Administration. Last February, he named fou cabinet officers to study land and water use. Their ework has been continued by the national re-sources board, headed by Secretary Ickes.

Commissions for the Atlantic, Pacific, gulf, and great lakes waterways and the east and west tributaries of the Mississippi may be proposed by Roosevelt in his message to Congress. This set-up was suggested last year. Objections were raised that many of the watersheds did not lend themselves to development like the Tennessee, since they presented unrelated problems. The land and water use program is a broad division of the Presistandard and portable type dent's three-fold security scheme other phrases being unemployment and old age pension in-surance and hoseling.

Roosevelt has frequently said that he envisioned the planned development of land and water resources as the answer to the threat of continued unemployment among millions of persons.
Included in the scope of the dereligiment are flood control, power, reformairation, navigation, decentralization of industry, reclama-tion, elimination of sub-marginal land from cultivation, erosion in brief, virtually everything that affects the economic and social interests of the watersheds,
