BRIEFS

Suspect vehicle

LONGWOOD — Crime scene technicians from the Seminole County Sheriff's department are to examine a 1993 Honda Accord today. The vehicle was recovered at approximately 3 a.m. this morning from a house on Continental Boulevard near Longwood.

The car had reportedly been stolen in Orlando, and was in the process of being stripped when deputies located it at the house.

According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, one of the suspects arrested last night by Metro Bureau of Investigation (MBI) agents in Orange County, has reportedly indicated the vehicle may be connected with a homicide last year.

Additional details were not immediately revealed regarding the case.

Used car dealer arrested

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A local used car dealer was arrested on charges of sales tax theft Wednesday. Gustavo Montes De Oca, 36, owner of Montes Auto Sales, 1133 W. State Road 436, was arrested on third-degree grand theft. Following an investigation in cooperation with Seminole County Tax Collector Ray Valdes, agents with the Florida Department of Revenue accused De Oca with stealing $6,138 in sales taxes collected between Jan. 1992 and March 1994.

Phone lines

SANFORD — The main telephone lines of the 323 exchange going to the Sanford police station were inoperative for several hours early this morning. Although the outage prevented calls to the actual police station, Commander Dennis Whitmire said there were no difficulties in emergency calls placed in the 9-1-1 system.

Telephone company personnel were at the station early this morning, and the outage was expected to be repaired as soon as possible.

Residents sue county over college expansion plans

By VICKI BOGORIAN
Herald Staff Writer

OVIDO — In a rural area in extreme southeastern Seminole County near Lockwood Road and County Road 419, houses are scattered across the tree-filled landscape. Birds sing in the trees, loads creak in the ponds and an occasional scrub jay screams across the bushes.

It is a quiet area where a group of citizens has begun a brouhaha they hope will protect their pristine way of life.

Both Seminole Community College and the Seminole County school board are planning large-scale developments for the area that could bring as many as 12,500 cars a day through the neighborhood.

"This is an extremely rural residential neighborhood," said Sue Tzareff, a resident of the community. "A development of this type does not belong in this area."

Tzareff and fellow resident Debra Bradford have filed a suit against the Seminole County Board of County Commissioners alleging the county inappropriately granted a special exemption to the college for the development of land for their East Campus.

Attorney Dave Henry of the Orlando law firm of Taraska, Grower and Ketchum has taken on the case free of charge. Though he is also a resident of the neighborhood, he said he is doing the work pro bono because "a serious injustice has been

Gas leak under control

A contractor using a trenching machine to lay fiber optic cable out a gas line on U.S. Highway 17-92 causing the road to be shut down briefly Wednesday. Sanford Police Commander Dennis Whitmire said the equipment operator was trenching through a driveway at Tire Express, 2650 S. Orlando Drive. "It hit a gas line there. The gas company is Florida Public Utilities. They had to get the gas company out to do something with the gas line and they had to shut the road down. We thought we were going to have to reroute traffic for quite awhile," Whitmire said, "but it turned out that they had everything under control within 30 minutes." City firefighters called police at 10:12 a.m. "We arrived at 10:20 and the road was back open at 10:50," Whitmire said. ## Wrestling comes to Sanford

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Drop kicks, arm bars, spike pile drivers and clothe-lines are just some of the moves to be seen Saturday night at the Sanford Civic Center when "Statewide" Pro-wrestling comes to town.

Fight promoter Stormin' Norman of Auburn has been in the fight game about three years, promoting matches around Tampa, Winter Haven, Hudson and Vero Beach. The civic center, usually the site of pancake breakfasts, craft and quilt shows will be transformed into a wrestling venue, with ring-side and general seating.

Hometown fans are in store for a treat when retired wrestler and Sanford native The Black Irishman (also known as Charles McMillin) serves as coach in the Tag Team Grudge Match between Navy Seal and G-man and the Motor City Bad Boys, managed by Nasty Ronnie.

Horace Boulder, "Statewide's" heavyweight title champion will wrestle The Professor, managed by Nasty Ronnie. Boulder is Hulk Hogan's nephew.

The event will feature a 14-man "over the top rope" match where the wrestlers compete for the chance to wrestle Boulder for his title. The only way to leave the ring is to be thrown over the ropes. The

Lake Mary keeps growing

By NICK PPOWAP
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Lake Mary is not just growing. It is exploding.

Five separate items under consideration by city commissioners tonight deal specifically with plans for growth and/or expansion within the city limits. Two of them deal with proposed residential developments, which could add as many as 488 new homes within the city limits.

The others involve major industries already in existence but seeking to expand, totaling a proposed addition of possibly 480,000 square feet of space.

Another item calls for the re-establishment of former hospital property.

The following items are all scheduled for discussion and/or consideration.

Strang Communications — The commission will be considering sidewalk and roadway improvements for an expansion of the Strang Communications facility at 800 Rinehart Road. Strang has submitted a site plan which shows the addition of 30,000 square feet of office space and

Countywide recycling collections increase

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Countywide recycling collections increased slightly between October and November, according to a county report released yesterday.

A total of 7.3 million lbs. of garbage were separated for recycling in November, up from 6.8 million lbs. in October. The largest increase was in the amount of commercial recyclable materials collected from cities and unincorporated areas. Those collections increased from about 200,000 lbs. to 700,000 lbs.

Yard waste collections declined slightly, from 3.2 million lbs. to 3 million lbs.

The Seminole County Recycling Office produces reports on monthly recycling collections.

Unincorporated recycling collections totaled 2.1 million lbs. In November, only a slight decline from the 2.2 million lbs. collected

SANFORD — If that jar of prune juice seems a bit more costly, it is. Beginning this past Sunday, the state's advance disposal fee increased from one cent to two pennies on some product containers. The Legislature called for the increase on packaging materials which did not meet established recycling goals. The application of the fee can be confusing. The fee is still charged on most imported glass containers, but not domestic glass. Steel and aluminum containers are exempt. Most plastic containers are exempt, except the kind of plastic typically used on gallon milk containers issued with store brand labels. The fee is designed to encourage manufacturers to use more recycled products in their packaging. The fee is not related to Seminole County's recycling rates, which are high for many non-exempted materials.

Girl boarding school bus killed

SANTA ROSA BEACH — A 9-year-old girl was killed when she was hit by a semitrailer truck as she attempted to board a school bus.

Dawn Marie Bonds was crossing busy U.S. Highway 98 in front of the bus Wednesday morning, Florida Highway Patrol troopers said in a news release.

