Bring your own to citizens' pitch-in celebration

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A local resident who is angry there will be no Fourth of July fireworks display on Lake Monroe this year is proposing a pitch-in celebration. BYOF (bring your own fireworks).

"We're really sort of impromptu. It's really just by word of mouth," Sharon Gonyeau explained. "We want people to gather down by the lakefront in front of the Holiday Inn (renamed the Marina Hotel Monday) off their property, on city property about sunset and do fireworks. Just bring your own fireworks, maybe bring some chairs. We're going to do it without the city."

This is the first year in recent memory no professional fireworks display is planned. For the past three years, Jaycees President Steve Alford worked to present "the Peoples' Fireworks" after the City of Sanford and Chamber of Commerce dropped sponsorship of the local event. Alford gave up trying to coordinate another display this year when he couldn't get anyone to help him.

Years ago, the city marked the Fourth with a day-long celebration including baseball and softball games, crafts fair and carnival rides culminating in an after-dark fireworks display.

Even though participation in the daylight activities dwindled, the night-time fireworks display drew thousands of people to the waterfront.

SANFORD — Helen Stairs, a leader in the redevelopment of historic downtown, was named recipient of the 10th annual Warren E. 'Pete' Knowles award during last night's Sanford City Commission meeting.

The announcement came as a surprise to Stairs, who had appeared before the commission work session earlier in the day discussing several different matters.

In accepting the award she commented, "Things are happening in Sanford and it's so exciting. I hope everyone on the commission has the same feeling about it."

During the presentation, City Attorney Bill Colbert read an official proclamation and described some of Stairs' activities.

Lakefront motel gets new name

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — In the vernacular of the business, they have dropped their flag; the motel on the Sanford marina no longer has the Holiday Inn sign.

A sign company truck arrived at the marina yesterday morning. By the time it left at noon, a new blue sign was in place saying, "Marina Hotel."

The facility has been undergoing difficulties over the past few years, including a bankruptcy by a former operator, a mortgage foreclosure against a former lender, a takeover by Resolution Trust Corporation, and a continuing disagreement about lease payments to the city, which owns the land on which the facility is located.

A court hearing was held early this month on a motion filed by RTC for a summary judgment. While no decision was expected for possibly 30 days, a decision was made within a few weeks.

At issue is the actual lease and ownership of the land on which the facility is located.

According to City Attorney Bill Colbert, the judge denied the

SCC pipes up for new plumbing

By VICKI DeBORMIER

SANFORD — If you've been to Seminole Community College lately, you've seen a campus that looks as if it has been devastated by battles.

No, it hasn't. As a matter of fact, the students say they are quite happy with the school and enrollment is up at the college.

The campus has been ripped up by the construction of a new administration and students services complex for some time now, but recent activity has been taking up and replacing sections all across the Sanford campus.

"They're just out there ripping up old sewer and putting in a new system," said Robert Lyles, a spokesman for the college.

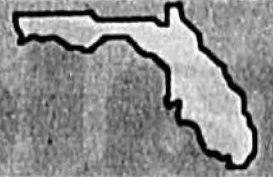

Seminole Community College was built nearly 30 years in what was once an orange grove.

The college began small with little expectation that it would grow to be one of the largest two year colleges in the state.

Buildings have been added here and there across the campus as they were needed.

"New plumbing was attached to the old stuff and it was a maze of makeshift pipes and tubes," said Lyles. "It wasn't really a plumbing system. It was good plumbing, but

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Three found dead

MIRAMAR — A restaurant owner and two women were found murdered by an officer tracking down a missing person, police and neighbors said.

A Broward County sheriff's deputy went to the canal front house around midnight Sunday looking for a missing woman. He got no answer at the door, left a note and departed, Deputy Police Chief Chuck Febro said Monday.

The deputy found the three people dead Monday and authorities believe the trio had been dead for 12 hours at the time of the bodies' discovery.

Butch Casey, 48, owner of the house and Casey's Nickelodeon, a restaurant-lounge in Hallandale, was one of the victims. Casey's legal name was Casimir Jonas Sucharski.

The women were Marie Rogers, 25, of Hollywood and Sharon Anderson, 25, of Miami. Febro said. He declined to disclose any specifics about the deaths and added that investigators had few leads.

One of the women was the subject of the deputy's search. The smoldering hulk of a Mercedes-Benz convertible believed to belong to Sucharski was found late Sunday near Belle Glade, just north of the Palm Beach County line.

Casino petition drive

TALLAHASSEE — The head of a campaign to permit 47 casinos across Florida says the petition drive is winding down because more than 700,000 signatures have been collected.

"Our success in obtaining signatures statewide has virtually assured us that we will have the required 429,428 signatures needed to be on the ballot in November," Pat Roberts, chairman of Proposition for Limited Casinos, told reporters Monday.

The measure would change the Florida Constitution to allow casinos at each of the state's 30 parimutuel facilities as well as 12 additional casinos for certain counties and five riverboat casinos.

As of Friday, the state had received notice of 85,484 verified signatures from election supervisors. The deadline for reaching the total needed to make the ballot is Aug. 9.

The other signatures are in the pipeline, Roberts said, adding that the petition drive will be wrapped up in the next couple of weeks.

The measure has yet to win approval from the state Supreme Court, which reviews proposed constitutional amendments pushed by petition drives.

School violence policy

TALLAHASSEE — Education Commissioner Doug Jamerson is calling for zero tolerance for violence in schools and says he is ready to put his agency's money where his mouth is.

Jamerson told reporters Monday he wanted to send a clear message that "the halcyon days of freewheeling violence in Florida schools" are over.

He said his first priority was to make sure that students who attack teachers, carry weapons or repeatedly victimize other students are sent to alternative schools.

Decisions about suspending or expelling students for violence are made on the local level, Jamerson said the way such cases are handled varies from case to case depending on circumstances.

Juvenile justice reforms passed by lawmakers this spring included $17 million for after-school programs for at-risk middle school students, $12 million for alternative schools and $11 million for better security measures at schools.

"That's a start but it's probably not enough to provide alternative programs for all the violent kids who forfeit their places in regular schools," Jamerson said.

He pledged to review the budget of the Department of Education to see if any of it could be better spent on making schools safer.

Auto parts chief dies

LAKELAND — Denis Fontaine, president and chief executive officer of Discount Auto Parts Inc., has died at age 54.

Fontaine died Sunday at H. Lee Moffitt Cancer Center in Tampa.

The 208-store retailer announced a year ago that Fontaine had been diagnosed with abdominal cancer, and other executives had assumed responsibility for day-to-day operations.

Peter Fontaine, vice chairman and chief operating officer, commended his brother as a visionary.

Funeral services were set for 1 p.m. Thursday at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Lakeland.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Citizens complain about petition

Deceptive practices used to get signatures

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Dorothy Thrush knew she didn't want casinos in Florida, but she was surprised by the insistence of a man outside a post office who claimed she needed to sign his petition if she opposed gambling halls.

He told her legislators in Tallahassee were going to approve casinos with or without her vote, so she should sign up to get the issue on the ballot in November. That would be her way to stop it.

