Day Care Funding Saved By Askew; Crisis Headed Off

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

The crisis over continued state funding for the subsidized child care program in Central Florida which affects 2,500 children in Seminole County has been averted, at least for the time being.

Mrs. Phoebe Carpenter, administrator of the Community Coordinated Child Care program of Central Florida (4-C), said today that William Page, secretary of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS), reversed his position Wednesday and agreed to channel $2.5 million in new federal money into the program statewide.

Page had earlier announced that he would be reducing the state subsidy to start new programs elsewhere and to make up a $2.3 million deficit which occurred when $20 million in state contracts with day care centers were signed, even though only $17.3 million had been appropriated by the legislature.

Mrs. Carpenter said she had returned from a Tallahassee meeting with Page, a representative of the governor, State Sen. Kenneth Plante, minority leader of the Senate, and State Rep. Dick Batchelor, Monday very discouraged when Page remained adamant in his stand to cut the child care program.

She said that she presented Page and the governor's representative with a series of Evening Herald articles concerning the subsidized child care program in Seminole County and the mothers, many of them divorced or widowed, who were being helped with child care so that they could work for a living and stay off the welfare rolls.

She credited the stories for having a direct effect on changing Page's mind.

Page at a press conference in Tallahassee Wednesday afternoon said he would direct $2.5 million into subsidized child care of $1 million pumped into the state from the federal government under a law sponsored by Vice President Walter Mondale when he was a member of the U.S. Senate.

The 4-C program provides subsidized day care for single, working mothers in professional centers. Under the original Page proposal, 25 children would have been cut from the program in Seminole.

Mrs. Carpenter said today the new federal money pumped into the program on Page's order, after appeals were made to Gov. Heulin Askew, means that "we will have the same number of dollars to use in 1978 as in 1977."

"But," she added, "since the minimum wage which must be paid to day care center workers has gone up, the same number of children cannot be served with the same number of dollars."

The Central Florida program, under 4-C, has a budget to expire in July of $3.1 million, while the costs for the same number of children, she said, totals $3.3 million.

The $3.1 million level of funding, Mrs. Carpenter said, halts a program in the planning stages for Osceola County.

Crisis will again strike in July, Mrs. Carpenter said, since Secretary Page, despite instructions from Governor Askew, is asking for only $19 million in state funding in the new state fiscal year budget.

Mrs. Carpenter said the governor has told Page to increase his budget request. Page is considering amending his request to $23 million statewide, while actually $25 million is needed, she said. The $25 million total would provide money to meet minimum wage costs, maintain the program and increase it. "If Page doesn't ask for the money, where do we start?" Mrs. Carpenter asked.

She said that two groups are very interested in the subsidized child care program—The Commission on the Status of Women and the League of Women Voters. Mrs. Carpenter said that Secretary Page apparently doesn't understand the concept of preventive child abuse and prevention of women going on the welfare rolls rather than working for a living that results from subsidized child care. "Perhaps he needs to be educated," she said.

Family Released On Bail After Seminole Drug Bust

By SCOTT ABRAHAM
Herald Staff Writer

Four Seminole Countyans, three of them members of the same family, have been arrested on drug-related charges stemming from a 10-month investigation by sheriff's deputies and the federal Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA).

Those arrested were:

- Barbara Harg, 15, of Forest Fern Park Apartments, Fern Park.
- John Emma Plemons, 198 Willow Ave., Forest City.

Plemons was charged with possession of a controlled substance — the drug phenylcyclidine — after sheriff's deputies allege they bought seven ounces of the flaky white substance from them in a shopping center parking lot Wednesday afternoon.

John Wayne Plemons, 19, of 1068 Orenta Dr., Altamonte Springs, Authorities charged Plemons with being a principal to delivery of a controlled substance, phenylcyclidine.

John Emma Plemons, 198 Willow Ave., Forest City, Authorities charged Mrs. Plemons with two counts of possession of a controlled substance, a single phenylcyclidine tablet, and "more than five grams of cannabis."

All three family members were released from the county jail. Artist Wayne Plemons and his son posted bond while Mrs. Plemons was released on her own recognizance. Miss Harg was still in jail this morning.

Sheriff's department spokesman John Spolski said the phenylcyclidine buy took place at a parking lot near the intersection of SR 424 and Highway 1792. The buy was the culmination of several earlier purchases made to gain evidence to search warrants for the Plemons home and the Harg apartment could be seized, he said.

Spolski said sheriff's deputies followed the elder Plemons and Miss Harg to a convenience store parking lot located at Grand Street and SR 424, where the arrest took place.

Spolski said the seven ounces of drugs purchased was valued at $10,000. The arrest of the Plemons and Miss Harg is one of the largest distributor sources of phenylcyclidine in Central Florida, Spolski said.

