1916 POLITICAL DATES
The three most important political dates in 1916 are now fixed. Election day, which always comes on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November by law, will fall on the next to the latest date possible the 7th of that month.

the heat of political controversy in the convention rivalled that of the torrid weather. While that convention's platform pledged the candidate to the single term idea no one entertains a thought that prevailing sentiment will support this in the coming convention, despite Bryan's efforts to secure its adoption. Natal Grass Promises Hay for Florida
The development of the Natal hay industry promises to make Florida independent of northern grass hays. For a long time the south has been importing hay from the north and a grass which would approximate the feeding value of timothy has been eagerly sought.

Natal grass has proved itself well adapted to the high pine sections of Middle Florida and seems especially well adapted to the lake region of Polk and Lake counties on land which was formerly considered worthless except for citrus.

Mr. Spencer is of the opinion that the grass should not be sown on new raw land. New land should be cultivated at least one season to some other crop.

The grass seems to be adapted to the south and central parts of the state. It is possible that well improved varieties and cultural methods it may be grown farther north.

It is an accepted fact that oxen usually die in pairs. One yoke fellow seldom survives the other. Working and resting side by side through many years, the animals develop so strong an affection that separation means death.

COUNTY HAPPENINGS

WEKIWA AND ETHEL ITEMS
The writer has been quite sick for a week is the reason this part of Florida has not been heard from for some time passed, but nevertheless we are still alive and wide awake.

Mrs. Tom Boyd entertained several at her home Xmas day and it is useless to say all who were there enjoyed her nice dinner. Those persons were Mr. and Mrs. Will Lee and family; Mr. P. J. Coates, Mr. Carl Deas, Mrs. A. O. Powell and little daughter, Gwendoline.

Mrs. A. O. Powell and Mr. P. J. Coates spent Sunday with Mr. Eugene Brown and little children, who are all alone since his wife has been in Orlando hospital for the past two months, but her friends will be glad to hear that she is slowly improving and will soon be able to return home.

After a very pleasant visit at their home in Wekiwa, Misses Achea and Minnie Holiday returned to Winter Park to resume their studies at Rollins.

Miss Annie Shepherd, who is teacher of the Ethel school, returned yesterday and will take up school again for the remainder of the session. Miss Shepherd is a good teacher and gets along lovely with the pupils and they are all doing nicely under her training and all love her very much.

Mr. Lafford's family all returned to Sanford after spending Christmas week in Wekiwa on the farm. They have three children going to school in Sanford.

Miss Alfred Cooper, of the family of the late Mr. Cooper, returned home yesterday after spending a week at the home of her uncle, P. J. Coates. Alfred made every friends while here and we were sorry to see him leave.

Mr. P. J. Coates, Alfred Cooper, Mrs. A. O. Powell and little Gwendoline rode up to Shell Mountain Sunday and took lunch and have their pictures taken in the boat on the Wekiwa river, which is lovely scenery. Shell Mountain is a lovely place for picnics.

Mrs. Hardy Boyd returned home Saturday after spending a week with her mother in Mascott. Mamie Boyd left today for Kissimmee to pack oranges.

Miss Daphney Vermillion returned to Sanford to resume her studies in school after spending her Xmas holidays very pleasantly in Wekiwa.

At 12:00 o'clock the New Year was heralded in a very unique manner. The music was furnished by the Longwood orchestra.

AFTER THE GREAT WAR

overcrowded, undermanned hospitals—where they sag for the real nurses, and turn their hands to anything from writing wills and messages for dying men to menial and often horrible tasks of washing, scrubbing and disinfecting.

That was in the day when every gentleman who was not a priest must be a fighter and could be a dandy only by the way. It was many years later that another type arose, dandy, brave and fighter afterward, the graceful laborer the society top suddenly transformed by patriotism, at his country's call, into a hero.

The great war of today, although it demands of many of the noble women who have answered the call greater ability, responsibility and thoroughness of training than has ever been demanded of women before, has also offered opportunities of service to others, hitherto merely women of fashion and the gay world, which many have eagerly accepted.

As for those who are not obliged to labor, by the condition in which they are born, they are more miserably than the rest of mankind, unless they indulge themselves in that voluntary labor which goes by the name of exercise.—Joseph Addison

Centuries ago a chronicler of the Crusades recorded quaintly of a certain valiant and valorous knight: "Three wounds he received in this battle, whereat he laughed, but the paynim who shored his tall helmet he cursed deeply and rested not till he had with his good sword, shorn off his head."

