Lotto rolls over once again

TALLAHASSEE - The estimated Florida Lotto jackpot has more than doubled, from $7 million to $15 million, when a computer run showed that no ticket sold last week had all six numbers drawn Saturday night.

The numbers were 6-10-21-26-41-43.

Holders of 242 tickets with any five of those numbers can cash them in for $4,483 each, while 14,322 four-of-six tickets are worth $110.50 each and 273,511 three-of-six tickets are worth $5.50 each.

Lotto jackpot estimates are based on projected tickets sales added to funds from rollovers, with the money invested for a 20-year payout to a single winner.

Researchers gun for outer space

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE - Shooting astronauts to the moon with a cannon remains a fantasy, but using guns to put satellites in orbit may be a realistic sequel to that 19th century science fiction yarn.

Electromagnetic rail guns being developed to shoot down missiles as part of the "Star Wars" Strategic Defense Initiative program would be powerful enough to launch small payloads into space, Air Force scientists say.

"It's not just some pipe dream. We are not that far away," researcher George Kirby said in a recent interview. But he conceded, "We are not going to make Jules Verne come true."

The French science fletion writer envisioned a manned projectile fired from a giant cannon in his 1865 novel "From the Earth to the Moon."

Verne's story was somewhat prophetic because the cannon was fired from Florida, although at "Tampa Town" rather than Cape Canaveral where moon rockets actually were launched more than 100 years later.

Condo owners ordered to pay up

JUPITER - A Texas couple has been ordered to pay the $68,481 in legal fees their condominium association owes in its four-year battle with the couple over $200 in special assessments. "We were shocked, absolutely shocked," said-Suzanne Ziontz, who lives with her husband, Murray, in League City, Texas. Circuit Judge Richard Burk originally ordered the Ziontzes to pay $100 assessments on each of their two condos to the Ocean Trail Unit Owners

Now an appeals court has ruled that not only will the Ziontzes have to pay the assessments. but also the association's legal fees.

The Ziontzes said they would appeal. "It was ludicrous. This is a $100 case," Mrs.

Ziontz said.

The Ziontzes' attorney, John Avery, says the impact of the ease is far reaching.

Hardy has served two 2-year terms as the district 2 City Commissioner. His past year has been spent as the city's Mayor.

Reflecting back on some of the ways he believes he has served the citizens of Longwood, he focused his attention on the importance of the people, more so than the governing bodies.

"I've come to the conclusion that a city can survive, regardless of its government," he said. "The elected government leaders should remember it's the people, not them. who truly control a city's destiny. The commission should merely act Sec Hardy, Page 5A

Residents cheer crack bust

ST. PETERSBURG - Hundreds of residents cheered when police stormed a house to arrest a man who allegedly ran a $300,000-a-week crack cocaine operation and held the neighborhood hostage with his threats.

As detectives led Ronald Eugene Mathia from his home to a police van Friday morning, he looked at the crowd and yelled.

"I'll be back."

Police believe Mathis, 33, controlled about 80 percent of the city's crack cocaine trade.

Detectives described him as the flamboyant owner of a car cleaning business who commanded a sophisticated drug network using high-tech weapons and voodoo magic to protect its profits.

Mathia was indicted by a federal grand jury in Tampa last week on charges of racketeering, operating a continuing criminal enterprise, conspiracy to distribute cocaine base and carrying a firearm in a drug crime.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Senate blasts grants for inmates

WEST PALM BEACH - Florida is ripping off the federal government by allowing trade schools to provide vocational courses at state prisons with grants intended for financially needy students, a report said. Members of the Senate Committee on Corrections, Probation and Parole were scheduled to meet today to discuss the locues raised in its own report.

The report states that two out-of-state trade schools are collecting Pell Grants for up to $2,400 for each incarcerated student in nine South Florida prisons, more than three times as much as it costs the state to provide the same courses at other prisons. "Why should we bill the federal Treasury for services we can provide for one-third of the cost?" said Ray Wilson, staff director of the Senate committee.

The staff suggests the state provide and pay for the courses, as it does in other state prisons, although the state's financial crisis makes that unlikely this year.

Other options would be to have the state or community and four-year colleges provide the courses and cover the cost by becoming a participant in the Pell Grant becoming a participant in the Pell Grant program.

