BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

IF WE EVEN LOVE OUR ENEMIES WE WILL NOT HAVE ENEMIES LONG: This is my commandment, that ye love one another.—John 13:12.

We see where housewives are refusing to buy meat at exorbitant prices. They can do more to bring the price down than all the OPAs in the world.

President Truman, it is announced, is going to deliver a speech before the first session of the United Nations Assembly.

The United States Employment Service office in Tampa reports that it has 7,600 jobs available which it has been unable to fill.

Writing in the Tampa Tribune, Jim Killingsworth, a staff writer, says: "A check of the records here reveals many persons throughout the state are drawing jobless benefit payments from the same office where jobs are available that match their ability, and one official said this condition is 'obvious'."

The CIO United Auto Workers have announced that they intend to make a contract renegotiation with the automobile companies for higher wages.

The State Department sticking strictly to the letter of the law excludes from the safety and security of this country 48 Estonians persecuted first by the Germans, then by the Russians, before finally fleeing across the Atlantic in a tiny sloop.

Marshal Tito says he will not move in on Trieste by force, a promise which is just as good as his word. Some day some country will do it for him.

Now that Senator Fraser has been nominated by the State Democratic Committee for State Comptroller, Governor Caldwell announces he has washed his hands of the whole affair.

The Newsprint Crisis

The present newsprint crisis in Florida and throughout the United States can be traced directly to the bungling interference of Washington bureaucrats.

Prior to 1939, when Adolf Hitler sent his Panzer divisions roaring across the Western plains of Poland, The Sanford Herald like many another American newspaper bought its newsprint in Finland.

In recent years this source of supply has been entirely cut off, and all the newsprint used in the United States has come either from this country or from Canada.

Canadian mills on the other hand have made an almost herculean effort to supply the American market.

Since before the war American consumption of newsprint has increased from 3,500,000 tons to nearly 5,000,000 tons, of which nearly 4,000,000 tons came from Canada.

In spite of this fact, in spite of appeals from individual publishers all over the country, from the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association and the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the OPA has consistently refused to take the price ceilings off newsprint.

Under these conditions Canadian mills have refused to renew their contracts with American jobbers and the question of whether we will be able to obtain newsprint at all becomes a dubious one.

U. S. Oil Shale Fuel Reserve

By ROBERT Z. GEIGER, Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Before the average man is using atomic energy in his automobile and furnace, government fuel experts predict, this nation's oil reserves may be at a dangerously low point.

But scientists are working to build a new American fuel industry to fill the gap. This is the oil shale industry, with a known reserve from four to five times as great as the petroleum reserve.

Scientists forecast that within three years they can demonstrate a practicable method of operation. Thus they hope to accomplish in a few years what experts of many nations have been trying to do for decades.

The government is spending $30,000,000 to develop fuel and oil from shale and other sources. Statistics of the American Petroleum Institute show America is consuming more than 1,800,000,000 barrels of oil a year.

The proved reserve is around 20,453,331,000 barrels, less than a 20-year supply. Dr. W. C. Schroeder, chief of the Office of Synthetic Liquid Fuels of the Bureau of Mines, estimates that oil shale reserves of the United States contain four or five times this much recoverable oil, or about 92,000,000,000 barrels.

About 76,000,000,000 barrels or 82 per cent of the recoverable total are in the Green River formation of Colorado, Wyoming and Utah. Another major deposit is in the new Albany formation of Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio.

Sweden also had a unique oil shale project. Experts of the Bureau of Mines say Swedish engineers drilled holes into near-surface shale beds. They introduced heat into these holes by means of electricity. The temperature of the ground was raised until the oil vaporized and escaped through the holes.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By OLIVER DEWOLFE

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Millions of young Americans, in kindergarten and college, have an opportunity to become air-minded this school year.

They are going to find airplanes popping up in social studies, mathematics, sciences, languages, English, fine arts. Some of the older students in ground school courses such as zoology, communications and mechanics will actually fly-light planes.

The program is part of the Civil Aeronautics Administration's (CAA) plan to help state departments of education make young Americans flying conscious. Twenty-one states have already adopted individual plans to introduce flying into the curriculum.

