The Orphan Called Defeat

"As always, victory finds a hundred fathers but defeat is an orphan."—Count Galeazzo Ciano.

In ordering an audacious rescue operation intended to free the American hostages in Tehran, President Carter took what he knew to be a desperate gamble.

Had the rescue succeeded, it would have resolved the dangerous Iranian crisis in one bold stroke. The perilous confrontation now building in the Persian Gulf tinderbox would have been instantly defused.

The effect on the American people, and on this country's allies and adversaries as well, would have been electric. Friendly capitals could only have been heartened, indeed reassured, at such a display of American daring and courage.

And they would have been enormously relieved at the resolution of a worrisome crisis they fear will involve them. Adversaries, most especially those in the Kremlin, could only have braced themselves to a sobering new respect for American resolve and willingness to act decisively in defense of U. S. interests.

Failure, on the other hand, could have resulted in the deaths of the 53 American hostages, not to mention the fate of the 190 men in the airborne assault force.

As well all know to our grief, Mr. Carter was compelled to abort the operation after three of the eight helicopters involved suffered mechanical failures. Tragically, a collision between one of the RH-53 helicopters and a C-130 transport at the desert staging area 200 miles south of Tehran took the lives of eight U. S. servicemen.

What might have been a dazzling success ended in heartbreaking failure. Predictably, there is no shortage of carping critics prepared to pounce on the president for his courageous decision. Defeat is truly an orphan.

Sen. Frank Church, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, first grumbled about not being informed of the rescue attempt beforehand and then charged that the president had violated provisions of the 1973 War Powers Act.

Other members of Congress called the operation "dangerous" and questioned its timing. Rep. Henry Reuss, a Wisconsin Democrat, even called on Mr. Carter to withdraw as a candidate for re-election.

Were the American hostages now safe aboard a U. S. aircraft carrier in the Arabian Sea, this unseemingly display of whining would no doubt have given way to jubilant acclaim.

In any case, even Sen. Church ought to recognize that absolute secrecy was essential if the rescue operation were to have any chance of success. As Rep. Edward Derwinski noted, had Mr. Carter consulted all the pertinent congressional committees before acting, "the ayatollah would have been on the ground to shake hands with the helicopter pilots."

Notwithstanding the remarks of critics, this was no halfhearted plan impulsively embarked upon. A picked force of volunteer soldiers, sailors, Marines and airmen began rehearsing the rescue plan months ago. But for the failure of the helicopters, there is good reason to believe that the courage and skill of these young Americans coupled with painstaking planning would have brought success. The nation is in their debt.

It is far from clear that the rescue effort will prove to be the unmitigated disaster some now proclaim it.

Iran's leaders, and the terrorists holding the embassy, now know that the United States is deadly serious about effecting the release of the hostages. A president who ordered an audacious raid might well order another — a possibility Secretary of Defense Harold Brown pointedly stated.

Most significantly, the terrorists at the embassy, sobered perhaps by the now credible prospect of U. S. retaliation, reneged on their threat to execute the hostages if the United States took military action. And while no one should contradict their irrational capacity for savagery, at least Mr. Carter has called their bluff, which in itself is no small accomplishment.

'Live' Politics Upset

VALLEY Forge, Pa. (NEA) — The contenders in the current presidential race have successfully revived a political technique that in recent years has been in danger of becoming a lost art — campaigning in person.

Devolving weeks of the candidates' time to actually meeting and talking with voters may not appear to be an especially revolutionary approach to campaigning, but in some quarters that old-fashioned concept has long been out of favor.

Many of the professional managers and consultants who gained substantial influence in the political process during the 1960s and 1970s have derided the notion as inefficient, irrelevant and outdated.

Personal campaigning may be suitable for candidates seeking lesser offices and representing small constituencies, they argue, but contends for the presidency ought to use more modern techniques.

Invitably leading that list is television advertising, followed by other depersonalized approaches such as telephone banks, computerized mass mailings and stands on issues tailored to the results of public opinion surveys.

But in this year's contest for the Republican presidential nomination, the two most striking upsets scored by insurgent George Bush against front-runner Ronald Reagan have come in states where Bush devoted an inordinate amount of his own time to campaigning in person.

In Iowa, where precinct caucuses provided the year's first test of the candidates' popularity, Bush was the unexpected winner after spending 38 days campaigning in the state.

Reagan's infrequent forays into Iowa became an issue in that contest, a potential problem he promptly resolved by substantially increasing the number of personal appearances in New Hampshire — where he trounced Bush in the primary.

In the primary here in Pennsylvania, Bush again achieved a surprising victory after spending 14 consecutive days immediately prior to election day traversing the state.

Reagan originally planned to spend only portions of two days here, then belatedly added appearances on Saturday and Sunday prior to the Tuesday balloting — but that effort apparently was too little too late.

In the race for the Democratic presidential nomination, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., similarly achieved his most striking victories over President Carter in the two primaries where he virtually lived in the state for a week or more prior to election day — New York and Pennsylvania.

Comfort For Iran Hostage Families

WASHINGTON — First Lady Rosalynn Carter invited a U.S. hostage to the White House last week for a Christmas dinner.

Footnote: Mrs. Carter's heroic efforts were successful, but she still hasn't been able to recover the full amount of the ransom.

There's no doubt that Dick Starr is an expert on the trauma a hostage faces. For three years he endured repeated threats, endless interrogations, barely palatable food and soul-searing loneliness. He spent his scorching days and chilly nights huddled in a makeshift hammock under a tarpaulin.

Except for six armed, unsmiling guards, he had no human companionship. Unlike the Tehran captives, Starr never knew if his family thought he was alive or dead, and had no way of knowing if any steps were being taken to rescue him.

