If the two chamber committees can agree on topics, they will make a combined presentation o lawmakers, Farr said.

"We want to tell our legislators they have a unified voice from their business people," Farr said.

Farr said the proposal emerged from a suggestion by Ned Johnson, 1990 chairman of the chamber governmental affairs committee. The proposal was approved by chamber officials last year.

are deployed in northern Kuwait and in Iraq just south of the strategic port city of Basra. The Pentagon won't say how successful the bombing has been, but sources speaking privately indicate the attacks have been at least moderately effective. Each B-52 can carry 50, 500 lb. bombs, while the F-A-18 Hornet is equipped with a 20 millimeter cannon as well as guided and ground-to-air

"It has been a constant, continual bombing with no letup," Col. Manfred Rietsch, commander of a Marine aircraft wing assigned to bombard the Guard units, said

Unofficial estimates of the size of the Republican Guard force vary, but it's believed to number between 100,000 and 150,000. The total Iraqi force deployed in and around Kuwait numbers about 545,000, according to Pentagon estimates. Destroying or severely damaging the Republican Guard force would break the strongest link in Iraq's defense of Kuwait,

U.S. military officials say privately.
In the more than five months it has occupied Kuwait, Iraq poured the majority of its ground forces into fortifled positions along Kuwait's Persian Gulf coastline and along the border with Satidi Arabia, extending west beyond Kuwait.

County commission thrown open?

Horald staff writer

SANFORD - A recent change in state election laws could mean Seminole County commission candidates do not have to live in the district they seek to serve at the time they qualify for that office. They may not even have to live in the county, according to one attorney.

Sandra Goard, Seminole County elections supervisor, will ask Seminole County attorneys to review how the law change may effect the Seminole County Charter, which requires Seminole County commission candidates to live in the commission when districts they are seeking when they qualify to seek that office. "I would think that you're going to see an increase in interest for the office of county commissioner." Goard said. "When people call in wanting to know what are the requirements to seek the office, the first question I ask them is 'Are they a resident of the district?' If not, I tell them they have to live in the district before they can run for the office.

"They usually don't ask too many questions after that."

The change could affect candidates waiting to see how county commission district boundaries may change next year before declaring biffs for office. The change could affect the balance of power in the county because candidates living in the more populated and powerful southern sections of the county could run for any district seat, moving into that district only if elected.

Last year, the Florida Legislature repealed the elections law requiring the district residency for candidates who qualify for the office. Candidates declare they are registered voters and do not hold another ected office when they qualify. The change dropping that requirement took effect Jan. 1. Goard said.

Wayne Malaney, former director and counsel for the House Ethics and Elections Committee, said the change was in response to a 1988 Florida Supreme Court decision which decisred the commission candidate residency law unconstitutional because the condistrict, not candidates seeking that office.

The court ruled the Malaney said he interprets wording in the Constitution and laws to mean that a county charter, which can supercede state laws, cannot change constitutional requirements.

"I'd say that provision in the charter has a problem." Malaney said. "The law's pretty clear they don't need to live there."

Malaney further said because neither the Constitution or state laws specifically say county commission candidates must reside in the county, residents of other counties might even qualify for office in Seminole County.

You could have a person living out of the state, for that matter." Malaney said. "A military person planning to retire in the county and registered to vote in the state could qualify." But Mike Cochran, general counsel for the state Division of Elections, argues state laws require qualified candidates to live stitution only requires elected in the county of the office they commissioners to live in the are seeking, although he agrees they do not have to live in the district.

Bill of Rights needed in GOP

As a first order of business of the new Congress, Democrats in the House introduced a civil rights bill that is more onerous in some respects than the measure President Bush rejuctantly vetoed last November. By so doing, the Democrats have served notice to Republicans that they intend to make civil rights a defining issue leading up to the 1992 elections.

The Democrats' move compels the Republicans to devise a civil rights strategy of their own. The very worst thing the GOP could do is to repeat its performance of last year. That negative approach found the party hoplessly on the defensive among minority voters.

Much of the Republicans' contribution to the debate on the Civil Rights Act of 1990 consisted of opposition to what they considered the most burdensome provisions.

In the end, Democrats refused to compromise on the most contentious of these provisions, which could have required employers to adopt de facto hiring quotas. Thus, Republicans were forced to oppose a bill labeled as civil rights.

House Democrata have chosen to include House Democrats have chosen to include that provision in the 1991 version of the bill. As written, it would go far beyond previous civil rights laws in defining discrimination in the work place. A company would have virtually no defense for statistical disparities in its work force. Moreover, such hiring criteria as education and work experience would be subject to legal challenge if minorities were under-represented, registreless of the reason.

Unoter thus flew definition of civil make 1 discrimination unless they could prove otherwise. To protect themselves against discrimination suits, employers likely would find it necessary to maintain on their payrolls a certain percentage of minorities - a numerical quota of sorts.