Instead of saying "Johnny, if you had three apples," Sinclair said, "the teacher may say 'Johnny, if one airplane can carry three crew members and 29 passengers, how many can six airplanes carry?'"

For older students, science courses may include the theory of aerodynamics and study the causes of "lift." The new manual, The Aviation Education Source Book, even has a chapter on music which lists all songs, military, popular and otherwise which have an aviation theme, or even mention aviation.

The manual, prepared by Dr. Paul K. Hanns, Professor of Education at Stanford University, with the assistance of 25 teachers, aviation experts and research workers, is one of the latest steps to make young America air conscious. It was used extensively this past summer in at least 50 teacher training institutes which CAA assisted in.

Educators in America started to become air-minded in 1942. Sinclair says, after early World War II experiences disclosed that the Germans had the edge on us

These Women

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor

Every once in a while, there is a new lipstick—perennially about color. But usually even the new lip rouge shades that are predicted do not materialize.

This year, for instance, most cosmetics were of the opinion that new fall makeup shades would run to orange, to harmonize with the fall fashion colors—russet, brown and green. So, up they come with such colors as ultra violet, pink passion, blue flame and twilight fuchsia—real blue-reds. The orange lipsticks are few and far between on any cosmetics shelf.

It happened mainly because the girls preferred the blue-red to the orange hues. They found they could use clear red lipsticks for their brown and russet ensemble.

The new habit of pleasing the girls who have to wear the cosmetics may be catching, because now some manufacturers have come up with a new idea in lipstick—fluorescent lip rouge.

For a long time girls have been complaining that new fall lipstick lights fade on their makeup. A girl could go to a football game looking like a dream and then go to dinner with her head and be confronted by lights which make her look positively ghastly.

Well, it's all supposed to be solved now. Fluorim has been added to lipsticks, and cosmetics claims say that this ingredient which makes the lipstick shimmer will also guarantee a true color from lightest sunlight to a bright light. So more funny tricks—fluorescent lighting.

Recently a young lady who had dyed red hair sat under the fluorescent lights and her hair took on a purple hue. This all has something to do with pigmentation. It will be a good thing if the industry takes this into consideration when it plans new makeup jobs.

Rollins College Makes Challenge For State Grid Title

Florida Nor Miami Could Trim Tars Says McDowell

Tars Have Ragged Offense But Have Superb Defense

ORLANDO, Oct. 21. (AP)—Veteran Coach Jack McDowell is "convinced that neither Florida nor Miami could score a single point" on his Rollins College Tars and feels that the University of Miami has no right to claim the State grid title until it defeats the Winter Park eleven.

McDowell, who has tutored Rollins teams since 1929, admits "we are really ragged on offense but we could still play either the Gators or the Hurricanes to a standstill. We are plenty ragged defensively and our backs under the center they are really good ball carriers."

"I don't see," the Tar coach declared, "how either Florida or Miami could claim the State college title without playing us. We tried to schedule them in this year and we'll still play them."

With the largest football squad in the school's history, the Tars so far this year have dropped a 13-0 decision to George Washington University and claimed a 20-0 victory over the Stetson latters.

McDowell blamed his team's admitted offensive raggedness on the fact that they had been in Washington for a week and a half before the season ends. "The winner of tomorrow's Florida-Miami game would like to settle the State championship question."

The T formation won't be stopped entirely this year," says Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame in a bylined article appearing in the November issue of True Magazine.

"The T has changed considerably during the past twenty years" continues Leahy. "The big difference is the man in motion. In addition many coaches who employ the T-formation are now spreading the lineman considerably. We believe this places a burden on the defense."

"A reason for less scoring is the fact that practically every coach in football has concentrated on learning the intricacies of the T-formation defense. Most coaches cannot master it completely in one year. In many instances it has taken two or three seasons. At the present time most coaches feel that they have finally mastered the rudiments and fundamentals which make the click. Now these same football mentors are turning the midnight oil in their efforts to devise ways and means of stopping this offense which has produced so many touchdowns during the past few seasons."