"It struck me as odd," said Mrs. Thrush, 66, of St. Petersburg.

"I thought, 'I don't think that is right.'" Sure enough, it was a lie.

The Legislature is not about to approve casino gambling. And gambling already is illegal, so she doesn't have to "stop" it. If anything, her signature might help start it.

Election officials across the state are receiving hundreds of complaints from voters about petitioners misleading people or out-and-out lying to get their signatures.

The complaints come as some casino ballot initiatives have hired signature-gathering firms. The going rate per signature: $2.

Each of the five casino propositions needs 429,000 signatures by Aug. 9 to put the questions on the ballot in November.

While election officials continue to log such complaints, they say there is virtually nothing they can do about it. There is no law in Florida to keep petition gatherers honest.

The days of local grassroots efforts are gone when it comes to the high-stakes, high-dollar issue of casinos.

Campaign financial records of one of the initiatives, Proposition for Limited Casinos, show that by mid-May it had spent $600,000 on signature gathering.

"There's a price war on the streets," said Kelly Kimball, president of Kimball Petition Management, a Los Angeles-area petition gathering company imported to handle the Limited Casinos effort.

Kimball said he had no choice but to match or beat what other casino efforts were paying for their signatures. His client, Limited Casinos, originally budgeted $1 million for the petition drive. But that was at 60 cents a signature. The price has gone up as the August deadline looms.

"I think the price is outrageous," said Rick Arnold, of the National Voter Outreach in Carson City, Nev., another company that is handling the petition drive for the effort known as Safe Bet, which proposes riverboat gambling.

Arnold said he was trying to keep his price at $1.50 a signature but may have to raise it. He said his company has run petition-gathering operations in 26 states and the per-signature price is always, at most, 50 cents.

And, in fact, other Florida initiatives, such as the taxation limits, are coating about a quarter a signature.

The frenzy already has claimed one casualty. One of the other casino groups, Proposition for County Choice Gaming, has had to drop its paid petition gatherers and rely on volunteers. Michael Levine, a spokesman for the group, has said he is no longer able to compete.

Bird breeding big business in Florida

By MARY ANNE LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Despite its distinctive position on the Florida Lottery logo, the pink flamingo is simply past history for Floridians who want to rake in really big bucks in birds.

They're investing instead in exotic species, especially parrots.

And because of the increasing popularity of birds as pets coupled with new federal rules that now ban importation of many species, the business is really taking wing.

Multicolored macaws, African gray parrots, and moluccan cockatoos are large and sometimes noisy, but they make wonderful pets, according to John Francek, the owner of Bird Lover's Paradise in Palm Beach Gardens.

"They have great personalities... you don't have to walk them... there's no leashing or vet, and a lot of places will let you have a bird because there's no fleas," he said. "It's something you can carry around on your shoulder. And if a bird poops on your rug it's a lot different than if (it's) your dog."

But passage of the Wild Bird Conservation Act in Congress last year, which requires special federal permits for any endangered bird brought into the United States, probably has more to do with the increasing profits.

"The importation of birds has basically been halted," said Lt. Pat Reynolds with Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission. "So now, people are concentrating on captive breeding birds, the only birds that can be sold, because the price is going to double or triple."

The moluccan cockatoo, for example, now sells for as much as $3,500 in Florida and more than $4,000 in northern states, Francek said. "The price almost doubled because there would be no more brought in."

State agency set to tackle welfare fraud

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's top social services official promises to do a better job of preventing welfare fraud, the "broad daylight thievery" that last year cost the state an estimated $86 million.

Jim Towey, secretary of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, told a news conference Monday that the current system to catch welfare criminals lacks teeth.

"Our system hasn't kept up with the times," Towey said. "We've relied a lot on an honor system, a person's conscience. That's just not kicking in anymore."

About 1.2 million Floridians receive cash payments through the Aid to Families with Dependent Children. About 1.5 million people get food stamps. Last year, $2.2 billion worth of benefits were issued in the two programs.

The HRS districts that include Miami, Fort Lauderdale, West Palm Beach, Tampa, Orlando and Jacksonville account for nearly seven of every 10 AFDC mistakes and two-thirds of the food stamp errors.

An estimated 5 percent of all AFDC cases and between 4 and 11 percent of all food stamp cases have serious indications of fraud, according to the HRS. But only four of every 100 people who intentionally cheat the system get caught.

HRS will try harder to prevent fraud and mistakes from occurring in the first place and will come down hard once fraud is discovered, Towey promised.

While the number of people on welfare has skyrocketed over the last 20 years, the number of welfare fraud investigators at the state auditor general's office has not increased by even one.

Dade County will be given special attention, Towey said. The county last year accounted for about a quarter of all the mistakes in the state.

"We have focused a lot of the water where the fire is and the fire is in Miami," Towey said.

Beginning in August, the agency will spend about $2.1 million to send HRS workers from other parts of the state to Miami to help in training programs and the search for errors.

The biggest problem is that welfare fraud has been going on behind the scenes, Towey said, adding that he wanted to stir public interest in the issue.

"I saw what can happen when a mobilized public demands change," Towey said. "It happened in juvenile justice. It has got to happen with this crime wave in our public assistance centers, this broad daylight thievery."

Between July 1992 through June 1993, just 35 people went to jail because of welfare fraud out of more than 26,000 suspected cases. Sixteen of those sentenced to do time were out in less than a month.

Last year, nearly six of every 10 food stamp mistakes and eight of every 10 AFDC mistakes involved "unreported, unprocessed or unknown changes in a client's income," according to the HRS.

POLICE BRIEFS

Stolen vehicle reports

Sanford police say a white 1985 Buick was reported stolen Friday from a parking lot in the 3600 block of Orlando Drive. The license number is listed as KFY-461.

A blue 1988 Chevrolet, license number LTF-715 was reported stolen Saturday from the 100 block of Laurel Drive.

A white and blue 1981 Ford pickup truck was reported stolen Saturday from Groveview Apartments. The truck reportedly contained a bed full of roofing materials and tools. Sanford police reportedly found the vehicle Saturday on Hazel Glen Boulevard, with a stereo system valued at $1,000 missing.

A 1984 Chevrolet van, reportedly stolen from Marshall Avenue Saturday, was located in a ditch on Mullett Lake Park Drive.

A Pontiac, reportedly stolen in Seminole County, was located by Sanford police on Jewett Lane near Airport Boulevard Sunday, partially off the roadway.

A blue 1991 Pontiac was reported stolen Saturday in the 1000 block of Sarita Street.

Armed robbery

A convenience store on C.R. 427 was reportedly robbed late Saturday night at gunpoint. According to the incident report, the clerk told Sanford police that a black man, with a small black handgun, came into the store, and demanded the store's money. The clerk reported being struck in the back of the head by the burglar as she was getting the money. Police said the man reportedly got away with three bank bags of money, but the amount was not disclosed. The man was reportedly six feet three inches tall, wearing a Navy blue shirt, black pants, and braided hair.