The truck had gone around the bus, which had its warning lights flashing and stop sign extended, troopers said. Charges against the driver, John Hardy, 61, of Freeport, were pending.

The victim lived nearby in this Florida Panhandle community and was a student at Freeport Elementary School.

Accused drug smuggler extradited

MIAMI — A woman who prosecutors say teamed up with her husband to smuggle $756 million worth of cocaine and marijuana into the United States has been extradited from Switzerland.

Sheila Miriam Arana de Nasser made her first court appearance Wednesday and was ordered held until Jan. 18 for a pretrial detention hearing. Her husband, Julio Nasser, who was indicted with her in Miami last March, is believed to be in Barranquilla, Colombia, where one of that nation's drug cartels operates.

Nasser also has outstanding indictments dating back to 1988, said Jim Shedd, spokesman for the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency in Miami.

The two are charged with conspiracy to import 58,000 pounds of cocaine and 3 million pounds of marijuana between 1974 and 1994.

They face life in prison if convicted.

It is illegal under Colombian law to extradite a foreign national to the United States. Investigations in Colombia have shown that drug traffickers bribed members of Colombia's constitutional assembly who were writing a new constitution several years ago to include a clause banning extraditions.

Bush returns to presidency

MIAMI — Jeb Bush, two months past his defeat in his race for governor, has rejoined the Codina Group as president and chief operating officer, the real estate development company said.

The son of President Bush took breaks from the Miami company in July 1996 to make his first run for public office and for two years to serve as state commerce secretary, but otherwise had been with Codina since 1990.

Bush said it was "very satisfying" to return to his old real estate career.

"He is an important part of our history, I wish he had never left and I'm very glad that he's back," founding chairman Armando Codina, who called Bush his best friend, said Wednesday.

FAA blamed for crash of cargo plane

ORLANDO — The crash of a small plane that killed its pilot has been partly blamed on a lack of oversight by the Federal Aviation Administration of an Orlando air cargo company.

A final report by the National Transportation Safety Board said cargo on the twin-engine Piper that crashed and burned near Orlando Executive Airport was 331 pounds overweight, and one of its fuel injectors was clogged.

The NTSB criticized the FAA in the Nov. 12, 1996, crash for failing to keep a watchful eye on Cherokee Express Air Cargo, which has had 10 crashes that killed five people since 1986.

Cherokee, which files bank checks and documents throughout Florida, has been fined three times for uncorrected federal rules violations since 1987.

Shortly after the plane crash that killed pilot Patricia May, 28, FAA inspectors found that cargo for the Cherokee flights wasn't being weighed, records on the loads weren't being kept and pilots were failing to follow the company operating manual.

Cherokee did not comment on the report.

French rue an American road again

DESTIN — Six months of mispronouncing and misspelling "Rue St. Jean de Lus" has been enough for Destin officials.

The city council voted Tuesday night to return the street, which had been renamed in honor of Destin's sister city in France, to its original designation: Two Trees Road.

For many residents of this Florida Panhandle resort town it became simply "that road" after the street in front of the new city hall received its French name.

"People can't say it," said Planning and Zoning Director Jane Moore. "Most people around here have a problem with French."

The first part of the name, the French word for street, is pronounced "roo" as in ruler. St. Jean de Lus should be pronounced "Sant (rhymes with want) John (drag out the J) de loe."

Escapees could be close to prison Police keep busy chasing inmate sightings

By The Associated Press

BELLE GLADE — Authorities believe five escaped murderers are hiding out in sugar cane fields within 20 miles of the Glades Correctional Institution as reports of sightings keep officers busy.

Authorities stepped up the manhunt around 10:30 p.m. EST Wednesday after a driver spotted two men walking along the highway late at night. After the car whizzed by, nearly striking the men, they dove into the cane fields where police dogs later tried to pick up the scent.

A Glades spokeswoman said early today that there was still no sign of any of the men, who burrowed their way to freedom Monday in a tunnel stretching from the prison chapel under the prison fence. A sixth inmate was caught.

Officials believe the five escapees were still within the 20-mile radius of the facility in Western Palm Beach County after finding clothing belonging to two of the inmates. They increased the search area to 30 miles Wednesday.

A mud-colored denim jacket labeled "H River" was found in a cane field near the prison. Hector River is one of the escapees. And officials said they found the uniform pants of Florencio Alvarez within five miles of the prison.

"It suggests we are on the right track," Glades Superintendent Gerald Abdul-Wal said Wednesday. "We're pretty optimistic we'll catch them. We've had some people who have seen them in prison blues."

Numerous calls have been received from residents living near the sugar cane fields, saying items were missing from their clotheslines.

Police investigated several false sightings of the convicts Wednesday, including one in which a boy in South Bay told police he saw one of the killers at a Quik-Stop convenience store. Police checked the store, but no one matching the descriptions was there, said Cpl. Dominick Spavento.

When the boy's mother later saw a picture of the fugitives on the television news, she recognized one of the men, Spavento said.

No roadblocks or checkpoints had been set up along highways by Wednesday, Abdul-Wal said, and none would be unless there is a report of a car theft by a Hispanic-looking man.

Abdul-Wal, who was transferred to the prison 10 months ago after a series of escapes while he was superintendent at Polk Correctional Institution, was frustrated by the breakout. In his new post, he has ordered mock escape drills, including two in the last two months.

Bulging prisons strain security

By Bill Sandstrom, Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Glades Correctional Institution might have blocked the escape of six tunneling inmates if it had finished security measures now under construction, Florida's top corrections official says.

"I believe it would have," Corrections Secretary Harry Singletary said Wednesday. "As we all here we are putting in double fences, 10 rolls of razor wire, a new security alarm system and concrete pads."

Those are part of $2.7 million worth of security improvements the Department of Corrections is making at Florida prisons, Singletary said.

Construction was under way at Glades, where five men remained at large today following their escape Monday through a tunnel under a fence. A sixth man was caught.

Lawmakers last year approved security upgrades for older prisons and new building construction to contain a swelling inmate population.

This year, the department will ask for money to hire more officers to guard the more violent offenders who are being kept longer with less chance of early release.

Gov. Lawton Chiles has pledged that criminals entering prison this year will serve 75 percent of their jail time. That's up from the average 45 percent criminals leaving the system serve.

In the 1993-94 fiscal year that ended June 30, Florida's average inmate population grew to 53,894 in 49 major state prisons and 82 smaller facilities.

And escapes, after being cut from a peak of 1,840 in 1987-88 to 211 by 1991-92, were on the rise again, to 324 in the latest fiscal year.

