Location Of City Is Due To Namesake And Founder, General Henry S. Sanford

BY R. W. PEARMAN JR.
Sanford owes its name to its founder, Gen. Henry S. Sanford, who while minister to Belgium, visited this section and was favorably impressed with its location on Lake Monroe on what was then known as Levy grant owned by the Gen. Joseph Finegan, famous in Civil War lore as the hero of Guste.

At that early date Gen. Sanford's wonderful vision caused him to declare that Lake Monroe was practically at the mouth of New York harbor and being the head of navigation of the St. Johns River, the natural distributing point for southern Florida. As far back as 1890 it was known as the Gate City of southern Florida, and the factors which gave it prominence at that time still remain today.

How accurately the general forecast results at that time the intervening years have already partially disclosed, but his future and present is sufficient verification of the vision of this grand old pioneer. A modern city is now located upon Lake Monroe's placid shores which is connected by water and rail with all the principal eastern seaboard points and the largest centers of population.

Due to a series of intra-state jealousies and tardiness on the part of national representatives, the improvement of the St. Johns channel has been delayed, causing an inconvenience in the transfer of trade and travel at Jacksonville. The same factors have been responsible for the government's failure to construct the link between the St. Johns and Indian Rivers, which would increase water borne transportation, reclaim thousands of acres of fertile country provide a direct inland water route between Jacksonville and Miami. Nevertheless, the Sanford of today is rapidly becoming a realization of its founders' dream which has been made possible in part by his liberality and fostering care in the early part of its growth. It is now as truly the gate of entrance to central Florida for the annually increasing tide of travel and trade as it was when Gen. Sanford first saw its possibilities.

Freeze of '95.
The history of Sanford, like that of nearly every Florida community that boasts a history, revolves around the big freeze of '95. This was an epochal event throughout the state and its cities, particularly in interior Florida, were slow in recovering from this catastrophe. Had it not been for the diversity of natural attribute which Sanford possessed, the great odds against it would have overwhelmed any chance of staging a comeback. Its growth from the date of the big freeze was greatly accelerated by the fact of the position at the head of navigation for large steamers on the St. Johns River, then the only avenue of connection with the outside world. It was as that time the radiating center of a large section of country. It was the northern terminus of the only railroad in South Florida, and that tapping the finest section of the peninsula. Its population was increased by a class of people who clamored for enlarged and quicker methods of transportation and such modern conveniences as were required by those whose standards of living are of the highest. In 1900 the population of Sanford was 2,500. During the following decade it increased to 3,500 and the census of 1920 gave it a population of 5,600. The directory of Sanford, recently completed, gives it a population close to 11,000. While no figures are available showing the assessed valuations for corresponding periods, these have increased more in proportion than has its population. Since 1920 Sanford's valuations have doubled. Its wealth has been acquired mostly from the wonderful productiveness of its back-country, known as the garden spot of Florida, returning a sum in excess of $5,000,000 from its truck crops annually.

Was a Tourist Resort.
Sanford while acquiring the prestige of being the largest vegetable shipping section of the state, let go the reputation it had in the early days of being Florida's premier tourist resort, when it entertained at its splendid hotels three Presidents of the United States and other nationally prominent men and women of the early nineties. It is also regrettable that its water transportation facilities were permitted to fall into disuse. In the day before the advent of the railroads in to this section, as many as 12 vessels a day arrived at Sanford. Then Sanford was the largest orange shipping section in the world, as all this traffic originating in contiguous points of interior Florida was shipped by vessels to Jacksonville and thence by ocean steamers to northern markets. Recent efforts to revive this business are meeting somewhat with success.

Possibilities as Tourist Center.
With the advent of large investors, adequate facilities for tourists will be provided. Nearly all the resort cities of Florida derive their main revenues from tourists exclusively and are still attracting thousands each year. With the provision of adequate housing and varied recreational facilities, always to be found in strictly tourist resorts, Sanford will have this additional revenue to augment that which is derived from its agricultural industry. Outside investors are beginning to recognize the potential possibilities Sanford possesses as a tourist city and several large investors during the coming season will begin to develop these possibilities, reviving (Continued on Page Six)

There are today many visitors to Sanford whose vision is identical with that of the old general. They see many possibilities and of such diversity that cause them to become permanent citizens. They admire the pronounced spirit of progress which prevails amongst its citizenship and are eager to participate in the prosperity which the future assures Sanford.

