

Murphy Appointed To Federal Court Post In New York

WASHINGTON, June 11—(AP)—The man who prosecuted Alger Hiss was nominated today for a federal judgeship and the judge who presided at the long trial of the 11 top Communist leaders was given an advancement.

President Truman named Thomas F. Murphy, now New York's police commissioner, to be a federal judge for the southern district of New York.

At the same time, he sent to the Senate for its approval the nomination of Judge Harold R. Medina for promotion to the U. S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit (New York).

Judge Medina, whose conduct of the stormy nine-month-long trial of the Communist leaders won him widespread acclaim, was named for the Appeals court post made vacant by the retirement of Judge Learned Hand.

Walrus-mustached and 44 years old, Murphy is a big man and one of the most colorful police commissioners since the days of Theodore Roosevelt.

Judge Medina, 62, was named a District Judge in May, 1947. His assignment to preside over the trial of the Communist leaders has been described as "one of the toughest tasks in jurisprudence."

Murphy last February turned down a job as head of federal price control enforcement. He said then he had "a job to do in New York."

Murphy resigned as an Assistant United States attorney in New York last September. There were reports at the time, however, that he was disappointed because he got no promotion or political recognition for his work on the Hiss case.

Judge Medina was born in Brooklyn Feb. 10, 1888. He had a long, successful career as a teacher and as a lawyer before President Truman named him to the federal bench. He said his nomination came as a surprise to him.

The judge's father, Joaquin Medina, came to this country from Mexico as a boy. His mother descended from early Dutch settlers.

Judge Medina has two sons, both lawyers. They are Harold Raymond, Jr., and Standish Forde Medina.

east of the Hwachon Reservoir. They sacrificed approximately 40,000 troops in the last ten days, Van Fleet said, trying to keep the Allies away from the triangle. The valley was the fountainhead of two Communist spring offensives.

U. S. Defense Secretary George C. Marshall said the Chinese "have got themselves into a difficult situation." Any peace moves, he said, would have to come from the Reds.

"But they have the problem of face," he explained, "the impatience of which is hard for us to understand."

Marshall said he couldn't "conceive of the Korean war going on for years" nor could he see a quick end to it.

As the Secretary's comments were made as he ended a surprise three-and-a-half day visit to Tokyo and the Korean front. He reiterated his visit involved neither peace moves nor new instructions to the Allied command.

A Chinese pulled out of the triangle. 72 F-84 Thunderjets plastered the Sonchon supply area to the north in one of their heaviest raids of the war.

Pilots reported they flattened 400 buildings and wrecked other military targets with jellied gasoline, bombs, rockets and machine-gun fire.

The area they hit includes the junction of the Western Korea rail and highway routes with those leading across the isthmus to the east coast, easiest withdrawal point for Reds evacuating the triangle.

Other warplanes raided eight Red air fields. Altogether 900 sorties were mounted by U. N. Air Forces Sunday through clouds and showers.

On the east coast the U. S. heavy cruiser Helena fired her 10,000 lb shell at Red targets in Korea Sunday. With the destroyers Bradford and Cunningham the Helena kept up a three day round-the-clock bombardment of the Songjin area, 185 miles north of the 38th Parallel. They fired more than 1,000 rounds.

On the ground Red opposition weakened except for one small sector on the east-central front, and along the western flank to the rear.

An American patrol leading the way into shattered Chorwon shortly after noon Monday found the trash-strewn vital road hub virtually deserted. One Chinese was killed, three captured.

Fifty hundred Koreans civilians waved South Korean flags and cheered as the doughboys hunted for hiding Chinese soldiers.

Meanwhile Allied infantrymen pushed U. N. lines to the southern edge of the city, and other patrols combed the area on each side of the town.

Back of these forces Allied troops dug into the hills, in some places occupying bunkers out of which they had flushed the Chinese.

AP correspondent Stan Carter said they were forming a "new U. N. defense line." Patrols moving out from this line, southwest of Chorwon, found few Reds left in the hills.

Forming of the defense line emphasized repeated cautions of allied officers that the Communist still are capable of counterattacking. Such defense lines have been formed regularly during the U. N. counteroffensive.