Insurer cutting 20,000 policies of homeowners in Tampa area

By The Associated Press

TAMPA — Insurance officials are criticizing plans by Allstate Corp. to cancel 20,000 homeowners policies in the Tampa Bay area.

Allstate fears it could face $3 billion in claims if a storm similar to Hurricane Andrew hit the Tampa Bay area. It wants to bring the potential loss down to $1 billion.

The fallout from Andrew — which cost Allstate $2.7 billion and all insurers $18.5 billion — will leave 10 percent of the company's customers in a six-county area looking for coverage starting April 26.

"We have got to bring our exposure to monster hurricanes down," said Allstate spokeswoman Leslie Chapman-Henderson. "We have simply too much hurricane exposure in certain areas, and we've got to take some steps to correct it."

The cuts come on top of 32,000 policies canceled by Allstate in South Florida since the 1993 storm. All were outside the $2.5 billion cap that generated damage claims.

State Insurance Commissioner Bill Nelson said Wednesday he was trying to determine if Allstate's cancellations violates state limits on nonrenewals.

The Legislature barred companies from canceling more than 10 percent of its policies within a county in a year; the moratorium extends until November 1998.

"Policy holders affected are solid consumers whose only insurance problem is that they happen to live in a part of Florida where Allstate is overexposed to the threat of heavy hurricane damages," Nelson said. "We've already identified this problem as a priority concern."

Monte Belote, executive director of Florida Consumer Action Network, accused Allstate of being greedy. "Whatever happened to the good hands people?" he said, referring to the company's advertising slogan. "It seems instead they've become the greed hands people. And this is right after the first of the year ... people haven't even gotten their holiday bills yet. And 20,000 people will have to get new homeowners insurance."

Prices have been going up as bankruptcies, sales restrictions and insurers' withdrawals from Florida crimped availability. Allstate got a 50 percent rate hike in 1993, and six of the 10 largest home insurers have filed for increases.

A joint underwriting association, an insurer of last resort created by the state to help homeowners unable to find other coverage, now has 700,000 customers, compared to 980,000 for Allstate, the state's second largest insurer.

Beauty queen sentenced to prison

By MICHAEL PEARSON
Associated Press Writer

LEWISBURG, W.Va. — A former beauty queen who had armed herself with a pistol, lighter fluid and butcher knife and tried to kill the parents of a romantic rival cried quietly and insisted she wasn't a threat to anyone.

"There's no reason to fear me," Tracy Lippard told Circuit Judge Charles Lobban on Wednesday. "I just want to go on with my life."

Lobban disagreed. Calling her actions a frightening crime that could not be tolerated, he sentenced Lippard to two years in prison.

Lippard, 23, a 6-foot blonde from Newport News, Va., had faced up to 6 1/2 years in prison for seven misdemeanor convictions, including two counts of second-degree attempted murder.

Last February, the night after she was crowned Miss Williamsburg, Va., Lippard embarked on a 350-mile journey to the Lewisburg home of Rodney and Lynn Weikle.

Lippard and the Weikles' daughter, Melissa, had been dating the same man, Todd Scott. Melissa Weikle was pregnant with Scott's child at the time of the attack.

Lippard said she went to the Weikle home to confront Scott after he didn't show up at the pageant. She had dedicated a song to him.

Authorities said Lippard bluffed her way into the Weikles' home, cracked Weikle on the head with a hammer and pointed a gun at his wife, Weikle, a former Secret Service agent, put her in a headlock and disarmed her.

Lippard said she became enraged when Weikle told her Scott planned to marry his daughter. The marriage took place in August.

Making room for progress

The items being presented these days before the Lake Mary Planning and Zoning Board and city commission regarding proposed growth are impressive. Developers are asking for approvals on new residential communities, and prominent businesses are seeking to expand.

The growth potential in the immediate future for Lake Mary appears to be outstanding. It may appear as though everything is coming up roses for that city.

People often question why Lake Mary can undertake such growth and appear to continuously improve its tax base while Sanford apparently cannot. The answer is that there is more available space in Lake Mary. It is a much newer incorporated city, and has a great deal more undeveloped land.

Sanford is what many people refer to as almost built-out.

Herein lies a paradox. Sanford, its elected officials and city staff would like to see growth of residential and business communities similar to what Lake Mary is experiencing. They would especially like to see an increase in tax-producing development.

Yet the city is full of very old houses and very old business buildings. Call them historic if you will, but they are, nonetheless, old, and in many cases, to reuse them for new housing or new business would take more investment than to create new structures.

If there were some way to do so, (and let it be made clear, this is not our suggestion), what if it were decided to bulldoze or burn any structure over 50 years old which had not already been rebuilt or refurbished and was in dire need of it? Only structures that do not have historical significance might be considered. Thousands of people would scream and shout that we are destroying our heritage and history.

Yet how many thousands of people would benefit if such clearing out were done, and new buildings began to bring more money into the city treasury with which to pay for street repaving, water and sewer improvements, increased law enforcement, and many other benefits which economically strong cities have.

Historians like to see the old homes which were once the pride of Sanford. We commend their efforts to keep them looking attractive and preserve them for years to come.

There is a time however, when buildings, (homes or businesses) reach such an age and state that to preserve them is foolhardy.

Eventually, Sanford will have some of this area to use once again. While we certainly hope it is not the case, hurricanes, tornadoes or major fires could force the city into this position.

We believe it's time Sanford began looking at when to reap and when to sow. If not, we can expect to continue having old buildings remain vacant, and less and less new life in the city. No one would want that to happen.

As for Lake Mary and its growth, we urge caution. The growth and development which is so widely appreciated today, is similar to that in Sanford several decades ago. Don't allow the city to drown in its own acid.

A third political party in '96?

Former senator Paul Taongas stirred a certain amount of interest recently with his suggestion that a new party be formed to participate in the 1996 presidential election. He even has a nominee to propose: Gen. Colin Powell.

Actually, Sen. Taongas isn't even the first prominent person to suggest the possibility of a third party in 1996. Ross Perot has been hunting at the same thing for several months. His most recent formulation of the idea runs roughly as follows: "We gave the Democrats their chance in 1992, and now we're giving the Republicans a chance. If they mess up, we'll have a third party in 1996." No prizes for guessing who its nominee will be.

Varying state laws used to make it all but impossible for a new party to get on the ballot in enough states to matter. The first person in recent history to get on the ballot in all 50 was George Wallace in 1968, and he succeeded only by persuading the Supreme Court that Ohio's election laws were unconstitutional.

