Downtown displays Sanford to air lifting outdoor restrictions

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Two weeks ago, a select group of downtown Sanford merchants requested the city commission to consider lifting restrictions on outdoor displays. This afternoon, the commission will begin discussions on responding to those requests during a work session.

Sara Jacobson, represeiting a group called Sanford Advertising Co-Op, addressed the commission during the Feb. 13 meeting. She suggested stores in the downtown historic district should be allowed to "further enhance our physical appearance." by being allowed to place small antique and collectible items in front of their storefronts. and intrigue to the streetscape," she said. Since that time, various city officials and department heads have been studying the proposal, and are prepared to discuss the matter. Director of Community Development Charles

Rowe has studied historic district restrictions in other cities of Central Florida, especially those with large numbers of antique dealers.

He found that Winter Park allowed outdoor displays by merchants three times a year for three-day periods fied to specific city-wide events. Mount Dora does not allow any outside display of merchandise on public property with no exceptions.

DeLand allows sandwich signs on public walkways without a permit, but outside displays of merchandise is not allowed. Rowe found that while some merchants may be violating the rule and displaying their liems on public walkways, the city has not received any complaints, and

Last week Shupe, principal of Lakeview, was invited to attend a workshop in Tallahassee with 15 of the most innovative middle schools in the state. Schools where they are "breaking the mold" and doing great things with students that others may have given up on.

Lakeview is one of the best success stories in the state, Shupe noted.

The staff is committed to change, he said. They will do what it takes to make the school a better place to learn.

At the Sanford school, many of the students are classified as "at risk." The Majority of the areas in Seminole County which are designated as "low income" are in the school's attendance area, approximately 50 percent of the students are from single parent homes, 58 percent of the students are and free or reduced fee lunch programs and more than half arrive at the school reading at a level below their grade.

"Still, we are seeing test scores increase," Shupe said.

During the 1993-94 school year, the students' scores on the CTBS (California Test of Basic Skills) tests were up in all areas. The reading score was up 15 points to 55; the score in language arts was up eight points to 53;

Slavery key factor in Florida's statehood Associated Press Writer TALLAHASSEE - Slavery was the central issue in Florida's statehood, delaying its admission to the Union and hastening its departure. With most of its 60,000 residents hugging the coast or battling mosquitoes, Florida became the 27th state 150 years ago Friday. As a slave territory, Florida's admission was postponed until it could be paired with a new free state to keep a balance between the two factions in Congress.

That was done through passage of the lowa-Florida Bill in 1845. Florida was admitted on March 3, 1845, when President John Tyler signed the bill in one of the final acts on his last day in office. A boundary dispute, however, delayed lowa's admission until Dec. 28, 1846.

Almost half of Florida's population was black and only about 1,000 were free by the time the Civil War began.

"The state really worked hard to get into the union in 1845 and 16 years later really worked hard to get out." said historian Jerrell Central Florida.

Statehood had been made possible by the Second Seminole War, which ended in 1842 with most of the Indians forcibly relocated to the Ozark foothills. The others were driven deep into the Everglades.

William Dunn Moseley was elected the first governor under statehood. The Legislature immediately elected David Levy Yulee of Homosassa to the U.S. Senate, making him the first person of Jewish heritage to hold that office. Immigration picked up after statehood as cotton plantations, using slave labor, flourished in North Florida.

Jacksonville and Pensacola were leading lumber ports. The seas were still the primary means of travel. The island city of Key West was for many years the state's largest.

John Gorrie, an Apalachicola physician, was granted a patent in May 1851 for his idea of artificially cooling the air. It was a forerunner to the modern-day air conditioning given credit for Florida's massive growth a century later. Gorrie came up with the idea to treat patients suffering from yellow fever.

The intensity of the slavery debate escalated in the 1850s.

Martial law was declared in Calhoun County after several people suspected of sympathising with abolitionists were murdered. Florida became th

The couple wished to talk to church officials in South Florida about O'Dowd's past, but the order was upheld by the appeals court in 1990.

O'Dowd was charged in September 1965 with lewd assault on the 12-year-old girl after she accused him of twice fondling her breasts when he was an assistant paster at St. Charles Borromeo in College Park. He later agreed to undergo counseling.

Prosecutors agreed to drop the charges in 1984 as part of a pretrial program because of "real questions" about evidence in the case, said O'Dowd's criminal lawyer, Chandler Muller of Winter Park.