Coach Leahy concludes with "coaches will be much smarter defensively against the T during the current season than they have ever been before. Consequently there should be less scoring in 1946 than we have seen in previous years. However the T-formation will still enable coaches and teams to get touchdowns. The T will be slowed down considerably but never completely stopped."

Orange Bowl Odds
Can a team fail to complete a forward pass in the regulation 60 minutes of a football game and still score the winning touchdown on a pass after the official expiration of playing time? Well, it can be done! The U. of Miami did it in Florida's 1946 Orange Bowl game, with an intercepted Holy Cross pass after time had run out.

Under the rules, the game could not end as long as the ball was in action, although the regulation 60 minutes of play had been exceeded.

With less than ten seconds to go, Gene DiFilippo of Holy Cross launched a forward pass over the heads of onrushing Miami forwards from a point near mid-field in a desperate effort to untie the 6-6 score. The pass tipped Fran Parker's fingers and the falling leather seemed out of reach of any player. The game was apparently over. Then an orange ball flashed from the green in front of the Miami goal. Hudson made a running grab, and an eternity later gained control of the ball. He was off for the north sidelines on what is probably the No. 3 all-time thrill. Official time expired as he neared the Holy Cross 30, but the game wasn't over until he was safely into the end zone for a 14-0 Miami victory.

Hudson's historic run was another bizarre event to add to the growing list of incredible Orange Bowl happenings. In 12 years the Florida post-season football classic has produced more than its share of material for Robert L. Ripley. It was in the Orange Bowl in 1941 that Billy Jefferson of Mississippi State caught his own punt for a first down. The kick was almost straight up, and the ball hit with a crazy bounce which sent it spinning back into Jefferson's hands like a yo-yo. The startled Billy recovered in time to slide inside right-lackle for a needed first down.

SPORTS ODDITY

The football contract at the College of the Pacific in Stockton, Calif., names "well-loved Amos Alonzo Stagg as the head coach."

It doesn't say anything about another Stagg who is an interesting personality in Pacific's gridiron destiny. The personality is Mrs. Stagg. Ever since Stagg began coaching at the University of Chicago more than half a century ago, his wife has been a co-partner. She has kept complete files on all games played by Stagg teams. She charts every contest, keeps elaborate statistics and more than once turned her talents to scouting. For Mrs. Stagg, all this is a sideline activity to her main job of keeping a home and rearing a family. Several years ago grateful Pacific players presented Mrs. Stagg a special trophy in appreciation of her work and interest on behalf of the football team.

In the early days of baseball, pitching was a comparatively thankless job. The ball was so lively that many teams scored over one hundred runs per game, but the hurlers began to come into their own after June 21st, 1871—for that was the date the first one-hit game was pitched in the big time. A. F. Spaulding was the twirler who did the job, pitching for the Boston.

Coaches used to spend as much time setting up defenses to combat the point-after-touchdown specialist as they did in developing just such a performer for their own team. Perhaps the most unorthodox of all defenses was employed by Oregon State in its 1933 game with Oregon. When Oregon attempted to convert the extra point, Oregon State linemen boosted their six-foot-six inch center, Devine, up on their shoulders, and he reached out with his long arms and batted the ball to the ground.

Asked how to handle the hurler who runs the Cardinal when on the other team, Stengel replied: "Always throw one base ahead of those Cardinal runners and if you can make them slide, it's a moral victory."

Football is a rough, tough sport and any man who ever has jugged the ball knows how it feels to see a speedy, scintillating 200 pounder come roaring at him. One can only imagine how assistant coach Cecil Grigg of Rice Institute must have felt when he went racing down the field with the ball in a crucial game and suddenly found himself being chased by a real live bear.

It happened in a game between Texas and Austin College back in 1912, when Grigg was a star back for Austin. The bear was the Texas mascot and some of the students had made it a practice to wrestle with the animal, which would exhibit a few hits of its own.

In this particular game, Grigg broke loose and was in the clear. At the same time the bear jerked loose from its keeper and started in pursuit of the fleeing halfback. Grigg recalls the incident in these words "The bear actually made the tackle but he wasn't able to hold on, however, the Texas tacklers caught up with me and Texas won the game, 3 to 0. The Texas boys said it was all in fun, but it didn't seem very funny to me to

THE CLUBHOUSE

By JIM BECKER

NEW YORK—Marty Marion, the slim and smooth-fielding shortstop of the St. Louis Cards, has come forth with a plan for baseball's new "team fund plan."

