still he was not happy. "What was your time?" asked a teammate.

"Hey," Harris said, "I don't want to talk about it."

He also won the long jump, the 120-yard high hurdles and was on Lake Brantley's winning mile relay team.

"I hadn't had a meet like this yet this season," Harris said, shaking his head. "I guess it was bound to come sooner or later."

Despite what he felt to be a lackluster performance, Harris' four firsts and one third sparked Lake Brantley to a win in a five-team track meet Tuesday at Lyman.

"He can do anything he wants to do," Lake Brantley Track Coach Jerry Posey said. "He's a natural."

Harris, a junior in among Florida's top five in the 300s and he has run the fastest Class 3A 120-yard high hurdles in the state. He did it Tuesday in 14.4. Only phenomenal Mike Roberson of 4A Winter Park (13.6) and Greg Chandler of 4A Trinity Prep (14.3) have done it faster.

Trinity Prep was scheduled to compete in the meet Tuesday, but withdrew Monday night.

"That's one reason I'm so disappointed today," Harris said. "I want to run against Chandler. I want to beat him real bad."

Harris and Chandler met last week in a three-team meet and Chandler edged Harris 14.4 to 14.5.

Harris holds six Lake Brantley track records, the 200-yard dash, 120-yard high hurdles, 300 IM hurdles, high jump, long jump and as part of Brantley's mile relay team.

"I really shouldn't be," Harris said, "but I'm looking ahead to winning the district, regional and state. I want to win it for me, of course, but I really want to win it for coach Posey."

Posey is leaving Lake Brantley at the end of this school year to become Seminole High School's head football coach.

"I don't really approve of him (Harris) competing in the high jump and the long jump," Bob Harris, Ron's father said. "He should be loosening up for the 300s, not over here trying to jump five-10."

"But he has a great affection for Posey, there is an affinity between the two. Ron feels that if he comes out and gets a first in the high jump or the long jump, then it helps the team."

"I love that man (Posey)," Harris said. "He's beautiful. There's not a better track coach, any coach for that matter."

Harris had a shot at the state 330-yard intermediate hurdles last year, but it misfired when he aggravated a hip injury in the district preliminaries.

"He would have won the state," Posey said. "Forty flat won it and Ron ran in the low 30s two or three times. He should win it this year, and I think he's got a chance to win on the high hurdles too."

"He has always liked to run," his father said. "He was almost to the point of being hyperactive. He ran all the time."

Then Harris came out for track his freshman year, liked it, did well, and his natural ability quickly matured into a premier track star.

"That's my biggest satisfaction," he said. "Always improving, always doing better. I love that more than anything else."

"Style hurt me last year. I've always had the speed, but I didn't begin perfecting my style until this year. What has helped me a lot is watching other people."

"Like Chandler. He can impress you in his warm-ups. I'm about as limber as a two-by-four."

In addition to Harris, other Lake Brantley firsts Tuesday were by Marty Williams in the shot putt (47-feet, two-inches), Robert Frazier in the discus (128-feet, one-inch), Henry Stanley in the 800-yard run (1:58.1), and Chuck Collier, David Arnett and Stanley joined Harris on the winning mile relay team.

Harris' 120-yard high hurdles, Stanley's 800-yard run, and the mile relay team set Lake Brantley records. Rick Horta set a Lyman freshman record in the two-mile run (10:28.5). He finished fourth.

Lyman's Al Stanley established a school record, winning the pole vault (13-feet, three-inches), Tim Burns set a Lyman sophomore record in the high jump (five-feet, 10-inches) and

Stetson Meets NCAA FSU

DeLand - Stetson and Florida State meet tonight at DeLand in one of the outstanding basketball matchups ever between Florida colleges. The teams battle at Stetson's gym at 8 p.m.

The winner of tonight's game will receive a giant boost toward an NCAA or NIT post-season tournament game. Tonight's contest is the final regular season game for both teams.