Women lawyers of Chicago have banded together to save girls who have been found guilty of a first offense from being sent to jail. The organization will be known as the "Public Defenders League for Girls" and there are at present thirty women lawyers who are members. They will protest against having girls sent to jail in punishment for the first offense, subsequently to become the prey of professional bondsmen.

Goes to Washington

The editor of The Herald has just received a wire from Congressman Sears that Reginald Holly has been appointed to the position of page for the House of Representatives. He will leave at once to resume his duties and will probably remain at the national capital through the summer months, when he will take a special course to prepare for the naval academy at Annapolis. This is an honor to the young man and is probably the first instance in the history of Sanford where a Sanford boy has been appointed a page in the national house of representatives. His parents and his many friends here will hate to see Reginald leave the city but the opportunity for advancement is a good one and cannot be ignored. Reginald is anxious to become an aviator in Uncle Sam's school and he will fit himself for that position.

Presbyterian C. E. The Presbyterian C. E. held a most enjoyable social and a beautiful, watch night consecration service on New Year's Eve at the residence of Mrs. Geo. Paxton.

Rook, dominoes, flinch, checkers, etc. were played until nearly twelve o'clock. During this time refreshments, consisting of coffee, tea and sandwiches were served.

Then Dr. Brownlee called the prayer meeting and after a song and sentence prayer service he gave a short, impressive talk on consecrating ourselves anew. A few minutes before twelve o'clock all joined in singing the beautiful consecration hymn, "Take my life, and let it be consecrated Lord, to Thee." This song was continued until after the midnight hour struck and ushered in the New Year.

The meeting was then thrown open and all invited to say a few words on "Aims for the New Year." Many made good resolutions and Mr. Curry summed them all up in his talk, when he stated his sturdy aim for the New Year, which is a part of the C. E. prayer and reads "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength I promise to strive to do whatever He would have me do."

After this, Mr. Paxton, in behalf of the society presented Dr. Brownlee with a handsome bouquet of roses. This was a most beautiful and a very fitting gift. This bouquet was accompanied by a note which expressed the love and loyalty of the young people for their pastor and their appreciation of his energy and enthusiasm in their behalf. Dr. Brownlee could only say a few words at this unexpected gift and called on Mr. Curry to say something. Mr. Curry responded as usual, with an inspiring talk. The meeting was adjourned with the C. E. benediction.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND EVENTS... A RESUME OF SANFORD HAPPENINGS UP TO DATE

R. Y. P. U. Watch Meeting. The Senior and Junior Baptist Young People's Union met at the Temple last Friday evening to watch the old year die and to celebrate the glad new year.

They first paid visits to several homes in and around the city, and although they were about seventy-five strong nevertheless they received a hearty welcome at every place. They were transported in Dutton's big truck and several other cars of lesser magnitude, first to Mrs. Rowe's and Mrs. Getson's where they were charmingly entertained by the Misses Devlin with songs and piano selections, also the "inner man" was refreshed with delicious sandwiches.

Next the home of Mr. Wheelless was visited and every one was given a sack of crisp, savory pop corn. After a ride across town the home of Mr. R. H. Davis was reached and Mrs. Davis with her beaming smile dispensed home made cookies to the hungry multitude. The next stop was at the Stewart home on Union avenue, where roasted peanuts were served. Two homes on Crissy avenue were next visited. The Gatchels, who showed the crowd a big pile of apples on the table and then watched the pile disappear as if by magic. Mrs. Brisson, upon hearing of the many wanderings of the merry-makers invited them to stay awhile and rest. She passed around oranges and music was enjoyed, and they were loath to leave.

On returning to the Temple chocolate and wafers were served and highly fashioned games were played until near midnight, when they went down to the lecture hall where a devotional service was held and the small societies and singing units announced the arrival of 1916.

Delightful Entertainment. Mrs. J. B. Ray was hostess at a delightful gathering last Friday when she invited the teachers and other members of the primary department of the Baptist Sunday school, of which she is secretary, to her home on Sanford Heights for an informal afternoon. The hours were spent pleasantly in music, readings and conversation, also discussing plans for the furtherance of the work in which all were interested. Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Ray, ably assisted by Mrs. Sperring, and when twilight warned the guests that night was approaching all departed expressing their pleasure to their hostess and wishing her a very happy new year.

