Judge Williams Denies Appeal

Blackburn Ordered To Prison
By BOB LLOYD
Herald Staff Writer

One-time Central Florida gambling czar Harlan "The Colonel" Blackburn today was ordered to begin serving a six months to 10 year state prison term in connection with a 1971 assassination attempt on his former associate, gambler Clyde Lee.

Circuit Court Judge Volie Williams said nothing he read in a post-sentence investigation report by state authorities and nothing he heard during a hearing this morning at Sanford persuaded him that the sentence he meted Blackburn in January 1974 was unfair or should be modified.

Judge Williams ordered Blackburn, who has been free on $10,000 appeal bond, to report to Sheriff John Polk at 9 a.m. on Saturday, July 10 for transportation to the state prison.

Defense attorney Richard Rhodes had sought to have the court limit the sentence in the Lee case to 3½ years. Blackburn served on a 23-year federal prison sentence on gambling and income tax evasion convictions. Rhodes sought amendment of the state prison sentence to probation "under any conditions the court wishes" including surveillance and monitoring of Blackburn's communications.

Blackburn was paroled by federal authorities in May 1975 and served 45 days of the state prison sentence before being released on appeal bond. He has been employed by ABC Nurseries and has operated a produce sales stand in south Seminole near his home.

Blackburn, 57, was neatly dressed in a brown suit today and accompanied by his wife Lucille and other family members to the court appearance.

Blackburn Ordered To Prison

He claimed ill health and appeared haggard-looking as he walked from the courtroom answering questions from reporters with "no comment."

Rhodes said he was "disappointed" with the outcome of the hearing and said although no decision has been made that further appeals are being considered.

The court today noted that Blackburn has never admitted guilt in the Lee assassination attempt and said if there had been any doubt as to the jury's verdict a new trial would have been ordered.

A circuit court jury convicted Blackburn in January 1974 of aiding and abetting a man already acquitted in the June 1971 shooting of Lee in a telephone booth on SR-434 at I-4 west of Longwood.

Nation Prepares For Fourth

By The Associated Press
In Philadelphia, they're preparing for the President and protests.

In George, Wash., they're getting ready to eat a 60-square-foot cherry pie.

In American Samoa, they're planning copra-cutting and spear-chucking contests.

In all 50 states, in American territories, in big cities and small towns, America is preparing to celebrate its 200th birthday in thousands of different ways, all meant to make July 4, 1976, a day to remember.

If there is one thing that ties the celebrations together, it will be the pealing of bells. At 2 p.m. Sunday, members of the Pennsylvania Society, Sons of the Revolution, will lay their hands on the Liberty Bell, which tolled 200 years ago to proclaim independence.

Supreme Court Upholds Death Penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court upheld the death penalty today, ruling that it is not a constitutionally forbidden cruel and unusual punishment.

According to an Associated Press survey, 572 men and 10 women on death rows in 30 states were awaiting the court's decision.

The vote was 7 to 2, with Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall dissenting.

It was the high court's first ruling on the death penalty since June 29, 1972, when the court ruled 5 to 4 that laws then on the books gave too much discretion to judges and juries to consider aggravating and mitigating circumstances.

That decision invalidated death penalty laws of 36 states, the District of Columbia and the federal government.

In the aftermath of the 1972 decision, 35 states re-enacted the death penalty. But in one of them — Illinois — the law was struck down by the state supreme court.

New laws in 30 states made the death penalty mandatory for a limited number of crimes. Fourteen other states enacted laws employing various formulas calling for judges and juries to consider aggravating and mitigating circumstances.

Most of the new laws impose capital punishment for fewer offenses than before. In three states — California, Colorado and Washington — the new measures were enacted by popular vote.

Congress passed a law providing the death penalty for aggravated cases of air piracy re- sponsibility for the boat ramp and picnic area at Lake Monroe.

The only real cost envisioned is depreciation of county equipment used during maintenance operations, Vilhien said.

Seminole County was asked by the state Department of Transportation (DOT) to assume maintenance of all wayside parks in this area.

Assistant County Attorney Robert Pierce said he has prepared the 30-year agreement and will present it for the county commission's perusal on Tuesday. Pierce said the county will pay the state $1 a year.

After DOT workers ripped out wayside parks along Lake Monroe, the county commission agreed to assume responsibility for the boat ramp and picnic area at Lake Monroe.

Seminole commissioners were miffed at the DOT action. Commissioner Richard Williams labeled the removal of lakeside picnic tables "irrational and idiotic." And Vilhien termed it a "complete waste" of taxpayer money.

The entire board of county commissioners has expressed an interest in assuming maintenance costs because of the 40 or 50 persons who use the boat ramp on weekends.

School Board To Act On Teacher Grievance

By JEAN PATTESON
Herald Staff Writer

A Seminole Education Association (SEA) request for binding arbitration to settle grievances filed by three county teachers will be acted on by the school board at its July 14 meeting.

School Atty. Douglas Stenstrom Wednesday night asked the board for instructions on the arbitration requests made by teachers Carol Stone, Lysette Cornelison and Deana Baird.

Stenstrom said he was not certain whether the teachers would go to court if the board rejected arbitration.

The teachers have all taught for three years on annual contracts and have not been recommended by their principals for rehiring on continuing contract.