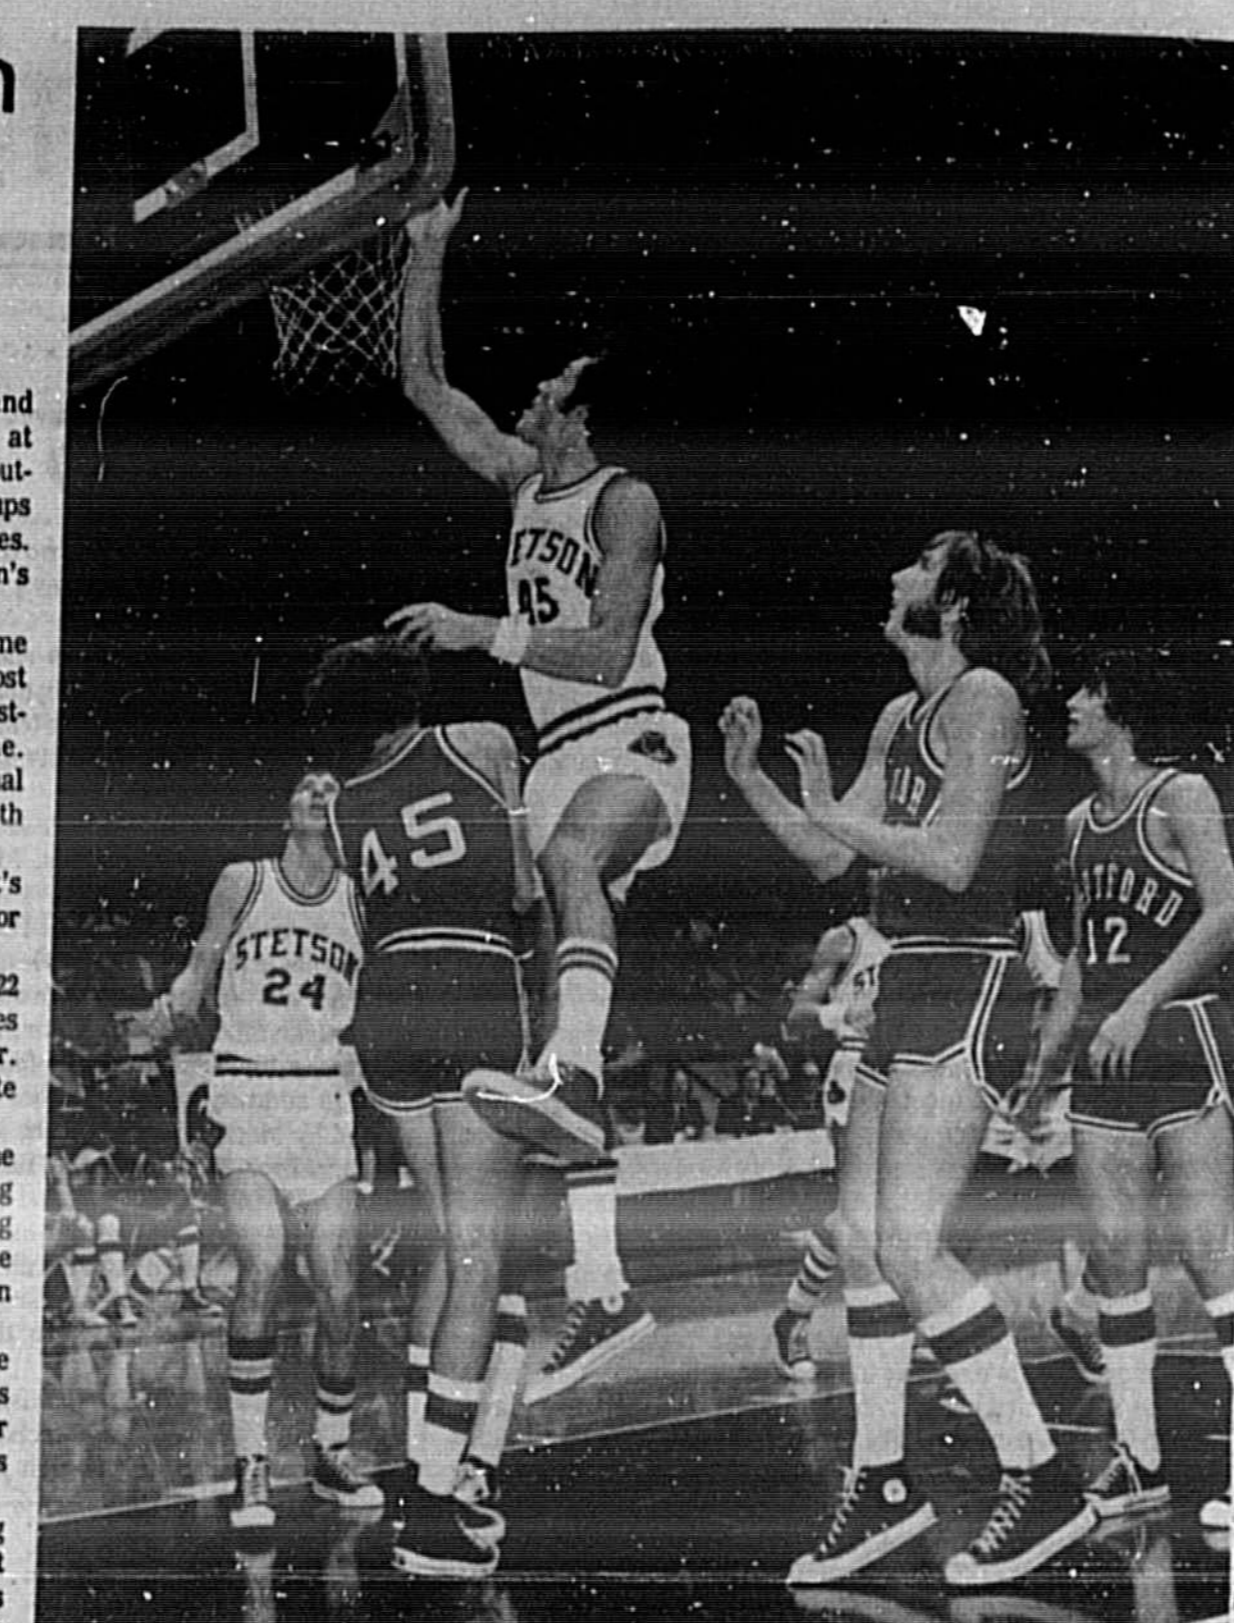

It is speculated that tonight's winner will receive an NCAA or NIT bid.

Stetson has won its last 22 games at Edmunds Activities Center, 15 victories this year. Stetson is 21-4 and Florida State is 18-7.

Stetson knocked off Tulane 99-74 Monday night, crushing the Green Wave with surprising ease. Tulane was also in the running for a post-season tournament bid.

All five Stetson starters have field goal shooting averages over 50 per cent, and four starters are averaging 10 points or more.

Billy Seitz leads the scoring parade with nearly a 16-point average, most of his points coming on twisting, acrobatic moves underneath. Otis Johnson boasts more than a 15-point average.

Billy Seitz, No. 45, and Dave Stowers, No. 24, of Stetson go for a rebound in a Stetson game earlier this season. Stetson will close its season tonight at 8 against Florida State at the Edmunds Activities Center in DeLand. (Herald Photo by Don Vincent)

Little Room In Mets' Inn For Willie Mays

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) - The New York Mets, in spic-and-span uniforms, stood stiffly in front of the camera - like a high school graduating class - when there was a sudden interruption in the official picture-taking ceremony.

