Hattaway: Transmission Unit Bill 'Go'

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

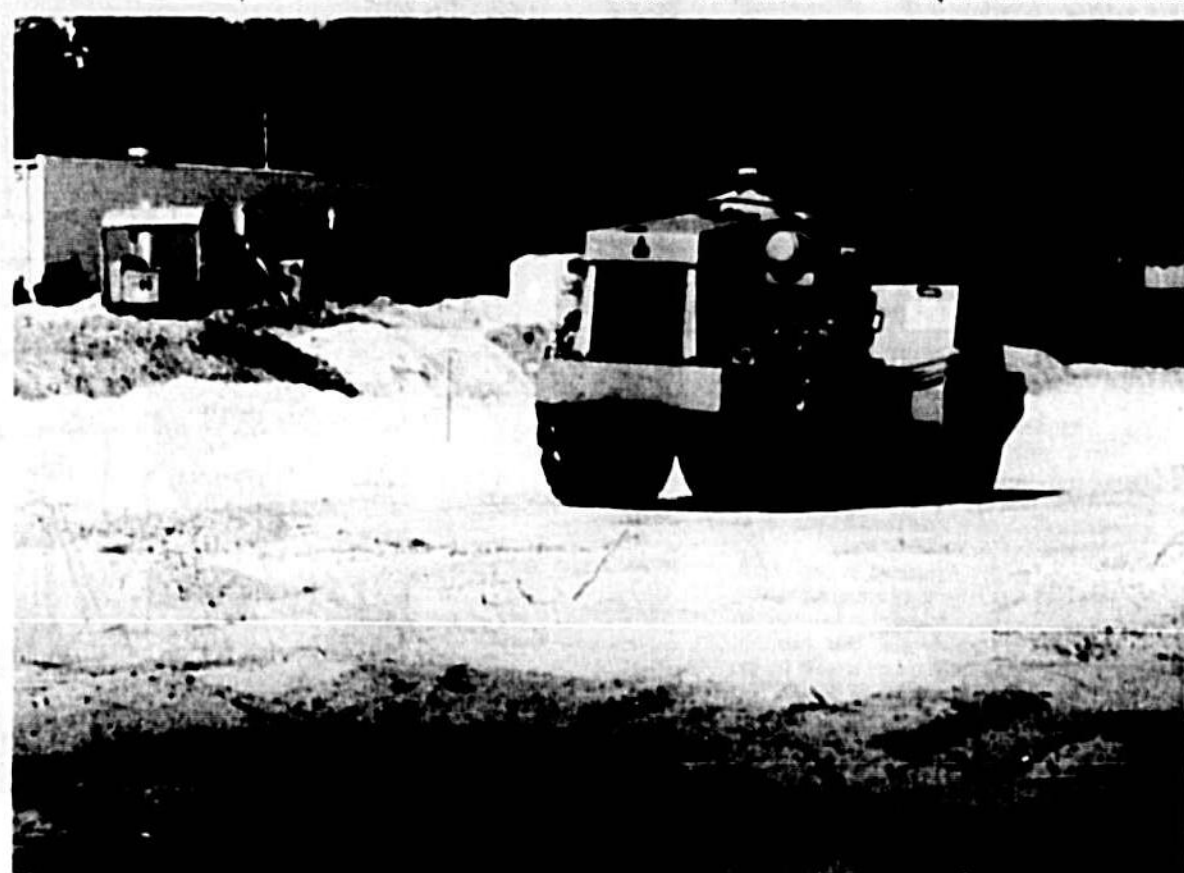

The proposed legislation to create a South Seminole-North Orange Water Transmission Authority to own and operate a 26-mile water pipeline from the cities of Winter Park, Casselberry, Winter Springs and Maitland to the proposed Orlando Regional Sewer Plant near Iron Bridge at Oviedo is "go" as written, according to State Rep. Robert Hattaway of Altamonte Springs.

Legislation, jointly sponsored by Sen. William German of Orange County and Sen. John Vogt of Brevard County which was filed last Friday, is expected to be given a number today and is expected, immediately after introduction, to be referred to the Senate committee on rules and calendar.

He said Gorman told him that the legislation will not be amended. "If Vogt plans to amend the legislation, he has not made me aware of it," said Hattaway.