As if turned out, his brave, indomitable mother never gave up hope that he was alive, and never gave up her battle to free him. Unable to penetrate the bureaucratic curtain of indifference, Mrs. Starr finally came to his aid. Months of secret negotiations led to a sudden ransom demand for $500,000.

Starr had the money from a friend in the news agency business. He had to pay the ransom above all else. Yet he accepted no money from Graham Leacy, a Londoner who controls half a dozen companies. One of his companies has an interest in the Gulf Oil field, and another sells products to the oil industry.

Four months later, an exhausted but elated Starr was quietly brought to Mitchell at his hotel, and after a hasty call from Columbus

After a few years away from school, Lake Mary City Clerk Connie Major and City Treasurer Madeleine Papa have enrolled in a class at Seminole Community College.

Mrs. Major and Mrs. Papa are taking a course in computer concepts to begin their college studies. Mrs. Papa intends to obtain a degree in accounting ultimately.

Casselberry Mayor Owen Sheppard has been in Tallahassee most of the week lobbying for passage of a bill which would permit cities to levy an admittance tax on persons attending pari-mutuel wagering sports.

On Thursday afternoon right after he testified before the pari-mutuel wagering committee, the bill was killed.

Sanford City Manager Warren Knowles is scheduled to be in Tallahassee most of next week testifying before various legislative committees on a number of issues.

A number of Seminole High School Principal Don Reynolds' fans are rooting for him to become the first principal of the new Lake Mary High School.

Reynolds' was an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for Florida's fifth congressional district seat in Congress several years ago.

Grier's stepsister, Bill King, ran for the county commission several years ago and was defeated. King was a Republican at the time.

At a recent gathering Longwood City Clerk Linda Martin told some of her friends that she will be resigning in the next couple months to move out west.

After Longwood's new charter was adopted in September, 1978, Mrs. Martin became the city's first appointed clerk.

Altamonte Springs Mayor Norman Floyd is sporting a new short Afro hair-do and moustache. Some are saying that from a distance, Floyd, if he were smoking a cigar, would bear a striking resemblance to former Police Capt. David Gunter.

There are a few other remarkable and aged veterans of the investigation into his activities as the chief executive of Seminole's second largest city.

Lake Howell, DeLand Score Semi-Final Victories

Silver Hawks Challenge Bulldogs For District Crown

By JOE DESANTIS

DeLand's stingy defense once again sparked and Lake Howell jumped on Seminole High pitching early Thursday night to vault the Bulldogs and Silver Hawks into tonight's championship game of the District 9 Baseball Tournament.

DeLand pitchers had barely smugged into their seats at Sanford's Memorial Stadium before headoff hitter Jeff Spina opened with a line single to left.

DeLand added another run in the top of the second when Childs bobbled a dribbler back to the mound off of Jon Brenner's bat. Eddie Hickox earned an infield single on a well executed bunt down the third base line.

left-center alley. Porzig settled down to strike out Jay Drivas for the second out but had trouble with his location and followed with back-to-back walks to Barry Stockwell and catcher Frank Reindl.

Shortstop Jerry Winterhalter delivered a long single to left, scoring two runs to boost Lake Howell in front 3-0.

Silver Hawk starter Bryan Murray, who spaced out four Tribe hits on the night, cruised through the first four innings, troubling Seminole batters with his lively fork ball.

While Murray checked the Seminoles early, his teammates added a cushion to the Lake Howell lead by pouring across four runs in the top of the third.

Following an inning opening ground out by Jay Drivas, Porzig, who had control problems from the start, walked the bases full, setting up counterpart Murray's two RBI single up the middle. Darryl Ely smashed a shot into the right-center alley and hustled the base paths for a triple, driving in two more Lake Howell runs.

Seminole coach Bobby Lundquist promptly pulled Porzig and brought Mike Link in to water down the Silver Hawk fire.

Link came through with a strike out to close the inning. Sanford came alive for its only score of the game in the bottom of the fifth. With two gone, third baseman Brett VonHerbals crushed a Murray fastball into the 307-foot corner in right-center field for a clean triple and never let up on a lead than someone cutoff throw to slide into home on the play for a Tribe run.

Lake Howell answered in the top of the sixth however when Darryl Ely scored following a double by Scott Smith and a link wild pitch.

Seminole fans had the teepee warmed up for a last ditch effort in the Tribe's bottom of the seventh.

Murray opened the inning by striking out Porzig but then got into trouble by giving up back-to-back singles to Walter Davis and VonHerbals. Seminole's second out came on a controversial call at first when Dale Spina, Hawk pitcher Murray and a throw from second baseman Scott Smith all arrived at first at the same time. Spina was called out on the close play and Murray got Glenn Stambaugh on a soft fly to right for the final out and a trip into tonight's district title game against the DeLand Bulldogs.

Lake Howell and DeLand square-off under the lights at 8:00 p.m. with the winner earning a trip to regional play-off action.

DeLand's side-armed Ed D'Jerid sailed through the next two innings, turning a 3-2 advantage, before the pesky Blue Darters knotted the score in the bottom of the sixth.

After getting Cedric Anderson to open the sixth with a ground out, Al Maynard and Jeff O'Dell tagged the lanky right-hander for back to back singles and advanced to second and third on a wild pitch.

With one gone, relief ace Anderson aided his own cause with a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Maynard to tie the ball game.

DeLand came right back in the top of the seventh for what proved to be the go-ahead and deciding run.

Spina singled for his third hit of the game only to be picked off in a run down. Alan Pascock then popped out to the catcher as Anderson looked in control with two outs.