They filed grievances, charging that the master contract had been violated because the school superintendent and officials had not given them every reasonable opportunity to develop into useful and productive teachers.

The grievances of Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Baird were rejected by School Supt. William P. Lauer in the second step of the grievance procedure. Mrs. Cornelison took her grievance one step further to the school board, where it was denied.

Stenstrom said Wednesday night that he agreed with Lauer's position that Florida school superintendents have the exclusive right to recommend teachers for appointment and continuing contract status.

He noted that the board should be aware that under their master contract, the SEA has agreed that the contract cannot usurp the powers of the board. Any term of the contract found to be contrary to this agreement, is null and void, he said.

Stenstrom pointed out that the dismissal of an annual contract teacher within the contract period cannot be done without the board showing just cause. The implication, said Stenstrom, is (Continued On Page 2-A)

Kelley Prober Named

Florida Gov. Reubin Askew this morning named Volusia County State Attorney Stephen L. Boyles to conduct an investigation of Seminole-Brevard Public Defender Franklin Kelley's office.

Seminole-Brevard State Atty. Abbott Herring had asked the governor to appoint an outside state attorney to evaluate the findings of a three-month investigation of Kelley because of a possible conflict of interest. Kelley says he'll try to unseat Herring in the fall election.

Herring's office began the probe after a complaint was filed April 5.

Kelley has told reporters that Herring's investigation covers everything from the way his office is operated to his sex life and that of some of his employees.

Boyles' office in Daytona Beach said at noon that notice of the special assignment hadn't been received. Boyles was reported on vacation until next Wednesday and wasn't available to comment on when he may begin the Kelley probe.

Herring said earlier that a witness was referred to him April 5. After interrogation Herring said the investigation was initiated and that during the three months sworn testimony was taken from 32 witnesses.

Herring said the probe was to a point where it should be reviewed by the governor and action taken to dispose of the matter.

"The matter will eventually go to a grand jury, based on my experience of investigations of this nature," Herring said.

The "Spirit of '76" has never been more dramatically expressed than in A.M. Willard's famous painting of a life player and two drummers striding into battle under the Stars and Stripes. Thefts Plague Catholic Sharing Center

By KRIS NASH
Herald Staff Writer

A sudden — and seemingly senseless — rash of petty burglaries at the All Souls Catholic Church Sharing Center in Sanford has added extra significance to the late-night message on television which goes: "It's 1 a.m. Do you know where your children are?"

Florence Gilmartin, volunteer coordinator at the sharing center, said there have been six break-ins since Jan. 1 and that circumstantial evidence clearly points to youngsters as the guilty parties.

"They knock out the bottom panel of the (wooden) door and then just slide in through there," Gilmartin said. "And they take stuff like roller skates and costume jewelry — that's all. It's got to be kids who're doing it — I'd say no more than about 15 or 16 years old."

Mrs. Gilmartin has supervised the sharing center since it opened in April 1971 as an outlet for low-priced clothes, household items and other goods that might prove useful to needy families in town.

She said there was only one break-in during the facility's first four years of operation at 512 South Sanford Ave. until the current streak began around the first of the year — "you know, when the recession started."

"They're looking for money," Gilmartin said. "They get into all the boxes, throw things all around, pull the pocketbooks inside out and everything because they think there might be money in there."

"But the businessmen are. Because everything we get is donated. And the thing that's irritating is the mess they make when they break in. We don't have anybody to clean that up — we have to do it ourselves."

The burglaries are injuring the center's income to some extent, Gilmartin said, because the facility often must remain closed or operate at partial efficiency for a day or more while order is restored to the interior of the building.

Various efforts at internal security have met with only limited success, Gilmartin reported. A large sliding door that was bolted on the inside has held up so far, but the lower panel of the other portal has required numerous repairs.

Youths Suspected In Charity Store Breakins

For awhile Gilmartin tried leaving the lights on inside the building all night long, but she says all that accomplished was to boost the sharing center's electricity bill. The break-ins continued.

"I figured out it's cheaper to replace the door panel — because I can do it myself — than it is to pay the power company the extra $5," Gilmartin said with classic resignation. "So I gave up on that."

The obvious solution to the problem, the volunteer coordinator said, is stricter supervision by local parents, particularly those living in the area of the sharing center.

"One time someone broke in and took a pair of shoe skates and some costume jewelry," Gilmartin continued. "Now if those kids had come in and told us they wanted that stuff but didn't have any money to pay for it — and they were willing to work — why, we'd have let them straighten out a table or something for it. We're not in it to make money, because we don't make money."

"I wouldn't expect them to bring the stuff back or anything like that," Gilmartin concluded. "But if the parents would put the kids in line, it sure would help. The reason I think it's important is because I know they're doing it to all the stores. It's not just me."

Hays Episode Not Typical

Americans are continuing to show undisguised interest in the Rep. Wayne Hays matter. The fact that a Congressman may have put a mistress on the federal payroll appears to have confirmed the worst suspicion that many have about Congress.

And the eagerness with which the press and public are leaping at the possibility that other congressmen may have been involved in a similar contempus confirms that the public appetite for turning over rocks in Congress will run for some time.

Given the dramatic qualities of the episodes, it would be too much to expect that the general public would step back to view the situation calmly. However, we believe it is time for the Americans who do exert leadership and influence to give the Hays, et al, matter some second thought.