In response to the Democratic challenge, some Republicans have suggeted that the party mount an attack on quotas. Although such a strategy might be politically tempting, it would cast the GOF in an extremely unfavorable light with minority voters. And while the minority vote may not be critical to holding on to the White House in 1992, it can make the difference in key senate more. as make the difference in key Senate races, as the 1988 elections demonstrated.

The best approach for Republicans is to offer an alternative civil rights agenda, one that does not emphasise racial preferences but instead promotes empowerment — providing the opportunity for minority voters to control their own destinies. With this approach, the GOP would exploit what they see as the major flaw of the Democrats' civil rights bill, which, the GOP says, does little if anything to improve the economic plight of the most disadvantaged minority groups.

Indeed, the Civil Rights Act of 1991 fails to address the breakdown of minority families, the inadequacy of schools in inner city neighborhoods, the scourge of drugs in poor communities, or the incidence of poverty among the minority normalities. among the minority population. Rather, it primarily benefits the segment of the minority population least in need of helps better educated, middle-class professional workers.

The Republican civil rights agends should be simed at helping poor, disadvantaged minorities and other Americans to rise above poverty. It should be a comprehensive program to encourage family cohesion, high school graduation and full-time permanent work, all of which are essential to a productive life in American society.

Martin Luther King and Malcolm X

Throughout the ages every group of humankind united by beliefs, ideals, principles or ethnicity have had their heroes and heroines. After the first half of this century there appeared upon the local, national and eventually the international scene, a new hero. This man from Atlanta. Georgia was Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

King was unusually well prepared spiritually, educationally and philosophically to lead one of the most dynamic movements of this century. The son of a Baptist minister who became a minister with deep respect for individual dignity and the pricelessness of human life.

His admonition to his followers to embrace agape love when confronted by oppressors and react in a highly disciplined non-violent way was a fundamental recognition and appealed to the best in each person. It was psychological control over physical action.

Another hero to some Americans who was thrust into our consciousness almost simultaneously with King was Malcolm X. Malcolm's childhood and adult experiences were drastically different from those of King.

Malcolm's father had also been a Baptist minister. He was an outspoken Garveyite. He actively verbalized his convictions. This resulted in the families being burned out of two homes in Nebraska and Michigan. His father was killed and his mother became ill. This left Malcolm to support himself while quite young. Eventually, Malcolm landed in prison where he was exposed to the religion of Islam. Malcolm utilized the time he was in prison to enlarge his vocabulary and educate himself. He contended that the religion of Islam spread rapidly in prison because it wasn't hypocritical. He attributed to the Honorable Elijah Muhammad a primary role in the re-habilitation of black prisoners.

They were taught racial pride, racial identity and affirmation of their humanity as black males. He felt that the teaching of King "to turn the other cheek" was disarming to the Negro, since man had a natural right to defend himself.

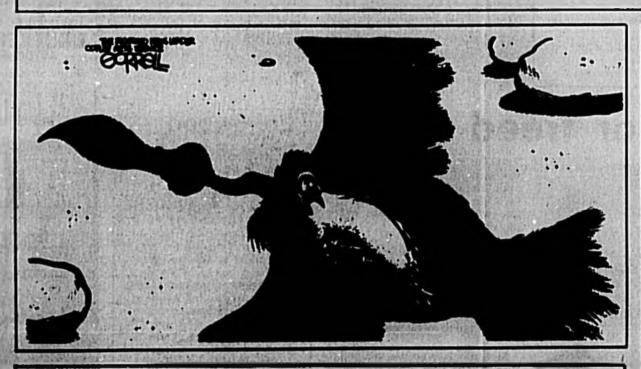

Students of African-American history have often pondered the impact of Malcolm X upon the public's decision in choosing between his or King's leadership. Did Malcolm's rhetoric actually create a climate that alienated many, leaving King as the beneficiary?

One of the moments in time that seemed to crystalize King's oratorical ability for posterity was his speech at the Lincoln Memorial, August 28, 1963, the assembled crowd was comprised of Americans of all ages, creeds and colors. It was a veritable ocean of humanity. A state of total concentration prevailed as we listened to King's "I have a dream" speech.

We could join him in his dream and envision the America he so aptly described.

It was ironic that the United Nationa selected January 15, 1991 as the deadline for pursuing peace in the Persian Gulf. On the birthday of this man of peace our country was on the threshold of

The struggle for equality of opportunity and economic well-being of all Americans continues. In this last decade of the twentieth century we are faced with the dual challenges of war and recession. Therefore, we need to rededicate ourselves to reach out in love to each other in memory of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

King committee official reflects

When I think of the struggle of Black Americans for freedom from bondage and various forms of racial segregation and discrimination imposed by law, I am compelled to serve in hopes that I too like Dr. King can make a difference.