Marion, whom sportswriters are wont to label "Mr. Shortstop" of the "Gophers," made an interesting point when he cleared:

"The public thinks all major league baseball players are rich. That's not right. Of course a few men make a lot of money, but the average player just gets by. When he gets through he has to start a new career."

The public misconception referred to by Marion is fostered by well-heeled ballplayers like Red Peller, Hank Greenberg, Joe M. Magallo and Babe Ruth.

Feller has piled up enough cash in his seven active major league years to be considered a wealthy man. His name has been linked with deals involving many minor league clubs, some classified as high as A.A. The fireballer's ambition is to own a major league team someday. Greenberg, Dimegio and Ruth, all high-salaried stars, are also plenty solvent.

But despite the ballplayer's reputation for being tough with a buck, the low-salaried major leaguers seldom find themselves with enough money at the end of their playing careers to retire. Some find jobs as coaches and managers but most, as Marion points out, are forced to turn to new fields. Grover Cleveland Alexander is one example. The great hurler who was a free spender during his years under the big top was located a few years back working with a flea circus on 42nd street in New York.

Under Marion's plan, a player who performed for five years in the majors would get $50 a month at age 45. If he played for six years he would get $60 and so on up to ten years and $100, the maximum. If the player waited until after 45 to collect the money he would get a larger sum.

Around $500,000 a year is needed to make the pension plan work. Each player will contribute $250 a year and the owners will match that. That adds up to $250,000 with the remainder coming from the radio rights to the World Series—some $175,000—another $405,000 from the All-Star proceeds, plus the dough taken in from inter-league games which are planned.

One flaw in the pension plan is that it doesn't extend to the minors as yet.

The smart way to wonder how college football ever got to be a big-time sport is to watch one of the contests after about a three-year absence. Take a recent college game in New York, for example.

After a summer of scribbling about major league baseball with its business-like manner and perfectionism, it is downright torturing to watch the collegians.

First, admission to the press box seems to be much easier to gain these days. It wasn't so long ago when, as a copy boy, I was hauled out of the Los Angeles Coliseum press stall three times while trying to pick up some copy from one of the writers. We missed the deadline by several minutes because the harried attendant wouldn't listen to my tale.

But at this game there were probably 30 working writers, and claimed the National Champion ranking.

This year promises to be no exception. Texas, with Dana X. Bible at the helm, has a powerhouse. Army is strong again, and Notre Dame has returned to the top rung. Army and Notre Dame will meet and their relative standings will be judged accordingly. But the great Texas eleven does little venturing outside its own conference.

Comparison scores usually mean very little in football—Siwash beats Slippery Rock 22-5, Slippery downs Pneumonia 61-6 and Pneumonia slaps Siwash 92-0.

The Big Nine kingdom often designates itself as National Champion, and that conference is the most guilty of not venturing out of its backyard. And often the first and second ranking teams in the loop don't even meet.

And let's see more baseball outfielders running into each other. Enough of this just catching the ball. We want some spirit out there.

Each weekend The Associated Press conducts a sportswriters poll to determine the leading college football eleven.

Texas, Army and Notre Dame are clustered at the top of the early standings this year. When the gridiron season is concluded the National Champion will be crowned again by the scribblers.

To point out the "matter of opinion" nature of the standings, it is interesting that in most of the past seven or eight years, at least two teams have

Jim Farley May Return To Active Political Role

Wallace Cabinet Ouster Likely to Lure Him Back

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Washington political observers are speculating that the ouster of Henry A. Wallace from the Truman cabinet and the president's backing of Secretary of State Byrnes in the recent foreign policy controversy may bring former Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley back into the official Democratic "family."

That possibility was raised by Farley's presence in Paris at the height of the Wallace-Byrnes cabinet crisis. Reports that Farley had a prominent hand in bringing the Democratic row to a conclusion with Wallace's dismissal were given little credence in Washington. But politicians nevertheless believed that Mr. Truman's 100 per cent support of Byrnes—a conservative like Farley—may have been enough to pave the way for "Big Jim" to resume an active political role.