He said phenylcyclidine was a dangerous drug.

Both were charged with delivery of a controlled substance.

Row Over Appointments Cooled

Winter Springs Mayor Relents; He'll Consult Panel

By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald Staff Writer

Despite an informal ruling by the state attorney's office he need not consult with council on making commission appointments, Winter Springs Mayor Troy Piland said Wednesday he'll do so anyway.

The issue came about last Monday when council refused to approve Piland's commission appointments.

Shortly after two new councilmen, Bart Logan and Laurent Pelletier, took that oath of office Monday, Piland's authority to name commission heads was challenged with Councilmen John Daniels and Donald Sines lining up with the newcomers. Only Councilman John Sabatini supported the mayor's appointments.

When Piland declined to change the appointments at Monday's meeting, council voted 4-1 for a motion by Daniels to have councilmen retain their current posts and giving Logan control of the fire department and Pelletier the police department. Daniels has been finance commissioner, Sines planning and zoning commissioner and Sabatini, public works commissioner.

Piland said the action violated the city charter which he said gives the mayor the authority to make appointments and instructed City Attorney Gary Massey to seek an opinion from Attorney General Robert Shevin.

Massey reported Wednesday night that he had received an informal opinion from a member of Shevin's staff who had said the mayor had the authority to make appointments by specific reference in the charter and specifically had control over the powers in the city are vested in the council. Massey, who said he agreed with this opinion, said to obtain a formal opinion from the attorney general would take two to three months and the request would have to be in writing.

"This does not satisfy me," Sines said, "we need an official

Let Panel Probe Education Needs

The home. The classroom. The teacher. The television set. They're all being pointed to as the main culprit as discussion swirls about those Fulbright Literacy Tests administered to 11th graders in Seminole and other Florida counties.

The results were less than encouraging, but—trusting already preconceived notions of how good or bad the educational system really is.

But which one, or combination of them, is the real culprit? That's the proverbial $64,000 question left in the wake of those tests. And the whole matter raises more questions than it answers.

Who's to blame? Is it the teachers? Are they ill-trained, incompetent, or both? Is it that the kids don't want to learn? Are they being motivated to learn? Where should that motivation begin?

The latest thrust has been offered by Florida Secretary of State and prospective Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bruce Smathers. He suggests the blame can be laid principally on the teachers, and even suggests that the teachers be compelled to take a test themselves.

Predictably, the teachers throughout Florida and Seminole County consider Smathers all wet on that score. At least their spokesmen do.

But even Smathers' suggestion itself raises questions. What form would the test take? What if they failed? Should that test alone determine their worth—or should their methods and means of communications with their students weigh in the final equation? Is their colleague training lacking?

In his criticism of Smathers' proposal, Gene Grooms, executive director of the Seminole Education Association (SEA), offers an alternative suggestion. "Families should turn off the television...and spend the rest of the time talking with their kids," he says. "They should spend that time making sure their kids are learning multiplication tables, reading to them, learning their problems..."

There is no question that today's children spend too many hours in front of the tube. Statistics tell us this regularly. So TV probably is one culprit, but it certainly is not the only one, nor is turning it off the only answer.

To blame TV for the lack of academic achievement is like blaming its violence for violence in the real world.

One thing is unarguable, however. TV certainly does not enhance the student's knowledge of the English language. In their zeal to sell, advertisers take too many liberties with the language, using catchy phraseology to hook the viewer. So why should we be so surprised that many of your youngsters can't speak or write the language properly?

We have our work cut out for us. This is not a localized problem, it faces communities around the nation.

But educators, parents and community leaders here in Seminole can take the lead. They can set out to isolate the pertinent questions and seek answers, instead of calling names, trying to fix blame and letting the matter get emotionally out of hand.

Why not set up a panel of educators, parents and laymen, to talk with other educators, parents and laymen and zero in on the dilemma?

The panel could take a close look at teacher training and preparation for classroom work. The home situation can be compared among parents and checked out. For instance: how much TV is allowed compared with study time? How much of parental motivation is provided? From educators, we can ask: how can we best measure a teacher's performance? Where does classroom discipline fit in and how does it affect the teaching and learning processes?

Sure. Again, questions. But it beats blame-fixing and name-calling.

Driver Education Not Enough

WASHINGTON — In the years since World War II, it has become a ritual element of American life. The teenager comes home from high school one day and requests his or her parents' permission to enroll in the school's driver education program.

The parents readily agree, assuming that the course is far superior to either the commercial instruction offered by driving schools or the self-teaching-the-wheel alternative of learning from a friend or relative.