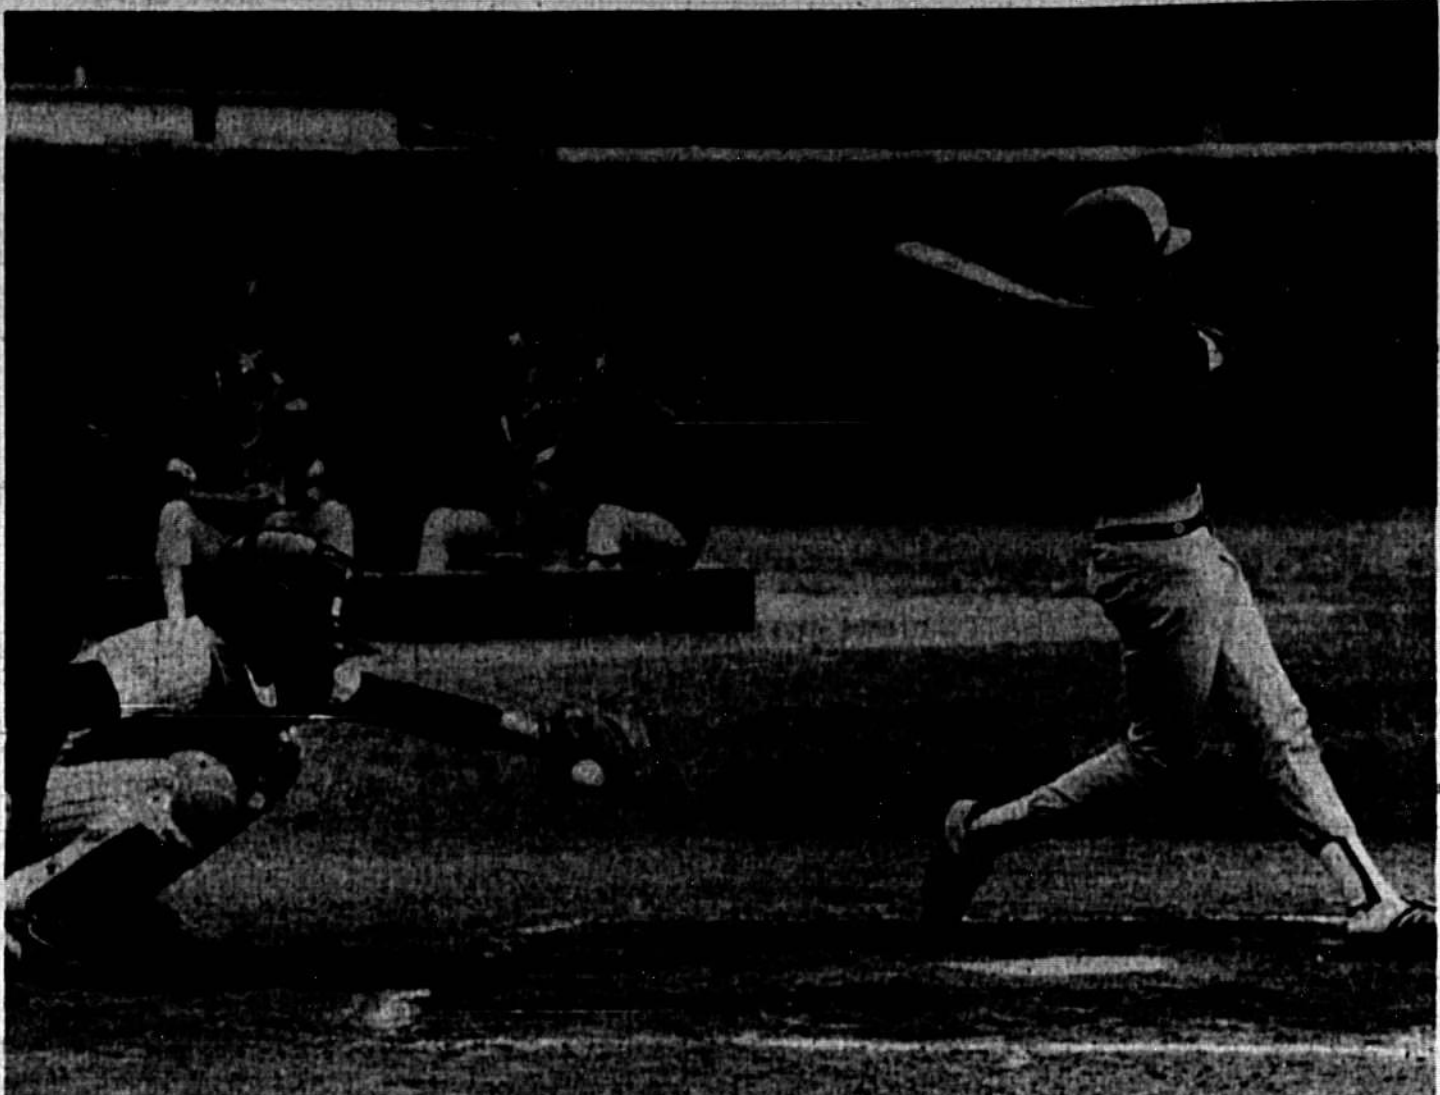

The stocky Apopka pitcher issued Jim Mee a base-on-balls however and Kevin Rood followed with a powerful shot to right field, sending Mee sliding into third base. Mike Frett's cut off throw from right field was wild and Mee scrambled home for DeLand's go ahead run.

D'Jerid mastered the Blue Darters in the final inning without a hit and clinched the contest by striking out Tom Carlisle for Apopka's last out of the 1980 season.

