

OH YEAH?

By PETER SCHAAL

About the only thing I hate about this present World Series and its result so far is that one man, and one alone, is sending my prediction that Macks will win, long with the rest of my selections. As a charter member of Paul Gallie's Ninety-Eight Per Cent Wrong Club, I have for the past year faithfully lived up to every requirement of that club, and have missed them all. Along came the World Series and for once I planned to drop my membership and select the winner. Flouting the Macks from eye to angle, I burst forth into print, affixing and positively declaring that the Macks would repeat. Like Connie Mack, I failed to admit this Pepper Martin, this Red Man of the Obags, this one man World Series.

Yesterday he gave Pepper Mack and company more trouble than a nest of hornets, and for the fifth straight day, one credit for all of the Card glory. His single, homer, and sacrifice hit sent the Macks back with a convincing defeat. Hallahan's effective pitching played a big part too, but not nearly so big as Martin's batting and leading. To his I gladly add my hat, along with thousands of others.

But, even yet, I can't see my Macks being the Series. I know they will positively beat the Cards Friday, and if you don't think that Lefty Grove will come into his own Saturday in the greatest pitching performance of the year, I'll give up. This Grove person, with his remarkable season's record, can't possibly have burned himself out. Too many things are at stake, particularly Grove's salary next year. Granted that there is a "host" in every Series as witness Hamilton's performance last year, we can't see that Lefty is to be "host". The Macks have already offered one of those articles, Coghane. Count me in with the Macks in the latter end. Earnshaw to win Friday, and Grove to make history Saturday.

I don't pass along Peter Street that some one of "The Herald's Pick-The Winner" doesn't stop me and say "What the idea of putting such a long list of football games in the paper? I thought you said they were easy this week". Well, to satisfy a curiosity that they are or are not, I've gone over the first 26 selections handed in to find out that the paper you fans have to guess the pick are 50 per cent tough, and one for the way he has selected them.

Notre Dame, Kentucky, and the Nats are the only sure bets, according to the 50 Nats game is the choice of 19 of the 56 over Northwestern; Kentucky is the same choice over Washington and Lee, and Navy is a 50 to 5 choice over Maryland. Then in order come the following: Wisconsin 15, Auburn 11, Virginia 11, Sewanee 12, Florida 11, North Carolina 12, Davidson 11, V. P. I. 13, V. M. I. 11, Citadel 15, Duke 11, Villanova 15, N. C. State 19, Clemson 16, Ohio 15, Vanderbilt 21, Georgia 31, Yale 22, Minnesota 32, Stanford 21, Georgia Tech 32, Carnegie Tech 24, Illinois 11, Purdue 26. Three tie games are predicted: Illinois-Purdue, N. C. State-Iowa, and New York-Dame-Northwestern.

I've a hunch that the Nats, going to have a struggle when they Ma played, and that Villanova will take Duke; that Auburn is going to surprise Wisconsin, and that Carnegie Tech has something in store for Georgia Tech even if they are playing on Gam Field.

The mighty worried over Georgia's chances with Yale, although I feel that the Southerners will come through again. Davidson is about due for a fall too, for, taking John Lyles' word

BULLDOG ELEVEN HEADS NORTH TO TILT WITH YALE

Eyes Of South Turned To New Haven With Real Game Expected

ATLANTA, Oct. 8.—(A.P.)—Georgia's gridiron warriors were heading northward last night, to New Haven, scene of their conflict Saturday with Yale in what has become one of the intercollegiate classics of college football. The Bulldogs' entrance at Athens late last night and will reach New Haven tonight. Except for a batch for the big sophomore center, who complained of an injured ankle, the Georgians were in fine shape. Head Coach Harry Mehre was in Indiana where he was called Monday by the serious illness of his father. He hopes to fly to New Haven in time for the game. Although word from the north indicates Yale is stronger than in 1930, southern football followers, and the Georgians themselves, are convinced that the Athens Bulldogs will make it three straight over the Ell.