Nude in public

Sanford police arrested Anthony Donald Little, of Higgins Terrace on Sunday. Police said they were called regarding a disturbance at Lake Monroe Terrace, and found Little, standing near approximately 40 to 50 people, at which time he removed his pants and exposed himself. He was arrested on charges of exposure of sexual organs, disorderly conduct, and resisting arrest without violence.

Wanted as alias

Lake Mary police arrested Steven Todd Emerson, 31, of Winter Park, following a traffic stop on Interstate-4 east of the S.R. 46-A overpass Saturday. Police found Emerson was also known as Steven Atkins, and had two outstanding warrants against him under that name, issued in Hillsborough and Suwannee Counties. Lake Mary police charged him with obstruction by disguise, and driving with a suspended driver's license.

Double arrest

Sheriff's deputies arrested two persons following a traffic stop Saturday on Country Club Drive at Hardy Drive. The arrest report said deputies noticed the male passenger in the vehicle throwing an object out of the window just before the vehicle was stopped. Upon locating the object, deputies said they found it was marijuana. Jackie Kyle Steward, 21, 102 Wilkens Circle, Sanford, was arrested on a charge of possession of controlled substance, marijuana, under 20 grams. The driver of the vehicle, Jamie Lynn Boatman, 20, of Rockledge, was also arrested on a charge of possession of a fictitious ID card.

Found in jail

Johnnie Murphy Rowe, 32, of 174 Lakeside Drive, Sanford, had been sought by law enforcement officers in connection with a burglary case. Officers said on June 21, he is suspected of having taken a Florida Power & Light electric meter from a home in the 100 block of Lakeside Drive. Rowe was located at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility, where he is being held on petit theft charges. He has now been charged with burglary to an occupied structure.

Man down

Longwood police were called to a restaurant on U.S. Highway 17-92 Saturday. They said when they arrived, they found a man identified as Jeffery S. Hefley, 34, of Winter Springs, laying on the ground, apparently passed out. After awakening him, police arrested him on charges of disorderly intoxication, and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Traffic stops

Katrena Denise Wright, 19, of 47 Castle Brewer Court, was arrested by Sanford police following a traffic stop on Georgia Avenue Saturday. Police said the vehicle she was driving was registered as having been stolen from a parking lot in the 3600 block of S. Orlando Drive. She was charged with grand theft (possession), and driving without a license.

Carl Riley Cahoon, 84, of Orlando, was stopped by Lake Mary police on Interstate-4 west of Lake Mary Boulevard Sunday. He was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol.

Curtis George Miller, 23, 1180 Brampton Cove, Lake Mary, was arrested on Sweetwater Club Boulevard by the Florida Highway Patrol Saturday following a vehicular accident. He was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol.

Donna Darlene Key, 31, was arrested by deputies on U.S. Highway 17-92 near Dogtrack Road Sunday. She was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol.

Luis Carlos Giraldo, 35, of 90 Hidden Lake Drive, Sanford, was arrested by deputies on S.R. 436 near Altamonte Springs Sunday. Deputies said they saw four men standing near a parked vehicle, but when they went to investigate, several of the men ran, and the driver drove off. Giraldo was stopped a short distance away and arrested on charges of crack cocaine.

Domestic cases

Andrew Steward Faulkner, 29, 4384 Francis Street, Sanford, was arrested by deputies at his residence Sunday following a reported altercation with his wife. He was charged with battery, domestic violence.

Gregory Woods, 38, 1505 W. 14th Street, was arrested by Sanford police in Castle Brewer Court Saturday. Police said he had reportedly attacked a female with a hatchet. He was charged with aggravated assault, and domestic violence battery.

Deadbeat dads' licenses yanked

By GLENN ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

AUGUSTA, Maine — Not one can say he wasn't warned. Maine made good Monday on repeated threats to yank the driver's licenses of parents who refuse to pay overdue child support, revoking driving privileges for eight fathers who together owe their kids more than $140,000.

A ninth man who was to lose his license quickly made arrangements to pay the $11,410 he owed, said Human Services Commissioner Jane Sheehan.

More licenses will be lifted, some as early as the end of this week.

Since the Legislature authorized the Family Financial Responsibility Act a year ago, the department has sent notices to roughly 20,000 parents who are at least 90 days behind in child support.

The threat has yielded the state $11.5 million in back payments, said Sheehan.

"We have had people come in and give us as much as $19,000" since the warnings first went out, said Sheehan.

Gov. John R. McKernan proposed the pinch on delinquent parents when he realized Maine was paying millions in state aid to families made destitute by the parents' failure to pay support. These so-called "deadbeat dads" — fathers in 97 percent of the cases, mothers in 3 percent — were walking out on $180 million in support payments every year.

Besides driver's licenses, the state can also lift the licenses of doctors, lawyers, architects, plumbers, electricians, commercial fishermen and other professionals who fail to pay child support.

There's no priority for lifting either kind of license, said Peter Gore, a spokesman for Human Services.

"If someone has a driver's and professional license," he said, "we'll go after both of them."

The licenses were targeted because the state had no other way of penalizing many of the delinquent parents, who are not enrolled in public assistance programs and frequently have no jobs on which they report income to the state, Gore said.

Maine's stringent steps to collect the money attracted the attention of President Clinton. The $9.3 billion welfare reform proposal he sent to Congress last week includes a requirement that all states take similar action against parents with mounting child support debts.

In Maine, however, one licensing territory is sacrosanct: The state cannot strip its out-of-state residents of their hunting or fishing licenses.

Sheehan stressed that the program is designed not to punish parents but to get delinquent fathers and mothers to contact the state, acknowledge their debts and make arrangements to start paying them off.

But some of those affected say it's misguided.

"For educated, intellectual folks, they're going about this all wrong," said Alice Kennard, Her husband, Reynold, a truck driver, is one of the eight men whose licenses were revoked. "When they pull his license, his job goes with it," she said.

Reynold Kennard, according to the state, owes $4,843 in support payments for children from a previous marriage. He and five of the seven others lose driving privileges July 7; two lost their licenses Monday.

The Kennards live in Fort Fairfield, a town in northern Maine; Kennard was out on a job Monday and could not be reached immediately for comment.

But Sheehan said the action should not surprise anyone.

"We've been warning people since last August this day would come, and now it's here," she said.

Sheehan said each of the eight men had received two earlier letters telling them their licenses were in jeopardy because of child-support debts that ranged from $4,843 to $38,065.

If they had contacted the state to work out a payment schedule, Human Services would have ordered their licenses reinstated, she said.

An initial mailing went out last August to 17,400 parents who were behind in child support payments. In November, second notices went out to the same group, thanking those who had paid and reminding the rest that time was running out to start paying or stop driving.

Researchers: Antibody may lead to early detection of Lyme Disease

By LINDA A. JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

TRENTON, N.J. — A new test targeting an antibody in people with Lyme disease could lead to earlier diagnosis and treatment of the hard-to-detect infection, researchers say.

In an article in the July issue of the San Diego-based Journal of Clinical Investigation, a New Jersey immunologist reports the test can detect Lyme disease as soon as a few days after infection.

Current tests are sometimes inconclusive and can fail to detect the disease for as long as a couple years after infection.