Clarence Carter. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Carter have arrived in the city after a quiet marriage in Yalobusha. Mrs. Carter was Miss Blanche Gupton and has many friends in the Georgia city where she made her home. Mr. Carter is the editor of the Journal of the H. & O. Garage and has been in the city for the past two years. He is a former resident of Yalobusha and it was in that city that the romance culminating in marriage first began. For the present Mr. and Mrs. Carter will make their home with Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Carter at their home on west First street.

New Year's Reception. Among the delightful New Year's affairs was the "at home" of Rev. Arthur Peck and his mother, Mrs. Peck, at the Episcopal rectory on Saturday evening. Mr. Peck, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Whitner, Mrs. W. E. Watson and Mrs. Peck received the guests at the door and after an informal visit with them gathered there they were escorted to the dining room where Mrs. G. F. Smith, Mrs. W. E. Watson, Mrs. Deane Turner and Mrs. B. F. Whitner served a delicious luncheon of chicken salad, grapefruit, sandwiches and coffee.

From eight until eleven the guests arrived and departed and the members of all churches were present to give New Year's greetings to Mr. Peck and his mother.

Party of Guests. Mrs. M. G. Rowe gave a little party Wednesday evening from 6 to 9 for her husband, Marion's guests, Ellen Chappell and Mollie Abernathy of Sanford.

As the prettily trimmed Christmas tree was still standing in all its glory, and the other decorations of bells and red-berried greens were as pretty as ever, the girls decided that a Christmas party would be in order. These four little ladies of the household did most of the planning and preparation.

Games were enjoyed the first part of the evening, among these being a couple of contests, one a geography

FIRST TO BUILD TRENCHES Romans Instituted System of Field Fortifications Which Are Used by the Armies Today.

The Romans who were the first to make a real science and art of war, were responsible for one of the principal features in western Europe, the fortified frontier. This does not mean the ordinary fortified frontier as it was known up to 1914 a series of strong fortified camps with unit trenches gaps between them. It was in southwestern Germany that the Romans built as a protection against the invasions of German barbarians, what was the prototype of the line of trenches which today runs from Switzerland to the North sea. And just as the German trenches in France and Belgium are to all intents and purposes the frontier of the German empire, so the Roman trenches the lines Germanicus were part of the frontier of the Roman empire.

The northern known in ancient times as the Pfahlgrenzen or palisade ditch—ran from the east bank of the Rhine, near Bonn, across the Taunus mountains and the Main in a general southeasterly direction south to near Stuttgart. It consisted of an earthen wall with a ditch—the trench being of course, on the outside and the wall being the position of the defenders. The wall was topped by a palisade and at intervals there were towers—burge—decuped by small bodies of troops, who patrolled the intervening sections of wall. At longer intervals were stone redoubts, castella—where larger bodies of guards were stationed. One of the peculiarities of this frontier—which in its details represented, of course, an artificial boundary through what at the time was a very sparsely settled country—was that a stretch of about fifty miles in length ran in a straight line due north. It has been referred to in English and German writings as one of the earliest known boundaries on the American plan.

Near Stuttgart the Pfahlgrenzen meets the Teufelsmauer—the devil's wall—which was the name given in medieval Germany to the other half of the lines Germanicus—a rampart of stone which extends a little south of east till it meets the Danube at Regensburg. There were towers at intervals to strengthen this, and in the main it was apparently garrisoned much like the Pfahlgrenzen.

Chance for Ugly Men. There's all kinds of luck for the men in the back row, those whose facial scenery is not attractively arranged. A whole bunch of beauties in a Broadway chorus declare they just love an ugly mug, because the machinery in its thick box is always well oiled. It is their opinion that the brain of a pretty man could easily be carried in the vest pocket of a mosquito. And by way of an argument, one girl says: "Go right through the world's history and you will find that the really big men—the men who have done things—were ugly. Women admire them because they are distinctive forces, because they are big and strong, both mentally and physically, and it is a distinct feminine quality to love and crave for that we lack. I'll wager there are many women who have secret admiration for this or that prize fighter because of his physical force, and I know lots of them who shake no bones about being 'crazy' about this or that football hero." So it's all settled. And it will be worse than useless for any "pretty" men to entertain any fond matrimonial hopes where this beauty contingent is concerned.—New York Times.

A Curious "Risk"

Nearly every business man contributes bits of his knowledge to the common stockpile which strikes most people as a curious piece of information that plate glass insurance companies class under the "extra hazardous" risks. The explanation given is that a black surface absorbs the sun's rays. By this means, it is pointed out, an unequal expansion is produced throughout the plate, and under the influence of a sudden gust of cold or any other quick change of temperature a strain is developed which may break the glass.