The teenager, however, often has a hidden agenda. In many states, 16- and 17-year-olds can be licensed to drive only after successfully completing a driver education course. All others must wait until 18, and for an adolescent that additional year or two can be an eternity.

But now Washington-based safety organization with impeccable credentials has produced a meticulously researched study conclusively demonstrating that the driver education-early license approach leads to thousands of unnecessary highway fatalities each year.

Even more startling, the authors of the study conclude that even if early licensing is eliminated, high school driver education "would not be of any demonstrated benefit in reducing crash involvement."

The study of the effect of driver education in 27 states during the late 1960s and early 1970s was conducted by Drs. Leon S. Robertson and Paul L. Zador.

Both are affiliated with the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, a highly respected independent organization that has been in the forefront of efforts to improve the nation's roads, cars and drivers.

The care with which the study was done is demonstrated by the state-by-state adjustment of the computations to take into account two relatively obscure factors that contribute heavily to fatal crashes — rural roads and wet pavements.

Robertson and Zador even considered the possibility that accident rates might be higher among 16- and 17-year-olds because they are new and inexperienced drivers.

But the research demonstrated that the rate of fatal crashes among those who didn't take driver education courses and waited until 18 to be licensed differed little from their early-licensed peers who had the benefit of two years' experience.

Connecticut, Delaware, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Washington are among the states that issue early licenses to graduates of driver education courses.

In 1975, approximately 4,000 drivers who had not reached their 18th birthday were involved in fatal crashes. In about half of those accidents, only one car was involved — thus eliminating the possibility of blaming the "other driver," or that of other external factors.

"Parents have been misled to believe that driver education decreased the risk of their children's involvement in crashes," the authors conclude. "The estimate of 2,000 fatal crashes that would be prevented annually if persons under 18 were not licensed is a very conservative, minimum estimate."

Robertson and Zador properly refuse to go beyond their data, stating that "physical and emotional maturity as factors in crash involvement are not well understood."

The picture of a person who feels that seat belts thus emerges as someone who has no schooling past high school, who feels his or her station in life is unsatisfactory, and who feels that would be changed at least some aspects of it," the study said.

"There is little question that socio-economic factors, especially education, show the greatest association with seat belt usage," it said.

Another observation was that those who don't use seat belts are less likely to go to church. "The fact that non-users tend to be infrequent church attendees suggests that they could also be lacking in social support from outside groups," the study said. "Such persons present serious challenges to health educators."

The study notes: "In 1974, nearly 80 percent of motor vehicle fatalities involved the occupants of a moving vehicle. Most of these deaths could have been prevented by the use of seat belts." But despite the effectiveness of seat belts, Heising said they are worn by only about one-fourth of the motorists all the time and another fourth sometimes. About half of the motorists usually don't bother to buckle up.

The study points out most legislative approaches to seat belt use have been unsuccessful, including requiring buzzers and lights as reminders that the belts have not been fastened.

"What we tried to do is find out who doesn't use seat belts — what type of person, so we can see what can be done to change his or her mind," Heising said.

Not much, the study concluded. "This leaves mandatory passive restraint systems such as air bags, seat belts that automatically deploy when the door is shut, or other approaches requiring no conscious action by occupants of the vehicle, as virtually the only feasible alternative for reducing death from automobile accidents to any substantial degree," the study said.

As a matter of fact, it happens to be a very good case in the Japanese point.

While the U.S.-Japanese imbalance is huge, it is not the major contributor to the chronic American deficit. Oil plays that role.

A case can be made by the Japanese that Washington finds it more convenient to lean on the vulnerable trading partner than on the oil producers, not to mention exercising some energy self-discipline.

They could have a point.

Do you ever yearn for simpler days of childhood when Christmas was warm and a happy time of miracles in the manger, mysteries hidden in the closet and magic of stockings filled with goodies? Remember those green and red construction paper chains pasted together for the classroom tree, the little angel in Christmas tableau with his halo arched, the excitement of going out to cut your own tree in the woods and the marvelous pin-aronia it brought to the house, inexpensive gifts made with love, sparklers and fireworks sold along downtown sidewalks and hot chocolate after caroling on a truck loaded with hay?

Things are not like they used to be. The last time I went caroling, the hay was full of sandpaper and in recent years Santa was hung in a flag in Longwood. Now Christmas, instead of a time of peace and goodwill, is an object of controversy.

For years, Christians have been trying to get Christ back in Christmas and now the head Grinch in Tallahassee and Washington are trying to steal the "Spirit of Christmas" by banning the joyous and gentle carols and any reference to real reason for celebrating from schools.

Wonder if they have obliterated any reference to H.C. and A.D. in the history books? The kids may never know whose birthday that celebrated either.