Since then, however, the states have tended to reduce the obstacles to putting third parties on the ballot, and it can be assumed that any party that nominates Colin Powell or Ross Perot can get on the ballot in all 50.

But could Powell or Perot win on such a basis?

Powell is a formidably popular figure, and Taongas is clearly calculating that his popularity, coupled with a comfortably centrist position on most issues and a grim determination to reduce the federal deficit, would attract enough voters to edge out the nominees of the two traditional parties.

But last November's elections suggest that the public is not in the mood for popular centrists just now. The voters seem to want somebody as disgusted with Washington as they are. And that, Ross Perot must be thinking, is where he comes in.

Don't forget that Perot, despite a dismayingly on-again-off-again performance, and without a party behind him that could field candidates for Congress, managed to take 19 percent (or nearly one in five) of the voters away from Bush and Clinton in 1992.

Whether he can do that again in 1996, however, or even come close to it, depends heavily on the performance of the 104th Congress now just getting under way on Capitol Hill.

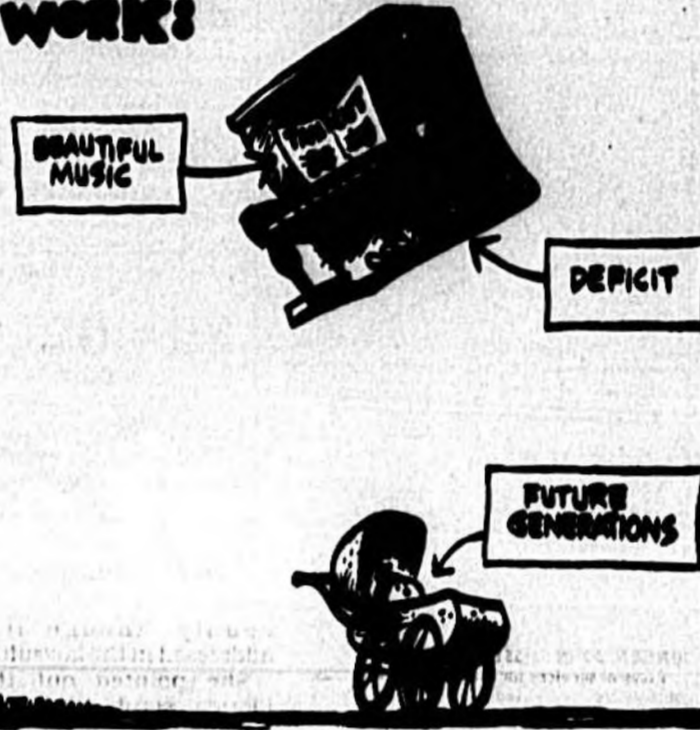

The new Republican Congress is the voters' latest attempt to correct what is wrong with their country, and it seems clear that at least the Republican majority in the House knows this and is prepared to take drastic actions on a whole series of fronts. Whether the House's proposed reforms can pass the Senate, however -- a body more accustomed to compromise, and with a Republican majority that includes some notoriously spineless "moderates" -- is another question.

However, the pressure on majority leader Dole and the Senate's Republican "moderates" to go along with Speaker Gingrich and the House Republicans will be ferocious. With any luck, therefore, the GOP should be able to go before the voters in 1996 with the proud claim that it not only heard but largely obeyed the message of the 1994 elections.

But could Powell or Perot win on such a basis?

Stamp price: Junk mail at fault

It's only three cents. A mere pittance, when compared to the national debt or even a T-bone steak (close to the national debt). But when you compare it at its source -- the U.S. first class postage stamp -- it's a shade over a ten percent (10%) increase in cost. Still not earthshaking, by any means, but according to my math (if this old duffer can still figure simple math), it's about three hundred percent (300%) more than the retired folks COLA increase granted -- 3.6%.

Not too many months ago, the news media covered Postmaster General Marvin Runyon's revelation that the U.S. Post Office wants an increase of FCP from twenty nine cents (.29) to thirty-two cents (.32), probably early in 1995. Post cards also will be hit for the same three cents (.03) from nineteen cents to twenty one cents. Third and fourth class mail would also take a 10.2-13.2% hit.

There is, however, a "slight" difference between 13.2% of 6.9, 7.4, 8.5, 9.64 costs of junk mail and 10% of 394-FCP. Still not earthshaking. More like a hemorrhoid -- with the pain in the same location.

I still fully realize that so many of you "still wet behind the ears" youngsters out there in Never-Never-Land simply cannot appreciate this, but I can remember years ago when three cents (.03) was the cost of taking a first class letter to Cousin Hanna, way out in California. No ... "your" cousin Hanna. I don't have a cousin Hanna. Honest!!

Wasn't it only a small handful of years ago that the U.S. Postal Service sponsored the world Olympics held somewhere or other? Can't help wondering -- more than a little -- just where all those billions of dollars came from. Could it possibly be from all those first class stamps that you and I have been buying for all these years? I'll bet that you, and you there in the chair, and -- yes -- even you hiding over there in the corner, didn't even suspect that ALL-OF-YOU subsidized those Olympics.

I don't want anyone out there in Readerland to think for a moment that I'm down on our postal workers -- gals as well as guys -- behind the counters or in the trucks. No way. For the most part, they do one whole of a job, sometimes under very adverse conditions. I do question -- very strenuously -- just how far "first class postage" should go in subsidizing what most of us classify as "junk mail."

You know -- junk mail! Four times the size and five times the weight of our "less than one ounce" first class letter and probably at roughly one-fourth of our cost. Let's see now. Using "idiot math" we multiply their 4 times size by 5 times weight by our 4 times cost ... and we get 4x5x4 equals 80 for them against 1 for us first class mail users. Not bad 'ah -- 80 to 1 their favor. Ain't it just great?

SEMINOLE OPINION

Maybe -- just maybe -- if we had tons upon tons less junk mail clogging the automatic sorters and mail trucks, we just might have a 10-12 cent first class stamp cost -- with two deliveries per day. Don't laugh! Remember that three cent FCP stamp? Well, with it, we DID have two deliveries per day in the city. Also, if it was posted in the morning, it was delivered that afternoon -- not 3-4 days later.

Yes, my friends, we've come a long way in the last 40 to 50 years. I'm not all that sure just how much of it is good or even good for us. It often seems like much of our change is simply change for change sake. You know, much akin to fancier product packaging with "New and Improved" headlining the label.

Well, what do you know? NO fire! No brimstone! I don't even recall using a single hell or damn this time. Oh no! It couldn't be! Don't tell me that I'm getting a bit mellow in my old age. Anything but that.