"Hey, where's Willie?" someone yelled. "Willie Mays is not in the picture."

From the sidelines shuffled a familiar figure, cap a jar and his jaws working gingerly on a mouthful of gum. Sheepishly, almost apologetically, he took a position at the end of the front row.

"Come on," bellowed Manager Yogi Berra. "Get down in front!"

He's a lonely, lost individual, this once dynamic, scintillating stand that type of education much longer.

"If a business opportunity I have and everything is conducive to leaving at mid-season, I'd quit baseball then," the 28-year-old Holtzman said.

"If the general condition of the economy was better, I probably wouldn't be here right now," he added at Oakland's Mesa, Ariz. training base.

"I'd like to let him (Finley) go out and find another 19-game winner."

Considering the fact that Finley already has lost a certain 24-game winner named Catfish Hunter, the fiery A's owner may not be pleased with the prospect. But a good businessman never tips his hand.

Russell, the Los Angeles Dodgers shortstop, got his business learning while holding out for $75,000 this season. He signed his contract Monday - for less money than he had wanted - but admitted no feelings of malice for club vice president Al Campanis, who did the negotiating.

When it was over, Russell said, "Campanis and I shook hands, knowing business is business."

But all businesses have their eccentricities. Minnesota Twins hurler Campbell found that out.

Twins' owner Calvin Griffith set a club rule against beards, so Campbell's carefully cultivated shaggy hair had to go by workout time Tuesday. The 30-year-old right-hander, Minnesota's top reliever last season with an 8-7 record and a 2.63 earned run average, appeared despondent with the loss.

"I am disappointed," he said at the Twins' training base in Orlando, Fla. "But the ball club's policy says I can't have the beard, and this is one of those times when you can't fight city hall."

Meanwhile, the number of unsigned players was reduced further when Baltimore's inked outfielder Don Baylor; the New York Yankees signed outfielder Walt Williams and first baseman Olio Velez; the Cleveland Indians signed outfielder Oscar Gamble; infielder Mario Guerrero ended the first Boston Red Sox holdout in 18 years.

"I've overcome that a little bit, but not entirely. I have to be careful not to get in Yogi's way. I've got to keep away from the action. I can't let myself get involved."

Mays retired after the 1973 season, leaving a legacy of 660 career home runs. But he exercised the option of his Mets' contract to stay around 10 more years at $50,000 a year.

He is associated with three major companies in a public relations capacity. "I just play golf and meet people," he said. "He is finding it more trouble to keep busy in a baseball role that is not fully defined."

"Joe McDonald has made it easier on me by getting me away from the club as much as possible," the 43-year-old outfielder said.

McDonald, the Mets' general manager, said he was set up a program for Mays to visit each of the Mets' five farm clubs two to four times, working primarily with the young hitters.

"He should be very valuable with the young guys," McDonald said. "This will keep him on the road until about July 8. As best we can, we are trying not to interfere with his other commitments."

Mays, one of the great hitters of all-time, will not be called upon to use his knowledge with the varsity, including Dave Kingman, the towering slugger picked up from the San Francisco Giants who can hit the ball a mile but does most of his swinging at air.

"That's what they brought Phil Cavarretta in for," Mays said. "I won't be working with any of the Mets' hitters. They haven't asked me and I don't want to interfere."

"It will give me more time for golf."

Citrus Pro-Am Tees Off Today

ORLANDO—The Citrus Open Pro-Am is today, and the four rounds involving the great golfers in the country, minus Johnny Miller and Gerald Ford, begin Thursday.

Forty-eight foursomes tee off today in the Pro-Am. The final foursomes leave the first and 18th tees at 2:30 p.m. Pros playing include Arpad Palmer, Lee Trevino, two-time Citrus Open champ Jerry Heard, Bruce Crampton, Miller Barber, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Bruce Devlin, Bob Murphy, Doug Sanders, Charles Goody, Eddie Pearce and Julius Berce. Amateurs include Johnny Ultras and Joe Garcia-Viola.

Starting Thursday, the pros compete for $300,000. The winner will pocket $40,000. Tickets are available at the gates of the Rio Pinar Country Club, located in east Orlando.

Miller, who also did not compete in last week's Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic in Fort Lauderdale, and President Ford, who played in the Inverrary Pro-Am, are absent from the Citrus line-up.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Hialeah Park's Death Coming Slowly, Surely

MIAMI (AP)—The state Board of Business Regulation's awarding in May of the 1976 thoroughbred racing dates in South Florida may mean the death of Hialeah Park, which has ended its season deep in debt.

The track, which has hosted almost all of the nation's top 3-year-old horses down through the years, has virtually no chance of regaining the prime tourist season dates until 1977.

Hialeah President Lynn Stone indicated at the track's closing session Tuesday that 1977 may be a year too late.

"I'm pretty well convinced we just have to have the middle dates to have a successful operation," said Stone. "I think if the middle dates go to Hialeah, we can certainly continue."

Lacey Leads Kings
By The Associated Press
Sometimes the truths are most self-evident. "Pressure? It didn't bother me," said Sam Lacey. "Why should it? There's a hobby out here."

Honest Sam was talking about something most National Basketball Association players do best—shoot without any opposition, commonly called taking foul shots.

And Lacey disposed of those two free throws with 13 seconds left as easily as he answered the question about pressure. The two free throws snapped a tie and sent the Kansas City Omaha Kings to a 103-99 victory over the Phoenix Suns Tuesday night.

