Marie Dressler Will Be At Milane Sunday

That grand old lady of the screen, the incomparable Marie Dressler, steps out with another laugh inducing, tender and human portrayal in her new starring Metro picture, "Emma." As Emma you see Marie Dressler as a devoted and loyal housekeeper, bringing up the motherless children of an eccentric inventor who eventually makes a great discovery and becomes fabulously wealthy.

Through all the years, the dark as well as the bright, Emma is the guiding spirit in the home, watching over them all, catering to their whims as well as their needs. In fact, she does everything, humbly and patiently, for one loving woman to accomplish in a long and busy lifetime.

But when the old inventor, tired of his lonely existence, secretly marries Emma, the children rise against Emma declaring she is nothing more than a common servant and not fit to take her place as their legal step mother. And then, when the old inventor dies suddenly, it is discovered, to the utter amazement of the ungrateful children, that the entire fortune has been left not to them—but to Emma!

Others in the cast of "Emma" include Jean Harlow as the inventor; Myrna Loy, Richard Cromwell, John Miljan, Kathryn Crawford and Barbara Kent.

"Emma," which Clarence Brown directed, comes to the Milane Theater Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday. It is the work of Frances Marion and Leonard Praskins, authors of "The Champ."

he could not claim any great gain but said the outcome of Friday's fighting was gratifying.

Casualties during the day and night were heavy, the Japanese admitting 120 killed and wounded. It was obvious there was much blood shed among the Chinese too.

The Japanese admitted today that they were switching their tactics in preparation for a large offensive on the Chongchong line, code messages to confirm this by reporting that the Japanese would have a full army corps in the Shanghai area under Gen. Yasuhide Shinkawa.

The code messages and one in two Chinese already were on the way and three more were being no-

The change in the Japanese tactics contemplated battling the Chinese at all strategic points and saving them out. One spoke man said, "If we can't bomb them out we'll starve them out."

The Japanese hoped to push a wedge north of Kiangnan and surround the town. Similar tactics may be adopted against Chang and Wusong according to the progress of events. It was said that this Japanese drive might be expected next week, and it was indicated that General Tsai was shifting his position to meet the emergency. Reports persisted that fresh troops of Gen. Chung Kuo Sheng, the Nanking generalissimo, were participating.

Japanese aviators began a mop-up process against Chinese airfields yesterday and had a battle with Chinese planes. They destroyed several fields with their bombs in the vicinity of Changchow and wrecked the Chinese planes nearby.

PROGRESS MADE FOR DOING AWAY WITH 'LAME DUCK'

The Senate gave formal approval without a word of debate and without a roll call. Its action followed affirmation by the House, where Representative Stearns guided the legislation.

Announcing later in the White House that it would have a statement to make in signing the bill, Hoover also disclosed he was sending to Congress next week a special message on the subject of bankruptcies.

The Glass-Steagall bill, which becomes effective immediately upon Hoover's signing the act, is to be in operation only until May 1, 1933. However, it can take a permanent provision making it possible for banks in groups of five to obtain the same emergency opening on reserves, reducing reserves with the federal reserve as a loan, less than $4,000,000 capitalization under the one-year provision of the law.

The bill makes it possible for a bank to use direct government aid as a collateral for currency, thus releasing about $2,000,000 in gold which is now at present in addition to the regular 10 percent gold reserve requirement as collateral because of the shortage of eligible paper.

The other one-year provision of the bill allows individual banks of less than $100,000 capitalization to rediscount their promissory notes with the federal reserve to be created by sound paper that cannot now be rediscounted.

Senator Glass told the Senate that the $500,000 limitation would exclude only 62 of the 760 member banks of the federal reserve. He added that embraced in those 62 are what we believe to be the speculative institutions.

All banks can obtain this special rediscounting privilege by going into groups of five to present a promissory note.

Constitutional Hang-Over From Ocho Days Seen Ocho

A long step toward elimination of stagecoach days in American government was taken recently. The House Rules Committee took an action believed certain to result in a amendment of the 11-months delay between election of Congress and the date of their taking office.

The committee reported favorably a rule which will give the so-called "lame duck" American Congress the Constitution, preferential rights in the House on Friday, Feb. 15. It closed the Senate for the sixth time on Jan. 31 of this year.

Passage by the House is considered a step toward a substantial majority. The President's signature and the approval of the three-fourths of the states will still be required to put the amendment into the Constitution.

