HAS HIS OWN WAR

Gunner With Traction Engine Plays Lone Hand.

British Officer Tells of "Funny Old Cove" Who Travels About With Field Piece and Fires When He Is Ready.

London.—While it is said that modern warfare does not give to the individual many chances to distinguish himself, a British cavalry officer in a letter to the London Times tells of a gunner who carries on a little war of his own. Going about on a traction engine, towing his gun behind him, he unlimbers, fires a few shots and goes on his own way. That his work, no matter how amusing, is effective is told by the officer, who says: "There is one incident I must cite; it amuses us mightily. Some time ago, when closer to the lines, we were out exercising one fine morning when the funniest old outfit came along—some old guy gunner with a big gun towed by a sort of traction engine. He was a funny looking old chap. He stopped his caravan, consulted some notes, and swung around into position and let off a couple of shots. The first one over, second short, and it appears he was quite satisfied with the next four, for he started packing up again.

"He had a kind of aeroplane with him, too, on a lorry, also in tow. He was the funniest looking old cove you ever saw; seemed to be running a little show of his own. Last we saw of him was around the corner with his traction engine half mired in the ditch. But it appears he knew what he was about, for he put one of the enemy's guns out of action with the four shots.

"Those little motorcycles—we call them wasps, for they it is that sting us into action. You're snugly between blankets and you hear the snorting and buzzing of one coming up the road. You hope he goes on—but no, he stops outside headquarters. You hold your breath. If he proceeds at once it's an ill omen, as he wants no reply but his receipted envelope, and it's 'turn out,' full parade marching order, first line transports and all. He waits, and after five minutes wriggles on his road, coughing and snorting and sparking, and it's all right and you can go to sleep again. The wasps—the beggars always get you on the hop—those are the dispatch riders, through which all our orders come.

"There was a park of flying men near our last billet. They brought down a taube with rifle fire from two of our planes that went up after him. They have one very fast biplane there. I heard one very great yarn of a big observer. While he was flying over the German lines and returning against a strong head wind the machine gave a heavy jerk and dip and sent his gun, map case, etc., overboard. Some seconds after the pilot felt a great bump. It was his pal coming back into his seat, from which he had been absent much too long for his own comfort.

"The wings of the machine were riddled with shrapnel and the pilot and observer had to sit tight over their sheets of armor plate. I think they are worthy of the greatest praise. The only thing we envy them is the impossibility of their being turned out at night. They can work only by day."

TOO BUSY FOR LOVE-MAKING

Mail Route Girl Destroys Letters From Too Ardent and Persistent Admirers.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Vada Kirkland, the seventeen-year-old girl who drives her father's mail route from Natrona to Hirdville twice daily, is too busy to be frivolous, and wants uninvited correspondents to know it.

Since her father was attacked with rheumatism early in the winter Miss Kirkland has taken his place. The task seemed easy to her till the old family horse died on New Year's day. Doc, her new horse, is a sorrel, with an unholy white glint in his eye. Talking as she shook the lines over him, she drew a tight rein as she drove past a noisily mill on her route.

"Here's where everything happens," she said. "Last week I met a string of dillies running down the incline from the cluder dump, and right on this curve three of four of them left the track and piled up beside me. Taken by surprise, Doc wheeled, and on the glaze of ice which covered the road he fell and buried me under the buckboard. Someone pulled me out unhurt.

"Another day the harness broke at the top of this hill and the wagon started down. I jumped and luckily escaped injury.

"I suppose it is these little things that have got into the papers which cause men all over the United States to write to me. I have letters from hundreds, some offering to assist me, others proposing marriage, and many wanting me to tell them my experiences.

"I burn most of them," she added. "Aren't they foolish?"

TALCUM POWDER AS WEAPON

Startled Girl Hurls It In Face of Assaultant, and Makes Her Escape.

Chester, Pa.—Hurling a package of talcum powder that she was carrying in her hand into the face of a man who grabbed her the other night, Miss Sibina Winters was able to break loose from the man and make her escape.