Harbors on the Adriatic

The principal ports of the Adriatic are those of Manfredonia on the west, Venice and Trieste on the north and Quarnero on the northeast. There are numerous and admirably bay harbors extending from Rome and culminating in the splendid landlocked harbor of the Bocche di Cattaro. The Strait of Otranto, where Italy approaches nearest to the Italian mainland, is 45 miles wide. Here is the magnificent Albanian Harbor, Avlona.

PUTS THE INTELLECT FIRST

Educator Asserts That Its Training is of More Importance Than is That of the Body.

Committing on the theory, now so popular, that educators should concentrate on the training of hands rather than the training of minds...

"If you could persuade every woman to sweep a floor properly, I doubt much if she could still be guaranteed an agreeable companion for a rainy Sunday," continues the writer.

"If there is anything beneath the stars more pitiable than the elderly man or woman with no intellectual resources from which to draw occupation and interest, I have not yet seen it.

"No mechanical process can guarantee to us an interesting life, or insure us against boredom. But just because it is something more than a mechanical process a college education of the right sort comes nearer doing this than any other agency we know—certainly nearer than any drill in cow-milking or scientific cooking.

ARE WIDOWS GOOD STEPMOTHERS?

True, a new mistress now I chase The first foe in the field, And with a stronger faith embrace A sword, a horse, a shield.

There are always two sides to every story. A stepmother's existence, trials and worth the world never stops to consider.

the household has a different opinion of what is being done and what should be left out. In short, the bickerings and lamentations that frequently greet the parental ear slowly but surely warn him that the house is being divided against itself.

He knows of an estimable widow whose sympathies and kindly feelings for his years of distress lead him to broach the subject of marriage a second time.

Neighbors behind closed doors, wonder if she realizes fully the magnitude of the trials before her for there will be trials even though she is an affiant. The new wife's nature is one of love and tenderness from the start toward the helpless children who are thrown upon her care.

These bitter thoughts of unappreciation are shared in some instances by the relatives and friends of the mother who passed away. While spending the day with kinfolk the grand mother and elder folk gather round their little visitors and inquire eagerly.

How cruel and malicious such notions are. Better were they to strive to teach them to have faith and take a deep interest in her, to look upon her as their friend instead of sworn enemy, their counselor and guardian of their hearts' interest.

Something has whispered into my ear (And I feel the message is true) All that your soul has yearned for, dear, Is coming, you, coming to you.

Trials with Handsome Man. No man is inclined to slap at nature for giving him a good looking face. On the contrary, he is apt to feel a certain exultation over it, but, nevertheless, if it is a handicap to him it may an instance in the marriage race.

What woman does not admire a man with a fine physique and face good to see? But he finds difficulties the plain man does not encounter in his search for a wife. Plain women are fearful that there would be too much of a contrast between them were they to wed.

him which she could see in other woman's eyes came her worry instead of pleasure and his slightest attention to them bring a stab of pain to her heart?

Nine times out of ten, it is the exceedingly handsome man who proves to be not proof against the wiles of the pretty feminine creatures who adore good looking gentlemen.

Handsome men are apt to be a bit extravagant, too. Fine pictures need the framing, an idea the tailor eagerly urges upon him. If he were to choose a beautiful woman for a wife, the day would be envied. They would make an ideal and much to be admired couple.

On the contrary, if booty prizes were to be handed out for homeliness, she would have carried that off with the least difficulty. Whether or not he can succeed in making his wife a contented woman rests chiefly in his ability to resist being flattered by other women and his power of concentrating his devotion upon the one whom he has vowed to love and cherish next to his God.

It has been said that the most beautiful of women lose their charm soonest, scarcely a semblance of it remaining with them to old age, and that homely women grow fairer and sweeter with the years. I do not add or detract anything from this theory save to remark that what is said of the goose might equally apply to the kander. In other words, the same transformation is quite liable to take place in the handsome man.

Does Marriage Affect a Woman's Career? The girl who has the "career bee" in her bonnet should think long and earnestly as to whether she ought to marry a certain dear fellow who is very much in love with her or fling sentiment and all thoughts of marriage to the winds and follow, alone, the bent of her ambitions.

There are those who disapprove of pretty young actresses tying themselves down in wedlock to a husband whom they must live the greater part of their lives away from if they follow their profession. At five and twenty they are at the zenith of their youthful beauty. They are far happier single with the whole world sighing at their feet.