The Pell Grant option may not be available much longer for either public or private programs, however. Congress, alarmed that an estimated 1 percent of all Pell Grants are going to prison inmates and that the figure is rapidly rising, is considering denying the grants to all incarcerated students.

The report blasted the prison vocational courses offered by Branell College of

Nashville, Tenn., and the Business Training Institute of Maywood, N.J., for which Branell gets $2,310 Pell Grants for almost every student and BTI gets $2,400. The following are some of the criticisms against the schools cited in the report:

—Some inmates with long sentences receive Pell Grants for vocational training they probably will never use outside prison.

-Trade schools set prison tuition artificially high so inmate students qualify for the maximum Pell award. As a result. inmate students receive 100 percent of the cost of education whereas traditional students are provided only 60 percent of the -Inmates who are not eligible for Pell Grants are denied access to courses operated by the two trade schools.

recall Holland's contributions Democrats general election in 1970 for

Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — There must be moments when Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles longs for simpler times, perhaps like those enjoyed by former Gov. Spessard Holland, who preceded Chiles as a U.S. senator.

Holland died 20 years ago this week after a career that motivated several young Floridians like Chiles and former Gov. Reubin Askew to seek political futures.

"He was an outstanding senator and really an inspiration to a lot of people who might want to aspire to public service." Askew said in a telephone interview. "Lawton was very close to Senator Holland, being right there from Polk County.'

Park Trammell, Holland, Chiles and U.S. Sen. Bob Graham each served as governor and senator, but only Chiles came home to become governor after serving in the U.S. Senate.

"I said during this campaign that I had a dream that I saw Spessard and Park Trammell (and) they told me you've didn't do it right ... you got it backwards," Chiles said. "I think I'm the only one ... if I had to go back to the Senate now. that would be frustration.

"The rest of them had to give up the driver and cook," joked Chiles. "It's better this way." Holland served his one term as governor during World War II before going to Washington in 1946 to begin his first of four terms in the Senate. Although Holland died at age 79 less than a year after leaving office, he did his best to make sure the state was left in the hands of newcomers with similar political views. "He was a very solid guy, a bit more conservative than I was, but just a solid man who just stood for integrity," recalled Askew. "I remember in particular, one of the real highlights of the Lawton and me was a rally held In Lake City." said Askew. "Senator Holland appeared with both of us and it was really a tremendous boost to our campaigns — it meant so much to both of us."

Chiles won his U.S. Senate race and Askew became governor in the 1970 election. As Chiles prepared to run for the Senate seat being vacated by Holland's retirement, he was reminded about the political advantage of being from Lakeland. Chiles, Holland and Trammell all came from Polk County in central Florida. "I remember him (Holland) saying then. You are going to find you are very, very fortunate to have been born in Polk County. You're not hated because you're not from South airplane, you were expected to Florida or North Florida." Graham, who was a young boy while governor, but added that he served in Washington at a time of great change.

"He lived through a real transition in many ways, including the changes in our state, which had a population of less than 2 million when he was governor (and had grown) to 6 million when he died." said Graham.

"He (Holland) said the jet airplane killed the Senate.' added Graham.

"Prior to that (jet travel) he'd leave Bartow the first week in January, take the train to Washington, unpack their bags at a hotel where they lived and stay there until early July when Congress finished its business for the year." Graham said. "With the advent of the jet go home almost every weekend and that meant you didn't get to spend much time on the

Flying free

The almost weekly reports of airline bankruptcies, reorganizations and consolidations have provided ammunition for those who advocate a return to sederal regulation of the industry. But a new report by the independent Transportation Research Board concludes that, despite the upheaval in the industry, airline deregulation has resulted in improved service, lower average fares and no measurable decline in safety.

"More people are flying today at lower prices than ever before in history," said Joel C. Fleishman of Duke University, who chaired in aviation, economics, safety, airline management, airport operation and public policy.

The study noted that, since Congress deregulated the airline industry in 1978, market competition has been strengthened, service has expanded, average fares have increased more slowly than industry costs, and both fatal and non-fatal accident rates have declined. The report also noted that, while major carriers now serve fewer rural areas, service on such routes generally has been replaced by commuter or regional carriers.

Other evidence bears this out.