Officers said Chinese withdrawing toward Kumsong, about 12 miles northeast of Kumsong, were expected to reorganize to harass advancing U. N. forces.

In their retreat before the U. N. counteroffensive, the Reds have abandoned sufficient supplies to equip three of their divisions, Van Fleet said.

Abandoned caches are so big and numerous that Allies can't keep up with the count. An Eighth Army spokesman said the total captured by Allies will double when the count for the first week of June is in.

Red Cross Asks In Vain For Senators To Donate Blood

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON, June 11—(AP)—Senators got a chance today to give some blood to the Red Cross but they didn't break down the doors in any rush to contribute.

"You know how senators are," said Mrs. Hiram Bingham at the Mobile Blood Bank in the Senate Office Building. She indeed knows how senators are, since she is married to a former senator to Connecticut.

"They're so busy, you know, with all these awful investigations going on."

"Still, I do hope one senator would come in."

But she said business was reasonably brisk anyway.

"They send their secretaries over," she said. And as if to prove her point, another Red Cross lady stood up to say, "that was the fourth one from Senator Kem."

Mrs. B. said senators aren't any different from anyone else these days, and that the Red Cross everywhere is having trouble impressing on the public the need for blood.

"Right here in the District of Columbia," she said, "we need 10,000 pints of blood a month. Three thousand of those pints are for stockpiling, in case of a major disaster. Well, we're not stockpiling any. It's hard to bring home to people how badly blood is needed."

Mrs. Bingham said lots of people have an aversion to blood, acquired far back in their childhood, and that it's hard to convince them that giving blood is a simple, painless experience.

In addition, she said, senators had other excuses.

"One girl just called me to say her senator said he'd been sweating blood for a week with Secretary Acheson and didn't have a drop left," she said.

Well, Mrs. Bingham was so eloquent that the first thing I knew I was stretched out on a table giving a pint myself.

She assured me it would do just as well as senatorial blood, and I suppose that's true.

But I noticed when I left, she still had her eye on the door hopefully looking for her first senator.

Yankee Manager Hits Rowdism In Chicago Stadium

CHICAGO, June 11—(AP)—Manager Casey Stengel of the New York Yankees has released some verbal fireworks about American League fans who gleefully set off real ones while his team is playing.

The Yankees left Comiskey Park yesterday after taking three decisions in a four game set with the league-leading White Sox which drew 130,720 fans in three days. Stengel talked as if he thought his boys were lucky to escape with their lives.

"Mickey Mantle, my 19 year old outfielder, was peppered with firecrackers here Friday night," Stengel said. "Some stupid clown also tossed a whiskey bottle out of the stands near him."

"Suppose one of these firecrackers exploded right at Mantle's eye level or a bottle hit him in the head. A foolish stunt could cut short a man's career or even cost him his eyesight."

He mentioned a stone throwing episode in Detroit, too, and declared: "I'll pull the Yankees off the field if these 'lows' keep happening. Maybe when I do the ball park owners will hire the 25 additional cops needed to keep order."

Frank Lane, general manager of the White Sox, had a caustic answer for Stengel.

"Casey has a large job on his hands managing the Yankees," Lane said. "We'll take care of policing the ball park."

"We had a triple police force all three days. When you have more than 130,000 people in the park in three days, you can't have a policeman looking over the shoulder of every small boy in the ball park."

"We don't like that sort of thing any better than he does, but I think we did a good job handling the large crowds and we've had lots of compliments on it."

But the way to peace, Austin said, may sometimes "lie through bloody battlefields." He went on: "On the battlefield that is Korea, the forces of the United Nations are fighting for a principle beyond mere national advantage; the principle of world order. The effective application of this principle alone can secure to every nation its true national advantage."

