

At The Capitol

TALLAHASSEE, July 20.—More work was done today than in the past few days. The redistricting court bill finally ran the gauntlet of many harmful amendments, with most of them being defeated, and was passed this morning. As passed it carries the circuit composed of Bradford and Seminole as they are now.

Many secret amendments leaving their present circuits as at present, the very thing that I was afraid of, and if we had not put up a stiff fight, many of them would have been successful.

The next thing taken up was the amendment tax. It passed by a very close vote, after being amended to reduce the tax somewhat.

The Senate killed the Cigarette tax bill by a vote of 22-18 after a long and hard fight.

At the time of adjournment this afternoon, the one-cent gas bill was up for consideration, its passage is doubtful.

I heard news of the most outstanding fish catches on a shore fishing expedition this week, that I believe ever passed the lips of man. I am going to fish a few of the 1931 fish on an expedition.

I think probably the price paid to do with a large fresh water trout named NERO. It is reported that this kind of trout kept guard over a school of a certain fresh water river in this way, and whenever a casting line was sent its way, he would take the fly and immediately bring off the line.

OH YEAH?

By PETER SCHAAL

Have you got time to listen to predictions? The Cardinals will meet the Daytonians in a post season series for the championship of the Central Florida Baseball League. They will do so because at the present time they're the best pitching staff in the league. Murdoch, Atkinson, and Joiner, and because when the time comes, their backers will dig down and get any other talent they might need. That one guess had they may have will mean lots later this year, and although they might not draw the best crowds in the league in a series, they will at least give the Islanders a run for their money.

Yesterday the Indians won their 16th straight game, and their fifth straight over Randle's DeLand outfit. The score was 4 to 2, and the DeLanders outlived the Indians 11 to 9. Joiner started, and went through the eighth, but was removed when the DeLanders threatened, and later scored a run. Handley, Provost, Culp and Phillips hit doubles, while Joiner a triple.

Over at Daytona, the Islanders kept punching away at the offerings of Tiger Minor of the Parkers, and, aided by the big bats of O'Brien and Spake, won a 5 to 3 game which was very interesting. Minor is the boy who pitched a no-hit 9-inning game in the 1929 high school baseball tournament. He did a good job yesterday, even if he did lose. A high wind swept across the field, and kept straggling out one of the widest breaking curves I've ever seen. It helped slow down his slow ball though, to the disgust of Mabley and Hutto, the league's greatest hitters, who got one hit between them. Spake hit a homer with one on to tie the score in the fifth, while O'Brien's third hit, a single, scored the winning run in the sixth.

The Reds were unable to unleash the savage batting attack which has been expected of them since they've taken on Sam Rogers, Pittman, and Strickland, and getting only four hits, they went down to a 3 to 1 defeat at the hands of the Saints. Despite Strickland's fine pitching performance which saw him strike out 9 men and give up three hits, none till the sixth, errors, seven of them were mainly attributable to the defeat.

In the Big Show, the Robins went into second place after wandering around rather aimlessly for the summer. They defeated the Cubs 10 to 6 in a wild and free hitting game, which saw Blason and Fredrick hit homers, among other things. Thurston went all the way for the Robins, giving up 15 hits, but, since his

The Cards upped the Giants' splenety, winning both games of a double-header by 3 to 1 on each. Well placed hits by veteran Cardinals accounted for victory in each game, and the fans in St. Louis went home, satisfied that their tribe would give a good account of itself for the rest of the summer. Otto's homer accounted for the only Giant run in the first game. The Cards got but four hits in that game, off Habbell. They got a single, triple, and double in a row in the fourth to score the two runs which listed won the game. Oddly enough all the scoring in the last game came in the sixth inning. The Giants put over one run on a base on balls, and two singles. But, the Cards came right back and scored two runs when Martin doubled as the first man up, went to third on Martin's sacrifice hit and scored on High's singles. High scored a few minutes later as Adams and Orattli singled.

The Reds and Phillies divided a double-header. The Reds came from behind, scored four runs in the ninth inning of the first game, and won it 7 to 6. But, Collins, laid them to eight hits in the second, which the Phillies won 7 to 1. Caccinello got six out of ten for the Reds in two games, while Klein got five out of nine to lead the Phillies.

