Harriett calls for immunizations

SANFORD - All Sanford police officers and firefighters should be immunized against the deadly Hepatitis B virus in the wake of a national epidemic, Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett has told city officials.

Last month Harriett requested that the city provide immunization for officers after the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta issued a health alert to those working in public safety

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration has issued policy that "all employees at substantial risk of directly con-tacting body fluids shall be offered Hepatitis B vaccinations free of charge."

In a memo to the city commission, city Personnel Director Tim McCauley said inoculation of all 152 city public safety workers would cost $136 per employee, or $20,672, if done by the Seminole County Health Department. He also recommended allotting another $1,700 in the 1991-92 city budget for additional inoculainnameeded duc to employee turnover

The city commission will consider the Hepatitis B inoculations at its regular meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Ave. About 300,000 new cases of Hepatitis B were reported in 1990, according to the CDC. The virus can be transmitted to police officers or fire rescue workers when blood from accident victims enters a worker's eyes or an open wound. The disease is also transmitted sexually, or through any exchange of body fluids.

FORT HOOD, Texas - Becky Bleranowski had some good news for her husband when he came home from the Persian Gulf War: she was about to give birth.

"I'm having contractions," she told Staff Sgt. Steve Bleranowski.

Bleranowski, still wearing his desert fatigues, drove her Saturday to Darnall Army Community Hospital, where she gave birth to a girl about 30 minutes later, her fourth child.

Retail gas prices drop

Average cost less than before Kuwait invasion

Herald People Editor

SANFORD - Although the nation's average gasoline price this month dropped below its level before Iraq invaded Kuwait, Sanford area stations are already beginning to pass along increased prices to motorists.

Sylvester Chang, owner of Chang's Mobil, said this morning oil companies have raised prices to dealers about three cents in the last week.

"It's higher than it was last week. We have to because consumers are paying 9.3 cents more in taxes. Gas prices are about what they were last July." Chang explained.

Joe Hall, owner of two Sanford Chevron stations; confirmed prices had been going down. but had "probably bottomed out."

'They're up a penny or two. We're holding it down because there's a little more competition on this strip," Hail, referring to 17-92, said this

Prices are predicted to rise as winter ends and analyst Trilby Lundberg.

"In this period, with consumption coming up. but considering how low prices are, consumption can be expected to be strong this spring," Lundberg sald.

The average price for all grades of gasoline at full- and self-serve stations was $1.1688 on Friday, down 3.46 cents since Feb. 22, according to the Lundberg Survey of 13,600 gasoline stations nationwide.

At self-serve stations, the average price of regular leaded gasoline on March 8 was 98.54 cents a gallon; regular unleaded, 104.13; and premium unleaded, 120.48.

At full-service stations, regular leaded was 134.71 cents; regular unleaded, 136.19; pre-

Legislative action could aid schools

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald staff writer

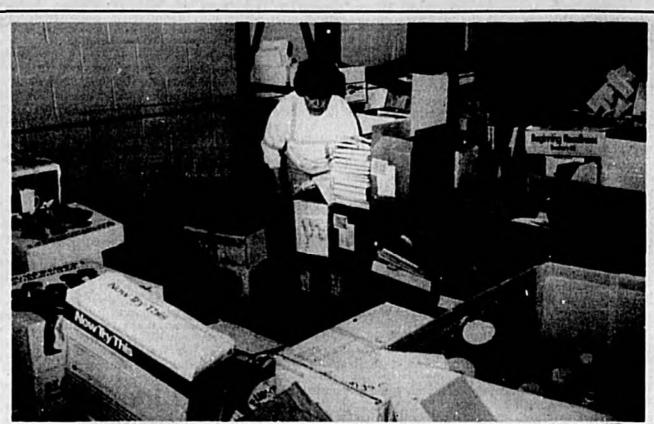

SANFORD - Area lawmakers say Seminole County schools could be the big winner from the current legislative session.

More money for school programs and school construction and greater local discretion in spending it could benefit local schools despite a year that is projected to have up to a $1.4 billion deficit in state spending.

Rep. Frank Stone, R-Ovtedo, sald a main accomplishment of the session which began last Tuesday could be the equalization of revenues that assures Seminole County schools receive a fairer share of the tax revenues collected in the county. Now the county receives a smaller per-student share of state school appropriations than many other counties.