It's always interesting to hear about future-looking experiments with new super engines to run on new super-octane fuels...someday. But it's even more interesting to hear today's real life, on-the-highway talk about Chrysler's new super-performing FirePower engine. The result is 180 horsepower performance such as no other passenger car built in the U.S. today can equal.
If you haven't driven Chrysler FirePower yet, your Chrysler dealer invites you to do so now. It's the most revolutionary engine in 27 years. It offers highway satisfaction and safety such as you've never known. And it's a sounder engine other ways than any other on the road. Its new design keeps it almost completely carbon-free. It is smooth and quiet... but also rugged and strong and free from need for great attention and repair.
Now remember that this same new Chrysler offers you the new Hydramatic power steering... plus the amazing new rough-road stability of Oriflow shock absorbers... plus Water-Proof Ignition, and Vacuum-Ease Chrysler Cyclebonded super-brakes... then come see what we mean when we say the car of your tomorrow is right here for you to drive... today, and for years to come!

TEEN TALK

By VIVIAN BROWN

AT Non-features

There's a new thing even brass little women must face—they can't wander down lonely roadways at night and desolate spots alone, unless they are escorted at all times.

Because of due to circumstances beyond control, a little girl is obliged to come home from a party late without an escort. If she is frightened on one of these late outings, she must be cautious in the future.

If she isn't, she may go along looking for a "buddy" who might encounter.

It is something every girl in the face—people who roam the streets at night are a threat to young girls.

Holliday author of "Framed in Blood" (Dodd Mead) and other Mike Shayne detective series, offers these 10 common sense tricks to women to avoid the perils of this sort. Here's his list:

1. Avoid trouble, he advises.

Mrs. Roumillat Gives Party For Graduates

Members of the All South Choir, who were graduated yesterday were honored by Mrs. E. F. Roumillat yesterday afternoon when she entertained with a party at her home on Palmetto Avenue.

The honorees were Miss Edna Mubela, Miss Dorothy Teala and Miss Kathryn Cullum from Seminole High School; Miss Helen Alexander from Junior High School and Miss Joan Lager from St. James School in Orlando.

Various colored spring flowers were placed in the living room. In the dining room white burning tapers in a five branched candelabra and gardenias were placed on an imported lace cloth. Punch was served from a crystal bowl at one end of the table.

Mrs. Roumillat was assisted in serving by Mrs. E. H. Cullum and Miss Cynthia Roumillat.

Others invited were Mrs. E. E. Roumillat III, Miss Marianne Strickland, Miss Kay Rattigan, Miss Penny Wallace, Miss Irene Green, Miss Betty Rattigan, Miss Colleen Holbrook, Miss Barbara McNally, Miss Johnnie Mae Jones, Miss Patty Teala, Miss Peggy Wilson, Miss Sue Thompson and Miss Diana McTeer.

Entered in the article at Farnegated disdain, the display filled the requirements of Illinois. Rating a musical composition with roses in the title. The musical composition was "Les Roses de Japon".

Do not seek it by walking unaccompanied in bad neighborhoods after dark. Whenever it is necessary to do so, do not walk close to the building line—walk in the center of the street or toward the curb.

2. When you go out do not tell casual acquaintances your business or talk about personal matters loud enough for strangers to hear. It wouldn't be a good idea to advertise in a dance or in a crowded public place that you live in a lonely neighborhood and must go home alone—that the bus stop is a mile from your house and there are no taxis.

3. Do not "make friends" with male for female in questionable haunts. (This could go for bars, bowling alleys, moving picture theatres or other places which attract strangers from the streets.)

4. Do not drink to excess. If necessary, suppose of you having a cocktail or two at a party, never take advantage of this permission by having more than you should.

5. Police will not help if you are arrested. It would be silly to advise that you keep a gun if someone tries to attack you. However, if the person is dangerous you might find him more difficult to handle if you get too excited.

6. If it is not possible, a woman's lungs are excellent weapons.

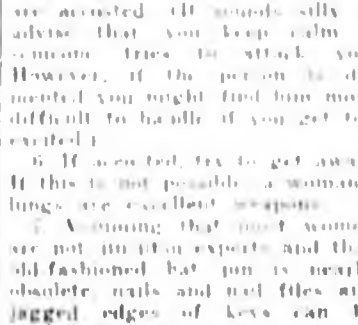

7. Assuming that most women are not expert marksmen and that old-fashioned but very nearly obsolete pistols and shotguns and jagged edges of keys can be useful. (The hot pin is the favorite.)