In the American League, the Yanks swept a double-bill from the Browns. The first game ended 10 to 9 for the Yanks, with Lou Gehrig setting a brand new record when he drove in seven of the 10 Yank runs. He hit a triple with the sacks full, and then hit his 27th homer, with two on. Later in the game his single scored what proved to be the winning run. The Yanks won the second game 8 to 2. Gehrig drove in two runs when he hit his 28th homer in that affair, while Chapman stole two bases to give him 36 for the season.

The Senators made it two straight from the Tigers, taking a 2 to 1 decision when Lloyd Brown let them down with four hits. Brown won his own game with a single in the fifth. He would have had a shut-out but an error by Cronin let a run come over.

Rothrock's single, scoring Warstler, gave the Red Sox a 6 to 5 decision over the Indians at the end of the 12th inning yesterday. That made it two straight for the Sox who have climbed from last to sixth place in five games. Wilcy Moore pitched great relief ball after Jack Russell was unable to hold a five run lead which his mates had earned.

Before we quit for the day, we've got to tell you about our Ben Cantwell's fine pitching performance of Saturday afternoon. Ben went out and won a 1 to 0 decision over the Pirates in the second game of a double-header. He gave up exactly six hits, and kept the Pirates heavy hitters, Grantham, Traynor and P. Wapner with-

Washington that he agreed with President Hoover's view that economic rehabilitation of Europe would help solve American farmers' problems.

Washington also announced that Secretary Stimson had telephoned "an optimistic view of the London conference."

F.A.R.I.S., July 29.—(A.P.)—France and Germany have agreed to collaborate on Germany's pressing economic problem.

That is the constructive and at the same time set result of talks which French and German statesmen have had in Paris. They left yesterday, probably on the same train, to attend a London conference.

It was announced officially that the French delegation, consisting of Premier Laval, Foreign Minister Briand, Finance Minister Flandin, Budget Minister Pietri and Andre Francois-Poncet, under secretary for national economy, left Paris at 10 A. M. Sunday for London.

There they are to resume with America and British representatives and ministers of other nations consideration of the all-weighty problem of how to save Germany from financial collapse, and prevent undesirable financial and economic conditions in other countries as a repercussion of German distress.

France recognizes the gravity of the German crisis and went to London ready to discuss financial cooperation with Germany, provided guarantees are assured and provided Germany will decline a political truce and agree to abstain from certain political acts which France considers injurious to amicable relations.

now," he added, "and has shown that it shares the common father's grief with universal sympathy and true filial affection."

Expressing grief for the "blow struck at the church through its youth" the pontiff launched into the need for a miracle. "The first one we should have," he said, "is that which the Bible places first in enumerating the miracles of our Lord—a miracle that the blind may see, and that those may see who do not hear, do not understand and do not comprehend. This is a world of great compassion, because perhaps no one has taught them that of which they are ignorant. Perhaps they are not like us in having the opportunity of knowing, studying and appreciating the truth that we know."

"Therefore," there should be impressed upon them the moral necessity of not speaking of that of which they do not know, and not pronouncing judgment on that of which they are ignorant."

Is England Friendly?

Considerable interest has been aroused in London with the recent publication of letters by various persons taking sides in a controversy following a communicated comment in "The Daily Telegraph" from an American woman who deplored what she calls British unfriendliness to the United States and its citizens. She declares that upper class tourists to the British Isles are returning home with the impression that all Britishers look upon Americans with a disparaging attitude. She recites the policy of the English press of printing all it can about gangsters, murders, graft, and everything unfavorable to this country, apparently with the intention of holding it up to as much ridicule as possible.

Naturally impressions of a foreign country are necessarily based upon one's limited experiences. It may have been that the woman complainant was unfortunate in her acquaintances and activities and that she unwittingly encountered more of her share of unpleasant people, of whom we are sure, every country has its portion. Or it may have been that she was overly sensitive or that she was completely wrong in her judgment. At all events, it is pleasant to know that another American, a graduate of Annapolis, who has lived in London many years, expresses a different opinion.

He describes as ridiculous the belief that there is any general campaign of animosity towards the United States, and declares that the Englishman is our best friend and that nowhere else in the world will an American get a squarer deal or more evidences of appreciation than in England. He admits that Britishers have their jokes about America but insists that they are not malicious. Thus we have an opposite view on the subject, tending somewhat, at least, to cast a doubt on the correctness of the assertion that England is always libeling America.