Prior to 1978, only 17 percent of airline passengers could choose among three or more carriers on a particular route. In 1991, 65 percent of passengers enjoy such a choice. In 1978, airlines carried 275 million passengers. In 1990, they carried 498 million travelers. In terms of dollars and cents, the Brookings Institution estimates that fares have averaged 18 percent less than they otherwise would have without deregulation. All told, this amounts to more than $100 billion in savings to consumers.

The Transportation Research Board does perceive a threat to the benefits of deregulation from further consolidation of the industry and the preservation of certain barriers to competition. Among other corrective measures, it recommends that the Justice Department oppose any airline mergers or acquisitions where carriers offer duplicative service or where they share a hub.

The transportation board also suggests that the government discourage cartels by preventing stronger airlines from restricting the use of the common computer reservation system. Ninety percent of domestic air travel is booked through this system. The board also recommends that travel agents be required to disclose any incentive commissions they receive from particular carriers, because agents exercise considerable influence over consumers' choices of airlines.

These are sensible recommendations that reflect the changing conditions of the airline industry without undermining the tremendous benefits travelers have derived from 13 years of deregulation.

Duke's good at hiding his spots

A long-time political reporter and I were discussing whether the Democrats would be able to draft any kind of convincing platform for the '98 elections. I said, "If they don't come up with a plan that relieves the economic crunch on the middle class, they're sunk. I think that's going to be the big lesse."

The reporter, also a long-time friend, is slow to come to judgment on most things, preferring to keep his mouth shut and be thought a pig than to open his mouth and oink. But on this subject he did have an opinion. "No, I think a bigger subject will be race," he told me. "It will be subterranean, but it will be divisive and it will be deadly."

I don't know which of us is right, or if neither of us is, but if the governor's race in Louisiana is any indication, we both are. David Duke is successfully using the plight of the middle class to pit the races against each other for his own ends.

And this time, the message is definitely subterranean. Gone are the rash racist, white-supremacist statements he made a few years ago, back when he got to wear the king-size sheet as Grand Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Today, his line echoes the sentiments of a lot of folks who aren't racists, especially those squeezed between high taxes and declining buying power: He's against any new taxes, affirmative action and the "rising welfare lt's a dangerous. highly-combustible m i x ture: Take an economically strapped group of voters, social programs fraught with problems, and one personable young man adept at implying blaine on people who benefit from those social programs. I may think that view is terribly simplistic.

short-sighted and even wrong, but it doesn't take a racist to arrive at that conclusion. Unfortunately, it's only a short hop to blaming not only the social programs, but the people who benefit from them. And don't ever doubt that David Duke's just the man who can help you hop right over there.

He's amart enough to have stopped his public racist rantings — in fact, the newspaper he founded, published and edited for many years, the NAAWP (National Association for the Advancement of White People) News, advises that since most people still regard white supremacy as immoral, "never refer to racial superiority or inferiority, only talk about racial differences, carefully avoiding value judgments."

But Duke hasn't been able to keep all his views underground. As recently as 1989, when he was a Louisiana state representative, he was selling books advocating white supremacy, extolling American Nazi Party founder George Lincoln Rockwell and the KKK, and denying that the Holocaus' ever happened.

Duke promoted an NAAWP plan to create separate, small territories within the United States, relocate members of several minorities to the territories, and leave the rest of the United States to white people.

A ban on all assault weapons

In politics, even more than in religion, conversion comes mainly through crisis.

So there seems to be only one explanation for why the House of Representatives covered itself with shovelfuls of shame the other day — refusing to ban a single assault weapon on a day devoted to combatting crime. Apparently, there weren't enough crises to go around.

There was just one fresh tragedy: 23 diners in Luby's Cafeteria in Killeen, Texas, murdered by one man firing two assault weapons, one day before the House vote.

And so there was just one conversion: the congressman from Killeen, Rep. Chet Edwards, who'd been a National Rifle Association kind-of-guy for as long as he could remember.

The freshman Democrat had planned to vote "no" on a ban of 13 domestically made assault guns, until he discovered the Truth and saw the Light in the most painful of ways: Those dead diners were his friends, acquaintances, constituents. As fast as a madman can squeeze a trigger 23 times, Edwards experienced a conversion-by-crisis.