No! All opposition comes from non-Christian elements. Some churches consider most of the customs associated with Christmas as pagan and want no part of it.

Outlasting Christmas is nothing new. Back in 1647 the English Parliament got carried away and did it. According to the December Herald's Digest, churches were stripped of ornamentation, organs carted away and religious singing was restricted to the Psalms. While the ban didn't last very long, it nearly spelled the end of English Christmas carols. Fortunately, such famous carols as "God Rest Ye Merry, Gentlemen" and "The First Noel" survive, in the memory of tenacious wassailers. But will the former survive the Women's Libbers?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Once-secret FBI files yield nothing to undercut the Warren Commission's judgment that Lee Harvey Oswald killed John F. Kennedy — alone, unaided and moved by an overriding hostility to his environment.

But the half-ton of raw data contains enough accounts of false investigative starts and intriguing unsubstantiated leads — rather than mere "a multitude of conspiracy theories."

Even J. Edgar Hoover for a time considered the possibility that Oswald was the agent of a foreign or subversive conspiracy.

The files also reveal that 20 days after Kennedy was killed, Hoover reported that the FBI had been alerted to the possibility that Oswald was the agent of a foreign or subversive conspiracy.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In early England, sheriffs had an effective way to pursue a lawbreaker: They raised a "hue and cry" and all able-bodied men were required to join in the chase. It was a crime not to.

The source of this historical footnote to the age-old war against crime is FBI Director Clarence Kelley.

Kelley is not plugging for better passes, nor does he want policemen to take the law into their own hands. He cites historical references in speeches to show there is nothing new about his call for "community-wide crime resistance," or his insistence that the public must be the police if crime is to be stemmed.

These historical references also reveal that Kelley, a policeman all his adult life who will retire Jan. 1 after directing the FBI for 4 1/2 years, is a history buff as well, with emphasis on law enforcement.

Kelley recently gave members of the Nebraska Sheriff's Association a lesson about the title he holds, noting that the office of sheriff is "deeply and inextricably intertwined with the nation's early history, going back to ninth-century England."

Washington says it is not just a bilateral problem but a threat to world economic health, threatening to push the interrelated economies into a new downward spiral. Rarely bothered by inhibitions in advising others on how to run their economies, it would like to see Japan along with that other standard creditor, West Germany, stimulate the home economy in order to increase absorption of both its own production and foreign industrial output.

Tokyo is having difficulty working up much enthusiasm for such an essentially inflationary course. A cabinet reshuffle has brought in a new cabinet, but whether policy as well as face is involved is yet to be seen.

There is no argument between Tokyo and Washington as to the existence and seriousness of the problem, but the Japanese stubbornly insist on being most concerned with its effects on their own economy.

As that economy, for all that it may be the world's most dynamic, rests on an exceedingly fragile foundation, Japan must expend to live. And with no significant indigenous resources other than the awesome industriousness of its own people, it must import all of the raw material necessary to manufacture the essential exports. If the United States is inconvinced by the oil cartel, Japan is completely at its mercy, or that of any other similarly aggressive supplier.

There is little question about the need to expand the courts or the need to have qualified judges fill the new positions. The question is how many judges are needed and how they will be appointed.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker wryly notes the tendency to spawn new judges in Democratic administrations, although the last time the judiciary was expanded was in 1970, under Richard Nixon.

Ironically, it was the Watergate affair and the impeachment hearings that kept Congress from getting around to the court expansion bill in 1973, 1974 and 1975. And, "Once into the election year (1976) then politics may have been a factor," explains a knowledgeable Senate source.

What he meant was the Democratic majority was in no mood to let a Republican president fill all those judgeships — more than have ever been available before. It waited until 1981, when a Democratic president filled all those judgeships.

The Senate bill adds 35 new circuit court judges and 113 district judges. The House Judiciary Committee has approved 110 district judges, and the House will act on the bill early next year.

VIEWPOINT

Yen Deficit Heading For Record

By DON GRAFT

No matter how you look at it, even in the usual nebulosity terms of international dealings, $7 billion is big money.

And no matter where you look at it, Washington or Tokyo, it presents a big problem.

This is Japan's share of the U.S. trade deficit — one for the record books that is heading toward a year-end total of $9 billion.

Washington would greatly appreciate Tokyo doing something about it, like opening its home market to more foreign goods. Preferably stamped Made in America.

The gross imbalance is a fiscal embarrassment straining relations between the two countries. Moreover, it is a major factor in the dollar's decline on world money markets. It is facing a pessimistic sentiment in the United States, particularly in the steel industry where it translates into job layoffs in Youngstown, Gary and Bethlehem.

And it is raking Japan's own economy. In a holding operation, the Bank of Japan has been sopping up billions of excess dollars to keep the dollar-yen exchange rate relatively stable. But there is clearly an end to that particular road.