Since 1967, a group of citizens and Mayor Bettye Smith known as the Martin Luther King, Jr., Steering Committee have worked diligently in planning and hosting events to commemorate the contributions the slain civil rights leader made to the world.

The outstanding leadership demonstrated by Dr. L. Sweeting, Mrs. S. Petty, and Mrs. S. Allen in the past as well as the supportive

Allen in the past as well as the supportive citizens of Sanford have all been contributed in compelling me to serve as the chairperson of this committee.

Working with this committee has been a rewarding, gratifying and learning experience mainly because the committee has developed positive objectives for improving human kind. Consideration is given in planning events that will assist in continuously events that will assist in continuously working toward a community where people of all ages, races, ethnic groups, and religious persuasions can live together in a mutual respect and harmony.

Dr. King's philosophy on non-violence is quite impressive. It played a positive role in the Civil Rights Movements of which I have a vivid memory. I can identify with this philosophy because I have experienced some of the tile of segregation.

Dr. King's teachings made one aware that at the vry center of nonviolence stands the principle of love. Along the way of life one must have sense enough or morality enough to cut off the chain of late. This can only be accomplished by projecting the ethic of love to the center of our lives.

This year, like previous years, the contributions made by the citizens of Sanford and the initiative taken in helping to implement activities planned indicates a seriousness of our community, working toward keeping the dream of Dr. King alive.

As the eyes of the world await the outcome in the Persian Guif, it is befitting that we pray in the Persian Gulf, it is befitting that we pray for peace and put into action these words of for peace and put into action these words of Dr. King:

"If there is to be peace on earth and good will toward men, we must finally believe in the ultimate morality of the universe, and believe that all reality hinges on moral foundations."

In these times of uncertainty, I can only look back to the time many of us returned from a foreign land after completing our tour of duty defending our right to freedom.

We did what we were trained to do and we came home to indifference. Comments such as, "Oh, you were overseas, where were you; what

Festival boycott asserted

As a member of Beta Sigma Phi for 24 years, along with my many sisters of Beta Sigma Phi, we have been involved in many community projects over the years. We have given our help and support wherever and whenever needed.

Lest year along with many other civic organisations in Sanford, we had a concession as a service project at the St. Johns River Arts Festival. We were looking forward to participating again this year. We have been told the Art Association is bringing in all outside commercial concessions.

We as taxpayers and civic-minded ladies resent the fact that we will not be allowed to participate this year; we feel all of our years of support and service mean nothing to the Art Association or the City of Sanford.

I am sure our organization is not the only one that feels this way. However, you can rest assured that as members of Preceptor Delta Delta we will boycott the featival: we will also encourage our families and friends to boycott it

Poland backs away from nuclear plant

GDANSK, Poland - The far-reaching and still-secret effects of the Chernobyl nuclear accident five years ago were what prompted Poland to cancel construction of its first nuclear power plant near Gdanak.

The Zarnowiec plant is half-completed and has already cost Poland $1 billion. But the work was done during the communist era when safety was not a priority. After seeing what happened at Chernobyl, the new government of Poland has decided it cannot trust workmanship of the old government.

The construction at Zarnowiec was so faulty and potentially dangerous that, according to our sources, no foreign company would even bid on a contract to finish the plant to meet West European salety standards.

The handwriting was on the wall for Zarnowiec ever since one Polish official got his hands on the classified 1986 government report on the mishandling of health and safety issues in Poland after the Chernobyl accipowdered milk.

Less than 100 copies of the unusually frank report were made, and communist officials from the regime of Gen. Wojciech Jaruselski thought they had destroyed all of those

The report showed that the communist government was criminally incompetent in the handling of contaminated milk. Western scientists warned that milk within a large radius of Chernobyl would be contaminated with radiation. Polish officials turned all of their milk into powder hoping that if they let it sit for a while, the radioactive iodine would decay. But someone made a mistake and distributed the powdered milk. When one scientist reported the mistake, he was given the brushoff by the government.

President Reagan had already offered to send Poland powdered milk from the United States, but the communist government rejected the offer as a "provocation," and sent blankets to the homeless in New York to underscore the fact that Poland didn't need any help from the United States.

Then the Polish government discovered that its own milk was extensively contaminated and some had even been distributed. The blankets were already on the way, so it was too late for the Poles to ask for the U.S. milk without losing face. So they simply said nothing and let their own milk be used.

The secret Polish report also says that the first signs that something had happened at Chernobyl were ignored. Swedish scientists first detected fallout the day after the accident on April 26, 1965. The Polish government labeled the Swedish warning as

When radioactivity began to reach Poland. scientists at a field station sent a telex to Warsaw, but no one read the telex because it was Sunday. Officials at a nuclear research station outside of Warnew also noted in-creased radiation, but they figured there was something wrong with their instruments, and turned them off.