Lake Howell's Silver Hawks took a cue from the Bulldogs and wasted little time in jumping out in front of Seminole in the nightcap semi-final.

Tribe coach Bobby Lundquist sent George Porzig to the mound in place of scheduled starter Tracy Walker, forced out of the lineup with a sore arm.

Lake Howell leadoff man Darryl Ely worked Porzig for a base-on-balls and scored one-out later when right fielder Reggie Barnes drilled a full-count Porzig offering into the Silver Hawk center fielder Darryl Ely knew he was fooled on the pitch. The speedy outfielder got way out in front of Mike Link's curveball on this cut. But Lake Howell got way out in front of Seminole early for an 8-1 win and meets DeLand tonight at 8 p.m. for the District 9 Baseball Championship at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

Cash Celebrating 25th Anniversary

By FRANK EARL ST. PIERRE
Special to the Herald
Johnny Cash will host a 90-minute special at 9:30 p.m. Thursday on CBS celebrating his 25th anniversary in the music business.

In 1955, radio listeners were calling their favorite station, requesting a new singer named Johnny Cash. His first single was released June 21, then, just another new song, now, a classic, "Hey Porter." It was during those days of striped sport shirts, baggie pants, two-tone shoes, and rag-top chrome-embellished charrs that Johnny Cash started his climb to superstardom.

During February 1964, Johnny joined the "Louisiana Hayride," in May of that year, his third single "I Walk The Line" became his first gold record. In July, Johnny joined "The Grand Ole Opry." This was followed in 1967 by the release of his first album.

Early in his career it was obvious that Johnny Cash wasn't just another singer. At his concerts he did improvisations that included Tex Ritter, Red Foley, Kitty Wells, Ernest Tubbs, and Elvis Presley. At this time in his career he pioneered recordings in foreign languages by American singers. He recorded seven songs in Spanish and German.

The 1960s brought surfing, skate boarding, hula hooping and family television viewing into popularity. At this time, on the tube, Johnny appeared as an actor on "Wagon Train," "Shotgun Slade," "The Deputy," "The Rebel" (he also sang the opening and closing theme for this series).

In 1961 Cash starred in a pilot for a television series titled "The Night Rider." His acting efforts continued into the 1970s, when he appeared as a guest star on "Little House On The Prairie" and "Columbo."

During the '60s and the '70s, Cash starred in several movies: "Five Minutes To Live," "Trial Of Tears," "A Gun Fight," and "Thaddeus Rose and Eddie." He did the musical soundtrack for movies: "The Gospel Road," "I Walk The Line," and "Little Fauss and Big Balay." He also appeared in the movies: "Hootenanny Hoot," "Festival," and "Road To Nashville."

During the '70s, Johnny Cash was on television and radio selling prime rib, cars, gas, toy trains, credit cards, gas and oil treatments and a soft drink. His credits also include dozens of public service announcements.

During the past 25 years, Cash has written hundreds of songs, an autobiography, has recorded more than 50 albums and more than 100 singles. He has had two weekly television series. The first was 58 programs for ABC and the second a mini-series of four programs for CBS.

Johnny Cash's gigantic frame houses an even bigger spirit of freedom and adventure than his physical form could ever suggest. One of Johnny's hobbies is photography. He has had many of his photographs published.

In July 1969, Johnny Cash was the first singer to have a recording played in space. A special tape of his songs was played for the astronauts on the first Lunar Mission. Johnny and his group on March 15, 1974, were the last singers to perform on the stage of the old "Opry House," the Ryman Auditorium, in Nashville, Tenn. Johnny Cash's 25th anniversary is 100 percent silver and 100 percent musical history.

Keeping Camping Simple

Wain Cummings said he once saw a group of boys going on a camping trip loaded down with uniforms, fancy camping gear, tents and other heavy equipment. In his opinion, camping should be kept simple with a minimum of equipment. It should be done as the Indians did it, with a blanket the only requirement.

So in 1957 Cummings started an Indian-oriented, family camping lodge and called it the Order of the Feather. "I wanted to reach other children who liked to camp," he said, "but we didn't require expensive uniforms or anything."

The lodge is patterned after the early Indian tribes. Local tribes are under a Grand Lodge of each state. The Grand Lodges, while independent of each other, are coordinated and guided by the Supreme Lodge of the Order of the Feather. Cummings, whose Indian name is White Feather, is the Supreme Chief, and he lives at 132 Mayfair Circle in Sanford.

There are close to 80 members in central Florida with other lodges in Ohio and soon in New York.

You don't have to be an Indian to join the lodge," said Cummings, "you just have to think like one." Members are initiated into the lodge and are taught some of the secrets of life that were held sacred by the early American Indians, he said.

Each year members set up the Kootnibu Indian village for a week of camping, dancing and other activities. The high costs and fancy recreational vehicles required at many campgrounds left Cummings with the feeling he had "been took." Any camping equipment is acceptable at Kootnibu. Since their requirements are just the opposite of many campgrounds, their name is just the opposite. Try pronouncing it backwards.

For more information, Cumming's son-in-law, Jim Detter, may be contacted at 323-8596.

The Order of the Feather is a family affair. Opal Cummings and her granddaughter, Amy Detter, enjoy camping.

Television Magazines Romp In Ratings

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The mass market magazine is alive and well and living on television.

That's the message that came through loud and clear in the weekly Nielsen ratings, with CBS' "60 Minutes" in first place, the most-watched show in the country again last week.

In fifth place, there was ABC's "20-20," with only NBC's "Prime Time Saturday" a disaster, coming in 66th on a list of 69 shows for the week ending April 27.

Aside from each network's news magazine program, other magazine formats also are faring well.