Punishment, rehabilitation

In Seminole County Circuit Court Wednesday. Tyrone Terrell Carr. 23. was given a 45-year prison sentence for burglary and the brutal attack against a 76-year old woman. Expectations are that he may serve possibly 75 percent of his sentence, or about 33 years.

In handing down the sentence, Judge Newman D. Brock made a statement which may reflect the way most people think. Society is tired of habitual offenders," he

Time after time, we see the same names listed on arrest reports from local police and the Seminole County sheriff. In some cases, arrests are made within days, sometimes within hours, of a previous arrest.

We believe this constant revolving door in concept is what people must light against, Judge Brock apparently agrees.

Carr has already indicated he plans to file an appeal, so his immediate future is uncertain at this time.

This is not specifically about this case however, it's about the length of time to be spent in jail, and how it might be used.

Carr is presently 23 years of age. If he serves the expected 33 years behind bars, he will be 56 when he returns to the streets.

For a moment, let's pretend. Put yourself in this man's shoes. At age 56, you have not held a commercial job in over three decades, and probably have no skills. You have lost almost everything you own because you have been gone for such a long time. You have no place to live, no transportation, and probably no one to help get you back on your feet or even loan you a few dollars.

What is left? Return to crime. Steal, burghirtze, rob, do whitever you must to obtain money. The end result is either profit through erime, or a trip back to jail where the system will again watch out for you.

Then others will wonder why you have apparently returned to a life of crime.

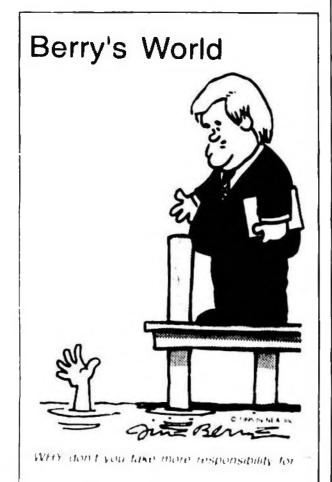

There have been many news stories recently regarding what is going on in some of our fails. Cable TV sets are being taken out. video games and other fun-and-frolic activities are being suspended, and several other changes are being made.

We see this as a good move. Now the next step is to begin some type of job training and improved education. While we firmly believe that a jail sentence is to be punishment for stimes, we also believe time served must be an opportunity for rehabilitation. People must be given an opportunity to succeed by themselves without having to resort to crime.

Give it some thought. Incarceration must bil punishment. But once the jail doors open a sentence is finished, the person must be prepared to face life among the rest of us. Let's arge continued improvements in our prison system wherever and however possi-

Nameless crimes easy to ignore

The tide of democracy has been steadily rising for years, passing one high-water mark after another in virtually every corner of the globe. That is a clicke which is also a fact.

What is just as clearly a fact is that beneath the tide are shoals which can still sink more than one newly democratic ship of state. As recent headlines make clear, prominent among them are the issues of what to do about the leftover enforcers of old tyrannies and the perpetrators of new genocides

The debates rage and subside today only to rise again in places as disparate as Argentina. and South Africa. Rwanda and Bosnia, the former East Germany and Hatti. They throb onthe surface of public life like so many angry-

Viewed abstractly, resolving them ought to be a simple matter. The world declared inunequivocal terms at the Nuremberg trials after World War II that individuals were responsible for their actions. The conviction and execution of leading Nazis (and in Japan. of major figures in the Japanese government and military) established that it was not enough to claim you were "only following orders." Crimes against humanity were added. to the list for which there were emphatic

But while the legal precedents are clear, the political reality for a number of emerging democracies in Latin America, Africa and Eastern Europe is quite different. Uncertain of their ability to stay in power without the facilcooperation of the old oppressors, even less certain of their ability to win a confrontation. with the past, leaders of many of these barely launched experiments in true self-rule have vacillated. A few have capitulated totally, offering blanket amnesty to those whose savagery was often the proximate cause of popular revolt. The nations of the world also solemnly declared after the war that genocide the deliberate mass murder of a class of people as a matter of official policy is a legally defined. etime against humanity wherever it occurs and by whomever it is perpetrated. The right to bring those accused of genocide to trial is supposedly an unequivocal one

But the international war crimes trials aimed at some of the mass minders in Bosina and Rwanda cannot disguise a more significant and profoundly dispiriting reality. While genocide has been carried out in both nations, the world's major powers refuse to say so. The reason is simple. To name the crune carries an obligation to act

In both sets of cases, the rationalizations for maction often sound quite sensible. Anniesty is said to be preferable to retribution for reasons. that range from the practical to the humans. Allowing a relative handful of goons to escape a names turns Nuo inberg on its head accountability is small price to pay for stability. Building the future is more important than grawing over the bones of the past. If retroactive pardons are the price for keeping the military in barracks and out of the presidential palace, so be it.