Five other southern teams are involved in intercollegiate warfare. Auburn left today for Madison to play Wisconsin and Vanderbilt started for Columbus to meet Ohio State. Oglethorpe engages Manhattan in New York Friday night. Villa Nova comes south to play Duke at Durham and Carnegie Tech encounters Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

Vanderbilt and Oglethorpe are accorded even chances of winning their games, but Duke, Georgia Tech and Auburn will rank as the underdogs in their engagements. Other teams were busily at work preparing for intra-conference contests. Billy Laval has tossed his variety of the first two games into record and will spring an entirely new team at Louisiana State Saturday at Baton Rouge. Wolfe, the substitute halfback, who hauled passes an effectively against Georgia Tech last week, is the ace of the new backfield, which includes Hicks, a senior fullback, and two sophomores. Hajek, an end who has shifted to center, is the only regular of the first two games who remains in the starting lineup. Six sophomores are among the forward wall.

GATORS STRESS AERIAL ATTACK IN LONG DRILL

Bachman Makes Ready For Foray Of Game Tarheel Warriors

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA, GAINESVILLE, Oct. 8.—Featuring aerial more than before, Coach Bachman drops his University of Florida football squad through a long practice yesterday in preparation for the tilt with the University of North Carolina here Saturday.

With the Gators possessing a high line, good ends and accurately passing backs, Coach Bachman believes the surest touchdown way for Florida is by way of the air. Blocking also came in for a full share of the coaches' attention yesterday, and both backs and forwards were sent crashing against the dummies for a lengthy period. The blocking done by the team against North Carolina State Saturday was said to be the best exhibition of taking defensive players out of position that a Florida squad has ever executed.

The three long runs made by Edw. Berk, Johnny Fountain and Jimmy Hughes were made with most of the N. C. State players flat on their faces. Blocking is a most important phase in the Notre Dame style of grid play used by Bachman.

Dutch Stanley, end coach, kept his wing men working on snaggling passes most of the afternoon. Spurgeon Cherry, although only a substitute end, appeared in the light as the Gators' best aerial player. Spring Hill and Mississippi respectively and are spending most of their time this week preparing for games with Vanderbilt and Auburn on Oct. 17 which will quickly decide their championship hopes for 1931.

Players On Edge For Important Game At Field Here Friday

By PETER SCHAAL

On the eve of their greatest test to prove their worthiness as football players of unusual ability, Coach Leonard McLucas' Seminole High gridlers, 37 strong, find themselves in perfect mental and physical condition, ready to battle a giant, powerful Ocala Willicat eleven to the last minute, confident that they will emerge from the fray with an inspiring victory. The game begins at 3:30 o'clock at the Municipal Park.

Truck Growers To Play Chase Eleven Tonight

With Palmer pitching for the Truck Growers and Rawson in the box for Chase, both pitchers being backed up by strong support, the game tonight between these two teams should be one of the best ever played, according to E. H. Cullum.

This will be the first appearance of the Chase team in a regular league game, since winning the city championship last month, and they are prepared to give any team a hard fight.

On the other hand the Truck Growers have been materially strengthened by the signing of Palmer to their hurling, and Manager Hender of that team states that any team that takes a game from now on will know they have waged mighty battle.

To those who love to see the game as it should be played, will miss a treat if they do not witness the game tonight. The game is scheduled to start at 7:30.

U. S. Insists That Europe Disarm To Prolong Holiday

 seems to be inevitably necessary. Whether the administration would be willing to enter into a complete revision of the European war debts is unknown.
 Senator Bingham expressed the view yesterday that Congress would look favorably on a longer moratorium if some concessions were received from Europe and if it became increasingly apparent later next year that an extension was imperative.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—(A.P.)—The bank of France yesterday sent two of its highest officials to the United States to study President Hoover's proposals to deal with the financial crisis. The study will be in preparation for Premier Laval's visit to the president in Washington.

Meanwhile Lord Reading, British foreign secretary, completed his presentation of Britain's financial position to the premier and other French government chiefs. The foreign secretary said no understanding had been reached because "we do not know what will happen in the future."

The newspaper L'Information printed what was considered significant news that J. P. Morgan, who came to Paris two days ago for the same reason that brought Lord Reading, conferred during the day with Governor Moret of the bank of France and other leading financiers.

French public opinion, as represented by the comments of leading newspapers, was apprehensive that President Hoover might confront Premier Laval with a request that France agree to a further suspension of German reparations.