"That's Incredible," a more light-hearted (or empty-headed) feature magazine on ABC was the No. 2 show for the week, and "Real People," the NBC feature mag show, consistently ranks well with Nielsen and last week tied for 13th place.

Further good news for NBC came when "The Sunday Games" tied with "Happy Days" for 19th place on the list. "The Sunday Games," for those who didn't catch the opening, offers off-beat sports events — some frankly staged by the producers — and is played almost entirely for laughs. With high ratings, it's sure to get an encore, eventually perhaps a series shot.

Good music also can be a television hit, although the successful variety format remains elusive. ABC's "Baryshnikov on Broadway," with Mikhail Baryshnikov, Liza Minnelli and some of the best music ever written for the musical theater, ranked 17th.

On the other hand, NBC's "Big Show" variety act was down in 49th place, not a very nice place to be.

One network magazine that isn't part of the prime-time ratings contest is CBS' daytime "Magazine," the May edition of which goes on the air May 1, 10-10:55 a.m., Eastern time.

The program is angled for women's appeal, but not the cook, sew and launder division. The current show opens with a sharp look at joint custody, in which divorced parents share legal responsibility for their children.

Joint custody can be a valid solution when both parents live by stringent rules. But when one parent plans to remarry and relocate in another part of the country, problems arise and it is the children who will have to make drastic adjustments.

The second segment centers on Larry Hagman and his evil alter ego, J.R. Ewing of "Dallas."

The final element of the show concerns a nurse in the "Burn Unit" of a Seattle, Wash., hospital. As she describes the agony of her patients, many viewers will think of the four severely burned American servicemen injured in Iran and now at the Burn Unit of a military hospital in Texas.

The 10 top network television programs for the week ending April 27, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were: 1: 60 Minutes (CBS); 2: That's Incredible (ABC); 3: Three's Company (ABC); 4: MA-SH (CBS); 5: 20-20 (ABC); 6: (The) Dukes of Hazzard and Dallas (both CBS); 8: Flo (CBS); 9: Love Boat (ABC); 10: Taxi (ABC).

Sinatra Heading MS Campaign

Following the example set by Jerry Lewis and other celebrities in the past several years, crooner Frank Sinatra has accepted the leadership role in a health-related fundraising campaign. He was named the chairman for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society's 1980 Hope Chest Campaign.

Known as "the mysterious crippler of young adults," MS is a disease of the central nervous system. It is not a mental disease and is not contagious. It is totally unpredictable disabling disorder, that can cause loss of coordination, tremors, sight and speech difficulties and is often progressively crippling.

"I'm accepting this role in the fight against MS," Sinatra said, "with the hope that I can help by bringing the word home to all Americans what a tragic problem MS is for the 500,000 people who have it and related diseases. When you think of their families, we're really talking about some two million people who are directly affected."

"Public support to help fund research is terribly important. I plan to become very involved in this effort during the coming year."

Woolley Looks Like A Pop Star

By ROB PATTERSON

With his slim good looks, and clear-framed glasses, (worn offstage), Bruce Woolley personifies "pop star."

In that way he is an anomaly in today's British rock scene, where anti-star postures are the currency of the day.

But Bruce not only looks the part — his songs, singing and band — reinforces his "English Garden" by Bruce and the Camera Club introduces a rock structuralist who takes that form towards, but not over, the limits.

That double-edged quality is stamped all-over his work, especially in a song like the British hit he co-wrote with friends The Buggles — "Video Killed The Radio Star." New meets old, and the tension between the two gives Woolley's vision meat.

Bruce's apprenticeship in pop gave him a handle on just what a song is all about. "From then on I had a purpose. I wrote some pop songs, and I know it's a terrible thing to say, but they pop rock. The States have been equally friendly to Woolley's vision. His publishers. On the strength of three songs a guy offered me a publishing deal.

"So I did that. Everyday for 18 months I came into an office and wrote songs. They were given to people and they were just getting ... ruined."

Meeting producer Mike Hurst and his partner Chris Brough (who brought Cat Stevens to prominence) was the catalyst for Woolley to decide to sing his songs himself. He put together the first version of the Camera Club, which after a mere five weeks rehearsal was signed by CBS Records, who Woolley credits for the "financing ... that's the word" which was the key to putting his act together.

From there it's been a fast rise creating a stir opening shows around England and impressing the nation with his first album, which cleverly mixes influences ranging from Bowie to The Dave Clark Five into stirring

Black
I like the color of a black horse
And his hooves.
The color of the sky at night.
The color of the TV set when it's turned off.
The color of a crow.
The color of a cat.
The color of a car.
The color of a bell.
The color of a roof on a house.
Black! Black! Black!
Black! Black! Black!

I like pink because it's soft.
I like the grass was pink.
I like orange because its bright.
I wish the sky was orange.
I like yellow because it's pretty.
I wish all flowers were yellow.
I like baby blue because it's dark.
I wish the animals were purple.
I like red because it's cool.
I wish the sun was red.
Linda Cushing

Rose
How did a rose get so red?
By the fire of demons?
The red of all kindness?
I like roses.
Why red, is my kind question.
Linda Cushing

These poems are by elementary schoolers from Seminole County. They resulted from the Florida Poetry in the Schools program. These pupils are taught by poet Bob Wislhof of Oviedo. Pupils are generally provided with a theme, but are not told what they should write.

Blue, blue, if I could change everything, I would change the moon to light blue.
And change the grass to blue.
So it wouldn't make me And everyone else itchy. I would make the snow light blue.
The sand sparkly blue. I would change the leaves to light blue.
And dark blue. I would change my room to blue.
And my bed, and my rug, too.