Stone, whose district includes most of the county east of U.S. Highway 17-92, said the equalization of all school revenues throughout the state would cost $400 million. To trim costs, Stone said the Legislature may initially bring school districts receiving the least return on tax revenues to the middle range. As a result, Seminole County could receive $450 or more per student in additional revenues. a potential windfall of more than $2

"There's a lot of concern about equity," Stone said. "I think there's a real potential that if there was a ☐ See Schools, Page 5A

Fishing trip turns tragic; 2 drown

OSTEEN - A fishing trip turned tragic for three men caught in high winds on Lake Harney

David Silas Armstrong, 50, of 2169 Lake Drive. Winter Park; his son-in-law, Brad Kelth Riggs. 21, whose address was not released; and Robert Roosevelt Thomas, 43, 4827 Cherokee Rose Drive, Orlando, a family friend, were attempting to return to shore in Osteen when their 15-foot Cobia boat began to take on water about 10:30

Armstrong and Thomas were killed in the attempt to return to shore. Riggs survived and was transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford where he was treated for exposure and released a few hours later.

According to Lt. Vinard Hitt, a spokesman with the regional office of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission in Ocala, the trio was caught in violent winds on the lake, which is a part of the St. John's River on the Seminole-Volusia County border.

Riggs was saved from the boat by a helicopter erew from the Volusia County Sheriffs Office who were called to the scene at about 12:30 p.m. after several failed attempts at rescue were made by other boaters in the area.

"It was very windy and rescue was difficult," Hitt said. "But they did it."

LAKE MARY - Stephen Vartin was a certified public accountant, a misfit CPA who couldn't make himself believe that everything inlife can be reconciled like a bank ledger.

So he quit.

For the 20 years that followed, the CPA-turned-poet, now an English and humanities instructor at Seminole Community College, alternated between the career he loved teaching - and the career economic constraints dictated to him - bustness. At 51, Vartin said, he is done 'selling out" to business.

"Even when I worked in other fields." he said, "Lalways thought of myself as a teacher."

in New Jersey, where he taught junior high, high school, then college. At Fairleigh Dickinson University in Rutherford, N.J., he said, he taught a young woman who he would later call "my most famous student": Peggy Noonan, speechwriter for George Bush credited with phrases such as "thousand points of light" and "read my lips."
"I helped teach her to write,"

Vartin said, beaming.

Vartin, a thin man whose words are spoken with a heavy New Jersey accent, reluctantly left Fairleigh Dickinson when paying rent became nearly impossible on his teaching salary, he said. Couple search for turtles' cure

MARATHON - The golf-ball size growths, resembling moldy cauliflower, bulged from the green sea turtle's head and body.

"You can see why it's so hard to ignore," said conservationist and Florida Keys motel owner Tina Brown as she held up the turtle. Its eyes concealed by the grotesque fibropapilloma

Indeed, Brown and her boyfriend, Richie Moretti, have all but ignored the mysterious ailment, which is baffling scientists and threatening to wipe out the species.

For the last few years, Brown and Moretti have devoted part of their Hidden Harbor Motel, all of its proceeds and countless hours to finding the cause of the disease — and a cure.

The plague is so widespread that experts say at least 50 percent of the green sea turtle population is suffering from fibropapilloma. In the Florida Keys and Hawaii, the figure may be more than 60 percent.

"We've seen it go from a minor problem in 1986 to something that's just eating the turtles up," said Moretti. 47. who owned a large Volkswagen repair shop in Orlando before retiring to the Keys.

Despite the widespread occurrence of fibropapilloma tumors. however, little was done to determine its cause until the last couple of years.

Commission criticized over rights

TALLAHASSEE - Critics say the rights of property owners rather than the needs of wildlife are getting priority at Florida's Game and Freshwater Fish Commission.

Once primarily concerned with hunting and fishing issues, the five-member commission has matured in recent years into the state's protector of all wildlife.

That's quite a challenge. Years of studies show that at least half of Florida's unhunted wildlife species are declining in number, Susan Cerulean, former head of the commission's non-game program, sald.

These should be red flags to anyone interested in wildlife conservation," she said.

But, led by three men appointed to the commission by former Gov. Bob Martinez, the panel is retreating from rather than advancing conservation measures, the St. Petersburg Times reported Sunday. And the other two commissioners have voted with the Martinez majority more often than not, the newspaper said.

"There is a lot of concern being expressed for private property rights and for the rights of agriculture," Cerulean

Mr. Rogers' 'Walk of Fame' slab moved

ORLANDO -- Can you say, "sophomoric prank?"