Finally, when the weight of the evidence was too much to ignore, two days after the accident, government acientists in Warnew called the head of the Polish Atomic Energy Board. His accretary put them off for hours because he was busy.

Unofficial studies we have seen indicate that one in 10 people in Warnaw may have radioactive ruthenium in their lungs, as a result of the Chernobyl fallout. The figure in eastern Poland may be as high as one in three. The accret Polish report on Chernobyl warned that Zarnowicc was flawed too. But the communist government continued the construction and destroyed the report.

"What I see and what I feel is a new urgency and a new solidarity in black Miami and black Florida," said H.T. Smith, a Miami attorriey helping lead a tourism boycott in Dade County. "Florida is shamefully behind the South in terms of black people."

Florida is behind many other states in black-owned businesses, and Smith said none of the top 100 black-owned U.S. businesses are in Florida. The state hasn't elected a black congressman in this century and only two state senators are black, lowest total of any Southern legislature.

Joseph Feagin, a University of "Economically, they feel they are slipping backwards," said Feagin, who recently in-terviewed 140 black business people in Miami for a Dade County assessment study. He's also working on a book about middle-class black Americans nationwide.

ATLANTA - At Ebeneser Baptist Church, where the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. preached non-violence, his widow sat in the pulpit and talked of war in the Persian Gulf with students who came to learn about peace.

In the days leading up to
Monday's sixth federal holiday honoring Coretta Scott King's slain husband, the Mideast war was at the forefront of many minds.

Eric Sanders, a student at Kentucky State University who said he has relatives serving with U.S. forces in the gulf, had a question: What should he do about a war he one he loves? Mrs. King encouraged her listeners to oppose the war against Iraq — "This war is about oil and militarism: Don't let anyone tell you oil is not a consideration" - but not to abandon their support for American troops.

"We do not seek to defeat people, but to defeat injustice." she said at Friday's meeting. "Oppose a policy, not a person. ... The best way we can support the men and women who will be fighting is to continue to work for a peaceful solution."

King, who was a dogged opponent of the Vietnam War, might have answered the ervice — protection — as Allen did in his days as a firefighter. "I took my life in my hands when I was over there fighting fires," Allen said. "They're doing the same thing over there now in the Army, the Marines, the Navy, the Air Force."

A former fire chief in his hometown of Walton, Ky., Allen served as a captain on Aramco's firefighting crew. The job en-tailed spending several nights in the desert fighting fires that broke out in ro,ws of 30,000-gallon oil tanks, he said. Though many of his firefighting adventures in the desert were treacherous, he recalls some stories with a lighthearted spirit.

One of the fires he fought started in the home next door to his in the Arameo compound for American employees as a result of an accident involving his neighbor's whiskey still. Because the Saudi culture did not allow public sale or con-sumption of alcohol, Allen said, "Americans being the way they were, we all had stills in our kitchens.

When the fire was nearly extinguished, one of Allen's fellow firefighters brought him a pie that his wife Mary had left in the oven when she evacuated her burning home.

Allen was 40 when he left for Saudi Arabia in 1952. Before he answered an Arameo classified ad "on a lark," he wrote in-stallation manuals for General Electric at an Ohio jet engine plant.

When he decided to take the Aramco job, he said, he had no idea where exactly the company was sending him. Only through a map on a company brochure did he find out where Saudi Arabia was.

Allen had never flown on an airplane when he boarded a plane in Cincinnati on his way to New York, where he would catch a plane to the Middle East. Overwhelming doubt was enought to make him turn back for Kentucky when he reached New York, he said, but he couldn't afford a ticket home.

He had to borrow money to buy clothes for his trek to the desert. And because it was winter when he prepared to leave, he had to search for a store that still had summer clothes in stock.

Before he left for the Middle East, he bought five pairs of blue jeans that he never got to wear. 'They didn't wear such things over there," he said.

Jeans were not the only apparel Allen would learn did not fit in in the Saudi culture. When his wife and daughter Masil finally joined him in Saudi Arabia after he had worked there for two years, he said, the family received shocked stares when then 16-year-old Masil walked with him through town wearing shorts.

Tax service office opens

SANFORD - Jackson Hewitt Tax Service has opened an office at 1806 South French Avenue in Sanford.

This is the first location in the Central Florida area for Jackson Hewitt, the nation's leader in computerized prepara-Hon of Income taxes.

According to Sandra Potter, Manager of Jackson Hewitt, "I'm very excited about opening in Sanford. The company is fast growing and produces a quality tax return. We can provide excellent service to this community.

In addition to tax preparation, Jackson Hewitt also offers free electronic filing and refund anticipation loans. Customers who wish to take advantage of the "Superfast Refund" can have the use of their money in 3 days or less.