The weighted vote calls for each governmental unit to have 16 votes with another 30 votes split among five delegates on the basis of the amount of sewage generated into the transmission lines by each government. Under this method the county has 16 votes with the four cities having 44 votes.

Casselberry Council Chairman Owen Sheppard has appealed to the county government to take action against the owner of property adjacent to the city limits to halt a "nuisance" created there by a borrow pit operation, which attracts children.

Sheppard said that he personally inspected the site over the weekend and believes it represents a "hazard to the health, welfare and safety of city residents."

He said that dirt at the tract should be leveled and all holes more than six inches deep, filled. He said he wrote a letter to Casselberry with copies to the county urging immediate action.

Frank Lucadamo of Lake Hodge Estates told the council that Leonard Casselberry is operating the borrow pit on property near the subdivision but in county territory, leaving holes as much as four feet deep which are filled with standing water and present a hazard to neighborhood children.

He said that he has asked annexation to Casselberry since the parcel is bounded on three sides by city territory, but that county representatives have objected to the annexation.

Asia Problems Beckoning U.S.

President Carter is promising a major speech on Asian policy early this summer. The Pacific and the Far East hold problems for the United States that won't go away, even if they seem to be in a holding pattern.

The Carter administration has had its hands full with Panama, the Middle East, the Soviet-Cuban adventures in Africa, arms negotiations with Moscow and the perennial fence-mending with our Asian allies.

Asia has loomed in foreign policy mainly in terms of the trade imbalance straining our economic relations with Japan. Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, warned in an interview that the economic strain between the United States and Japan is a symptom of larger problems within the Western trading community that could have grave economic and political consequences if they go untreated.

No one can quarrel with that, and we can hope that the missionary work of Mr. Carter's trade negotiator, Robert Strauss, is going to bring about some relief in the U.S.-Japanese economic imbroglio and thus to our trade problem as a whole.

Pointedly, Mr. Fukuda, during his recent Washington visit, emphasized that he sees no change ahead in the security relationship between the United States and Japan. This is the aspect of our Asian policy more likely to concern Mr. Carter in his policy statement. Our defense commitment to Japan remains the centerpiece of Pacific security.

As solid as the centerpiece may be, however, it is surrounded by elements of uncertainty. When Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski visits Tokyo this month he will also call on Seoul and Peking.

Mr. Carter's preoccupation with other aspects of foreign policy is not the only reason for the low profile of Asian affairs in the last year. The new regime in Peking is only now emerging from the unsettling transition of power triggered by the deaths of Chou En-lai and Mao Tse-tung. On Taiwan, Chiang Ching-kuo is just settling into leadership after the death of his father, Chiang Kai-shek.

A period of status quo in our relations with the two Chinas may be coming to an end. Our China policy still hangs on the ambiguities of the Shanghai communiqué that capped former President Nixon's visit to Peking in 1972.

The "normalization" of our relations with the mainland Communist government is a card in Mr. Carter's hand which obviously awaits only the right moment to be played.

How to play it with the least damage to our relations with Taiwan has been the question confronting the administration. Three great powers — China, the Soviet Union and the United States — see their interests touching in the Far East. In their midst are the militarily weak but economically formidable Japan, the worried Chinese on Taiwan, a Philippines torn with insurgency, and new Communist governments taking root in Indochina.

From the standpoint of headlines, the past year has been a quiet one in the volition of our Asian policy. As Mr. Carter prepares to tackle the subject, we can anticipate that this period of quiet may be coming to an end.

Some people have been guilty of one of the most horrendous crimes one can commit. They have not dealt with both sides of the issue. However, that wrong will be set right here.

"Why haven't you done this?" "The word got around that he uses insect repellent and we were afraid to try anything," the devoted insect said.

"Let's talk about some of the misconceptions people have on the blind mosquito," I said. "Are you really blind?" "Yes, we're all born blind. That's why we have so much trouble getting around. Do you really think we'd go flying into buildings and do suicidal dives into car windshields if we could get around okay?" he said.

Bad News For The Incumbents

WASHINGTON — Pollster Lou Harris has some ominous news for members of Congress who expect the mantle of incumbency to shield them from defeat in this year's election.

Harris' polls, like those of other leading survey experts, ordinarily show a majority of those questioned approve of the job their own representative is doing even though Congress as a whole receives an abysmal rating.