Around the rest of the NBA, the ball bounced this way: Milwaukee 101, Detroit 83; Buffalo 104, Seattle 97; Boston 126, New York 111; Atlanta 109, Los Angeles 97; Golden State 117, Chicago 102, and Portland 117, Cleveland 98.

Racing Crowds Drop
WASHINGTON (AP)—A study being done for the Jockey Club indicates that the number of horse races in the United States has expanded beyond the point of diminishing returns.

The study also shows that the average daily attendance at race tracks has fallen steadily and the quality of horses in training and breeding has declined.

Nicholas F. Brady, chairman of the Jockey Club, a nonprofit organization designed to improve the image of the sport, told the National Gambling Commission that the study was initiated to determine what will happen if the industry continues to operate the way it is now.

SEC Eyes Money Problems
SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP)—Athletic Director Carl Maddox of Louisiana State has expressed concern about the growing cost of collegiate athletics. But he says he sees no "large chunks" of revenue-saving measures.

"We have to look for the fat," Maddox said Tuesday. "We have to realize that 40 per cent of the cost is due to the economy and the other 60 per cent is in salaries, wages and fringe benefits for employees and scholarships for athletes."

He said the only way to substantially reduce costs is to reduce staffs and "I think we are undermanned now so we don't want to do that."

Texas A&M Tops SMU
By The Associated Press
Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Arkansas are still alive in the Southwest Conference basketball race. Well, actually, Texas A&M looks in the best of health while Texas Tech and Arkansas are fading on for dear life.

Texas Tech and Arkansas were put on the sick list after Texas A&M's 100-77 victory over SMU Tuesday night. Coupled with Baylor's 60-55 upset over Texas Tech, the victory gave the Aggies undisputed possession of the Southwest lead with one game to go in the regular season. They can win the title by beating Texas this Saturday.

BOOK REVIEWS

LOST TREASURES OF THE WEST. By Brad Williams and Choral Pepper. Holt, Rinehart & Winston, 184 Pages, $7.95.

Dreams of coming across a long-lost treasure trove flicker through everyone's mind from time to time - especially when tax payments are due. In "Lost Treasures of the West," Brad Williams and Choral Pepper tell where such hidden riches might possibly be found, although they point out early on that "the writers admit candidly that in most of these tales there is the probability that somewhere in the story the facts have been augmented by legend.

Which shouldn't turn prospective readers off, since whether or not the lost loot still there - or ever was for that matter - isn't all that important. The story is the thing here - and the near 20 tales included in this volume are, for the most part, attention holding.

"The Vasquez Ingot" is an engrossing tale of intrigue and doublecross in which a not overly trusting mine owner has his silver cast into two huge ingots weighing about 800 pounds each in order to discourage robbers. He figures the logicians of trying to haul something that big and that heavy around should deter would-be robbers. He figures wrong, of course.

So if most of the others, especially the intriguingly titled "The Nail on the Head," "The Man with the A Nose," and "Honor Among Thieves."

Lawyers Object To Immunity Tag

EDITOR'S NOTE: The author is a Miami attorney and head of the American Trial Lawyer Assn.'s malpractice committee.

By J.B. SPENCE
The Herald Services
The insurance companies and the doctors in America are arguing today that medical malpractice cases should be abolished. The doctors and the insurance companies want to take these cases out of the court system to be decided by some type of arbitration committee where the odds would lie in the insurance company's and the doctor's favor.

J.B. SPENCE

This is wrong; doctors are not entitled to this kind of immunity. They should be held responsible for their wrongdoing just as every other citizen is. Immunity from fault breeds irresponsibility. The Association of American Trial Lawyers believes the primary consideration is the patient's welfare and his legal rights should be protected. Allowing the doctors to erect a wall of immunity is unfair to their patients.

There are many factors contributing to the present problem:

There is a shortage of doctors. More people can now afford good medical care and are going to the doctor and to the hospital. We live in an age of specialization. Doctors do not develop a personal relationship with their patients. The doctor is too busy, too brief and too businesslike; this creates an animosity that causes the patient to seek relief in court when he is injured.

There are many excellent and conscientious physicians. But there are also a number of doctors and hospitals who are sued repeatedly because of their failure to practice good medicine.

We should have more doctors, more medical schools, more paramedics and more nurses. This would relieve the congestion and allow medical personnel to give better care.

We need to develop an injuries prevention program. We need statistics to investigate and analyze the frequency and cause of medical injuries, and we need a program to eliminate the major causes of medical injuries.

Another phase of the problem needing detailed exploration is the structure of the medical malpractice insurance companies. How fair are their

Today the same physician has to pay $4,000 or $5,000 a year for insurance protection. However, his income is now $100,000 or $150,000 per year.

We think that the insurance commissioners in the respective states should gather statistics to show the number of claims and the true ratio of insurance premiums to losses paid.

The insurance companies and the doctors who pay the insurance premiums would like to abolish the contingency fee system which offers the client an alternative between paying his attorney an hourly rate or a percentage of the ultimate settlement. The abolishment of the contingency fee would indeed abolish medical malpractice cases because only a wealthy person could retain a lawyer to handle his case.

The move to abolish the contingency fee comes straight from the medical malpractice insurance companies and their clients, the doctors. It is a strenuous effort to grant the medical community immunity from suits and a free ride for their medical carelessness.

The medical community must begin to clean its own house. There must be more peer review, more honest fact finding studies, medical education must be up-dated and physicians recertified once a year just as airline pilots are. Methods must be devised to make the physicians study the current literature in order to stay abreast of new developments. All state boards of medical examiners should include lay members as well as several attorneys.

However, medical malpractice carriers don't compete. One company will write the coverage for all of the doctors in one state. Policies should be available from competing companies so that physicians and hospitals would have the benefit of competition.