A 40-pound stone slab engraved with the name of Fred
Rogers, soft-spoken host of "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," was missing from the Walk of Fame at Rollins College only hours after Rogers was inducted.

Some 400 parents and children were on hand when Rogers was honored by his alma mater Friday. School officials then discovered a hole where Rogers' slab had been put Saturday morning, between those honoring Edith Wharton and Beethoven.

A few hours later, the missing stone was found about 150 feet away, near a dormitory. "It turned out to be a prank," school spokesman Larry Humes said. 'It's in good shape. We'll probably put it back

Although no one at Rollins remembers a slab ever being stolen, some have been moved in similar pranks. Humes said. After the Rogers slab was found, Rollins officials did the neighborly thing - at least in the eyes of the culprits. They didn't call the police.

Manatee, marina issue surfaces again

TALLAHASSEE - Almost 11/2 years after the state established a policy that limited marina development in 13 counties with significant manatee populations, the issue is surfacing again.

Since the state Department of Natural Resources is considering making the policy a formal rule. public feedback is required and marine industry lobbyists and advocates for the gentle and endangered marine mammal quickly made their positions known.

Manatee advocates want to halt the construction and expansion of marinas in the 13 counties at least for the time being. They say a moratorium is needed because of lax enforcement of manatee protection measures at new and expanded marinas.

But lobbyists for the state's $3.5 billion marine industry say the state's current policy handculls the state's third-biggest industry and has little to do with helping manatees.

The policy, adopted in October 1989, restricts marina development and expansion in the 13 counties by allowing only one powerboat slip for every 100 feet of shoreline at marinas with more than five slips.

each count's passes a state-approved manatee protection and manateesiting plan.

So far, neither side's position is playing well with the DNR. Agency officials say they must straddle a whippet-thin line to balance environmental interests with economic interests.

Pam McVety, DNR's director of marine resources, and Pat Rose, manatee coordinator, say marine industry lobbyists exaggerate the economic ripple effect of the 1-to-100 policy. However, neither rule out the possibility that the strict policy could be eased. While both think the marina compliance issue is a serious problem, they say a moratorium may be too harsh.

Sometime in the next six weeks, the two sides will meet in a workshop. After that, the proposed rule resulting from that meeting will be subject to public comment at a series of hearings around the state before returning to Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet for a vote.

"We never fought the idea of protecting the rascals," said Wade Hopping, a Tallahassee lobbyist who represents the Chicago-based National Marine Manufacturers Association. "We've fought the idea of blanket protection.

Chiles eyes changes in how electoral votes are awarded

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE - Republicans say It'll never happen, but Gov. Lawton Chiles says he wants some changes that would keep the winner of Florida's presidential vote from getting all the Electoral College marbles.

While the Constitution dictates the number of electoral votes a state has, it is up to the states to decide how they are awarded in presidential elections.

Presently, all of Florida's 21 electoral votes, one for each of its 19 U.S. House and two Senate seats, go the winner of the popular vote. Only twice in 40 years have the votes gone to Democrats. Lyndon Johnson won them in 1964; Jimmy Carter in 1976.

Now, Democrat Chiles is asking the Legislature to change the process to let the votes representing the U.S. House districts go to the presidential candidate who wins that district.

The two remaining votes would go to the statewide winner.

"It's just basically fairer," Chiles said last week as he made his proposal.

The proposal is already drawing fire from

Military not acknowledging 11 soldiers missing in Iraq

By Associated Press

NEW YORK - Eleven Green Beret soldiers who entered Iraq on a sabotage and spy mission are missing in action but their disappearance has not been acknowledged by the military, according to a published report.

The soldiers were part of special operations forces that infiltrated Iraq during Operation Desert Storm to locate missile launchers, pinpoint air targets and steal enemy equipment. Newsweek reported in its March 16 Issue.

The magazine also said the Pentagon denied the existence of some covert operations even after they ended in U.S. deaths.

U.S. military officials in Rivadh, Saudi Arabia, declined to discuss the report.

"If it's Special Operations we do not discuss it." said Army Maj. Thomas Nickerson

Newsweek also reported that seven people reported killed in the crash of a helicopter in Saudi Arabia were attempting to rescue three commandos stranded inside Iraq. Military officials say the helicopter was on a routine medical evacuation mission.

The Associated Press reported later that the helicopter was a Special Forces aircraft and crashed in a flerce sandstorm at Raffa, a base in the western Saudi desert. Many of the Green Beret operations inside Iraq came from Raffa, military sources said.