House approval, however, has been the obstacle which has held up the modernization of the functioning of government for years. The late speaker, Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, prevented a passage last year by insisting on an amendment of a time clause limiting the duration of the second term of Congress. This was unacceptable to the Senate, which could not give the limitation to the House.

Since the House no longer is in session on the limitation clause and is preparing to pass the bill, it is expected that the amendment passed by the Senate will be passed by the House before the end of the present session of Congress.

The amendment, as referred to the House, provides that the President shall take office on Jan. 1 following his election, instead of on March 1. Elections take place in November. Congress also will convene on Jan. 1, instead of in months later, as under the Constitution.

The major objective of the bill is to have the new Congress take office with the new President in place of having an old Congress continue in office for a full session after the new President is in the White House.

The amendment also provides for succession of the Vice President elect in the position of President elect in case the latter should pass on before the date of inauguration. In the Constitution, if such a contingency should arise, Congress would be required to choose the new President from among the defeated candidates.

TEACHERS MUST BE INDEPENDENT OF MIND, ACTION

Dewey Deplores Educational 'Yes' Men Who Are Teaching Youth

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Teachers must overcome tendencies which would make them educational "yes" men if the rising generation is to view sanely and with open eyes the forces of the age, Dr. John Dewey, professor of philosophy at Columbia University, declared recently, before a meeting held in connection with the convention of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association. Economic crises are not to be solved by hush-hush methods, he said.

The speech was one of a group which called selfish interests for attempting to color or suppress discussion of business and governmental policies. Charles H. Judd, dean of the School of Education, University of Chicago, called for united teacher action to win such freedom, and after he had spoken Edwin C. Broome, superintendent of schools in Philadelphia, praised his address and urged a new "candor and courage."

Speaking before the department of superintendence of home economics, Dr. Dewey said that the "entire atmosphere in our period of seeming economic prosperity tends to suppress serious thought on fundamental social matters." This complacent laudation of "things as they are" has been reflected, he noted, in schools falling "notably and lamentably" in training youth intelligently to plan better conditions. "It is 'unpatriotic' to point out, or even to admit, that there are any weak spots in our institutions and habits and to suggest that there are matters in which we might learn from other countries. There has been a heavy pall of hush-hush imposed upon teachers and the easy way for them, the way of inertia, has been to become 'yes' men and women. I do not know how it is today, but only a few years ago the names of some of the leaders of thought in this country were on the black books of government departments right here in Washington as dangerous characters, potentially rebellious because they had indulged in criticisms of our tendencies in industry and were not afraid to put their fingers on sore spots, such as suppression of free speech. The branch of the war department which is responsible for military training in colleges, in one of its published statements for use in stimulating military spirit in the colleges, called Jane Addams, whom most Americans think of as the best beloved woman in America, the recent recipient of the Nobel prize, 'the most dangerous woman in America.'"

Terming such references "silly," Dr. Dewey noted that such attacks cause many others "to keep quiet or gloss over" ill and make students "believe that all is for the best in this best of all possible countries."

Economic interests, he charged, have succeeded in attaching "the epithet of 'Red' or 'Bolshevik' so much so," he noted, "that the publicity agent of the power interest is on public record as advising that all teachers who discuss public ownership favorably should be branded Bolsheviks." As a result of such attempts to muzzle discussion, he said, youngsters are graduated from school "filled with highly idealized pictures of the actual state of things." To prepare them for the realities of life, he said, schools must show that this is not a static existence, but that this is a moving, dynamic, changing world.

"Unless and until we permit or rather encourage the schools," he concluded, "to abandon the following of traditions which have no relation to existing social realities, our thinking in matters of greatest public concern, including peace and war as well as industrial prosperity and depression, will continue to be thoroughly stupid and our leaders will be such only in the sense in which the blind lead the blind."

Dean Judd, speaking before the department's general session, urged wider school study of social institutions. "We teach pupils in the elementary schools to compute taxes," he said, "but we do not tell them about taxes. We teach pupils in the high schools the history of ancient states and their problems, but we dare not discuss the present day problem of who shall own public utilities in the cities of the United States. We seem to be afraid that some local banker or board member of the Federal Trade Commission will interfere if we discuss public utilities. The Federal Trade Commission has, indeed, in recent years, practically banished the topic of public utilities from the high schools of the United States."