The test detects an antibody that the body produces in response to a protein unique to the bacteria that causes Lyme disease, Dr. Steven E. Schutzer said Monday.

Schutzer, who headed the study, is an associate professor in the Division of Allergy and Immunology at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey-New Jersey Medical School in Newark.

Lyme disease, transmitted by bites from ticks that have acquired the bacteria from mice, affects humans and dogs in at least 44 states, but is prevalent in the Northeast. About 10,000 new cases are reported each year.

Schutzer's two-year study tested blood samples from 81 patients in New Jersey, New York and Connecticut.

Two Lyme disease experts called Schutzer's study promising but said blood samples from several hundred more patients need to be put to the new test, and by more than one group of researchers.

"If it clicks, if it's confirmed by others, it's very important," said Dr. Michael E. Lockshin, who directs research grants for the National Institute for Arthritis and Musculoskeletal and Skin Diseases in Bethesda, Md. "That would be a very big step forward in making an early diagnosis."

That institute funded Schutzer's study, along with the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"We'd have to consider it in the experimental stage of development but a method that shows some promise," said David T. Dennis, coordinator of the CDC's Lyme disease program.

In its early stages, the disease causes flu-like symptoms, a bull's eyelike rash and, sometimes, severe headaches and drooping of the face. In later stages it can cause arthritis, migraines, vision loss and neurological symptoms such as memory and concentration problems.

More evidence sought in Simpson case

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — Defense attorneys and prosecutors are asking a judge for access to evidence that could either link O.J. Simpson to a bloody crime scene or help exonerate him.

Simpson, 46, has pleaded innocent to murdering his ex-wife and her friend, Ronald Goldman. Their stabbed and slashed bodies were found outside Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium on June 12. Simpson has been jailed without bail since June 17.

On Monday, Ms. Simpson's father disputed a coroner's report that said she was on the phone at 11 p.m. the night she was killed. A defense lawyer had said the timing of the call bolstered Simpson's alibi.

A judge scheduled a hearing today to decide whether to give defense lawyers access to blood samples and other evidence, and whether prosecutors can take a sample of Simpson's hair. Simpson was to attend the hearing.

Prosecutors say they found a knit cap at the crime scene that contained black, curly hairs of "African-American origin."

Simpson's lead attorney, Robert L. Shapiro, wants access to blood samples, Simpson's white Ford Bronco, a ski cap or mask found near the victims, and gloves found at the crime scene and at Simpson's Brentwood estate. Prosecutors said last week that there was no ski mask.

The bloody clothing on the official list of evidence came from the crime scene, not Simpson's house, a source told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity. There have been unconfirmed reports of bloody clothing found in Simpson's home.

Shapiro's motion indicated that the defense could turn the preliminary hearing, which is scheduled to start Thursday, into a mini-trial. Shapiro said nearly every witness likely to testify at the trial might be called at the preliminary hearing.

The preliminary hearing normally is a brief proceeding in which the prosecution presents a bare-bones version of its case to justify a trial.

Simpson's defense has sought to bolster his image in the media and cast doubt on the police investigation, citing a coroner's report that said Ms. Simpson talked to her mother on the telephone at about 11 p.m. on June 12.

Shapiro has said Simpson was home waiting for a limousine ride to the airport at 11 p.m.

Simpson lawyer F. Lee Bailey noted Monday that Simpson lives about 10 minutes from his ex-wife.

"So, now you begin to have a problem saying that he was at the scene or could have been," Bailey said. "That is the defense: He was elsewhere."

But Ms. Simpson's father, Louisa Brown, told The Associated Press later Monday that his wife mispoke about the time of the call when she talked with investigators.

"We're reasonably sure it was about 10 o'clock, not 11," Brown said. He and his wife were waiting for their phone bill to confirm the time.

Bailey did not return messages left after business hours seeking comment about Brown's statements.

An unidentified limousine driver who says he took Simpson to the airport told the TV show "Hard Copy" that Simpson wasn't at his estate at 10:45 p.m., but showed up 15 minutes later, looking sweaty and agitated.

Authorities have not given an exact time on when they believe

Ms. Simpson and Goldman were killed. Their bodies were found at 12:10 a.m. on June 13.

No fireworks; How sad

We wave our flags and shout patriotic messages at the top of our lungs when it suits our purposes.

But when we are asked to dish out a few dollars or do a little work to express our love for our country and all she stands for, we thrust our hands deep in our pockets and walk away.

After several years of doing all the required legwork to put together a Fourth of July celebration for Sanford, complete with fireworks, food and festivities, Steve Alford has finally given up.

We can't blame him. Coming to the realization that it was not a one-man job, he looked to others to help him put Seminole County's only fireworks celebration together.

Hardly anyone lifted a finger to offer assistance. While some individuals appeared willing to write a check, no one offered to help Alford in approaching others for donations, or helping set up any of the activities.

If we want to celebrate the Fourth with traditional fireworks this year, we will have to go outside the county to do it.

Sanford, and much of the county, was built by those who served in the U.S. Navy and who served at the Naval Air Station in Sanford.

One would think that those who served their country so proudly would be anxious to help the community celebrate the founding of the nation they fought so valiantly to defend.

Apparently they are not. Certainly, a pyrotechnic exhibition is not what the Fourth of July is all about. However, those glimmering explosions in the night sky represent a community that has come together to celebrate their love for this country in a special way.

This Fourth of July, with a day off from work, we will go our separate ways. In the privacy of our back yards, we will eat, drink and light a sparkler or two.

But, in the Sanford area at least, we will not come together as a community to celebrate our freedom and the exciting diversity that makes this country great.

Shame on city

Recently I read in the Herald that Sanford would have no July 4th celebration this year. As a resident of this city, I am appalled and ashamed. To think that a city with the history of Sanford would not want to give all it could to celebrate what is probably the most important day in our country's history is unfathomable.

Our city is named for a general who served in the Indian Wars. Our city once served as home for both the Sanford Naval Air Base and the Sanford Naval Academy. In our town we have the VFW, the American Legion and the Fleet Reserve. Living among us are WWII, Korea, Vietnam and Gulf War veterans.

The 4th of July is not just a few firecrackers and hot dogs on the grill. It is a cry of joy and freedom. I believe that a city such as ours should yell as loud as it can and let the rest of the surrounding areas know how proud we are of our city and its people. Without our celebration, we're just another sleepy little town that people bypass to get to Disney or Daytona.

How can we be called the Friendly City when we don't seem to care at all about our 218th birthday?

I believe that our city leaders have forgotten the people in our city. I for one will remember them come election time.

I'm truly sorry to realize that our city residents aren't worth the $7,000 tab for the already ordered fireworks. Although I'm glad to see that we can still continue to beautify a town that no one will want to visit.

Welfare moms need husbands, not jobs

After a year-and-a-half delay, President Clinton has finally gotten around to introducing his much-anticipated welfare reform plan. Not by a long shot will it make good on the New Democrat's pledge to end welfare as we know it.

An indication of just how unserious the president is about welfare reform was his choice of venue for introducing his proposals — a bank lobby in Kansas City, Mo., in front of 250 people.