The girl told the police that she was passing along West Third street when a tall white man, wearing a long coat and slouch hat, accosted her. When Miss Winters started to scream the man clasped his hand over her mouth and told her if she didn't shut up he would choke her. Then he released his hold and Miss Winters struck him in the face with the package of talcum powder, which broke, and the powder filled his eyes. He released her, and while he was brushing the powder out of his eyes Miss Winters ran screaming down the street.

DOG BRINGS DOLLAR HOME

Finds Money Lying in Street and Carries It to His Master's House.

Muncie.—Edward Gottlieb of Muncie has a shepherd dog which for intelligence he believes cannot be surpassed. It is not unusual for the animal to bring home things it finds in the streets, but the other day it surpassed all its previous endeavors by coming home with a brand new one-dollar bill in its mouth. It is said the dog picked up the money in South Walnut street, in the center of the business district. Mr. Gottlieb is now endeavoring to find the person that lost the money.

"Bep does not mean to be dishonest," said his owner, "but he thinks that everything of value he sees should belong to me."

"Going West." London.—The British soldiers' slang for death is "going west," and London papers are trying to find out its origin, but antiquarians, philologists and literary men have been unsuccessful in explaining it.

The New Blouses Are Plainer

THE new lingerie blouses and those of crepe chiffon, georgette crepe, crepe de chine and plain or figured chiffon reflect the ideas embodied in early French importations. These early blouses were plainer in design than we have had for some seasons, returning to the shirt waist type in many particulars.

On lingerie waists hand embroidery is sparingly used, in small, dainty patterns. Fine tucking and hemstitching are featured, long sleeves are universal, and necks are either high or opened in a "V" at the front, with small sailor collars or flaring turn-over collars. Sleeves are finished with cuffs.

French batiste is a favorite material for the lingerie blouses, and open needlework seams, as well as hemstitching, provide an elegant detail in finishing them, that is wonderfully well managed. The long, moderately close-fitting sleeves are nearly always set in with hemstitching or open needlework of some kind. Small pearl buttons or crochet buttons fasten these waists down the front. In a few models the raglan sleeve is in evidence. Pique collars and cuffs, the latter nearly always of the close-fitting variety, turned back, provide a novelty in design on waists of sheer batiste.

This is a good time to prepare blouses for the coming season and those who are looking for authoritative models, which it is safe to accept as guides may pin their faith to the tucks, hemstitching, and inconspicuous hand embroidery with the comfortable assurance that they appear in all the fine French designs sent to us.

There are some pretty crepe de chine blouses with collars that may be worn as either high or low. They are furnished with detachable ribbon ties. Small buttons, set close together extend from the top of the collar to the waist line in others. The long sleeves are furnished with a scanty ruffle falling over the hand and scattered figure, embroidered in silk in the same color as the waist, supplemented with lines of fancy stitching, form the decorative features.

Waists of chiffon are made over chiffon linings. Vests of satin sleeves and collars of lace, and small cuffs of satin give variety in the composition. Small buttons, set on in rows, and narrow, knife-plated edgings of silk appear on the plainer models. Collars are often faced with cream-colored crepe, and the colors most used are sand, putty, flesh pink, blue and maize. White crepe is made up in the same models, but the colored crepes launder successfully and are very chic.

One of the plainer waists of figured chiffon is shown in the picture and is a good example of the modes that have made a successful entry for spring.

Coats for the Demi-Season

COATS for the demi-season and those suggestive of outings, classed as "sports coats," are commanding attention just now. Both are pleasantly suggestive of spring and out-of-doors. The sports coats could hardly be overlooked, because they are not meant to be. Wide stripes, big plaids (in subdued colors), and striking originalities in design proclaim them worthy of their name. The between-seasons coat for general wear is a quieter affair made up in mixtures for plain colors, cut with great cleverness and made up with a perfection of workmanship that is a pleasure to behold.

Parading something of the nature of both the street and the sports coat is the all-around model shown in the picture. It is of sporty design, with or a small check as checks go in sports coats, and cut on simple lines. It is sloping shouldered, narrow breasted and flowing as to skirt, thus fulfilling the requirements of the new order of things in coats.