Worst of all, you don't have anything to sink your teeth into or to puff on for awhile. Sorry ... guess you'll just have to nibble around the edges. Careful now ... watch out for paper cuts, they're hellish.

(OH-OH)
Sorry about that, guys 'n gals. My tongue got caught up on my eye tooth and I couldn't see what I said. And I tried so hard not to cuss -- even a little one -- and to use only totally acceptable language.

Dog-gone it!! Maybe it is true after all. Maybe old Grandpa "is" getting a bit mellow in his old age.

A few worries entering new year

As we enter the second half of the 1994-1995 worrying season, I would like to call attention to two items that, year after year, continue to prove themselves reliable sources of anxiety for Serious Worriers.

(Normal People, by which I mean those who seldom worry about anything more cosmic than whether Letterman is getting better ratings than Leno, probably cannot appreciate what I am about to impart to my fellow Serious Worriers and may want to skip on down to paragraph six.)

The first item is asteroids. They are a constant threat, these great masses of stuff that whiz through space and sometimes crash into planets. On May 20, 1993, an asteroid measuring 30 feet in diameter passed within 90,000 miles of Earth. Another asteroid the size of a school bus flew by last month at a distance of 65,000 miles. Will a chunk of space rock slam into Earth and throw up a cloud that will block the sun and create a new Ice Age that will wipe out life as we know it?

The second item is the Leaning Tower of Pisa. It got out of kilter as it was being built eight centuries ago and has been threatening to fall over ever since. In 1990, it listed another .04 of an inch, but then a group of engineers piled 600 tons of lead at the base of the tower to act as a counterweight, and the thing straightened up half an inch. Serious Worriers around the world brooded over the loss of a staple source, but then came a miracle. A foot-wide chunk of stone fell off! The tower is crumbling! Will it fall completely apart?

Let's hear it for heavenly bodies and tilting turrets.

For those who are not familiar with the worrying business, I should explain that the official Worrying Season runs from Labor Day to Christmas, picks up again on New Year's Day and goes until Memorial Day. During this period, Serious Worriers pace the floor, pondering such esoteric matters as, "Who owns Antarctica?" One of the most unsettling matters of recent years, to give you an example, was the news that cremation is polluting the air with vaporized mercury from dental fillings.

Are you wondering if you are a Serious Worrier? Check the following inventory of things SWs are fretting about as we enter the new year. If any three of them give you that iron-fat-in-the-belly feeling, you could be a major-league worrier:

Long-term users of mouthwashes that contain more than 25 percent alcohol are more likely to get oral cancer.... Your cat may be a bubonic plague carrier.... Thanks to cutbacks in pesticide use, black widow spiders have been found hiding in the grapes at the supermarket.... Homemade ice cream and cookie batter may contain salmonella enteritidis, and that could kill you.... Too much aspirin can give you ulcers, too much Tylenol can damage your liver, too much Advil can cause kidney failure.

The pantyhose industry could suffer because more women are dressing casually and buying less hosiery.... Drowsy drivers may be causing as many accidents as drunk drivers.... Fewer teen-agers are getting the exercise they need for healthy living.... The number of American farms has fallen from 8.8 million in 1935 to 1.9 million in 1994.... The trucking industry is suffering from a driver shortage.... The American Medical Association says there will soon be a glut of doctors.

I would like to call attention to two items that, year after year, continue to prove themselves reliable sources of anxiety for Serious Worriers.

Got a drive-in store

A car jumped the curb in the parking lot yesterday afternoon, and ran into the side of Tip Super Market, at 1190 W. 19th Street. There was an estimated $1,000 damage to the building. Sanford police Commander Donnie Whitmire said the 1983 Ford, driven by Willie Brown Jr., 18, of Seventh Street, had pulled into the parking lot but Brown reportedly hit the accelerator rather than the brake pedal, and the car jumped over a curb. Whitmire said two men, reportedly standing next to the building, Arceus Allen, 25, and John Bevrill, 23, both of Sanford, received minor injuries as a result of the accident. No one required hospitalization. Whitmire said no charges have been made in connection with the case.

done here" and because "my clients are right."

Henry said the suit was filed only after the commission and SCC failed to heed the vocal objections of residents.

"We desperately tried to get them to listen and to not do this, but they didn't," he said.

The 50-page brief filed by Henry alleges that, among other things, the county commission did not follow the Seminole County Land Development Code. It says they failed to require the college to file a master plan; that they incorrectly determined that the development of the property would be consistent with the neighborhood; that the presence of gopher tortoises, identified by engineers hired by SCC, was ignored; and that there is evidence to suggest that at least one county commissioner engaged in improper ex parte communication with representatives of the college.

Tsareff said she is most perturbed by the absence of a master site plan.

"How can I argue specifics when there are no specifics to argue," she said.

She maintains that, though the college has denied it, the East Campus is bound to become a "feeder school" for the University of Central Florida, which is located a few miles to the south.

In addition to the students the college is projecting to enroll in classes there, Tsareff said, she believes many UCF students will take classes there, adding to the traffic congestion the college is projecting will occur.

She said that she has taken part in nearly 20 hours of debate at county commission meetings.

"It is not only my right, but also my duty (to complain)," she said.

SCC is not named in the suit, but college spokesman Craig Orsco describes the college as an "affected observer watching to see what happens."

While the county is embroiled in the lawsuit over the land the college plans to develop, the Seminole County school board is planning to close the sale on a piece of property located diagonally across Lochwood Road from the college site.

Tsareff said that site was also approved improperly by the county, though it is not addressed in the lawsuit.

She pointed out that rare Florida scrub jays have been spotted on the property and the county should have taken that ecological factor into consideration before approving the zoning change and the development of the land.

While the jays are rarer than the people in this remote area, the group of residents says they are essential to the eco-system and further development in the area would threaten the birds remaining environment in the county.

The school has no plans to even begin development of the land for another half-decade.

"We aren't even closing on the property until at least next week," said Cindy Horden of the district's facilities planning office.

Yvonne Francker, an environmental consultant to the school district, said there is a confirmed pair of scrub jays on the land and that all the appropriate agencies have been "aware of their presence for several years."

The pair has not reproduced and the vegetation on the land in question is at a growth stage "beyond its prime." In other words, by the time the school district actually gets around to using the land, the birds will probably be gone.

If they are not, she said, the appropriate agencies will be engaged to ensure the school disrupts their environment as little as possible.