As for blinking at genocide, the choices are often posed in stark terms. While hundreds of thousands of people are its victims in a Bosnia. or a Rwanda.

thousands more would inadvertently die in any conflict aimed at the appropriate response to past horrors? Honest people can and do differ over the answers to both sets. of questions. In the end, however, the burden of proof is on those who would err on the side of cantion. Societies that cannot come to terms with their pasts almost invariably manage to repeat them. Lett unexposed to the glare of publicity, old crimes poison the

That is a cliche which is also a

Painful as it is, it is better to make public the full breadth of individual complicity in the vast East German secret police petwork than it is to bury the files in archives where they tick away like so many time bombs. To allow the torturers and baby killers of Argentina's "dirtywar" of the 1970s to go free advances the day when they can forture anew. The neo Nazi bully boys of the Vlakplaas, the white South African government's secret terror squad, will either be brought to justice now or they will kill again in the name of white supremacy

America's record on these matters has not been consistent. Too often, we have niged the new democrats to go easy on the criminals they overthrew, either out of a imsplaced sense of lovalty to former clients or an equally inisguided concern that accountability might reate a pool of "embittered and potentially dangerous enemies has one recent New York Times account from Haiti put it

On the subject of genocide our response has been nothing short of disgraceful. By being deticient in word and died in Bosina and Rwanda we have all but invited others to make a mockety put of the never again, your Our cautions telusal to say the word and name

Despite health craze, most still overweight

By The Associated Prese

NEW YORK — America, you may want to stick with a leafy green solad for dinner tonight. And don't even dream about creamy dressing.

A survey released today found a record 71 percent of Americans 25 and older are overweight. That's up from 69 percent last year, 64 percent in 1990 and 58 percent in 1983.

"It doesn't surprise me." Dr. JoAnn E. Manson said Sunday. "Obesity is an alarming epidemic."

The national Harris Poll asked 1.250 adults for their height and weight, and to describe their body frame or bone structure. Louis Harris and Associates Inc. then compared the answers to Metropolitan Life insurance tables for recommended weight ranges.

Doctors distinguish between overweight and obesity — a person generally isn't considered obese unless his or her weight is at least 20 percent higher than the recommended range.

Examples from Met Life's 1983 tables include the recommendation that a medium-framed 5-foot-7 man weigh 140 to 152 pounds; a woman, 133 to 147.

This survey suggests that 12 percent of Americans are between 20 percent and 30 percent overweight, and another 10 percent of adults are at least 30 percent overweight.

Other studies have found that the average American has gained eight pounds in the past decade, and that 60 percent of Americans can be classified as sedentary, said Manson, an endocrinologist at the Harvard School of Medicine.

"Everything is automated and very convenient and it's possible to spend very little energy in a typical day unless you go out of your way to exercise," Manson said.

She also cited the increasing prevalence of fast food, though ahe said people generally are cating foods with less cholesterol and fat than in the past.

Being overweight is linked to a host of debilitating health problems, including heart disease, stroke and some cancers.

The telephone survey was conducted from Feb. 6-9, and results were weighted by age, sex and other variables according to actual proportions in the population. The margin of sampling error was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The poll also found that 25 percent of American adults smoke cigarettes, a level that hasn't changed significantly since 1990. Smoking had declined at a fairly steady rate for two decades before that, said Humphrey Taylor, chairman of the Harris survey.

Also, 73 percent of respondents said they always wear seat belts in a car, a new high. Harris polls put that percentage at 19 in 1983, growing steadily ever since.

The Central Florida Renaissance Festival took place at L/L Acres Ranch in Heathrow. The festival, in its second year, was once again raising money for charities in Seminole County and throughout central Florida. Good crowds were in attendance on both Saturday and Sunday, officials said. The festival included artisans and crafters of all sorts, as well as entertainers, animals and other 15th century excitements. Among those bringing their magic to the event were Jonathan Hawes (above, left) of Cocoa, who serenaded Danielle Spivey of Merritt Island. At left, Frank Drake painstakingly created dragons from clay.