The British foreign secretary said he was not informed of any plan for Great Britain to be represented at the Hoover-Laval discussions. It was his opinion that time was too short for British participation.

An indication of the importance the French attach to any attempt to extend the reparations was given the Associated Press by the head of one of France's banks.

"Prolongation of the Hoover moratorium," he said, "would involve a loss for France of 2,500,000,000 francs ($100,000,000) yearly. This would mean the French government must find an equal sum in order to balance the

CARLTON ASKED TO DENY CHARGE MADE BY DANIELS

Miami Constable Who Created Sensation, Taunts Governor

MIAMI, Oct. 9.—Gov. Doyle E. Carlton was called upon yesterday to prove that A. C. Daniels, sixth district constable, lied when he testified last week that the governor told him not to stop gambling at the West Flagler Kennel club's race track last season.

"Do you dare stand before the grand jury or had you rather compound a felony by your silence?" the governor was asked in a telegram from John M. Murrell, attorney for Daniels.

The telegram was one of the day's developments in the case, which being the suspension of Daniels by the governor, on the grounds that he "is guilty of neglect of duty, incompetency, misfeasance and malfeasance" as set forth by Daniels in his written statements and the release of the written testimony which is in dispute.

In a statement attached to the suspension order Governor Carlton again, according to Associated Press, asserted that Daniels' testimony as given here "is totally false."

The telegram sent to Governor Carlton by Mr. Murrell follows:

"I have dispatched a copy of a statement of the sworn testimony of A. C. Daniels, given in the trial of the solicitor, was untrue. If so, he was guilty of perjury. As governor and as a citizen, I appeal upon you to appear before the grand jury, and present what you claim to be the facts. Daniels' testimony was sworn to and your bare statement that it is not true leaves the balance in Daniels' favor. Do you dare come before the grand jury or had you rather compound a felony by your silence?"

Daniels was acquitted of a charge of seeking protection money from the West Flagler Kennel club at the trial at which he gave the testimony.

A transcript of the testimony as given at the trial and made available yesterday, follows:

Q.—(by Mr. Murrell)—Did you make any arrest?

A.—(by Daniels)—I went in there to the office and knocked on the door and told this fellow that I was a county officer, and when I got inside I told him I was constable of that district and that I was going to make an arrest, and then they began to tell me that I could not do it without a warrant, that I would have to see their attorneys. And I told them that I didn't have to see no attorneys to make an arrest, that I never did have to go to see an attorney to make an arrest. And I seen I was not going to get no place by myself and I told them that I would beat them the next night if they agreed, that that thing would not stop, that I would assure them that.

Q.—Did you go out there the next night?

A.—No, Sir, because by the time I got everything ready, I got a telephone call from the governor, and the governor asked me what was the trouble down here, and I told him I didn't know there was any trouble at all with me, and he said, "What about the race track?" and I said, "I was out there and there was gambling going on out there and that is a state law violation and I intended to stop it." He said, "Don't do it. Come to see me." And he said, "When can you see me?" and he says, "Come to see me on your own," and then the next day I went him a telegram to find out if it was he that was the boss, or who I didn't go out to the track, taking his orders over the phone. I promised it was the governor.

Q.—Did you see the governor?

A.—I saw the governor.

Q.—Did you see him at the trial?

A.—No, Sir, I did not see him at the trial.

Q.—Did you have a hearing before the governor?

A.—No, Sir, I did not have a hearing before the governor.

Q.—Did you see any other officials?

A.—No, Sir, I did not see any other officials.

Q.—Did you see any other officials?

A.—No, Sir, I did not see any other officials.

Q.—Did you see any other officials?

A.—No, Sir, I did not see any other officials.

Q.—Did you see any other officials?

A.—No, Sir, I did not see any other officials.

Q.—Did you see any other officials?

A.—No, Sir, I did not see any other officials.

BOY FASCISTI STAGE ANNUAL MANEUVERS

ROME.—The annual military encampment of the Boy Fascist Corps was held at the Government Military Field just outside of Rome. Many of the officials of the government watched the boys in action, including the Secretary-General of the Fascist party. Photo shows a group of boys receiving instructions from a soldier.

Julian Hazari and A. A. Wolfe, Tampa, owners of the certificate betting system under which the race tracks operated last season. Sher, on the witness stand, testified that he did call Tampa about the situation.