Meanwhile the residents' suit against the county will make its way through the system and, Henry hopes, the courts will tell the county what he and his clients have been trying to tell them all along: they can not ignore their own rules when approving a development.

11,850 square feet of warehouse space. That was received by the commission on Dec. 2.

The latest consideration regards Strang's commitment to pay one-half of the costs for constructing a sidewalk, and an access road, providing the property owner to the south of the area pays the other half.

Fluorfen - A site plan for Phase One of a three-phase development plan proposed by Fluorfen Corporation has been submitted. Fluorfen, located on Lake Emma Road at the corner of Emma Oaks Trail, has announced plans to build a 480,000 square foot office/manufacturing/warehouse facility on 89 acres of land.

Phase One of the project would involve 844,000 square feet of warehouse/distribution area.

Florida Hospital - A request is to take over the abandoned Care Unit of Orlando, at 1087 Sand Pond Road and use it as hospital offices, medical clinic, and for outpatient treatment and services.

Florida Hospital is not proposing any building or pavement additions. The site would not be a full-fledged hospital.

The building was originally approved as a lock-down drug and alcohol rehabilitation center, but it closed approximately three years ago.

Pulte Homes - The commission will be considering a final planned urban development (PUD) and preliminary subdivision plan for Huntington Palms, to be developed by Pulte. The property consists of 47 acres at the southwest corner of Emma Oaks Trail and Lake Emma Road.

According to the city's present development codes, a total of 188 units could be constructed on the property. Pulte has suggested building the development in two phases. The preliminary subdivision plan and final PUD were approved by the city's planning and zoning board on Dec. 18.

Olympia Homes - The commission will be considering a preliminary PUD for Olympia Homes, (Woodbridge), on the east side of Rinehart Road, directly north of Lennar Homes' Mandariv PUD.

Olympia is seeking to utilize 107 acres of land. Although city codes, under certain conditions, would allow up to 331 total units, plans from Olympia presently call for 280 units.

All of these items are scheduled for tonight's commission meeting beginning at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

Republicans serious about reshaping

WASHINGTON — A frantic first day of floor votes and revelry behind them, Republicans dominating Congress are out to show President Clinton and Democrats they are serious about their quest to reshape government.

Leaders of both parties planned to meet with Clinton at the White House today, a day after a jubilant GOP assumed control of the House and Senate for the first time in 40 years. But even before visiting the president, top Republicans from both chambers made their intentions clear.

New Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., promised spending slashes, lower taxes and an end to laws that impose environmental and other costly requirements on states and local governments without the money to pay for them.

"Retiring in our government will be my mandate, and I hope it will be the purpose and principal accomplishment of the 104th Congress," Dole said, shortly after lawmakers kicked off their year's business Wednesday.

Dream Team pulls punch

LOS ANGELES — After mounting virtually every legal attack possible, O.J. Simpson's legal Dream Team has finally pulled a punch.

Simpson's lawyers announced Wednesday that they won't try to keep the jury from seeing the heart and soul of the prosecution's case: results of DNA tests on blood found at the crime scene and in Simpson's Ford Bronco.

The risky tactic saves Simpson a half-million dollars or more and pushes his double-murder trial onto the fast track. Opening statements, which could have started as late as March, may now begin by the end of this month.

But the move also denies Simpson a potential issue for appeal if he is convicted: He would not be able to argue that genetic evidence was improperly admitted.

WORLD BRIEFS

Only minor gunfire

NAZRAN, Russia — Only minor gunfire was heard today in Grozny, the fog-bound capital of rebel Chechnya, after President Boris Yeltsin suspended air raids on the city. For both sides, it was a respite from days of ferocious fighting.

A senior Russian official, however, claimed Grozny could be in Russian hands without a battle by tonight. Russian fighter jets and helicopters buzzed the breakaway southern republic and more troops arrived today, the sixth day of Russia's bungled campaign to reassert its authority.

Chechnya, a predominately Muslim republic of 1.2 million people on Russia's southern border, declared independence in 1991.

Yeltsin's press service had said the bombing of Grozny would halt at midnight Wednesday. He made the announcement under intense criticism from foreign governments and after apparently random bombings killed at least 100 civilians.

Wacky English

TOKYO — Eye-rinse your teeth with Mouth Jazz? Read an issue of Big Tomorrow, or the Lettuce Club? Curl up with a Life Delicious blanket?

In Japan, lots of people do — thanks to legions of advertising executives who concoct slogans in eye-catching, often goofy English.

The resulting linguistic creations invoke enticement, if somewhat bizarre imagery — like Meltykiss chocolates — or appetite-killers like Pocar Sweet soft drinks.

There is no end to the Japanese fascination with mangled, mind-bending English.

Part of the reason is cachet. English lends an air of sophistication and worldliness, even if the words make little sense to a native speaker. Jackets and T-shirts with random English phrases are a common sight.

One man up front, another in back

By WALTER R. MEARS
An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON — It was an hour of historic change, of celebration, myth and sentiment so compelling that the toughest Republican said his emotions might move him to tears in his triumph.

And one man, standing off the House floor far from the gavel of power, symbolized it all.

Smiling, giving an autograph here, an embrace there, Robert Michel, congressman no more, watched as the GOP majority that always had eluded him took control in the House where he'd served 38 years.

So when the House elected the first Republican speaker in 40 years, it was Michel who stood and watched, and Newt Gingrich, his ambitious deputy, who took the gavel.

"This is a historic moment," said Gingrich. "I feel overwhelmed in every way." But not so overwhelmed that he didn't accuse the new minority Democrats of threatening cheap, narrow, pathetic political gimmicks against his overhaul of House rules.

Moments before, he'd said he wasn't sure how open and emotional he could afford to let himself be about his ascendancy. "I don't want to break down," he said.

He didn't.

Nor did the other players in the first passage of House power since 1955.

"With partnership but with purpose, I pass this great gavel of our government," said Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, now the minority leader, although with more votes on his depleted roster than the Republicans ever held in their long exile from power.

"With resignation but with resolve, I hereby end 40 years of Democratic rule of this House," Gephardt said.

Senators, who used to put on the opening day show, came to watch this one across the Capitol. Now there was at least a trace of envy, at the power and prestige of Speaker Gingrich. The House is getting more attention, Senate Republicans said, but they've an aggressive agenda too.

Twice before in the post-World War II era, Republicans had won Congress, only to lose power two years later. Not now, said Sen. Bob Dole, the new majority leader, not after being penned up in the minority for so long.

Dole walked over to see Gingrich installed. So did Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, already running for the 1996 GOP nomination to challenge President Clinton, unseen, all but unmentioned as Congress changed custody.