Nevertheless Americans, fanned by their media, appear to be willing to assume the worst, not only about Mr. Hays, but also the entire Congress. If the truth were to be known most congressmen are probably staid models of rectitude.

Whatever Americans think of Rep. Hays and the others personally, they are entitled to do the process of law and they must be presumed innocent of the charges unless proved otherwise.

Nevertheless Americans, fanned by their media, appear to be willing to assume the worst, not only about Mr. Hays, but also the entire Congress. If the truth were to be known most congressmen are probably staid models of rectitude.

The ultimate irony is the all-too-obvious double standard of justice evident in public opinion. The hurricane of scandal has swept up Mr. Hays with the vengeance. However, if Mr. Hays is guilty of anything, so is his companion, Elizabeth Ray. Yet Miss Ray appears to be doing quite well, thank you, while Rep. Hays' career is slowly being demolished.

As with Watergate or with Rep. Wilbur Mills, the Hays congressional problems eventually will subside into the public subconsciousness. But the public perception of Congress will depend very much on how the legislators handle the hot potato.

If there is any hint of partisanship, any procrastination at getting to the bottom of things or any attempt by Congress to evade the issue, the Hays matter will leave a permanent scar on the legislative branch. Open records and complete candor should be the guidelines.

As for the news media, we suggest that at least the investigative legions of the press would be doing a far greater public service if all out after details of congressional staffing, payrolls and organization instead of flocking to the press conferences of the Ms. Ray.

The publisher of the Arizona Republic has expressed "anger and outrage" in a front page editorial premising that somehow justice will be done in the bombing death of reporter Don Bolles, who was investigating organized crime in the Phoenix area.

Needless to say, Americans everywhere share that reaction. The history of crime syndicates suggests how difficult it will be to trace responsibility for this kind of slaying.

The murder of the Phoenix newspaperman obviously was intended to intimidate reporters and other investigators who persist in trying to penetrate the facade of the rackets. It is up to the press, and law enforcement as a whole to demonstrate that these tactics won't work.

The best memorial to Don Bolles will be the willingness of others to pick up where he left off.

By ED PRICKETT

County Commission Chairman Mike Hattaway was good for a laugh. At least that was true at Tuesday night's commission meeting when a jeepster similar to the one owned by Hattaway was parked in a no parking zone in front of the courthouse in Sanford.

A curious newsman decided to play a practical joke on Hattaway. At first an attempt was made to telephone the chairman to tell him his jeepster was being towed away by the police. But there are no inside lines to the courthouse. So that plan out of necessity was abandoned.

Then who turns up outside commission chambers in County City. Instantly Hattaway, on one of his rare visits to a county commission meeting. Well, it turned out Freeman also is a person who enjoys a good practical joke and was talked into landing Hattaway a note which said lawmen were towing the jeepster away.

About five minutes after the note was delivered out storms the commission chairman's note in hand, to see to the welfare of the jeepster. Hattaway bounded down the stairs only to discover the jeepster resting securely in front of the courthouse. The story could end here, but it doesn't — not quite. Because the chairman re-entered the meeting and asked Ashby Jones, the asst. Circuit Court Clerk, to check it out with communications — which is located just above the commission chamber.

Well, the communications dispatcher knew of no deputy who was towing away a commission chairman's jeepster, and asked what was going on, but Ashby refused comment except to say that it was a personal business or issue's.

The county attorney finally informed Hattaway it was all a practical joke. And the next day a grinning Hattaway told the newsman who set it all up that it had him going for a short time. Sense of humor in a public official is a notable thing. Not notable because it's in short supply, but notable because without a good sense of humor I don't see how an elected official could get through the first day.

Philosophers tell us a person with a sense of humor is a person to be sought after. Look around you, I'll bet the more successful people you see are people with a good sense of humor. Freeman has a fine sense of humor, as do Commissioners Harry Kwiakowski and Richard Williams. Commissioner John Kimbrough not only as a good sense of humor, but he has a biting wit to boot.

School Supt. Bud Lyster is another good example. Lyster is a pleasure to be around because he not only views most issues with a worldly, common sense approach, he has a superb sense of humor.

There are many others I could and would like to name if space permitted, but suffice it to say that with a real sense of humor a person seeking to go far will go far. Without it the road to success will be longer and not half as rewarding as journey's end.

TOM TIEDE Reagan Image Unclear

WASHINGTON — In significant respects Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter are quite alike.

Both men are card-carrying Christians, are wealthy and attractive, are regional politicians with a distrust and contempt for the Washington power apparatus. And both have with great skill this year come from the backwoods of probability to challenge the reluctant establishments of their parties.

And yet the two responses to each man has over the months been quite different. Carter has been accepted as a folk hero by many, and a messiah by some, while candidate Reagan, by and large is still seen by the legions as merely a spoiler or perhaps even a saboteur. To put it another way: one rebel has been accepted, the other not yet.

Why, a likely reason is that Carter's coup is complete. He has cold-colored all comers, and stands now, with his freckled neck, as the leader of the oldest and largest political organization in America. Yesterday a peasant farmer, today one of the most talked-about men in creation. Meanwhile, Reagan is still only a logical longshot.