And the prospect that the yen may eventually rise sharply in value, thus raising the price of Japanese goods, world markets and threatening the nation's export drive, is depressing the Tokyo stock market.

Washington says it is not just a bilateral problem but a threat to world economic health, threatening to push the interrelated economies into a new downward spiral. Rarely bothered by inhibitions in advising others on how to run their economies, it would like to see Japan along with that other standard creditor, West Germany, stimulate the home economy in order to increase absorption of both its own production and foreign industrial output.

Earl Campbell Likely Heisman Winner

NEW YORK (UPI) — A poor boy who grew up in an unimpaired house in Tyler, Tex., to become a college football's fifth-leading all-time runner, is likely tonight to join one of the sports world's most exclusive clubs.

The Downtown Athletic Club's Award, given annually to "the best college football player in the United States," will be presented at about 10:30 P.M. tonight in a nationally televised CBS ceremony following a lavish dinner. The evening will be hosted by O.J. Simpson and Elliott Gould and will include live entertainment.

The 25-year-old Campbell, a 6-foot, 136-lb., 230-pounder who led the nation this year with 114 points and 1,744 yards rushing, is only the 11th finalist for the trophy listed by the Downtown Athletic Club.

The selection of anyone else, however, would constitute one of the biggest surprises in the history of the award dating back to 1935. The final candidates are named in alphabetical order, but not necessarily in order of the D.A.C. are: Offensive lineman — Mark Donahue, Michigan; Ken MacAfee, Notre Dame; Chris Ward, Ohio State; Running back — Charles Alexander, LSU; Earl Campbell, Texas; Terry Miller, Oklahoma State; Offensive end — Wes Chandler, Florida; Ken MacAfee, Notre Dame; Ozone Newsome, Alabama; Defensive lineman — Ross Browner, Notre Dame; Brian Sauer, Texas; Art Still, Kentucky.

Complete one of 11 children who grew up on their mother's row farm in Tyler, gained a total of 4,443 yards rushing during his career at Texas and would be the first Texas University Heisman Trophy winner in Longhorn football history, which began in 1893.