A visitor to Ralla, who asked not to be named, said he saw the wreekage and told it was bringing wounded Green Berets back from Iraq when it crashed.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf acknowledged on Feb. 27 that were part of the allied forces deployed against Iraq.

Big spender

In the next election, George Bush will be hard put to assail the Democrats as big spenders. Why? Because the Republican president himself is not exactly a pennypincher. The conservative Cato Institute says he is increasing domestic spending "at a faster pace than any other president since Franklin Roosevelt."

Like any president, however, Bush has to live with his record and it includes figures that his campaign strategists won't be happy to advertise. In addition to an average inflation-adjusted increase of 10 percent a year in domestic spending, he has racked up immense budget deficits. And the red ink is expected to become even deeper in the remainder of his term.

Though there are explanations at Bush's disposal, they aren't the kind that a Republican president likes to employ. He would much rather attack the "tax and spend" Democrats than to admit that he had to become the biggest spender in 50 years just to do some of what needs to be done.

Meanwhile, he will have to take a pounding from ultra-conservatives who argue irrationally that tax cuts and slashes in spending could have made things right.

Of course, Bush may be so popular at election time that such things won't hurt him. But whatever his standing in the polls, he will have a hard time posing as a president who held the line against the heavy spenders.

A tattered confederation

The unraveling Yugoslavia appears to be accelerating in light of steps by Slovenia and Croatia to split from the 72-year-old confeder-

Recently, the Slovenian parliament resoundingly approved a break with the central government in Belgrade. Then Croatia's nationalist-dominated assembly voted to disregard federal laws that threaten the republic's "interests and sovereignty."

The two independence-minded republics ousted their Communist Party leaders last spring in Yugoslavia's first free elections since World War II. Now they are urging other republics to divide the country into two or more sovereign states. But Serbia, the largest of the country's six republics, and the communist-dominated federal army seem determined to keep the federation intact, whatever the cost.

Consequently, this polyglot nation, riven by ethnic, political, economic and cultural divisions, is on the verge of disintegration.

The Bush administration's neutral stance toward Yugoslavia's separatist movements recently was challenged by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas. He called for direct U.S. aid to the non-communist republics, thus bypassing the communist regime in Belgrade.

Although such a step may be premature at this point. Washington may have to decide soon whether to side with the non-communist leaders calling for Yugoslavia's dismemberment or with the communist regime committed to holding the Balkan federation together.

Re-examine global weapons trade

WASHINGTON - Although the international embargo against munitions shipments to Iraq presumably will remain in place indefinitely, there unfortunately is no evidence of any other significant changes in the global trafficking in military weaponry.

If no lesson is learned from the recent war provoked by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. another petty despot elsewhere eventually will begin terrorizing a region by rattling sabers purchased from the United States, the Soviet Union and other leading merchants in the world's arms bazaar.

"No single event has more forcefully demon-strated the need for a new system of regional disarmament and arms transfer restrictions than Iraq's invasion of Kuwait," says analyst William D. Hartung, writing in the current issue of the World Policy Journal.

"The vast majority of nations that have joined the anti-Iraq coalition were significant suppliers of military technology to Saddam Hussein's regime throughout the 1980s," he adds, noting that the recent military confrontation might not have occurred in the absence of profligate arms

Indeed, Iraq was by far the world's leading importer of weapons and munitions in 1988, the most recent year for which complete records are available. The value of its purchases that year with $3.1 billion and France with $1.9 billion. was $4.6 billion.

But others high on the list include India with $3.2 billion. Saudi Arabia with $3 billion. Afghanistan with $2.6 billion. Iran with $2 billion. Israel with $1.9 billion. Cuba with $1.7 billion, Angola with $1.6 billion and Victnam with $1.5 billion.

Nations whose purchases totaled $700 million to $1.3 billion include Syria. Taiwan. Japan. North Korea, Poland. West Germany. Spain, East Germany, Algeria, Turkey, Egypt and Ethlopia.

The world's leading arms exporters in 1988 were the Soviet Union with $21.4 billion worth of sales, the United States with $14.3 billion, China

Other major suppliers ranged from Bulgaria and Brazil to Czechoslovakia and Chile.

The annual value of all international arms transfers peaked at $56 billion in 1987, then declined sharply to $49 billion one year later. But that 1988 figure is hardly cause for celebration because the volatile Middle East maintained its long-standing position as the world's leading regional arms purchaser.