Many of these demi-season coats are cut much longer than the model shown here. They are made to meet all the requirements of out-of-door recreations, including automobiling in the chill air of early spring. Large buttons and wide girdles, made of the material of the coat, first catch the eye. In considering their details of construction, collars are ample and made to roll up close about the neck; altogether they promise much comfort.

RUE JEANNE D'ARCI AH, HOW ABOUT IT?

Tragedy in French Town as Overheard in Cafe of the Golden Lion.

SCENE AT APERITIF HOUR

Mme. la Patronne Tells How the Uhlans, in Lordly Fashion, Paid for the Drinks She Served Them.

Paris.—We were sitting in a cafe at the aperitif hour—an hour that survives the war. We were in a city of good size in northern France, famous for both cathedral and cheese. It was then a principal haven for refugees and an evacuation center for wounded. The Germans had been there, as the patronne of the Cafe du Lion d'Or narrated constantly, but now the battle lines were some distance away. If the wind happened from the right direction, when the noise of the city was silenced by military order at nightfall, the haunting boom-boo-oo-m of heavy artillery could be heard faintly. No one who has heard that sound ever forgets it. Dynamite blasting sounds just about the same, but in the sound of artillery, when one knows that it is artillery, there seems so much the knell of doom.

The cafe was crowded. The fat face of the patronne was wreathed in smiles. Anyone is mistaken who imagines that all northern France is lost from human view in a dense rolling cloud of smoke. At any rate, in the Cafe du Lion d'Or one looked upon life unchanged. True, there were some new customers in the place of old ones. There were a half dozen soldiers in khaki, and we of the American ambulance column, dressed in the same cloth. In a corner sat a young lieutenant in the gorgeous blue of the Chasseurs d'Afrique, drinking vermouth with a grizzled captain of artillery. Other French uniforms dotted the place. The "honest bourgeois" were all there—the chief supports of the establishment in peace or war. They missed the evening aperitif during the twelve days of German occupation, but now all were in their accustomed places. For the places of old-timers are sacred at the Lion d'Or, Took Husband's Place.

Mme. la Patronne acted in place of her husband, who was now safely serving in the cooking department of the army, some kilometers from the firing line. Madame sat contentedly at the caissé superintending the activities of two youthful, inexperienced garçons. The old waiters, Jean and Andre, vanished into the "zone of military activity" on the first day of the war. After several post cards Jean had not been heard from. Andre was killed at the battle of the Marne.

We had heard the garrulous tale of the German occupation many times. It was thrillingly revealed both at the Restaurant du Commerce and the Hotel du Soleil. At the Lion d'Or it was madame's absorbing theme when not haranguing the new waiters—or counting change. Madame remained throughout the trouble. "But yes, to be sure." She was not the woman to flee and leave the Lion d'Or to the invaders. Her ample form was firmly ensconced behind the caissé when the first of the uhlans entered. There were officers, and—wonder of wonders—they spoke French. The new waiters were hiding in the cellar, so madame clambered from her chair with dignity and placed glasses and drink before them. And then—would wonders never cease?—these Germans had actually paid, even overpaid, ma foi—for one of them flung a golden half louis on the counter and stalked from the place, refusing change.

Of course at the Hotel de Ville the invaders behaved differently. There the mayor was called upon for one million francs—war indemnity. But that was a matter for the city's concern and not the individual. Madame still had that golden half louis and would show it if we cared to see. Gold was scarce and exceedingly precious. The sight of it was good.

Unanimity of the War.
Now the Germans were gone—forced out, grace a Dieu, so the good citizens no longer lived in the cellars. They were again in their places at the Lion d'Or, sipping vermouth and offering gratitude to the military regime that had the decency to allow cafes open until eight o'clock. Outside the night was cold and a fine drizzle beat against the windows. Several newcomers shivered and remarked that it must be terrible in the trenches. But the electric lights, the clinking glasses on the marble tables, the rattling coins soon brought them into the general line of speculation on how long it would take to drive the Germans from France.

For a hundred years the cafes have been the forum of France. The Lion d'Or had for that entire period been the scene of fierce verbal encounters between members of more political and religious faiths than exist in any other nation of the world. Every Frenchman no matter how humble in position or purse has decided opinions about something. But now the voices in the Lion d'Or arose only in appellations concerning les Boches. There was unanimity of opinion on the absorbing subject of the war.