"For me, suddenly the old arguments ring hollow," he told his House colleagues. "We hear, 'Guns do not kill, people do,' Tell that to the families of those 22 citizens who are dead today." (The final death toll was 23.)

He put his day-old views into a century of context: "For generations in my rural Texas district, guns have been a way of life. This issue is not about gun control; it is about saving lives.... Today, this House must make a choice about guns, not hunting rifles, but about assault weapons, about Uzis.... We hear about the right to bear arms, an important right. Does that mean, though, that absolutely no limits can be placed on the possession of firearms? Surely not, not bazookas in every garage or grenade launchers in every living room, surely not."

But, of course, the words of first-termer Edwards rang hollow to 247 of his colleagues who'd already made up their minds that they were going to toss this bone to the NRA. Many had already opposed the NRA once this year by voting for the Brady Bill's waiting period for handgun purchases.

These representatives, after all, did not have the benefit of a mass murder in their own backyards to sharpen their insight.

If common sense ruled politics, the ban would have passed unanimously. Here's what it was really about: The Bush administration banned a handful of assault weapons made in foreign countries — such as the Uzi and AK47 — because they have no legitimate sporting purpose for hunters or target shooters and aren't weapons for self defense, but are for rapid-firing of the sort used by people bent on multiple murder or outgunning cops. But President Bush, in his own mindless compromise to pacify the NRA, refused to ban identical guns that are made in the United States. That's what this bill would have done, just as a similar Senate bill already did.

Would it harm law-abiding Americans who want guns for their own protection or sporting purposes? No, they have replied in polls; 68 percent of gun owners favor a ban on these assault weapons used by murderers and drug gangs.

In the House today are 247 repre sentatives who surely see the logic of that, but fear being attacked back home by the NRA. They need to hear, instead. an ultimatum from voters who care about protecting our cops and fighting crime: It's time for your conversion by electoral crisis. Ban those assault weapons - now! in the final House-Senate conserence bill, or your career in Congress will come to a quick dead-end.

Those dead diners were his friends, acquaintances, constituents.

"I'll be honest with you — my game plan for my first term as a congressman in a marginal district was to lay low and not be controversial." Chet Edwards told me. "Now I don't know how I'll come out. I deeply regret that it took a tragedy of this magnitude to open my eyes to this issue. But the very reason I've decided to speak out now is that I don't want my colleagues to have to witness first hand a mass murder in their districts before they see the light."

Customs agents have too much fun

WASHINGTON — How about this for an example of your tax dollars at work? Recently, some U.S. Customs Service agents cruising the Mexican border near Presidio, Texas, in their Blackhawk helicopter decided it might be fun to open fire on jack rabbits. They began peppering the ground below them with fire from their .223 caliber semi-automatic machine guns.

The ruckus was unnerving for the rabbits, not to mention a local school official who heard the bursts of gunfire ripping across the desert and complained to the police. The Customs cowboys were not on a drug mission at the time, but, according to our sources, were just "testing out their weapons.' Normally, Customs agents are encouraged to test their weapons at a firing range, but boys will be boys.

Apparently some of the boys behave like boys all too regularly in the Customs Service. This and other incidents have outraged and embarrassed the more responsible Customs employees. Our associate Dean Boyd has gathered information on several alarming incidents of unnecessary shooting and mishandling of weapons at Customs. If Americans are looking to law enforcement to stem the tide of crime, they had better look beyond the Customs Service.

On the night of Oct. 1, police picked up two Customs agents for allegedly shooting up the deserted Chin Tiki Polynesian restaurant in Detroit. There were no injuries, but there were no criminals involved either, just two off-duty agents with a few drinks under their belts, police said. The agents were released without being charged with anything. Customs is investigating the case while the two remain on active duty.

On June 25, an undercover Customs agent in Newark, N.J., was shot and permanently paralyzed by a fellow officer during a drug bust that was a fiasco from the start. The undercover agent had connected with two Colombians and arranged a sting involving several pounds of cocaine. They met in a hotel parking lot with the undercover agent wearing a wire. He had asked for an experienced undercover backup who spoke Spanish, but the request was denied. None of the agents monitoring his wire and waiting to make the bust understood Spanish, making it difficult, if not impossible for them to know the right moment to move in.