In a national survey in February, Harris found voters gave positive marks to their own congressmen by a 53 to 43 margin. In late April, the assessment had shifted to a 52-47 negative rating.

Congress as a whole fared even worse, as expected, enjoying the "high confidence" of only 12 percent of the public, down from a peak of 42 percent in 1966.

In sharing the bad news with a Senate subcommittee recently, Harris suggested that voters may finally be catching on to the fact that their own congressmen share the sins of the nation — especially if they vote with the majority on key issues.

The new Harris poll also undercuts the arm assumption on Capitol Hill that Congress is the "branch of government" closest to the people.

Never On Sunday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the highlights of the recent Sun Day observance here was a rock concert on the grounds of the Washington Monument.

The timing was perfect — right in the middle of the afternoon rush hour. Thousands of teen-age motorists converged on the site, creating as ugly a downtown traffic jam as you would ever want to see.

I have no firm statistics available, but while waiting through four light cycles to cross an intersection, I pronounced what I feel is a reasonably accurate formula: The amount of extra fuel used by motorists caught in the Sun Day traffic backup will more than equal the amount of fuel saved by conversion to solar power in the next 15 years.

Do not infer, however, that the Sun Day rock concert was counter-productive. Although the connection between rock music and solar energy development may not be immediately apparent, I would say the concert was an entirely appropriate way to mark the occasion.

VIEWPOINT Crisis In The Schools

By DON GRAFF

The financially prostrate Cleveland school system has received a $9.2 million reprieve, enough to keep classes going until the end of the school year in June.

And that is bad news. The money comes from the state of Ohio along with notice that it exhausts state education aid for all of 1978. The question now is, where will Cleveland get the money to reopen schools after the summer vacation?

There is an operating levy on the June 6 primary ballot, but the measure has already been turned down once by the voters and could well be again. What then? Would the district, one of the largest in the nation with 115,000 pupils, simply go out of the school business?

Cleveland does not usually come to mind as one of a nation's model cities. And its schools are in an especially difficult bind, caught between a state law forbidding districts from operating in the red and a federal judge's order to remain open. But its basic school problems are only an extreme example of those plaguing increasing numbers of districts throughout the country.

Details vary from district to district, but the common denominator is money — a shortage of it. The property tax, which constitutes the major source of school financing despite increasing assistance from state capitals and Washington in recent decades, is no longer up to the task.

The basic problem is by now widely recognized. And among voters, recognition is increasingly being expressed, as in Cleveland, through rejection of raising school budgets. An extreme test is coming up in California. A measure on the June ballot which would limit property taxes to one percent of the market value of a home is being widely expected to pass, and is giving school and other taxpayer-dependent authorities nightmares.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Red Currier's career with the Minnesota Twins looks like it's winding down in a hurry. He may be gone within the next five weeks, but the Twins' Yankelov, 40, has been reported in some quarters, but more likely to the California Angels, who already have a parcel of players prepared to give up for him.

Currier has said he wants out from the Twins. He has said that not once, but several times, because owner Calvin Griffith is unwilling to meet his salary demands.

"He has the upper hand on Minnesota. He can say who he wants to be traded to and who he doesn't want to be traded to. I have the time or career, but I would like to trade him, but if he wouldn't have my choice, I wouldn't have my choice," Griffith said.

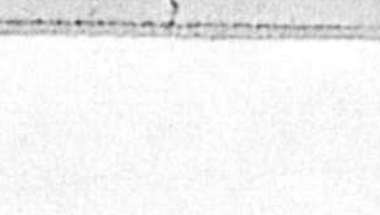

Griffith doesn't really want to trade the 35-year-old left-hander hitting cleanup but feels he has no choice in view of the terms Currier's agent is asking for his client. The agent is seeking a $4 million package over eight years. Such a contract would run until Currier is 46.

Currier is a "10-and-4 man." That means he's been in the majors at least 10 years, the last five with the same club and has the right to earn double pay if he is traded. He has the right to be traded if he wants to wait until his option year is up at the end of next season, he can still get his services at the highest bid, possibly for somewhere from $5 million on up.

Both the Angels and the Texas Rangers have discussed Currier with the Twins. The Angels are said to even have put a package together, possibly would include pitcher Paul Hartzell, infielder Dave Chalk and outfielder Ken Landrum, minor league Player of the Year last season.