The members of the American ambulance column sat at a table near the door. Our khaki always brought looks of friendly interest. Almost everyone thought us to be English, and those who learned the truth were always distinctly pleased. We finished the aperitif and consulted about dinner. We were off duty—we might either return for the army mess or buy our own meal at the restaurant. We paid the garçon and decided upon the restaurant—a few doors away. Several of the men were struggling into their rubber coats. I told them that I would follow shortly. I had just caught a sentence that thrilled me. It held a note of mystery—or tragedy. It brought life out of the commonplace formality of the aperitif hour at the Lion d'Or.

Where the Tragedy Comes.
The speakers were two Frenchmen of middle age—fat and bearded. They were dressed in ordinary black, but wore it with ceremonial rather than conventional manner. The atmosphere of the city did not seem upon them. They might rather be the butcher and the grocer of a small town. One of the pair had sat alone for some time before the second arrived. I had noticed him. He seemed to have no acquaintances in the place—which was unusual. He drank two cognacs in rapid succession—which was still more unusual. One drink always satisfies a Frenchman at the aperitif hour—and it is very seldom cognac.

When the second man entered the other started from his seat and held out both hands eagerly. "So you got out safe?" were the words I heard, but our crowd was hurrying toward the door, and I lost the actual greeting. I ordered another vermouth and waited.

The two men were seated opposite each other. The first man nervously motioned to the waiter and the newcomer gave his order. It was plain that they were both excited, but the table adjoining was unoccupied, so they caused no attention. The noisy waiter, slapping bottles on the table, drowned out the next few sentences. Then I heard the second man: "So I got out first, but you managed to get here yesterday—a day in advance." The other replied: "I was lucky enough to get a horse. They were shelling the market place when I left." The second man gulped his drink and plucked nervously at the other's sleeve. "My wife is at the hotel," he almost mumbled the words. "I must tell her—you said the market place. But how about the Rue Jeanne d'Arc?—her sister lived there. She remained."

"How about the Rue Jeanne d'Arc?" the other repeated. He clucked his tongue sympathetically. "That was all destroyed in the morning."

The second man drew a handkerchief from his pocket and mopped the sweat from his forehead. Then he paid the waiter.

Pulling for Comiskey.
In St. Paul the bugs are pulling as hard for the White Sox to win as they are for the Saints to make good in the A. A. Comiskey will never be forgotten by his old friends in St. Paul, where he made his first appearance as a magnate.

Golf, Old Man's Game.
The phrase "Golf is an old man's game," so often tauntingly used by the uninitiated, is being turned to good account in the British Isles. Since the war began bitter criticism has been leveled at golfers who continued to use the links.

"Golf is an old man's game," say friends of the sport, "and only the golfers too old to enlist are playing it now. All the younger ones, including the amateur champion, are at the front."

Hinkey at Yale.
Whether Hinkey will return to Yale next fall depends apparently upon Hinkey himself. The general feeling at New Haven is that the silent coach has established a basis for future Yale success and that he is the man-upon whom the blue must depend for athletic redemption. The crushing defeat by Harvard may be the queer means to reach a given end.

SHOT TEN TIMES, IS UNHURT

Bullet Holes Were Found in Clothing of Detective Fighting Thieves.

Hammond, Ind.—Friends of Frank Wirocki, head of Erie detective force for the Huntington-Chicago division, says he bears a charmed life. After a thrilling revolver battle with car thieves, he found ten bullet holes in his clothing, but he escaped unhurt. Wirocki surprised ten men who were stripping an Erie freight car in the Griffith yards. He opened fire on them and in a running battle 30 shots were fired. The thieves escaped.

Wall for Senator

Tampa, March 20.—(Special).—Hon. Perry G. Wall this afternoon made public his intention to be a candidate for the United States senate in the 1916 primaries against Senator N. P. Bryan.

Let me give the dark side of the silos in Florida if I may. Englage, that is anything green, cut and put into the silo like kraut in a barrel, does develop the same lactic acid or rot.

Now cows fed with anything containing lactic acid will give milk that is very dangerous for infants and even for grown persons who are disposed to certain diseases.