"Stone Diaries" wins top book award

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The National Book Critics Circle has awarded its 1994 fiction prize to Carol Shields' "The Stone Diaries."

It's a tender, witty portrait of an unassuming woman growing old in the 20th century.

The winner for general nonfiction was "The Rape of Europa: The Fate of Europe's Treasures in the Third Reich and the Second World War" by Lynn H. Nicholas. The book, published by Knopf, is a landmark study of the fate of Europe's paintings and other cultural treasures in Hitler's Germany.

The organization's poetry prize was awarded to Mark Rudman for "Rider" (Wesleyan University Press), a meditation on family connections and missesses

The biography award went to magazine writer Mikal Gilmore for ''Shot in the Heart'' (Doubleday), a personal narrative of his family's history of problems. He's the brother of murderer Gary Gilmore, who was executed by a firing squad in Utah in 1977.

The National Book Critics Circle comprises about 600 newspaper and magazine editors and reviewers, academics and freelance critics. The winners were chosen by its 24-member board Saturday and announced Sunday. The awards will be formally presented March 23 at New York University Law School.

The organization's criticism prize was awarded to college professor Gerald Early for "The Culture of Bruising: Essays on Prizefighting, Literature and Modern American Culture" (Ecco Press).

Board member Art Winslow said Shields' novel, published by Viking, narrowly defeated William Gaddis' "A Frolic of His Own" (Poseidon), which won the National Book Award in Nov.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Herald education reporter Vicki DeSormler is substituting for her husband, Herald sports editor Tony DeSormier, as sports columnist this week.

My daughter Genevieve has expressed an interest in being a soccer player. (At other times, she's also said she wants to be a doctor, a reporter, an actress and a princess. She's only 5, so I'm not asking for a firm committment yet.)

As a dyed-in-the-wool soccer fanatte. I'm thrilled. Her father, who was a goalkeeper on his high school team, already has gloves and kneepads to get her started.

With acute soccermanta rampant in our home, we jumped at the opportunity to see the best women soccer players in the world - the U.S. Women's National Soccer-Team, which won the World Cup of Women's Soccer four years ago — ina match near our home on Friday.

Soon after we settled into our scats at Showalter Field to watch Team USA take on the Danish national team. I realized that this is a great time for a young woman to want to be a soccer player.

When I was Genevieve's age, I was lucky to catch a soccer game on one of the quirky UHF stations in Tampa. Occasionally, if the atmospheric conditions were just right, we could pick up a game being broadcast from Mexico for maybe it was Cuba).

But, all the players were men. Later, when the NASL (North American Soccer League) brought us the Tumpa Bay Rowdles, the sport's popularity skyrocketed. Still, all the players were men.

Sure, we all loved to watch them play. Those with athletic ability even tried to play, but it wasn't until 1982 that the Florida High School Activities Association sanctioned a state playoff for girls' teams.

Still, there were no women to emulate, no female stars to whose greatness they could aspire such as would-be tennis players, swimmers, golfers, bowlers, or track stars could find on the professional or international level Today, soccer-playing girls have heroes of their own.

The chant of "Go. Michelle!" began when Oviedo's own Michelle Akers (possibly the greatest female soccer player - and one of the best players, regardless of gender - on the planet) took the field.

Girls wearing the uniforms of their respective club or high school teams shouted their admiration for Akers and her teammates and whispered among themselves how they hoped to be that good one day.

Genevieve, who often expresses her enthusiasm for people and things with paper and pen, drew a graceful soccer player as she watched the action. The player wore number 10 (Akers' number).

"That's me!" she whispered to me. "I want to be like Michelle." She cheered, too, for Mta Hamm, who had a foot in every one of the U.S. team's six goals. She asked questions about playing soccer "Just like them." And it could happen.

With some talent (which she hopefully inherited from her father and not me), a lot of practice and a continued love for the sport, she could play soccer just like them.

The women on the field Friday night are pioneers, forging a pathfor girls who are just beginning their soccer careers or who are just starting to think about it.

When they began, even a short decade or two ago, soccer was still almost exclusively a man's domain. They watched the likes of Pele and Ricky Davis and said they wanted to play like the guys. Now, young women have players of their own gender to emulate.

The U.S. Women's National Team has selected the Seminole County Sports Training Facility to use as their training home. The best in women's soccer will be in our own backyard preparing to defend their world championship.

"Can we go watch them play again?" Genevieve asked. "I like to watch them play."