Currier's showing last year represented the major's highest batting average in two decades, and with his present 200 he seems on his way to a seventh straight crown. He is currently only two points behind Detroit's Al Kaline, who is leading the league.

Summer Auto Check-Up Awaiting You At Sanford's Dave's Garage

To help you get your car ready for a long hot summer, Dave's Garage this week is offering a seasonal service of a complete electrical and mechanical check-up of your air-conditioner, including parts and labor.

Stuart Anderson, who has worked in car dealerships for the past 10 years as a mechanic, as a service manager, troubleshooter and General Motors factory representative, has joined Dave Armondi in the auto repair business at Dave's Garage at 2009 Hiawatha Ave., Sanford. Together they have a total of 45 years experience in auto repair. With 20 years in the trade, Stuart is certified as a general automotive mechanic by the National Institute of Automotive Excellence. Dave has been repairing automobiles for 25 years and has operated his business in Sanford for eight years — four years at the present location.

Stuart and Dave do not believe in guess work. They use the latest scientific testing to isolate problems in the electrical system and engine. This can usually be done in 10 minutes.

Specializing in air conditioning tune-ups and electrical repairs, Dave's a full-service garage offering brake repairs and other services.

They offer free pickup for repairs and delivery of your vehicle while you are at work. Dave's Garage gives a 90-day or 4,000 miles (whichever comes first) guarantee on its work including parts and labor.

For convenience they are open five days a week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. To give your car their complete attention and get it back to you as soon as possible, repairs at Dave's Garage are by appointment. Whether your car just needs a spring tune-up or has more serious problems call 322-7950 for an appointment.

"We explain your car's problem and give you a written estimate of what it would take to do the job right," said Dave, who says he has had only one complaint from a customer in eight years.

"We are flexible; if they cannot afford the cost of the complete job, we sit down with them and decide how much it will take to do the minimum maintenance to get their car back on the road."

"As an independent businessman, we have the advantage of lower overhead and can pass the savings along to our customers," said Stuart. BankAmericard, Master Charge and Visa cards are accepted.—ADV.

Amtrak: Politics Probably Will Come To Rescue Of Trains

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A national passenger train network apparently will survive the latest attempts to run it through a budgetary shredder.

When Transportation Secretary Brock Adams released his congressional mandated report on Amtrak Monday, most attention was focused on the routes he recommended be cut in 1979 — almost one-fourth the current 27,000-mile Amtrak system if Congress agrees.

But the simple fact is that Adams did not go nearly as far as he could have.

He rejected one alternative that could have cut Amtrak back to heavily traveled corridors in the East, around Chicago and in California.

Even with his recommended cuts, several transcontinental and long distance north-south routes would remain in the system including New York-Florida, New York-Chicago.

ANALYSIS

Boston-Chicago, New York-Montreal through Vermont, Washington-New Orleans, Chicago-New Orleans, New Orleans-Los Angeles, San Diego-Seattle, Chicago-Seattle (one route) and Chicago-Los Angeles with spur trains to Denver and San Francisco.

Chicago-Franco would be continued with spur trains from the Southwest Limited from Chicago to Los Angeles. This would end service to Nevada, home of Senate Commerce Committee Chairman Howard Cannon. Cannon said immediately he could not accept the report.

—The Salt Lake City-Seattle Pioneer would be dropped. This train was ordered into operation by Congress at the insistence of Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, who is unlikely to give it up now.

—The Chicago-Florida Florida would be cut, but Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., said he would do what he could to save it. Gore managed to garner an overwhelming House vote to save the train earlier this year when it appeared it would be dropped because of budget problems.

OURSELVES The Genetic Connection

Counseling May Cause Confusion, Anger To Clients

(Fourth in a series) By DAVID HENDIN and JOAN MARKS

If you are 41 years old and 10 weeks pregnant, you need genetic counseling. If you have a brother who has hemophilia, but seem healthy yourself, you need genetic counseling. If you have cystic fibrosis and want to have children, you need genetic counseling. If you have already had a child born with a physical or mental abnormality, you need genetic counseling. Ninety percent of the people in the United States who could benefit from genetic counseling do not receive it. A major reason for this is that such individuals don't know enough about the inheritance of diseases to realize they need the advice of experts in genetics.

The small percentage of Americans who need genetic counseling get it usually do so only after they have already given birth to one or more children suffering from a genetic disease.