This is an especially propitious time for a re-examination of that trade because much of it was spawned by the fast-fading Cold War, whose two adversaries pressed client nations to buy arms as a means of halting the spread of communism or imperialism.

Many of the purchasers have their own political and military agendas, however, that are entirely unrelated to U.S.-Soviet tensions. Moreover, the sellers often have other motives as well - as Hartung notes in describing this country's policies:

"President Bush's penchant for employing foreign military sales as a policy instrument was first revealed in the summer of 1989, when he announced a multi-year plan to send unprecedented levels of U.S. arms and advisors to Colombia. Bolivia and Peru as part of his widely touted 'war on drugs.'

Whitewash 6 helps Keating 5

Columnists have to be prepared for strange questions, so for about a week now I've been rehearsing for this one: Of all the legislative entities I have observed in the past year, which was the most disgusting? I don't have a definite answer yet, but I have narrowed my choices to two: The Keating Five and the Whitewash Six.

The first reference, of course, is to the five U.S. senators who did favors for failed S&L mogul Charles Keating, and - purely by coincidence, of course - received large political contributions from him at about the same time.' They are: Democrats Alan Cranston of California, Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, Donald Riegle of Michigan and John Glenn of Ohio; and Republican John McCain of Arizona.

The second reference is to the six-member "Ethics" Committee that has been sitting in judgment of the K5 since last November. They are: Democrats Howell Heflin of Alabama. David Pryor of Arkansas and Terry Sanford of North Carolina: and Republicans Warren Rudman of New Hampshire, Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Trent Lott of Mississippi. They recently concluded that the only patently guilty member of the K5 was Cranston, who is sick and old and has already announced that he's quitting.

It was a disgusting performance from the beginning. Sen. Daniel Inouye, D.Hawaii. appeared as a witness and defended the Keating Five as "men of unimpeachable character" who only did what senators do all the time - service their constituents. Had Keating's empire survived, said Inouye, the senators would be hailed as "heroes to their constituents." But, he concluded, "today they are damned because the endeavor failed."

This preposterous remark just staggers me. Can senators really be this insensate? Would someone remind Inouye that the S&L debacle is the worst financial scandal in our history? Somebody tell him that working stiffs are going to have to fork over a minimum of $300 billion to bail out failed or crooked bankers.

Let's hear from, say, plano movers: How many of you believe that the K5 looked upon Charles Keating as just another constituent. like the widow who didn't get her Social Security check? Believers say "Aye." Disbelievers, "Nay." The Nays have it, 89,001 to 12. Sorry, Dan. Sticks are smarter than you

A few days later, the Whitewash Six heard from William Black, one of the four federal regulators summoned to meet with the K5 in early April 1987, to hear their pleas on behalf of their "friend" Keating. The regulators bluntly described Keating's Lincoln Savings & Loan as a "ticking time bomb," testifled Black.

"We were trying to tell them (the K5) this is not the institution you want to be going to bat

Observed David Pryor (who, incidentally, has been favored in past campaigns with S&L contributions): "You may have been talking a lingo that our esteemed and distinguished colleagues may not have known."

Attention all carpenters, painters and roofers: How many of you do not understand the technical term "ticking time bomb"? I fusing that the entire Senate could use a clinic on ethics. "Everybody is bamboozled." he said. The Keating Five didn't need any refresher courses in ethics. Their meeting with the regulators failed a simple sniff test: It stunk. All of America this time: How many would have known that meeting with regulators on behalf of a strong-arming banker would smell like a North Jersey landfill? I get 248,710.313, counting kindergartners. Sorry, senator. You've got the ethical antenna of an enchilada.

And while I've got your attention. America, one last question: Which is more disgusting. the Keating Five or the Whitewash Six? For the K5s. I count 130,210,011. For the W6s. 130,210,011. Himmmm.

Agnew, Simpson: see similarity?

WASHINGTON - Alan Simpson and Spiro Agnew — twins separated at birth?

The Republican senator from Wyoming and the former Republican vice president may not have the same biological parents, but they wear the same shoes, and put them in the same place - their mouths. Simpson is filling Agnew's shoes admirably when it comes to his habit of bashing the press in times of national crisis.

Last month Simpson gagged on his shoe when he said CNN correspondent Peter Arnett was filing "repulsive" reports from Baghdad under the watchful eye of Iraqi censors. Simpson said Arnett to call in my day a sympathizer. ... He was active in the Vietnam War and he won a Pulitzer Prize We're largely because of his anti-government material. And he was Simpson has since backed off of his allegations about Arnett's family ties. He made a mistake, and reporters, if anyone, should understand how that happens. What we don't understand is Simpson's odious habit of blaming the messenger whenever the news doesn't sit well with him.