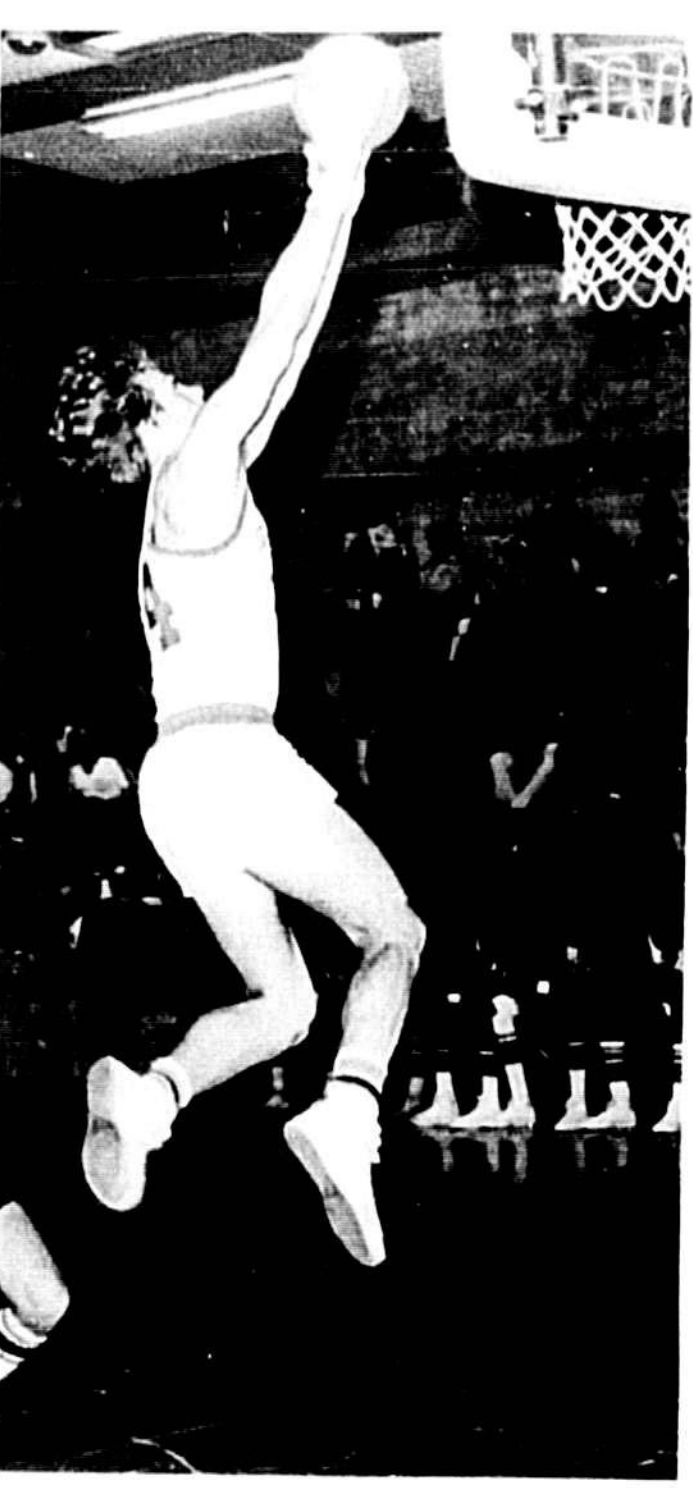

Yankees Buy Messersmith

HONOLULU (UPI) — Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, a man of many surprises, has pulled another one by getting Andy Messersmith, a pitcher he thought he had had for two years ago.

The world champions acquired the 32-year-old right-hander from the Atlanta Braves, presumably for $100,000, and that deal, which still requires Messersmith's approval, was the biggest eye-opener among the four completed at the winter baseball meetings Wednesday night.

But there could be an even bigger surprise today, involving the Los Angeles Dodgers and the San Diego Padres.

Messersmith, former All-Star and twice a 20-game winner, has been hurt in each of the past two seasons and is now coming off elbow surgery.

Seminole Suffers First Loss Of Season, 83-76

"When we lose (David) Wiggins, we lose a lot of our outside shooting," and Colonial was just burning, all night, especially in the fourth quarter," said a disappointed Coach Bill Payne Wednesday night after his Seminoles had dropped their first decision of the season before a home crowd, 83-76.

And to make it worse, the defeat came against Payne's old school. The new Seminole coach moved to Sanford from Colonial this season.

"I knew it would be a tough game — I know those boys (Colonial) pretty well. It would have been nice to win, but I imagine it was a big game for them, too."

3 In 5 Adults Play Games Of Chance Gambling Hits Divorce Jackpot

The Herald Services

Ever hear the story about the man who hated Christmas? That's because, he says, he always used it as an excuse to go out and gamble more.

On the one hand the man who lost his two daughters in the parking lot while I went in with $9 in my pocket to play the horses.

How about the woman who played Texas hold 'em and day "I loved it more than my children. The one I had and the one I was carrying.

These are the kinds of stories that have two things in common, says the American Council on Compulsive Gambling, abuse of the devastating effect gambling has on family finances and savings.

He said in order to "bail out" of their situation, "these compulsives will riddle even their life and health insurance protection to get to their drug, which is money."

Ultimately, he says "more than half of the compulsives admit to committing a crime so they can get more money to gamble - but unless the spouse is strong, they will deplete all family finances."

How do you recognize a compulsive gambler? He usually has four recognizable characteristics. They include:

1. Dependence - The compulsive gambler has developed a need to gamble and seeks the "high" that gambling provides - a feeling of elation more important to the compulsive than winning or losing.

2. Loss of control - The compulsive funds himself betting when he didn't intend to, losing more than he planned to, until gradually, almost imperceptibly, his life becomes unmanageable.

3. Progress - Bets get bigger. Losses become larger.

4. Indebtedness - In this stage the compulsive needs ready cash and will go to whomever or wherever he can to beg, borrow or steal it.

Paul Calme, a member of the National Council on Compulsive Gambling board of directors, puts it this way:

"Any time you read in the papers about a guy involved in a big fraud or embezzlement, you can be pretty certain the guy's a compulsive gambler."

Have you ever felt remorse after gambling?

5. Do you ever gamble to get money with which to pay debts or to otherwise solve financial difficulties?

6. Does gambling cause a decrease in your ambition or efficiency?

7. After losing, do you feel you must return as soon as possible and win back your losses?

8. After a win, must you return and win more?

9. Do you often gamble until your last dollar is gone?

10. Do you ever borrow to finance your gambling?

'Pot' Smoker Needs Her Influence

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A year ago I took in my brother's son, who is now 22. He had a serious disagreement with his parents and moved out. He has always been a favorite of mine. He is a beautiful, intelligent young man, but he has one fault: He smokes marijuana. I became aware of this shortly after he moved in with me. One thing I admire about him is that he will not lie.

I do NOT condone the use of marijuana, but as long as he doesn't smoke it in your home I think it would be a mistake to ask him to leave. He desperately needs your positive influence in his life.