It was Gingrich who marched the center aisle, to a standing ovation, Republican cheers, restrained but proper Democratic applause, shaking hands on a ceremonial march like those of presidents come to address Congress.

Clinton will, later this month, with his State of the Union message. The cliché is that the president proposes and Congress disposes. Not this Congress, with Republicans dominant.

"A lot of people didn't think it would happen in their lifetime," Gingrich had said. It didn't. Only 16 percent of the Americans now living were old enough to vote the last time Republicans won the House. About 59 percent have been born since they lost it.

Michel served longer in the minority than anyone ever had, 19 terms, beginning two years too late to join the last GOP majority, retiring one election too soon to be part of this one.

So he stood at the rear, off the floor, behind the ralling, meeting, greeting, a witness, not a player. Stood there until Gingrich summoned him down the aisle, toward the seat so long his own.

"He wasn't sure he should be here at all, and then he thought he was going to hide in the back of the room, and then I insisted he come down front," the new speaker said. "A man who genuinely cares about, and loves the House and who represents the best spirit of the House," Gingrich said.

A man to be emulated, he said, although previously Gingrich had deemed Michel too pliable, too conciliatory, too willing to accept the lot of the outnumbered.

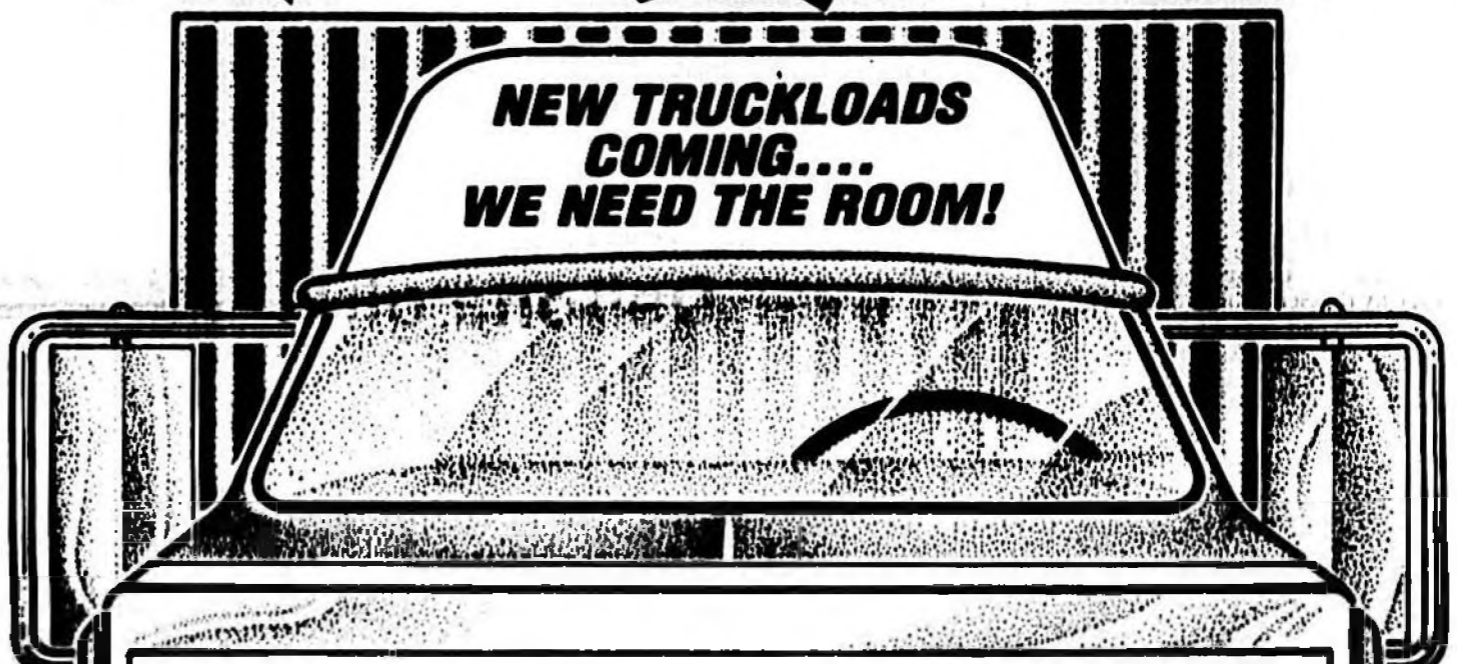

This was a day for farewell salutes, along with the rites of welcome, the swearing in, the children in arms, come to witness as a father or mother became a member of Congress, some drifting to sleep, some playing on the blue patterned carpet of the House well as Gingrich delivered what amounted to a 43-minute inaugural address.

"It's a whole Newt world," one Republican shouted as it all began.

Pizza Hut champ Rams punch in with 2-0 win

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — For most of us, it's difficult to return to the drudgery of the work week after the excitement of the holidays.

The Lake Mary High School boys' soccer team is no exception.

Having enjoyed a remarkable holiday break — the Rams swept through the prestigious Pizza Hut Invitational tournament, threatening Melbourne 7-3 in the finale — the Lake Mary boys got back to work Wednesday, toiling to a 2-0 win over 6A-District 4 opponent Deltona at Don T. Reynolds Stadium.

The Rams also won the junior varsity contest, 3-1.

"We had our typical post-Pizza Hut letdown," said Lake Mary coach Larry McCorkle. "You could see it in the warmups. And Deltona is a good, young side that could have an impact on who wins the district tournament."

"We did what we had to do tonight. We played pretty good defense, scored one goal on a set piece and got another on a mistake by the Deltona goalkeeper, probably the only mistake he made all night."

After a scoreless first half, Nathan Garcia got the Rams on the scoreboard five minutes into the second half when he headed home a corner kick from Jason Tiedell.

"We concentrate on those situations in practice," said McCorkle.

"We spend a lot of times on set plays. And we recently put in the scheme that Nate scored on. What we set up worked real well, which was nice to see."

Dustin Garber iced the game for the Rams when he made a nice run down the left wing and let fly a shot that found its way through the Deltona goal's hands.

Lake Mary clearly controlled play, outshooting Deltona 14-4 and having a 5-2 advantage in corner kicks. Ram keeper Greg Velho made four saves in notching his 10th shutout of the season (increasing his school-record career total to 38).

While he would have preferred a little more definitive decision — or at least a little more offense a lot earlier in the match — McCorkle wasn't disappointed with the outcome.