Here in Florida where first class hay can be so easily grown all the year round, silos are in my estimation quite unnecessary.

Karl Stauuffer, Sanford, Florida.

that I have decided to become a candidate for the United States senate at the Democratic primaries to be held in 1916.

MUCH EXCITEMENT OVER WHO'S WHO

WATCH THE SANFORD HERALD FOR THIS MOST INTERESTING ANSWER

The question of "Who Is Who In Sanford" will be up for consideration in the columns of The Herald in the near future.

The "Who Is Who" feature is published for the purpose of making of the different firms appear equally as interesting to you as the news columns and to give you something to think about and to study over that will be interesting as well as profitable to you and the advertisers.

In other words a number of the leading firms of Sanford will advertise without running the name of the firm in any part of the ad.

You will be rewarded in prizes for your cars and interest. A list of the prizes will be published in the next issue of The Herald.

The following are the rules to be observed in making your answers:

1. You must make an answer to every ad on the page, setting forth the name of the firm you think is represented opposite the number of each.

2. All answers must be addressed to the "Who Is Who" editor of The Herald.

3. Each list of answers must be accompanied by a composition of not more than fifty words telling which is your favorite firm and why.

4. The correct name of each firm (that is, the name under which each firm does business and which appears on their signs and on their billheads, letter heads, etc.) must be written opposite the number of each.

5. No reader's list of answers will be considered unless an answer is made to every ad on the page.

These firms pay for advertising because they appreciate your business and want to give you the benefit of the latest development which they think will be of interest to you in the way of special values or special offers they are from time to time enabled to make.

WRANGLE OVER RAILS FLORIDA PRESS MEET THE NEXT SPEAKER WILL BE FROM SEMINOLE COUNTY

TRACTION COMPANY TANGLED UP WITH THE STREET COMMITTEE YESTERDAY

Sometimes a little fuss results in a better understanding among the parties taking part. Yesterday a gang of men of the A. C. L. started to take up the rails of the Sanford Traction Co., on Sanford avenue, the same having been sold to the railroad company by the Traction Co., and about the time they were started well J. D. Davison, chairman of the street committee discovered them and right then there was some loud talk between Chairman Davison and Alfred Foster of the Traction Co.

Mr. Davison finally called out the reserves and had the work stopped. The Traction Co. hastily summoned Attorney Carl Robinson of Orlando and Messrs. Davison, Dungee and Abernathy of the street committee sought City Attorney DeCottes, who backed them up in their decision.

Mr. Robinson arrived on the scene later in the morning and said that a paving lien against the property where the brick were laid did not mean that all of the rails where there was no brick could be held for the payment.

Mr. DeCottes ruled that the paving lien and the tax lien in regard to the Traction Co. covered the entire length of the line in the city limits.

The matter was finally compromised by the Traction Co. paying the back taxes, which was some concession, but Jack Davison contends that if the advice of the street committee had been followed all the rails would have either been raised for the city or the paving lien would have been paid.

MIAMI HERALD THINKS THE MAGIC CITY WILL BE FULL OF VISITORS

Positive assurances are being received every day in Miami, from newspaper men over the state that there will be a large gathering of publishers and printers in Miami next week to attend the annual convention of the Florida Press Association, which convenes Thursday for a three days' session.

R. J. Holly of Sanford, president of the association, in a letter received yesterday, said that at least twelve citizens of his city will come to Miami during the newspaper men's convention, taking advantage of the reduced rates to take a look over the Magic City of the state.

S. J. Triplett, editor of the St. Cloud Tribune, who made such a good fight for the convention in behalf of Kissimmee last year, will reach Miami Thursday morning, accompanied by Mrs. Triplett.

C. O. Coddington, editor of the DeLand News and vice president of the association will be here with Mrs. Coddington, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Johnston, and G. A. Dvoka, all of DeLand.

Willis Powell, editor of the Clearwater Sun, and one of the speakers during the program of the convention will start twenty-four hours in advance of the opening day of the session, in order to be familiar with the streets and paths of Miami before the convention begins to take up its work.