We're reminded of a windbag in the White House during the Nixon years, Spiro Agnew. who proved that vice presidents really do have a job. Agnew's was to blame the press for the failings of the Vietnam War. Agnew gave his best performance on Nov. 13, 1969. Ten days earlier President Nixon had announced plans to continue the war until North Vietnam agreed to negotiate an "honorable peace" or until the South Vietnamese were capable of fighting their own war. Nixon called on "the great silent majority" to back him up. Network news anchors called Nixon's policy what it was - "nothing really new." Agnew responded in a speech claiming Nixon's remarks had been subject to "querulous criticism" from a "gaggle of commentators" and a "tiny closed fraternity of privileged" Journalists who were "constantly talking to one another, thereby providing artificial reinforcement to their shared viewpoints.

There it is, the stale theory that the left-wing, critical American press lives to make life miscrable for well-meaning politiclans and bureaucrats. It is Alan Simpson's theme song. He told Saddam Hussein in a pre-war meeting last year that the American press was "a haughty and pampered press they all consider themselves political geniuses."

Last year, we reported what Simpson said in that meeting with Saddam, and the senator throttled us. Simpson told Saddam that his problem was he had isolated himself from the media. Simpson said Iraq's beef was with the American press, not the American government. And, he added, that Saddam should "invite them (the press) to come here (Iraq) and see for yourselves.

What Simpson expected the press to see in Iraq is not spelled out. But what the senator later said he was trying to do was open up Iraq more to the Western media. Make that everyone in the Western media except Peter Arnett. Because later when Arnett was the sole Western reporter still in Baghdad with the permission of Saddam Hussein, Simpson called him a "sympathizer."

"Bud" Gardner, D-Titusville, who is sponsoring the Senate's education reform bill, cautioned that the windfall if approved could be devoured by other education cuts to trim the deficit. Gardner's district includes Sanford and areas generally east of County Road 427.

'it could be a wash if all these things happen," Gardner said. "But then Seminole would be in a lot better shape than most."

Stone, Gardner and Rep.s Art Grindle, P.Altamonte Springs, and Stan Bainter, R-Tavares, all agree a proposal to begin the elimination of "categorical funding" could give achool officials more control to spend money for teaching programs needed most. For the first time in many, many years, money will go back to the district and they can decide how to spend it," Grindle said. "Which is the way to go." Grindle's district includes Sanford and Lake Mary.

"It puts education back with the teacher, where it belongs,"

Stone said lawmakers may cut more state school strings next year, although local school districts will have to meet a number of standards. Failing to meet those standards could result in closed schools or the removal of school superintendants and board members from office, Stone said.

Gardner said he plans to use his powerful position as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee to remove Lottery revenues from general education funding and return to the original Lottery split between schools, community colleges and universities. Any leftover dollars would be sent to local schools for whatever needs they have. Bainter, whose district includes most portions of the county west of Interstate 4, said Seminole County could see increased construction dollars as a result of increased revenues for utility taxes which finance the state school construction fund.

Despite the shortfalls and certain program cuts, Bainter said the process will be healthy for Florida. Bainter said he hopes the state will move to a base fiscal plan instead of a recurring program plan.

"We're constitutionally required to fund only a have dozen or so programs." Bainter said. 'At last count, we're now funding 2.152 programs. Many of those should be local obligations.

Gardner agrees. "It is a gloom and doom session. But it's forcing us to do things we didn't have to before. And I think that's

Police chief denounces attack

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES - Officers who beat a motorist in a videotaped attack tarnished the reputation of the city's police force and will be punished, the police chief

The beating is being investigated by several agencies, including the FIII, whileh will look at civil rights violations. The Police Department is conducting an internal investigation and the county said it would start presenting its case to a grand jury today.

Police Chief Daryl F. Gates also recorded a video shown at officers' roll calls beginning Friday. The tape was released to the press Sunday and showed a somber Gates pledging punishment for all police officers involved.

"Serving the public properly, that's what the badge stands for." Gates said, "And I've told you that if you've tarnished that badge in any way, you cast a shadow on that badge, you cast a shadow on the badges of every single man and women in this department."

Choosing the top seeds, not final teams, plagued selection committee

KANSAS CITY. Mo. - In a year when so much power is packed at the top, picking out the bottom three or four squads in the 64-team NCAA field was not the major headache it usually is.