Sources told us that after the Colombians produced the cocaine, a Customs official in the backup squad decided it was time to move in. He sped toward the trio in his car and when he stopped, forgot to put the car in park. It began rolling and while he tried to stop it, his gun went off twice, wounding the undercover agent.

Press accounts indicate that Customs officials in Newark originally tried to claim that the agent had shot himself accidentally. An internal investigation has since found serious shortcomings in the operation, but no action has been taken against the supervisor in charge. The agent who did the accidental shooting has been transferred to head-quarters.

In another episode currently under scrutiny by Congress, hundreds of firearms, including machine guns, may be unaccounted for in the Customs firearms warehouse in Fort Benning, Ga. One senior Customs manager in Washington is said to have had 10 Soviet-made pistols from the warehouse in his possession for years.

A congressional subcommittee has asked Customs Commissioner Carol Hallet for an explanation and an accounting of the missing guns.

Ram boys, Patriot girls repeat as SAC swim champs

From Staff Reports

OVIEDO - When the Lake Mary and Lyman high school swim teams competed in a dual meet in September, a meet won by the Lake May boys and Lyman girls, both Lake Mary coach Fred Tyler and Lyman coach Don Clark said things would be different at the Seminole Athletic Conference meet.

Well, they were . , and they weren't.

The biggest difference was the presence of the three-time defending state champton Lake Brantley girls. Led by multiple winner Ryann. Pauley (who fluished first in both the 200-yard and 500-yard freestyles), the Patriots easily wontheir sixth consecutive Seminole Athletic Conference championship.

On the other hand, there was some similarity to that dual meet some six weeks ago. Despite not having any divers, the Lake Mary boys were just deep enough to out distance Lyman 315-297. for their second straight SAC title.

So deep and talented are the Lake Brantley girls that there was at least one Patriot among the top three in every individual event except diving. Not only that, but the Patriots won all three relay events.

Lyman's girls were a distant second to Lake Brantley (402-287) while Oviedo inched past Lake Mary 181-180 for third place.

Nicole Freda was the only other multiple winner in the girls' competition, finishing first in the 200 individual medley and 100 butterfly for Lyman. Sarah Cline also claimed an individual SAC championship for Lyman, winning the diving competition.

All the other events were won by Lake Brantley swimmers.

Helen Paget-Wilkes posted a pair of seconds for the Lake Mary Rams in her two individual events, finishing behind Pauley in the 200 and 500 freestyle. Michelle McLaughlin was second in the diving for Lake Mary.

Oviedo's top individual performer was Susan Carignan, who finished second in the 100 freestyle and third in the 50 freestyle.

For Seminole, which trailed Lake Howell in the team standings (114-25). Kara Thomas was second in the 50 freestyle and third in the 200

In the boys' half of the meet, Lake Mary was led by the quartet of the Christopher twins, Todd and Chad, Lee Calvert and Robert Polito. Of the eight individual races the four could enter, they won five, finished second in one and placed third in two others

On top of that. Calvert and the two Christophers combined with Shane Meoli to winthe 400 freestyle relay while the Christophers, Polito and Richard Davis won the 200 medicy relay. The Rams also finished third in the 200 freestyle relay.

Individually, Calvert and Chad Christopher both were mutiple winners for the Rams, Calvert finishing first in the 200 and 500 freestyles while Christopher took the top spot in the 50 and 100 freestyles.

Without Osceola on our sched de we would have been 21-1.

With only three returning players from last year's 32.3 team this year could understandably been considered a refinilding one for Lake Mary

In fact, as championship years go, the Rains did have their worst won loss record in the foir years that high-

I'm extremely pleased with this season," said Whalen "Some extremely inexperienced players stepped forward and played quite well. For us to wind up 18-3 in the regular season, 21-4 overall, and win our tourth straight conference championship is a tribute to the players in the Lake Mary volleyball program.

Seven players will return from this year's team next year, led by fan Saunders, Taylor Jorgenson, Drew Thomas, Collin Munns and a trio of defensive specialists. David Seisciani is expected to make an impact after moving up from the junior varsity feam:

Two things stand out in Whalen's mind concerning next year's team.