Beyond this, however, and more important, is the fact that Reagan is deficient in imagery. Unlike Carter, he has been portrayed by the President of the United States as a war monger, by the foreign minister of Panama as a "jolly cowboy who never went to school," by a ranking member of his own political persuasion as "irrational as a headless hen." These are not the kind of testimonies that appear on station in the park. Here the public may perceive Reagan with respect, with admiration, but with precious little comfort.

And this is unfortunate. For as the nation enters Phase II of the presidential season, the more conventional, it is apparent the electorate has become adequately familiar with only two of the three surviving participants, Carter and Gerald Ford. So far Reagan, who has wrestled a seated president to a truly remarkable draw, remains a distant personality. He is a suave, handsome wet-head to whom no meaningful dimension has been added since "Death Valley Days."

Much of the fault for this is Reagan's. He has the actor's wry of no-script performances, that allows for heart-to-heart contact with America. Jimmy Carter tells us of his mortality, Reagan of his mechanical proficiency, the result he comes across as an interesting man, but not the kind with whom one would like to spend the winter.

And here is the rub. There is wide but quiet suspicion that the public image of Ronald Reagan is incorrect. That he's not nearly so hard core as he appears. Those close to him admit that he is a difficult man to know, but once known he is conciliating rather than rigid, pragmatic rather than ideologic. One adviser who has been with Reagan since the California state house describes his employer as "anything but a try." Another aide suggests he is a closet moderate.

Ford Preparing Overhaul Of Bureaus

WASHINGTON—Getting the jump on Jimmy Carter, President Ford is preparing to demonstrate that he can knock bureaucratic heads together and get more efficiency out of the federal government.

He will begin, unless the plans go awry, with a dramatic overhaul of the scattered bureaucratic enclaves that deal with energy problems. His reorganizers are busy behind closed White House doors, pulling together the widespread energy functions and putting them under one giant superagency.

The reorganization plan is supposed to be ready, according to internal White House documents on August 20. This happens to be the day after the Republican national convention will wind up.

If the President wins the nomination, he could beat Jimmy Carter to the punch with a move to streamline the federal bureaucracy. The Democratic candidate has made an issue of the cumbersome bureaucracy, promising a shake-up if he should become President.

Inside the Ford administration, meanwhile, the reorganization move has touched off some savage infighting. Critics claim that it is not only strictly a campaign stunt but that the proposed superagency would rival such balkanized departments as Health, Education and Welfare or House and Urban Development in mind-boggling unmanageability.

RAY CROMLEY Congress Has Many Goldbricks

WASHINGTON — Shortly after the expose on Representative Wayne L. Hays (D-Ohio) and Elizabeth Ray, a tongue-in-cheek story spread through the capital, the 43 congressional secretaries had now quietly enrolled in typing classes.

The sorry joke, of course, does a disservice to hundreds of hard-working straight women working in the Senate and House.

But there are enough congressmen who call on their secretaries for extracurricular intimate services until their own leaders are ready to have a fighting chance to hang on to or regain one or more of his assortment of powerful posts after the hallelujah dies down a bit. Hays could do this by quietly threatening to expose his colleagues with dates and incidents in their own lives, proposing thus to drag them all down with him when he falls.

In this instance the pressure on Congress to act may be too great, if the publicity continues in full force, even though it is no secret that numbers of congressmen brag privately — and sometimes not so privately — of their personal prowess with members of their staffs.

And it is well known, too, that on Capitol Hill there are considerable numbers of male and female employees who are unable to type, file or do research, employ who, in fact, do little or nothing. Most of these skimp workers hold jobs because they are relatives or friends of influential constituents of or the Congress or its staff.

For a considerable period of time one legislator is known to have kept a former state trooper on the payroll who kindly didn't arrest him until he was out of the country. The amount of work turned out on some committees is so meager that on numerous occasions, Pentagon officials, for example, have required scientists, analysts and researchers to do the work of congressional committee members because of the unwillingness or inability of members of congressional staffs to carry out the necessary work.

Time again this reporter has been appalled at the ignorance of many congressional staff members on matters concerning the agencies and specific subjects they are, by assignment, supposed to monitor.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Cuba May Send Troops From Angola To Congo

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence sources say they have received reports that Cuban leaders may be preparing to send several thousand troops from Angola to the Congo Republic.

Haul Castro, brother of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro, traveled to Brazzaville, the Congo Republic's capital last month, to discuss redeployment of some of Cuba's 15,000 troops from nearby Angola, sources said. He agreed to the transfer of about 3,000 Cuban soldiers to train Congolese troops, according to reports reaching U.S. intelligence. The reports gave no indication if there are other reasons the Congo government wants Cuban troops in the country.

The Congo Republic served for a time as a staging point for Cuban and Soviet military aid to pro-Marxist forces in Angola which later defeated U.S. backed elements.

Arabs Reinforced Hijackers

PARIS (AP) — Freed hostages from the hijacked Air France plane say three heavily armed Arabs were waiting to reinforce the four hijackers when the jetliner arrived in Uganda early Monday.

"When we landed in Entebbe, a group of Arabs waited for us, and they brought a whole arsenal of guns aboard including submachine guns, a Beretta pistol and rifles," said Gerard Tribandout, a French telecommunications technician.

Jacques Choquette of Montreal said the Arabs also displayed a box they said contained dynamite for blowing up the plane.