DEAR ABBY: Jim and I are both 30. We've been married for seven years, and he's got to be the pickiest eater in the world! He hates all vegetables and most fruits, and he won't touch meat, fish or chicken. He practically lives on peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. Can you believe this is a grown man and the father of two? Dining out is embarrassing because all Jim ever orders is a peanut butter and jelly sandwich with a glass of milk. And when we're at the home of friends, he pushes his food around on the plate and doesn't eat any of it. When the hostess notices it, she asks if something is wrong with the food, and I want to crawl under the table! Before we go to someone's home, I give him a peanut butter and jelly sandwich so he won't be hungry.

CLEARWATER, FLA.
DEAR CLEAR: You needn't sacrifice your social life because of your husband's lousy eating habits. Your friends will soon become accustomed to his idiosyncrasy and accept it. If I were you, I'd be more concerned about his health. He's asking for nutritional bankruptcy.

Marcus Hardy gets prepared to play Santa Claus, assisted by Bobbi Hardy (center) and Wilma Kalmus.

Two Seminole County Parades Planned

Two Christmas parades are scheduled in Seminole County on the next two Sundays. The annual Winter Springs Christmas parade will be held this Sunday beginning at 2 p.m. and Sweetwater Oaks will have its sixth annual Christmas parade on Dec. 18 at 3 p.m. Santa Claus will share the spotlight in Winter Springs with the newly crowned "Miss Winter Springs", 16-year-old Kim Davis, who will ride on the parade float with members of her court. Fire Chief Charles Holzman, parade marshal, says he expects 30 units for the parade, which will begin at Hayes Road and move west on SR 434 to N. Edgemon Avenue and disband at Sunshine Park. Bands scheduled to march in the parade include Lyman High School, the Orlando Naval Training Center, Jackson Middle School, South Seminole Middle School, and Tuskawilla Middle School. The Navy Drill Team and Honor Guard will also participate. Among the other entries are the Indian Guides, Scouts, six units from the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Shrine units, fire trucks from Winter Springs Garden Club, Sertoma, Winter Springs Elementary School, antique cars, Big Bird, Smokey the Bear, Seminole Youth March clowns, and Jingles the Clown. The three-mile parade route in Sweetwater Oaks will begin at the Preview Center and move west on Wekiwa Springs Road turning on Sweetwater Boulevard to Wekiwa and continuing back to the starting point. The parade, sponsored by the Huskey Company, will feature Lake Bradley High School and Teague Middle School Bands, Shrine units, 25 horses, 30 golf carts, children's bicycles, floats, Navy acts, fire trucks and entries from clubs and churches. Private Eye: Going To Sue County For A Gun Permit

By MARK WEINBERG Herald Staff Writer

Shot down in his attempt to obtain a concealed weapon permit from the Seminole County Commission, private detective Harvey E. Morse of Altamonte Springs says he'll go to court to force commissioners to issue the permit.

"I'm suing to court on this," Morse said following the commission hearing at which his permit was denied. "I met all the commission's requirements, and I need a permit for my work."

Morse has requested his application be considered again by the county commission. "They should have in today's mail. I'm asking for a rehearing on the basis that due to the nature of my business, I am in constant threat of bodily harm. The commissioners considered two other applications and put off a decision. I want my case considered without reference to the other two."

Morse was turned down by a 3-2 vote of the commissioners with Bob French, Harry Kwiatkowski and Bill Kirchoff voting to deny the permit and Dick Williams and John Alexander voting to issue the permit.

Alexander moved that Morse be granted the permit, but the motion died for lack of a second. Then Kwiatkowski moved to deny the application, and his motion was seconded by French and the 3-2 vote followed.

When commissioners adopted the regulations, they said the court decision required them to do so but that they weren't happy about the situation. "I don't really want to do this, but I guess we have to," said Kwiatkowski, who made the motion to adopt the procedures, which was seconded by Kirchoff and adopted unanimously.

Morse told commissioners this week, "The law reads that if I meet the application requirements, a gun permit must be issued. There must be a qualification I did not meet."

"In the three years I've been on the commission, a number of individuals have applied for concealed weapons permits," Kwiatkowski said. "I've never voted for one. I have absolutely nothing against the applicant, but I'll continue to hold out as long as I'm here."

"This application has cost me more than $100, based on my assumption that if I met the qualifications that the permit would be granted," Morse said before the 3-2 commission vote denying him the permit.

Following the vote, Morse asked Chairman Williams why the permit was turned down. "I think the commissioners have said all they want to on that," Williams answered.

Morse criticized the permitting system, saying the state should issue concealed weapons permits and not individual counties. When commissioners were considering adopting concealed weapon permit regulations in August, Morse said, "To get a gun permit in each county of the state would require 67 amendments. I did not meet."