Committee chairman Jim Delany said two weeks ago that deciding those last few teams would probably be his panel's toughest assignment. But Delany emerged from a marathon weekend meeting Sunday night with a completed bracket and a new perspective.

Naming No. 1 UNLV. the defending champion with a 41-game winning streak, as top seed in the West Regional was easy. But deciding on the top seeds in the other three regionals kept the nine-man committee tossing and turning.

"The toughest job and most obvious issue people are going to be asking questions about are really lines I and 2," Delany said of the top two seeds in each regional across the bracket. "It's very clear there was one team on line 1 that has performed over the past two years in a superior way. Then there seemed to us anywhere from five to eight other teams that was very difficult to distinguish among. After all their deliberations. the committee eventually settled on North Carolina, ranked No. 7 in the Top 25, as top seed in the East, No. 5 Arkansas (31-3) as top seed in the Southeast and No. 2 Ohio State (25-3) as top seed in the Midwest despite losing its last two games. No. 2 seeds are Syracuse (26-5) in the East, Indiana (27-4) in the Southeast, Duke (26-7) in the Midwest and Arizona (26-6) in the West. "That was an area the committee spent at least three hours this afternoon on," Delany said. "We looked at late results, drew some conclusions and drew some lines. That was particularly difficult." It may not prove a day at the beach for college fans, either. The first round, which moves into action this Thursday and Friday around the country, is not exactly aglow with inviting matchups. The Runnin' Rebels of Las Vegas, the most highly regarded NCAA entry since unbeaten Houston roared into the 1983 tourney, will face No. 16 Montana in the first round at

Tucson. Ohio State's first game in the Midwest pits it against Towson State. Northeastern gets to play North Carolina in the East first round at Syracuse, and Georgia State gets Arkansas in the Southeast. "We thought there were seven teams, after UNLV, who were first or second seeds," said Tom Frericks, a committee member, "We compared them all, went over it very carefully."

Picking between Big Ten foes Ohio State and Indiana was particularly nettlesome.

"We know Ohio State lost two games this past week," Frericks said. "But they did win two over Indiana in head-to-head competition. It gets down to a hairline decision. It really does. But the two victories (over Indiana) probably were the overriding point that caused it to go Ohio State's way." One interesting early matchup, however, could come in the West If UNLY meets Georgetown, one of a recordtying seven teams from the Big East, in the second round.

"People have been asking me all week who I feared the most. and Georgetown was one of the two I feared," said UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian. "Georgetown is a dangerous team."

Before the matchup is set, both teams must win their first-round games Friday at the West Regional in Tucson, Ariz. Eighth-seeded Georgetown (18-12) meets No. 9 Vanderbilt $(17 \cdot 12).$

Last week, Georgetown was considered a borderline NCAA tournament team. But the Hovas clinched a berth by making it all the way to the Big East tournament final before losing to Scton Hall on Sunday. "A few days ago we were on eighth seed in the West," said Georgetown coach John Thompson. "It's interesting we go from not going (to the tournament) to eighth seed by winning two basketball games.

the bubble and today we're the Ohio State coach Randy Ayers was surprised that his team got a top seed.

'We didn't think we'd get it after the week we had." Ayers said. "We feel the (selection) committee rewarded us for our consistency earlier in the season."

All the top seeds play their opening games on Friday.

Cookbook sales benefit seriously ill

Members of the Junior Woman's Club of Sanford are busy tempting taste buds with a new cookbook fundraiser to benefit the Ronald McDonald House in Gainesville. Delicious appetizers, main dishes, cakes, soups, breads, microwave dishes and more may be found in this $6 cookbook, which was compiled by the staff, board and volunteers at the Ronald McDonald House

The Ronald McDonald House is a non-profit organization which provides a home away from home for families of seriously ill children being treated at Shands Hospital or the University of Florida Clinic. More than 10,000 families, many of whom are from the Central Florida area, have stayed at Ronald McDonald House. A recent golf tournament sponsored by the Junior's netted $2,000 for the House.

For more information on purchasing a cookbook, contact Marion Owen at 322-8078.

Examine, correct weed problem

Many calls have come in to the Extension Service this week concerning lawn weed control. Weeds are common to all lawngrasses. When there is a problem with weeds in the lawn, removing them usually means applying a herbicide.