Premier Replacement Eyed

MADRID, Spain (AP) — An army general esteemed by liberal officers is reportedly likely to be King Juan Carlos' choice to replace ousted Premier Carlos Arias Navarro.

In a surprise move apparently intended to speed up democratic reforms, the 38-year-old king fired the conservative government chief he inherited from the late Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

An official statement said Arias Navarro resigned during a visit to the king Thursday. But high-ranking government sources said the king forced the premier out because unrest on both the right and left was threatening the regime and the monarchy.

Numairi and his wife arrived in Paris Wednesday after an official visit to the United States. The Sudanese Embassy said that after dining with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing Thursday night they left in Numairi's personal plane for Khartoum.

Abortion Curbs May Continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has let the door slightly open for states to give parents a legal voice in their children's unmarried teenage daughters may have abortions.

By a 5-to-4 vote Thursday, the court struck down a Missouri law requiring the consent of at least one parent for an abortion on a single woman under 18. In a 6 to 3 ruling, it also declared an unconstitutional provision of the same law requiring a woman to have the consent of her husband for an abortion.

At the same time, however, the court suggested that a Massachusetts law which might survive a constitutional challenge because it does not give parents an absolute veto over abortions was unconstitutional.

The Massachusetts law calls for the consent of both parents, but allows the girl to seek a court order which, if granted, would override parental objections. Massachusetts officials argue their law favors consultation with parents but does not deny the girl veto power. In a unanimous decision, the justices ordered the law referred to the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts to determine if this is a correct interpretation.

If it is, Justice Harry A. Blackmun said for the court, this "would avoid or substantially modify the federal constitutional challenge" to the law.

In Jefferson City, Mo., state Asst. Atty. Gen. D. Brook Bartlett said: "This leaves open the very real possibility that a state realigned along the lines of the Massachusetts law would be a way the states could protect minors not mature enough to make this kind of choice from the very stressful nature of the abortion decision."

The National Abortion Reform Action League said 14 states of parental consent for abortions sought by teenagers. Twelve states require the consent of the husband for his wife to have an abortion.

The decision came as the court approached the end of its term. The justices were scheduled to meet today and then recess until next Tuesday for what was expected to be their last session. The biggest decision still confronting them was the constitutionality of death penalty laws.

Wilkins Retirement Rocks NAACP

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — An unexpected dispute over the retirement of a NAACP leader led to a postponement of the nation's oldest civil rights group has thrown the 67th annual convention of the NAACP into a state of confusion.

Wilkins, 73, rocked the convention Thursday when he charged that some board members were attempting to force him from the executive director's post he has held 22 years. The civil rights leader said he was expected to be the NAACP's executive director since he had held 22 years.

Wilkins made his dramatic appearance on the platform, three-legged Viking lander now scheduled to Viking land on the planet's ruddy surface July 17 as a scientist believes is smooth and safe.

"Viking's new target, about 150 miles northwest of the Mars landing site, is a low-altitude landing, may also be somewhat more likely to harbor life, if Mars has any.

Despite Complaints To Contrary Reports On Our Economy Best Anywhere

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite complaints that economic statistics can be misleading, many economists insist that those used in reporting major economic activities in the United States are the most professionally produced anywhere.

"They are the best and most accurate in the world," said Albert Cox, chief economist of Lionel D. Edie & Co., formerly with the Council of Economic Advisors, and a man sometimes harassed by repeated revisions.

He and many others believe the revisions, while irritating, are the result of an almost never-ending quest for perfection, following pressure from various groups for speedy release of initial data.

Because of this demand for speed, reports on such indicators as the Gross National Product may be offered in a sequence spanning many weeks, with each report supposedly more refined than the one before. The first is labeled advance, followed by preliminary and final.

Popularly used, however, the first and probably least accurate report is accepted. It is also the one that draws comment from public officials and the news media. Revisions, no matter how significant, seldom attract widespread attention.

Instead, we often seem mesmerized by the numbers, as if they were undebatable truth, proof, evidence, when in truth they may be incorrect.

Final, at any rate, may be a misnomer. Conscientious economists and statisticians sometimes revise entire years, and often to excavate deep into history to do so, long after official decisions have been based on old data.

If there is anything axiomatic about the economic numbers, in fact, it is that what you accept today as the statistical truth will be revised tomorrow.

The seasonal adjusting of various economic equations also brings into use what critics believe is a subjective tendency. The theory of such adjusting is to remove the effect of recurring events so as to reveal underlying trends.

In reporting retail sales, for instance, the index is adjusted in order to find the continuing pattern. In January, the number of jobs is adjusted lower, otherwise, the post-Christmas decline would distort the longer trend.

While professionals can work with such data, although they cause trouble for them too, few laymen could be expected to understand and especially to derive useful information from them. For them, the explanation of "fluke" or "aberration" has to suffice.

Aware of the imperfections, some economists are disturbed about the increasingly popular usage of statistics that are, they say, meant more for limited, professional interpretation.