The night after Sher called Tampa, Daniels testified, he got the call from the governor. The race track operators insisted in their testimony that Daniels threatened the arrests because they would not pay him protection money through another man.

The governor's statement, the Associated Press reported, said in part:

"He (Daniels) testified that he was directed by the governor not to stop gambling at the race track. This testimony is totally false and proves the incompetency of the constable in the first essential of a public official, certainly an officer of our court.

"While the jury acquitted the defendant on the charges of soliciting graft, it is probable that the jury in its deliberations acted as I did when the officer was before me gave to his testimony credence which it now appears it did not deserve."

Toughest Thug In Chicago Is Minus His Moll

They carried two suitcases and were bound, they had told neighborhood storekeepers, on a visit to the country. Some time in the night the pistol attack was made either by gangsters on a more seeking McErlane's life, police theorized, or by McErlane himself in a vicious quarrel with the woman. Then the car was driven to the spot where it was found on the South Side.

Maxon Miller also bore a string of aliases known in the police courts of Chicago, St. Louis and Pennsylvania. She once escaped from a penal institution at Blawnox, Pa., and the records fail to show that she was ever re-arrested.

McErlane earned a reputation as one of gangland's most feared killers, not always immune to prison terms but never convicted of murder. In his 20 years of familiarity with police blotters he has spent time in jail for idleness, assault to murder, burglary, accessory to murder, aiding a prisoner to escape and assault to kill. Ten years ago he left prison on parole. A murder charge was dropped without prosecution in 1924. Then he went on trial in Indiana on a gang murder indictment and won acquittal. Listed now as one of Chicago's "public enemies," he is wanted on a $5,000 grand jury warrant.

Used Car Sale Staged By Marshall Motors Is Well Patronized

Statements made last Tuesday by W. E. Walthall, local representative of the Marshall Motors, Inc. to the effect that he was of the opinion that Sanford residents would buy more if induced by attractive prices were maturing in reality, today when Mr. Walthall held a representative of The Herald that through the medium of advertising the Fall automobile clearance sale sponsored by his company is rapidly approaching a mark beyond all previous experiences.

Shown before press this afternoon the Marshall Motors, Inc. had delivered nine used cars to St. Johns County residents, with the exception of one, all within a radius of three miles of the heart of Sanford. In announcing the progress of the clearance sale, Mr. Walthall said that he and the other salesman expect to deliver a large number of new cars to the business community in a short time. The sale is being held from the used car lot at First Street and Sanford Avenue and will continue to be in force until Saturday Oct. 17. The cars are ready for inspection every day from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night or later if necessary. The full clearance is the first sale insured here by The Marshall Motors, Inc. in May, and the local agents are confident that there will be more cars sold here than last Spring.

Our Country's Extravagance

This is National Fire Prevention Week. What does that mean to you? To most people, we suppose, it means just another week. Not necessarily just another seven day period, but another of those weeks which are eternally being set aside for the special observance of better food for babies, improved care of the teeth, conservation of forests, relief for dumb animals, and a horde of other equally worthy projects.

But National Fire Prevention Week has an unusual significance this year. Probably because of hard times, everyone is studying ways and means of reducing their expenses, of preventing wastes and extravagances. In all the United States there is probably no loss of wealth, so great, or which might so easily be prevented, as that attributed to fires. Of all the fires which occur in this country, eighty percent, according to the latest figures, could have been prevented. In 1929 property reaching the valuation of the huge sum of $150,000,000 might have been saved by a careful observance of fire prevention rules.

The worst offender among careless starters of fires is, of course, the cigarette smoker. Last year over $28,000,000 in fire losses were directly attributable to him. His matches, carelessly carried about his person or left on the table where children can find them, his unfeeling habit of smoking in bed, of going to sleep with a lighted cigarette in his mouth, his thoughtless throwing away of lighted matches, cigar or cigarette butts, even into a waste paper basket, or a can of gasoline, all contribute to this enormous and entirely needless waste.

There are, of course, countless other causes of preventable fires. Not the least of the other bad offenders is the hunter or camper who leaves the scene of a refreshing rest with his campfire still ablaze. Instances of this kind are known where such carelessness has caused the loss of millions of dollars' worth of fine timber. Carelessness in the kitchen, around boilers, oil wells, and factories, garages, and electric wiring, all play their part in our annual fire loss.