Bond was set at $5,000 for James Edwin Nielsen Sr., 1208 W. 20th St., this morning. Arraignment was set for 1:30 p.m. today.

In Seminole, Sumter Counties Skeletal Remains Found

In a grisly coincidence the skeletal remains of three bodies, whose identities remain a mystery, were discovered Wednesday in two separate locations in Seminole and Sumter counties.

While clearing land south of Lake Mary Wednesday, for a new 140-acre development workers found what they thought was a cow or large animal. Shortly after noon on Thursday, a road grader operator discovered a human skull and summoned the Sheriff's Department to investigate. Chief Deputy Duane Harrell said the skeleton was found in an area east of Lake Emma Road near the 4-Lake Mary interchange.

Meanwhile, County Medical Examiner Dr. G.V. Garay is expected to announce the approximate age, sex and race of the victim today and bone and earth samples being forwarded to the Smithsonian Institution for a specific determination of age. The investigation is continuing.

Sumter Sheriff Ernie Johnson said the bones of two persons were discovered Wednesday night in a thickly wooded area near Sunterville by a Wildwood man, who was chasing a wounded armadillo.

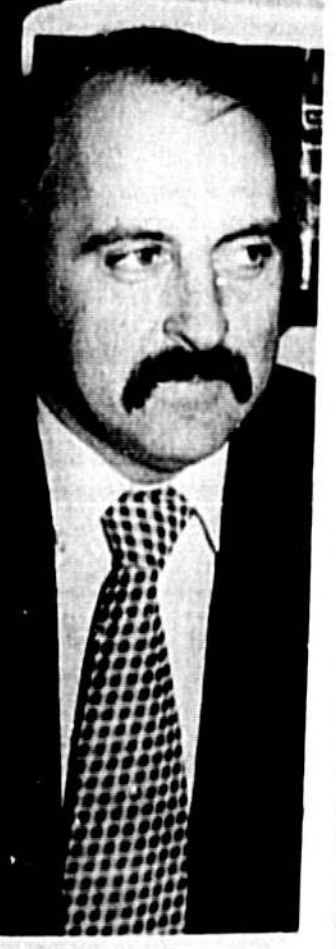

Johnson said the sex of the victims had not been determined. One of the victims' feet had been bound by two strands of electrical cord and a nylon cord was found near one of the skulls. The boots of one of the victims had deteriorated so that the sole had come off.

Federal Official In Seminole County

'Affirmative Action Plan Is Good...If It's Implemented'

WILLIAM B. ALLISON

A federal official working with Seminole County officials to improve the county's plan for hiring more minorities and women says the existing plan "is a pretty good one. The main problem it was never implemented."

The official, personnel management specialist William B. Allison of the federal Civil Service Commission's Atlanta regional office, said the section of the county's affirmative action plan dealing with evaluation of the county's minority hiring efforts "wouldn't have been too effective or the plan would have been updated" since its adoption by the county commission in February 1976.

"An affirmative action plan is a living document. Each year, it should be updated, noting the county's successes and failures to increase minority hiring as the county moves to improve the situation. This plan, though it contains many good provisions, was never implemented or updated."

Allison was in town Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday working with county officials to improve the county's affirmative action plan.

Under the plan, Personnel Director Ben Thames is the county's affirmative action officer. The plan calls for the establishment of an equal employment opportunity committee which will have the overall responsibility of insuring that Seminole County complies with the provisions of the Equal Opportunity Employment Act of 1973, the plan says.

The committee is supposed to monitor compliance procedures and will prepare periodic reports relating to our compliance. The committee, however, was never established, and Arleane Rowell, black personnel analyst who was working with Thames to develop compliance procedures, was fired last week by Thames, who said he'd hire another analyst to help him develop procedures to implement the plan.

By the end of January, county officials must submit to the Department of Labor an updated affirmative action plan, which must be approved by the department to insure continued funding of the county's $7.04-million manpower program.

'An affirmative action plan is a living document. Each year, it should be updated, noting the county's successes and failures to increase minority hiring...'

Mechanism for administering the plan. The equal employment opportunity committee is that mechanism, but it has never been established. Thames is the county's affirmative action officer. This is not being handled by Thames' office and is not complete. It is not part of the county's affirmative action plan. No analysis has taken place.

The point is not to go out and just hire minorities because they're minorities. That works against any quality in the workforce. Only the very best should be recruited. In areas like Seminole County, it's tough because the county can't compete with private employers who can pay top dollar

Requiring more minority group members. The plan mentions that "employment announcements will be forwarded to minority groups and women's organizations and to radio stations which have large audiences of minority groups or women." This is not being done. Job announcements go to Florida Technical University and Hollis College but not to minority colleges such as Bethune-Cookman in Daytona, according to Mrs. Rowell.