Sustained Drive Being Made Upon Bear Activities

following the rise occasioned by favorable action on the Glass-Steagall credit bill was the straw that apparently broke the patience of President Hoover and congressional leaders.

"We have lost patience," asserted Walcott. "We have given warning, but despite some promises these speculators go right back to work, profiting by distress. I and others have hoped legislation would not be necessary but it can't be stalled off much longer."

During the day spokesmen for the grain exchanges, millers and traders united before the House Agriculture Committee yesterday in opposition to any restriction on short selling in commodity futures.

Peter Carey, president of the Chicago board of trade and principal witness, said that if proposed legislation empowering the secretary of agriculture to stop short selling were enacted, "you might just as well close the grain markets of the country."

"How would you correct abuse?" asked Chairman Jones. "I don't recognize that there have been any abuses," Carey replied.

Senators Hastings of Delaware and Capper of Kansas, both administration Republicans, have measures pending for a curb on short selling operations.

They will go before the Senate Committee today as the first witnesses. Each is demanding an investigation of the whole network of stock operation of the last year or two.

"The public is under the impression," said Hastings, "that great injustice is resulting from short selling. I want to find if that is true and I want to find if legislation is necessary."

The New York Stock Exchange recently announced rules intended to curb bear raiding. It was disclosed then by President Hoover that he had been in consultation with officers of the exchange.

But then this week the security market took another drop and the conviction obtained in high administrative quarters that professional bear raiders are still at work, taking advantage of hard times and false rumors to drive down prices and profit at the distress of security holders and the country as a whole.

Just how many names he intended to put before the committee to be called, Senator Walcott did not reveal. He did intimate that the names of some foreigners were on the list.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. (A.P.)—Wall Street was awitler yesterday over the prospect that "big bears" in the stock market would be called individually to testify in the United States Senate inquiry into short selling.

The inquiry promised to tear the cloak of secrecy from market operations long the subject of rumor and conjecture.

Comment from market operators who have been associated in brokerage gossip with bearish activity was completely lacking. Associates of some, however, said they would welcome an opportunity to justify market operations which they believe to be economically sound.

victims in the lake, figured in Stiefens' account of torments and terrorism before Chairman Sumners cleared the room of witnesses so that the detective could talk freely of pending cases.

On an opinion of Attorney General Mitchell adverse to the legislation because of the increased appropriation it would demand, Randolph centered his opposition. His arguments were backed by Police Chief Gerk of St. Louis; Walter B. Welsenburger, president of the St. Louis chamber of commerce, and former Representative C. A. Newton, head of the St. Louis vigilantes—the same aggressive group who Thursday urged a postal check on the gangsters.

Randolph told the committee that interstate commerce regulations on automobiles already had proven efficacious with control of "truck hysters."

"The machinery is set up and ready to operate," he said. "I can't see why the attorney general would have to increase the appropriation much with the machinery available."

In the two years his committee of citizens has been operating, Randolph said, it has seen kidnapping become "an interstate commerce in crime," done by syndicates operating out of Chicago and St. Louis.

"It is done largely by bank robbers," he said. "They find no market for their stolen bonds. It is much easier and more profitable to steal a human victim."

GOTHAM PASTOR TERMS SOCIAL SET AS CORRUPT

Park Avenueites Hear Preacher Call Them 'Perfumed' Element

NEW YORK, Feb. 18. — The Rev. Dr. Norwood created a stir recently in St. Bartholomew's Protestant Episcopal Church, Park Avenue and Fifty-first Street, when in the course of his sermon he charged "the perfumed gentlemen and women" of Park Avenue with being the real enemies of Christianity and called the social set one of the most corruptible elements in the world today.

Speaking before one of the most fashionable congregations in the nation, Dr. Norwood said smart society is made up of inept, pathetically futile people who think themselves leaders," and said he was in perfect agreement with the Rev. Samuel Moore Shennaker, Jr., of Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church, who said recently that "it is not the Bowery but Park Avenue that needs converting."

"The enemies of Jesus are not to be found among the tramps but among perfumed gentlemen and women," he declared, "for the reason that Christianity is making a demand on society which society is not prepared to admit."

Dr. Norwood said society people "are but children crying in the night, and with no language but a fee that members of the group were taking great risk to testify against the gangsters."

and called them "the social set," and criticized "the social set" as being "the worst in the world today." By society he meant the "perfumed element" of Park Avenue. He said, "The reason why society usually dislikes Paul the Apostle, he said, is that they cannot forgive one of their own going the way of Jesus. Paul makes them uncomfortable. We do not like to be disturbed by the honest insistence of one of our number against our corruptible institutions, and if there is any state in the world order today that is corruptible it is modern society."