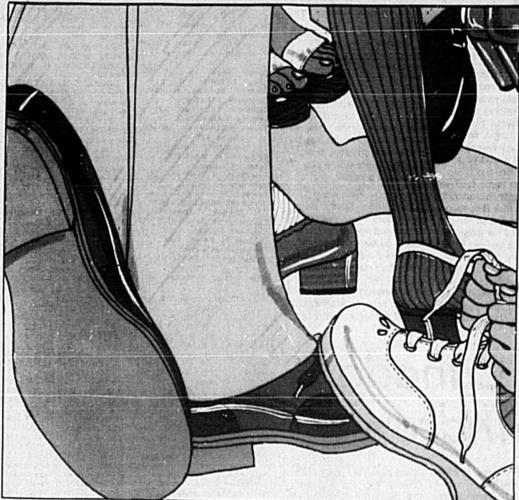

One of the more glaring misuses, they say, is to interpret one month's figures as a trend, a tendency that government officials repeatedly warn against. Unfortunately, economists are not always present. Because of this, it is argued, the numbers sometimes are most unreliable at the very time they are needed most, that is, when the economy is changing and decision-makers urgently need signals of future direction.

The danger seems to be not so much the possibility of deceit and manipulation, but that the imperfect statistics often are accepted as if they were perfectly accurate and indicative of actual conditions.

Not only are public mood and economic decisions based to a large extent on these statistical measures, but immediate business, political and government policy decisions are based on them. Millions of people and billions of dollars are involved.

The danger seems to be not so much the possibility of deceit and manipulation, but that the imperfect statistics often are accepted as if they were perfectly accurate and indicative of actual conditions.

Don Tucker Says He Doesn't Exert Legislative Control

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — "I have never used my position as House Speaker Don Tucker says he doesn't exert as much control over legislation as some past speakers, but so had of financially if I was using my influence."

He said that his financial reports during the recession in land sales did not make him more vulnerable.

"People who are dishonest will be dishonest whether they are poor or rich," he said.

He said he never asked for an explanation of a Southeastern First National Bank memo indicating favoritism in a loan because he did not think it would be proper.

He said bank inspectors could tell in a few minutes if a $200,000 loan to him was properly made.

The loan is being investigated by a federal grand jury in Miami.

He said he decided not to take the extra speaker's pay as a result of an incident during his early years as a House member. At that time, newspapers reported he took an additional $17.50 in per diem, Tucker said. But he said the funds were received by mistake for meetings missed due to illness and he had refused to take any per diem until urged by House staff members.

He said during the Wednesday night meeting of Sigma Delta Chi that he also sold his interest in Crossland Realty because it sometimes does business with the state. He received $15,000 or $16,000, from James Tully, head of the firm, and made no profit, Tucker said.

Tully sought during the last legislature to sell 54 acres in Tallahassee to the state for $1.6 million for use by the Florida Highway Patrol. The House cut the sale out of the budget.

Tucker said that although other speakers had put their children on the House payroll as pages, he paid for his children's salaries as pages.

Are Porno Movies OK At Card Club?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: For five years, four of us couples have met once a month to play cards. Well, last month one of the men brought a movie projector and all the gear, plus some dirty movies he had rented, and proceeded to show a filthy movie!

Two of the men were all for seeing these movies, but their wives were not.

I stopped the idiot as soon as I realized what kind of "entertainment" he had brought to the card club.

Abby, I think the people who make such fifth should be locked in institutions.

Abby, I think the people who make such fifth should be locked in institutions.

Abby, I think the people who make such fifth should be locked in institutions.

When she leaves, even though I air out the house, the smell of the smoke lingers in my draperies, the clothes I was wearing and even in my hair!

She knows how much cigarette smoke bothers me (and her husband hates it, too), but she absolutely cannot quit!

I can't tell my best friend not to smoke in my house. My husband says, "Nobody's perfect — you have to take the bad with the good."

Please be realistic, Abby. What is there a solution?

SMOKED OUT IN GAISEN, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: When she arrives, hand her a LARGE ashtray and ask her to please be careful with her cigarettes. If she gets careless, remind her. Also, place two or three dishes of vinegar wherever she is. The vinegar will help to absorb the cigarette odor. And lastly, pray for her.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box No. 9700, L.A., Calif. 90009. Enclose stamp, self-addressed envelope, please.

Founders Viewed Leaders With Critical Eye

NEW YORK (AP)—A tough realism, born of an ancient Biblical idea, underlay the founding of the United States—a conviction that human beings, including the most elevated statesmen of government, can go wrong.

They were regarded, in Scriptural terms, as subject to sin.

It's an old, old notion, and the term is not at all fashionable these days, however extensive the problem itself, but awareness of it tempered the building blocks of the nation.

On its 200th birthday this weekend, the national structure still holds, and much of the credit for it is given to the original scathing view of the human condition.

Historians say it's what distinguished the American system and made it last through four centuries of aberrations and upheavals, while other struggles for liberation often relapsed into tyranny.

In such cases, the minimalist task of copying, trusting in their leaders, whose authority subsequently turned repulsive. But the American founders viewed those put in positions of power with a dour, critical eye.

That note of skepticism about the human tendency was written into the U.S. Constitution, with its checks and balances giving each branch of government—the president, the Congress, the courts—restraining reins on the others.

Each was limited in relation to the other, their functions so allotted that each considered able to curb the others from excess.

The American Revolution came shortly before another one in Europe, the French Revolution of 1789. While the objectives were similar, the throwing off of kingly rule, the outcomes differed radically.

The United States survived and flourished while the French Republic degenerated into the mass executions of the "Terror" and the military despotism of Napoleon Bonaparte that swept Europe.