Jackson Hewitt is the second largest tax preparation firm in the country with 320 offices in 25 states.

Barnett posts profit

JACKSONVILLE - Barnett Banks Inc. posted a $101.2 million profit last year as Florida's largest bank added 36 offices, officials said.

Still, Barnett officials said 1990 was the first year since 1974 in which the bank has not reported increased earnings. In 1989, earnings totaled $258.7 million.

Barnett officials on Wednesday said this reflects the slowdown in the economy, which has impacted loan customers nervous, especially in the commercial real estate sector.

"Although this was the most challenging year in 15 years. we carned more than $101 million while increasing loan loss reserves 64 percent, absorbing the highest charge-offs in our history and continuing to expand our franchise," Barnett Chairman Charles E. Rice said in a news release.

Barnett's $101.2 million profit translated to $1.61 per share. Barnett's board of directors also declared regular dividends of $.33 per common share and $.625 per share of series B Preferred Stock.

Eastern reports on passenger load

MIAMI - Eastern Airlines carried heavy holiday traffic, but its planes were emptier in December than the year before, the cash-strapped carrier said.

The airline reported a 51.82 percent load factor and 1.42 passenger boardings last month compared to 53.95 percent and 1.7 million boardings in December 1989.

Eastern trustee Martin Shugrue was predicting late last year that the Miami-based airline, with about 800 daily flights to more than 70 cities, could be turning a profit by next month due primarily to a campaign to attract business travelers.

But published reports say money is running out and flights could be suspended as early as next week.

Eastern filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection days after the Machinists union strike was honored by pilots and flight attendants in March 1989.

Exams and anticipation at Lake Mary this week

BY ALLISON SLATER High school correspondent

LAKE MARY - At Lake Mary High School, the first semester exams weighed heavily on the minds of stressed students this week as they faced the dreaded tests which forced them to remember everything they had learned this year.

The tests make up one third of students' semester grades, so they were taken very seriously by most of the students.

Meanwhile, contestants who will participate in the Miss Lake Mary Pageant were hard at work practicing for the upcoming evening of events, which will be held January 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the LMHS Auditorium, 655 Longwood-Lake Mary Road in Lake Mary.

Seniors Sean Adams, Joe Menello, Chris Haney, Vince Alexander, Corey Har-relson, Steven Heidt. Manuel Saint-Victor and Colby Berger will serve as escorts for the night and have been practicing their routines as well.

The pageant winner will be chosen from the forty representatives of campus clubs and organizations on the basis of her beauty. grade point average, school involvement, polse and personality, which each make up 20 percent of the scores.

In addition to their other activities in the pageant, the contestants will wear special pageant dresses for the evening and must recite a quote, poem or thought for the day which they feel reveals something about their personalities.

After suffering through the rigorous examination period, students are now enjoying a four-day weekend as a result of tomorrow's Martin Luther King.Jr. holiday and a teacher work day on Tues-

Members of the first group for the year are: Bill Kirchhoff, stock broker; Steve Litchworth. pharmacist: Dr. Charaline Luna, director of Page School and James Turner, instructor in biological science at Seminole Community College.

Each participant is assigned two physicians, a primary care physician and a surgeon. Interns will spend one day with each doctor as they make rounds, perform surgery, take emergency calls and care for patients.

An orientation session is held for the interns to meet with the physicians. They are instructed on ground rules, stressing the necessity of protecting patient confidentiality.

Arrangements are made between the intern and pysician to meet and the schedule for that day is reviewed.

The two day internship is followed by a

'We are kind to our interns," said Dr. Pastis. "They can go home."

"Interns do have the option of volunteering for a full 24 hours," she added. "They can spend the night with the doctor and get up with the physician whether it's a phone call of pin worms in the middle of the night or an emergency call to the hospital."

As part of the agenda, the interns are invited to be guests at a Seminole County Medical Society

"Interns are also introduced to physician activities outside of the office," said Dr. Pastis. 'The program is scheduled to enable the interns to attend a society meeting. Murder suspect's hate for men likely motive

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH - While investigators gather evidence. more details have emerged about a woman accused in the serial killings of seven middle-aged men whose bodies were dumped along

"Her hating men, that's what seems to be the only motive for the killings," said Marion County sheriff's Sgt. Robert Douglas. "You've got a predator here that stalked and picked her victims and was very effective."

Police believe Atleen Carol Wuornos, 34, posed as a hitchhiker, a motorist in distress and as a panhandler to lure men to their deaths as they traveled on business.

Ms. Wuornos, charged Wednesday night in one of the shooting deaths, may win a unique position in U.S. criminal history - the first woman to commit a classic serial killing.

The murders occurred during a 13-month span starting in late 1989, mostly along the Interstate 75 corridor though north-central Florida. Six victims' bodies were dumped in desolate areas and their cars were recovered in remote sites, sometimes miles away. One remains missing.