But even if this were so we can't understand why an American should be so concerned about it. A visiting John Bull's tall has always been a national pastime in this country. We have our jokes about the Britisher's dumbness, his inability to see a joke, his monotic and his broad "A" accent. Our films, when portraying an Englishman, invariably picture him as a perfumed dandy dancing around like a rubber ball. We also have our illustrations of public men like William Hale Thompson, ex-mayor of our second greatest city, denouncing England from his king down to its last cockney.

There are always people trying their best to stir up ill will between nations, but the sensible people of England like the sensible people of America realize that we are all the same under the skin, and that a gentleman from Maryland is hardly distinguishable from a gentleman from Park Avenue, or that a miner in Wales has the same ideals, hopes, and aspirations as the miner in Pennsylvania.

The Billboard Menace

The evils of roadside billboards have been shouted to the public for many years, still no action is taken which can put a stop to the practice of lining the highways with these unsightly displays which mar the landscape. There is a place for everything but certainly the roads of this state are not the place for proclaiming national products on wooden slabs done in water colors of brilliant hues. But, as the Pensacola Journal points out, the only way possible to curb the menace seems to be by taxation of dynamite. It goes on to say:

"The American Nature Association recently issued for the National Council for the Protection of Roadside Beauty a little booklet surveying the roadides of California—ones of a series of surveys which so far have covered five other states. It is a discouraging, but useful little pamphlet.

"California has much natural beauty. Furthermore, California's citizens are eager to make their roads as attractive as possible, and have spent a great deal of money in beautifying them, planting long stretches of trees and shrubs to hide scars of construction or relieve monotonous vistas.

"But the booklet contains some dismal pictures. We see beautiful Mount Shasta, for instance, rising above a long row of blatant billboards. We see huge advertising signs flanking a road that leads to another snow-capped mountain. We see another sign rearing its ugliness in front of a state-planted grove of trees along another highway. We see one stretch of road containing 14 billboards in a fifth of a mile. We see billboards erected at dangerous curves, where there should be nothing to distract the motorist's attention from the roadway. We see miserable, sign-dotted filling station sheds in and near national forests.

"What are we to do about this problem anyway? It seems almost impossible to devise laws that will cover it. Not even the enlightened attitude of California's citizens has saved the state from billboards. Public sentiment so far seems to be powerless.

"The only remedy, it may be, is to keep harping on the subject until every motorist takes each billboard as a personal insult. That might get results and save the scenery."

THE ABOMINATION IN RUSSIA

ST. PETERSBURG INDEPENDENT

If conditions in Russia under the Stalin five-year plan are only half as terrible as is indicated by Mrs. Eve Garrett's articles, they should still be terrible enough to shock civilization to a realization that one of the greatest abominations of all times is being perpetrated in that country.

It is almost unbelievable that in this age there could exist such a thing as a despotic tyrant. He who which undoubtedly prevails in Russia, were the horror of the "Hollands" of the present day.

HELLO SAM, I HEAR BUSINESS IS BAD!

THE PETTING PROBLEM

MIAMI DAILY NEWS

A murder mystery at Lima, Ohio, goes back to one of the city's "lover's lanes," or petting parks. Here youth resorted in its automobiles for its courting, and thither, came blackmailers, it is surmised, to extort the price of silence for what prying eyes might claim to have seen. This is no new thing. There has been much talk of official blackmail by money-hungry constables upon persons who made patrons for petting purposes of the more remote roadides.

Since people quit living in houses and took themselves to cubby holes the courting problem has become acute. The fact is recognized in all large cities, and in Europe no less than in America. The public parks have been opened to the courting activities of the millions who no longer possess patners. A Long ago part on a Sunday afternoon presents a scene of couculating lovers, and American parks are not much behind. But there remains in the world, hard belied as it has become, some of the old dislike for high publicity for the private affair of the heart. People who are not actors shrink from making love on a lime-lighted stage. Hence, the modern lover's lane with its parked cars—and its official and unofficial blackmailers.