Tourists Are Coming

It is about this time of the year that Floridians invariably begin to wonder, "What kind of tourist season will we have next winter?" It is quite as important a question to the state as a whole as what the strength of the citrus or celery markets might be. With business conditions none too good throughout the country, one might expect a slump in the usual tourist influx, but the Miami Daily News declares:

"With slumps everywhere, the resort areas set aside by the federal government reached a new high total of 2,700,000 visitors last year and a mid-season check-up this year shows the 2,000,000 mark passed with every indication that another record is in the offing.

"Doubtless depression kept away many who were planning vacation trips to national parks, yet many others who were contemplating European voyages decided for the same reason to change their plans, and see America first."

"Greater Miami and the entire Florida resort area form a national park without benefit of Congress. South Florida hopes soon to have an official national park to preserve the natural sub-tropic beauty and the wild life of the lower Everglades, but until then it may expect to share in any increase of vacation travel shown by such parks.

"If the fact that Florida winter vacations may be enjoyed without great expense—in many cases no more than would be spent for fuel and doctor bills during a northern winter—is impressed sufficiently upon the nation, there will be little cause to worry over the number of tourists."

FOR THE NINE MONTHS ending September, 1931, construction awards in the South aggregated more than $547,000,000. The significance of this amount is evident when it is compared with the corresponding period of the 1921 depression. Only $220,000,000 of new work was undertaken in the South in the first nine months of 1921. The total of construction contracts awarded in the South up to the end of September this year was 70 per cent greater than similar expenditures for the entire 12 months of 1921. It is of particular interest to note that the $547,000,000 of new work so far in 1931 is $138,000,000 in excess of the total awards reported for the first nine months of 1922, and $126,000,000 in excess of the first nine months of 1923, when the country was well on its way out of the deflation of 1920-21. While the South's total contracts ending September were under the $653,000,000 awarded for the five-year average (first nine months 1925-29), a greater volume of work was done this year due to lower prices.—Manufacturers Record.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY

Dethronement by legislation of the Hapsburgs and proclamation of Hungary's right to free election of rulers is being urged by the Farmer's party. This activity has been intensified by rumors that friends of former King Charles are ready for another effort to return him to the throne.

Mrs. S. G. Messer, Miss Violet Messer and Herbert Messer, of Stiversville, W. Va., are spending the winter here at the Temple Girls Home.

Mrs. M. Minarik and children returned today from Lakeland where they spent several days with Mrs. Tom Getzen.

Misses Eleanor and Margaret Roberts, Mrs. J. D. Roberts, and Ernest Gormley motored to Orlando this afternoon.

"France must remain armed as long as her security has not been assured" was the statement made today by Aristide Briand, the French premier, in an address outlining the French government's foreign policy. M. Briand was surrounded by six of the ministers of his cabinet and four under secretaries. He declared that at the present moment the French premier leads in the world's opinion.

TWO KINDS OF FLYING

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

When Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon Jr. sidled to earth at Wanathee, Wash., in a plane minus a landing gear, they broke a record by completing the first true nonstop airplane crossing of the Pacific. But they did more than that. They also broke a wing and the propeller, and emphasized anew the now readily accepted fact that aviation is divided into two distinct parts—regular workaday flying and hazardous flying. The two should not be confused.

Up until recently the two were confused and aviation suffered thereby, being considered a foolhardy way to travel by most people. The steady flying of the air mail and passenger routes with careful pilots and well-thought-out regulations dispelled the public doubts. They began to realize that the experimental, exploration and stunt flying headlines in the daily press was perhaps something apart from aviation in its service sense.

Cognizance of this distinction is further emphasized in the report of the aviation committee of the American Life Convention, which calls for a plan for life insurance for regular pilots but recommends refusal of coverage to pilots engaged in "stunt, exhibition, record, exploration and other extra-hazardous flying."

When aviation calls for flights to test certain new instruments or machines which will promote future speed and safety, the risk of hazardous flying may seem justifiable. But the mere taking up of a ship to make a long cross-water hop now seems to have passed its useful period. All the main oceans have been crossed successfully. Proof of the durability of aircraft, engines and men has been well demonstrated.