According to investigators and witnesses, Ms. Wuornos and one-time lesblan lover Tyria J. Moore moved into a cheap Port Orange motel last September own the street from a biker bar they frequented called The Last Re-

Ms. Moore, who authorities say had knowledge of the erimes but did not participate. last week led authorities to a nearby creek where divers found a .22-caliber revolver believed used in the killings.

The gun, along with a flashlight and a pair of handcuffs also found, were sent to a Tallahassee laboratory for analysis.

When their money ran out after Thanksgiving, the two women moved out of the motel, and they told a sad tale to an old couple who run a Yugoslav restaurant called

"We're lesbians," they told the couple. "Can you help us? We feel everyone's against

The couple, who asked that their names not be used, told The Miami Herald they rented the women a room in the back of the restaurant for $50 a week. The women ate frequently there.

New student center opens at SCC

SANFORD - With a little fanfare and a little less flourish, the Seminole Community College Student Center has opened for business behind the building that served the same purpose for 10 years.

The new center, built at an approximate cost of $2.9 million. was dedicated in a birthday party-like atmosphere conducted by Charles Maxwell, director of the community colleges division of the Florida Department of Education.

"Seminole Community College is a shining light that most other community colleges in the system must stand in comparison to," he said to the crowd that had gathered last week for the ceremony in the modern building on the northeast side of the campus.

School officials had chosen the birthday theme for the celebration in honor of the 25th anniversary of the school.

"We thought that would be something fun to do for the students." Craig Orseno. coordinator of public information, sald.

There was no gathering of officials to cut a ceremonial ribbon at the entrance of the new 24,000 square foot facility. Instead, a few words were spoken by Earl Weldon, SCC president, Maxwell and Larry Dale, chairman of the district board of trustees

The center has been unofficially open to students since

"I didn't know there'd be a party today," Kassandra Loomis, a student from Lake took the podium. "I just think this new student center is going to be a great place to hang out."

Another student, Jeff Myers of Sanford, said he'd heard about the opening ceremony and wanted to see what the officials

"Didn't sound like much," he said afterward. "It's OK, though. the cake's real good and the building is really cool."

A three layer cake and a pair of single layer cakes covered in white chocolate were prepared for the occasion by Matlida Morabito, the school's culinary arts instructor and her students.

"This is why we're here," one of the teachers said, taking seconds on the cake.

The old student center is presently being converted into the school's bookstore.

Legislature to reconsider workers comp

By KEITH PHILLIPS Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - When lawmakers meet in special session Tuesday, they'll have six hours to fron out problems with a workers' compensation bill that has plagued them for more than six months.

The legislators also will consider legislation separating damage payments from legal fees to speed up payment for citrus growers who lost trees and seedlings in the 1984 citrus canker scare.

The Florida Supreme Court is set to hear a challenge to the workers' compensation law. Business leaders fear that if it is declared unconstitutional, premiums will soar and businesses will go bankrupt trying to pay them.

"The economic impact of this. if the law is ultimately declared unconstitutional, is just awesome - unlike anything we've seen in Florida," said Jim Brainerd, general counsel for the Florida Chamber of Commerce.

Mitch Franks, special counsel to the attorney general, said that if the Legislature fixes the con-stitutional defects cited by Leon Circuit Judge Lewis Hall, there is a better chance the law will be upheld by the high court.

"We're not conceding the statute is unconstitutional," he said. "We did make some recommendations to the House and Senate commerce committees' on what Hall ruled unconstitutional.

The intentions behind the 1990 law were good: reduce skyrocketing workers' compensation costs by reforming the system. After it went into effect July 1, the law cut premiums 25 percent and reduced benefits by a third. The law also disallowed exemptions for construction companies in an attempt to prevent abuse.

Lawmakers gave themselves a standing ovation when the House passed the bill with only one dissenting vote.

But Independent contractors walled. Suddenly forced to buy coverage for the first time, many claimed they would be put out of business. They also went to court and several judges issued restraining orders against the

In November, Hall declared the law unconstitutional because it was coupled with international trade issues and violated the Florida Constitution.

He also ruled that provisions concerning the appointment of Industrial Relations Commission members and the funding of the Workers' Compensation Oversight Board were a violation of separation of powers.

The case is on appeal to the Florida Supreme Court. If ruled unconstitutional there, bustnesses would suddenly face steep increases in premiums.

Brainerd said. He estimated that premiums would immediately rise by 25 percent. Insurance companies wouldn't stop there, he said, and will ruise rates anywhere from an additional 25 percent to 50 percent to make up losses.

When the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission graduated nine K-9s on Nov. 28. a new era in wildlife law enforcement began, according to Col. Robert M. Brantly, executive director of the Commission.