By contrast, when Clinton unveiled his proposed health care reforms, he chose the backdrop of a joint session of Congress, with millions of national television viewers.

The president's decision to trot out welfare reform now is strictly political. Although the White House will go through the motions of presenting a bill to Congress, there is less than zero chance that lawmakers actually will take up the issue this year. That means that welfare reform is a dead letter until the next Congress is elected.

And that's what all this welfare posturing is about — November's mid-term elections. Many Democrats fret that President Clinton will be a liability on the campaign trail this fall because of his low approval rating among the American people.

So the president and his handlers have dusted off the most popular, most moderate issue from his campaign in a calculated effort to improve his public standing.

The problem is, with all the buildup the president's welfare reform has had, there really is much less there than meets the eye. Even Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, a liberal Democrat, found the president's plan too liberal for his taste. A lot of nice words, he said, but there's no action.

The first objectionable feature of the president's welfare reform is its price tag — $9.3 billion over five years. Clinton somehow thinks that spending more money on welfare will get more people off the public rolls. He just doesn't get it.

If throwing money at the welfare system were all that were necessary to reduce caseloads around the country, there wouldn't be 5 million or so families on welfare. The Census Bureau calculates that it would take roughly $5,500 to lift the average poor family in America above the poverty line. If we multiply that figure times the welfare population, we come up with $27.5 billion.

In 1994, government at all levels will spend more than $225 billion on various means-tested anti-poverty programs. That means that the welfare system is squandering nearly $200 billion every year.

The Clinton program will prove no more efficacious than other welfare reform initiatives that have been tried — and have failed — over the years. The president says he will break the cycle of dependency by imposing a two-year limit on cash benefits for younger recipients, after which point they will be expected to find a job in the private sector or accept a government gig.

Indeed, according to the American Public Welfare Association, the majority of women who leave the welfare rolls do so because they have taken husbands, not because they have taken jobs. It makes sense. A two-parent family has a much better chance of rising above poverty than a one-parent household.

The president's decision to trot out welfare reform now is strictly political.

Some stuff goes so deep

WASHINGTON — "Race is never not an issue in America."

Those fighting words, spoken about the O.J. Simpson case by a deep-voiced woman in a neighborhood beauty shop, weren't used in a column I wrote on varying opinions about the ex-athlete. I didn't hear it in time to include it.

But also unmentioned was a comment I had heard at least five times. I ignored it because it's unpleasant. Unfair. Nothing to celebrate.

Real feelings are often like that. The comment:

"That's what O.J. gets for being with a white woman. ... See what happens?"

Four out of the five times I heard it, a black woman was talking.

Frankly, it isn't my view. Guys of every color — most with similarly hued mates — abuse women and sometimes kill them (though O.J.'s innocence must be assumed). But it's interesting that some black women, and presumably some black men feel this — even if they only admit it to other black folks.

The women's comments remind me of the instant "he can't be guilty" status that some people confer on every brother, deserving or not, from Mike Tyson to Michael Jackson to Clarence Thomas, and now to O.J. No matter what the accusation, the seeming evidence or even if the accused has actively distanced himself from other blacks, he must be the innocent victim of racism. The reflexiveness of it drives me nuts and can be a self-destructive force in the African American community, but I understand it.

Many people, I suspect, do not.

They don't have what a friend describes as "an ingrained, cultural memory of their men being dragged away into the night, never to be seen again." They haven't grappled with racism — never felt it limiting and taunting them, affecting them so often that they may see it even when it isn't there. It can obscure people's visions so completely that they can't see past it to deal with blacks' own culpability.

They haven't, like many black women, felt the hurt from generations of seeing themselves and their beauty rejected by some of their best and brightest men for women who are white, or who just look it.

The bottom line: The woman in the beauty salon speaks for many African Americans who feel that in work, play and love, skin color always matters.

Time magazine would disagree. Editors at the new weekly find it "insulting" that colleagues wonder whether their decision to electronically darken O.J.'s famous mug shot was misguided, even racist. But however unintentional, providing literal golden-boy O.J. with a computer tan could be construed as an effort to make the ex-athlete better fit the "menacing black male" image that already harms black men who are neither menacing nor criminal.

Considering the "that's what O.J. gets" comments, I decided to explore more sisters' feelings at a natural hair care shop — salons are great for frank talk. Indeed, between chitchat and teasing, women gladly explore the O.J. thing.

"In my heart, I don't think he did it," said one stylist, unfurling a customer's braids. "But he looked so bad on TV, like he'd do anything. ... Some people say that he should have stayed in his race."

"He's innocent — he wouldn't do that!" cried another stylist, so passionately that you'd swear she was at the murder scene.

"He's crazy," countered a third. "I knew he was guilty when he ran away." I was just adding my 2 cents when a voice boomed: "We have no knowledge of what happened. Everything we've heard is third-hand, so it's unreliable. Speculation goes from the authorities, to the media, to us — then we speculate. ... We know nothing."

The woman throwing water on our speculative brushfire was Barbara, a local artist. She said she has no special regard for O.J. — "descriptions of him as a hero confound me" — but is committed to "being neutral until I have real evidence to the contrary."

Yet minutes later, she said, "I think (victim) Ron Goldman was just Nicole's friend." Asked for her evidence, she sighed. "OK — my opinion is no more valid than anyone's. Neither is the media's — but it's accepted as truth."

Barbara's view seemed refreshingly balanced. She said that she's frustrated by the media's widespread use of O.J.'s prison photo ("Mug shots are never appropriate") and that people outraged by Nicole Brown's murder yawned at her abuse. Asked if she thinks the skin color dynamic in the Simpson-Brown case matters, she paused.

"I don't know," she said. "I remember how Emmett Till was killed for just whistling at a white woman."

Listening, I realized the obvious, yet again. Some stuff goes so deep, we may never get past it.

Race is never not an issue in America.

Turning the tide on teen pregnancy

The Clinton administration had barely finished outlining its strategy to halt the rise of teen-age pregnancies when the naysayers began.

Other pilot programs aiming to curb teen-age pregnancies haven't worked, they argued. Those programs that did show promising results were too small a sampling to be representative of the entire nation, they said.

Well, pardon me for a little optimism, but our national policy on teen-age pregnancy for the last 20 years has been little more than a fight between the "Just say no!" zealots and the "It's inevitable, here's a condom" crowd.

Along comes a president with a plan to team up federal funds, a plea for abstinence and the use of peer mentors who counsel teens to postpone having children until they can care for them, and it's ludicrous to call it just another failed fancy of the Clinton agenda.

Consider what this plan is trying to do: First, it would pump $400 million in grants to more than 1,000 schools and high-risk neighborhoods over five years. Suggested programs are a pragmatic blend of recreational sports and activities, an older-student mentor program and family-planning information.

Second, the plan would require minor mothers to live at home, seek education or training and to work after receiving aid for two years. Third, Clinton has committed to using the bully pulpit of the presidency, as well as Cabinet posts, to promote abstinence and waiting for marriage to bear children. He proposes establishing a nonprofit foundation to work toward discouraging teen-age pregnancy.