A decade of years, aye and another fifty before the pretty favorite of the footlights, awakens to the truth. Her youth and beauty have blighted from her like a song that has been sung. Those who declared the loudest and most eagerly that she should remain single are the first to thrust her into the background, smirking upon a younger, fairer beauty whose comeliness is all her own, and as the result of clever make-up to hide the ravages of time.

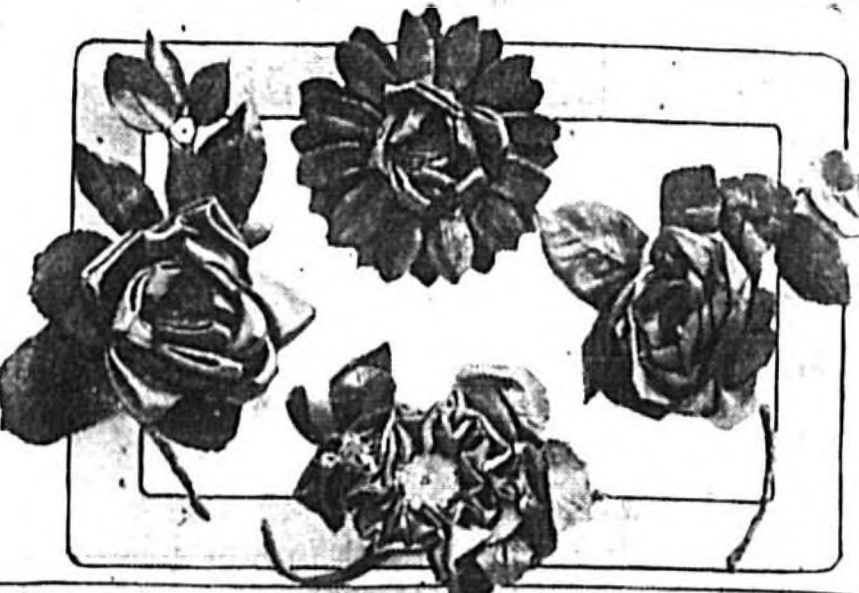

The business girl faces the same problem. Should she marry and cling unconditionally to the paying position which she has gained by years of duty and unceasing toil? Friends tell her she is earning more with which she can purchase comfort, nay, luxury than any man she might marry could, or would, buy for her.

In after years the wife who had struggled in poverty had all cares lifted from her shoulders and her heart by her strong, willing sons and daughters. It was her turn then to pity the single woman who had bartered happiness for a business career, losing in old age because of her infirmities, and being forced to pay strangers liberally for every hands turn they did for her, little by little the full amount of her savings. She knew too late, marriage would have been best.

The great singer, the artist, the teacher, stenographer, she who is engaged in any money-making career, should realize that four years for making and saving money are all too few. What then? A lonely and disappointed life if she must carry her burden the rest of the way alone.

Taken all in all, marriage is the best career a woman can engage in for happiness at a time she needs it most. One cannot engage in business pursuits and attend to rearing a family at home at one and the same time, but home life is best. The love which shelters a woman from the cold of the world wide plaudits, scale public,

Corsage Flowers Things of Rare Beauty

Designed to adorn the corsage of the afternoon or evening gown, to nestle in the close-fitting fur neckpiece or to add a final touch of elegance and color to the muff, the corsage bouquet is blooming in the sunlight of increasing favor.

The dark colors that are favored this season, and the furor for furs, make it possible for the corsage flower to appear at its best in street and visiting toilettes they form exactly the right background for it.

The new "vanity corsage" or "vanity flower," is shown in the group of blossoms pictured here. It includes two roses, made of ribbon set in millinery foliage, and a conventional tulle with maid-hair fern and rose foliage. The fourth flower is not meant for the corsage, but is set on the dressing table. It is a beautiful receptacle for one of the small feminine vanities, for each of these flowers is more than it seems, and has another good reason, besides that of being beautiful, for appearing among the belongings of a fair woman.

These vanity flowers are captivating and very convenient. They make fine holiday gifts.

"The Woman Pays"

Valli Valli, the renowned English actress, who has a long list of stage successes to her credit in both England and America will be seen on the screen here at the Star Theatre Tuesday, Jan. 4th in "The Woman Pays," a five act dramatic feature picture produced by the Rolfe Photo Play Inc. for release on the Metro program. This production affords Miss Valli an excellent opportunity to give full sway to her remarkably versatile talents, which insures an interesting picture. In the role of Both Coventry she is shown as an attractive, ambitious and vain woman, who toys with fate and brings about the financial ruin of her husband, through her love of extravagance and social life. In the end she realizes her mistake, when her beauty is marred through an accident in a terrific storm, and she makes amends and saves her husband from public disgrace.