"With the graduation of K-9s Wise Guy, Inca. Sonny, Sadi, Shasta, Skyler, Alvin, Abby and Cody, the Commission becomes the first wildlife agency in the Southeast to use canines in and Lake Monroe. The larger wildlife law enforcement," Brantly said.

While K-9s frequently are used by police in drug detection and suspect apprehension, their effectiveness in wildlife law enforcement has been recognized only recently.

"We are especially excited that persons," Edwards said.

According to Edwards, the dogs can track over multiple terrains, ignoring cross trails and other distractions to find lost hunters or injured campers. They can even help locate bodies of drowning victims that are underwater.

The nine dogs chosen for the Commission's inaugural K-9 program were selected from more than 100 dogs offered for donation by the public. "Without the support of the general public, this program never would have gotten off the ground," said Inspector Randy Hopkins, chief of investigations and field operations for the Commission. "We are grateful."

Each dog in the Commission's K-9 program is a retriever. There are four black Labrador retrievers, four yellow Labrador retrievers and one Chesapeake Bay

'We selected retrievers because they have good noses, are easily motivated and have an overpowering desire to retrieve," Hopkins said. "We wanted dogs that could be petted by little children without fear.

The Commission's K-9s have not and will not be trained in aggression, Hopkins said.

Flounder and sheepshead are biting inside the Port. Guide Troy Perez reports plenty of trout and redfish on the flats of the Banana and Indian rivers.

Ponce Inlet has been very rough, but sheepshead will provide plenty of action inside the river by bridge pilings and channel markers. Redfish action is good in the Oak Hill area.

Attorney, once a 46, now size 8

By DORIS DIETRICH Herald Columnist

With the grace and poise of a queen, the stunning mistress of ceremonies caused heads to turn aboard the Grand Romance Rivership on Oct. 26, 1990, the magical evening of the Thomas E. Whigham AIDS SuperChallenge. The genial emcee was Sanford-born Marcia Lippincott, president of the TEWAS and a successul attorney with her own law office.

Lippincott literally dazzled the supporters attending the benefit charity ball - from her gentle. charming demeanor to her polished and sparkling commentary. She was a knockout in a shimmering. black jeweled gown, fashioned along the slim silhouette, that clung to her shapely body.

Eloquent and elegant. Lithe and lovely. A paragon of perfection.

This enchanting moment for Lippincott was a far cry from just two years prior when she wore size 46 clothing and weighed 343 pounds. Slipping into this exquisite size 8 gown was the thrill of a lifetime for the affable attorney who who had spent 18 months losing about 200 pounds. She had never before had the pleasure of wearing such small clothing.

During her 17 years as an attorney. Lippincott has thought "thin." But she was never able to wear professional suits, until now. Admitting that she has an unrivaled passion for food, Lippincott said she had a weight problem as a small child, but can't recall eating much more than the norm. She is a scrapper with a mind of her own and discovered at a tender age that life is a series of challenges. But conquering her lubbering, hulky image has been the greatest challenge of all.

After graduating from Seminole High School, Lippincott entered Florida State University and graduated from Notre Dame in 1973. against her: She was in the first all-male campus and, of course, she was overweight - way overweight. In fact, she was just plain fat. Was this a problem growing up and as she climbed the professional ladder? Sure, it was. "I made a space for myself every where I went," Lippincott sighed.

She went away to law school in London in 1971 and lost "150 pounds on my own." But she quickly added, "All for the wrong reasons. I would go for long periods of time without food and walk until my legs were bleeding."

The second time around is the charm for Lippincott. Several factors have been instrumental in making her current weight-loss odyssey a success. She is a supporter of Sanford Attorney Thomas E. Whigham who died in his 30s from AIDS contracted from blood units. Speaking of Whigham, she said." First of all, I got a lot of inspiration from what happened to him. This re-connected me with the value of Lippincott credits her best friend Here, she already had two strikes and secretary, Cheryl Russi, of Sanford, as being extremely significlass of women to invade the cant in her beginning her second diet program. She said Russi was the only friend who had the courage to say, "Marcy, you can be different If you want to.

Then, it was up to Lippincott who was tired of not being able to perform normal activities such as climbing stairs. She was also terribly lonely and was fed up with living an aberrant existence and her grotesque appearance. Here was a determined woman who finally made up her mind and who was "willing to do whatever I needed to do to get to a normal size." It was a short time before Christmas in 1988 when Lippincott embarked on a weight loss program that was to change her life. She began a medically-supervised diet program at Winter Park Memorial Hospital and for 18 months she was on a liquid diet of chocolate and chicken supplement drinks. Diet Coke, ice water and occasionally

"I prepared myself and the first couple of weeks were difficult," Lippincott said. But she had made up her mind.

Lippincott feels that any reasonable diet program will work. "The key to conquering a weight problem, much like resolving drug or alcohol addiction, lies inside the person. If you fix the internal problems, you can fix the external ones as well," she said.