Iranian Crisis

(Continued from Page One) here prior to the opening of talks on the nationalization of Iran's oil industry operated by the company. Mossadegh's letters were in reply to President Truman's recent appeal to Iran and Britain for moderation and reasonable negotiations on the explosive oil issue. The premier told President Truman "there will be no trespass against international law in the taking over from the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company." He said Iran would take the utmost care to continue and to increase the present level of oil production. "The Parliament of Iran, like yourself, desire that the interests of the countries which hitherto have used Iranian oil should not suffer in the slightest degree," the premier told the U. S. President. An unofficial translation of the text was released here by the Iranian Foreign Office after a 24-hour delay, so that the message first would reach President Truman. Assuring Mr. Truman of Iran's friendship toward the United States and of continued efforts to protect "our cordial relations with the British government," the premier at the same time bitterly blamed the Anglo-Iranian company for many of Iran's post-war ills. "For many years," said the message, "the Iranian government has been dissatisfied with the activities of the former Anglo-Iranian Oil Company." He added that he could give the President "unshakable documentary evidence that the accounts of the company did not correspond to the true facts."

within the framework of the nationalization law. But he added that actual details of disposition of the British company and settlements of accounts with it were "solely affairs of an internal nature" on which Iran could not enter negotiations with anyone but the representatives of the British government. The British government, said the premier, could show concern only if Iran, in such negotiations, stepped beyond her rights under international law. "You may rest assured, Mr. President, no such trespass will ever take place," the letter said.

Graduation

(Continued from Page One) the knowledge attained. Among the graduates, House of Representatives scholarships were received by Betty Billhimer and John Fite, and Didi Cole received a Lewis scholarship. Supt. Lawson stated that last year 1,200,000 students graduated from high school in this country, and of these 400,000 entered college. He praised the efforts of civic organizations and churches in behalf of the youth here during the past year. The theme of the graduation was a ribbon placed on the background, and signifying the hopes of the graduates. This effect was heightened by the singing of the Senior Girls Society of "Over the Rainbow" and by the Senior Ensemble of "Look for the Silver Lining." The boys' Double Quartette sang, "As Off to the Southward We Go," and "Animals."

Communists Lose

(Continued from Page One) scattering of seats in regional councils. The party had 82,320 votes in incomplete returns from 15 of the 30 provincial capital elections. Anti-Communist parties won historic Florence and Pisa from the Communists, as well as Piacenza. In Turin they had 217,051 votes against 163,415 for the leftist bloc, as 740 of 814 districts were counted. Other provincial capitals won by the anti-Communists were Teramo, Viterbo, Chieti, Luca, Cuneo, Latina and L'Aquila. The Communists and their Allies won the provincial capitals of Pescara, Frosino, Grosseto, Siena, Modena, Reggio Emilia, Parma and La Spezia. The MSI, which ran alone in nearly all communal and provincial elections, garnered 16,883 votes in Turin's still incomplete count. They won 12,621 in Florence. In L'Aquila they had 4,791 to the Christian Democrats 6,110, and in Latina, 3,411 to 4,839 for the Christian Democrats. In the May 27 elections the party got about four percent of the total vote cast—about twice what it polled in the 1948 elections. In the Sicilian regional parliamentary elections on June 3, it won 11 of 90 seats, against 30 won by the Christian Democrats and the Social-Communists. The show of strength by the Fascist party prompted a top Christian Democrat Umberto Tupini, one of the five-man national council of the party—to declare that Christian Democrats would oppose any march on Rome, either by Fascists or Communists. Tupini said force would be used "if necessary" and added that "we will never permit the use of liberty to kill liberty."