Farley broke with the late President Roosevelt in 1940 over the third term issue. Now that the last of the original New Deal cabinet officers is gone, some persons believe Farley may be ready to lend his strength to the Democratic cause on a national scale.

Farley has maintained his thousands of party contacts throughout the country while serving as a traveling executive for a soft drink concern. He is credited with knowing more Democratic local leaders and workers in his time than anyone else in the party.

His active aid in the closely-fought congressional elections this year—and in the presidential battle ahead in 1948—conceivably have a decisive effect. What he will do is still Farley's secret.

OFFICIALS OF THE UNITED STATES and some of the Latin-American countries are growing increasingly unhappy over political developments south of the Rio Grande since the war ended.

They fear that the entire fabric developed under the late President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy and made more binding by the common dangers of hostility may be falling apart under the stresses of the peace.

State department experts avoid voicing their apprehension in public utterances but some of them privately evince concern. In public they note that more free elections have been held in South American countries than at any time in history, many of them—as in Brazil and Argentina—for the first time in years.

It is the apparent development of a cleavage between nationalistic and communistic ideologies between the two, democracy of the United States type apparently is being squeezed out.

The experts feel that something needs to be done to restore the democratic ideal but they can't find out what is to be done. One Latin-American authority just returned from a tour of the south-of-the-border countries claims that United States prestige has never been lower than now.

The Communists, as in most countries, are far better organized than any others save totalitarian regimes such as Argentina. As far as can be determined, they have no contact with the Soviet diplomatic service, now the most impressive of any in the Latin-American lands.

However, Communist policy follows closely the Soviet line, being received long-range by radio transmission. The United States plans to try to remedy the situation as soon as the European peace is settled, but that seems remote.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT investigating committees in Congress is scheduled to go out of existence this year because of a lack of funds with which to continue its work.

Important Committee Will Die

Senator Kilgore (D) of West Virginia has announced that his Senate military affairs subcommittee on war mobilization will close its doors Dec. 31 because of upper chamber opposition.

Kilgore himself now has a more important job, that of chairman of the Senate war investigating committee, a post in which he follows President Truman and Senator James Mead (D) of New York.

Finds Civilians Are To His Taste

CHEYENNE, Wyo., (AP)—Unconvinced by floods of complaints from his 1,100 members of the 2nd AAA searchlight battalion when he was a cook for that outfit, Ralph V. Doman obtained a veterans' administration loan of $2,000 and set up a hamburger shop at Lusk, Wyo. Thirty-six days later he paid off his loan, with the verdict: "Cooking for civilians is a lot better than cooking for G.I's."

Germans Cheered By Return of Rathaus

BREMEN, Germany, (AP)—Bremen's historic 500-year-old Rathaus once more is the seat of local German government here. The building, which was used by occupation forces, has been returned by American Military Government. The consolidated officers' mess remains in the basement however and some rooms will be used for American social events.

"The return of the building depicted a marked improvement in the feeling of German people toward our occupation forces," Military Government officials reported.

Waking Up Civic Spirits

PERCY, Ill., (AP)—Eight long loud blasts of the town siren startled Percy sleepers in the wee morning hours. When they collected in the public square they found an intoxicated citizen tipsily enjoying the furor. He told a justice of the peace he saw a broken fire hydrant and decided the alarm would bring someone to fix it. The magistrate fined him one dollar for each siren blast. Americans smoke about 250,000,000,000 cigarettes a year.

Adequate Service Depends on Adequate Earnings

Your Telephone Company is doing the largest volume of business in its history, yet telephone earnings continue to decline. The reason is perfectly clear. While your telephone rate has remained the same for many years, the costs of furnishing you service have increased. Wages, telephone materials, building costs, services; all have been going up so fast that—the amount of money Paid Out to provide service is increasing faster than the amount Taken In. Telephone earnings today are the lowest in our history—

It is basic with any business that good service depends on reasonable earnings. To provide good telephone service and to continually improve and expand it, reasonable earnings are essential. Our public duty demands that we give you these facts.