For years a doctor was able to buy insurance for several hundred dollars a year at a time when doctors were making an average of $25,000 a year.

A short course in saving money on long distance.

There's more than one way to save money on long distance phone calls. You just have to know the facts. Here are 4 easy ways to make every call a bargain.

Money-Saving Fact #1 THE EVENING RATE After 5 P.M. Sunday through Friday, you can dial anywhere in the whole country (except Alaska and Hawaii) for 3 minutes for just 85¢ or less, plus tax.	Money-Saving Fact #2 THE WEEKEND RATE The Weekend Rates are even lower than evening rates. They're in effect from 8 A.M. till 11 P.M. on Saturday, and 8 A.M. till 5 P.M. on Sunday.
Money-Saving Fact #3 THE LATE NIGHT RATE This very special rate is in effect from 11 P.M. till 8 A.M. every night of the week and is lower than the evening rate. You can dial direct anywhere in the whole country (except Alaska and Hawaii) for 3 minutes for just 75¢ or less, plus tax. A special feature of the Late Night Rate is the "Mighty Minute." You can talk for one minute and it will never cost more than 35¢ plus tax.	Money-Saving Fact #4 DIRECT DIALING Here's the most important fact of all. When you dial direct, you'll always save, no matter when you call. In fact, all of these special low rates apply only if you dial your own long distance calls without an operator's assistance. (The only time low direct-dial rates do not apply is on operator-assisted calls such as coin, credit card, person-to-person, collect, hotel-guest calls or calls charged to a third number.)

Cooking Pointers Suggested For Sugar Substitute

As of this date, the price of sugar has increased several-fold. Many people are trying to use other sweeteners instead of granulated sugar. Some pointers are included herein to suggest ways of making such substitutions.

Sugar performs many functions in cooking besides adding sweetness and enhancing flavors. These functions should be of primary consideration when making substitutions. For example, the type and amount of sweetener in cakes will affect the eating quality: tenderness, texture, moisture, and flavor.

The type and amount of sweetener will also affect the appearance of the cake: volume, crust, and crumb. Therefore, any change in the type and amount of sweetener can cause some change in both eating quality and appearance of cakes.

When making substitutions, another main factor to consider is the relationship of one ingredient to another.

Please note: A change in the amount or type of one ingredient may need to be balanced by correcting the amount or type of some other ingredients in the recipe. For example, when honey is substituted for the sugar in baked products, some corrections may be necessary for the liquid and in some recipes for the leavening agent. Why are such corrections necessary? Corrections will lessen the amount of change in the final product and/or prevent a total "flap." Specifically, in regards to the preceding example, honey has a much higher moisture content than granulated sugar, thus the need to adjust the liquid.

The original recipe used baking powder and sweet milk instead of baking soda and buttermilk or some other acid containing liquid, the leavening agent is adjusted because of the acid in the honey. Baking soda is used when the mixture contains acid ingredients; for example, buttermilk, molasses, chocolate, honey, fruit or fruit juices. Use the same amount of sour milk as sweet milk called for in the recipe, and substitute one-fourth teaspoon of baking soda for each teaspoon of baking powder.

Honey can be substituted for sugar in baked products by following these procedures:

- Reduce amount of liquid by ¼ cup
- Add a half teaspoon baking soda for each cup honey
- Bake at a lower temperature — about 25 degrees lower.

Honey contains some fructose, which is one-fifth sweeter than granulated sugar.

Uncooked foods made with honey are slightly sweeter, have more color, and a different texture from those made with sugar. Baked goods remain soft as honey absorbs moisture from the air. Candies and meringues made with honey may absorb excess moisture making them soft and sticky. Freezing intensifies the honey flavor in baked products. For best results when using honey in cooking and baking, follow recipes especially designed for honey.

Some people may prefer to decrease the amount of sugar instead of using another sweetener. It is best to decrease all the ingredients, i.e., make a smaller amount of candy or frosting. In the case of baked goods, just expect these slight changes: decrease in volume, decrease in moisture, texture not as "light" or "velvety," decrease in sweetness — which is advantageous to some tastes that prefer less sweetness. Note: The decrease in calories is an extra bonus.

Naturally, the degree of change is dependent on how much you decrease the sugar in the recipe. It will be safe to use about ¼ or one-fifth less than the amount given in the recipe. For example, in a recipe requiring ¼ cups of sugar, use one cup.

If the decrease is too drastic, the end product will be more like a quick bread than a cake or cookie.

Sweetening equivalents as stated on the container differ among these products. For cooking and baking use recipes especially designed for their use. Remember they don't have the preservative qualities of sugar.

As of this date, expect other sweeteners to be as expensive as granulated sugar. Other sweeteners include brown sugar, honey, molasses, corn SYRUP, etc. Traditionally, these sweeteners, unit for unit, have been more expensive than granulated sugar. Unless you already have quantities of these on hand, it is probably just as expensive — if not more — to substitute other sweeteners for the sugar in your recipes. Also, depending on your family's preferences, the eating quality may not reach their expectations and they may not eat the product. In that case, you would be creating an even more expensive situation due to the total waste of the product.

SANDIES
1 cup butter or margarine
One-third cup sifted confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup finely chopped nuts
Confectioners' sugar to roll cookies in
Have all ingredients at room temperature. Cream the butter or margarine until it is soft. Add the sugar and vanilla and cream until thoroughly mixed. Sift the flour before measuring.

SNOWBALL FUDGE CAKE
2 cups sifted cake flour

Add the chopped nuts and mix until blended. Roll the dough into 1-inch balls; place ½ inch apart on ungreased baking sheets. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees F., for 10 to 12 minutes or until the balls are set, but not brown. While the cookies are still warm, roll them in confectioners' sugar, cool and roll in confectioners' sugar again, if desired.