Another soccer famatle is born. But now, she can see herself in her

Termites are swarming New pest spreading in nearby counties

Termite swarming is causing alarm for many local residents. The insects or their wings are being found inside on window sills and outside as they emerge from the ground. Adult termites can be distinguished from true flying ants by their thick-waists ants have an indented or "wasp-waist." Since termites feed on wood, the mere sight of the intruder causes most horsecorners to Since termites feed on wood, the mere sight of the intruder causes most homeowners to fear that their home will be destroyed. Termites are social insects that live in colonies. The most common types found in this area are drywood and subterranean. However, a relatively new pest, the Formosan, is spreading in nearby counties. At certain times of the year, usually in the spring during the daylight hours, winged adults emerge from the colonies in great numbers. This is usually when termites are first noticed. Mating occurs during these numbers. This is usually when termites are first noticed. Mating occurs during these flights and new colonies are started. The appearance of winged termites in the house is an indication of probable infectation, although individuals sometimes come in from outside. Temite wings break off shortly after their flight, and even though the actual everming is not observed, the presence of discarded wings indicate that a colony is nearby. Since termites are attracted to light, their wings are often on the floor beneath doors or windows. Peak everming periods for termites occur January through May in Florida. Winged subterranean termites emerging from the ground near the house dose not necessarily mean the house is infested, but it is a good reason to check further. Termites working in homes or other buildings usually come from colonies already established in the soil. Perhaps the termites beneath the house or in the soil nearby have been feeding on scrap lumber.

Drywood and furniture (powder-post) termites do not require contact with the soil for moisture. You may notice coffee ground-aised pellets under old furniture or around baseboards or other wood trim indoors where they have been feeding. Duranged wood often goes unnoticed: exterior surfaces usually must be removed to see the demage. However, galleries can be detected by tapping the wood every few inches with a screweriver handle. Damaged wood scuands hollow, and the handle may even break through into the galleries.

Bubterranean termites can be prevented by using approved posticides on the soil around and under the home. This treatment is required on all new construction, but unfurtunately is not always done adequately. Contractors must have the soil under concerete elabs treated, but often overlook the perimeter of the home after the backfill is pushed up to the walls. New research at the UP/IPAS Research & Education Center in Ft. Lauderdale indicates that a coarse sand barrier under slabs is effective in preventing invesion by the Permosan and other subterranean termities.

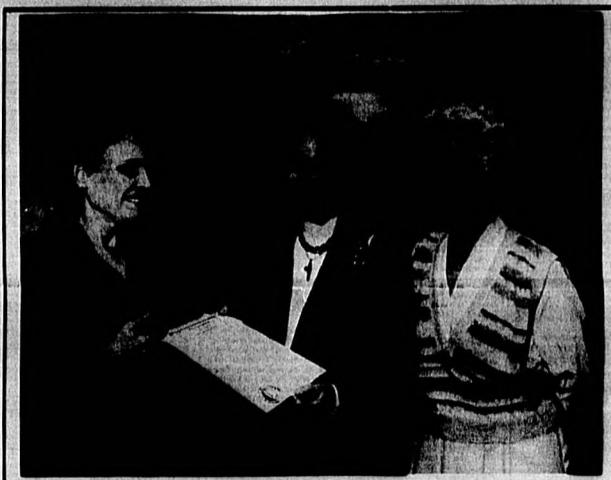

Drywood termites must be destroyed by removing the wood they infest, or in extreme cases, tenting the home.

removing the wood they infest, or in extreme cases, tenting the home.

Drywood and subterranean termites require completely different control methods: therefore correct identification is crucial. Immatures (workers) are virtually impossible to identify. If in doubt, bring several soldiers, winged specimens or wings to the Agriculture Center. Termites do not eat the house overnight. You will have time to have them identified and evaluate various control methods, but don't wait too long. Use caution when purchasing post control services. Shop around and take time to make a wise consumer decision. Get several free estimates. Have the salesman show you actual live termites and damage on your property. Simply seeing the damage does not indicate that there are live termites active now. Damage could have been caused previously and past treatment may have killed the colony. Have the salesman certify in welting that the premise or structure is infested, listing the type of pest and that a greatment is required. Read the proposed contract carefully and salt the salesman to explain parts that are unclear. Ask for a copy of the listerial Safety Data Sheet (MSDS) for your records. If you are still concerned, consult your attorney regarding what is actually covered. Some contracts cover free retreatment if the same type of pesta recocur and cause damage.