On her current diet program. Lippincott says she has never felt deprived. "The key is not to feel deprived," she said. "I was finally able to accept that I had these problems and things were out of control. I chose this. Nobody made

Organizations help to trim excess fat at reasonable fees

How much does it cost to lose one pound of weight? Be prepared to pay out big bucks at commercial diet centers.

Fat people are vulnerable to the salesperson's closing arguments when it comes time to sign up for a nine week "deal."Before signing the contract, it may be advisable to check out the organizations that are more interested in your potential weight loss sans the overweight problem and not your money

One particular program charges $150 to $180 for a 30 pound-weight loss limited to nine weeks which makes the cost per pound equal to $5 and $6 or $16 and $20 per week. These programs are with class meetings. There is an additional charge called a registration fee amounting to $50 to $80. This fee raises the cost to $6.67 per pound of weight loss or $22.88 per week.

If one-on-one private weight loss help is preferred, then be prepared to pay from $300 to $700 and for the more familiar big name commercial programs. The e fee is between $1305 to $1402. The programs with their own food wil cost an additional sense to pay $52 to lose one pound of waste from your body when most people wouldn't pay $1 for one pound of nourishing fat-free, fresh tomatoes during the last economic squeeze a few months ago. There is an economical way to cat well, be healthy, and lose weight sensibly. The most convenient, inexpensive and sensible programs are located in your own community with people who are interested in your commercial gain.

When you have made the decision to trim your bod down to the average 3200 square inches, give Mrs. B. a call at 322-0657. She is the contact person at O.A., Overeaters Anonymous. The group meets in a room provided by Florida Power and Light on the corner of Myrtle and Fulton in Sanford.

O.A. follows the 12-step program of Alcaholics Anonymous, A.A. one day at a time. They have no dues and no registration fee. You are free to contribute if you want to help with expenses. Any money given is used to print literature and newsletters and to pay postage.

Another non-profit group is called TOPS. Take Off Pounds Sensibly, which has a registration fee of $14 and a $4 monthly dues. The money helps pay for awards, literature and helps to defray expenses of members who go to the conventions. Members set goals and it doesn't matter how long it takes to meet their goals.

One cigarette leads smoker to another

DEAR MARY: I've quit smoking dozens of times and every time I really expect and intend for it to work. But sooner or later something happens that makes me nervous, angry, or depressed, and I think to myself, 'I'll just smoke one ciagrette. then I'll feel better and won't smoke anymore." Well, it never works: I go right back to my old habits until the next time I vow to quit again. I'm so aggravated with myself and tired of repeating the same old stuff that hasn't worked in the past, but the harder I try to overcome it, the harder it is to stop. Do you have any ideas for helping me stop? REPEAT SMOKER

DEAR REPEAT: You've done some really important work in reaching your goal - you've identified your pattern of failure. Now, the other part of your work is to go through the pain of the psychological withdrawal, which some people feel is harder than the physical discomfort.

He very kind to yourself when the urge to have "just one" cigarette hits you. Ask yourself to wait ten minutes, then brush your teeth, use some mouthwash, suck on some hard candy, or talk to someone who will really listen to you. You'll find that by nurturing yourself through these painful moments. rather than getting mad at yourself, you will be more likely to be able to get through them without going back to eigarcties. Keep in mind that it takes a long time, months - maybe years, to retrain our mind and get rid of old thoughts and behavior patterns, but you can do it by talking yourself out of the need, each time it arises.

Myers offers some helpful tips on losing weight for those who can't afford or don't have the time to join a health club or weight loss group.

She said, "First, no diet in the world will work if you don't have the right mental attitude. People get fat and stay that way because of their eating habits. It's what, when and how much they eat, drink and the amount of physical activity, and the way they control it is mental attitude abut food and themselves."

"Eating to feel good, relax or just to have something to do will put weight on your body." She continues. "Everyone should examine their own feelings before trying to lose weight. I think that if people are happy being fat then they should stay that way. They shouldn't lose weight because someone else wants them to do it. However, if being thin would make them happier, then they should get the right mental attitude now, today, not next month. They have to like themselves as a person inside, Sanford, girl; Janice and the inner self. They don't have to Wichrowski, Apopka, boy.

Myers was further hindered in like the way their body looks today because they will lose the fat and will like themselves much better later."

> Myers emphasizes mental attitude as a must and suggests the elimination of the word 'diet" from your vocabulary.

> She said, "The word diet means depriving yourself of the food you like and it appears to be punishment. I don't use the word. Instead of thinking that I'm depriving myself, I use the attitude of I'm taking care of myself. I want to look better and am changing my eating habits for the rest of my life."

Myers has offered many helpful, sensible tips on losing weight by yourself or solo, it's working for her.