FRUITING: Beat 2 egg whites with ¼ teaspoon salt until stiff enough to hold up in peaks. Pour 1 cup honey in fine stream over egg white, beating constantly until frosting holds shape (3 to 4 minutes). Frost cake generously; sprinkle with 1 cup shredded coconut or other nuts.

Walnut Candybar Cookies Top Recipe

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

The best cookie recipe we've come across this year is delightfully crunchy because finely chopped walnuts go into the dough. At our house, layered between sheets of wax paper in a tightly closed tin box, the cookies stayed crisp and fresh lasting for weeks. Their chocolate glaze held up well. Though the cookies are deliciously sweet, only half a cup of brown sugar is called for.

WALNUT CANDYBAR COOKIES
¾ cup walnuts
¾ cup butter or margarine, softened
¾ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1 ½ cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt

1 ½ teaspoon vanilla
Chocolate Glaze, see below
Set aside 21 halves or large pieces of walnuts; finely chop the remaining nuts. Blend the butter, sugar, flour, salt and vanilla to make a stiff dough; stir in the chopped walnuts. Shape into a rectangle and, if necessary to have dough firm enough for rolling out, chill. On a prepared pastry cloth with a prepared stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out dough to a 12½ by 9½ inch rectangle. Cut in thirds on 9½-inch side (each third 3¼ inches wide) and in 7 slices (each 1¼ inches wide) along 12½-inch side. With a wide metal spatula, lift onto ungreased cookie sheet, placing about 1 inch apart. Press a walnut half or piece on center of each. Bake on rack above center in a preheated 350-degree oven until very lightly browned — about 15 minutes. Let stand on cookie sheet for 3 or 4 minutes, then remove with wide metal spatula and place on wire rack set over a sheet of wax paper. While cookies are still warm, spread with Chocolate Glaze, but do not cover nut garnish. Let stand until Glaze is thoroughly dry before serving or storing. Makes 21 large cookies.

Chocolate Glaze: Melt 1 tablespoon butter or margarine; stir in 1 tablespoon unsweetened cocoa, 2 teaspoons boiling

Tartar Sauce Adapted

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Tartar sauce, the accompaniment Americans enjoy so much with fried scallops and fish filets, was probably adapted from the French Sauce Tartare from the French Sauce Tartare. In our own innovative fashion, we've made changes in the original recipe.

According to Larousse Gastronomique, the great French culinary encyclopedia, Sauce Tartare is made with mayonnaise, hard-cooked egg yolks and chopped chives. American cooks have kept the mayonnaise base but they have certainly changed the additions. In most recipes for the sauce as it is made in the United States, neither the hard-cooked egg yolks nor the chives are called for.

One of the earliest recipes for the sauce comes from the "Cooking School Text Book and Housekeeper's Guide" by Juliet Corson, published in the late 1870s. To about half a cup of mayonnaise Miss Corson added a tablespoon each of chopped parsley, capers and gherkin and a teaspoon of chopped onion.

In 1886, when Fannie Farmer's "Boston Cooking School Cook Book" appeared, she too gave a recipe for the sauce but hers differed from Miss Corson's. Fannie included Juliet's parsley and capers, but she called for pickles rather than gherkins, shallot rather than onion and added olives and tarragon.

Although I do not conduct a cooking school as did both Miss Corson (in New York City) and Miss Farmer (in Boston, of course), I've just concocted a new version of Tartar Sauce — one all my ladies have enjoyed. Instead of using only mayonnaise as the base, I combined it with yogurt. And since Juliet called for gherkins and Fannie called for pickles, I used both pickle relish and chopped sour pickles. Juliet's shallots go into my sauce, but I've bowed to Boston in adding olives.

I dreamed up my Yogurt Tartar Sauce after coming on a release from the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture that cited yogurt as the "fastest growing fluid milk product" in the United States. Further, "the average American now eats three times more yogurt than he or she did five years ago." With those figures under my belt, I decided that what many readers of this column might be waiting for was Yogurt Tartar Sauce.

By the way, Yogurt Tartar Sauce is good to use lots of other ways besides accompanying fried scallops and fish filets. For example, it's great for sardine sandwiches. To make these, I lift sardines from the can and layer them on slices of buttered bread, then spread generously with the Yogurt Tartar Sauce, add layer-lettuce and top with buttered bread. Really quite the best sardine sandwiches I've ever concocted!

YOGURT TARTAR SAUCE
¼ cup real mayonnaise
¼ cup finely chopped green olives
¼ cup finely chopped sour pickles
¼ cup sweet pickle relish
2 tablespoons minced onion
8-ounce container plain yogurt (1 cup)
Stir together the mayonnaise, olives, sour pickle, pickle relish and onion; fold in yogurt. Cover and chill. Makes about 2 cups. Keeps well.

Hi friends, George and I are celebrating our 23rd year in business in the Orlando area. Times have changed a lot since that time. Twenty-three years ago we could and often did speak to many of you personally. Now, with 12 stores, it is no longer practical. That is why we are starting this little weekly newspaper dialogue about food. We hope you will write us your thoughts. Lets chat. PETE

Rosenwald Recount Asked

By ED PRICKETT Herald Staff Writer

School Supt. Bud Laver has written Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington asking for a new head count at Rosenwald Elementary School in hopes of saving $67,000 in state funds.

Seminole school officials fear the county will lose the $67,000 because of a three-week boycott at Rosenwald that saw students absent from classes during the FTE count period.

Dated March 5, Laver's letter says: "A three-week boycott has just ended at the Rosenwald School in Altamonte Springs. None of those involved were in attendance the preceding six days to and the five days of the FTE count period.