"This is a team that definitely knows how to prepare itself emotionally," said McCorkle. "They know when it's important to win, when they need to get up for a game. They showed that in the Pizza Hut, where they played better and better each game."

Lake Mary (now 18-2-1) has two games scheduled for this weekend, hosting the Lake Howell Silver Hawks in a Seminole Athletic Conference game Friday night and entertaining Tallahassee-Lincoln Saturday afternoon. Deltona falls to 7-3-3.

Lake Mary's Dustin Garber, whose wicked left-footed blasts resulted in goals against Lyman and Melbourne in the Pizza Hut invitational last week, ripped a shot through the Deltona 'keeper's hands for a goal Wednesday.

Balanced Lions return with win over Deltona girls

From Staff Reports

DELTONA — Employing an extraordinarily balanced attack, the Oviedo Lions came back from their holiday break with a 56-40 win over the host Deltona Wolves in a 6A-District 4 girls' basketball contest Wednesday night.

Oviedo also won the junior varsity contest, 38-20.

Ten of the 11 Lions used by first-year coach Tom Bieri contributed points, seven of them netting five or more points apiece.

On top of that, Oviedo maintained a steady offensive pace throughout the game, scoring 15 points in the first quarter and following that with period totals of 13, 14, and 17.

"Everyone played real well," said Bieri. "I'm very pleased, especially for not having played for six or seven days and only practicing once over the holidays."

"The girls came out and played well. They played good defense and played well together. We're definitely getting better, game by game."

Stephanie Noisieux was the only Lion to score in double figures, netting a game-high 13. Holly Dunaworth and Carrie McAuliffe each scored eight points. January Rook added seven. Cindy Liljenquist contributed six points while Lindsey Wynegar and Lisa Liljenquist chipped in with five points apiece.

Maggi Frankhauser netted 11 points (including the game's only three-point field goal) to lead the Wolves, who were outscored by Oviedo in every quarter.

Oviedo (10-5), which hadn't played a game since Dec. 20, will have to wait another six days to play again. Next Tuesday, Jan. 10, the Lions will resume their Seminole Athletic Conference schedule with a game at Lyman.

Wesley Jackson had three three-point field goals during his 13-point effort for Lake Mary Wednesday.

Lake Mary boys go cold in OT, lose to Wolves

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Having overcome a frigid start, the Lake Mary Rams suffered a late cold spell Wednesday night and fell in overtime to the Deltona Wolves, 64-56, in a 6A-District 4 boys' basketball confrontation.

Lake Mary's junior varsity team won the preliminary, beating its Deltona counterpart 57-45.

In the varsity contest, the Rams dug themselves a deep hole early, falling behind the Wolves 11-2 after one quarter.

"We were sluggish and sloppy," said Lake Mary assistant coach Mike Gaudreau. "We had trouble getting into the flow of the game. We seemed to struggle all night."

Lake Mary bounced back, outscoring the Wolves 32-21 over the second and third periods to take a two-point lead, 34-32, heading into the final quarter. When Deltona outscored the Rams by two, 18-16, over the final eight minutes of regulation, the teams headed to overtime.

That's when the Rams' offensive woes reappeared. Lake Mary managing just six points in the extra period while Deltona netted 14.

Jason Junker tossed in 14 points (including four three-point baskets) for the Rams while Wesley Jackson chipped in with 13 (including three treys of his own). Jarrod Rouse and Shawn Newberry each contributed eight points. Chip Richardson had seven.

For Deltona (7-8), Nick Rodriguez poured in a game-high 25 points. Mike Harris added 14 while Chad Reynolds hit for 12.

Lake Mary (7-8) will be back in action this Friday, when the Rams host Oviedo in a Seminole Athletic Conference game.

Raiders run and gun to M-FC win over St. John's

From Staff Reports

PALATKA — For the rest of the season, the Seminole Community College men's basketball team will be playing a roundball version of "catch us if you can."

Collectively small but fast with a good outside shot, the Raiders of third-year coach Bernard Merthle will attempt to make up for their lack of size by trying to make teams run with them.

Wednesday night, the Raiders took their run-and-gun attack on the road and notched a win in the opener of their Mid-Florida Conference schedule, knocking off the St. John's River Community College Vikings, 118-99.

"Basically, we're playing with four guards and a center," said Merthle. "We're trying to put pressure on other teams to keep up with us. We're able to score quickly, so we're going to use our speed and ball movement to put pressure on them and try to match up with us."

"When we went up there (St. John's) last year, we got away from ourselves and lost by a point. Tonight, we came out in the second half and played solid basketball. We played a good second half and took them out of their game."
Mike Sheppard led SCC with 30 points, 10 steals, and five steals. Don Tillman added 27 points and five rebounds. Dwayne Richardson had 16 points and six rebounds. Akiva Wilson contributed seven points, eight assists, five rebounds, and five steals. Stanley Thompson had seven points and five rebounds.

This Saturday, the Raiders (10-7, 1-0 M-FC) will host the Florida Community College at Jacksonville Stars in a women's/men's conference doubleheader at SCC's Health and Physical Education Center. The women's game is scheduled to tip off at 6 p.m. with the men to follow at 8 p.m.

Blind people's eyes may serve purpose in regulating sleep

By DANIEL G. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — Even when people are totally blind, their eyes may serve a purpose.

A study today concludes that light entering the brain through the eyes helps regulate some blind people's sleeping patterns, even though they cannot see it.

The discovery may open up important clues about how the brain keeps time in everyone, blind or not. It also raises questions about the common practice of removing blind people's eyes for cosmetic reasons.

Insomnia is a major problem for many blind people, who often experience something like jet lag, nodding off during the day and tossing and turning at night.

The reason for this seems clear: The brain needs exposure to sunlight to keep its internal clock running on a 24-hour schedule. Otherwise, it falls behind about a half hour each day.

A fortunate minority of blind people, however, sleep easily at the appropriate time. Now scientists think they know why: Their brains can see light, even when their eyes cannot.

The research, conducted by Dr. Charles A. Czeisler and others from Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

It suggests that two distinct routes shuttle information from the outside world into the brain. One pathway, which transmits visual images, fails to work in those who are totally blind. But another avenue may survive. In ways that are still unclear, it carries in the message that the sun is shining.

The existence of such dual pathways has been shown in experimental mice but, until now, not in people.

An editorial in the journal said Czeisler's work "convincingly demonstrates that the conclusions drawn from studies in animals hold for humans as well."

"The blind who sleep well "have vision without sight," wrote Dr. Robert Y. Moore of the University of Pittsburgh.