If you have a problem with weeds in your lawn, it indicates that your lawn is stressed for some reason. Lawns that are properly maintained are less apt to be plagued with weeds.A vigorously growing lawn leaves little area for weed seeds to germinate and will usually smother out those that do ger-

DEAR ABBY: I feel confident that I speak for many. This is an open letter to all charities to which I contribute - or used to contribute: I stretch a very limited budget to include causes I sincerely want to help, so please, stop sending me labels with my name and address printed on them. DEAR ABBY: I related to the letter about the husband who was a pack rat because I'm one. ton. After years of bachelorhood, I married a woman who'd throw out the newspaper while I was still reading it.

In the fourth year of our marriage I was sent overseas. leaving my wife pregnant. When I completed that tour, I was reassigned to the Pentagon, and my wife had the thankless task excuse themselves to the reof selling our home and packing and moving us to the Washington, D.C., area. She handled all of this like a real pro.

A year later we were entertaining guests, and I told the story of our move, bragging about how well my wife had grandmother began to loudly handled everything alone. She casually remarked. "Yes, and it gave me the opportunity to throw out all the Junk Bill had been carrying around all these years." I was shocked to hear chicken." her say this, as she'd never mentioned it before, so I asked.

what kind of weed that you have and what kind of grass you have. There are different herbicide recommendations for different kirds of weeds and for different lawngrasses.

Weeds are classified into general categories. First, there are annual weeds which complete their life cycle in less than one year and these are usually the easiest to control. The second category is biennials which require more than a year to complete a life cycle, but less than 2 years. The third and most difficult weed to control are the perennials. They live for more than 2 years and can last indefinitely.

Another important way the weeds are classified are by their type. There are three basic types of weeds: broadleaf, grass and sedge. It may be difficult to tell which is which. And it is very important to know before you purchase any herbicide.

It is also important to know what kind of grass you have before purchasing a herbicide. For example, there are herbicides that kill broadleaf weeds in St. Augustine grass that are not labeled for bahla grass. In addition, there are pre-emergent herbicides tht kill weed seeds, and post-emergent herbicides that kill growing Confused? It is confusing because there is much to know before you start applying a herbicide. If applied properly. herbicides are an important component of an overall weed program. However, if applied improperly, herbicides can seriously damage your lawn. This is why it is so important to know what weed you are trying to control and what grass you are trying to control it in.

Bring samples of your weed problems to our office on Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. and a master gardener or myself will help you to identify them and talk to you about weed control. We are located across from Flea World off 17-92 south of Sanford.

Cheers to the Farrs

Cancellation of the St. Johns River Festival last Sunday was a big disappointment to Faye Siler, Sanford artist. She and her husband Don, arrived at the lakefront about 7:30 p.m. Sunday to find their display screens had fallen down and the riggings were ripped from the ground due to high winds.

So. Fave says, they loaded up the car and headed for home.

Faye praised the committee for doing such a good job. She also tossed accolades in the direction of Dave and Joyce Farr. "They were go-fers, runners and problem solvers," Faye said. "I can't say enough for the Farrs.

STARTING TOPAY, I NO LONGER RECOGNIZE MONDAYS!

Bartholin's gland may need surgery

Bartholin's gland. What happens when it gets inflamed, and what effect does a person's hormone level have upon the gland? Can long-term problems eventually lead to cancer?

DEAR READER: Bartholin's glands are two small glands, situated at the opening of the vagina, which provide lubrica-tion. They are subject to two relatively common disorders: cysts and infection.

Bartholin's cysts result from blockage of the glandular openings. The glands fill with clear fluid and swell, causing a lump that is sometimes painful. The awelling can be quite noticeable and may interfere with normal sexual activity. However, these cysts do not require treatment unless they grow large or become inflamed.

Bartholinitis is infection of the glands. This may or may not follow cyst formation. However, the condition is always painful. 34 Attest can lead to large abscesses or may enlarge to produce fistulas (abnormal openings) between the Bartholin's glands and the surrounding lissue, such as the vagina or the amis. Antiblotics are usually required.

In severe cases - or in patients who experience repeated infections and cyst formation the abscesses may have to be drained. The preferred operation is called marsupialization. The surgeon opens the infected area and removes tissue until the Bartholin's gland is exposed. This forms a small sac that does not close over and, therefore, prevents the accumulation of cystic fluid and/or infected material.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter's recent prenatal care at 41/2 months included ultrasound imaging of the embryo as a matter of routine without suspicion of complications. Was this necessary, and can it cause problems?

DEAR READER: Ultrasound imaging is a safe, painless and convenient diagnostic test. It has