"The cost to Seminole County is estimated to amount to $67,000 — which is no insignificant sum. I am requesting that you establish an alternate date for a count at this school."

Laver's request follows an observation by Asst. School Supt. Roger Harris that state regulations call for a recount only if the number of FTE's constitute a five per cent discrepancy district-wide.

And Harris said yesterday he's "not optimistic" that Seminole County will receive the $67,000 because regulations state the discrepancy must be countywide and not "one individual school."

However, the possibility does exist that Turlington can grant an exception at Rosenwald and allow this county its much-needed state funds.

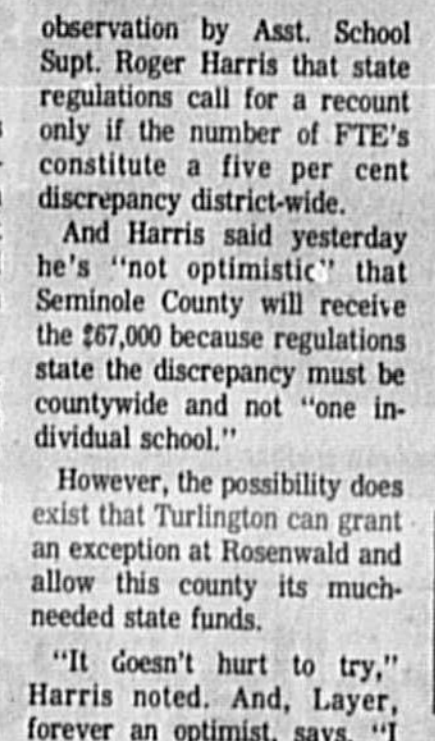

"It doesn't hurt to try," Harris noted. And, Laver, forever an optimist, says, "I hope so. I think they will. I'm always optimistic."

Educators still are assessing the boycott and its effect. As for the three weeks missed by the school's 207 black children, Harris feels there's no way to assess that loss.

"We can't come up with that. There's just no way. Even the $67,000 is insignificant compared to the loss to each individual child. If you lose three weeks, you can't ever get them back," the veteran administrator noted.

Also, Laver advised the school board yesterday of the status of the FBI investigation that is presently being conducted in Seminole County.

Laver said FBI agents

posed to the loss to each individual child. If you lose three weeks, you can't ever get them back," the veteran administrator noted.

Also, Laver advised the school board yesterday of the status of the FBI investigation that is presently being conducted in Seminole County.

Laver said FBI agents showed up at his office Monday. He said agents requested a "lengthy list" of information which is being prepared and will be sent to the U.S. Justice Department.

The request for an investigation came from a Rosenwald parent, James Gadsden, who sent a telegram to Washington requesting help from justice officials in the Rosenwald parents' fight against a school board decision to close the school.

School officials have voted to close the facility and turn it into a center for handicapped children. That move is expected to take place next fall.

But blacks fought the move, first by boycotting Rosenwald and later by initiating a three-day countywide boycott which saw an estimated 85 to 90 per cent of Seminole's 5,000 blacks absent from the classroom.

And when the school board still failed to budge, three Rosenwald parents, Gadsden, Herbert Felder and Mrs. Coala Reiford filed a suit in federal court contending the closout places the burden only on black students.

The three parents claim in the suit that the phasout is a violation of U.S. District Court Judge George C. Young's 1970 integration order for Seminole County schools.

In Young's order, he approved an agreement between the school system and justice department officials calling for a 35 per cent white and 65 per cent black student population at Rosenwald.

The controversial school board decision was made Feb. 12. Blacks contend Laver and school board members ignored a "minority white paper" issued by the Rosenwald faction and chose instead to bus blacks to Casselberry Elementary.

Now, Casselberry residents say that decision may be illegal because the system must bus past three other schools en route to Casselberry from Rosenwald.

Seniors May Lose $40,000 Grant

A program for Seminole County's 10,000 senior citizens stands to lose its $40,000 federal grant unless a sponsor can be located which will allow the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) to retain its program.

Yesterday Rev. William Pickett appealed to the Seminole County School Board to act as sponsoring agent after RSVP was dropped last month by Seminole Junior College (SJC).

Program Director Gwen Edelman said the agency provides seniors with that most important item — volunteer jobs, which are treasured by citizens who have passed that magic numerical age when corporations seek their services.

SJC President Earl Weldon said SJC was forced to drop the program because of a "strategic reduction" in the college's operating budget. But Weldon highly recommended another county agency adopt the program.

"I certainly feel there is a need for the RSVP program, and hope that a sponsor can be found immediately. I recommend, unhesitatingly, the program, its work, and its local administration to any potential sponsor," Weldon said in a letter.

And Pickett, a minister at the Community United Methodist Church in Casselberry, said more than 150 seniors have contributed more than 20,000 hours to public supported institutions in Seminole County, since RSVP got underway two years ago.

Calling it a "solid, firm — well-run program," Ms. Edelman said the grant ends May 31 and she must get the new application in "as soon as possible."

She said the county school system would only be able to provide about $750 in cash and the remainder of the matching funds can be in-kind services such as space, an office and other related items.

School officials appeared receptive to the program. Similar programs are sponsored by school boards in other areas of the country. School Supt. Bud Laver was instructed to make a recommendation at next Wednesday's board meeting.

Some of the services seniors provide include collecting tickets for Central Florida Zoo, tutoring, teachers aides, clinical aides, office and secretarial work for community agencies, sewing for hospitals, work in nursing homes and Head Start and providing crafts and visual aids for schools.

Also calls to shut-ins for sheriff's department, library aides, feeding of nursing home patients, vital testing in public schools, answering call board at Florida North Hospital, panel discussions on aging for high schools and colleges and mail-outs for community agencies.