Carol Channing Imports Eyelashes

By CINDY ADAMS

NEW YORK — Carol Channing sends to Korea and Hong Kong for those smashing false eyelashes of hers, in case you want to look where she gets them ... LA's Barry Mandel on why he keeps a pad in NYC: “Because the Big Apple's craziness makes me cool, that's why!” ... Raquel Welch was semi-unfriendly when an undiplomatic clod told the sex symbol of the Western world he'd met her big, strapping son, who's 19 ... Bruce Jenner and the misau, Chrystie, are now about as close as the Aynatshah and Billy Graham. Greg Peck's new passion is energy conservation. The hangup is he's spending too much energy on it ... Question: If Gerald Ford were running for president, do you think he'd pardon Jimmy Carter???

Real classy moment: In running into Claudette Colbert, we discussed the last time we'd been together. I suggested it was at some benefit luncheon in honor of some person and then I so bad, it's better than asked, “Do you remember who we were honoring that day?” Cool Colbert smiled and said, “Yes, dear, Me.”

Ugh! ... Ruth Gordon is to co-star with Clint Eastwood and his lady, Sondra Locke, in “Any Which Way You Can.” Needless to say, Ruthie ain't got the love scenes ... Kiss rock star Gene Simmons and the kid cleaned up two portions of chocolate cake. She even drowned the piece in maple syrup. Playboy wanted to stick Miss Piggy on their cover, but creator Jim Henson nixed the idea ... Paul Anka is collaborating with Bart Bacharach for the flick, “Together,” starring Jacqueline Bisset and Maximilian Schell ... “Midnight Express” Brad Davis raspberry'd the longtime gold hoop carrying he always wore. He's running hot these days, so the new hoop is platinum. Tony Curtis reconciled with wife, Leslie ... Pope John Paul II owns two copies of “The Pope in America” books ... All MacGraw: “I'd rather live with a guy than marry him. Financial dependence is not sexy” ... Liv Ullmann: “To marry isn't so bad, it's better than waking up with someone and wishing you were hundreds of miles away.”

But You Can Try Not Much Chance Of Buying TV Show

DEAR DICK: In one of your recent columns, you answered a question about the old TV show, “Empire.” I am very interested in buying this entire series. Is this possible? REVIEWS EDWARDS, Lebanon, Mo.

I am told that your chances are slim. Old TV shows are owned by distributors — in the case of “Empire,” it is Columbia Pictures Television — and they sell to TV stations for reruns. They tell me the legal complications would probably be too difficult for an individual to overcome as well as too costly. But you're welcome to try, and the distributor is the place to go.

DEAR DICK: Could you please tell me the name of the theme song and who sings it on “The Love Boat”? We love that show. M. MERCELL, Magnolia Springs, Ala.

It is “The Love Boat Theme” and it is sung by Jack Jones.

DEAR DICK: Many years ago (20?) Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher starred in a movie where a baby was left on the door step. Was it “Bundle Of Joy”? Why aren't good old movies like this or the old Rock Hudson-Doris Day movies ever shown on TV? These were the good old days with happy-ending movies, not these weird things they make today. ELIZABETH MCCARRON, Lynchburg, Va.

It was “Bundle Of Joy” and it was 24 years ago — 1956, to be exact. Movie-makers make movies that the public buys tickets to see. If they wanted old-fashioned movies, they'd make them; they're in the business to turn a profit, after all. There are simply not enough of your kind (and kind, actually) of people out there buying tickets these days, and that's the truth of it.

DEAR DICK: Sometime in the mid-60s, there was a TV program starring Dick Benjamin and Paula Prentiss. It was a light situation comedy. What was it called? DAVID A. WILSON, Hollywood, Fla.

Ask Dick Kleiner
By DICK KLEINER

It was called “He and She,” and it ran in '67 and '68, and was re-run again in '70. The late Jack Cassidy was also in it.

DEAR DICK: Alex Trebek, host of “High Rollers” — in the back of my mind I seem to recall the names connected with something other than TV. Maybe sports. True or not? And there is an actor on “Love Grant” whose voice sounds like the man on the old “Pepper Young” series. True or not? GERRY AND JINK BELLEVEAU, Macon, N.E., Ga.

One right, one wrong. Trebek, according to his biography, has always been in show biz — he's a Canadian, incidentally. But you're right about Mason Adams, who plays Charlie Hume on “Love Grant.” He was the voice of Pepper Young from 1946 to 1960.

DEAR DICK: In June 1979 I was an extra in a movie with Christopher (“Superman”) Reeve that was shot on MacArthur Island, Mich. It was called “Somewhere In Time.” As of now, I haven't heard a word about it! Not a "Heartsounds," by Martha Weinman Lear (Simon and Schuster, $12.95), is a book of terrible beauty. It arouses the kind of visceral alarm that haunts almost every middle-aged man and woman, even while it excites aesthetic and even moral pleasures.

It is the true story of how heart disease changed the lives of two people. Harold Lear, a prominent urologist and surgeon, woke up on August 3, 1973 with pain in his chest. It didn't go away but "spread through his chest, radiating upward into his throat. Now it was crushing — crushing," just as it is always described.

It was a massive myocardial infarction — the death of heart muscle — the first lost round in five years of heroic battle against death. The sudden plunge flipped Hal Lear into the role of patient, and gave Martha, a free-lance writer, new full-time jobs of nurse, sounding board and historian of their ordeal. They lived between hope and despair, through nightmare trips to emergency rooms and hushed, tentative months of sadness that were only pauses in the downward spiral of Hal's life.