Many of these newcomers to Florida expect to find the important cities of the state, tourist resorts exclusively and experience an agreeable surprise when they find that Sanford is different. There is a solidarity peculiar to Sanford which makes its slogan "The City Substantial" apropos. This is due first to its wonderful agricultural development previously referred to and second that realty values are not inflated.

Announcement

We wish to announce that we have secured about 269 acres, having two and one-half miles of the finest lake front property, in Seminole county as shown by the shaded lines on the accompanying

Map of Crystal Lake and Vicinity

The particularly fortunate location of our tract will be seen by a glance at the map. Lying between Sanford and Orlando and just west of the main A. C. L. R. R. line, with Lake Mary station right at the door, is Crystal Lake, which is really a series of beautiful, clear, fresh water lakes all connected together and having numerous sandy bathing beaches, wooded slopes and rolling timbered shores interspersed here and there along its fourteen miles of shore line with orange groves and fine winter homes.

We have secured the entire point of land extending out into Crystal Lake just north of Lake Mary station. This point is high rolling ground, having sufficient natural timber for shade and sloping to the water in all directions.

Mr. W. A. Ginn has been engaged to survey and landscape the property with winding drives connecting here and there with a boulevard which is already being cleared entirely around the point. A road and bridge will connect this point with the larger tract opposite, opening up an additional mile and a half of lake frontage to be developed later into one harmonious scheme of beautiful winter home sites.

Less than a mile north are the Sanford Municipal Golf Links and Country Club with the paved road into town, while the proposed new pavement running from the Golf Links south through Lake Mary to Orlando will cross our tract at the east end of the point and connect with the point boulevard. Lake Mary already has electric lights and a fine water system which assures these for our people at once.

No better fishing or boating can be found that here, while the water is clear and pure and the bathing unsurpassed. Many who seek our winter climate want water front property but do not like the exposure of the ocean beaches. Here they will find all the delights of water, land climate, and roads in combination.

As soon as the clearing and landscaping can be done the tract will be divided into home sites averaging about four to the acre but these lots will be of different sizes and shapes and made to conform to the general contour of the water front and the drives. No one will be permitted to buy a foot of water front but the lots will stop at the boulevard which skirts the water. Between the boulevard drive and the water. Between the boulevard drive and the several projecting points are being left for use as parks. Shrubbery and trees will be planted where they will add to the natural beauty of the general plan. We have already had applications to purchase sites for homes but have been obliged to refuse to sell until our entire plan is ready. Restrictions will be sufficiently high to ensure a good class of home-loving neighbors.

For the present we are not offering anything for sale and are making this announcement simply to acquaint our friends with our plans for what we believe to be the most beautiful and accessible home site location in central Florida.

UNION PLAY

"His Uncle's Niece."
This three act comedy is a laugh all through the plot of this farce centers around a letter received by Francis Felton of Happy Valley Junction, who has always supposed him to be a girl. Uncle Simon has selected a husband for his "niece" and that they are both on their way to visit "her" and make arrangements for the wedding. In desperation, to keep up the deception, started years before by his parents, Francis assumes a female role in order to carry out a provision whereby he is to receive a million dollars from his uncle. The explanations made necessary through this deception keep Francis and his friend Dick, in hot water and the audience in an uproar of laughter. The climax is a surprise that will lift the audience to its feet in applause.
Given at high school Tuesday, March 21 at 8:30. Admission 35 and 50 cents.—Adv.

Woman's Club Has Given Twelve Years Of Service To Betterment Of Community

The Woman's Club of Sanford was organized twelve years ago through the amalgamation of five smaller groups: the Wednesday and Welaka Clubs, the Music Club, the Land & Hand Society and the West Side Improvement Association. In its coming together in the way to make a departmental organization, some of the features of each component club were retained, and find expression in the four sections of work, Literature, Music, Social and Welfare activities.

The policy of the Woman's Club from its beginning has been to be of as much service as possible in all movements for community betterment.

This is evidenced in many ways. When the time came for war work the entire machinery was placed at the disposal of the Red Cross and the most prominent club workers were in the very forefront in every effort for answering our country's call. So far as the writer is aware no worthy appeal for aid either in work or money has ever been denied, and there have been many enterprises in which the initiative has been taken by the club.

The White Way in Sanford, the lunch room at the Grammar School, the Home Economics department at the high school and the now crystallized sentiment toward a more beautiful Sanford have all been the dear objects of club activity. An indirect result of the work of the organization is in the fructifying of a friendly spirit among the members and towards newcomers to Sanford.