Also seniors are aides for SJC sewing classes, sales men and women for thrift shops and have designed patio and playground equipment for the county's Head Start Program.

LAST CROP OF CELERY?

Field workers on this mobile packing unit — better known as a "mule train" — line up celery to be trimmed, washed and crated in the fields of W. W. Tyre and Son Celery Farm on East Celery Avenue, Sanford. Tyre is the last remaining celery grower in Sanford (known as Celery City during the crop's heyday) and chances are, with production costs soaring out of sight, this will be the last celery crop from his farm. Notice that while the "assembly line" workers are busily preparing the celery, the mule train driver samples the fruit of the harvest. (Herald Photo by Lisa Vincenzi)

Crooms High Called 'Holding Cell' For School Dropouts

Calling Crooms High School a "holding cell for potential dropouts," a PTA president has asked school officials for $23,000 for repairs and replacement of an old building "where cockroaches live."

School Board member Allan Keeth said Crooms is the "most deplorable thing this county has. I'm ashamed of it." He pledged to at least get new lockers for students and do something about a ditch that runs nearby the facility.

Board Chairman R. G. "Bud" Feather agreed the "burden rests with us" and called for a recommendation from School Supt. Bud Laver at next week's school board meeting.

Keeth also admonished the school's principal, E. L. Blacksheare to "scream and holler" to get things done at the ninth grade center which is the only such facility in the county.

"I look to you to scream and holler," Keeth told Blacksheare. "My observation is other principals who scream and holler get things done."

An estimated 787 students are enrolled at Crooms, 40 per cent of whom are black.

The plea for help came from PTA President George Willis who called the facility "very inadequate."

Willis said the PTA doesn't have the necessary funds to make the repairs. He said the faculty members just "tolerate conditions" at the Sanford School.

He asked school officials to "fill and grade" the ditch and try and get some funds to provide security personnel at the facility to prevent continuing destruction of school property.

Willis said he's heard people refer to Crooms as a "holding cell for potential dropouts" and said faculty members say cockroaches live in one of the school's ancient classroom buildings.

He said students are there one year then go on to Seminole High School, but the faculty continues at the facility year after year.

He recommended replacing the old frame building with portables, replacing fixtures in bathrooms, replacing lights in the library, add new furniture and air conditioning to the cafeteria, put lockers in the boy's gym and install the proper security.

Board Member Davis Sims agreed conditions at Crooms were "deplorable" and seconded Feather's request for a recommendation from Laver.

The school superintendent promised a report by next Wednesday's board meeting.

Action Orlando Donation Stalled

By MICKEY LOCHRIDGE Herald Staff Writer

The Industrial '25' Committee of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce ran into a wall this morning as to what to do with a $1,000 contribution to the Action Orlando advertising campaign.

A subcommittee recommended to the full '25' committee that the $1,000 be taken from the total $7,500 budget of the committee for use in the Action Orlando program to enable Seminole County a stronger influence on the campaign, which is to promote the entire Orlando area over a three year period.

But opposition voiced by Jack Horner, executive manager of the chamber, that the donation would be too great a cut in the committee's total budget, caused Committee Chairman John Krider to send the issue to a finance committee for investigation on the impact the donation would have on the budget.

A vote on the subcommittee's recommendation fell on undecided ears, when among the more than 20 members in attendance provided only five pro votes and four against the resolution.

Garnett White suggested that prior to the next monthly meeting of the committee, that the Sanford City Commission be requested to fund the $1,000 as a special project of the chamber.

Krider appointed a committee, headed by Jim Ryan, to examine the listing of 84 industries to determine which industries would be the best suited for locating a plant in Sanford.

Langwood became Seminole County's First Bicentennial City Wednesday when the Bicentennial Flag was presented to fly over city hall in a special ceremony. Longwood School File and Drum Corps played patriotic selections and Longwood Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 5287 raised the new flag. Need Animal? How About Hog

By BILL BELLEVILLE Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County's two month-old Animal Control Ordinance is generating all kinds of action for Animal Welfare Officer Bruce Clark.

In fact, the unexpected presence of many large animals who are running loose and picked up by Animal Welfare Control, has created a need for a corral. Clark okayed the corral with county commissioners Tuesday night, telling them that the 200-square foot enclosure was necessary. "We just had more large animals than we thought we would," Clark explained.

Clark's office has handled 27 large animals since Jan. 1, and all but three penies have been returned to their owners. All the animals had been creating hazards on various highways.

And the office has had their share of off-beat critters too. "We've had raccoons, a skunk-at-large, and peacocks," Clark said the skunk and peacocks will be placed in the yet-to-be-opened Central Florida Zoo.

There's a five-day deadline on claiming pets, Clark explains, but he often extends the period if the animal appears to belong to someone and is not merely a stray.

"About 15 per cent of all our animals are reclaimed by the owners," Clark says. Another 60 per cent are adopted, and some owners of pedigree pets even bring their charges to Clark to have them put up for adoption. The remainder of the animals—most of them unclaimed dogs and cats — are destroyed.

It costs $2.50 to $5 to adopt a pet. To reclaim pets, the first time pick-up cost under the ordinance is $5, plus $3 a day for room and board. Second and third time pick-up charges are $10 and $25, with an additional $10 fee if the animal is a "female in heat."

Presently, there are 42 dogs, 25 cats, a "big" hog, and a vicious rabbit at the compound.

Both the rabbit and the hog "I mean a BIG hog," Clark says) are being quarantined for 10 days underwhite state because they bit someone.

The 275-pound boar hog was being kept as a pet in Altamonte Springs, but he kept repeatedly breaking out of his pen and chasing neighbors. Last week the hog broke out again and began