Miss Valli is supported by a cast of distinguished artists of the screen and stage, including Marie Empress, Edward Brennan, John E. Bowers, Paul Lawrence and Mrs. Julia Hurley. Admission 5 and 15c.

Pauline Frederick Superb in a New Role

In this adaptation of the powerful dramatic success by Henry Arthur Jones, Miss Frederick plays an entirely different type of woman, the loyal wife and devoted mother who goes through the mental tortures of the damned to save the name of her little boy from disgrace at the hands of his father. It is a tremendous role with compelling forcefulness in its every moment. Mrs. Gilmore is a sensitive, high strung woman who is passionately devoted to her little son Ned. The gradual cooling off of her husband's affections has slowly alienated Mrs. Gilmore's love for him, and this pent up emotion has been poured out in her apron of the boy.

When the infidelity of her husband and his cowardly murder of the man he has wronged become known to her, Mrs. Gilmore, instead of giving way to her natural feelings of revenge and hatred for the man is overwhelmed by the one great desire to shield the name of her son from disgrace. So, for the sake of little Ned the mother perjures herself on the witness stand and wracks herself into total exhaustion while fighting to keep the name of Gilmore clean.

At the Star Friday, Jan. 7th. Admission 5 and 15c.

Great Show Tonight

In accordance with the previous announcement made by the management of "September Morn," the cyclonic musical festival which delighted Chicago and other cities the past year will be the attraction at the Allen Theatre tonight.

"September Morn" is a girl, song, farce and dance show constructed purely to entertain. The story is woven about the famous Chuba's painting called "September Morn"—two imposters claim to be originators, one Rudolph Plastric, owner of an art studio who knows nothing of the art insists that he is the originator and painted the famous picture while immediately upon the scene arrives an actress who boasts she is the originator and engages a press agent to circulate broadcast that she is the originator. The excitement following provokes a world of mirth while the two imposters are dodging each other, and to make the situation more ludicrous an army officer by chance meets and becomes infatuated with the actress and in the meantime discovers the fact that she is a good friend of his wife, which goes to entangle the situation and produces worlds of laughter.

The scenic production is beyond all expectations and the costumes are a riot of color. The company numbers nearly fifty people and the large beauty chorus appears to advantage in many dashing song numbers and ensembles. The large cast includes Carl George, Joe Taylor, Mahel Luffin, Vera LaVergie, J. J. Patton, Curt Vance, James Bisher, Walter M. Wolff.

THE POE OF THE SCREEN

Walthall Will Be Seen Here in "The Raven"

Henry B. Walthall, Essanay's leading actor, has been busy in photo play before he won for himself the appellation of "The Poe of the screen." He naturally, emotional temperament, is well fitted to the markable likeness to the famous poet's tales of the "Raven" which garnish the programme.

At the Star Friday, Jan. 7th. Admission 5 and 15c.

title, Mr. Walthall naturally was selected for the leading role.

Long a student of Poe, Mr. Walthall learned much which aided him in emotional portrayals from the works of the noted writer, and it was he who discovered in "The Raven" the remarkable possibilities for a photoplay tragedy which, for intensity of action, fascination and wonderful photographic effects, it would be difficult at all to equal.

And in the intensely emotional character of Edgar Allan Poe, Mr. Walthall regarded as the most talented actor in motion pictures, has found unlimited opportunities to display his particular abilities to the best advantage possible and he has tried himself in this role to the heights of histrionic glory.

Born on a cotton plantation in Shelby county, Ala., on March 16, 1878, Mr. Walthall passed his youth on his father's farm, studying law for a time. He always had a hankering for the stage, however, and at twenty-two he abandoned his legal studies to join in a theatrical stock company, with which he remained until the Spanish-American war started. Then he joined the army.

After the war, he went back on the stage, playing throughout the east until 1906, when, quite by chance, he drifted into motion picture work. He has been with Essanay since June, starting in such successful plays as "Temper," "The Woman Hater," "The Circular Edge." He was also leading man in "Birth of a Nation." He is married and "proud of it."

Dangerous Household Pets.

It is commonly supposed that the danger from hydrophobia comes from the roving, ownerless, stray dogs of the city. This is not the real truth. Most of the victims of hydrophobia are bitten by house dogs or cats that are household pets.

First Oranges in America.

Denial has not been made by the world as an eyewitness of the first crop of oranges to have introduced oranges into that country, planting a few pips close to a high school house, whose growth has carefully watched over by some cautious native priests.