Strawberries thrive in Central Florida

it's easy to grow plump, juicy strawberries in Central Florida. where we have almost a perfect habitat for growing them. Strawberries grow best in a well-drained, moist area. With our sandy soils, this means that plenty of organic matter must be added to the soil before planting.

in Florida, strawberries grow as annuals, Plants usually start to appear in the garden centers in November and if planted now they will be ready to harvest in early spring. Berry production will continue through the spring and as the weather warms and days lengthen, plants will cease producing berries and begin to form runners. These runners will take root and become new plants. However, in urban landscapes where gardening space is limited, most people remove the plants to make room for other crops that will produce fruits or vegetables during the summer. It is important to plant straw-berry varieties which have been tested and proven under Flori-da's growing conditions such as Florida 90, Tioga, Dover and Florida Belle. These varieties are resistant to the common plant disease anthracnose, which can be devastating to strawberries. When purchasing strawberries to plant in the garden, select those with fresh, green leaves and avoid ones with dry roots.

Before planting, select a well-drained site and add liberal amounts of organic matter to improve the moisture retention and assure nutrient supplies to the plant. Also, broadcast about 5 pounds of a 6-8-8 (or similar analysis for vegetables) per 100 square feet of bed area. Mix this in as you prepare raised beds.

Strawberries should be planted in raised beds two feet wide and spaced two feet apart for good drainage. The beds should be mounded so they are six inches high at the edges and eight inches high at the middle. Be sure to set the plants at the correct depth. Do not cover the crown and do not leave roots exposed. Add a two or three inch layer of mulch after planting.

problems you will encounter on strawberries will probably be spider mites, cutworms, snails and slugs. Diseases include leafspots, blights and fruit rots and appliation of a fungicide may be necessary. Nematodes can also be a problem and would require preplant fumigation.

Additional fertilizer is usually not needed because of the large amount of fertilizer added prior to planting. With proper mainte-nance, you will be enjoying plump, delicious red strawberries on your breakfast cereal. shortcake or jam by early spring. For a free fact sheet about growing strawberries, give me a call or drop by the Agriculture persistent lower back pain and am concerned that it may come from my prostate. I don't have any problems voiding, but when I do it calls for immediate attention and the volume is not very great. A prostate exam about a year ago was negative. and my doctor said caffeine doesn't stimulate enlargement. Please enlighten me.

DEAR READER: You seem to be experiencing urinary urgency, a common complaint of middle-aged and elderly men. This symptom appears because the detrusor muscle, which controls the voluntary flow of urine from the bladder, weakens with age. Thus, as time progresses, when we gotta go, we gotta go.

This annoying affliction is not associated with the prostate gland, overgrowth of which leads to difficulty voiding and retention of urine.

There is no cure for urinary urgency; it's merely part of the aging process. Prostatic overgrowth, on the other hand, may require surgery.

I'm not sure your back pain has anything to do with your plumbing. Specifically, a negative prostate exam several months ago is pretty good evi-dence that this gland is not to blame. Perhaps you have some early arthritis in your back or a muscle strain that could be diagnosed with X-rays and treated with physical therapy.

Caffeine, a mild diuretic, will not cause prostatic enlargement. although it does increase the volume of urine.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently changed physicians, and my new doctor has indicated I have Parkinson's disease. He said I should not be upset since there is medication to control the trembling. I've now read a book that states many symptoms resemble Parkinson's, and therefore judgment should not be based on one visit or symptom. What do you think?

DEAR READER: While it's true that some neurological es can cause the characteristic tremor of the aliment), your doctor is probably correct that you have the disease, if he or she fully examined you and ruled out other causes. Naturally, you can always ask for a second opinion to confirm your doctor's diagnosis. I'd follow

Today's hand is based on a contribution to the magazine by Eddie Kantar. Cover the East-West cards and plan the play in seven spades. West leading the heart king.

The correct line is a dummy reversal. Win trick one with the heart ace, ruff a heart in hand, play a club to dummy and ruff another heart with the spade jack. Now lead a spade to dummy, ruff the last heart with the spade ace, draw trumps and unblock the club ace. In hand you have the Q-J of clubs and diamond ace left, so you can claim.

Note that if you lead a trump to dummy at trick three and ruff another heart, you will go down. West discarding his singleton club. True, you would have been defeated if West had led his club, Jacoby forcing raise; three but he didn't. Make him pay.