We hear of a Massachusetts minister who, in an effort to solve the problem which this petting, has opened his church to petting. This privilege has been abused, as privileges so often are. The minister found his church too much encumbered with empty home-brew bottles and the experiment has been abandoned. Of old, lovers could go walking. There were roundabout paths through wooded aisles to stir their muses. Paths are now of the past. The self-absorbed lover who took to the highway afoot would quickly be under the wheels of the self-absorbed lover who took to the highway a wheel.

It's a real problem, and no solution in sight.

REVIVAL OF THE EATING HABIT

NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE

The reports on the moral, economic and economic aspects of the restaurant business made by the managers of those local eating places, which have experimented with the unlimited 60-cent menu, "what you want and all for want" at this fixed price, are not only illuminating, but also suggestive of a new era in the eating habit.

But that aspect of the experiment which appears as a happy augury for contemporary civilization and which seems to promise a renaissance of a hearty custom of other years is the fact that under the 60-cent regime, restaurant patrons are eating larger lunches and are taking longer to do it. No longer do they wolf a lunch consisting of limp paper pretzels and wash it down with a bottle of cold beer. They stand in a crowd of other lunchers suggestive of subway patrons at the rush hour. They now need more clock than they used to, and are more interested in the quality of their food than in the quantity.

It is interesting to note that there have been no reports of hostility, no threats, and no intimidating moves. On both sides there is confidence in the World Court, and an expressed readiness to abide by a decision of that body. In this the world case seems to be treated as an example of Scandinavia's modern method of handling a dispute. For the World Court it is another opportunity to prove that a veiling question which has remained open for centuries can be settled satisfactorily.

Two fish were reported in the small fish tournament being sponsored by the chamber of commerce today. John Diney caught a 17 1/2 pound silver perch, and Victor Brown entered a 7 1/2 pound silver perch. Both are the largest so far caught in their respective divisions.—Fort Myers Press.

Norwegians Invoke The World Court

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

The recent action of a party of Norwegian hunters in planting the flag of their country over a portion of eastern Greenland, and the consequent action of the United States Government, seem up to the date of the planting of the flag, to have been in that order of precedence of the United States Government.

ENGLISH FOR ANGLO-SAXONS

THE MIAMI HERALD

An editorial writer in The New York Times has suggested that the reason for Yale's recent decision against Latin may be due to the length of time which the classics are taught in America. A reader suggests that the same reason might account for the lack of knowledge among college students and graduates of their own language.

No college has as yet ruled out the teaching of English, though some of them have subsequently ruled out the hearing of it by input and automatic methods of presenting the subject. High schools are liable to the same complaint. Grade schools are likewise partly responsible for the wasteful situation that allows students to qualify for college entrance without either an adequate reading, writing or speaking knowledge of English.

Only one English teacher out of a dozen exhibits interest in what he or she is teaching. Further, the proper relationship between grammar and literature is seldom established, the grammar being either applied too closely as to ruin all appreciation of the reading matter, or divorced so completely that the student never realizes there is any connection between them. Poetry becomes a task to be scoffed at, prose something to be feared, as little as possible coincident with "getting by" the examination.

A thoroughly interesting balance between the reading and thought consequent upon intelligent interpretation of literature and an intelligent feeling for grammar and construction has been worked out in the freshman department of Mills College, California, where the student "discovers" America via the path of grammar. Seldom adequately founded in his language, the American college student, who student here combines the thorough drilling in grammatical principles he should have absorbed long ago with constructive thought upon the problems facing America, the present trend of civilization, the status of literature art in this country. A thoroughly unique and interesting reaction follows, and a "live" course in English has been achieved that, moreover, places the clear and logical beauty of the native language in an admir-largest so far caught in their respective divisions.—Fort Myers Press.

SENATE KILLS BILL ADDING 1 CENT GAS TAX

A wider spread of the tax burden, Wagg continued, is mandatory if the expenses of state government are met and the millage on real estate is eliminated or materially reduced. He denied the claims of newspaper publishers that their advertising incomes would be hard hit if a cigarette tax bill is enacted.

The surprising margin of seven votes, much larger than those of the bill had anticipated, ended a fight that has gripped the Legislature since the beginning of the second extra session. The cigarette measure cannot be received unless another bill is passed by the House and sent to the Senate. This counter move, administration leaders admitted last night, is impossible. They have realized the Senate majority against a cigarette tax is too strong to overcome.