There were at least four heart attacks, one while he was under the knife for a double coronary bypass operation. Somewhere in the course of "treatments" there was brain damage. That was the most unbearable degradation of all for Hal, the brilliant organizer. He couldn't memorize the address of his doctor, couldn't reckon small change, couldn't even follow the instructions that came with a pocket calculator.

Treated in the same hospital where he had been on staff, Hal became a reproach to the professionals' efforts to mend him. His first physician was insensitive. His next cardiologist listened for a while, but when Hal became a chronic failure, the senior man passed him off on a younger colleague. They all knew Hal was keeping track of their scores.

In each crisis, some doctor failed him. Once, a resident ignored a nurse's repeated calls to reset an intravenous needle and from that botch Hal developed a pre-gangrenous patch on his forearm. On one of the last most grisly of his hospital admissions, residents dallied through a night when Hal was drowning in his own fluid-filled lungs, rasping, "Martha, TELL them I am dying. HURRY, HELP ME." At 8:00 the next morning, his regular doctors, on their regular rounds, conceded that Hal had been right: "Suddenly they exploded into action... this desperate urgency upon them... A team converged upon him to perform what are called heroic measures."

Throughout, Martha scours herself, trying to reconcile what she thinks is her irrational passivity as a medical consumer. "I simply submitted, entered upon their institutional madness, sat and waited while life flowed down the drain, assuming, because it is a symptom of mass madness to make such assumptions, that there was a guiding intelligence, accepting that help would come when it was scheduled to come, and that I could make it come no sooner, and that this was a rational course of events, moving deeper and deeper into his catastrophe with no clear understanding

"Heartsounds" is an homage to Hal Lear, a book about wanting to live, a story of two people whose bravery came as a surprise to them.

Other good first-person accounts of high trauma illnesses include Norman Cousins' "Anatomy of an Illness as Perceived by the Patient" (Norton), Michael Halberstam's and Stephan Leisher's "A Coronary Event" (Lippincott) and Charles Clay Dahlberg's and Joseph Jaffe's "Stroke: A Doctor's Personal Story of His Recovery" (Norton).

Ruling Could Prevent Sanford Tax Hike

By DONNA ESTES
 Herald Staff Writer

Can Sanford avoid raising property taxes next fiscal year in the face of inflation and the possible loss of federal revenue sharing funds?

A bond attorney's opinion expected within the next 30 to 60 days, will give the answer.

The story behind the answer is one of good fiscal management through investment of city funds. And the result may be the inclusion of $339,000 in additional funds in the city's operating budget next year with no increase in taxes.

The story began several years ago when the city floated a public improvement bond issue for the marina and public works complex.

All franchise-fee receipts from Florida Power and Light Co. were pledged to pay the bond issue. The annual franchise was set aside each year and invested in interest-bearing bonds. Today that fund totals more than $1.1 million and the interest it is generating will be sufficient to pay off those bonds on schedule without further investment of cash.

The question the bond counsel is being asked is: now that the account is sufficiently financed for future payments of these bonds, can the franchise fees be pledged, but no longer needed to build up that fund, be used for another purpose? The purpose the city is suggesting is the general operation of the city government.

City Manager Warren Knowles said the city is faced with several unusual situations in the 1981 fiscal year. Among them are:

—Inflation at all time high.

—City employee pay scales that have not kept up with rise in the cost of living.

—Possible loss of federal revenue sharing funds because of President Carter's economy moves and the probable loss of state revenue sharing money as well.

"The city commission does not want to do not plan to and does not look toward increasing taxes," Knowles said. "The people are having a hard enough time in these days of inflation without having a property tax increase to contend with as well. So we are scratching to find any other source of funds that we can," he said.

Meanwhile preparation time for the 1981 fiscal-year budget is fast approaching. As a preliminary to preparation of that budget, the city commission instructed Knowles to prepare a priority list of essential services along with a list of items which can be cut from the new budget.

The city manager said priority lists he received from city department heads during the past week were not satisfactory and he will be going over each one individually with the specific department head involved.

New lists in priority order are to be prepared, he said.

Budget requests for the new fiscal year to begin Oct. 1 are due in Knowles' office Monday. He will take them to Tallahassee with him. "They will make interesting reading at night," Knowles said. Knowles is to be in Tallahassee to lobby for funds of interest to the city and to give expert testimony before various legislative committees on other bills.

Department heads were instructed to itemize all materials and projects in their budgets. Each department request is not to exceed the amount approved last year.

Salary increases will be decided by the city commission. "Certain functions such as electricity, gasoline and wages will be given priority for any available funds," Knowles said.

Currently a study is being conducted by the state Department of Community Services to determine the range of salaries.

"A comparison of wages paid today with those paid in 1970 shows the dollars we are paying city employees today are not keeping up with what the city was paying five to 10 years ago," Knowles said. The consumer price index (CPI), upon which the inflation rate is based, has gone up 13 percent more than salary adjustments over the past six years, the city manager said. The salaries may be off by as much as 13 percent or more, added.

CHARACTERS COME TO LIFE

Pirates and princesses, clowns and cowboys showed up at Bear Lake Elementary School Friday as several hundred students and many hundreds of teachers celebrated the school's fourth annual Character Day. The students were encouraged to come dressed as characters from works of fiction in books from the school's library. Joining in the fun were teachers Jean Tucker (far left) and Phyllis White, who came as Rungdy Ann and Andy and Hank Kuttwek, who came dressed as Doc, one of the seven dwarfs from Snow White, though he thought he was Santa Claus.

Group Home For Dependent Children Becomes Reality

By JANE CASSELL BERRY
 Herald Staff Writer

The critical need for a group home for dependent children in Seminole County has long been a concern of social workers and others involved with the welfare of youth. Now that home has become a reality.