Fourth, the administration wants to require mothers to name the fathers of their children, and promises to beef up efforts to collect child support payments. If he'd just included a plan to increase economic opportunities for kids in areas where teen-age pregnancies are rampant, he'd have given it a better chance of success.

Will his goals work? Consider what we have been doing: Can there be a sillier game plan than deciding that teen-age sex is just inevitable so we won't even try to encourage waiting? Well, that's just what we have done for the last 20 years, being so afraid of injecting a "personal bias" into sex education that we've hamstringed sex-education teachers into being no more than biology teachers with charts and pointers.

Could there be a better idea than having popular kids who are committed to postponing childbearing themselves mentor younger students? Nothing matters to teen-agers as much as being accepted by their peers, and peer drug-abstinence programs have worked well among certain age groups in some schools and cities.

Call me naive, but I still believe that adults significant to teens, who advocate "waiting until you're more emotionally mature," can wield a powerful influence.

Believing we've lost that influence, many of us have abdicated that power completely with our children.

William Galston, one of several administration aides who studied academic literature on teen pregnancy, says he and other officials were especially impressed with Atlanta's "Postponing Sexual Involvement Program." It pairs Atlanta's human sexuality curriculum with talks by high-school students urging the younger kids to postpone sexual activity.

Well, pardon me for a little optimism.

FCC: Bolster educational programs on TV

By JEANNINE AVERSA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators are considering tougher requirements on TV stations to boost the number of educational programs for young viewers.

They also want to make sure that shows such as "The Jetsons" and "Leave It to Beaver" don't show up again as "educational" programs.

The Federal Communications Commission is collecting recommendations today from broadcast networks, program producers and watchdog groups at its first hearing in 10 years on the state of children's television.

The commission is considering whether it should adopt a definition of what constitutes an educational program and require stations to air a set amount of educational programs for children every week.

Children's television activist Peggy Charren, founder of the watchdog group Action for Children's Television, is recommending that the FCC require a minimum of seven hours of educational programs a week. The programs should be at least 30 minutes long and air between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m.

"It seems abundantly clear that almost everyone in the commercial TV business is still trying to figure out how to benefit from children instead of how to benefit children," Charren said in testimony prepared for the commission.

As a condition of license renewal, stations must demonstrate to the FCC that they have aired programs meeting the educational and informational needs of children. Two years ago, some TV stations told the FCC they had met those needs and listed, in documents to the agency, such shows as "The Jetsons" and "Leave It to Beaver" reruns.

The FCC has proposed that shows with education as a primary purpose and entertainment as a secondary one be considered educational programs for regulatory purposes. Broadcasters and program producers don't like the proposal.

"If educational programs are anything short of fully entertaining and engaging children simply will not watch," according to testimony being presented today by Kenneth Werner, senior vice president of business affairs for The Walt Disney Co.'s TV unit.

Jeanette Trias, president of children's programming for ABC, agreed: "Effective educational programming must first reach before it can teach. If a program is lacking in entertainment value, not enough children will watch to attract the advertising revenue necessary for commercial survival," she said in testimony to be presented to the commission.

The Center for Media Education, a public interest group, has recommended defining educational programs as those that further the understanding of a variety of subjects from history and science to fine arts and languages. Programs would target viewers 16 years old and younger.

While the commission hasn't had any recent incidents of cartoons being defined as educational fare, consumer groups and some lawmakers have questioned the effectiveness of the FCC's regulations.

Those regulations stem from a 1990 law designed to boost the number of educational programs broadcast to young viewers. It also restricts the number of commercials that can run with children's programs on broadcast and cable television.

Earlier this month, Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., an architect of the law, said that since its passage "there has not been a dramatic increase in children's educational programs" on broadcast television. The broadcasting industry disputed the assertion.

Feds release new data on human radiation experiments

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Pregnant women in Iowa, newborns in Tennessee, a 67-year-old leukemia patient in Boston — different people in different circumstances, they and hundreds of others became Cold War guinea pigs.

They all were used in the government's search to learn more about how radiation affects the human body, according to new information made public by the Energy Department.

The department disclosed on Monday that a review of more than 11,000 documents unearthed at least 48 new experiments in which perhaps as many as 1,200 people were subjected to radiation exposure, often with no evidence of consent.

The additional human radiation tests were among stacks of documents made public by the department on its nuclear program as evidence of what Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary called a new era of openness in the once-secretive agency.

The summaries of the radiation tests often provided only scant information and gave little detail about the studies involved, how human subjects were selected or their identities. In many cases the experiments were conducted at research hospitals. Some were done as late as the 1980s.

Throughout many of the experiments, a lack of adequate consent "continues to be the theme," said Mrs. O'Leary at a news conference. Later, Energy Department staffers said that in only a few of the documented experiments was there clear evidence of consent, though consent may have been given.

In none of the experiments was there any "potential therapeutic benefit to the subjects" involved, although the projects might have had broader therapeutic goals, said Eilyn Weiss of the department's Office of Human Radiation Experiments.

Other revelations from the newly released Energy Department data:

- Confirmation that between 1963 and 1992 there were 95 previously hidden underground nuclear bomb detonations at the Nevada Test Site. The blasts went unnoticed because they were conducted simultaneously with other bomb tests to avoid detection.
- The government produced about a third more highly enriched uranium — 994 metric tons — over the years than previously thought at facilities in Portsmouth, Ohio, and Oak Ridge, Tenn. An estimated 259 metric tons is still in inventory, about two-thirds of it at Oak Ridge. A metric ton equals about 2,200 pounds.

- Physical inventories of highly enriched uranium show about 1.3 metric tons less than what is shown on the books, but officials attribute the difference to sloppy bookkeeping and not theft. Similar discrepancies have been found in the past for plutonium stockpiles.
- The government detonated a nuclear weapon in 1962 using reactor-grade plutonium obtained from the British, confirming arguments by nuclear proliferation activists that reactor-grade plutonium should be equally safeguarded.
- The department said so far nearly $3.7 million has been spent to try to learn more about human experiments involving radiation, much of them in the 1940s and early 1950s. Before a complete record is available, it may cost more than $24 million, according to department estimates.

Among the human experiment cases outlined Monday were:

- The use of pregnant women in various tests including at the University of Iowa in 1953 when women were injected with radioactive iodine-131 to determine effects on the fetus. The women all had been scheduled for therapeutic abortions and the aborted fetuses were then tested for radiation.
- The injection of radioactive iodine into newborns at the University of Tennessee and University of Iowa in the 1950s to study the effects on the thyroid.
- In 1946, six employees of a Chicago laboratory associated with the nuclear program were given plutonium-contaminated water to drink to learn more about the absorption of plutonium. These tests were described as voluntary and at least two of the workers are still alive, according to the summary.

- Researchers over a number of days gave radioactive zinc to two men, including a 67-year-old leukemia patient, in a 1947 experiment in Boston to study the dispersal of the material in the body. Neither the men nor the institution involved was identified.
- An unknown number of terminally ill cancer patients were injected with strontium-89, as part of a series of experiments, dubbed by the Atomic Energy Commission as "Project Sunshine." After the patients died, various body tissues were analyzed for radiation effect, the documents said.