Scholars cite various reasons for the difference, including the fact that the French Revolution was anticlerical, while in America, the clergy and many religious influences figured both in the Revolution and the ensuing U.S. Constitution.

However, the basic difference cited involved the French "optimism" about human nature, and the American "pessimism." The mostly Protestant early Americans were sharply conscious of human fallibility—their pervasive vulnerability to sin. The implication was that society should not put

Bicentennial Services Scheduled Sunday

Richard's Episcopal Church, 5151 Lake Howell Road, Winter Park, has no charge.

The church of the Holy Trinity has a rich tradition of almost 100 years.

Under the direction of Courtland Dunn, the choir boys are provided with training which channels their talents toward superior community service.

The day will begin at 8:30 a.m., when the Young Musicians, a choir composed of boys and girls in the fourth, fifth, and sixth grades, will present the musical, "The Sound of America," under the direction of Charles E. Davis Jr.

The patriotic theme will continue in the 11 a.m. service, when the church choir presents "What Price Freedom?" and then is joined by the combined youth choirs in the presentation of "Let Christ's Freedom Ring," and "From Sea to Shining Sea." "Look Beyond the Passing Moment" is the title of the message Dr. Jay T. Comato, pastor, will preach in both the 8:30 and the 11 a.m. services.

Following the 11 a.m. service, there will be an old-fashioned picnic on the church grounds, for which each family attending will bring a picnic basket of food. After the meal, the Blue Dish Van and King Dish Van, who came to America last year from South Vietnam, will participate in a ping pong exhibition.

At 2 p.m., "The Fabric of Freedom," a music-drama on the development of our nation, will be adapted and presented by the Amazing Praisings Puppet Pals, under the direction of Mrs. Jay T. Comato. It is expected that this service will conclude by 3 p.m., and no other activities are planned at the local church for the day.

Central Baptist

Central Baptist Church will celebrate America's 200th birthday during the Sunday worship and church hours on July 4.

Each Sunday School class is preparing a birthday cake in honor of our country's birthday. During the 11 a.m. worship service, each class will have a representative to march in the parade.

The parade will be given to each representative to the congregation's "God Bless America."

The Wednesday service will be a special musical presentation, under the direction of Mrs. Jay T. Comato and Mrs. Frances Ring.

A professional with banners and the American and Christian flags will be present at the church. Judy Patient and Barry Smith will lead the procession dressed in clothes of 200 years ago.

Dr. Harold Harris will preach on "Christian Principles in a Revolutionary Age." Old hymns of the early American period will be sung.

The Wednesday service will be a special musical presentation, under the direction of Mrs. Jay T. Comato and Mrs. Frances Ring.

Bishop Dale Cryderman Presides

The 25th Annual Florida Conference of the Free Methodist Church of North America was held at Lakeland Light and Life campground last Thursday through Sunday with Bishop Dale Cryderman presiding.

The conference opened with a Bicentennial rally, attended by 300 people with William Guter, a former Congressman, as a candidate for state treasurer. He is a Sunday School teacher and has been active in religious and civic affairs for years.

The conference elected Rev. James Diddle of Orlando as Conference Term, for a three-year term. Rev. Douglas E. Porter was continued as pastor of the Sanford-Eustis Free Methodist Church and will serve the conference as director of adult ministries and a member of the conference board of Christian education.

Bicentennial activities were the historical committee. Mrs. Porter is the Second Vice President and director of Outreach for the Conference Women's Missionary Society.

Bishop Cryderman, in his address to the conference body, stressed his own experience as bishop assigned to North Ireland and Southern Africa where the Free Methodist Church has missionaries.

Methodists Gather For Annual Conference

He narrowly missed being shown by a superior in Ireland and got through customs in one of the South African countries without mishap at a time when the country was suffering from the robbery of all of their money and valuables quite openly.

His experience as a journalist, Bishop Cryderman stated that he was in America a controlled press. He cited as one example the fact that we have never told that when Mozambique nationalized all its institutions there were 60,000 Red Chinese troops in the country. That was the only one of all missionaries last September, all secondary education in Mozambique was supervised by Larry, a young doctor for each 220,000 people. He stated that he had written to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger about this but had received no acknowledgment of his letter.

Most recently all missionaries have been told to leave Rhodesia by our State Department because our country has no diplomatic relations with Rhodesia and its possessions as well as their guerrilla activity from outside Rhodesia has increased the danger to Americans living there.

This means the loss of schools and hospitals, as Rhodesia has had the largest staff of missionaries of any of the Free Methodist mission fields, according to Bishop Cryderman. Those who left Mozambique left their homes and personal possessions as well as their schools and clinics, he said. Religious activities were confined to church buildings at scheduled hours and restricted by the government.

Walter Smith of Eustis served as the delegate to the conference for the Sanford-Eustis Free Methodist Church. Mrs. E.J. Richey of Sanford was elected as conference Junior Missionary society director. E.J. Richey was made a member of the committee on

Oral Roberts

"IS SOMETHING BOTHERING YOU?"

Question: I never have enough time to get everything done. I have heard you talk about living in the NOW. What does that really mean?

Answer: Many people write me about the hectic pace and mad rush of everyday living. It almost seems as if time control is out of their hands. We control time and not the other way around.