During the past year especially, the social feature has been strongly emphasized in all departments. For years the work was carried on in an old building remodeled from the outgrown Presbyterian Church building, two years ago the present commodious and attractive structure was completed. The co-operative effort required of the members to make the new club home possible has been a very strong unifying factor, and there is a general feeling of pride in the result of their labors. The membership at present is near 250 with a constant increase.

It has been long the wish of the women who have served as presidents that classes of practical interest aside from study might be given the women of Sanford. The convenience of the new club home contributed much toward making it possible. The first attempt was a class in Parliamentary Law which was free to any Seminole County woman. These classes were conducted by the Club Parliamentarian and were full of enthusiastic interest from beginning to end.

A short time later, under teachers sent to the club from the State Home Demonstration Agent, classes in dressmaking and millinery were exceedingly successful. The nominal charge of one dollar for each student was made to cover the slight expense incurred in the use of electric current and drayage.

To enumerate the activities of the eleven full years of service would require more of space than could be given to the Woman's Club, but its purpose may be summed up briefly as a constant reaching upward and outward for the threefold life for its members strong, healthy bodies, cultivated minds and those graces of the spirit which are manifested as friendly every cause for good.

Location Of City Is Due To Vision Of Gen. Henry Sanford

The policy of the city in making municipal improvements has been twofold: to keep Sanford apace with other modern cities of the state, but primarily, to attract prospective homeseekers and investors. During the past two years 30 miles of street paving has been laid and provision made for obtaining an excellent supply of soft water. The construction of a yacht basin, the general improvement of the lake front, a public library, 18-hole golf course and an athletic field have all been provided. Practically all improvements which have taken place in Sanford during the past four years have been financed by local capital. This obviously manifests the faith Sanford citizens have in the future of their community and is akin to that spirit displayed by its founder.

Today Sanford is a corporation in which its citizens as stockholders have invested $12,000,000. Its financial condition is excellent because of the efficiency of its commission-manager form of government. Its bond offerings for municipal improvements always bring handsome premiums. It is very gratifying to Sanford citizens to have representatives of bond houses state that the reason for this is their investigation of the collateral behind these offerings warrants the payment of such premiums.

One of the most progressive steps ever taken by any city in the state was the passage of a bill at the last session of the state legislature empowering the city to appoint a city planning commission.

while Griffin and Princeton, the principal cities hit in Indiana, likewise had been cleared up except for some scattered areas.

Workers of the Wabash threatened to hinder relief workers at Griffin. This town, about 50 years old, and virtually destroyed by the storm, will not be rebuilt in the opinion of survivors.

Carbondale is Relief Center. Carbondale, Ill. was made the center of relief and rescue operations in southern Illinois, civic fraternal and religious bodies co-ordinating their efforts from that point.

Estimates of the material loss were increased as inventory was believed, would approximately six or seven million dollars in southern Illinois alone.

Indiana's section reported damage of from two or three millions. The combined total of Tennessee, Kentucky and Missouri is estimated to exceed a million dollars.

Permanent Relief Started

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., March 21.—Despite the steadily soaring death toll from Wednesday's tornado, Murphysboro is today turning its attention to the permanent relief work. Deaths of injured and the recoveries of bodies from a vast area of tangled and charred debris has pushed the total death tally to 201, and it is feared further exploitation of shattered homes covering 152 locks will further increase the list.

hold, members of both houses of Parliament, and a great gathering of prominent personages in all phases of national activity.

The funeral ceremony will take place Wednesday and immediately afterwards the body will be conveyed to Kedleston, where it will be buried Thursday in the presence of the family of the Marquis and personal friends.

As a mark of respect the House of Lords, in which Lord Curzon was government leader will carry out its usual business Monday. A motion for adjournment will be the signal for funeral orations.

The dead statesman, who was Lord President of the Council in the present British Cabinet through his long occupation of the office of secretary for Foreign Affairs and his world wide travels was better known abroad than most of the other British statesmen. At his London residence today there was a constant stream of messengers bringing telegrams of condolence and sympathy from all parts of the world. These including messages from numerous heads of foreign Governments.

Rather unusual reticence still is being observed by the family of Marquis Curzon concerning the cause of his death. None of the official bulletins of the physicians in attendance upon him ever mentioned the nature of the operation he underwent and only in the final stages of his illness was the news that congestion of the lungs has supervened allowed to be mentioned.

The fact that one of the surgeons who performed the operation was Sir John W. Thomson-Walker, a famous urologist, allowed the nature of the malady to be suspected, but no real indication of its actual nature has been announced.