DON'T LET THIS HAPPEN to your car's cooling system.

Don't Get Caught Overheated!

Cooling-system failure is the No. 1 engine-related cause of roadside breakdowns. Failure to maintain your cooling system by regularly flushing and refilling with fresh coolant can cause problems such as overheating or build-up of rust and corrosion. Left unchecked, these problems could severely damage your cooling system and lead to a roadside breakdown and an expensive repair bill.

When a cooling system fails, the engine overheats. And when a car overheats for very long, metal engine parts can be seriously damaged and require expensive repair.

Overheating can result when the coolant level is too low or when there is a leak in the system. Sometimes just driving in stop-and-go traffic on a hot summer day with the air conditioner running is enough to overheat the engine.

New cars have low compression engines that run much hotter than older ones. They also have high temperature thermostats, smaller radiators and decreased ability to dissipate heat.

You can still prevent overheating by having your car serviced before the hot summer months. Some parts that may need servicing or replacement include the liquid coolant, radiator cap, thermostat, water pump, and the drive belts and hoses (especially if they haven't been changed in four years).

Remember, we drain your radiator, not your pockets at ACE AUTO RADIATOR. We are located at 711 French Ave., (17-92) in Sanford. So come by, or call (407) 322-0235. See our ad on this page for $10 OFF any service of $50 or more.

IN BRIEF

LOCALLY

ICBA finishes second

SANFORD — The ICBA (Inter-County Basketball Association) Senior Girls' basketball team made a huge comeback, but ran out of gas at the end in the championship game of the Sunshine State Festival Regional Qualifier at the Seminole Community College Health & Physical Education Center this past weekend.

ICBA, made up of players from Oviedo and Luther high schools, cut a 12 point lead to just three with three minutes remaining, but leading scorer and rebounder Stephanie Noleux fouled out, leaving the team with just five players, as they fell 59-49 to Bartow.

Noleux finished with 29 points and 19 rebounds. Also scoring for the local squad were Lisa Liljenquist with eight points, Shydonna Toasie with six and Chrissy Wheeler, Cindy Liljenquist and Kristina Zahn with two points each. Wheeler and Lisa Liljenquist combined for 21 assists.

Baseball tournament at SMS

SANFORD — The NBC (National Baseball Congress) will hold the State Championship Qualifying Tournament at Sanford Memorial Stadium starting Friday at 5 p.m.

The NBC, which is open to players of any age, is generally considered the top amateur baseball organization in the world.

The eight-team, double-elimination tournament will continue through Monday, July 4th. The top three finishers in the tournament will advance to the state tournament in Orlando.

The defending state champions are the Oviedo Juice from the Central Florida Baseball League. This year the team is playing as the Casselberry Bucks and will be in the event.

Also in the tournament will be the Seminole County Noles, coached by Seminole Community College assistant coach Rod Ferguson and made up of college players from Seminole County high schools. The Noles' first game will be at 8 a.m. Saturday against the Miami Cardinals.

Admission will be $2 for adults and $1 for students and senior citizens.

AROUND THE NATION

Phillies shut down Marlins

PHILADELPHIA — Shawn Bockie scattered six hits in his first complete game in four years and Jim Eisenreich hit a two-run triple as Philadelphia won its third straight by beating the Florida Marlins 5-1 Monday night.

Bockie (4-4) struck out four, walked two and allowed only one runner past first base. It was his second career complete game and his first since May 20, 1990, when he pitched for the Chicago Cubs.

The Phillies jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first and knocked out Kurt Miller (1-3) an inning later.

Mariano Duncan reached on a fielder's choice, moved to second on a single by John Kruk and scored on Darren Daulton's single. Kruk and Daulton scored on the triple by Eisenreich, who then scored on Milt Thompson's groundout.

The Marlins got their only run in the fourth when Gary Sheffield led off with his 15th homer of the season.

Yarborough elected to Hall

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Cale Yarborough, a four-time winner of the Daytona 500, has been elected to the National Motorsports Press Association's Hall of Fame.

Yarborough is fifth on NASCAR's all-time list with 83 victories and won the series' points championship three times. He won five Southern 500s at Darlington, where he'll be inducted into the hall on Sept. 3.

Yarborough, from Sardis, S.C., currently owns a Winston Cup NASCAR team.

O-Cubs blanked

ZEBULON, N.C. — Gary Wilson pitched a complete-game one-hitter as Carolina beat the Orlando Cubs 4-0 in the Southern League.

Wilson struck out eight and gave up two walks. His bid for a no-hitter was snapped in the eighth when Pedro Valdes singled to center. Wilson (5-2) responded by striking out the next two batters to end the inning.

Tim Marx provided all the scoring the Mudcats needed when he doubled home Omer Munoz in the second inning.

Troy Bradford (3-0) took the loss for the Cubs.

Beard to coach Nets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New Jersey Nets have hired former NBA player Butch Beard to succeed Chuck Daly as coach. The Associated Press learned. Beard, the coach at Howard University for the past four seasons, was a Nets assistant from 1988-90. He will be introduced at a news conference today, a source close to the situation said.

Weather can't keep runners from Track Series

LAKE MARY — Despite sweltering conditions at Lake Mary High School's Don T. Reynolds Stadium, over 50 people showed up Monday night for the second night of the Lake Mary Summer Track Series.

Volleyball 'Premier's' in style

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Premier was just that Monday night as the City of Sanford Recreation Department Summer Recreational Volleyball League opened its season at the Sanford Middle Gymnasium.

Premier had a perfect 5-0 week, with its toughest game being a 15-13 battle with Westview Baptist Church, which ended the night with a 4-1 record.

The heat game of the night was a 10-14 extra point victory for Sanford First Baptist Church over Palmetto Avenue Baptist Church. The win allowed Sanford First Baptist Church to finish third on the evening with a 3-2 mark, while Palmetto Avenue Baptist Church was fourth at 2-3.

Rounding out the night's standings were Nichols at 1-4 and B & M Lawn Service which did not have enough players and forfeited all five matches.

Post 53 splits odd B-Division twin bill

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Who says there is nothing new under the sun?

It does not matter how long you have been around the game of baseball, just when you think you have seen it all, something pops up and surprises you all over again.

That is exactly what happened in an American Legion B Division baseball doubleheader on Alumni Field in the Seminole High School Baseball Complex Monday afternoon.

During the nightcap of the doubleheader, Sanford Post 53 and the Pine Ridge Panthers (the new high school in Deltona) were hooked up in a 0-0 tremendous pitching duel entering the fourth inning.

During the inning a Panthers batter delivered an expletive toward the Post 53 catcher, which the plate umpire heard.

Since Pine Ridge only had nine players, the umpire decided to warn the Panthers squad instead of ejecting the batter. After going to each player in the dugout and informing them of the warning, the umpire turned to return to the plate and the same comment was directed at the umpire as he left.

The umpire immediately ejected the player and Sanford received a 7-0 forfeit victory.

"I could not believe it," said Post 53 head coach Larry Holbrook. "He gave them the opportunity to continue playing and they did that. This was a prime example of why you should let your actions speak for themselves and keep your mouth shut."