Living in the NOW means living in this very moment. When you think about it, the present is really the only time we have anyway. The past is gone, and the future may or may not happen. We should do what we can in the only time that is ours — this very moment.

Have you noticed how many people live on their past experiences or else always seem to live in the future? Their minds are so occupied with tomorrow they don't really live today. It may be that a person does his best work when he gives his time and complete attention to whatever he's doing right then. And you can't do that if your mind is racing away with future fears and worries. The only way you are free to live fully in the present is when you don't have to worry about the future.

St. Peter tells us to give all our cares and anxieties to God (1 Peter 5:7). So don't worry about tomorrow. Don't try to foresee all the possibilities. Just give your best to the present.

I like the childhood incident Corrie ten Boom tells to illustrate how trust can banish fear of the future. When her fear of being taken to a concentration camp was overpowering, she remembered the words of her father.

"Corrie, when you and I go to Amsterdam — when I give you your ticket."

"Just before we get on the train."

"Exactly. And our wise father in heaven knows when we're going to need things, too. Don't run ahead of Him, Corrie. He will give you the strength you need — just in time."

So you can live in the NOW, if you trust God to give you your train ticket to meet your need just in time. You can tune into Jesus who is in the NOW.

My latest book, A DAILY GUIDE TO MIRACLES AND SUCCESSFUL LIVING THROUGH SEED-FAITH, is about how you can live on top every moment in the NOW of your life. If you would like a copy, free and postpaid, please write to me, Oral Roberts, Tulsa, Okla. 74102.

Children Of Lepers Treated As Outcasts

The word "leper" still strikes terror in the hearts of people everywhere. So much so that the name for the dread disease has been changed to "Hansen's" — less emotion laden than "leprosy."

Christian Children's Fund, an international non-sectarian child help agency based in Richmond, Va., is assisting a number of projects in northeastern Thailand that are caring for more than a thousand of these unfortunate children. Many are living in institutions. But many others still live with their families.

It is an agonizing decision to take a child out of the warmth of family life and put him in an institution. But there is no alternative. Projects try to remedy this by having cottage style homes around which some farming can be conducted.

There are more than 20,000 children of lepers in northeastern Thailand alone. The average annual income of that part of the country is only about $200. Even the normal wages are impoverished and live at a subsistence level. Without a massive irrigation scheme, it seems hopeless to expect any significant agricultural production. But family planning, education, and basic care for the children can break the vicious circle of misery.

Confusion About Rh Blood Factor

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D. DEAR DR. LAMB — I am confused about Rh negative and Rh positive blood factors. Can you help clear this up?

I have three children and the last child was told was an Rh negative baby. It has Rh negative blood. Are all children with Rh negative blood blue or is there a difference?

DEAR DR. LAMB — You have understood correctly. It is possible for two Rh positive parents to have an Rh negative baby.

Your letter bothers me because the problem with Rh negative blood does not occur when the baby is Rh negative. The problem occurs when an Rh negative mother has an Rh positive baby.

This does not occur if the baby is Rh negative. The mother's Rh positive blood (if she is Rh positive) will not contain antibodies and will not react to the baby's Rh positive blood.

king and wound up making six by developing a squeeze against West after East led back a heart. Hal did not bother to reply when North said, "Nice guess".

Using this yardstick, the zoo located four miles west of Sanford on U.S. 17-92 has been highly successful in its first year.

From there, he goes to speak at Independence Hall in Philadelphia. At 2 p.m., the Hall's centennial bell will be rung, and bells across the nation will peal to announce the moment the Declaration was signed 200 years ago.

SUNDAY EDITION Evening Herald

HAPPY BIRTHDAY AMERICA! Area Celebrations Abound

BETSY ROSS IN SANFORD. Martha Harwick portrays Betsy Ross as she stitches the flag for the 13 original colonies.

America's 200th birthday will be celebrated with a bang in Seminole County this weekend with every municipality observing the Bicentennial in one form or another. The July 4 bash planned for Fort Mellon Park in Downtown Sanford is perhaps the biggest celebration in the county with a wide variety of activities on tap.

Animals Healthy, Reproducing In New Environment

This will be a weekend for birthdays, all right, and in this area second only in importance to the July 4 celebration of the Bicentennial, will be the first anniversary of the Central Florida Zoo. The best measure of the success of a zoo is the contentment of its animals. The better adapted they are to their man-made environment, the more inclined the animals will be to mate and reproduce.

America Prepares Its Birthday Party

By The Associated Press. Wagon trains are scheduled to arrive in Valley Forge, Pa., sailing ships are on their way to New York's harbor, and the rest of America is on its way to a 200th birthday party full of parades, fireworks and ceremonies. Five separate Bicentennial wagon trains, consisting of 2,000 persons in 200 wagons, have traveled 17,000 miles across country.

First July 4 Baby Gets Savings Bond Today

The first baby born in Seminole County on July 4 will get a $200 nest egg, courtesy of a flagship U.S. Bank of Seminole, located near Zayre Plaza on U.S. 17-92. John Y. Mercer, president of the local banking facility, said his institution will present a $200 Bicentennial U.S. Savings Bond to the first baby born on the 200th anniversary of America's freedom.

Many people will be enjoying cookouts this Fourth of July weekend and 7-year-old Frederick Gaines of Sanford is no different than thousands of other youngsters whose mouths water at the site of a sizzling hot dog on an open grill.