The Seminole County Adolescent Group Home for youths 12 to 18 years old is being operated by Youth Programs, Inc. under contract to Health and Rehabilitative Services on 20 acres in Orange County.

Youth Programs, Inc. is a non-profit organization which has operated programs for delinquent and dependent children in Florida since 1970.

Group Home Director is Gretchen Molotch, formerly director of YPI's Stanley Scott Home in Orange County. The new facility offers 24-hour, seven-day-a-week supervision by the staff, similar to Stanley Scott and YPI's Duker-House Runaway Shelter, also in Orange County.

YPI is operating the emergency shelter home under a one-year $113,911 contract with HHS. John Masters, communications specialist with YPI, emphasized this is the bare minimum needed and another $10,034 will be needed from the community. The staff includes two counselors, a cook, secretary and four child-care workers, including some CETA (Comprehensive Employment Training Act) workers.

Until YPI took over on the first of April the ranch had been leased by the Seminole County Mental Health Center (SCMH) and operated for the past 18 months as a residential treatment center for emotionally disturbed youngsters to 14 years of age.

The center's staff was hired by Youth Programs, including the former director, Alan Wright, who now serves as counselor along with Sheila Frazier, and secretary Ruth Cotto. They were successful in getting CETA (Comprehensive Employment Training Act) funding transferred from the mental health program to YPI, headed by Col. Eugene Minietta.

According to John Rape, SCMH's project director for children's services, the residential treatment program was not terminated for lack of need — there was always more demand than they could take care of — or lack of success, but because of the increasing costs of that type of facility due to inflation.

"There was a definite need and we would have been very reluctant to terminate the program even with the budgetary restraint we were operating under," said Rape.

Funding was to run through June for the program, which worked with children with behavioral disorders that kept them from functioning normally in the home or school and their families. The goal was to get them back into their home and school if possible within a 90-day period. There was a 70 percent success rate, Rape said.

"After we were approached by YPI in January about leasing the property, we determined it would be in the best interest of the kids in Seminole County to turn it over to them, since they were funded through new funding from HHS," Rape explained. "YPI agreed to negotiate a new contract with the Seminole Youth Ranch Board and to consider our employees when hiring their staff."

Another part of the agreement was that the children remaining at the residential center would be cared for by YPI until they were able to be returned to their parents or be placed elsewhere.

Only HHS can place a child at the adolescent group home, said Mrs. Cotto. "We have a fast turnover," she added. "Sometimes they are only here on an emergency basis for a day or weekend, while others may be here for a month or a year."

As soon as possible, youngsters are placed with foster parents, a relative or reconciled with their own parents. Placement is more difficult for teenagers than younger children.

A dependent child is defined as one under the age of 18 who is found by the court to have been abandoned, abused or neglected by parents or guardian, to have been surrendered to HHS or a child placing agency for adoption; to have persistently run away; to be habitually truant from school; to persistently disobey the reasonable and lawful demands of his parents or other legal custodians and to be beyond their control.

Many of the children are runaways, according to Mrs. Cotto, and have emotional problems related to their unstable environment and broken homes. All are required to attend public school while at the ranch.

"They all seem to like it here," she said, "because of the country-like atmosphere. They have plenty of room to walk around, play basketball or ride the two ponies. They all love the animals." "We have all the boys we have room to take right now and there is room for two more girls," said Mrs. Cotto. The home is licensed to accommodate 15 children, but YPI eventually hopes to be able to care for 20 as space is added and a mobile home on the property is fixed up. Right now another mobile home is used as the office and the youngsters are housed and fed only in the cottage. All of them are assigned chores.

Youth Programs, famous for its use of volunteers, will also be recruiting volunteers who will be screened and trained to assist staff and provide specific services in skills and art training, recreation, trips, visits and tutoring.

Former Seminole County Health and Rehabilitative Services Single Intake Supervisor Tom Weinberg was chairman of the task force formed last year with a goal of actively recruiting temporary and foster placements for dependent children and establishing a group home. He has been given much of the credit for obtaining the funding for the new group home. He has since been promoted to supervisor of HHS office in Apopka.

Weinberg told the task force last year. "Dependency cases have almost doubled in Seminole County, while at the same time temporary and foster care placements have decreased. In 1977, there were 500 cases and in 1978, there were 927."

According to the report presented to the task force, the lack of adequate placement homes for short-term residential care for Seminole County results in increased incidents of child abuse and neglect. Lack of a program to allow a "cooling off period" between parent and child contributes to further deterioration in the relationship. Because of incidents of running away and acting out behavior, more of these children find their way into the juvenile justice system.

Although inactive in the operation of the ranch at the time being, Guy said the board desired to maintain ownership of the property to ensure that it continue to be operated as a facility for children.

The youth ranch has undergone several name changes since it was chartered in 1969 as a non-profit, interdenominational institution dedicated to rehabilitation of delinquent or troubled juveniles. It originally was organized as Seminole All Youth Shelter by a group of county residents concerned over the lack of juvenile home in the county and the fact that children were held in the jail.

After five years of efforts to raise funds, purchase land and build facilities, the shelter was dedicated and opened in September 1974, and operated without any government funds. It has been known as the Seminole Youth Ranch since 1975.

Comedy About Feud

"Fisherman's Wharf," a half-hour sitcom pilot for NBC about a pair of feuding Italian-American families in San Francisco, has been taped by Columbia Pictures Television before an audience. The story concerns two families, the Barbaras and the Fanuccis, whose feud dates back 70 years to an incident in Sicily. When the Barbara daughter, Nina — the divorced mother of a 10-year-old son — decides to remarry and has the temerity to pick Tom Fanucci, the feud is reheated to the boiling point.