Girls Should Be Used.

It is a mistake to think that a girl is a mere plaything, and that her only duty is to be loved and cherished by her sweetheart. A girl should be used as a man would use a tool, and that means that she should be used to the best advantage of both.

Laura Jean Libbey's TALKS ON HEART TOPICS

GIRLS WHO RUN AWAY FROM HOME.

When I loved you I can't but allow I had many an exquisite minute; But the soon that I feel for you now Hath even more luxury in it! Thus, whether we're on or we're off, Some wretchedly seems to await you, To give you is pleasant enough, But, oh, 'tis delicious to hate you!

By all that I can see or hear, can learn by tale or history, I am led to the observation that it does not augur well for a girl's future for her mother to give her her own way from childhood up to young womanhood.

"She knows just what she wants, and from the time she was ten years old, and indeed, even before, I allowed her to select her own hats, cloaks, and dresses, choose the new fags, and even decide what we should have for our dinners. So when I raised a decided protest against the young man she was inviting to often to call upon her, I was terrified at her resentment and rage at what she deemed my unbecoming interference. She threatened to run away from home. If I do not permit the man—whom I know to be a worthless scoundrel, to visit her, she will assuredly carry out her threat. Thus, my heart would break."

This is an excerpt from a letter which a tormented mother has written me asking what she shall do to stop the girl's avowed intention of running away.

We have all heard of the needless loss of looking the barn door after the frolicsome young colt that has never known halter or hindrance has de camped to fields new and pastures green. It also is useless to look back and point out what should have been done in the years that belong to the past to raise the daughter to look up to and respect her mother's opinion and heed her decision.

We must make an appeal direct to the girl's sympathies to show her the folly of leaving her father and loving heart—the roof that has sheltered her and the friends around which those who love her gather, to cast her lot among strangers in a cold and merciless world.

There are girls who are foolish enough to believe that they are able to support themselves, and that they can take care of themselves in the almost vast and unknown world to which they are sent, and quite so often as they pass.

A fortnight's experience is ample to take the fine enthusiasm out of the most determined young woman. Post time that yield scarcely more than enough money to hold soul and body together are quite as hard to secure as the better ones, where there is seldom or never a vacancy. Boarding house landladies do not ask her what she would like for dinner. She has to take what is set before her, not during to make protest.

In regard to her company, she finds little welcome. The parlor is for all; he cannot monopolize it. If he puts in an appearance three or four times a week the businesslike landlady makes no bones in pronouncing, "Men who have no compunction about coming around to wear other people's chairs out, burn gas, and take up room" decidedly unwelcome visitors. In short, unsuccess. If the girl retorts spiritedly, she is soon after requested to give up her cheerless hall bedroom for some working girl who has no visitor.

If the girl weeds the young man whom nobody likes, she is apt to find she has made a still greater mess of it. There's two in the hall bedroom of some other cheaper boarding place, and her scant earnings have to be stretched to cover the cost of feeding a husband. What the home folks say about her lover should have much influence with a girl. Under no circumstances should she run away from a loving mother and sheltering home. She would have all of her after life to repent of it.

QUIZZING HER HUSBAND.

When hearts and lips have grown cold, And love is but for an hour, When life a romance has been told, And kisses have lost their power, Then shall soft nights fleet, No more a dream to enchain, Yet kisses are always sweet, And love is never in vain.

The man who has a wife so trustful that she believes implicitly in him, never questioning the truth of his words or honesty of purpose, has gathered unto himself a jewel that is both rare and precious. He should be most careful of his treatment of her.

The general run of wives are built on an exactly opposite plan. They harbor a lurking doubt regarding hubby's statements even while he is telling the truth. Most wives are "born lawyers," leaning toward one branch only—cross-examining. Once the suspicion that he is fickle dawn across her mind, the average married woman, instead of giving herself up to weeping in secret, sets about to ascertain, by adroitly quizzing her husband, a hither or her lurking suspicions are groundless or he can be drawn into an admission of the transgressions.

Many a husband has been drawn into snares he little dreamed of by the wife to whom the quizzing habit had become a mania to find out his doings.

If he is half an hour late for dinner, explaining that business detained him, instead of letting it go at that, he is sure to undergo a severe quizzing, later on when he has well-nigh forgotten the matter, where he was on a certain evening; If he walked or rode straight home; If he encountered anyone he knew, and what a two-dollar bill missing from his pay envelope on that particular evening went for.