"One need only come in contact with people from day to day to discover the widespread horror of the cynicism and what we call the sheer ineptitude of people of power, of prominence and of opportunity."

There are people who are only wondering at Christ as a possibility, he said, but their world is too much with them—"their world of power, of money and of fame, their world of their luxuries and of their glittering but selfish, unreliable comrades, who stab them as steadily as they themselves stab in return."

Dr. Norwood's announced sermon topic was "The Power of Christianity," a subject to which he turned after his references to society. Christianity, he said, "is a force lifted to Christhood" and "is a resurrection from the torturing disquietudes of the damned into the forever peace of the blessed."

TO ADDRESS CLASS
Justice of the Peace O. P. Herndon will address members of the Lake Monroe Scrap Iron Bible Class at the Lake Monroe School tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock. The public is invited to attend the services.

'WETS' CONTINUE TO LEAD STRAW VOTE OF 'DIGEST'

Over 80 Percent Of Magazine Voters Against 'Dry' Law

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The vote for continuance of the Eighteenth Amendment registers a gain of from 18.85 per cent. to 12.28 per cent. of the total vote in the second week's returns of The Literary Digest's twenty million ballot nationwide poll, as announced in tomorrow's issue of the magazine.

An additional tabulation of over 450,000 votes is reported, making a total of 703,935 received for the current tally. Of this tabulation, 149,524 votes, or 12.28 per cent. favor continuance of the Prohibition Amendment and 625,806, or 87.72 per cent. favor repeal.

Nine states, the initial returns of which are tabulated in this second published report of the poll include: Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and West Virginia.

Additional returns are also reported from Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, New York, North Carolina, Ohio and Virginia.

All of the states so far reported show a majority sentiment in favor of repeal.

North Carolina still leads as the driest state reported with a percentage of 12.21 for continuance, a slight increase over the previous week's returns.

The wettest state in the current returns is New York, from which 17.02 per cent of the ballot count is for the repeal, which is a slight decrease in its wet sentiment over the prior returns.

West Virginia and Indiana are second and third in dryness with percentages for continuance of Prohibition of 35.93 and 35.12 respectively.

Second and third in wetness of the states now reported are New Jersey and Connecticut, where the vote to date shows 85.57 and 84.89 per cent, respectively, for repeal. Maine, which has long been rated as a dry state, shows a sentiment of 67.73 per cent. for repeal.

Rhode Island and Connecticut, the only two states which have never ratified the Prohibition Amendment, are both voting over five to one for repeal in the current tabulation.

Governor Ritchie's home state approximately four to one for approximately four to one for repeal and its neighboring southern state of Virginia shows a sentiment of over three to one wet.

The Literary Digest again cautions those who would deduce the national trend from these early figures to await further returns before making any conclusions as Kansas and a number of other reputedly dry states have not been heard from yet.

Attention is called to the fact that hundreds of thousands more ballots are anticipated from the seventeen states reported this week.

Special Prohibition polls for clergymen, doctors and bankers and lawyers will be conducted at an early date, in addition to the main poll. The Literary Digest announces.

"The second report is not quite as wet as the first one of the poll," The Literary Digest states editorially.

"We advised the drys last week that the vote was not to be downcast, and although our advice is justified by the event."

"To be sure the wets are still away in the lead with their new total of 625,806 ballots for repeal of the Prohibition Amendment as against 149,524 for its continuance."

"But if you figure out the percentages, and compare them with those of last week, you will find that the faithful drys have forged ahead from 12.28 per cent. to something like 12.28 per cent."

"It is not surprising to find New York in a shade less wet than North Carolina just a shade more dry."

"The rates not recorded in last week's issue, the highest in the tabulation, which includes Indiana, New Jersey, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and West Virginia."

"It again we must warn our drys that the time is not yet ripe for an active campaign to be run from the poll returns."

"Wait until authorized Kansasians into the fray with their eloquent legions."

"It is any of a game yet," it answers to a multitude of requests, when it is related that the magazine has received a long for information as to how the Literary Digest has been conducted. The Literary Digest replies:

"The magazine is a weekly publication, published by the Literary Digest Company, 100 West 40th Street, New York City."