When pilots feel it necessary to drop their landing gear to make a flight, turning back to the relatively primitive method of Cok and Nungesser to make a flight with a certain hazardous landing, even though the job is well done, its usefulness to aviation may well be questioned. Pangborn and Herndon are to be congratulated on their splendid navigation, their motor's endurance and their skill in landing a wheelless ship suffering no more damage.

But it is pioneering in the less hazardous fields of aviation where all effort is being concentrated in proving the reliability and safety of air travel that is most needed today.

THE TRAYLOR BOOM

CHICAGO JOURNAL OF COMMERCE

Down in Malone and Hillsboro, Texas, some of Mr. Traylor's former neighbors recently joined hands to make him the Democratic nominee for president of the United States. Now Daniel Upthegrove, president of the St. Louis Southwestern railroad, declares himself an earnest participant in the effort. Other voices may concur. But Mr. Traylor's name will not be among them. His candidate for president, as has long been known, is his friend, Owen D. Young. He wanted Mr. Young in 1928 and he will want him much more, if that is possible, in 1932.

A short time ago, delivering a speech in Washington before the congress of the International Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Traylor declared that in the interest of business stability there should be certain reforms in the practices of the security and commodity exchanges. He made his suggestions tentatively, not as final proposals. He thought the exchanges should consider them, for their own sakes as the general welfare. But immediately the report was disseminated that his speech had a political motive—to advance the candidacy of his friend Mr. Young, who presumably would in due time make the same suggestions as those Mr. Traylor had made.

Mr. Traylor's response to this charge was to let it be known that he would not issue another speech on any topic until the presidential fight was over. When Mr. Hoover proposed a year's moratorium on reparations and war debts, Mr. Traylor was only approved it. But aside from that he has pre-emptively refused to let himself be quoted on any point. As a banker, it is his duty to give his stockholders, depositors and customers the benefit of all his time and energy. He has taken careful and determined steps to preclude a political interpretation of anything he may do or say. When his opinions have been sought he has expressed them in private; but he will not speak publicly.

That he is qualified for the presidency goes without argument. He is adept in finance and the management of men, he knows the economic necessities of the country and the world, he is decisive and unpretentious, his sympathies are broad, and he has a firm hand—qualities which with political, for example, he played an important though inconspicuous role in the recent election of a Democratic mayor who is acting effectively to clean up an extraordinary financial mess in the various municipal governments of Chicago. If the United States ever had Mr. Traylor for president it could count itself lucky. But as things are going it will probably get some semi-radical.

TEXAS CITRUS GROWERS IN TROUBLE

ST. PETERSBURG INDEPENDENT

The quarantine in Texas against the Mexican fruit-fly is holding all bulk citrus shipments within that state, according to a recent announcement from Commissioner Delcurto, of the Texas Department of Agriculture. It is expected that the quarantine will remain in force for some time. It is even possible that there will be no citrus shipments out of Texas during the coming fall and winter months.

For weeks Texas has been closed to Florida citrus shipments, an aftermath of the fruit-fly in this state, notwithstanding the fact that Florida was declared fly-free more than a year ago. There is not the slightest doubt that Florida citrus is perfectly safe, and has been for months, yet a number of states have been exercising caution in connection with Florida citrus shipments. However, the fruit-fly is a devastating pest and the various states most interested in its eradication are not to be blamed if they appear to be overly cautious.

Florida received a great deal of publicity—much more than was fair—during the period of the eradication. Fly infestations in the southwestern states and particularly in southern California were not generally heard of. In the past few months, however, it has developed that there has been much more fruit-fly trouble in that area than had been supposed. California citrus growers have not been troubled by a general quarantine, but the fruit was barred by Arizona. With Texas tied up with a fly ban Florida citrus fruit is now the safest in the market.

A BLANKET HE WILL REMEMBER

SANTA MONICA, Cal.—William Vedts, left, is 16 now. But back during the World War he was only an infant, and the blanket which he was wrapped around a little friend was used by his mother to save his life. The family lived in Paris and during the German bombing raids William's mother used to wrap him in the woolly blanket shown here and carry him from the family apartment into a nearby cellar until the air bombs had ceased falling.