Wedemeyer

(Continued from Page One) from him about wealthy Chinese who are reputed to have large fortunes cached in this country and other western nations. Wedemeyer said he had heard "rumors" but gave McMahon no names. He suggested the senator might go to the U. S. Treasury Department for information. Senator Knowland (R-Calif) then developed Wedemeyer's account of his efforts to safeguard Manchuria at the end of World War II. Knowland led into the matter by questioning Wedemeyer about the 1945 Yalta agreement under which Russia received concessions in Manchuria as an inducement to enter the war against Japan. He had asked if Manchuria were not "pretty much the key to China," and Wedemeyer had replied that it often has been referred to as "the Ruhr of the Far East." (The Ruhr is the steel-coal area of Western Germany and has been called the heart of industrial Europe.) Wedemeyer said that he visualized placing the U. S. divisions "up in the north, placing a barrier there so that I would know what was going on and could influence what was going on," he added. "I would have liked to have been able to take over the army and the equipment of the defeated Japanese forces, instead of having those arms and equipment available to the Communists. "At least, I would have taken them over and made them available to the Chinese Central Government, the government which my government recognized at the time, and was supporting as far as I knew." He said that he had been concerned about "the intentions and the capabilities" of Russia in Manchuria and had wired the Joint Chiefs of Staff immediately after the war that he doubted whether Chiang Kai-Shek's government would be able to restore order south of the great wall and at the same time "recover and rehabilitate Manchuria." In telling of his request for seven American divisions to be employed in Manchuria, Wedemeyer said there was no way of knowing at the time that the Japanese people would be "docile and cooperative" under the occupation of their homeland. He (MacArthur) required those divisions in his occupation of Japan; and he refused to make them available to me; and there were no other divisions made available," Wedemeyer said. Wedemeyer also told the senators he feels the United States should have given aid and military advice to the Chinese Nationalists after World War II "right down to the battalion level," as it did in helping Greece combat Communism. Discussing the Yalta agreement, Wedemeyer said "I felt badly" and that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek "could not believe what he heard." The Yalta agreement was an understanding President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill of Britain and Premier Stalin of Russia reached in talks in February, 1945, at Yalta in Russia's Crimea. Russia agreed to come into the war against Japan three months after Germany was defeated and in return was given concessions in Manchuria, the Chinese province that Japan had seized from China years before World War Two. Wedemeyer said: "It wasn't so much the terms (of the Yalta agreement) that displeased me as it was the fact that I had been working almost two years now with this head of the Chinese Republic and, as far as I knew, he had been straightforward with me, and I thought that my country, along with the Soviet and the British, had taken steps that were contrary to promises made at the Cairo conferences." At Cairo, he said, Chiang "was told substantially that the Sovereignty of China over Manchuria would be recognized and Formosa would be returned to China." Formosa, the island now held by the Chinese Nationalist government, also had been seized from China by Japan. The Cairo conference was a meeting in that city of Roosevelt, Churchill and Chiang. It preceded the Yalta meeting. Wedemeyer said he accompanied Ambassador Patrick J. Hurley when Hurley met with Chiang to advise the Generalissimo of the Yalta terms. The General said: "It at once became apparent to me the Generalissimo that these agreements had been made concerning his territory without consultation with either himself or his representatives; it hurt him deeply." "He did not ask a question. He just was silent for about a minute and then he asked Ambassador Hurley through the interpreter to please repeat that."

Enlistments

(Continued from Page One) ning of the year. In January, the Navy accepted 38,500 volunteers. Last month it got only 13,300 volunteers. Marine Corps figures are not available but it is known that the Corps has also experienced a let-down in the flow of volunteers. The Corps' current manpower goal is 204,000, which will probably be reached by June 30. The services give varying reasons for the general decline in volunteering. Spokesmen say April and May, just before the school year ends, are generally bad months. Some officers blamed the dearth of volunteers on the Army's reduced draft calls. When the Army was drafting 80,000 men a month many youths thought it would be better to volunteer and get into the service of their choice. One defense source estimated there is a frozen pool of about 750,000 men of draft or volunteering age, who have taken, or had notice to take, pre-induction physical exams. The war general agreement this cut down on volunteering. Officers in all of the services expressed fear that unless something is done to make it easier for men to volunteer for the service of their choice it will be difficult for the forces to release their reservists, a program which has been announced to start this summer. Although it owns only eight percent of the world's commercial forest area, the United States produces 44 percent of the world's lumber, 58 percent of its plywood and 42 percent of its wood pulp.