When people do not get the expert help they need, the result is unnecessary tragedy for those who would have chosen to direct their reproductive lives differently if they had been given a choice.

Some families admit that they have sought genetic counseling simply to "check out whether we are normal."

There is nothing at all wrong with such a motivation. However, these families usually perceive the genetic counselor as one who will give them a definite "yes" or "no" answer to question about their genetic health. Much as the traditional physician will tell them that they "should" go on this diet, or have that operation, for example. When the genetic counselor offers answers that merely outline the possibilities of what could happen, the clients may become confused or even angry.

Genetic counseling is recommended for families with a known genetic defect of any kind, or when more than one family member is affected with the same abnormality. Other indications of the need for genetic counseling are two or more previous miscarriages or stillborn births, sterility that is not clearly due to physical factors, and the potential mother's age being greater than 35 or the father's being greater than 35.

There are an increasing number of couples who have a vague understanding of the role inheritance may play in reproduction who now seek counseling prior to starting their families. This is, of course, the ideal time to do so. Unfortunately, present resources in clinical genetics are not adequate to serve all prospective couples who may wish to take advantage of such preventive measures.

This type of broad genetic counseling could—perhaps even should—be handled by family physicians. At this time, however, many such physicians have neither the proper training nor the time to undertake this sort of counseling. In the future it is hoped they will be better prepared to offer this reproductive counseling. There are advantages to having the family physician undertake genetic counseling. Consultation with a physician who knows the patient and the patient's family makes it easier for the patient to ask personal or possibly embarrassing questions, or questions which may reveal a lack of knowledge.

Today's medical genetic counselor is usually a pediatrician or internist who has specialized in treating hereditary disorders in large medical centers, where such specialists often practice. They are usually part of a team that includes individuals with expertise in the laboratory aspects of diagnosing genetic disease, others who are diagnosticians, and still others who concentrate on helping families understand what the diagnosis may mean in their lives. All these specialists may be called genetic counselors.

Genetic counseling may be described in many different terms which make it confusing to those who seek help. Some services are called by these titles: "Birth Defects Center," "Developmental Disabilities Clinic," or "Genetics Unit." Whatever genetics units are able to refer patients to the proper service within the hospital. Next: You and Your Doctor

Mother's Day Ads: 'I Want To Scream'

DEAR ABBY: When Mother's Day approaches and I see all those ads reminding us to "Remember Mother on HER special day," I want to scream!

For 10 years I have been conducting arts and craft classes in one of the finest homes for the aged in this area. Lovely surroundings, a hospital on the premises, good food, attendants around the clock— in each room two strangers who have nothing in common are cooped up for the rest of their lives in one room large enough for two beds, two easy chairs and two small chairs for "company." (I suppose the chairs for company are adequate because nobody stays more than 20 minutes.)

One of my pupils told me, "When my daughter finds time to visit me, she asks, 'How do you like it here, Mama?'"

"Fine," I tell her. "What am I going to say—that I cry myself to sleep every night?"

Happy Mother's Day to all the mothers who have been put away in homes by their children!

CONN

DEAR ALICE: I think your inquiry was justified.

DEAR ABBY: There is an older woman in our town who is a very strange character. She lives alone on some sort of pension. This weirdo likes to get all dressed and go where people are.

Well, she must think her church membership entitles her to attend all the social functions that take place in the social hall of her church, because she never misses one. The fact that she's not invited doesn't seem to bother her.

She attends all the teas and receptions, mingles with the guests, helps herself to all the refreshments, and has a good time.

Isn't it the minister's place to tell her she should stay away? He sees her at all the gatherings and surely knows she hasn't been invited.

SMALL TOWN

DEAR SMALL TOWN: If anyone is to discourage an uninvited guest it should be the hostess. The poor woman is probably lonely. And if she causes no harm and enjoys herself, what's another glass of punch and a few cookies amid the socializing?

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular, You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lucky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Three months later, I realized that I had not received a thank-you note, so I wrote to her asking if she had ever received it.

A month passed, and still no word from the bride, so when I saw her, I asked her in person if she ever got the decanter.

She said she had, and she also sent me a thank-you note, and I had a lot of nerve nagging her about it. Then she said, "I'll return it to you tomorrow. I don't feel like keeping it now!"

I told her that I didn't mean to "nag" her, but since I had heard nothing, I just wanted to know if she had ever received it.