Gilbert D. Leach of the Tampa Tribune, also a speaker during the convention will arrive Thursday, as well as Clyde Glenn of the same city, president of the Clyde Glenn Advertising Agency.

Others who are to be here are M. F. Hetherington of Lakeland, W. L. Strub and Lew B. Brown of St. Petersburg, Harry L. Brown, and Mrs. Brown of St. Augustine, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Emerson of Ft. Pierce, W. L. Thorndyke of West Palm Beach, I. H. Humphries of Bradenton, Thomas J. Appleyard of Tallahassee, J. W. White of Jacksonville, Wayne Thomas of Ft. City, Mr. Minnie Moore Wilson of Kissimmee, Roy L. Neal of St. Augustine, Clarence E. Woods of Ft. Myers, W. L. Wilson of Sarasota and many others.

George A. Fiddock of the Miami Chamber of Commerce has issued invitations to all Florida editors to be the guests of the city of Miami during the convention, and has sent out a list of the hotels and other information that will be of service to them upon arrival in Miami.

PEOPLE OF ALL SECTIONS AGREED THAT FORREST LAKE WILL GET THE PLUM

Hon. Forrest Lake of this city, representative from Seminole county, and one of the most prominent among the public men of Florida will be the next speaker of the House of Representatives when the legislature meets in April.

Mr. Lake has the happy faculty of making friends and the luck of an Irishman in landing all that he goes after in the way of politics.

The incoming legislature is the best composed of any similar body the state has had in fifteen years, yesterday said Forrest Lake of Sanford, who was in the city.

It will be constructive, he said, as opposed to many of the former ones, which have been tearing down and hampering in every possible manner the state at large and communities in particular.

Mr. Lake declared that the state this time must be liberal, sanely liberal, realizing just as a successful business man realizes, that when times are slow the judicious expenditure of money will bring in a harvest of a hundredfold.

The state must pay out some money and it must put down any attempted enlargement of destructive powers in all departments, he said.

Mr. Lake is one of the two men between whom is admittedly the speakership of the new house and he declared himself confident of success in his ambition to preside over the deliberations of the body.

He said that he has the support of every man on the East Coast and that he has already enough members standing by him as friend to friend, to make his election a certainty.

After he was gone yesterday a local politician who watches things fairly closely said: "He has every man with him from Nassau county to Monroe, except one of the Duval delegation. Both Duval men were formerly with him but one has now made the statement that 'I am the man who is going to win in this thing,' and is therefore waiting to see which will develop into the strong est of all the aspirants for the place after the members get into the caucus."

The local politician also declared Forrest Lake will get his share of the members from West Florida and "I believe now he has the lead of Cary Hardee of Live Oak, who has been considered by many as a sure winner to this time."

Another man in the city, however, and one who claims to have inside information on the question, declares Cary Hardee is going to be elected speaker of the house without doubt.

Both are strong men and both are tried men with a known following and though there are some seven altogether in the race avowedly and many more who are in a receptive mood there seems to be little doubt but that one of these men will be the presiding officer of the house.

The house will caucus Monday night, April 5, at which time the organization will be completed with the exception of appointments, to be made by the presiding officer, who will name his appointees on the day of first convening.

Brotherhood Meeting

The Brotherhood Class of the Presbyterian church will give a chicken pillau tonight at the Manse on Oak avenue.

The men of Sanford are invited to attend. A good program will be rendered.

Rev. G. B. Waldron is a guest in the city and is being cordially welcomed by his old friends.

late the Wakefield Preserving Co. upon their good judgment and upon the wonderful amount of business that is coming to them.

They have taken the idea advanced by the papers everywhere in the state and are making a success.

Go thou and do likewise, you people of Sanford, and every other city of Florida.

The Herald wishes to congratulate

SANFORD'S NEW PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Sanford is building at the present time churches amounting in value to about $75,000. The Baptist church and Methodist churches are almost finished and the Presbyterian church has just started the foundation of the new edifice that will grace the corner of Third street and Oak avenue.

The building will be of the new style red vitrified brick with a dull finish that gives the building the elegant appearance so much sought after by the designers of churches.

C. E. Streeter of Jacksonville is the architect. The building when completed will cost about $25,000.