The forfeit wiped out a great pitching performance by Mike Magner, who was working on a two-hitter, but a win is a win.

Kilpatrick, France big winners on VCS clay oval

By BILL SIBBERT Special to the Herald

BARBERVILLE — Starting on the outside of the front row, Mitch Kilpatrick powered his way to the front on the first lap and led the rest of the 30-lap Pro Late Model feature to the checkered flag Friday night at the Volusia County Speedway dirt track.

Kilpatrick was challenged most of the night by runnerup Bobby Layman, but even Layman was too far behind the leader to make a difference in scoring. Following Kilpatrick and Layman were Joe Hall, Gary Flynn and Mike Luddeni to round out the top five finishers. Winners in the other divisions included Jim France in the 25-lap Legends feature, Brian Bales in the Pro Stocks, Monty Stratton in the Mini Sprints and Steven Stratton in the Hobby Stocks.

France, the President of International Speedway Corporation and the 1992 Legends Cars National Tour champion, returned to the Gatorade Florida Legends Series after a two month absence and won Round 13.

France, of Daytona Beach, won his first feature event of the season when he drove the Carmichael's Grill '37 Ford sedan from the third starting spot in the 16-car field. He was several car lengths ahead of traveling Canadian Larry Majury of Thorold, Ontario, in his Majury Racing '40 Ford.

Robert Ham of Ormond Beach, in the R Ann Racing '37 Chevrolet; Ron May of Neptune Beach, in the Patron Motorsports '37 Ford; and Rob Glenn of Jacksonville, in the Lil' Champ Stores, '37 Ford, completed the top five on the 1/8-mile clay oval.

Rounds 14 and 15 of the Gatorade Florida Legends Series will be on Friday and Saturday night's, July 1 and 2, at Volusia County Speedway and the 1/8-mile clay oval at St. Augustine Speedway, respectively. They will also be rounds of the B.F. Goodrich Legends Cars National Tour.

Bales led the way as Floyd Martin, Richard Adams, Randy Hecker and Steve Wortman finished out the top five. Monty Stratton wasn't having any notions of giving up his pole position and decided to stay ahead of outside front row starter and runnerup Tom Mulligan for all 15 laps. Mike Ponce, Davy Cline and Charlie Staats trailed.

Steven Stratton also led from flag-to-flag in the Hobby Stocks, finishing ahead of Lawrence Ednie, Kathy Gaine, Donnie Bostic and Glenn Castro.

In addition to the Legend cars, other events at Volusia County Speedway on the dirt during the Fourth of July weekend will be a special 50-lap Late Model feature, a 20-lap Open Wheel Modifieds event and a 20-lap Hobby Stock finale set for Friday, July 1.

Breast enlargement in males abnormal

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with gynecomastia. I've taken antibiotics and have used heat with an analgesic balm. I still have tenderness after two months and wonder what I should do next.

DEAR READER: Gynecomastia (breast enlargement in males) has many causes ranging from a normal reaction during puberty to cancer in older individuals. Alcohol abuse and many prescription drugs also may cause this condition.

If you haven't seen a doctor, you should, because you'll need professional help in sorting out the various causes of gynecomastia. In particular, you should have certain blood tests, such as hormone levels.

If you are taking medication, a change may be in order. Gynecomastia in an adult male is never normal, so don't delay in obtaining medical assistance. DEAR DR. GOTT: After undergoing hospital tests for a pain my left side three years ago, myelofibrosis was diagnosed from a bone marrow test. The oncologist's only remark was "when the headaches start, I will prescribe medication. However, there will be side effects." End of discussion. Exit doctor. Can you describe a time frame I can look forward to? I'm 79, active, enjoy life, but really have questions.

DEAR READER: Myelofibrosis is a serious ailment, marked by destruction of the bone marrow, where blood cells are made. The cause is unknown, but the disease is often associated with leukemia and polycythemia, other blood disorders.

The most prominent sign of myelofibrosis is anemia, which leads to weakness, fatigue and weight loss. I do not believe that headache is a common symptom; this should be investigated by your doctor as a separate issue.

The diagnosis is made by bone marrow biopsy.

Treatment includes blood transfusions, chemotherapy and drugs to stimulate the bone marrow -- some of which can cause hair loss, nausea and vomiting.

If you receive appropriate therapy, however, your "time frame" is actually quite favor-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

The Italians love bridge. They even have a village just for the game, situated in the northwest corner of Calabria (which comprises the front of the foot of the country). At the end of August, a challenge match will be played there by 16 of the world's best players: seven Americans, one Pakistani (representing the United States) and eight Europeans.

Today's deal, played at the village, contains a couple of instructive points.

After his partner's pre-emptive raise to four spades, South, with his excellent controls outside spades, took a shot at the slam.

South ruffed West's heart-king start and was sorely tempted to lead a trump, hoping later to be able to play the diamonds for no losers. But, unlike Oscar Wilde, he resisted temptation. Instead of a trump, he played a club to dummy's queen, ruffed dummy's last heart in his hand and cashed the A-K of clubs, discarding two of dummy's low diamonds. South ruffed his last club high in the dummy before successfully finessing the diamond queen.

With his preparations complete, South exited from the dummy with a trump. West had to win with the ace and return a heart. After discarding dummy's last low diamond and ruffing in hand, South drew the outstanding trump and claimed.

West was left to rue his opening lead. If he had selected the spade ace, the contract would have died, declarer being unable to avoid a diamond loser. Also, West should have realized South was void in hearts, because he, South, hadn't used Blackwood.

Always consider leading the singleton trump ace: It is a dangerous card to retain.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 29, 1994

Even if everything doesn't go perfectly in the year ahead, it should still be an exceptionally happy one for you, owing to your popularity with friends and involvements in exciting endeavors.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your sphere of influence is quite extensive today, and the comments and positions you take will later be quoted. Don't do things that could produce bad copy. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A situation that appears to be a liability for others might hold some type of unique opportunity for you today. Don't let their assessments influence your evaluation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A friend of yours might come to you for assistance today, and you must be very careful how you handle this situation. Once you get in, it might be hard to bail out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't despair if you have to deal with difficult developments today. When put to the test, you could be remarkably resourceful and turn negative influences into positive ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You should do quite well today in handling complex problems that are broad in scope. However, it could be the small factors that cause you to trip and stumble. Focus on the big picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is a good day to implement some social changes you feel could be beneficial for yourself as well as for friends about whom you're concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to deal on a one-to-one basis today with individuals who are important to your immediate plans. Working through surrogates might not be half as effective.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Lady Luck might intervene today and improve a financial arrangement that is already doing pretty well. If opportunity knocks, be the first one at the door.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you might be more of a risk-taker than usual. This is well and good, provided you have the facts to back you up. If you don't, it could be a foolish gesture.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A proposition about which you have doubts should work out fairly well today. The results might not be optimal, but a ripple affect could produce positive influences in other areas.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If your thinking is limited today, it could minimize a number of successes you may experience. Don't view things in small terms.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your earning abilities are rather good today, but your extravagant impulses are also quite strong. Don't do anything foolish that could deprive you of what you gain.