The average husband forgets his excuses as he utters them. It is therefore difficult for him to think up the same story twice.

Not one husband out of fifty deceives his wife with deliberate evil intentions. He thinks it wisest and best sometimes not to mention matters which might raise a domestic row.

No matter how earnestly admonished to keep silent the husband sooner or later under carefully prepared quizzing discloses the fact that his sister is ill and he had been to see her and where the missing bill went to there's no use in talking the quizzing wife. Her good-natured husband no match for her cleverness in unearthing anything and everything he had made up his mind to conceal from her that she might not be worried.

She keeps her better half constantly in hot water. His every word or glance is apt to be misconstrued. He spends the greater part of his life attempting to explain matters to her satisfaction.

He who has a quizzing sweetheart who wants to know where he was on the evenings he was not by her side, whom he saw and all about it should beware tight cars. He has a long rough weary road to travel after he weds her. It is a habit that is— but never vanquished by even the finest pattern of husbands. It is but a short step from quizzing to nagging. When that sets in, happiness is in imminent danger of being overthrown. No man loves a wife the better for it. Indeed, if more often means love, it may collapse. The woman who starts in to quiz her good husband builds a wall which may eventually part them.

GOOD BY, SUMMER GIRL

It is not supposed that far women are the only ones anxious to select the right place for their summer outing. Many a man scans the resort column and news with as much interest as the women.

All these minds do not turn in the same groove, there are those who seek the excitement of the city, and quite so often as they pass.

The resolve is certainly praiseworthy. Such a young man is a real find to the hotel proprietor who is finally pulling his hair in his chest search for young men of good position, character and social prominence, as if that was to make his hostelry popular with families with numerous descendants. The papers are glad to print the list of eligible young men who will sojourn at this famous hotel or that one this summer. The girls read, but lo! visions of hop, ball, stroll, flirting and love-making do not turn them from the plans they have made for their summer outing.

Instead of flimsy lace dresses, white satin, French beaded slippers, summer scarfs and whole bolts of baby-blue ribbons, the girls will show you a blue serge skirt, middie blouse that can be washed and worn without laundering, thick soled lace boots, sweater and tam-o'-shanter cap. That means that nine-tenths of the girls who used to go in for the gay life at the summer hotel are to have quite a different vacation this season. They have danced all winter in tulle and satin, and have determined they must have a radical change to bring back the roses to their cheeks and rest up. So it's the camp life they're going in for. A crowd of them, all going together under the wing of some good, motherly old soul who has a houseful of girls of her own, who knows what they need and what is best for them.

Even the pretty dimpled flirts who imagined they couldn't live without some chap near by to make love to them soon forget to sigh for heart conquests, or to even dream of a man in their slumbers when they have lived for a week in the open. When they are all up with the dawn, chat-terpe like magpies how could one dare to cling to her pillow and hope to get another forty winks. There's a five-mile tramp to the brook, and an hour's fishing before sunrise, if they would have a trout for breakfast. Each takes her turn at frying potatoes, broiling ham or bacon and poaching eggs, whether she's a millionaire's heiress or the daughter of a country shopkeeper. The fried corn cakes (each girl with mouth watering eagerly waiting her turn to get one) tastes a thousand times more delicious than the finest short-cake ever put together by the best French chef.

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE MEETS IN JAX

MANY MATTERS OF MUCH IMPORTANCE WERE DISCUSSED DURING THE MEETING

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 6. Believing that it is absolutely impossible to elect delegates to the national democratic executive committee and national convention in the primary and have them certified in time for meeting at St. Louis which opens on the 15th day after Florida primary, a meeting of the executive committee was held at the hotel of the city.

The purpose was to make that gateway to the national executive committee a regular named Duke Wright. The latter has been in this vicinity several years and at one time worked for the Hand stables in this city.

TO PREPARE FOR WAR IS QUESTION

CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES ARE NOW BUSY AT WORK ON THIS MATTER

Washington, Jan. 7. The question of national preparedness again occupied the center of the stage in congressional committee activity.

Hearings on the administration's national defense program were begun today before the house military affairs committee with Secretary of War Garrison as the star witness, and the house naval affairs committee continued its hearings on the national naval appropriation bill.

Secretary Garrison had prepared a detailed statement of the army's part of the preparedness plans.

Rear Admiral Stanford, chief of the navy's bureau of yards and docks, resumed his statement as to the need of additional naval stores when the naval committee began today its hearings on the navy's budget.

It is believed that the committee will report on the navy's budget by next Saturday.
